

CASELL'S ENCYCLOPAEDIA OF WORLD LITERATURE

CASSELL'S ENCYCLOPAEDIA OF WORLD LITERATURE

Edited by S. H. Steinberg in two volumes

Revised and enlarged in three volumes

General Editor: J. Buchanan-Brown

VOLUME THREE
Biographies L—Z

CASSELL & COMPANY LTD—LONDON

CASELL & COMPANY LTD
35 Red Lion Square, London WC1R 4SG
Sydney, Toronto, Johannesburg,
Auckland

© CASELL & COMPANY LTD 1953, 1973

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise, without the prior permission of Cassell & Company Ltd.

First Published (2 volumes) as Cassell's Encyclopaedia of Literature 1953
Second Edition (3 volumes) 1973

ISBN 0 304 29094 7

KEY TO CONTRIBUTORS

All contributions to the first edition have been carefully scrutinized, but the revisers' initials have been substituted for the original contributors' only where such articles or their bibliographies have been substantially amended or completely recast. Where minor corrections have been made or new material added to articles or bibliographies the reviser's initials follow, within brackets, those of the original contributor, e.g. E.M.W. (A.D.D.).

A.A.L.	Long, A. A.	B.T.	Thomson, B.
A.B.	[Bettex, A. W.]	B.Tu.	Tubb, B.
A B.McM.	McMillin, A. B.	B.W.A.	Alderson, B. W.
A.Br.	[Brown, A.]	B.W.Al.	Aldiss, B. W.
A.C.	Coates, A.	B.W.V.	Vickers, B. W.
A.C.B.	Bouquet, A. C.	C.B.	Belsey, C.
A.D.	Digby, A.	C.D.	Dionisotti, C.
A.D.D.	Deyermund, A. D.	C.D.N.	Narasimhaiah, C. D.
A.D.Dr.	Drayton, A. D.	C.Dr.	[Drake, E. C. M.]
A.H.D.	Diverres, A. H.	C.H.	Hole, C. S.
A.H.G.	Griffiths, A. H.	C.H.K.	[Hannay King, C.]
A.H.J.	Johns, A. H.	C.J.F.D.	Dowsett, C. J. F.
A.H.J.K.	[Knight, A. H. J.]	C.K.	[Kaufman, C.]
A.H.K.	King, A. H.	C.M.I.	Ing, C. M.
A.J.D.	Dunston, A. J.	C.P.	[Price, C.]
A.K.H.	Hudson, A. K.	C.P.B.	Brand, C. P.
A.M.	[Maurois, A.]	C.R.	Rabin, C.
A.M.B.	Boase, A. M.	C.S.	Shackle, C.
A.M.B W.	[Barkey Wolf-Berkelbach van der Sprenkel, A. M.]	C.T.O.	[Onions, C. T.]
A.M.G.	Gibbs, A. M.	C.W.	Wake, C.
A.M.I.	[Inebnit, A. M.]	D.A.D.	Davy, D.
A.N.J.	Jeffares, A. N.	D.C.	Cleverdon, D.
A.N.W.	Wawn, A. N.	D.E.	Engländer, D.
A.R.	Ravenscroft, A.	D.E.M.	Mills, D. E.
A.R.D.	Davis, A. R.	D.E Mo.	Monk, D. E.
A.S.	Slodnjak, A.	D.F.	Flower, D. J. N.
A.Sa.	[Safrastian, A.]	D.G.D.	Dyer, D. G.
A.T.S.	Shaw, A. T.	D.H.	Hay, D.
A.v.E.	Elslander, A. van	D.J.D.	Deletant, D. J.
B.G.B.	Biggs, B. G.	D.J.F.	Furley, D. J.
B.H.	Hardy, B.	D.K.R.	Rycroft, D. K.
B.J.	Johnson, B.	D.L.	Lodge, D.
B.K.S.	[Sandwell, B. K.]	D.L.P.	Paisey, D. L.
B.L.J.	[Joseph, B. L.]	D.L.S.	Snellgrove, D. L.
B.M.	Moloney, B.	D.M.	Myers, D.
B.M.E.M.	[Mortensen, B. M. E.]	D.M.L.	Lang, D. M.
B.M.W.	[Worthing, B. M.]	D.N.MacK.	MacKenzie D. N.
B.N.M.	Mukerji, B. N.	D.P.	Parmée, D.
B.R.	Reynolds, B.	D.S.	[Saurat, D.]
B.Re.	Rees, B.	D.S.R.W.	Welland, D. S. R.
B.S.	Smalley, B.	D.S.T.	Thomson, D.
		E.A.C.	Close, E. A.

E.B.	Bredsdorff, E. L.	H.L.C.	[Callaway, H. L.]
E.B.C.	[Ceadel, E. B.]	H.Le.	Leeming, H.
E.C.	Crispin, E.	H.M.B.	Balyuzi, H. M.
E.C.R.	Rowlands, E. C.	H.N.D.	Davies, H. N.
E.J.D.	Dingwall, E. J.	H.P.	[Hla Pe]
E.M.W.	[Wilson, E. M.]	H.V.B.	Besso, H. V.
E.R.	Rose, E. A. G.	H.V.B.B.	Brown, H. V. B.
E.R.S.	[Searry, E. R.]	I.M.	Michael, I. D. L.
E.Sa.	[Sarmiento, E.]	I.R.	Raeside, I.
E.T.W.	Webb, E. T.	I.S.	Scobbie, I.
E.V.	Vinaver, E.	I.Sp.	Spink, I.
E.V.K.	Knox, E. G. V.	I.W.	Walker, I. M.
E.W.H.	Handley, E. W.	J.A.	Aquillina, J.
E.Y.	Yar-Shater, E.	J.A.W.	[Willis, J. A.]
F.C.F.	Francis, Sir Frank	J.B.	[Bryson, J.]
F.I.	Iz, F.	J.B.B.	Bamborough, J. B.
F.J.B.	Barnett, F. J.	J.B.-B.	Buchanan-Brown, J.
F.J.E.R.	[Raby, F. J. E.]	J.C.D.	Decreus, J.
F.M.K.	Kuna, F. M.	J.C.M.	Maxwell, J. C.
F.P.P.	Pickering, F. P.	J.D.	Duhigg, J.
F.T.M.	[Macartney, F. T. B.]	J.E.B.G.	Gray, J. E. B.
F.W.	Whitehead, F.	J.E.V.	Varey, J. E.
G.A.H.		J.F.	Franco, J.
-McC.	Hayes-McCoy, G. A.	J.F.C.	[Cullis, J. F.]
G.A.K.	Kearns, G. A.	J.F.L.	[Lockwood, Sir John]
G.B.	Brereton, G.	J.G.	Gaudon, J. A. M.
G.C.	Cordes, G.	J.G.E.	[Elbo, J. G.]
G.D.	[Dekker, G.]	J.G.-R.	Gatt-Rutter, J. A.
G.D.P.	Painter, G. D.	J.G.R.-S.	[Royde-Smith, J. G.]
G.F.C.	Cushing, G. F.	J.H.K.	[Kells, J. H.]
G.F.S.	[Sleigh, G. F.]	J.H.S.	Schiffman, J. H.
G.G.	Guisan, G.	J.J.M.	[Mak, J. J.]
G.H.	[Hopkins, G. W. S.]	J.J.O.	Oversteegen, J. J.
G.K.H.	Hunter, G. K.	J.J.Y.L.	[Liu, J. J.-Y.]
G.L.L.	Lewis, G. L.	J.K.	Kinsley, J.
G.M.	[Murphy, G.]	J.Kn.	Knappert, J.
G.Mo.	Molnar, G.	J.L.	Lavrin, J. M.
G.M.T.	[Turquet, G. M.]	J.L.M.	Marfany, J. L.
G.R.	Rowell, G. R.	J.M.	Metford, J. C. J.
G.R.H.	[Hamilton, Sir George Rostrevor]	J.M.B.	Bellord, J. M.
G.Ro.	Rowley, G.	J.M.B. i R.	[Batista i Roca, J. M.]
G.R.O.	[Owst, G. R.]	J.M.D.	Dyson, J. M.
G.T.	[Tillotson, G.]	J.M.H.	[Hussey, J. M.]
G.T.S.	Scanlon, G. T.	J.M.L.	Love, J. M.
G.W.	Wickham, G. W. G.	J.O.	Okell, J.
G.W.B.	Brandt, G. W.	J.P.I.	[Inebnit, J. P.]
G.W.C.	[Coutie, G. W.]	J.P.R.	[Richard, J. P.]
G.W.-G.	Wyndham-Goldie, G.	J.R.B.	[Barker, J. R.]
G.W.R.	Ribbans, G. W.	J.R.M.	Marr, J. R.
H.An.	[Anderson, H.]	J.S.	Sonntag, J.
H.A.P.	[Phillips, H. A.]	J.Sm.	Smit, J.
H.B.	Boeschstein, H.	J.T.	Tilden, J.
H.B.G.	Garland, H. B.	J.T.B.	Boorman, J. T.
H.B.Gr.	[Grimsditch, H. B.]	J.T.H.	Hooker, J. T.
H.C.	Chadwick, H.	J.W.W.	[Weevers, J. W.]
H.D.F.K.	Kitto, H. D. F.	K.D.	Dykstra, K.
H.D.J.	Jocelyn, H. D.	K.E.	[Ewart, K.]
H.F.D.S.	Sparks, H. F. D.	K.F.	Foster, K. F.
H.G.R.	[Rawlinson, H. G.]	K.G.J.	Just, K. G.
H.H.E.L.	Loofs, H. H. E.	K.G.K.	Knight, K. G.
H.I.B.	[Bell, Sir Harold Idris]	K.M.B.	Briggs, K. M.
H.L.	Lucas, H. H.	K.P.	Pollard, K.

K.R.	Ringger, K.	P.V.B.	Brady, P. V.
K.S.	Speight, K.	R.A.	Auty, R.
K.Sm.	Smithyman, K.	R.A.S.-J.	[Scott-James, R. A.]
K.W.	Walker, K.	R.A.T.	[Taylor, R. A.]
K.W.M.	Maurer, K. W.	R.B.	Browning, R.
L.C.	Cjanton, L.	R.Bo.	Boston, R.
L.J.	Jacobs, L.	R.E.A.	Asher, R. E.
L.L.	[Leary, L.]	R.F.	Freeman, R.
L.P.H.	Harvey, L. P.	R.Fi.	Finnegan, R.
L.W.F.	Forster, L. W.	R.F.L.	Lissens, R. F.
L.W.T.	Tancock, L. W.	R.G.H.	[Heard, R. G.]
L.Y.	Yudkin, L.	R.G.P.	Popperwell, R. G.
M.A.	Andrews, M.	R.H.S.	Samuel, R. H.
M.A.B.	Branch, M. A.	R.J.H.J.	[Jenkins, R. J. H.]
M.A.M.	Manzalaoui, M. A.	R.J.O.R.	[Rees, R. J. O.]
M.B.	[Beare, M.]	R.L.B.	[Beare, R. L.]
M.Ba.	Balanow, M.	R.M.	Murray, R.
M.Bu.	Butler, M.	R.McH.	[McHugh, R.]
M.D.	Dillon, M.	R.M.H.	[Hobling, R. M.]
M.D.C.G.	Gallop, M. D. C.	R.M.N.	[Martinez Nadal, R.]
M.D.L.	Law, M. D.	R.M.W.	Wilding, R. M.
M.F.L.	Lyons, M. F.	R.M.Wa.	Walker, R.
M.G.	Girard, M.	R.O.	Ostle, R.
M.Gd.	Gérard, M.	R.O.F.	Faulkner, R. O.
M.Ge.	Gertner, M.	R.O.H.	Haynes, R. O.
M.H.	Hiskett, M.	R.P.	Pascal, R.
M.H.M.M.	[MacKinnon, M. H. M.]	R.P.-C.	Pine-Coffin, R. S.
M.K.	Kusseff, M.	R.P.M.	Meijer, R. P.
M.L.C.	[Cunningham, M. L.]	R.R.	Russell, R.
M.M.B.	Badawi, M. M.	R.R.B.	Bezzola, R. R.
M.P.	Piron, M.	R.R.R.	Raymo, R. R.
M.P.B.	Barnes, M. P.	R.R.W.	[Walzer, R. R.]
M.R.	Richards, M.	R.S.	Speaight, R. W.
M.R.R.	[Ridley, M. R.]	R.Sk.	[Skelton, R.]
M.S.-S.	Seymour-Smith, M.	R.Su.	Sutherland, R.
M.T.	Turnell, G. M.	R.T.D.	Davies, R. T.
M.V.D.	[Dixon, M. V.]	R.W.B.	[Burchfield, R. W.]
M.W.	White, D. M.	R.W.J.A.	Austin, R. W. J.
M.W.T.	Thomas, M. Wynn	R.W.L.	[Leonhardt, R. W.]
M.Y.	Young, M. L. M.	S.A.	[Auerbach, S.]
M.Y.G.	Gooneratne, Y.	S.A.B.	Barlow, S.
N.C.	Chambers, N.	S.C.R.W.	Weightman, S. C. R.
N.D.C.	National Documentation Centre	S.E.M.	Mann, S. E.
N.D.-Y.	Denholm-Young, N.	S.G.W.	Wright, S.
N.K.W.	[Willson, N. K.]	S.H.S.	[Steinberg, S. H.]
N.P.	Purdon, N.	S.J.L.	[Lightburne, S. J.]
N.P.R.	Rollin, N. P.	S.M.S.	[Stern, S. M.]
O.R.G.	Gurney, O. R.	S.R.K.G.	[Glanville, S. R. K.]
P.A.R.	Roubiczek, P. A.	S.S.	[Seliga, S. R.]
P.A.W.	Welsby, P. A.	S.U.	Usher, S.
P.G.F.	Foote, P. G.	T.B.L.W.	[Webster, T. B. L.]
P.H.	Hultberg, P.	T.F.H.	Hoad, T. F.
P.H.M.	Muir, P. H.	Th.W.	Weevers, Th.
P.J.S.	[Stead, P. J.]	Tor.	Toronto
P.K.	King, P.	T.P.	Parry, T.
P.K.H.	[Hitti, P. K.]	T.P.M.	Matheson, T. P.
P.McN.	McNair, P. M. J.	T.P.W.	Waldron, T. P.
P.M.W.	Wightman, P. M.	T.S.	Spencer, T. J. B.
P.O.	Opie, P.	T.S.P.	Pattie, T. S.
P.O.A.S.	Sherrard, P. O. A.	T.W.	[Walton, T.]
P.S.	Stevens, P.	U.L.	Limentani, U.
P.T.	[Treves, P.]	U.La.	Laredo, U.

V.B.-C.	Bonham-Carter, V.	W.E.S.	Skillend, W. E.
V.C.C.-B.	Clinton-Baddeley, V. C.	W.K.M.	[Matthews, W. K.]
V.J.	Javarek, V.	W.R.A.	Aitken, W. R.
V.P.	Pinto, V.	W.S.	Saroyan, W.
V.S.	Swoboda, V.	W.St.	Starkie, W. F.
W.A.A.	Armstrong, W. A.	W.W.R.	Robson, W. W.
W.A. el K.	[el Khalidi, W. A. S.]	W.W.Re.	Reese, W. W.
W.B.	[Beare, W.]	Y.F.	Friedlander, Y.
W.E.C.	[Collinson, W. E.]	Y.H.	[Haezrahi, Y.]

KEY TO SPECIAL SIGNS

* born

□ (in Chinese entries) place where the family register is kept

~ baptized

∞ married

o/o divorced

† died

□ buried

Titles of books are printed in italics; titles of journals and periodicals are printed in roman type; titles of articles are printed in roman type, set within quotation marks. References to articles in Volume I are indicated by the use of small capitals, e.g. ARTE MAYOR: references to biographies in Volume II and III by the use of a five-pointed star, e.g. Diego de San* Pedro, the star being inserted immediately after the name under which the biography is alphabetized.

L

Laale, PEDER (c. 1350), Danish collector of proverbs. Nothing is known about him, except the title legista given to him in the early editions of his proverbs. He collected more than 1,000 Danish proverbs, accompanied by a Latin translation. His collection was meant as a schoolbook for students of Latin. It is the oldest Scandinavian collection of living proverbs.

Peder Laales danske Ordsprog (ed. C. Behrend and A. Hansen, 1929). E.B.

Labé, LOUISE (*Lyons c. 1524; ∞ c. 1540 Ennemond Perrin; †ibid. 1565 or 1566), French poet of the Lyons group (Maurice Scève*; Pernette du* Guillet). She published a single volume containing a prose 'Debate between Madness and Love', three elegies and 24 sonnets. Powerfully influenced by Petrarch*, she introduced an ardent and seemingly personal note into these frustrated love-poems, which O. de Magny* may have inspired. The daughter of a rich cordier, she married another rope-maker: hence her nickname of la belle cordière. Her life and presumed character have been the subject of unverifiable legends. As 'Capitaine Loys' she rode her horse, not to war, but in a tournament and pageant held at Lyons in 1542.

Euvres (1555; ed. C. Boy, 1875).—Love Sonnets (with tr. F. Prokosch, New York, 1947).

A. Cartier, 'Les poèmes de L. L.' in Rev. d'Hist. Litt. (1894); D. O'Connor, L. L. (1926); F. Zamaron, L. L. . . sa vie, son œuvre (with text of poems; 1968). G.B.

La Bellaudière, LOUIS BELLAUD DE: see PROVENÇAL LITERATURE, text and biblio.

Laberge, ALBERT (*Beauharnois, Quebec 1871; ∞ 1910; † 1960), Canadian story writer and novelist who was sports writer and art critic for the Montreal daily La Presse. Upon retirement from journalism (1932) he devoted himself to writing naturalistic tales which presented life in rural Quebec as crude, dehumanizing and often depraved. La Scouine (pub. 1918) is the first naturalistic Canadian novel. Because he was an atheist and believed in the certainty of clerical disapproval, Laberge published his works privately in small editions, and general recognition of his talent has come late.

STORIES: Visages de la vie et de la mort (1936); La fin du voyage (1942); Scènes de chaque jour (1942); Le dernier souper (1953).—SKETCHES AND CRITICISM: Quand chantait la cigale (1936); Journalistes, écrivains et artistes (1945); Propos sur nos écrivains (1954).—Anthologie d'A. L. (ed. G. Bessette, 1963).

J. Brunet, 'La Scouine d'A. L.' in Archives des Lettres canadiennes, II (1963). R.Su.

Laberius, DECIMUS (*c. 106; † 43 B.C.), a Roman knight who wrote verse scripts for mime actors. Fragments of 43 of these scripts survive. His political witticisms earned him the enmity of Julius Caesar*, who compelled him to perform on the stage himself in competition with the professional Publilius* Syrus. His somewhat peculiar Latin interested 2nd-century A.D. grammarians.

O. Ribbeck, Comicorum Romanorum fragmenta (3rd ed. 1898); M. Bonaria, Romani mimi (1965).

H. Reich, Der Mimus, I (1903); M. Bieber, History of the Greek and Roman Theater (2nd ed. 1961). H.D.J.

Labiche, EUGÈNE MARIN (*Paris 6 V 1815; †ibid. 23 I 1888), French dramatist. The author of about a hundred plays in collaboration, Labiche was elected to the French Academy in 1880. Though his plays occasionally point a moral (Le voyage de M. Perrichon, 1860; La poudre aux yeux, 1861), they are mostly hilarious farces of bourgeois life depending for their effect more on situation than character, and often bordering on slapstick (Un chapeau de paille d'Italie, 1851, prod. London, 1952, as An Italian Straw Hat; La cagnotte, 1860).

Edgar et sa bonne (1852); L'affaire de la rue Lourcine (1857); Un pied dans le crime (1860); Les vivacités du Capitaine Tic (1861); Les trente millions de Gladiator (1875).—Théâtre complet (with pref. E. Augier, 10 vols, 1875–79); Théâtre (5 vols, 1949–50).

P. Soupault, E. L., sa vie et son œuvre (1945; rev. ed. 1955). T.W. (M.G.)

Labid, 6th–7th century pre-Islamic Arabic poet. He counts among the major poets of early Arabic literature. S.M.S.

A. J. Arberry, The Seven Odes (1957). R.O.

La Boétie, ÉTIENNE DE (*Sarlat 1 XI 1530; † Germignan VIII 1563), French writer and Hellenist. A judge at Bordeaux and a close friend of Montaigne*, he helped to form the latter's taste for speculative writing by his treatises on politics and religion, as Le Discours de la servitude volontaire (ed. M. Rat, 1963). His Petrarchan sonnets were first published by Montaigne in the Essais (1580).

Œuvres (ed. with intro. P. Bonnefon, 1892); Mémoire sur l'édit de janvier 1562 (ed. idem in Rev. d'Hist. Litt., 1917); poetic works in Poètes du XVI<sup>e</sup> siècle (ed. A. M. Schmidt, 1953). G.B.

La Bruyère, JEAN DE (*Paris 16 VIII 1645; † Versailles 11 V 1696), French moralist. Of middle-class birth, La Bruyère read for the Bar but never practised. He purchased (1673) the post of financial treasurer at Caen, a sinecure which provided him with a modest income. In 1684 he was attached, on Bossuet's* recommendation, to the household of the near-royal Condé family, first as assistant tutor to the young Duke Louis III de Bourbon-Condé, then for the rest of his life as a minor retainer. His position brought him humiliations, but served him as an excellent social observatory.

His great work began modestly as a 200-page addition to his free and inaccurate translation of Theophrastus*, the whole entitled Les Caractères de Théophraste traduits du grec, avec les Caractères ou les Mœurs de ce siècle (1688). In seven subsequent editions (the last in 1694), La Bruyère gradually increased his own contribution until finally it was tripled. La Bruyère's satire centres upon his caricatures of contemporary types (many of them based on living originals), a development of the mid-17th-century vogue of the 'portrait' (Segrais*). He interspersed them with maxims and short essays and gave his book a planned appearance by dividing it into chapters with generic titles. But the moralist has no consistent philosophy. His voice is that of the intelligent bourgeoisie, grown more bitter since Molière's* time and foreshadowing spasmodically the reasoned liberalism of the 18th century. La Bruyère is among the greatest French prose-writers; his style is rapid, condensed and picturesque.

Œuvres complètes (ed. G. Servois, 6 vols and 1 album, 1865-68; ed. J. Brenda, 1957); Les Caractères (ed. G. Servois and A. Rébelliau, 1 vol., n.d.; ed. R. Garapon, 1962).

M. Lange, La B. critique des conditions et des institutions sociales (1909); E. Gosse, Three French Moralists (1918); G. Michaut, La B. et Théophraste (1936); R. Jasinski, 'Influences sur La B.' in Rev. d'Hist. de la Philos. (1942); P. Richard, La B. et ses 'Caractères' (rev. ed. 1966). G.B.

La Calprenède, GAUTIER DE COSTES, SIEUR DE (*Château de Toulgou, Dordogne c. 1610; ∞1646 Madeleine de Lyée; †Le Grand-Andely ?15 X 1663), French novelist and dramatist. A successful writer of pseudo-historical novels whose characters of heroic mould and long dissertations on love and politics appealed particularly to the generation of the Fronde. His tragedy Essex (1638), on Elizabeth* and Essex, is historically interesting.

Cassandre (10 vols, 1642-45); Cléopâtre (12 vols, 1647-57); Faramond ou l'Histoire de France (12 vols, 1661-70; completed by P. d'O. de Vaumorière).

E. Seillière, Le romancier du Grand Condé, La C. (1921). G.B.

La Ceppède, JEAN DE (*Marseille c. 1550; †Avignon 1622), French religious poet. A magistrate related to St Teresa* of Avila, he expressed his religious lyricism in the 500 sonnets of his Théorèmes spirituels (1613-21). His work was forgotten for over three centuries.

F. Ruchon, Essai sur la vie et l'œuvre de J. de La C. (with sel. poems; 1953) and Les Théorèmes... (1966); L. K. Donaldson-Evans, Poésie et méditation chez J. de La C. (1969). G.B.

La Chaussée, PIERRE CLAUDE NIVELLE DE (*Paris 1692; †ibid. 14 III 1754), French dramatist. He is the creator of the comédie larmoyante (the 'tearful' or pathetic comedy), in which some story of modern domestic life is presented with moralization and exaggerated sentimentality. His plays, though irrevocably dated, preceded the drame bourgeois as conceived by Diderot* and pointed distantly to the pathetic prose dramas of the 19th century. He began writing for the theatre at the age of 41 in the midst of a dissipated social life.

La Fausse antipathie (1733); Le Préjugé à la mode (1735); Mélanide (1741); Paméla (1743); L'École des mères (1744); La Gouvernante (1747); L'Homme de fortune (1751).—Œuvres (5 vols, 1761-62).

G. Lanson, N. de La C. et la comédie larmoyante (2nd ed. 1903). G.B.

Lachmann, KARL (Brunswick 4 III 1793; †Berlin 13 III 1851), German philologist. Trained in classical philology, he applied (whilst Professor in Berlin) 'objective' methods of textual criticism to his editions of, inter alia, all the medieval German classics; in revisions they are still used.

Briefwechsel der Brüder... Grimm mit K. L. (ed. A. Leitzmann, 1927); H. Sparnaay, K. L. als Germanist (1948); P. F. Ganz, 'L. as an editor...' in P. F. Ganz and W. Schröder, Probleme mittelalterlicher Überlieferung (1968). F.P.P.

Lachover, YEROCHAM FISHEL (*Khurz'l, Poland 18 XI 1883; †Tel Aviv 25 II 1947), Hebrew literary critic and the first modern historian of Hebrew literature.

Toledot Ha-sifrut Ha-ivrit Ha-chadashah ('History of Modern Hebrew Literature'; 4 vols, 1928-32; new ed., 4 vols, Tel Aviv, 1951).—Mehkarim ve-Nisyonoth (1925); Ch. N. Bialik (monograph; 3 vols, Tel Aviv, 1933-47); Rishonim ve-Aharonim (1935); Al Gevul Hayasham Vehechadash (1951); Shira Umachshavah (1953). S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Lācis, VILIS (*Rīnuži 12 V 1904; †Rīga 6 I 1966), Latvian novelist and playwright. He worked on fishing boats as a small boy. Evacuated with his family to the Altai region, he went to teachers' training college in Barnaul, working at the same time as messenger for the local newspaper. He returned to Latvia in 1921 and worked as fisherman, docker and stoker. This last gave him the background for his novel Putni bez spārniem ('Birds Without Wings'; 1931-32). An active trade unionist from 1927, Lācis held high political offices under the Soviet regime and was twice awarded the Soviet State prize for literature (1949 and 1952).

NOVELS: Atbrīvotais zvērs (1930); Zvernieka dēls (1933–34; The Fisherman's Son, tr. I. and T. Litvinov, Moscow, 1965); Vēca jūrnieku ligzda (1935–37); Cetri braucieni (1937); Akmeņainais ceļš (1937–38); Vētra (1946–49); Uz jauno krastu (1951; Towards New Shores, Moscow, 1959); Pēc negaisa (1962).—PLAYS: Bāka uz salas (1937); Vedekla (1943); Uzvara (1945).—COLLECTED WORKS: Raksti (10 vols, 1959–62); Sobrannye sochineniya (Russ. tr.; 10 vols, 1959–60).

J. Sudrabkalns, V. L. dailrade (1953); V. Kraulīns, V. L. dailrade (1954); K. Egle, 'Tautas rakstnieka V. L. darbi' in ZA Vēstis, V (1954).

H. Le.

Laclos, CHODERLOS DE: see Choderlos de Laclos, PIERRE AMBROISE FRANÇOIS.

Lacretelle, JACQUES DE (*Cormatin 14 VII 1888), French writer. Lacretelle spent much of his youth in travelling, studied at Cambridge, and later became the friend of Rivière* and Gide*. His taste for psychological introspection and his moral pessimism have produced several fine novels. The most outstanding are Silberman (1922) and the four volumes grouped as Les Hauts Ponts (1932–35).

La vie inquiète de Jean Hermelin (1920); La Bonifas (1925); Le retour de Silberman (1930); Le demi dieu, ou le voyage en Grèce (1944); La vie privée de Racine (1949); Deux cœurs simples (1953); Le tiroir secret (1958).

D. Alden, J. de L.: An Intellectual Itinerary (1958). M.G.; J.P.R.

Lactantius, CAECILIUS FIRMIANUS (*c. 250; †c. 317), Christian writer of polemical works against the pagan philosophers, the most important being entitled Divinae institutiones. The clarity and grace of his style are justly celebrated, but his grasp of philosophy and theology is exceedingly imperfect.

J.A.W.

Eds: Migne, Patrologia Latina, VI–VII (1844); S. Brandt and G. von Laubmann in Corpus scriptorum ecclesiastic. Latin., XIX and XXVII (1890–95).—Epitome of the Divine Institutes (tr. E. H. Blakeney, 1950); The Divine Institutes (tr. M. F. McDonald, 1964); Minor Works (tr. idem, 1965).

R. Pichon, Lactance (1901). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Ladler, SHNE'UR ZALMAN: see Shne'ur Zalman of Ladi.

Laet, JAN JACOB DE (*Antwerp 13 XII 1815; †ibid. 22 IV 1891), Flemish author; Flemish representative of 'Weltschmerz'. He wrote one of the first Flemish country stories, Het lot (1846; Ger. tr., Ein Spieler, 1845).

Gedichten (1848).—Het huis van Wesenbeke (historical novel; 1842).—De vloek (short story; 1841). R.F.L.

Lafayette, MARIE MADELEINE, née POCHE DE LA VERGNE, COMTESSE DE (*Paris 1634; ∞1655 François, Comte de La Fayette; †ibid. 25 V 1693), French novelist. After the birth of two children she left her husband, a landowner in Auvergne, and returned to Paris, where she became a prominent member of society. In 1665 La* Rochefoucauld had separated from his wife and he shared a house with Mme de Lafayette until his death in 1680. The extent of their literary collaboration is difficult to determine, but it was certainly close and his influence is apparent in the final chapters of La Princesse de Clèves (1678; The Princess of Cleves, tr. N. Mitford, 1950). The theme of all her fiction is sexual frustration and is probably a reflection of her personal experience. The Princesse de Clèves is a study of the unyielding heroine, but though it appears on the surface to describe a Cornelian situation, the outcome is very different. The princess emerges from the conflict a broken woman who retires to a convent. The book with its insight into the finer shades of feeling and its subtle appreciation of motive is a landmark in the history of the French novel and the beginning of a tradition which runs through Choderlos* de Laclos, Constant* and Stendhal* to Proust*.

NOVELS: La Princesse de Montpensier (1662); Zalde (1670); La Comtesse de Tende (1724).—MISCELLANEOUS: Histoire de Mme Henriette d'Angleterre (1720); Mémoires de la cour de France (1731).—Œuvres (ed. R. Lejeune, 1928); Correspondance (2 vols, 1942).

H. Ashton, Madame de La F., sa vie et ses œuvres (Cambridge, 1922; standard life); E. Magne, Madame de L. en ménage (1926) and Le cœur et l'esprit de Madame de L. (1927); M. Turnell, The Novel in France (1950); C. Dédéyan, Madame de L. (1956); B. Pingaud, Madame de L. par elle-même (1959); M. J. Durr, Madame de L. (1962); P. H. Nurse, Classical Voices (1971). M.T.

La Fontaine, JEAN DE (*Château-Thierry 28 VII 1621; ∞1647 Marie Héricart [o/o1658]; †Paris 13 IV 1695), French writer. The son of a provincial official, La Fontaine inherited but eventually sold his father's post of maître des eaux et forêts, married and neglected a young wife of local stock distantly related to Racine*, and became increasingly absorbed into Parisian circles. He was maintained by a series of patrons, including the chancellor Fouquet, to whom he remained loyal after his fall in 1661, the Duke of Bouillon and the cultured and brilliant Mme de La Sablière. He owed his personal popularity to his wit, his charm, his facile morals and his legendary absent-mindedness, which he no doubt cultivated as an aid to independence. To Louis XIV alone he was persona non grata.

His fame rests on his Fables, for which he drew on the great Aesopian treasury which had been constantly exploited by French writers since the early Middle Ages and on the Indian fables of BIDPAI (Fr. tr. 1644). His originality was to revive the fable in verse, little practised since the 16th century, and to endow it with a classical simplicity and economy and at the same time with a realism based on close observation of beasts and men. He was a born story-teller and, in his elegantly naturalistic idiom, one of the few great poets of his age.

His other main work is his verse Contes whose licentious themes are often borrowed from Boccaccio* and his 16th-century French imitators, or from Ariosto* or Rabelais*. He wrote other miscellaneous poems and re-told in prose the classical myth of Psyche. For the theatre he wrote the libretti of three operas, of which only Astrée (1691) reached production. With Champmeslé, the husband of the Racinian actress, he signed several comedies, but the extent of his collaboration has not been determined.

VERSE: main ed. of Fables, Bks I-VI (1668), VII-XI (1678-79), XII (1692-94; crit. ed. F. Gohin, 2 vols, 1926); main ed. of Contes et nouvelles en vers, Pts I and II (1665-69), III (1671), IV (1674; crit. ed. G. Couton, 1961); Le Songe de Vaux (1665, 1671, 1729; ed. E. Titcomb, Geneva, 1967); Élégie (aux nymphes de Vaux) (1661); Adonis (1669); La Captivité de Saint Malc (Christian epic; 1673); Le Quinquina (didactic poem; 1682).—PROSE: Les Amours de Psyché et de Cupidon (2 vols, 1669).—Œuvres complètes (ed. H. Régnier and P. Mesnard, 11 vols and 1 album, 1883-93); Fables, Contes et Nouvelles (ed. R. Groos, 1933); Œuvres diverses (ed. P. Clarac, 1942).—La F.'s Fables (tr. Sir E. Marsh, 1952).

L. Roche, La vie de J. de la F. (1913); G. Michaut, La F. (1915); R. Bray, Les fables de La F. (1934); F. Gohin, Les comédies attribuées à La F. (1934); J. Giraudoux, Les cinq tentations de La F. (1938); V. Lugli, Il prodigio di La F. (Milan, 1939); P. Clarac, La F., l'homme et l'œuvre (1947); P. A. Wadsworth, Young La F. (Illinois, 1952); G. Couton, La poésie de La F. (1957) and La politique de La F. (1959). G.B.

Laforet, CARMEN (*Barcelona 1921), Spanish novelist. She was educated in the Canary Islands and at Barcelona University. Her first novel (Nada, 1945) scored a startling success in and outside Spain. Crude modern realism is here coupled with a fine sensitivity free of sentimentality. The characters are dramatically portrayed through dialogue and action, and the atmosphere of Barcelona is superbly drawn in an immature but powerful style. Her subsequent novels fall short of this high mark.

La isla y los demonios (1952); La llamada (1954); La mujer nueva (1956).

E. de Nora, La novela española contemporánea (1958-62). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Laforgue, JULES (*Montevideo 16 VIII 1860; †1887 Leah Lee; †Paris 20 VIII 1887), French poet and penetrating critic. Although his poetry is marked by steady development from the early imitations of Baudelaire* in Le sanglot de la terre (pub. posth. 1903), he died before reaching complete maturity and there is a certain gap between the content of his work and the virtuosity with which it is presented. The free verse of the Derniers vers was a technical innovation of the first importance which had a decisive influence on T. S. Eliot*. Like Corbière*, Laforgue has been unduly neglected in France. Among his prose writings Les moralités légendaires (1887) have had too much attention and his criticism too little. The brilliant essay on Impressionism not only illuminates the painters, but is an essential document for a full appreciation of Laforgue's poetry.

VERSE: Les plaintes (1885); L'imitation de Notre-Dame de Lune (1886); Le concile féérique (1886); Les derniers vers de J. L. (1890; crit. ed. M. Collie and J. M. L'Heureux, 1965).—PROSE: Mélanges posthumes (1903); Berlin la cour et la ville (1922); Lettres à un ami, 1880-1886 (1941); Stéphane Vassiliev (1946).—Œuvres complètes (3 vols, 1902-03; ed. G. Jean-Aubry, 6 vols, 1922-30).

F. Ruchon, J. L., sa vie, son œuvre (1924); L. Guichard, J. L. et ses poésies (1950); M. J. Durry, J. L. (1952); W. Ramsey, J. L. and the Ironic Inheritance (1953); P. Reboul, L. (1960); M. Collie, L. (1963); A. Seljuta Cecin, El montevideano J. L., su vida y su obra (1964); J. L. Essays on a Poet's Life and Work (ed. W. Ramsey, 1969). M.T.

La Fosse, ANTOINE D'AUBIGNY DE (*Paris c. 1653; †ibid. 2 XI 1708), French dramatist. His plays belong to the decadence of French classical tragedy after Racine*. The best-known, Manlius Capitolinus (1698), was derived from Otway's* Venice Preserved (1682). He translated Anacreon* (1704).

Polixène (1696); Thésée (1700); Corésus et Callirhoé (1703).—Œuvres dramatiques (1706 etc.).

A. Johnson, La F., Otway, Saint-Réal (Paris, 1901). G.B.

Lagerkvist, PÄR (*Växjö 23 V 1891), Swedish poet, playwright and novelist, awarded the Nobel prize for literature (1951). Lagerkvist calls himself 'a believer without faith—a religious atheist' and his attitude to humanity is unique in that it champions humane and ideal traditions without calling in devotional or philosophic systems. The germ of this creed is shown in his partly autobiographical Gäst hos verkligheten (1925; Guest of Reality, tr. E. Mesterton and D. W. Harding, 1936). Much of Lagerkvist's early work consisted of Expressionist experiments, but he came to terms with himself and his art in the poems Hjärtats sånger (1926) and the short stories Kämpande ande (1930). During the 1930s the gathering Nazi menace urged him to take up the cudgels for tranquil unworldly values and to decry violence, which his subsequently dramatized tale Bödeln (1933; The Hangman, in op. cit.) brands as a diabolical principle. This issue recurs, not least in the symbolical Renaissance novel Dvärgen (1944; The Dwarf, tr. A. Dick, 1945). His Barabbas (1950; Eng. tr. A. Blair, 1952) is a moving, consummately unstressed study of the loveless man, groping for the intangible. Lagerkvist's later novels are symbolic, carefully constructed studies of man's quest for a faith. C.H.K. (I.S.)

PROSE AND PLAYS: Prosa (5 vols, 1949); Dramatik (3 vols, 1956); Sibyllan (1956; The Sibyl, tr. N. Walford, 1958); Ahasverus död (1960; The Death of Ahasverus, tr. idem, 1962); Pilgrim på havet (1962; Pilgrim at Sea, tr. idem, 1964); Det heliga landet (1964; The Holy Land, tr. idem, 1966); Mariamne (1967; Eng. tr. idem, 1968).—VERSE: Dikter (1950); Aftonland (1953).

E. Hornström, P. L. (1947); S. Linnér, 'P. L.:s barndomsmiljö' in Samlaren (1947); G. Fredén, P. L. (1952); O. Oberholzer, P. L.: Studien zu seiner Prosa und seinen Dramen (1958); L. (supp. of Scandinavica, 1971). I.S.

Lagerlöf, PETRUS (*Sunne 4 XI 1648; †Stockholm 7 I 1699), Swedish historiographer and poet, and one of the best Latin speakers and versifiers of his time. As Professor of poetry in Uppsala he much influenced the laws of metre and scansion in Swedish poetry. His own lyrical Sång till Elisandra was very popular; his other Swedish output was confined to slight occasional verse.

Samlade vitterhetsarbeten, IV (ed. P. Hanselli, 1859).

O. Sylwan, Den svenska versen, I (1925).

C.H.K.

Lagerlöf, SELMA OTTILIA LOVISA (*Ö. Ämtervik 20 XI 1858; †ibid. 16 III 1940), Swedish author, Nobel prizewinner 1909. Lagerlöf grew up on her father's manor, Mårbacka, and the old-time traditions and atmosphere imbibed there underlie and colour her work. She did not feel at home with the realism of the 1880s, and her first book, Gösta Berlings saga (1891; Eng. tr. L. Tudeer, 1898), reverted to the past for inspiration and plot. In all essentials, this book embodied her entire literary programme, the other main issues of which were reconciliation and atonement, and the problem of combining happiness with goodness. Wintering 1899–1900 in Egypt and Palestine, Lagerlöf met a colony of Dalecarlian peasants who had emigrated to Jerusalem in 1896 to live as the first Christians did. On her return, she visited their connections in the home parish, and subsequently wrote her epic two-part novel Jerusalem (1901–02; Eng. tr. V. S. Howard, 1915) which brought her world fame. Her other best-known work outside Sweden is Nils Holgerssons underbara resa genom Sverige (1906–07; The Wonderful Adventures of Nils, 1907, Further Adventures of Nils, 1911, both tr. V. S. Howard), a commissioned school reader describing the magic flight of a small boy throughout Sweden. Many of her tales have artlessly convincing Biblical or mythical subjects, though Lagerlöf herself could never quite accept the marvels and mysteries she recounted; she has aptly been defined as the great seeker who never achieved and never claimed to have achieved certainty.

NOVELS AND TALES: Osynliga länkar (1894; Invisible Links, tr. P. B. Flach, 1899); Antikrists mirakler (1897; The Miracles of Antichrist, tr. idem, 1899); Drottningar i Kungahälla (1899; The Queens of Kungahälla, tr. C. Field, 1917); Legender (1899); Berättelser (1899); En herrgårdssägen (1899; The Tale of a Manor, tr. idem, 1922); Herr Arnes penningar (1904; Herr Arne's Hoard, tr. A. G. Chater, 1923); Kristuslegender (1904; Christ Legends, tr. V. S. Howard, 1908); En saga om en saga (1908; incl. Tösen från Stormyrtorpet, The Girl From the Marsh Croft, tr. idem, 1910); Liljecronas hem (1911; Liljecrona's Home, tr. A. Barwell, 1913); Körkarlen (1912; Thy Soul Shall Bear Witness!, tr. W. F. Harvey, 1921); Kejsaren av Portugallien (1914; The Emperor of Portugallia, tr. V. S. Howard, 1916); Troll och människor (2 vols, 1915, 1921); Bannlyst (1918; The Outcast, tr. W. Worster, 1920); Löwensköldska ringen (1925); Charlotte Löwensköld (1925) and Anna Svärd (1928; trilogy tr. F. Martin and V. S. Howard, The Ring of the Löwenskölds, 1931); Höst (1933; Harvest, tr. N. and F. Hedin, 1935).—Coll. ed. (12 vols, 1933).—MEMOIRS: Mårbacka (1922; Eng. tr. V. S. Howard, 1924); Ett barns memoarer (1930; Memoires of My Childhood, tr. idem, 1934); Dagbok för S. O. L. L. (1932; The Diary of S. L., tr. idem, 1936).

W. A. Berendsohn, S. L. (Ger. 1927; Eng. ed. 1968); G. Ahlström, Den underbara resan (1942; new ed. 1958) and Kring Gösta Berlings saga (1959); E. Wägner, S. L. (2 vols, 1942–43); A. Gustafson, Six Scandinavian Novelists (1940; new ed. 1966); F. S. de Vrieze, Fact and Fiction in the Autobiographical Works of S. L. (1958); N. Afzelius, S. L. den förargelseväckande (1970). C.H.K. (I.S.)

La Grange-Chancel, JOSEPH (*Château d'Antoniât, nr Périgueux 1 I 1677; †ibid. 29 XII 1758), French dramatist. He claimed, with probably slight justification, to be a pupil of Racine*, and produced some ten tragedies which belong to the decadence of the French classical drama. He also wrote opera libretti and a series of pamphlets in verse against the regent Philip of Orleans (Philippiques, 1720; ed. M. de Lescure, 1858).

Jugurtha or Adherbal (1694); Oreste et Pylade (1697); Athénaïs (1699); Méleagre (1799); Amasis (1701); Alceste (1703); Ino et Mécerte (1713).—Œuvres (5 vols, 1758).

O. Nietzelt, La G.-C. als Tragiker (Leipzig, 1908); H. C. Lancaster, History of French Dramatic Literature in the 17th Century, IV (1940). G.B.

La Guma, ALEX (*Cape Town 20 II 1925), South African novelist and short-story writer. His work was banned and he was placed under house arrest for his political activities. A black author, he left South Africa in 1966. His stories evoke movingly the slum life of his childhood.

NOVELS: A Walk in the Night (1962); And A Threefold Cord (1965); The Stone Country (1967). U. La.

Laguna, ANDRÉS (*Segovia 1499; †ibid. 1560), Spanish medical writer and satirist. He studied in Salamanca and Paris and became physician to Charles V and Julius II. He translated and commented Dioscorides*. He wrote the Viaje de Turquía, previously attributed to Villalón*; it abounds in Erasmus anti-clerical satire and remained unpublished until the 20th century. E.M.W.

Pedazio Dioscorides Anazarbeo (Antwerp, 1555); Autobiografías y memorias (ed. M. Serrano y Sanz, Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., II); C. de Villalón, Viaje de Turquía (Buenos Aires, 1942).

M. Bataillon, Érasme et l'Espagne (Paris, 1937; Span. tr., Mexico, 1950) and Le docteur L., auteur du 'Voyage en Turquie' (1958). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

La Harpe, JEAN-FRANÇOIS DE (*Paris 20 XI 1739; †ibid. 11 II 1803), French dramatist and critic. Several of his somewhat mechanical dramas and tragedies had modern historical subjects and on that score reflected contemporary taste. As a critic he composed a Correspondance littéraire for the Grand Duke Paul of Russia (1774-91) (see F. M. Grimm*). His public lectures on French literature, collected as Lycée ou Cours de littérature (1799), established him for many years as a critical authority.

Le Comte de Warwick (1763); Les Barmécides (1778); Jeanne de Naples (1781); Coriolan (1784).

C. A. Sainte-Beuve, Causeries du Lundi, V (1850-69). G.B.

Lal Ded (fl. 14th century), Kashmiri poetess and Shaivite devotee, who recorded the teachings of her sect in short poems (vākh), many of which have become proverbial in the language, thanks to their pithy quality and skilful use of imagery drawn from everyday life.

R. C. Temple, The Word of Lallā the Prophetess (1924). C.S.

Laleau, LÉON: see HAITIAN LITERATURE.

Lalić, IVAN V. (*Belgrade 8 VI 1931), Serbian poet and critic; a graduate of Zagreb, where he worked for some time for radio before moving back to Belgrade. He is a former Secretary-General of the Yugoslav Writers Union. He is an editor of Knjizeynost, a prominent and creative critic and an excellent translator of poetry from French, German and English. As a poet he has been influenced by both national and European literary trends. His verse has close affinities with Pavlović* and Popa* in its efforts to interpret and learn from the lessons of history, and with Mihalčić* and Slamnjig* in its inventiveness and poetic insight into ordinary situations. He is an exceptionally fluent writer and is equally at home in the confines of classical form or free verse. Also worthy of mention is his very fine Anthology of Modern American Poetry (1970) in Serbo-Croatian translation.

POEMS: Bivši dečak (1955); Vetrovito proleće (1956); Velika vrata mora (1958); Melisa (1959); Argonauti i druge pesme (1961); Vreme, vatre, vrtovi (1961); Čin (1963); Krug (1968); Izbrane i nove pesme (1969).—Fire Gardens (sel. tr. C. Simić and C. W. Truesdale, New York, 1970). B.J.

Lalić, MIHAJLO (*Trepča nr Andrijevica 7 X 1914), Serbian novelist and short-story writer. After school in his native Montenegro, Lalić went to Belgrade to the law faculty in 1933. He began publishing in left-wing journals and was several times arrested between 1933 and 1940. From the beginning of the war he was back in Montenegro where he took part in the uprising, was imprisoned by the Chetniks and deported to Greece but escaped and joined the Resistance movement. He returned to Montenegro in 1944 and after the end of the war worked for some time as a newspaper correspondent there, going back to Belgrade in 1946 as a reporter for Borba. From 1955 he has been a professional writer. His many books deal almost exclusively with the war in his native Montenegro, and as well as good realist narrative, Lalić is capable of fine psychological portrayal of characters and of their reaction to hardship, hunger, defeat and privation. He is a committed writer and a recurring figure in his prose is the superman Partisan hero, but Lalić's material is too authentic, his characters too finely drawn in depth and the background of his native Montenegro too cruelly exotic for him ever to sink to the woodenness of Socialist Realism on the Soviet pattern.

NOVELS: Svadba (1950); Zlo proleće (1953); Raskid (1955; enlarged and repub. 1970); Lelejska gora (1957; enlarged and repub. 1962); Hajka (1960).—STORIES: Izvidnica (1948); Izabrane pripo-

vijetke (1950); Tri dana (1950); Prvi snijeg (1951); Osveta martoloza (1951); Na Tari (1952); Tajne bistrih voda (1955); Na mjeseci (1956); Posljednje brdo (1967).
B.J.

Lam, JAN (*Stanisławów 16 I 1838; †Lwów 3 VIII 1886), Polish novelist. Having taken part in the insurrection of 1863, he was imprisoned and worked after his release as a journalist in Lwów. His novels are marred by didacticism and bad plots but contain powerful satirical elements which have strongly influenced subsequent Polish writers of satire.

NOVELS: Pan komisarz wojenny (pub. 1880); Koroniarczyk w Galicji (1870); Głowy do pozłoty (1873); Idealiści (1876).—Dzieła literackie (4 vols, 1956–57).
P.H.

La Marche, OLIVIER DE (*c. 1426; †Brussels 1 II 1502), Burgundian chronicler and allegorical poet. Beginning as a page to Philip the Good in 1439, he served three successive Dukes of Burgundy as soldier, secretary, diplomat and organizer of tournaments and feasts. His Mémoires (1434–88) record his own experience; but he is too much concerned with externals, especially the ceremonial of battles and tournaments of which he also writes in Le Livre de l'Advis de Gaigne de Bataille, to be a serious historian. While admiring his masters, he recognized their faults; Le Chevalier Délibéré, an allegory of the struggle between life and death, shows Philip the Good overcome by weakness and Charles the Bold by arrogance. He was also unconventional enough to champion women in Le Triumphe des Dames, an allegorical poem interspersed with prose exempla.

Mémoires (ed. J. A. C. Buchon in Choix de Chroniques et Mémoires sur l'Histoire de France, 1886); Le Livre de l'Advis de Gaigne de Bataille (ed. B. Prost in Traité du Duel Judiciaire, 1872); Le Triumphe des Dames (1492; ed. J. Kalbfleisch, 1901); Le Chevalier Délibéré (facsim. of Vêrard ed. of 1488; 1946).

H. Stein, Étude biographique, littéraire et bibliographique sur O. de la M. (1888). J.M.L.

Lamartine, ALPHONSE-MARIE-LOUIS PRAT DE (*Mâcon 21 X 1790; ∞1820 Maria Ann Eliza Birch; †Paris 28 II 1869), French poet. The son of a Burgundian landowner, Lamartine was educated at the Jesuit college at Belley. After travelling in Switzerland and Italy (1811), he met at Aix-les-Bains in 1816 Mme Julie Charles, the invalid wife of a physicist, who died of tuberculosis in the following year. His feeling for her was a main inspiration of Les Méditations (1820), a book of lyric poems which marked the true beginning of Romantic poetry in France. Lamartine's happy marriage to an English girl was followed by diplomatic appointments (Naples 1820–21, Florence 1825–28), long visits to the family estates of Milly and Saint-Point, and a tour of the Near East (1830). During this period Lamartine experimented with philosophic poetry and prepared his second great lyric collection, Les Harmonies poétiques et religieuses (1830). The keynote of this is a confident, sentimental and sometimes pantheistic Christian feeling reminiscent of Chateaubriand*. Lamartine went on to attempt a great Christian epic, to be entitled Les Visions, of which Jocelyn (1836) and La Chute d'un ange (1838) are completed parts. His last lyric book, Les Recueils poétiques (1839), virtually ends his poetic production.

Meanwhile, he had turned to politics after the revolution of 1830 and advocated an idealistic Christian liberalism, gradually tending to socialism, which won him great popular support. In 1848 he became a member of the provisional government and then a candidate for the presidency of the Republic. No practical politician, he was overwhelmed by Louis Napoleon and retired to live privately and work off the immense debts he had accumulated. Most of his prose, autobiographical or didactic, was the forced product of his last years of poverty.

His greatness as a poet lies in his evocation of personal moods against the well-loved scenery of Savoy, Burgundy or Italy; in his sincere and tender religious vision; and in his expression of both in harmonious and simple verse.

VERSE: Saül (ed. J. des Cognets, 1918; tragedy); Méditations poétiques (crit. ed. G. Lanson, 2 vols, 1915); La mort de Socrate (1823); Nouvelles méditations poétiques (1823); Dernier chant du pèlerinage d'Harold (1825); Les visions (crit. ed. H. Guillemin, 1936); Le désert (1856); La vigne et la maison (1857); Poésies inédites (1873).—HISTORICAL AND POLITICAL: Histoire des Girondins (1847); Histoire de la Révolution de 1848 (1849); Histoire de la Restauration (1851–53); Histoire des Constituants (1854); Mémoires politiques (1863); La France parlementaire, Œuvres oratoires et écrits politiques (1864–65).—STORIES: Raphaël (1849); Graziella (1851); Geneviève (1851); Le tailleur de pierres de Saint-Point (1851).—VARIOUS: Souvenirs... d'un voyage en orient (1835); Confidences (1849); Nouvelles Confidences (1851); Vie des grands hommes (in review Le Civilisateur; 1851–55); Cours familier de littérature (28 vols, 1856–69; sel. pub. as Souvenirs et portraits, 3 vols, 1872).—Œuvres complètes (22 vols, 1900–07); Œuvres poétiques complètes (ed. M.-F. Guyard, 1963).

P. Hazard, L. (1925); H. Guillemin, L., l'homme et l'œuvre (1940); M.-F. Guyard, A. de L. (1956).
G.B.

Lamb, LADY CAROLINE, née PONSONBY (*Rochampton 13 XI 1785; ∞1805 Hon. William Lamb, later Lord Melbourne; †London 26 I 1828), English novelist, notorious for her liaison with Byron* whose portrait appears in Glenarvon (3 vols, 1816).

Graham Hamilton (2 vols, 1822); Ada Reis (3 vols, 1823).

Elizabeth Jenkins, Lady C. L. (1932); Lord David Cecil, The Young Melbourne (1939). R.F.

Lamb, CHARLES (*Inner Temple, London 10 II 1775; †Edmonton, ibid. 27 XII 1834), English essayist, critic and poet. Lamb was educated at Christ's Hospital, and then, in his own words, was a clerk in the Accountants' Hospital and the East India House, and was pensioned off from that service in 1825 after 33 years' service. Lamb devoted much time and care to his sister Mary, who killed their mother in one of the fits of insanity which never ceased to attack her. But although he sometimes yearned after a married domesticity, Lamb was no self-made martyr and found great pleasure in his many friendships (with Coleridge*, the Wordsworths*, Hazlitt*, Barton*, Dyer) and in his essays and dramatic criticism. His arch, archaic and rambling style is a good fit for his personality but is bad for imitators. His matter includes the domestic and the critical, his manner the sentimental and the satiric. B.H.

ESSAYS: Essays of Elia (1823; ed. M. Elwin, 1952); The Best of L. (ed. E. V. Lucas, 1914); L.'s Criticism. A Selection (ed. E. M. W. Tillyard, 1923).—The Works of C. L. (ed. E. V. Lucas, 7 vols, 1903–05).—MISCELLANEOUS: Tales from Shakespear (2 vols, 1807; with Mary L., whose name did not appear for the first 6 eds); Letters of C. L. (ed. E. V. Lucas, 3 vols, 1935).

B. W. Proctor, Memoir of L. (1866); F. Masson, C. L. (1913); E. V. Lucas, The Life of L. (rev. 1921). B.H. (K.W.)

Lambarde, WILLIAM (*London 18 X 1536; ∞11 IX 1570 Jane Multon, ∞28 X 1583 Sylvestra Dallison, ∞13 IV 1592 Margaret Reeder; †Westcombe 19 VIII 1601), English historian and scholar of Anglo-Saxon, a pupil of Laurence Nowell. A Justice of the Peace for Kent (1579), his Eirenarcha (1581) was long a standard work on this office. He was keeper of the records at the Rolls Chapel (1597) and the Tower (1600–01).

A Perambulation of Kent (1576; 1596, ed. 1826); The duties of constables (1583); Archion (1635).

W. Dunkel, W. L., Elizabethan Jurist (1965). B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Lambert le Tort (fl. c. 1175), French poet, author of the third branch of the Roman d'Alexandre (ALEXANDER THE GREAT). Lambert's starting point was a decasyllabic romance by a Poitevin poet, which in its turn was a revision and expansion of the poem of Alberic*. Lambert continued this poem in a dodecasyllabic metre (known since the 15th century as the alexandrin) which was also used by Alexandre* de Bernai in his final revision. Lambert's work is devoted almost entirely to Alexander's adventures in India and is full of marvellous episodes which deeply influenced the imagination of the medieval centuries. The primary source of the Roman d'Alexandre as a whole is a romantic biography written in Alexandria (the 'pseudo-Callisthenes') and known to the Middle Ages through the Latin adaptations of Julius Valerius and Leo (Historia de proeliis, 9th century) and the Epitome of the former. In addition, Lambert made use of a 4th-century document (Alexandri magni iter ad Paradisum) and an apocryphal letter of Alexander to Aristotle*, which is the source of many of the wonders in the poem.

F.W.

Lambrecht, JAN (*Bruges 1 IV 1626; †1690), Flemish poet, attorney at Bruges, prince of the Chamber of Rhetoric, wrote a Biblical pastoral (Rachel, 1659) in which the influence of Cats* is apparent. His Vlaemsche Vrede-Vreught (1659) includes an allegorical peace play, Vlaemsche Maecht. A.M.B.W.

Onstervelicke Lof van de Rederijksche Dicht-Conste (1661); Bethlehem (1685).

N. G. van Kampen, Geschiedenis der Letterkunde en Wetenschappen, I (1821); P. Blommaert in Belgisch Museum, II (1838).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Lamdan, YITZCHAK (*Mlinov, Ukraine 7 XI 1899; †Tel Aviv 16 XI 1954), Hebrew poet; from 1932 editor of the periodical Gilyonoth. He experienced the horrors of war as a schoolboy of 15. His family were lost and his brother murdered before his eyes. After the Revolution he volunteered for the Red Army; but finally, in 1920, he reached Palestine. His first poem was published in 1918 in Hashiloach. His best-known work is the dramatic poem Massada (1927).

Beritma Ha-Meshuleshet (1938); Sefer Hayamim (1941); Be-Maale Akrahim (1944).

L. I. Yudkin, Isaac L. (1971).

S.A. (M.Ge.); Y.F.)

Lamennais, HUGUES FELICITÉ ROBERT DE (*Saint-Malo 19 VI 1782; †Paris 27 II 1854), French writer. Lamennais was one of the fathers of Christian Socialism. A Breton with a strong mystical outlook, he was ordained priest at the age of 34. In 1830 he founded a periodical, L'Avenir, which had an inflammatory influence on the men and women of his generation. In 1832 he was condemned for his ardent democratic ideas by the Papal encyclical Mirari Vos, and finally left the Roman Church. He became a republican, was imprisoned and in 1848 elected a deputy. His ideal of primitive Christianity was expressed in a lyrical prose style freely inspired by the Bible.

Essai sur l'indifférence en matière de religion (1817); Paroles d'un croyant (1834); Le livre du peuple (1837); Esquisse d'une philosophie (1841– 46).—Œuvres complètes (10 vols, 1844); Œuvres posthumes (1866).

C. Maréchal, La famille and La jeunesse de L. (1913); P. Vulliand, Les paroles d'un croyant (1928); C. Carcopino, Les doctrines sociales de L. (1942); Y. Le Hir, L. écrivain (1949); Europe, special no. (1954); M. Mourre, L. ou l'hérésie des temps modernes (1955); J. Roussel, L. (Brussels, 1957). M.G.; J.P.R.

Lamm, MARTIN (*Stockholm 22 VI 1880; †ibid. 5 V 1950), Swedish scholar. A pupil of Schück*; lecturer in literature at Uppsala in 1908, and Professor at Stockholm Högskola 1919–47. Much of his best work was done on the 18th century and on Strindberg*.

Olof Dalin (1908); 'Lidnerstudier' in Samlaren (1909); J. G. Oxenstierna (1911); Swedenborg (1915); Upplysningstidens romantik (2 vols, 1918–20); Strindbergs dramer (2 vols, 1924–26); August Blanche som Stockholmskildrare (1931); August Strindberg (2 vols, 1940–42); Det moderna dramat (1948; Eng. tr. 1952).

I. Andersson, M. L. (1950).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Lamming, GEORGE (*Barbados 1927; ∞Nina Ghent), West Indian poet and novelist. His first novel, In the Castle of My Skin (1953), is a lyrical compassionate rendering of a Barbadian childhood. The first two novels explore the West Indian world view as it was moulded by colonial institutions in a setting that was at the same time warm and protective, alienating and destructive, and then test that view by placing his characters outside their native setting. The next two novels attempt to point the way towards a condition of wholeness as a prerequisite to personal and national fulfilment. His work constitutes a critique of West Indian society, focusing on the cleavage between peasantry and middle class and the consequent conflicting cultural heritage, a framework which allows him to set his political theme in realistic, meaningful perspective. His essays, Pleasures of Exile (1960), are necessary complementary reading.

The Emigrants (1954); Of Age and Innocence (1958); Season of Adventure (1960); Water With Berries (1972); Natives of My Person (1972).

Wilfred Cartey, 'L. and the search for freedom' in New World, III.1–2 (1966–67); Mervyn Morris, 'The poet as novelist' in The Islands In-Between (ed. Louis James, 1968); Gerald Moore, The Chosen Tongue (1969); Gloria Yarde, 'G. L.: the historical imagination' in The Lit. Half-Yearly, XI.2 (July 1970); Kenneth Ramchand, The West Indian Novel and Its Background (1970). A.D.Dr.

La Mothe Le Vayer, FRANÇOIS DE (*Paris 1588; †ibid. 1672), French scholar and historian. One of the chief sceptics (libertins) of the time in his Dialogues (1630–31), he grew cautious and became the tutor (1652–57) of Louis XIV, for whose instruction he composed a number of pedagogic works. He controverted the linguistic theories of Vaugelas*.

Considérations sur l'éloquence française (1638); De la vertu des patens (1642); Lettres touchant les nouvelles 'Remarques sur la langue française' [of Vaugelas] (1647); Du peu de certitude qu'il y a dans l'histoire (1668).

R. Pintard, Le libertinage érudit (2 vols, 1943). G.B.

Lamotte-Houdar(t), ANTOINE: see Houdar de La Motte, ANTOINE.

Lampedusa, GIUSEPPE TOMASI DI: see Tomasi di Lampedusa, GIUSEPPE.

Lampman, ARCHIBALD (*Morpeth, Ontario 17 XI 1861; ∞1887 Emma Maud Playter; †Ottawa 10 II 1899), Canadian poet and civil servant in Ottawa from 1883 until his death. Hypersensitive, repelled by urban life and materialism, he often sought escape in nature; his work is now noted for ability to create moods and capture subtle landscape effects.

Among the Millet (1888); Poems (1900); At the Long Sault (1943).

N. G. Guthrie, The Poetry of A. L. (1927); L. Dudek, 'Significance of L.' in Culture, XVIII (1957). R.Su.

Lampo, HUBERT (*Antwerp 1 IX 1920), Flemish novelist, the author of romanesque and magical yet realistic novels and stories, and an elegant stylist. His stories exist in a hinterland between the natural and preternatural realms, often with archetypal protagonists such as the redeemer, anima and Atlantis.

NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: Hélène Defraye (1944); Tryptiek van de onvervulde liefde (1947); De belofte aan Rachel (1952); Terugkeer naar Atlantis (1953); De duivel en de maagd (1955); De komst van Joachim Stiller (1960); Hermione betraht (1962); De heks en de archeoloog (1967).—ESSAYS: De roman van een roman (1951); De ring van Möbius (1967).—De draad van Ariadne (autobiog.; 1967).

P. Hardy, H. L. (1966). R.F.L. (tr. P.K.)

Lamprecht, 'PFAFFE L.' (fl. c. 1120–30), author of the first German lay of ALEXANDER. An original version (Vorau MS, mid-Franconian rhymes) is a translation with only incidental modifications of Alberic's* romance, in the style of the popular epic. An anonymous redaction (which is also a continuation incorporating the Iter ad paradisum) of c. 1160 is pre-courtly in rhymes and style. Both are anterior to the Rolandslied of Pfaffe Konrad*. He also wrote a free verse adaptation of the Book of Tobit. (See Rudolf* von Ems; Johannes Hartlieb*.)

L.s. Alexanderlied (ed. K. Kinzel, 1884; ed. F. Maurer, 1940; modernized R. E. Ottmann, n.d.); Tobias (ed. H. Degering in Paul und Braunes Beiträge, XLI, 1916).

G. Cary, The Medieval Alexander (1956); M. O'C. Walshe, Medieval German Literature (1962). F.P.P.

Landau, M. A.: see Aldanov, MARK ALEXANDROVICH.

Landino, CRISTOFORO (*Florence 1424; †ibid. 1492), Italian humanist, author of Neo-Platonic dialogues. He is remembered also for his commentary on Dante's* Commedia and for his edition of the text with illustrations by Botticelli (1481).

De nobilitate animae (1472; crit. ed. A. Paoli and G. Gentile, 1915-17); Disputationes camaldulenses (?1480); Interpretationes in P. Virgilium (1487); Comedia di Dante Alighieri con l'esposizione di C. L. (1529); Carmina omnia (crit. ed. A. Perosa, 1939).

M. Barbi, Della fortuna di Dante nel sec. XVI (1890). B.R.

Landívar, RAFAEL (*Guatemala 29 X 1731; †Bologna 27 IX 1793), Jesuit and author of a Latin poem, Rusticatio Mexicana (1782), written in Italy, where Landívar lived after the expulsion of the Jesuits from the domains of the Spanish Crown. It celebrated the natural beauties of Central America and described rural life in the manner of the Georgics. It anticipated the Romantic taste for local colour and exercised considerable influence. E.Sa. (J.F.)

Rusticatio Mexicana (ed. I. Loureda, 1924; text and Span. tr.). E.Sa.

Lando, ORTENSIO (*?Milan 1512; †?Venice 1553), Italian humanist, translator of More's* Utopia and author of novelle and of extravagant satirical works of which Paradossi (Lyons, 1543) and their accompanying Confutazione (1543) are the most characteristic.

Cicero relegatus, Cicero revocatus (Lyons, 1534); Forcianae quaestiones (1536); Sermoni funebri (1549); Commentario delle più notabili e mostruose cose d'Italia e d'altri luoghi (1550); Sferza di M. Anonimo di Utopia (1550); Sette libri de cathaloghi a varie cose appartenenti (1552).

I. Sanesi, Il Cinquecentista O. L. (1893); P. la Cuta, O. L. e Napoli nella prima metà del '500 (1925); W. L. Bullock, 'The lost Miscellaneae quaestiones of O. L.' in Ital. Stud., V (1938; with biblio.). B.R.

Landois, HERMANN (*Münster 19 IV 1835; †ibid. 29 I 1905), Low German writer, Professor of zoology at Münster University. A notorious and well-beloved eccentric, he continued the cycle of stories begun by Franz Giese.

Franz Essink, sien Liäwen un Driewen as aolt Mönstersk Kind (5 vols, 1881-1900); Krissbetten un Kassbetten (1885).

H. Löns, 'Münsters volkstümlichster Mann' in Niedersachsen, IV (1899); E. Marcus, K. Prümer and E. Rade, Professor L. Lebensbild eines westfälischen Gelehrten-Originals (1907). G.C.

Landon, LETITIA ELIZABETH MACLEAN, pseud. L. E. L. (*London 14 VIII 1802; ∞1838 George Maclean; †Cape Coast Castle, South Africa 15 X 1838), English writer of novels and verse whose vast gushing output won her wide ephemeral popularity. R.M.H.

The Improvisatrice (1824); Romance and Reality (1831); Ethel Churchill (1837).—Life and Literary Remains of L. E. L. (ed. S. L. Blanchard, 2 vols, 1841).

D. E. Enfield, L. E. L., A Mystery of the Thirties (1928); H. Ashton, Letty L. (1951).

R.M.H. (K.W.)

Landor, WALTER SAVAGE (*Warwick 30 I 1775; ∞1811 Julia Thuillier; †Florence 17 IX 1864), English poet and prose-writer whose work bears no reflection of his turbulent relations with his fellow men. After quarrels with neighbours and tenantry at Llantonny Abbey, whither he early retired to devote himself to writing, he repaired to Italy. His earliest poem, Gebir (1798), won him the lifelong friendship of Southey* but little recognition. Throughout his life he wrote poetry, from fragile Hellenic lyrics to full-length historical plays not intended for the stage. While his lyrics showed simplicity of language and form, on the prose of Imaginary Conversations (1824-29) he lavished every poetic device, short of a metrical scheme, that could make it rich, flexible and colourful. Though his works were enthusiastically praised by Wordsworth* and other contemporaries, there are critics who escape their magic, finding them unreal and shallow.

Count Julian: a tragedy (1812); Complete Works (ed. T. E. Welby and S. Wheeler, 1927-36).

J. Forster, L.: A Biography (1869); S. Colvin, L. (1881); M. Elwin, S. L. (1941; rev. as L.: A Replevin, 1958); R. H. Super, W. S. L. (1954).

R.M.H. (K.W.)

Landry, CHARLES-FRANÇOIS (*Lausanne 19 III 1909), Swiss novelist. A journalist of extensive and varied output, Landry is first and foremost a storyteller who delights in the romantic. Consciously autobiographic, he treats love not as a subject for psychoanalysis but as an endless, and often fruitless, quest. He also draws a moral from his own stories or from history.

NOVELS: Diégo (1938); Garcia (1947); Les grelots

de la mule (1948); Domitienne (1949); La Devinaize (1950).—BIOGRAPHIES: J.-D.-A. Davel, le patriote sans patrie (1940); Saint Augustin, proie de Dieu (1943); Charles, dernier duc de Bourgogne (1960). G.G.

Landsbergis, ALGIRDAS: see LITHUANIAN LITERATURE, text and biblio.

Landulfus Sagax: see Eutropius.

Lanfranc Cigala (c. 1235–70), Provençal troubadour; Genoese lawyer and judge, the best Provençal troubadour in Italy. The style of his sirventes is forceful and down-to-earth. He participated in the composition of a dozen tensons. But it is in his eight cansos d'amor that he is outstanding; the lucidity of his diction, the charm with which he sings of the smile of his revered lady and his idealized conception of love, all show affinity with the poets of the dolce stil nuovo.

G. Bertoni, I trovatori d'Italia (1915); V. De Bartholomaeis, Poesie provenzali storiche relative all'Italia (1931); E. D. Healy, 'L. C., poet of the "dolce stil nuovo" in Provençal' in Stud. in Philol., XLV (1948); F. Branciforti, Il Canzoniere di L. C. (1954). R.R.B. (K.R.)

Lang, ANDREW (*Selkirk 31 III 1844; ∞1875 Leonora Blanche Alleyne; †Banchory, Aberdeen 21 VII 1912), Scottish man of letters. Educated at St Andrews and Oxford; Fellow of Merton College, Oxford, 1868, LL.D. St Andrews, 1885. Lang early proved himself one of the most versatile journalists of his day and made important contributions to many departments of scholarship. He was an exquisite minor poet, a fine classical scholar and translator, a thorough and always literary historian, and a learned and speculative antiquarian and folk-lorist. He carried his learning lightly, and perfected a vigorous, urbane, sensitive prose style.

Tr., Homer, Odyssey (with S. H. Butcher; 1879) and Iliad (with W. Leaf and E. Myers; 1883).—The Gold of Fairnilee (1888); The Blue Fairy Book (1889) and many others; Life and Letters of John Gibson Lockhart (1896); Prince Charles Edward (1900); A History of Scotland (4 vols, 1900–07); The World of Homer (1910).—Collected Poems (1923).

R. L. Green, A. L.: A Critical Biography (1946; with full biblio.) and A. L. (1962); J. R. R. Tolkien, 'On fairy stories' in Essays Presented to Charles Williams (1947). J.K.

Langbaine, GERARD, THE YOUNGER (*Oxford 15 VI 1656; †ibid. 23 VI 1692), English writer. Originally apprenticed to Simmons, a London bookseller, Langbaine, after marrying early, became a hack writer, collecting a valuable library of pre-Restoration drama. His Exact Catalogue of all the Comedies (1680) was followed by Momus Triumphans; or the plagiarisms of the English stage (1687) which attacked Dryden* as a plagiarist but also, like his Account of the English Dramatic Poets (1691; expanded by Charles Gildon*, 1698) provided useful source and biographical materials for later critics.

His father GERARD LANGBAIN THE ELDER (*Barton, Westmorland 1609; ∞Elizabeth Sunnybank; †Oxford 10 II 1657/58), Fellow (1633) and Provost (1646) of Queen's College, Oxford and Keeper of the Archives (1644), left a great collection of antiquarian and other MSS and edited Longinus* (1636). B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Lange, ANTONI, pseud. NAPIERSKI (*Warsaw 1861; †ibid. 17 III 1929), Polish poet and novelist. An accomplished linguist, in his own highly polished poetry he is philosophic and sometimes pessimistic. He was strongly influenced by the French Symbolists.

VERSE: Pogrzeb Shelleya (1890); Poezje (2 series, 1895–98); Gdziekolwiek jesteś . . . (2 vols, 1931).—PLAYS: Wenedzi (1909); Atylla (1910).—TRANSLATIONS: Przekłady z poetów obcych (2 vols, 1899); Nal i Damajanti (1905); Poeci hiszpańscy (1916).—VARIOUS: Pochodnie w mroku (1927).—Dziela (8 vols, 1895).

Z. Dębicki, 'A. L.' in Portrety, I (1927); W. Borowy, 'A. L. jako poeta' in Dziś i wczoraj (1934). S.S. (P.H.)

Lange, PER (*Hørsholm 30 VIII 1901; ∞1931 Rigmor Minna Suenson, ∞1942 Hanne Thiele), Danish poet and essayist. A fastidious and aristocratic writer, whose motifs are often classical and whose views may at times recall Nietzsche*.

VERSE: Kaos og Stjernen (1926); Forvandlinger (1929); Orfeus (1932); Relieffer (1943).—Udvalgte Digte (1953).—ESSAYS: Spejlinger (1953); Ved Musikkens Tærskel (1957); Samtale med et Æsel (1961); Om Krig og Krigsmænd (1966); Dyrenes Maskerade (1969).—Samlede Essays (1964).

E.B.

Lange, SAMUEL GOTTHOLD (*Halle 22 III 1711; †Laubingen 25 VI 1781), German poet. With his student friend Pyra*, Lange, later a Protestant pastor, imitated Anacreon* in German. As a translator of Horace* he was fiercely attacked by Lessing* in the Vademecum.

Freundschaftliche Lieder (with Pyra; 1745); Horazische Oden (1747); Poetische Betrachtungen über die sieben Worte des sterbenden Erlösers (1757).

H. Geppert, S. G. L., der Gründer der ersten Halleschen Dichterschule (diss. Heidelberg, 1923). H.B.G.

Langendijk, PIETER (*Haarlem 25 VII 1683; ∞1727 Joanetta M. Senepart; †ibid. 18 VII 1756), Dutch playwright and poet, draughtsman and painter. Strongly influenced by French examples, he wrote good comedies in smooth alexandrines, with clever plots and without psychological problems.

COMEDIES: Don Quichote op de bruiloft van Kamacho (1699); De Zwetser (1712); Het wederzijdsch huwelijksbedrog (1712); Krelis Louwen (1715; Alexandre le Grand, tr. H. J. Roullaud, 1751); De wiskunstenaars (1715; ed. G. W. Wolhuis, 1938); Les mathématiciens ou la jeune fille en fuite, tr. in Chefs d'œuvre des théâtres étrangers, Brussels, 1824); Arlequyn actionist (1720); Xantippe (1756); De spiegel der vaderlandsche kooplieden (1760).—Gedichten (4 vols, 1721–60).

C. H. Ph. Meyer, P. L. (1891); F. Z. Mehler, P. L. (1892). J.W.W.

Langendonck, PROSPER VAN (*Brussels 15 III 1862; †ibid. 7 XI 1920), Flemish poet; co-founder of the review, Van Nu en Straks. He died a victim of hereditary insanity. There is a striking honesty and dignity in the hypochondriac, contemplative poetry of this poète maudit struggling with an absolute ideal. He wrote critical essays as well as one collection of poems, Verzen (1900).

Het werk van P. van L. (1926).

L. Sourie, P. van L. (2nd ed. 1962); A. Westerland, P. van L. (1946); G. Schmook, P. van L. (1968). R.F.L. (tr. P.K.)

Langenhoven, CORNELIS JACOB (*Ladismith, Cape Colony 12 VIII 1878; †1897 Maria Magdalena Hugo; †Oudtshoorn 15 VII 1932), Afrikaans prose writer, poet, dramatist and politician. Once converted to the cause of Afrikaans as a cultural medium, he felt it his vocation to provide his people with reading-matter in their own language, a task for which his wit, his brilliant style and his humorous insight into human nature admirably equipped him. His work shows affinity with that of the Dutch Romantic Multatuli*, whom he admired. In his natural, unconventional style and language he amuses, teaches, interests and moves 'children from 8 to 88'. He is the author of the Afrikaans national anthem, 'Die Stem van Suid-Afrika'.

Versamelde Werke (16 vols, 1933–58).—VERSE AND PROSE: Ons Weg deur die Wêreld (1914); Aan Stille Waters (2 vols, 1930–41).—VERSE: Die Pad van Suid-Afrika (1921); Gesange in Afrikaans (1922).—PROSE: Sonde met die Bure (1921); Geeste op Aarde (1924); Brolloks en Bittergal (1925); Mof en sy Mense (1926); U Dienswillige Dienaar (1932); Die Mantel van Elia (1933).—DRAMA: Die Hoop van Suid-Afrika (1913); Die Vrou van Suid-Afrika (1918).

M. P. O. Burgers, Die Mens L. (1939); P. J. Nienaber, Perspektief en Profiel (1951).

G.D. (N.D.C.)

Langer, FRANTIŠEK (*Prague 3 III 1888; †ibid. 2 VIII 1965), Czech dramatist and novelist. One of the most distinguished modern Czech dramatists, Langer has shown considerable versatility in his plays, which range from the light-hearted portrayal of the lower reaches of Prague society (Velbloud uchem jehly, 1923) by way of the psychological drama Periferie (1925) with its echoes of Dostoyevsky* to the moving evocation of the Odyssey of the Czech legionaries in Siberia in the First World War (Jízdní hlídka, 1935).

Byli a bylo (memoirs; 1963).—E. Konrád, F. L. (1949). R.A.

Langevin, ANDRÉ (*Montreal 1927), Canadian novelist, dramatist and producer for the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. Characterized by descriptive realism and atmosphere, his work probes the lives of masochistic characters.

Evadé de la nuit (1951); Poussière sur la ville (1953); Dust Over the City, tr. J. Latrebe and R. Gottlieb, 1955); Le temps des hommes (1956).—L'œil du peuple (drama; 1958).

G. Marcotte, 'L'œuvre romanesque d'A. L.' in Une littérature qui se fait (1962); J. L. Major, 'A. L.' in Archives des Lettres canadiennes, III (1964). R.Su.

Langgässer, ELISABETH, pseud. of E. L. HOFFMANN (*Alzey 23 II 1899; †Rheinzabern 25 VII 1950), German novelist and poet. Her chief concerns are the form of the Christian novel and the conflict between good and evil, particularly in the novel Das unauslöschliche Siegel (1946). Ethically the powers of good may predominate; aesthetically the powers of evil win. R.W.L.

NOVELS: Triptychon des Teufels (1932); Der Gang durch das Ried (1936); Märkische Argonautenfahrt (1950; tr. The Quest, 1953).—Briefe 1926–50 (1954); Gesammelte Werke (5 vols, 1959–64).

W. Hoffmann-Langgässer, Lob der Schöpfung (1959); L. Rinser, Magische Argonautenfahrt. Einführung in die gesammelten Werke von E. L. (1959); E. Augsberger, E. L. Leitmotiv und Symbol in ihren Prosawerken (1962); A. Fremantle, 'E. L.' in Greyfriar, IX (1966); W. Grenzmann, Dichtung und Glaube (6th ed. 1967).—A. W. Riley in Literaturwissenschaftliches Jahrb., VIII (biblio.; 1967). K.P.

Langhorne, JOHN (*Winton III 1735; †1767 Ann Cracroft, †1772 Miss Thompson; †Blagdon 1 IV 1779), English writer of pretty verse, defender of Scots against Churchill's* satire, and, with his brother WILLIAM (*1721; †17 II 1772), translator of Plutarch's Lives (6 vols, 1770).

Poetical Works (2 vols, 1766; with memoir, 1804); Genius and Valour: a Scotch pastoral (1764). R.M.H.

Langland, WILLIAM (*c. 1332; †c. 1400), English poet. His life is obscure: he was probably born in the West Midlands, took minor Orders, married and lived in London. His Vision of Piers Plowman, a long allegorical and satirical poem in alliterative verse, survives in many MSS; these represent three separate versions (called the A-, B- and C-texts) which are dated on scanty internal evidence c. 1370, 1377-79 and 1393-98. Theories of multiple authorship, once popular, are now discarded, except as regards C-text. The poem consists of two parts: the Visio—primarily an examination of the right use of the world's goods in man's search for truth, with Piers and his helpers representing Christian society; and the Vita—the search for Dowel, Dobet and Dobest (the good, better and best ways of life)—an allegorical handling of the problems of the individual in his search for self-knowledge and perfection. The poem contains vivid pictures of contemporary life, but the most powerful passages concern the recurring themes of Caritas and the Incarnation. R.W.B.

Piers the Plowman (3 parallel texts; ed. W. W. Skeat, 2 vols, 1886); A-Version (ed. T. A. Knott and D. C. Fowler, 1952; ed. G. Kane, 1960).

The Piers Plowman Controversy (arts by various critics; 1910); R. W. Chambers, 'Piers Plowman: a comparative study' in Man's Unconquerable Mind (1939); E. T. Donaldson, Piers Plowman: The C-Text and Its Poet (1949); D. W. Robertson and B. F. Huppé, Piers Plowman and Scriptural Tradition (1951); D. C. Fowler, Piers the Plowman: Literary Relations of the A and B Texts (1961); M. W. Bloomfield, Piers Plowman as a 14th-Century Apocalypse (1962); J. Lawlor, Piers Plowman: An Essay in Criticism (1962); E. Salter, Piers Plowman, An Introduction (1962); G. Kane, Piers Plowman: The Evidence for Authorship (1965); Piers Plowman: Critical Approaches (ed. S. S. Hussey, 1969). R.W.B. (T.F.H.)

Lanier, SIDNEY (*Macon, Ga. 3 II 1842; †1867 Mary Day; †Lynn, N.C. 7 IX 1881), American poet, musician and critic. He spent four years in the Confederate Army and contracted tuberculosis which caused his premature death. He tried teaching and law; became a flautist; wrote a chivalric war novel, Tiger Lilies (1867). After publishing Poems (1877) he was appointed lecturer at Johns Hopkins University (1879) and wrote The Science of English Verse (1880), relating poetry to music. His poems show intense feeling and delicate perception. H.L.C.

Florida: Its Scenery, Climate, and History (1875); Music and Poetry (ed. H. W. Lanier, 1898).—The Centennial Edition of S. L. (ed. C. R. Anderson, 10 vols, 1945).

E. Mims, S. L. (1905); A. H. Starke, S. L.: A Biographical and Critical Study (1933); J. B. Hubbell, The South in American Literature (1954). H.L.C. (I.W.)

Lankov, NIKOLA (*Golyamo Dryanovo 14 III 1902; †Sofia 27 V 1965), Bulgarian poet. A writer of the proletarian 'Old Guard' (RLF) and editor of Dumping, a humorous journal, he was interned in 1941 and again in the 1950s, this time 'by his own' [comrades], as he relates in 'The Memory' (Spomenut, 1963), a curiously revealing poem-cycle dedicated to the Eighth Bulgarian Communist Party Congress.

Podem (1932); Pod leda (1938); Borba i pobeda (1952); Pri blizki hora (travelogue; 1956); Vyatur ot yug (1958).

K. Genov, N. L. (1962)

V.P.

Lannoy, BARONESS JOHANNA CORNELIA DE (*Breda 1738; †Geertruidenberg 18 II 1782), Dutch poet, self-taught in literary matters, wrote charming original verse: 'Aan mijn geest' and 'Het Gastmaal' (in Dichtkundige werken, 1780); also prize-poems: De waare vereischten in eenen dichter (1774).

Nagelatene dichtwerken (ed. Bilderdijk, 1783).—PLAYS: Leo de Groote (1767); Het beleg van Haarlem (1770); Cleopatra, koningin van Syrië (1776).

H. H. Knippenberg in Tijdschr. v. Taal- en Lett., XX (1901); A. Hallema in De Nieuwe Gids, LI (1936). J.J.W. (J.Sm.)

Lansdowne, LORD: see Granville, GEORGE.

Lansel, PEIDER, pseud. P. I. DERIN (*Pisa 15 VIII 1863; †Geneva 9 XII 1943), Ræto-Romansch poet and writer. Born in Italy of an emigré family and educated in Switzerland, he retired from his father's business in Tuscany in 1906 and settled in Geneva. With the exception of the period 1926-34 when he was again engaged in commerce and was Swiss consul in Leghorn, he devoted himself entirely to poetry and to the collection, preservation and evaluation of the heritage of the Ræto-Romansch past: linguistic, literary and cultural. Lansel may justly be considered the most important modern lyric poet in Romansch. His wide culture and experience, his great artistic sensitivity and detached and thoughtful cast of mind find expression in poetry of meticulous workmanship, in which the whole external world mirrors his soul. Lansel has set an example—and sacrificed his personal fortune—in his work to preserve the monuments of Ræto-Romansch civilization and remind his fellow countrymen of its value.

VERSE: Primulas (1892, 1907); La cullana d'ambras (1912); Il vegl chalamèr (1929); La funtana chi staina (1936); Fanzögnas (1939); Versiuns veglias e novas (1940); Ouvras, I (with intro. and notes A. Peer; 1966).—SHORT STORIES: Gruisaidas albas id oters requints (1931).—ANTHOLOGIES: La Musa Ladina (1910, 1918); Linguach da la mamma illa poesia rumantscha

(1938); Püschelot our da l'fert retoromantsch (1939); Musa rumantscha (1950).—VARIOUS: I Retoromanci (1935; tr. into Romansch, Ger., Fr., Eng. and Esperanto).

R. R. Bezzola, 'Lirica ladina moderna' in 10 Ans Union Rumantsch Turitg (1930); J. Luzzi, 'P. L.' in Annalas da la Soc. Retorum., XLVIII (1934) and 'L'ouvra e la persunalità da P. L.', ibid., LVIII (1944); M. E. Maxfield, Studies in Modern Romansch Poetry in the Engadine (thesis, Radcliffe College and Harvard Univ., 1938); A. Peer, 'P. L.' in Bedeutende Bündner (1970).

R.R.B.

Lanson, GUSTAVE (*Orléans 5 VIII 1857; †Paris 15 XII 1934), French critic. While winning much distinction as a teacher (Professor at the Sorbonne and director of the École Normale) Lanson came to be recognized as the master of French academic criticism. His own solid output of writing was informed by a natural taste for ideas, a rather dogmatic philosophic outlook, and a highly disciplined historical method, based upon the use of biographical material and thorough research into literary sources. His most important work—Histoire de la littérature française (1894)—had a profound influence on French secondary education for at least 50 years.

Nivelle de La Chaussée et la comédie larmoyante (1888); Bossuet (1890); Boileau (1892); Hommes et livres, Corneille (1898); Manuel bibliographique (1909 and 1912); Esquisse d'une histoire de la tragédie française. Méthodes de l'histoire littéraire (1925); L'École Normale Supérieure (1926); L'idéal français dans la littérature de la Renaissance à la Révolution (1928).

Mélanges offerts à G. L. (1922); J. Pommier and P. Clarac, Discours prononcés à la Sorbonne le 24 mai 1958 (1958).
M.G.; J.P.R.

Lanza, SILVERIO: see Amorós, JUAN BAUTISTA.

Laonicus Chalcocondyles (*Athens c. 1432; †?1490), Greek historian, brought up in the court of the Palaeologi at Mistra and educated by George* Gemistus Plethon. His history covers the years 1298 to 1463, and was written after this as events between 1484 and 1487 are mentioned. It is introduced by a masterly survey of the Greeks in world history, followed by discussion of the relations of Greeks and Romans and finally analyses the reasons for the Ottoman victories, the enemy occupying a central place (reminiscent of the Persians in Herodotus*, whom Chalcocondyles appears to take as a model, though attempting to write in the style and language of Thucydides*).

Historiarum demonstrationes: crit. ed. E. Darkó (2 vols, 1922–27); ed. I. Bekker (1843; with Lat. tr.); Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CLIX (1866; with Lat. tr.).—Partial Ger. tr. F. Grabler (1954).

W. Müller, 'The last Athenian historian' in Jour.

Hellenic Stud., XLII (1922); G. Moravcsik, Byzantinoturcica (2nd ed. 1958). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Lao Shê, pseud. of SHU CH'ING-CH'UN (*Peking 3 II 1899; †X 1966), Chinese author, established, between 1926 and 1937, a reputation for satirical fiction and was especially admired for his skilful use of Peking dialect. His first novels were written in London, where he taught (1924–29). During the war with Japan he was President of the Writers League, and wrote patriotic plays. After the war he spent three years in the U.S.A. and wrote there his last novel, of which a translation (The Drum Singers, tr. H. Kuo, 1952) has appeared, but not the original. Back in Peking, he returned to writing plays during the 1950s.

NOVELS: Lao Chang ti chê-hsüeh (1926); Chao Tzû-yüeh (1927); Êrh Ma (1929); Hsiao P'o ti shêng-jih (1931); Mao-ch'êng chi (1933); City of Cats, tr. J. E. Dew, 1964; Li-hun (1933); The Quest for Love of Lao Lee, tr. H. Kuo, 1948; Niu T'ien-tzû chuan (1935); Lo-t'o Hsiang-tzû (1937); Rickshaw Boy, tr. E. King, 1945; Ssü-shih t'ung-t'ang (3 parts, 1946–50; The Yellow Storm, tr. I. Pruitt, 1951).—SHORT STORIES: Kan chi (1934); Ying-hai chi (1935); Ko-tsao chi (1936); above three repr. as Wei-shên chi and Yüeh-ya chi (1947); Tung-hai Pa-shan chi (1946); sel. trs in: C. C. Wang, Contemporary Chinese Stories (1944) and Stories of China at War (1947); Yuan Chia-hua and R. Payne, Contemporary Chinese Short Stories (1946); G. Kao, Chinese Wit and Humour (1946); Chinese Lit. (1957), No. 4 and (1962), No. 6.—PLAYS: Kuo-chia chih-shang (with Sung Chih-ti; 1940); Kuei-ch'ü-lai hsi (1943); T'ao-li ch'un-fêng (with Chao Ch'ing-ko; 'Fruits in the Spring', tr. G. Kao in China Mag., XVII, 1947); Lung-hsü kou (1951; Dragon Beard Ditch, tr. Liao Hung-ying, Peking, 1956).

C. Birch, 'Lao She: the humorist in his humour' in China Quart., VIII (1961); Z. Szpurski, 'The work of Lao She during the first phase of his career (1924–1932)' in Studien zur modernen chinesischen Literatur (ed. J. Průšek, Berlin, 1964).
A.R.D.

Lao-tzû, 'MASTER LAO', supposed author of the Chinese book Tao-tê ching. Lao-tzû is traditionally believed to have been a slightly older contemporary of Confucius* (6th century B.C.). His biography by Ssü-ma* Ch'ien is however a juxtaposition of legendary and factual items relating to three different persons with little attempt at harmonization. The recognition of this together with internal evidence has led to the placing of the Tao-tê ching in the 3rd century B.C. The poetic quality and paradoxical form of this Taoist treatise have provoked innumerable direct and indirect translations into Western languages, yet it is not fully intelligible except against the thought background of its time, for it makes a most skilful play with all manner of contemporary maxims. The author was not offering a personal mysticism but political advice. In the later Taoist church the work became a most important scripture.

Trs: A. Waley, The Way and Its Power (1934); J. J. L. Duyvendak, Tao Te Ching (1954); D. C. Lau, Tao Te Ching (1963).—Further biblio. in W.-T. Chan, An Outline and an Annotated Bibliography of Chinese Philosophy (1969). A.R.D.

La Péruse, JEAN BASTIER DE (*La Péruse, Charente 1529; †ibid. 1554), French poet. Closely linked with Ronsard*, he wrote, shortly after Jodelle's* Cléopâtre, one of the first French tragedies, Médée (1553 or 1554), of Senecan inspiration. The promise of his lyric poems was cut short by his early death.

Œuvres (ed. E. G. des Séguins, 1866).

N. Banachevitch, J.-B. de la P. (1923). G.B.

A Lapide, JOHANNES: see Johannes a Lapide.

Larbaud, VALÉRY (*Vichy 29 VIII 1881; †ibid. 2 II 1957), French writer. Larbaud inherited considerable wealth and was thereby enabled to spend his youth in a pleasantly nomadic fashion. He possessed a fine literary taste and a wide knowledge of foreign literatures, which enabled him to make better known in France Samuel Butler*, Coleridge* and, in particular, James Joyce*, whose Ulysses he translated. He is the author of modernist poems and of several cosmopolitan novels. The best of these, Barnabooth, tells the story of a millionaire who tries—in vain—to free himself from his wealth so that he may play his part in the rich variety of human experience.

Poèmes par un riche amateur (1908); Fermina Marquez (1911); A. O. Barnabooth, ses œuvres complètes (1913); Enfantines (1918); Amants, heureux amants (1923); Ce vice impuni, la lecture, domaine anglais (1925); Ce vice impuni, la lecture, domaine français (1941); Le vaisseau de Thésée (1946); Lettres à André Gide (1948); Correspondance avec L. P. Fargue (1971).—Œuvres complètes (10 vols, 1950–55).

G. Jean Aubry, V. L. Sa vie, son œuvre, I: La jeunesse (1949); B. Delville, V. L. (1963); F. Weissman, L'exotisme de V. L. (1971).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Lardner, RING [properly RINGGOLD WILMER] (*Niles, Mich. 6 III 1885; ∞1911 Elliss Abbott; †East Hampton, N.Y. 25 IX 1933), American short-story writer and journalist. Through his sports fiction he became one of the most lauded literary folk heroes since Mark* Twain. His style in his early stories is direct, racy, vernacular and his dialogue constantly uses images of sport, but beneath the order and grace of sporting myths, Lardner diagnosed a sickness and corruption which could only be faced by manic laughter. Later he moved on to satirize a higher level of society revealing a desperation beneath its affectation and gaiety. His high comedy and underlying sense of nothingness can be seen in his absurd plays, I. Gaspiri (1924) and Dinner Bridge (1927).

You Know Me Al (1916); Gullible's Travels (1917); Treat 'Em Rough (1918); The Young Immigrants (1920); The Big Town (1921); How to Write Short Stories (1924); The Love Nest and Other Stories (1926); The Story of a Wonder Man (1927); Lose With a Smile (1933).—The R. L. Reader (ed. M. Geismar, 1963).

F. Scott Fitzgerald, The Crack-Up (1945); D. Elder, R. L. (1956); N. Yates, The American Humorist: Conscience of the Twentieth Century (1964); O. Friedrich, R. L. (1965). G.A.K.

Larivey, PIERRE (*in Champagne c. 1540; †Troyes 12 II 1619), French playwright of Italian origin. His distinction is to have introduced the Italian Renaissance comedy into French by his nine adaptations (which are little more than lively translations) of various Italian dramatists who were themselves adapting Plautus* and Terence*. His plays may have been performed by travelling companies. Molière* borrowed from Larivey's Les Esprits for the scenes of the stolen cash-box in L'Avare.

Le Laquais, La Veuve, Les Esprits, Le Morfondu, Les Jaloux, Les Écoliers (1579); Constance, Le Fidèle, Les Trompeurs (1611); repr. in Ancien Théâtre Français, V–VII (1855).

M. Amato, La comédie italienne dans le théâtre de L. (1909); L. Morin, Les trois P. de L. (1937); B. Jeffery, French Renaissance Comedy (1969).

G.B.

Larkin, PHILIP (*Coventry 9 VIII 1922), English poet and novelist, librarian of the University of Hull since 1955, and jazz correspondent of the Daily Telegraph. He was awarded the Queen's Gold Medal for Poetry in 1965.

POETRY: The North Ship (1945); The Less Deceived (1955); The Whitsun Weddings (1964).—NOVELS: Jill (1946); A Girl in Winter (1957).—All What Jazz: A Record Diary 1961–68 (1970).

W.R.A.

Larminie, WILLIAM (*Castlebar, Co. Mayo 1849; †Bray, Co. Wicklow 1900), Irish poet. His narrative poetry was influenced by Celtic legends. A careful student of Irish metrics, he used an assonantal verse-system. Among those he has influenced are W. B. Yeats* and Austin Clarke*.

VERSE: Glanlua (1889); Fand and Moytura (1892).—West Irish Folk Tales and Romances (1893). E.T.W.

La Roche, SOPHIE VON, née GUTERMANN (*Kaufbeuren 6 XII 1730; †Offenbach 18 II 1807),

German novelist. Loved in her youth by C. M. Wieland*, she married Georg von La Roche, an official of the Elector of Trier, in 1754 and lived at Ehrenbreitstein. Her sentimental novel in letters, Fräulein von Sternheim, enjoyed great success. She was grandmother of Clemens and Bettina Brentano*.

Geschichte des Fräuleins von Sternheim (1771); Rosaliens Briefe (1780–81); Briefe an Lina (1785–97); Geschichte von Miss Lony (1789); Fanny und Julia (1802).

L. Assing, S. von La R. (1859); C. Touaillon, Der deutsche Frauenroman des 18. Jh. (1919); W. Milch, S. La R. (1935). H.B.G.

La Rochefoucauld, FRANÇOIS VI, DUC DE (*Paris 15 IX 1613; ∞1628 Andrée de Vivonne; †ibid. 17 III 1680), French moralist. The heir of one of the greatest families in France and one of the boldest and most adventurous spirits of his time, La Rochefoucauld's early years were divided between the army and the court. In 1648 he became deeply involved in the Fronde and though he benefited from the general amnesty of 1652, he was in partial disgrace for another seven years. He had been wounded in the fighting and his health was shattered. The year following the publication of the Maximes he went to live at the house of Mme de Lafayette* where he spent the remaining 15 years of his life, polishing and revising his work and preparing fresh editions of it.

La Rochefoucauld was not a systematic thinker. The Maximes reflect the disillusionment which followed the end of the heroic age. The best of them possess the insight, wit and elegance which belong to a great tradition, but the view of human nature which emerges is necessarily partial and incomplete.

Mémoires (1662); Sentences et maximes de morale (The Hague, 1664); Réflexions ou Sentences et maximes morales (1665, 1666, 1671, 1672, 1678); Nouvelles réflexions... (1678; The Maxims of... La Rochefoucauld, tr. F. G. Stevens, 1939).—Œuvres complètes (ed. L. Martin-Chauffier, 1935).

C. A. Sainte-Beuve, Nouveaux lundis (1863); J. Bourdeau, La R. (1895); G. Lanson, L'art de la prose (1908); E. Magne, Le vrai visage de La R. (1924); P. Bénichou, Morales du grand siècle (1948); M. Bishop, Life and Adventures of La R. (1951); A. Fabre-Luce and C. Dulong, Un amour déchiffré: La R. et Mme de Lafayette (1951); E. Mora, La R. (1965); W. G. Moore, La R. (1969). M.T.

Larra, LUIS MARIANO DE (*Madrid 1830; †ibid. 1901), Spanish playwright, son of the famous Larra*. Though he wrote some good comedies of manners (Los lazos de la familia, Flor del valle etc.), he is mainly remembered for his contribution to the ZARZUELA for which he wrote such excellent libretti as El barberillo de Lavapiés (with music by Barbieri*; 1874). R.M.N.

Larra y Sánchez de Castro, MARIANO JOSÉ DE (*Madrid 24 III 1809; ∞Josefa Anacleto Wetoret; †ibid. 13 II 1837), Spanish writer. He was educated in France where his family lived in exile following the Napoleonic war, and later in Spain. He studied law and finally took up journalism so successfully that he became one of the best-paid journalists of his time. His early marriage was a failure. His pessimism, aggravated by the abrupt end of a love affair with a married woman, led to suicide. He left a good drama in verse, Macías (1834), based on a famous medieval love story, and a novel on the same theme. Interesting as the former is, especially as an example of early Spanish Romantic drama, it met with little success. However, Larra's Romanticism is at its best in his superb newspaper articles, written on the spur of the moment. They deal with literary and dramatic subjects, with politics and above all with contemporary manners. The clash between his ideals and reality does not produce lachrymosity or sentimentality. Witty, ironic, sarcastic at times, in a forceful, graphic style, Larra puts Spanish society and manners to ridicule. He is not only the best Spanish journalist of the 19th century but one of the best prose writers of the period. His outlook is nearer to ours than that of any other Spanish Romantic. He popularized the pseudonym of FIGARO.

Obras completas (1886); in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp. (ed. C. Seco Serrano, 4 vols, 1960); Artículos completos (ed. Almagro San Martín, 1944).

Azorín, Rivas y L., razón social del romanticismo (1916); M. Chaves, Don M. J. de L., su tiempo, su vida, sus obras (1898); Carmen de Burgos, Figaro (1919); E. MacGuire, A Study of the Writings of Don M. J. de L. (Berkeley, 1919); I. Sánchez Estevan, M. J. de L. (1935); J. R. Lomba y Pedraja, M. J. de L. Cuatro estudios (1936); R. B. Moreno, L. (1951); G. Bellini, La critica del costume negli articoli di L. (Milan, 1957).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Larrea, JUAN (*Bilbao 1895), Spanish poet and writer. As co-founder and propagator of creacionismo, and as an early Surrealist, he exercised considerable influence on the poetry of the 1920s. In Mexico, where he went after the fall of the Spanish Republic, he founded the important review Cuadernos Americanos. His interesting interpretation of Picasso's 'Guernica' was published in English as The Vision of Guernica (1947).

P. Ilie, The Surrealist Mode in Spanish Literature (1968). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Larreta, ENRIQUE RODRÍGUEZ (*4 III 1875; †1961), Argentinian novelist who united great imaginative power with a remarkable command of language. La gloria de don Ramiro (Madrid, 1908; The Glory of Don Ramiro, tr. L. B. Walton, 1924) is considered by some to be the greatest novel of its period in Spanish; it abounds in vivid descriptive passages, a variety of stylistic resources and great historical learning. Larreta also dealt with the modern gaucho and other aspects of Argentinian life.

'Zogoibi' (1926).—PLAYS: La luciérnaga; Santa María del Buen Aire (1935); El linyera and Pasión de Roma (1944).—Tiempos iluminados (autobiog.; 1939).

Amado Alonso, El modernismo en La gloria de Don Ramiro (Buenos Aires, 1942). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Larsen, THØGER (*Tørring, nr Lemvig 5 IV 1875; ∞1904 Thyra Bolette Emilie Christine Kipnassee Paludan; †Lemvig 29 V 1928), Danish poet. He spent most of his life in his native north-western Jutland, becoming the editor of a provincial paper. All his poetry is based on personal experience, and in his best poetry, e.g. the long poem 'Jens Højby', the lyric and the epic elements have been fused with great artistic skill. He is also remembered for his excellent translations of Omar* Khayyam and of Eddic poetry.

VERSE: Jord (1904); Dagene (1905); Det Fjerne (1906); Bakker og Bølger (1912); Slægternes Træ (1914); I Danmarks Navn (1920); Blishønsene (1921); Vejr og Vinger (1923); Limfjords-Sange (1923); Søndengalm (1926); Trækfuglevej (1927); Udvalgte Digte (1938).—NOVEL: Frejas Rok (1928).—SHORT STORIES: Fjordbredden (1913); Kværnen (1915).—ESSAYS: Stjerner og Tid (1916); Virkeligheden. Artikler og Foredrag (1966).—Udvalgte Værker (5 vols, 1946–53).

E. Kornerup, Th. L. og Breve fra ham (1928); A. F. Schmidt, Th. L. (1939); C. F. Brodersen, Th. L. (2 vols, 1942); J. Doctor, Th. L.'s Lyrik (1956). E.B.

Larsson, HANS (*Ö. Klagstorp 16 II 1862; †Lund 16 II 1944), Swedish philosopher and author. Many of Larsson's essays expound his thesis that art and science can be linked by the interplay of logic and intuition. His poems, På vandring (1909), and his subsequent three novels show his great affinity with his native province of Scania and its inhabitants.

Intuition. Några ord om diktning och vetenskap (1892); Studier och meditationer (1899); Litteraturintryck (1926); Hemmabyarna (1916); Idéerna i Stabberup (1918); Per Ståldrång och de andra (1924).

O. Rabenius, H. L. (1944); A. Nyman, H. L., en svensk tänkareprofil (1945); O. Olsson, H. L., den politiske tänkaren (1951). C.H.K.

La Sale, ANTOINE DE (*1385/86; †?1460), French

writer. The illegitimate son of a famous condottiere, he served the house of Anjou as a page from the age of 14 and then as soldier, diplomat, heraldic expert, governor of Arles (1429) and finally (1435) as tutor to the Duke of Calabria, son of René of Anjou. He travelled extensively in Italy, Burgundy and France. In 1448 he reluctantly left René's household and served as tutor to the Count of Luxemburg's sons; in this uncongenial northern retirement most of his writing was done. A noted organizer of tournaments and an unrepentant reactionary, he clung in a changing society to the dying traditions of chivalry.

La Sale's earlier works, La Salade (which includes Le Paradis de la Reine Sibylle) and La Sale, are educational treatises for his pupils, dealing with history, geography, genealogy, heraldry and good manners. His masterpiece is Le Petit Jehan de Saintré, a full-length work of fiction, the first of its kind, telling of a young man's relations with the experienced woman who was his patron. His narrative powers are again displayed in Du Réconfort de Madame du Fresne, written to console a lady on the death of her son.

La Salade (1442; ed. F. Desonay, 1935); La Sale (1451; ed. idem, 1941); Jehan de Saintré (1456; ed. J. Misrahi and C. A. Knudson, 1967); Du Réconfort de Madame du Fresne (1458; ed. J. Nève, A. de la S., sa vie et ses ouvrages, 1903); Traicté des anciens tournois et faictz d'armes (1459; ed. B. Prost in Traictés du duel judiciaire, 1872).—Jehan de Saintré, suivi de l'Adicion extraicte des Croniques de Flandres (ed. Y. Otaka, 1967).

W. Söderhjelm, 'Notes sur A. de la S. et ses œuvres' in Acta Soc. Scient. Fennicae, XXXIII (1904) and La nouvelle française au XVe siècle (1910); G. Doutrepoint, La littérature française à la cour des ducs de Bourgogne (1909); A. Bronarski, Le Petit Jehan de Saintré, une énigme littéraire (1922); F. Desonay, 'Le Petit Jehan de Saintré, étude littéraire' in Rev. du XVIe siècle, XIV (1927) and A. de la S., aventureux et pédagogue (1940); A. Coville, Le Petit Jehan de Saintré: recherches complémentaires (1937); Jens Rasmussen, La prose narrative française du XVe siècle (1958). J.M.L.

Lasca, IL: see Grazzini, ANTON FRANCESCO.

Las Casas, FRAY BARTOLOMÉ DE, Bishop of Chiapa (*Seville †1474; †Madrid 1566), Spanish missionary who in 1502 went to Hispaniola and became a priest. In 1515 he returned to Spain to lay before the King the most famous protest ever made against the cruelty of his own countrymen to the American Indians. His works were widely read abroad and used as anti-Spanish propaganda by the enemies of Spain. The details were sometimes inaccurate or exaggerated, but his humanitarian attitude remains singularly impressive. In 1520 he founded a colony in Venezuela but this was destroyed by Indians and he entered the Dominican Order in Hispaniola. From 1539 to 1544 he was adviser to the Council of the Indies (in Spain) and he obtained from Charles V decrees forbidding Indian slavery. Bishop of Chiapa (Mexico) in 1544, in 1547 he returned to Spain. His most famous works are his controversy with Sepúlveda*, the general history of the Indies and the short relation of the destruction of the Indies.

E.M.W.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XIII, LXV; Obras escogidas (ed. J. Pérez Tuleda and E. López Oto, ibid., XCV, XCVI, CV, CVI, CX, 1957-58).—Brevísima relación de la destrucción de las Indias (1552; Paris, n.d.); Collección de las obras (ibid., 1822); Colección de tratados, 1552-53 (Buenos Aires, 1924).—Colección de documentos inéditos para la historia de España, LXII-LXVI (1875-76).—Historia de las Indias (ed. G. de Reparaz, 3 vols, 1927).—Trs: The Spanish Colonie or briefe chronicle of the act and gestes of the Spaniards (1583); A briefe narration of the Destruction of the Indies by the Spaniards in Purchas His Pilgrims, pt 4 (1625).

A. Helps, The Life of Las C. (1868); F. A. Macnutt, Bartholomew de las C. (1909); L. Hanke, B. de Las C., Historian. An Essay in Spanish Historiography (1952); R. Menéndez Pidal, El padre Las C. Su doble personalidad (1963).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Lasker-Schüler, ELSE (*Wuppertal-Elberfeld 11 II 1869; ∞Dr. med. Lasker, ∞Herwarth Walden, editor of Sturm; †Jerusalem 22 I 1945), German poet and dramatist. In her early ecstatic verse and the 'urban ballad' drama Der Wupper (1908) a forerunner of EXPRESSIONISM; close friend of its leading writers and painters and the sole woman of note among its ranks. Her works from Hebräische Balladen (1913), which she considered her most important work, are a strange blend of deep Jewish religiosity and Oriental fantasy.

VERSE: Gesammelte Gedichte (1917); Konzert (1932); Mein blaues Klavier (1943).—Gesammelte Werke (3 vols, 1959-61); Verse und Prosa aus dem Nachlass (1961).—Briefe an Karl Kraus (1959); Briefe (1969- ).

G. Guder, E. L.-S.: Deutung ihrer Lyrik (1966); W. Hegglin, E. L.-S. und ihr Judentum (1966).

K.P.

Lasnier, RINA (*Saint-Grégoire, Quebec 16 VIII 1915), Canadian poet and dramatist. Her work is mainly inspired by religious history and feeling.

Images et proses (1941); Escales (1950); Mémoire sans jours (1960); Miroirs: proses (1960); Les gisants (1963); L'arbre blanc (1966).—DRAMA: Les fiançailles d'Anne de Nouë (1943); Notre-Dame du pain (1947).

E. Kushner, R. L. (1964).

R.Su.

Last, JEF [JOSEPHUS CAREL FRANCISCUS] (*The Hague 2 V 1898), Dutch novelist and poet. As a socialist, he has worked in all kinds of trades and professions, which provided material for his many novels, as did his experiences as an officer in the Spanish Civil War. In later years his socialism became more religiously based, partly influenced by Chinese philosophy.

VERSE: Bakboordlichten (1927); Bevrijde Eros (1936).—PROSE: Marianne (1930); Liefde in de portieken (1932); Partij remise (1933); Zuiderzee (1934; Fr. tr. Eckmann, 1938); Een huis zonder vensters (1936); Spaanse tragedie (1937; Eng. tr. David Hallett, 1939); Het eerste schip op de Newa (1946; Eng. tr. F. G. Renier and Anne Cliff, 1949).

J.J.O.

Lasus OF HERMIONE, Greek lyric poet (6th century B.C.); said to have written hymns, dithyrambs, riddles, and a treatise on music. Only three lines of a hymn to Demeter survive.

J. M. Edmonds, Lyra Graeca, II (1924; with tr. and testimonia).

J.T.H.

La Taille, JACQUES DE (*Bondaroy 1542; †Paris 1562), French dramatist and poet, younger brother of Jean, who published (1572-73) his tragedies Daire (1560) and Alexandre (1561) and some of his miscellaneous verse. These tragedies, survivors of six which he wrote for college performance, were essentially student productions, though notable considering their early date. He died of the plague.

G.B.

La Taille, JEAN DE (*Bondaroy c. 1535; †after 1607), French dramatist and poet, elder brother of Jacques. His Saül and La Famine, two of the best early religious tragedies in French, are both drawn from the Bible, but Senecan in style. Of his two comedies, Les Corrivaux and Le Négromant, the second is translated from Ariosto*. His treatise, De l'art de la tragédie, a landmark in the evolution of French dramatic theory, puts forward the Aristotelian conception of tragedy and prescribes the unities of time and place (J. C. Scaliger*). He fought and was wounded (1570) in the wars of religion, but little is known of his later life.

Saül le furieux (wr. 1562; pub. 1572; ed. A. Werner, Leipzig, 1908; crit. ed. E. Forsyth, 1968); La Famine, ou les Gabéonites (1573; crit. ed. idem, 1968); De l'art de la tragédie (1572; ed. F. West, 1939).—Œuvres (ed. R. de Maulde, 4 vols, 1878-82; incomplete, but incl. the comedies).

R. Lebègue, La tragédie religieuse en France (1929); T. A. Daley, J. de la T. (1934).

G.B.

Latini, BRUNETTO (*Florence 1220/30; †ibid. 1294), Italian encyclopaedist and didactic writer, immortalized by Dante* in Inf., 15. A notary by profession and a Gueff, Latini took an active part in the public life of Florence, representing it in 1260 at the court of Alfonso* X of Castile. The Guelf defeat at Montaperti kept him abroad in France until the downfall of the Ghibellines at Benevento (1266), when he returned to Florence and held various important posts. Besides translating Cicero's* De Inventione and perhaps three orations, he wrote an encyclopaedia in French, the Tresor, and two didactic poems in Italian: the Tesoretto (allegorical, unfinished) and the Favolello, both in couplets of seven-syllable lines. Dante's poor opinion of these poems is implicit in De vulg. eloq., I, xiii, 1.

Latini is historically important as a notable representative of the new lay and bourgeois culture of the Italian communes of the later 13th century. His wide and stimulating influence on the young Florentines of Dante's generation is attested implicitly by Dante and very explicitly by the chronicler G. Villani* (Cronica, VIII, 10).

Li Livres dou Tresor (crit. ed. F. J. Carmody, 1948).—La rettorica italiana di B. L. (L.'s tr. and comm. on De Inventione, crit. ed. F. Maggini, 1912); Volgarizzamenti del Due e Trecento (ed. C. Segre, 1953); La prosa del Duecento (ed. C. Segre and M. Marti, 1960).—Tesoretto and Favolello: Poemeti allegorico-didattici del secolo XIII (ed. L. Di Benedetto, 1941); Poeti del Duecento, II (ed. G. Contini, 1961).

T. Sundby, Della vita e delle opere di B. L. (1884); A. Pèzard, Dante sous la pluie de feu (1950); H. Wieruszowski, B. L. als Lehrer Dantes und der Florentiner (repr. from Archivio ital. per la storia della pietà, II, 1957). K.F.

Latomus, BARTHOLOMEUS (*Arlon c. 1485; †Coblenz 3 I 1570), son of a stonemason, a Roman Catholic humanist, a good Latinist and student of Cicero*. In 1534 he held the Latin Chair at Francis I's new Collège Royal. 'Latomus: Revue d'études latines' (Brussels, 1937 ff.) and 'Collection Latomus' (ibid., 1939 ff.) are named after him.

F.J.E.R.

L.: deux discours inauguraux (ed. and tr. L. Bakelants, 1951).—Biblio. in L. Roersch, 'Barthélemy L.' in Bull. de l'Acad. Roy. de Belgique, 3rd ser., XIV (1887) and G. Kawerau, 'L., Bartholomäus' in Realencyclopädie für protestantische Theologie und Kirche, XI (ed. A. Hauck, 1902). F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Latorre, MARIANO (*1886; †1955), Chilean novelist who specialized in the rural life of his country and was a 'regionalist'. Many of his stories concern fishermen and mountain-dwellers.

Cuentos del Maule (1912); Cuna de cóndores (1918); Zurzulita (1920); Ulli (1923); Sus mejores cuentos (anthol., 1925); Chilenos del mar (1929); Hombres y zorros (1937); Mapu (1942); Autobiografía de una vocación (1956). E.Sa. (J.F.)

La Tour Du Pin, PATRICE DE (*Paris 16 III 1911), French poet. La Tour du Pin, after an aristocratic and Christian upbringing, achieved fame early with his Quête de joie (1933), which was sponsored by Supervielle*. Though he has had his full share of the cruel experiences of his generation (he was wounded and taken prisoner in 1940), he has lived what he himself calls 'the dedicated life in poetry'. His art is classic in form, though free of all stiffness. His Une somme de poésie (1946– ), an immensely long poem, filled with myths, many of them obscure, contains the whole sum of his emotional and spiritual experience.

Le Lucernaire (1936); Le don de la passion (1937); Psaumes (1938); La vie recluse en poésie (1938); The Dedicated Life in Poetry, tr. G. S. Fraser, with intro. S. Spender, (1948); Les anges (1939); Les contes de soi (1946); La contemplation errante (1948); Le second jeu (1959); Petit théâtre crépusculaire (1963).

Biéville-Noyant, P. de La T. du P. (1948); E. Kushner, P. de la T. du P. (1961).

M.G.; J.P.R.

La Tour Landry, GEOFFROY DE, 14th-century French knight who wrote courtly lyrics which have not survived and a treatise for the education of his daughters (?1371). It is full of the author's personal reminiscences, expresses the ideas of the provincial nobility and gives an excellent picture of the social conditions of women in the 14th century.

Le Livre du chevalier de la Tour Landry pour l'enseignement de ses filles (ed. A. de Montaiglon, 1854; Eng. tr. F. J. Furnivall, 1906).

P. Stolingwa, Zum Livre... Die Kulturhistorische Bedeutung des Werkes und seine Quellen (1911). A.H.D.

Lau, FRITZ (*Möltenort nr Kiel 10 VIII 1872; †Glückstadt 7 VII 1966), Low German short-story writer. In a simple and direct style, and with a delicate sense of humour, he describes the homely and peaceful world of the labourers, fishermen and poor-house inmates of the lower Elbe region.

Katenlud (1909); Ebb un Flot, Glück un Not (1911); Brandung (1914); Elsbe (1918); Drees Dreesen (1923); Kinnerland (1927); Lach mit (1927); Von em un ehr (1932); Wi möt dar henlank (1934).

H. Böttcher, 'F. L.' in Mitteilungen Quickborn, XVI (1922). G.C.

Laube, HEINRICH (*Sprottau, Silesia 8 IX 1806; †Vienna 1 VIII 1884), German writer and theatrical producer, who edited the Zeitung für die elegante Welt in Leipzig 1833–34 and 1843–44, making it for a time a mouthpiece for Young Germany. After arrest in 1833 his writing became less political. His novels, Novellen and plays were all alike manifestations of coarse but vigorous creative power; of his plays Die Karlsschüler (1848), on Schiller's* boyhood, and Graf Essex (1856) are the best. As director of the Vienna Burgtheater (1849-67) he made theatrical history.

Gesammelte Werke (ed. H. H. Houben, 50 vols, 1908-09); Kritiken 1829-35 (ed. S. D. Stirk, 1934).—Theaterkritiken und dramaturgische Aufsätze (ed. A. von Weilen, 2 vols, 1906-07); Briefwechsel mit Charlotte Birch-Pfeiffer (ed. idem, 1917).

W. Lange, H. L.'s Aufstieg (1923); E. Ziemann, H. L. als Theaterkritiker (1934); M. Dürst, H. L. (1951).
H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Lauder, WILLIAM: see FORGERIES, LITERARY.

Lauremberg, JOHANN (*Rostock 26 II 1590; †Sorø, Sjælland 28 II 1658), German poet and playwright, Professor of mathematics in Rostock. Whereas his Latin poems and Latin and High German pageants are forgotten, his Low German poetry, above all Veer Schertz-Gedichte (1652), have deservedly survived. Originally using free verse, later alexandrines, Lauremberg attacked, with sovereign irony, the foibles of fashion and the affectation of foreign, especially (following Moscherosch*) French, ways of life, which he contrasts with the good old customs including the Low German language.

Pompejus Magnus (1610); Satyra (1630); Triumphus Nuptialis Danicus (1635); Die Geschichte Arions (1655).—Scherzgedichte von J. L. (ed. J. M. Lappenberg, 1861); Niederdeutsche Scherzgedichte von J. L. (ed. W. Braune, 1879); Zwei plattdeutsche Possen von J. L. (ed. H. Jellinghaus in Niederdt. Jahrb., III, 1877); Eine dritte plattdeutsche Posse von J. L. (ed. C. A. Nissen, ibid., XI, 1886); L.s handschriftlicher Nachlass (ed. J. Bolte, ibid., XIII, 1888); L.s Scherzgedichte in handschriftlicher Fassung (ed. E. Schröder, 1909).

H. Weimer, 'L.s Scherzgedichte, die Art und Zeit ihrer Entstehung' in Niederdt. Jahrb., XXV (1899); C. F. Bayerschmidt, 'The Low German of L.s Scherzgedichte' in Germanic Rev., XXI (1946); H. Wichert-Fife, 'J. L., son of the folk', ibid., XXX (1955); K. Peter, Der Humor in den niederdeutschen Dichtungen J. L.s (1967).
G.C.

Laurence, JEAN MARGARET, née WEMYS (*Neepawa, Manitoba 18 VIII 1926; ∞1947 John F. Laurence), Canadian novelist and story writer who spent several years in Africa, where her first three books are set; subsequently she has explored psychological and social problems of characters in Canadian prairie settings.

This Side Jordan (1960); Stone Angel (1964); A Jest of God (1966); Fire-Dwellers (1969).
C. Thomas, M. L. (1969).
R.Su.

Laurence of Durham (*Waltham after 1100; †1154), became Prior of Durham in 1149 and died while accompanying Bishop Hugh de Puiset to Rome. He wrote much Latin verse, notably a long poem, Hypnognosticon, some poetical dialogues, and a Consolatio de morte amici in prose and verse.

Dialogi (ed. J. Raine, 1880); Hypnognosticon (extracts ed. idem, ibid., and T. Wright in Biographia Britannica Literaria, II, 1846); Vita sanctae Brigidae in Acta Sanctorum, 1 Feb. F.J.E.R.

Laurent d'Orléans (†?1300), French writer. Dominican confessor to Philip III, he wrote the Somme le Roi, or Livre des Vices et Vertus (1279), a moral treatise for laymen, compiled from the well-known Miroir du Monde and other sources. After becoming Inquisitor at Tours, he died in Paris at the convent of St Jacques, where he had been Prior.

E. Brayer in Romania, LXXIX (1958).

M.F.L.

Laurentius Andreae (*?Västmanland c. 1470; †Strängnäs 14 IV 1552), Swedish Reformer. Besides his pioneer work in Church and State he did much to purify the Swedish language. His most important contribution was the supervision of the translation of the New Testament in 1526.

N. Lindqvist, Studier över reformationstidens bibelsvenska (1918) and 'Översättaren av Nya Testamentet 1526' in Arkiv för nordisk filologi (1929-30).
C.H.K.

Laurentius Petri (*Örebro 1499; †Uppsala 27 X 1573), first Lutheran Archbishop of Sweden; younger brother of Olaus Petri*. He had a large part in the translation of the Bible appearing in 1541, which had a tremendous influence not only on religious life but on the Swedish language as a whole.
C.H.K.

Laurillard, ELIZA (*Rotterdam 26 III 1830; ∞1863 Anna Roos; †Santpoort 10 VII 1908), Dutch parson-poet and writer of essays, rhymers of half-witty, half-serious wisdom.

VERSE: Primulae veris (1853); Ernstig en los (1874); Koren en klaproozen (1900).

P. H. Ritter in Levensber. Maatschappij Nederl. Letterk. (1909).
J.W.W.

Lautréamont, LE COMTE DE, pseud. of ISIDORE-LUCIEN DUCASSE (*Montevideo IV 1847; †Paris 23 XI 1870), French writer. Little is known of his life. His parents were French and he came with them to France in 1860. His pseudonym was suggested by Eugène Sue's* novel Latréaumont (1828). The first canto of his prose epic, Les Chants de Maldoror, was published in 1868. The publisher then, fearing prosecution, did not release the remaining printed cantos until 1874, four years after Lautréamont's death. A definitive edition of the whole work appeared in 1890. Les Chants de Maldoror, which the author described as 'a work after the manner of but more terrible than Byron's Manfred and Mickiewicz's Conrad' is a precursor of Surrealism, which explains why its full impact on French literature was delayed until 1920. Lautréamont's influence has even extended to the Spanish poet Vicente Aleixandre*.

Œuvres complètes (ed. E. Jaloux, 1938; ed. R. Caillois, 1946; intro. various writers, 1953).

L.-P. Quint, L. et Dieu (1930, 1967); P. Soupault, L. (1946); M. Blanchot, L. et Sade (1949, 1963); M. Pleyne, L. par lui-même (1967).

T.W. (M.T.)

Lavater, JOHANN KASPAR (*Zürich 15 XI 1741; †ibid. 2 I 1801), Swiss physiognomist and poet. A Protestant pastor, Lavater became famous for his political independence and physiognomical writings. Long friendly with Goethe*, he died of wounds received as a stretcher-bearer in the Battle of Zürich (26 XI 1800). Lavater's intellectual powers lagged behind his well-meaning, uncritical enthusiasm, and his voluminous writings are now only of historical value.

VERSE: Schweizerlieder (1767); Christliche Lieder (1771); Poesien (1781); Jesus Messias (1783–86); Das menschliche Herz (1780).—Abraham und Isaak (drama; 1776).—VARIOUS: Lavater von der Physiognomik (1772); Physiognomische Fragmente (1775–78).—Ausgewählte Schriften (8 vols, 1841–44).

F. W. Bodemann, L. nach seinem Leben, Lehren und Wirken (1856); F. Muncker, J. K. L. (1883); O. Guinand, Études sur J. K. L. et sa pensée jusqu'en 1786 (1924); A. Vömel, L.s Leben (1927); O. Farner, L. (1938); T. Hasler, L. (1942).

H.B.G.

La Vigne, ANDRÉ DE (*La Rochelle ?1457; †?1515), French dramatist and poet; secretary to Queen Anne, wife of Charles VIII of France. Author of a Mystère du glorieux saint Martin (1496), a Moralité de l'Aveugle et du Boiteux and a Farce du Meunier. His lyric poetry is in the rhetorical style of the end of the 15th century.

E. L. de Kerdaniel, Un rhétoriqueur, A. de la V. (1919) and Un auteur dramatique du XVe siècle, A. de la V. (1923).

A.H.D.

Lavin, MARY (*Massachusetts 1912), Irish novelist and short-story writer. Her work concentrates on the importance of ordinary events in the lives of ordinary people. Its strength derives not from narrative power but from her delicate restraint and her clear-sighted understanding of character.

NOVELS: The House in Clewe Street (1945); The Becker Wives (1946).—STORIES: Tales From Bective Bridge (1943); The Long Ago (1944); A Single Lady (1951); The Patriot Son (1956); A Likely Story (1957); The Great Wave (1961); Stories (1964); In the Middle of the Fields (1967); Happiness (1969).

E.T.W.

Lavrenëv, BORIS ANDREYEVICH (*Kherson 14 VII 1894; †I 1959), Soviet author. His best early stories appeared in his humorous collection, Shalye povesti (1926). Lavrenëv is basically a Romantic with a preference for unusual plots told with a somewhat jerky verve and vitality. His narratives are well constructed. His best-known plays, Dym ('Smoke') and Razlom ('The Débâcle'), dealing with the Civil War, show his skill in tackling dramatic themes.

Krushenie respubliky (1926); Sobranie sochineniy (6 vols, 1963–65); Pyesy (1950).—Stout Heart and Other Stories (tr. D. L. Fromberg, 1943); The Forty First (tr. M. Wettlin and N. Jochel, 1961).

O. Poimanova, 'O Borise Lavreneve' in Pechat' i revolyutsiya, VIII (1927); G. Gorbachëv, Sovremennaya russkaya literatura (3rd ed. 1931); I. L. Vishnevskaya, B. L. (1962).

J.L.

Lavrin, JANKO (*Krupa, Slovenia 10 II 1887; ∞1928 Nora Fry), literary historian and essayist. After matriculation at Sušak near Rijeka (1907) he studied literature in Moscow, Oslo and Paris. During the First World War he was a Russian correspondent on the Balkan front, and from 1917 wrote also for the English press. From 1918 Reader, from 1921 to 1953 Professor of modern Russian literature at the University of Nottingham, and since 1957 a corresponding member of the Slovene Academy of Science and Art, he spends autumn and winter in England, spring and summer in Yugoslavia. Using a 'psycho-critical' method which takes into account the artist's personality, the period of origin and the aesthetic value of a work of art, he has portrayed in English the leading Russian novelists and poets and the literary movements of the 19th and 20th centuries; he has also published books about Tolstoy* and Dostoyevsky* in German. Many of his works are translated into Slovene and some have appeared even in Japanese. After the war he organized the translation into English of Slovene, Serbian and Croat poetry. Apart from his great literary scholarship he is remarkable for his aesthetic taste, rich experience of life and unflagging dedication.

Ibsen (1921); Nietzsche and Modern Consciousness (1922); Tolstoy (1924); Gogol (1926); Studies in European Literature (1929); Aspects of Modernism (1935); An Introduction to the Russian Novel (1942); Dostoevsky (1943); Pushkin and Russian Literature (1947); From Pushkin to Mayakovsky (1948); Goncharov (1954).

Letopis Slovenske akademije znanosti in umetnosti (1958).

A.S. (tr. H.Le.)

Lavrov, PETER LAVROVICH (*1823; †1900), Russian philosopher and sociologist who from 1868 on, when he escaped to Paris, became leader of the Russian revolutionary press abroad. A 'populist' in his sympathies, he evolved—partly under the influence of Comte* and Feuerbach—his own 'anthropological' approach to history and evolution. His numerous writings ranged from the exposition of Hegel's* philosophy and a history of modern thought to his interesting Istoricheskie pis'ma ('Historical Letters'; 1879), in which he stressed the role of the individual in history.

Sobranie sochineniy (7 vols, 1919–20); Izbrannye sochineniya (4 vols, 1934–38).—Lettres historiques (tr. M. Goldsmith, 1903); Historical Letters (tr. J. P. Scanlan, 1967).

T. G. Masaryk, The Spirit of Russia (1919); P. L. L., Statyi, vospominaniya, materialy (various authors; 1922); I. S. Knizhnik-Vetrov, P. L. L. (1930). J.L.

Law, WILLIAM (*Kings Cliffe, nr Stamford 1686; †ibid. 9 IV 1761), English divine and prose-writer. Law's early works, able, lucid and sometimes caustic contributions to the controversies of the age, were followed by two works of practical ethics, the second of which, A Serious Call to Devout and Holy Life (1728), had profound influence on such widely diverse characters as Johnson* and Wesley*, who placed it second only to the Bible in spreading evangelicism, its manifest sincerity, persuasive power and insight setting hearts aflame. His later works show him as a mystic deeply impressed by Böhme*.

Three Letters to Bishop of Bangor (1717–19); Practical Treatise upon Christian Perfection (1726); The Case of Reason (1731); An Appeal to all that Doubt (1740); The Way to Divine Knowledge (1752).

C. Walton, Notes and Materials for an adequate Biography of L. (1854); J. H. Overton, W. L. Nonjuror and Mystic (1881); S. Hobhouse, W. L. and 18th Century Quakerism (1927); G. Talon, W. L.: A Study in Literary Craftsmanship (1949).—See also biblio. to Bernard de Mandeville*.

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Lawet, ROBERT (†Bruges before 1596), Dutch poet in the REDERIJER tradition. For some time he lived at Roeselare, where he was a member of the Chamber of Rhetoric St Barbara; he fled to Bruges (c. 1579). He wrote a number of devotional allegories, those of the Bruges period being openly Calvinistic. J.J.M.

tReyne Maecxsele (ed. L. Scharpé, 1906); Vanden verlooren Zoone (ed. E. G. A. Galama, 1941); Jhesus ten twaelfjaren oudt (ed. idem in Leuvense Bijdr., XL, 1950).

A. van Elslander and L. de Scheerder in Album-Baur, I (1948); J. J. Mak in Uyt Ionsten Versaemt (1957). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Lawler, RAYMOND EVENOR (*Melbourne 1922),

Australian playwright. His principal work, The Summer of the Seventeenth Doll (1957), is one of the few Australian plays to have gained an international reputation.

The Piccadilly Bushman (1961). A.M.G.

Lawless, HON. EMILY (*Co. Kildare 17 VI 1845; †Surrey 19 X 1913), Irish poet and novelist, daughter of 3rd Baron Cloncurry; led a secluded life on her ancestral estate; wrote serious studies of the Irish peasantry and some good lyrics.

R.McH.

VERSE: With the Wild Geese (1902); Poems (ed. P. Fallon, 1965).—NOVELS: Hurriah (1886); Grania (1892). E.T.W.

Lawrence, DAVID HERBERT (*Eastwood, Notts 11 IX 1885; ∞1914 Frieda von Richthofen; †Vence 2 III 1930), English novelist, poet and essayist. The son of a coalminer, too delicate to follow his father's vocation, profoundly influenced by his intelligent mother, he became an elementary school-teacher, had stories published by F. M. Ford* in The English Review, and was stimulated by Edward Garnett* to write about the passionate life that he knew or felt with fearless candour. Impetuous, sensitive, emotional, a rebel against the conditions imposed by industrialism, 'respectability' and cant, he was moved by his sense of a mission to describe eloquently and with passionate vehemence what he saw in modern civilization and especially in the relations between the sexes. Tortured by the sense of conflict between body and spirit, he denounced the starving of healthy bodily instincts. Having been justly acclaimed for his novel Sons and Lovers (1913), he was embittered by his ejection from Cornwall during the war and the banning of two of his books for 'indecent', and spent most of his life after 1919 in Italy or New Mexico. But he never lost confidence in his 'demon' and pursued his creative work with gusto and even enjoyment to the end.

NOVELS: The White Peacock (1911); The Rainbow (1915); Women in Love (1920); Kangaroo (1923); The Plumed Serpent (1926); Lady Chatterley's Lover (1928).—VERSE: Love Poems and Others (1913); Amores (1916); Look, We Have Come Through (1917); Pansies (1929); Last Poems (1932).—Complete Poems (ed. V. de S. Pinto and W. Roberts, 2 vols, 1964).—TRAVEL: Twilight in Italy (1916); Sea and Sardinia (1921).—Letters (ed. A. Huxley, 1932; ed. H. T. Moore, 2 vols, 1962); Phoenix: Posthumous Papers (ed. E. D. McDonald, 1936); Complete Plays (1965).

J. M. Murry, Son of Woman (1931; 1954); C. Carswell, The Savage Pilgrimage (1932); F. Lawrence, 'Not I but the Wind' (1934); H. T. Moore, The Life and Works of D. H. L. (1951) and The Intelligent Heart (1955); F. R. Leavis, D. H. L.: Novelist (1955); G. Hough, The Dark Sun (1956);

E. Nehls, D. H. L.: a Composite Biography (3 vols, 1957–59); J. Moynahan, The Deed of Life (1963); C. C. Clarke, River of Dissolution (1969).—Biblio. by F. W. Roberts (1963). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Lawrence, GEORGE ALFRED (*Braxted 25 III 1827; †Edinburgh 23 IX 1876), English novelist who in Guy Livingstone (1857) and numerous other novels contributed to Victorian fiction the blackguard-hero.

Sword and Gown (1859); Border and Bastile (1863); Breaking a Butterfly: Blanche Ellerslie's Ending (1869). R.M.H.

Lawrence, THOMAS EDWARD (*Tremadoc, Wales 15 VIII 1888; †Bovington Camp Hospital 19 V 1935), English writer and soldier. He organized the Arab tribesmen and enabled them to play a decisive part in the victory of the First World War. Profoundly influenced by Doughty* in both style and ideals, he wrote a book about the desert revolt, splendid in narrative, description and portraiture, which has grown in estimation as a masterpiece of travel literature.

Seven Pillars of Wisdom (1926; 1935; abr. as Revolt in the Desert, 1927); Crusader Castles (1936); The Mint (1936; 1955).—The Odyssey of Homer (prose tr.; 1932).—The Letters of T. E. L. (ed. D. Garnett, 1938).

T. E. L., By His Friends (ed. A. W. Lawrence, 1937); R. Aldington, L. of Arabia (1955); S. Mousa, T. E. L.: An Arab View (1966). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Lawson, HENRY (*nr Grenfell, New South Wales 17 VI 1867; †Sydney 2 IX 1922), Australian short-story writer and poet. His unhappy boyhood on an impoverished farm and subsequent hardships led him to emphasize the harsher aspects of Australian country life. His verse, noteworthy among the popular balladry of the 1890s, has his special note of proletarian protest. The participating everyday realism, touched with sardonic humour, of his stories is his main achievement, though their spontaneity diminished as he grew older and drank excessively. F.T.M.

The Stories of H. L. (ed. C. Mann, 3 vols, 1964); Poetical Works (ed. C. Roderick, 2 vols, 1967).

C. Mackaness, Annotated Bibliography of H. L. (1951); S. Murray-Smith, H. L. (1962). A.M.G.

Laxness, HALLDÓR (GUÐJÓNSSON) KILJAN (*Reykjavík 23 IV 1902; ∞1930 Ingibjörg Einarsdóttir), Icelandic novelist, poet and playwright. Of prosperous family, Laxness was educated in Reykjavík. Then, having written his first book, Barn náttúrunar ('Child of Nature'), at the age of 17, he sailed for Copenhagen and visited, among other places, Germany, the U.S.A. and England. In Luxembourg he was converted to Roman Catholicism and later, after a meeting with Upton Sinclair*, he turned Communist. The novels Undir Helgahnúk ('At the Holy Mountain'; 1924) and Vefarinn mikli frá Kasmír ('The Great Weaver from Kashmir'; 1927) depict his spiritual growth and the via dolorosa which led him to the Roman Catholic Church, while his book of essays, Alþýðubókin ('The Book of the People'; 1929), gives utterance to his new Communist beliefs. In 1930, having married and settled down in Iceland, Laxness inaugurated a new, mature period in his writing with the novels set in an Icelandic fishing village: Þú vinnður hreini (1931) and Fuglinn í fjörunni (1932)—the two books together are called 'Salka-Valka' after the chief character. They were followed by Sjálfstætt fólk (2 vols, 1934–35), dealing in broad satirical fashion with the small Icelandic farmer, and the four volumes of Ljós heimsins (1937–40), also in part a social satire, with the 'poet of the people', Ólafur Ljósvíkingur, as hero. He has written a historical trilogy set in the period round 1700 (Íslandsklukkan, 1943–46); and another historical novel, Gerpla (1952), with a theme from the Saga Age, largely a parody of the 'heroic' but containing much description of genuine poetic power. Other books since then have included satirical exposures of contemporary themes (e.g. American influence in Iceland in Atómstöðin, 1948, Mormonism in Paradisarheimt, 1960). Laxness is a brilliant essayist and witty controversialist and an effective but not entirely successful dramatist. His novels are his outstanding achievement. They are conceived on a monumental scale and written in varied and fascinating styles; they reveal a powerful and complex mind. Fierce social criticism is usually apparent, but there are also humour, sometimes harsh, sometimes playful, rich fantasy, bewitching lyricism and profound symbolism. Laxness is the most outstanding and most influential Icelandic literary figure of modern times. He was awarded the Nobel prize for literature in 1955.

VERSE: Kvæðakver (1930).—PLAYS: Straumrof (1934); Snæfriður Íslandssól (1950); Silfurtunglið (1954).—NOVELS AND VARIOUS: Nokkrar sögur (1923); Þú vinnður hreini (1931) and Fuglinn í fjörunni (1932); Salka Valka, tr. F. H. Lyon, 1936; Í austurvegi (1933); Fótatak manna (1933); Sjálfstætt fólk (2 vols, 1934–35; Independent People, tr. J. A. Thompson, 1945); Dagleið á fjöllum (1937); Ljós heimsins (1937), Höll sumarlandsins (1938), Hús skáldsins (1939) and Fegurð himinsins (1940); Gerska æfintýrið (1938); Íslandsklukkan (1943), Híð ljósa man (1944) and Eldur í Kaupinhafn (1946); Atómstöðin (1948; The Atom Station, tr. M. Magnusson, 1961); Gerpla (1952); Happy Warriors, tr. K. John, 1958; Brekkukotsannáll (1957); Paradisarheimt (1960; Paradise Reclaimed, tr. M. Magnusson, 1962); Kristnihald undir Jökli (1968).

S. Einarsson, 'A contemporary Icelandic author'

in Life and Letters Today, XIV (1936); S. Nordal, 'Tvær miklar skáldsögur' in Lesbók Morgunblaðsins (1940); P. Hallberg, Den store vävaren (1954) and Skaldens hus (1956). R.G.P. (P.G.F.)

Lazamon or Lawman (fl. 1200), English poet, priest of Arley Regis, Worcs, author of the Brut, a long alliterative poem on the legendary and actual history of England from Brutus to Cadwalader (including Arthur, Lear, Cymbeline etc.); an Anglicized expansion of Wace's Roman de Brut.

L.'s Brut (ed. F. Madden, 3 vols, 1847; ed. G. L. Brook and R. F. Leslie, vol. I, 1961).

J. S. P. Tatlock, The Legendary History of Britain (1950); D. Everett, Essays on Middle English Literature (1955); Arthurian Literature in the Middle Ages (ed. R. S. Loomis, 1959).

R.W.B. (T.F.H.)

Laye: see Camara LAYE.

Layton, IRVING (*Rumania 12 III 1912; ∞1946 Betty Sutherland, ∞1961 Aviva Cantor), Canadian poet and story writer who came to Montreal as an infant and worked as English teacher, lecturer and University poet-in-residence in Montreal and Toronto. His prolific output, ranging widely in form and subject-matter from eroticism to bitter invective, mainly concerns the dichotomy between man as destroyer and man in tune with nature and human nature.

Here and Now (1945); Cold Green Element (1955); Improved Binoculars (1956); Balls for a One-Armed Juggler (1963); Collected Poems (1965); Shattered Plinth (1968).

G. Woodcock, 'A grab at Proteus' in Canad. Lit., XXVIII (1966).

R.Su.

Lazăr, GHEORGHE (*Avrig 1779; †ibid. 1823), Rumanian teacher and, like Asachi*, a founder of education in Rumanian. He studied at Sibiu and Vienna, where he read theology, and returned to Transylvania with the intention of becoming a priest. However, as a champion of the rights of Rumanians in Transylvania he was frowned upon by the authorities and in 1816 left for Wallachia where he propagated the ideas of the Transylvanian school. In 1818 he founded the Saint Sava School in Bucharest and taught in Rumanian. He compiled a number of textbooks, but the school was closed during the rising of 1821, being regarded as a hotbed of nationalism. His attempts to reopen it failed and in 1823 he retired to his birthplace.

G. Bogdan-Duică, G. L. (1924); G. Macovescu, G. L., 1779-1823 (1954).

D.J.D.

Lazarević, LAZA (*Sabac 1 V 1851; †Belgrade 28 XII 1890), Serbian short-story writer, who rendered valuable services to his country in the field of medicine as well as of literature. He wrote little, but his narrative is polished and dramatic, revealing gifts of observation of realistic detail and subtle psychological insight. The background of his stories is predominantly the patriarchal family, in which the mother appears as a symbol of quiet strength.

Šest pripovedaka (1886); Pripovetke (1898 and 1899).—Celokupna dela (complete works; 1912, 1932); Izabrana dela (sel. works; 1962).

E. D. Goy, 'L. K. L. a study in theme and background' in Slavon. and E. Eur. Rev., XXXV (1956).

V.J.

Lazarillo de Tormes (La vida de L. de T. y de sus fortunas y adversidades), Spanish picaresque novel (pub. Burgos, 1554). This famous and amusing book is the first picaresque novel, antedating the others by half a century. A poor boy recounts his adventures with various masters: blind beggar, priest, gentleman, until he becomes town-crier of Toledo. The satire is directed against avarice and hypocrisy; its anti-clericalism seems medieval rather than Erasmian. Several of the incidents are derived from literary sources, others resemble folk-tales, and the hero's name is that of a traditional fool. Its realism is therefore doubtful. The style is vigorous and pungent. It has been attributed to Diego Hurtado* de Mendoza and to several other writers. An uninteresting sequel was published in 1555, a better one in Paris, 1620.

E.M.W.

Eds: R. O. Jones (Manchester, 1963); J. Caso González (1967); F. Rico, La novela picaresca española, I (1967).—The Plesaint historie of Lazarillo de Tormes (tr. D. Rouland, 1586; repub. 1924).

M. Bataillon, El sentido del L. de T. (Paris, 1954) and Novedad y fecundidad del L. de T. (1968); R. Alter, The Rogue's Progress: Studies in the Picaresque Novel (Cambridge, Mass., 1964); J. L. Laurenti, 'Ensayo de una bibliografía...' in Annali dell'Istituto Univ. Orientale di Napoli, VIII (1966); S. Miller, The Picaresque Novel (Cleveland, 1967); C. A. Jones, 'L. de T.: survival or precursor?' in Litterae Hispanae... (ed. H. Flasche, Munich, 1968); F. Lázaro Carreter, 'Construcción y sentido del L. de T.' in Ábaco, I (1969); R. W. Truman, 'L. de T. and the Homo novus tradition' in Mod. Lang. Rev., LXIV (1969); F. Rico, La novela picaresca y el punto de vista (1970).

A.D.D.

Lazarová, KATARÍNA (*Výčapy-Opatovce 13 II 1914), Slovak novelist. Osie hniezdo (1953) is one of the more successful evocations of the impact of Socialism on the Slovak countryside. Her later work has been of a somewhat journalistic character, including successful detective novels (Kňažná z Lemúrle, 1965; Interview s labut'ami, 1966).

R.A.

Lazhechnikov, IVAN IVANOVICH (*Kolomna 14 IX 1792; †Moscow 26 VI 1869), Russian historical novelist. He wrote several plays, short stories and sketches. His knowledge of the past was considerable, and so was his gift of portraiture; but he often indulged in rhetoric and in sentimental patriotism.

Posledniy Novik (1831–33); Ledyanoy dom (1835; 1958; Fr. adapt., A. Dumas père, La Maison de Glace; The Palace of Ice, tr. H. L. Williams, 1860–61); Basurman (1838); The Heretic (tr. T. B. Shaw, 3 vols, 1844); Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (12 vols, 1899–1900); Sochineniya (2 vols, 1963).

A. Skabichevsky, Nash istoricheskiy roman (1903); I. V. Vladislavlev, Russkie pisateli (1924). J.L.

Leacock, STEPHEN BUTLER (*Swanmore, Hants 30 XII 1869; †Toronto 28 III 1944), Canadian writer, who wrote serious works on politics, though he became widely known as a humorist, his Sunshine Sketches of a Little Town (1912) becoming especially popular. It is now regarded as a Canadian classic. There is no propaganda in Leacock's humorous writing, no savagery in his wit. He does not caricature individuals but seizes on the inconsistencies and hypocrisies of ordinary situations and shows up the comic elements in them.

POLITICAL: Elements of Political Science (1906); The Unsolved Riddle of Social Justice (1920); Canada (1941).—HUMOUR: Literary Lapses (1910); Nonsense Novels (1911); Arcadian Adventures (1914); Moonbeams From the Larger Lunacy (1915); Frenzied Fiction (1918); My Discovery of England (1922); Laugh With L. (1930); Humour, Its Theory and Technique (1935); Humour and Humanity (1937); Too Much College (1939).

P. McArthur, S. L. (1923); R. L. Curry, S. L.: Humorist and Humanist (1959).

M.H.M.M. (R.Su.)

Lear, EDWARD (*Holloway, London 12 V 1812; †San Remo, Italy 29 I 1888), English painter and nonsense writer. Lear was of Danish descent and lived mainly abroad. He travelled and painted in Europe, Asia and Africa, producing zoological illustrations, landscapes, water-colours and travel-books. Many of his nonsense poems are emotional fantasies, some with a hardly definable sadness—'The Dong with the Luminous Nose', for instance. The freedom and wildness of his humour may have had some connection with his ill-health and melancholy.

Journal of a Landscape Painter in Southern Calabria (1852); A Book of Nonsense (1846); Nonsense Songs, Stories, Botany and Alphabets (1871); More Nonsense (1872).—The Complete Nonsense of E. L. (ed. Holbrook Jackson, 1947).—Letters (1907) and Later Letters of E. L. (1911; both ed. Lady Strachey).

W. B. O. Field, E. L. on My Shelves (1933); A. Davidson, E. L., Landscape Painter and Nonsense Poet (1938); V. Noakes, E. L. (1968). B.H. (M.A.)

Léautaud, PAUL (*Paris 18 I 1872; †Robinson 22 II 1956), French essayist and novelist. Léautaud's name is generally linked with the Mercur de France, the famous literary review of which he was secretary (1908–41). His dramatic criticisms (Le théâtre de Maurice Boissard, 1926 and 1943) are documents of the highest order, and even more so his Journal littéraire (19 vols, 1954 ff.; abr. Eng. tr. G. Sainsbury, 1960). His was a highly original character, caustic and satirical, whose rabid egocentricity limited the range of his intellectual tastes but gave him a power which impressed all his contemporaries.

Le petit ami (1903; tr. H. Hare with In Memoriam and Amours as The Child of Montmartre, 1959); Madame Cantili (1925); Entretiens avec Robert Mallet (1951).

Special no. of Mercur de France (May 1957); M. Dormoy, L. (1958); Visages de L. (1969); La vie secrète de P. L. (1972). M.G.

Leavis, FRANK RAYMOND (*Cambridge 14 VII 1895; ∞1929 Queenie Dorothy Roth), English critic. As a don (University Lecturer and Reader in English at Cambridge 1936–62), he has had considerable influence among students and others by reason of his unconventional, combative, but rather chilling critical views. He edited the quarterly review Scrutiny from 1932 to 1953, and in 1962 joined issue with C. P. Snow* in the 'Two Cultures' controversy.

Mass Civilisation and Minority Culture (1930); New Bearings in English Poetry (1932); Revaluations: Tradition and Development in English Poetry (1936); The Great Tradition: George Eliot, James and Conrad (1948); The Common Pursuit (1952); D. H. Lawrence: Novelist (1955); Anna Karenina, and Other Essays (1967); Lectures in America (1969); English Literature in Our Time and the University (1969); Dickens the Novelist (with Q. D. L.; 1970).

V. Buckley, Poetry and Morality (1959).—Biblio. by D. F. McKenzie and M. P. Allum (1966). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Le Bel, JEAN (*Liège ?1290; †ibid. 15 II 1370), French chronicler, canon of Liège. Author of an outstanding prose Chronique (1352–61), which Froissart* took as a starting-point for his own work.

Ed. J. Viard and E. Déprez (2 vols, 1904–05).

A. Coville, 'J. le B., chroniqueur' in Histoire littéraire de France, XXXVIII (1941). A.H.D.

Lebenson, ABRAHAM DOV, pseud. ADAM (*Vilna †1789 or 1794; †ibid. 19 XI 1878), Hebrew poet, scholar and leader of the Haskalah ('enlightenment') movement in Lithuania. The editor of a scholarly commentary on Jeremiah and Ezekiel and of the Hebrew grammar of Ben Zeeb, he was considered the best Hebrew scholar of his day. His fame rests on his poetry (he was rightly called the father of modern Hebrew poetry): Shirei Sfath Kodesh (3 vols, 1842–70); Michal Dema (1856). He also wrote imitative dramas, e.g. Chochma and Emet ve-Emunah (Vilna, 1867).

Kol Shirei Adam u-Michal (6 vols, Vilna, 1895). S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Lebenson, MICHA JOSEPH, pseud. MICHAL (*Vilna 22 II 1828; †ibid. 17 II 1852), Hebrew poet; son of Abraham Dov Lebenson*. From his early childhood Michal was trained not only in Hebrew studies but also in European languages. Aged 13 he started to translate the great German poets into Hebrew. Harisot Troya (1849), from Virgil's* Aeneid after Schiller*, was warmly praised. When he went to Berlin (1849), he immediately found friends and admirers, including Shneur Zachs and Yomtov Lipman Zunz. They advised him to turn from the glorification of the 'strange gods' to themes of Jewish national character, and there followed his historical poems on Hebrew topics. Shirei Bat Zion (Berlin, 1851) contains six dramatic poems.

Kinnor Bat Zion (ed. A. Lebenson, 1870; new ed. J. Fichman, Berlin, 1925); Kol Shirei Adam u-Michal (6 vols, Vilna, 1895). S.A.

Leblanc, MAURICE MARIE ÉMILE (*Rouen 2 XII 1864; †Pernpignan 6 XI 1941), French novelist, who followed Gaboriau* as one of the originators of the detective story. A rival of Conan Doyle*, he built all his work around one typically French character, Arsène Lupin, the gentleman-thief who became the elegant, generous and seductive outlaw of French legend. Leblanc, with his bold imagination, his genius for dramatic effect and his economical and sensitive style, is one of the great thriller-writers.

Arsène Lupin, gentleman-cambrioleur (1907; The Exploits of A. L., tr. A. T. de Mattos, 1908, repr. 1960); A. L. contre Herlock Sholmès (1909); A. L. Versus Holmlock Shears, tr. idem, 1909; L'aiguille creuse (1909; Eng. tr. idem, 1911, repr. 1960); Le bouchon de cristal (1912; Eng. tr. idem, 1913); Les confidences de A. L. (1914; Eng. tr. 1915; new tr. J. Neugröschel, 1969); Les huit coups de l'horloge (1923; Eng. tr. A. T. de Mattos, 1922); La demoiselle aux yeux verts (and Eng. tr. 1927); La femme aux deux sourires (1933; The Double Smile, 1933).

F. Fosca, Histoire et technique du roman policier (1937); Th. Narcejac, Esthétique du roman policier (1947). M.G.

Le Bouvier, GILLES, known as LE HÉRAUT BERRY (*†1386; ††1455), French chronicler and moralist; herald to the Dauphin (later Charles VII). His most important work, La Chronique du roi Charles VII, covers the King's life from 1403 to 1455. He also wrote a short life of Richard II of England (1440) as well as the Recouvrement de Normandie and an interesting account of his travels in Europe and the East entitled Livre de la Description des pays (ed. E. T. Hamy, 1908).

J. Stevenson, Narratives of the Expulsion of the English from Normandy (1863). A.H.D.

Lebrija, ELIO ANTONIO DE: see Nebrija, ELIO ANTONIO DE.

Lebrun, PONCE-DENIS ÉCOUCHARD (*Paris 11 VIII 1729; †ibid. 2 IX 1807), French poet, the author of Élégies, Épîtres and of amusing epigrams published separately throughout his career. His pompous and abstract Odes, derived from Pindar* through Boileau*, earned him from contemporary admirers the name of Lebrun-Pindare. His Ode au vaisseau Le Vengeur, describing the heroic end of a French warship outnumbered by English ships in the battle of 1 VI 1794, offers a curious coincidental parallel to the English Ballad of the Revenge.

Œuvres (4 vols, 1811); Petits poètes français, II (ed. P. Poitevin, 1864).

C. A. Sainte-Beuve, Causeries du Lundi, II (1850–69). G.B.

Lec, STANISŁAW JERZY (*Łwów 6 III 1909; †Warsaw 7 V 1966), Polish poet and prose writer. He led an eventful life and combined in his concise intellectual poetry moral scepticism and direct biting satire. The epigrammatic qualities of his poetic work naturally led him to write aphorisms for which he has become internationally known.

POETRY: Barwy (1933); Zoo (1935); Spacer cynika (1946); Życie jest fraszką (1948); Do Abła i Kaina (1961); Poema gotowe do skoku (1964); Fraszkoobranie (1966).—APHORISMS: Mysli nieuczestne (1957); Mysli nieuczestne nowe (1964); Unkempt Thoughts, tr. J. Galazka, New York, 1962.—Wybór wierszy (1968); Mysli nieuczestne (1968).—Über Brücken schreitend (tr. H. Zahr, Vienna, 1950). P.H.

Lechoń, JAN, pseud. of LESZEK SERAFINOWICZ (*Warsaw 13 VI 1899; †New York 8 VI 1956), Polish poet. One of the 'Skamander' group, after the Second World War he settled in the U.S.A. From satire he turned to philosophic resignation. His poetry is emotional and dramatic.

VERSE: Karmazynowy poemat (1920); Srebrne i czarne (1924); Lutnia po Bekwarku (1942); Aria z kurantem (1945).—VARIOUS: Rzeczpospolita Babińska (1921); O Literaturze polskiej (1942).

A. von Guttry, 'J. L.' in Unbekannte Literatur (1931). S.S. (P.H.)

Lecky, WILLIAM EDWARD HARTPOLE (*Newtown Park, Co. Dublin 26 III 1838; †1871 Elizabeth van Dedem; †London 1903), Irish historian; educated Cheltenham and Trinity College, Dublin; O.M. 1902. Lecky's main achievements were two: his History of Rationalism in Europe (1865), and his History of England in the Eighteenth Century (8 vols, 1878–90), which still remains unsurpassed.

Leaders of Public Opinion in Ireland (1861); History of European Morals (2 vols, 1869); Democracy and Liberty (2 vols, 1896); Historical and Political Essays (1908).

J. J. Auchmuty, L. (1945); H. Montgomery Hyde, A Victorian Historian (1947). E.T.W.

Leclerc, FÉLIX (*La Tuque, Quebec 2 VIII 1914; †1942 Andrée Viens), Canadian poet, song- and story-writer. He has been a radio script-writer, an actor and a modern troubadour singing and reciting his own compositions.

Pieds nus dans l'aube (1947); Les chansons de F. L. (1950); Moi, mes souliers (1955); Le fou de l'île (1967); Chansons pour les yeux (1968).

J.-C. Le Pennec, L'univers poétique de F. L. (1967). R.Su.

Le Clézio, JEAN MARIE (GUSTAVE): see NOUVEAU ROMAN.

Leconte de Lisle, CHARLES-MARIE-RENÉ (*Saint Paul, Réunion Is. 22 X 1818; †Louveciennes 18 VII 1894), French poet. The son of a Breton sugar-planter, he spent much of his youth in Réunion, with lengthy visits to France in 1821–28 and in 1837–43, when he studied law at Rennes. In 1845 he settled finally in Paris and adopted the utopian socialism of Fourier* but abandoned politics after Louis Napoleon's coup d'état (1851) and lived by occasional journalism, teaching and translations of Greek poetry. His own poems were at first unrecognized, but the Poèmes barbares (1862) stamped him as an opponent of Romantic subjectivity and, with his contributions to Le Parnasse Contemporain (1866–76), made him the leader of the PARNASSIANS. He was appointed Senate librarian in 1872, elected to V. Hugo's* Chair in the French Academy (1886) and died honoured as a 'prince of poets'.

His powerful verse, descriptive and philosophic, is coloured by nostalgia for his native island, by his profound study of Greek religion—to which he was guided by his friend Louis Ménard*—and of the Indian sacred books. Darwinism also influenced him. His pessimistic distaste for the modern world derived in part from his political disillusionment.

VERSE: Premières poésies et lettres intimes (ed. B. Guinaudeau, 1902); Poèmes antiques (1852, 1872);

Poèmes et poésies (1855, 1857); Poèmes barbares (1862, 1874, 1878); Poèmes tragiques (1884); Derniers poèmes (1895); Poésies complètes (4 vols, Lemerre, 1927–28).—PROSE: Contes en prose et impressions de jeunesse (1911); Histoire populaire du Christianisme (1871); Histoire populaire de la Révolution française (1871); Catéchisme populaire républicain (1872).

C. Baudelaire, 'Notice sur L. de L.' in E. Crépet, Recueil des poètes français, IV (1865); J. Vianey, Les sources de L. de L. (1907); E. Estève, L. de L. (1923); P. Flottes, L. de L. (1954). G.B.

Ledeganck, KAREL LODEWIJK (*Eeklo 9 XI 1805; †Ghent 19 III 1847), Flemish poet, worked in a weaving mill, studied law and became a judge and inspector of education. He developed from a REDERIJKER to the first Romantic poet in Flanders. His gloomy tales in verse are unpalatable now, but his contemplative poetry is still impressive, and his trilogy on Ghent, Bruges and Antwerp, De drie zustersteden (1846; Les trois sœurs flamandes, tr. A. J. G. Louwage, 1864), is striking with its forceful rhythm and monumentality.

Bloemen mijner lente (1839); Het burgslot van Zomergem (1840); De zinnelooze (1842).—Verspreide en nagelaten gedichten (ed. J. F. J. Heremans, 1852); Volledige dichtwerken (1886).

M. Rooses, 'L.' in Schetsenboek (1877); J. A. Torfs, L.'s trilogie der Drie Zustersteden (1884); J. Crick, K. L. L. (1944). R.F.L.

Ledesma Buitrago, ALONSO DE (*Segovia 1552; †ibid. 1632), Spanish religious poet. Some think his Conceptos espirituales originated the style called CONCEPTISMO. His poems usually consist of religious allegories founded on a continued metaphor or pun. He also took nursery-rhymes and game-jingles and adapted or parodied them a lo divino. His poems are curious rather than profound. E.M.W.

Conceptos espirituales (3 ser., 1600, 1606, 1612); Juegos de Noche Buena (1611); Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXXV; Conceptos espirituales y morales (ed. E. Juliá Martínez, 3 vols, 1969).

A. Coster, 'Baltasar Gracián, 1601–58' in Rev. Hispanique, XXIX (1913); M. Quintilla, 'A. de L. Datos biográficos' in Estudios segovianos, I (1949); F. Smieja, 'A. de L. y la Segunda parte del Romancero general de 1605' in Hispanófila, no. 10 (1960). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Ledwidge, FRANCIS (*Slane, Co. Meath 19 VI 1891; †Belgium 31 VII 1917), Irish poet; of farming stock, he was 'discovered' by Lord Dunsany*, who helped him to publish his verse. His poems are delicate and musical, showing great feeling for nature and a rapidly developing technical skill.

R.McH.

Songs of the Fields (1915); Songs of Peace

(1916); Last Songs (1917).—Complete Poems (1919; 3rd ed. 1955). E.T.W.

1851; A Sherbo, English Sentimental Drama (1957). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Lee, LAURIE (*Stroud, Glos 26 VI 1914; ∞1950 Catherine Francesca Polge), English poet, who writes simply and innocently of nature and country life. Cider With Rosie (1959) and As I Walked Out One Midsummer Morning (1969) are charming books of autobiographical reminiscence.

The Sun My Monument (1944); The Bloom of Candles (1947); A Rose for Winter (1955); My Many-Coated Man (1955). W.R.A.

Lee, NATHANIEL (*?c. 1648; †London V 1692), English dramatist, who went from Charterhouse to Trinity College, Cambridge (1665), where he contributed an English ode to Threnodia lamenting the death of Monck. At first an actor of mean quality, though excellent at recitation, Lee took to writing heroic plays on classical subjects, at first in couplets, later, notably The Rival Queens (1677), in blank verse. Mad from 1684 to 1688, he received a pension from the Theatre Royal on recovery. His plays were considered good theatre for 150 years, though his extravagant blank verse was deplored. He collaborated with Dryden* in a version of Oedipus (1679). B.L.J. (H.N.D.)

Nero (1674; ed. R. Horstmann, 1914); Sophonisba (1675; ed. F. Holthausen, 1913); The Rival Queens (1677; ed. P. F. Vernon, 1970); Lucius Junius Brutus (1680; ed. J. Loftis, 1967); Theodisius (1680; ed. F. Resa, 1904).—Works (1694); Dramatick works (3 vols, 1736); Works (ed. T. B. Stroup and A. L. Cooke, 2 vols, 1954–55).

R. G. Ham, Orway and L. (1931); A. L. McLeod, 'A. N. L. biblio., 1670–1960' in Seventeenth and Eighteenth-Century Theatre Res., I (1961); R. Birley, Sunk Without Trace (1962; Clark Lecture on The Rival Queens); E. Rothstein, Restoration Tragedy (1967). J.R.B. (H.N.D.)

Lee, (NELLE) HARPER (*Monroeville, Ala. 28 IV 1926), American woman novelist of the genteel rather than the savage Southern school. Her To Kill a Mockingbird (1960), a Pulitzer Prize novel, shows the racial suspicion and hostility at work in the trial of a Southern Negro for rape. D.E.Mo.

Lee, SOPHIA (*London 1750; †Clifton 13 III 1824) and HARRIET (*London 1757; †Clifton 1 VIII 1851), sisters, English writers of successful plays and novels, including The Canterbury Tales (5 vols, 1797–1805), to which both contributed.

The Chapter of Accidents (play; 1780); The Life of a Lover (novel; 6 vols, 1804).—Errors of Innocence (5 vols, 1786); The Three Strangers (play; 1825).

SOPHIA: J. Boaden, Memoirs of Mrs Siddons (2 vols, 1827).—HARRIET: Bristol Jour. (9 Aug.

Leeuw, AART VAN DER (*Delft 23 VI 1876; ∞1904 Antonia Johanna Kip; †Voorburg 17 IV 1932), Dutch poet and prose writer; wrote in a poetic style on romantic subjects.

PROSE: Kinderland (1914); Sint-Veit (1919); De mythe van een jeugd (1921); De gezegenden (1923); Vluchtige begroetingen (1925); Ik en mijn speelman (1927); Flucht vor der Ehe, tr. A. Gerdeck-De Waal, 1949; De kleine Rudolf (1930; Ger. tr. H. H. von Böhl, 1930).—Liederen en balladen (verse; 1911); Verzamelde gedichten (coll. verse; 1950).

W. J. Kramer, 'Levensbericht van A. van der L.' in Handelingen Maatschappij Nederl. Lett. (1932–33); J. Hulsker, A. van der L. (1946); F. W. van Heerikhuizen, De strijd van A. van der L. (1951); S. P. Uri, Vlucht der verbeelding (1955); P. N. van Eyck, Verzamelde werk, V (1962).

J.J.O.

Leeuwen, JAN VAN (†Groenendaal nr Brussels 1377), Dutch mystic. He was a lay brother in the monastery of Groenendaal in Ruusbroec's* time; his nickname was 'the good cook'. He wrote a great number of mystical tracts (influenced by Hadewijch* and Ruusbroec) in a popular, not very accomplished style but fascinating because of their spontaneity. His fame spread abroad: in the 15th century five of his smaller works were translated into German and he was read until well into the 17th century. J.J.M.

St. Axters, J. van L. (with anthol.; 1943), in Ons Geestelijk Erf, XXXII (1958) and in Versl. en Med. Koninkl. Vlaamse Acad. (1958); J. W. N. Delteyk, J. van L. en zijn tractaat van vijf manieren broederliker minnen (2 vols, 1947); F. Hermans, 'Un convers cuisinier, disciple de Ruysbroec' in Vie Spirituelle, XCI (1958); A. Ampe in Ons Geestelijk Erf, XXXIII (1959). A.v.E.

Le Fanu, JOSEPH SHERIDAN (*Dublin 28 VIII 1814; †ibid. 7 II 1873), Irish novelist, chiefly remembered for his tales of the supernatural. His stories have much skill in plot and his method of deliberate narration helps their suspense; they are somewhat weakened by prolixity but remain among the classics of this genre. R.McH.

The House by the Churchyard (1863); Uncle Silas (1864); In a Glass Darkly (1872).

Nelson Brown, S. Le F. (1951).

R.McH. (E.T.W.)

Lefevre, JEAN (*Reissons-sur-le-Matz c. 1327), French author and translator, best known for his version in French verse of the Lamentations of Matheolus*, and for the Livre de Leesce which he composed as a refutation.

TRANSLATIONS: Lamentations (1371–72; ed.

A. G. Van Hamel, 1892); La Vieille (tr. of Vetula by Richard de Fournival; ed. H. Cocheris, 1861); Disticha Catonis (ed. J. Ulrich in Romanische Forschungen, XV, 1903); Theodolet (tr. of Theoduli Ecloga).—WORKS: Le Livre de Leesce (after 1373; ed. A. G. Van Hamel, 1905); Respit de la Mort (after 1376); Epistre sur les miseres de la vie.

F.W.

Lefèvre, JEAN (*Paris 1335; †Avignon 11 I 1390), French diarist; a Benedictine who became Bishop of Chartres (1380) and chancellor to Louis I, Duke of Anjou and King of Sicily (1381). He wrote an interesting Journal (1381–88) in French, with a number of passages in Latin.

Ed. H. Moranvillé (1888).—A. Coville, Vie intellectuelle dans les domaines d'Anjou-Provence de 1380 à 1435 (1941). A.H.D.

Lefèvre, JEAN, LORD OF SAINT RÉMY (*Abbeville ?1395; †Bruges 16 VI 1468), French chronicler and poet, and a high official at the court of the Dukes of Burgundy. In addition to a verse epistle, he wrote an important, but biased Chronique in prose which covered the period 1408–36.

Ed. F. Morand (2 vols, 1876–81). A.H.D.

Lefèvre d'Étaples (FABER STAPULENSIS), JACQUES (*c. 1450; †Nérac III 1536), French humanist, Hellenist and religious reformer. A pupil of George Hermonymus, he became acquainted with Florentine Neo-Platonism during a sojourn in Italy (1492), was later associated with Budé* and taught Greek in Paris (c. 1505). His commentaries on the Psalms (1507) and the Pauline Epistles (1512) were along humanistic-philological lines and based directly on the text. His translation of the New Testament (1523) was followed by that of the whole Bible (1530). A translator of Nicholas of Cusa, he worked with Briçonnet and his circle, sharing their aspirations for a Church purged of medieval abuses and inspired by a devotional spirit based on the Gospels. The scholastic reaction of 1523 led to his flight to Strasbourg (1525), and his later years (1530–36) were spent at Nérac under the patronage of Marguerite* of Navarre.

J. Barnaud, L. d'É. (1936); A. Renaudet in Dictionnaire des lettres françaises, I (1951). F.W.

Leffler, ANNE CHARLOTTE (*Stockholm 1 X 1849; ∞1872 Gustaf Edgren [o/o1889]; †Naples 21 X 1892), Swedish author. Her first work was a series of problem plays, but their lack of success turned her to writing stories of what she herself termed 'sober realism'. They dealt largely with cultivated, conventional middle-class society; a favourite grievance was the double moral code existing between the sexes. After her second marriage in 1890 with a Neapolitan Duke, her writing took on a warmer and more emotional tone.

PLAYS: Skådespelarskan (1873); Pastorsadjunkten (1876); Elfyen (1880); Sanna kvinnor (1883); True Women, tr. H. L. Brækstad, 1885); Hur man gör godt (1885); Familjelucky (1892).—FICTION: Ur lifvet (3 vols, 1882–83, 1889); En sommarsaga (1886); Kvinnlighet och erotik (1890).

E. Key, A. C. L. (1893); J. Gernandt-Claine and I. Essén, A. C. L. (autobiog. based on letters and diaries; 1922). C.H.K.

Le Fort, GERTRUD VON (*Minden 11 X 1876; †Oberstdorf XI 1971), German poet and novelist; became an ardent convert to Roman Catholicism in 1926. The Christian Church (i), the German Empire (ii) and the three forms of womanhood as virgin, bride and mother (iii) are her great subjects (marked i–iii in bibliography).

(i) Hymnen an die Kirche (1928); Das Schweisstuch der Veronika (2 vols, 1927–46; The Veil of Veronica, tr. C. M. R. Bonacina, 1932); Der Papst aus dem Ghetto (1929); The Pope From the Ghetto, tr. idem, 1934).—(ii) Hymnen an Deutschland (1932); Das Reich des Kindes (1933); Die Magdeburgische Hochzeit (1938).—(iii) Die Letzte am Schaffott (1931); The Song at the Scaffold, tr. O. Marx, 1933); Die Opferflamme (1938); Das Gericht des Meeres (1944); The Judgement of the Sea, tr. I. and F. McHugh, 1962); Die Frau des Pilatus (1955); The Wife of Pilate, tr. M. C. Buehrle, 1957); Das Schweigen (1967).

M. Eschbach, Die Bedeutung G. von Le F.s in unserer Zeit (with biblio.; 1948); H. Jappe, G. von Le F. Das erzählende (1950); N. Heinen, G. von Le F.: Eine Einführung mit Bibliographie (1954); I. Hilton, 'G. von Le F.' in German Men of Letters, II (ed. A. Natan, 1963); I. O'Boyle, G. von Le F.: An Introduction to the Prose Work (1964).

R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Lefranc, JEAN-JACQUES, MARQUIS DE POMPIGNAN (*Montauban 10 VIII 1709; †Pompignan 4 XI 1784), French poet. One of the best religious poets of his age, he gave a translation of the Psalms (1751) and the Odes chrétiennes et philosophiques (1771). His hostility to rationalism provoked Voltaire's* unjust comment on his Poèmes sacrés (1755): 'Sacred they are, for no one will touch them' (in Le Pauvre Diable). He also wrote tragedies (Didon, 1734) and an Ode (1742) on the death of J. B. Rousseau*, whose work he much admired.

Œuvres (4 vols, 1784).

G.B.

Le Franc, MARTIN (*?1410; †?1461), French poet. A Norman who became secretary to Amadeus VIII of Savoy (elected Pope Felix V, 1439), and who entered, on his master's death in 1451, the service of Louis I of Savoy. His verse, allegorical and moralizing, is interesting only because of the ideas expressed. In his principal work, Le Champion des Dames (1442), he refutes the attacks on women popular since Jean* de Meung.

G. Paris, 'Un poème inédit de M. Le F.' in Romania, XVI (1887); A. Piaget, M. Le F., prévôt de Lausanne (1888); A. Bayot, L'Estrif de Fortune et de Vertu (1928). A.H.D.

Legenda Aurea (GOLDEN LEGEND): see Jacobus de Voragine.

Léger, ALEXIS: see Saint-John Perse.

Legge, THOMAS (*Norwich 1535; †Cambridge 12 VII 1607), English writer of Latin plays and Master of Caius College, Cambridge. His tragedy Ricardus Tertius, performed at St John's College, Cambridge (1579), achieved contemporary fame. B.L.J.

Ricardus Tertius (MS play; pr. Shakespeare Soc., 1844; in J. P. Collier, Shakespeare's Library, rev. W. Hazlitt, V, 1875).

G. C. Moore Smith, 'Notes on some English University plays' in Mod. Lang. Rev., III (1908); G. B. Churchill and W. Keller in Shakespeare Jahrbuch, XXXIV (1898). B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Leguizamón, MARTINIANO (*1858; †1935), Argentinian writer who dealt with the theme of the gaucho in short stories and in the play Calandria (1896). As a literary historian he specialized in the gaucho period.

Recuerdos de la tierra (1896); Alma nativa (1906); De cepa criolla (1908). E.Sa.

Lehmann, JOHN (*Bourne End, Bucks 2 VI 1907), English poet and publisher, editor of the periodicals New Writing and Penguin New Writing, in which many promising young writers first appeared in print.

New Writing in Europe (1940); Ancestors and Friends (1962); A Nest of Tigers: Edith, Osbert and Sacheverell Sitwell in Their Times (1968).—Collected Poems (1963).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: The Whispering Gallery (1955); I Am My Brother (1960); The Ample Proposition (1966); abr. in 1 vol. as In My Own Time (1969). W.R.A.

Lehmann, ROSAMOND NINA (*Bourne End 1903; ∞1928 Hon. Wogan Philipps), English novelist, sister of John Lehmann*. Early influenced by Virginia Woolf* and later by Henry James*, she has a subtle gift of giving significance to a situation by tracing its effects through the thoughts of persons or by implication through their words. She is peculiarly skilled in suggesting the spirit and sensibility of children and young girls.

NOVELS: Dusty Answer (1927); A Note in Music (1930); Invitation to the Waltz (1932); The Weather in the Streets (1936); The Ballad and the Source (1944); The Echoing Grove (1953).—No More Music (play; 1939).—The Gypsy's Baby (stories; 1946).—The Swan in the Evening (autobiog.; 1967).

R. A. Scott-James, Fifty Years of English Literature (1900–1950) (1951). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Lehmann, WILHELM (*Puerto Cabello, Venezuela 4 V 1882; †Eckernförde 17 XI 1968), German poet, novelist, essayist. An important influence on post-war poets, his lyrics are romantic, pantheistic and modern, attempting to replace reason with perception. His poetry developed from Expressionist beginnings to a Goethean sense of kinship between all natural things, and finally to empiricism.

VERSE: Der grüne Gott (1942); Entzückter Staub (1946); Abschiedslust (poems, 1957–61; 1962); Sichtbare Zeit (1967).—NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: Der Bilderstürmer (novel; 1917); Weingott (novel; 1921); Verführerin, Trösterin (1947); Ruhm des Daseins (novel; 1953).—ESSAYS AND CRITICAL WRITING: Bewegliche Ordnung (1947); Mühe des Anfangs (1952); Dichtung als Dasein (1956); Kunst des Gedichts (1961).—COLLECTED WORKS: Sämtliche Werke (3 vols, 1962).

O. Loerke, 'W. L.' in Gedichte und Prosa, II (1958); D. A. Scrase, 'W. L.' in Essays on Contemporary German Literature (ed. B. Keith-Smith, 1966). F.M.K.

Lehtonen, JOEL (*Sääminki 27 XI 1881; ∞1920 Lydia Thomasson; †Helsinki 20 XI 1934), Finnish poet, novelist and translator. His early works were typical of the Finnish national-Romantic movement. The general strike of 1905, travel in Southern Europe and, later, the Finnish civil war, however, affected him profoundly and his major work, Putkinoitko (2 vols, 1919–20; La combe aux mauvaises herbes, tr. J. Ahokas, 1962), reveals a naturalistic realism reminiscent of Zola*. As an opponent of the nascent chauvinism of the 1920s Lehtonen's writing became increasingly embittered and his last work Henkien taistelu ('The Battle of the Spirits'; 1933) is a monumental indictment of public and private hypocrisy. Lehtonen's intense, versatile and colourful language and the skilful construction of his books make him an outstanding novelist of his generation. His work also provides a valuable source for the cultural and social history of the 1920s.

VERSE: Perm (1904); Rakkaita muistoja (1911); Markkinoilta (1912); Hyvästijättö Lintukodolle (1934).—NOVELS AND STORIES: Paholaisen viulu (1904); Mataleena (1905); Kerran kesällä (1917); Kuolleet omenapiut (1918); Rakastunut rampa (1922); Sorron lapset (1923); Punainen mies (1925).—Kootut teokset (coll. works; 8 vols, 1931–35).

E. Palola, J. L. (1927); A. Nurminen, 'J. L.:sen kirjallinen tuotanto' in Bibliophilos (1953); U. Kupiainen, J. L. runoilijana (1956); L. Viljanen, 'J. L.:sen hyvästijättö' in Lyyrillinen minä (1959). M.A.B.

Leibniz, GOTTFRIED WILHELM VON (*Leipzig 1646; †Hanover 1716), German philosopher, mathe-matician and diplomat, a 'universal man' of the Renaissance type. His philosophy of pre-established harmony of hierarchically ordered monads reflected the theoretical organization of the absolutist state of the baroque, but his optimism looked forward to the ENLIGHTENMENT; Voltaire* ridiculed it in Candide. Most of his scientific work was in Latin or French (Théodicée, 1710), but his Unvorgreifliche Gedancken betreffend die Ausübung und Verbesserung der deutschen Sprache (1717), urged the increased use and historical study of German. Leibniz was active with plans for the union of the Protestant Churches.

Opera omnia (6 vols, 1768); Deutsche Schriften (ed. G. E. Guhrauer, 2 vols, 1838, repr. 1967); Œuvres (ed. A. Foucher de Careil, 7 vols, 1859–75); sel. works ed. H. Schmalenbach (2 vols, 1914–15); Sämtliche Schriften und Briefe (ed. Prussian Acad., 1923 ff.); Philosophical Papers and Letters (sel., ed. and tr. Leroy E. Loemker, 1956); Correspondence Between L. and Clarke (ed. H. G. Alexander, 1956); Studienausgabe (ed. H. H. Holz, 1959–); Confessio Philosophi (crit. ed. O. Saane, 1967).

G. E. Guhrauer, G. W. von L. (standard biog.; 1846; repr. with new app. and index, 1967); A. Schmarsow, L. und Schottelius (with text of Unvorgreifliche Gedancken; 1877); B. Russell, Critical Exposition of the Philosophy of L. (1900, 1937); D. Mahnke, L. und Goethe (1924); P. Hankamer, Die Sprache, ihr Begriff und ihre Deutung im 16. und 17. Jh. (1927); E. Ravier, Bibliographie des œuvres de L. (1937); R. Kliban-sky, L.'s Unknown Correspondence With English Scholars and Men (1941); R. W. Meyer, L. und die europäische Ordnungskrise (1948; Eng. tr. 1951). L.W.F.

Leigh, RICHARD (*1650; †Wolverhampton 1728), English poet, pamphleteer and physician, educated Queen's College, Oxford (B.A. 1669). Besides a volume of delicate lyrics and occasional verse, Poems Upon Several Occasions (1675; ed. H. Macdonald, 1947), he wrote two prose pamphlets, The Transproser Rehearsed (1673) attacking Marvell*, and The Censure of the Rota on Mr. Dryden's Conquest of Granada (1673). R.M.W.

Leikin, NIKOLAY ALEXANDROVICH: see Leykin, NIKOLAY ALEXANDROVICH.

Leino, EINO, pseud. of ARMAS EINO LEOPOLD LÖNNBOHM (*Paltamo 6 VI 1878; †1905 T. F. F. Schoultz, †1913 A. I. Kajanus, †1921 H. Laitinen; †Tuusula 10 I 1926), Finnish poet, playwright and novelist. After entering Helsinki University he became, through his brother Kasimir, persona grata in the Young Finland circle. He did not complete his studies and turned to journalism, to which he devoted much time and energy. His earliest verse was written under the influence of Heine* and Runeberg* in the 1890s. By the beginning of the 20th century he had become the leading Finnish poet and verse-translator. His very subjective verse summarizes his emotional history and shows development from national-Romanticism to a European (Nietzschean) level of feeling. He is equally good as lyricist and narrative poet. A psychological break became noticeable in his work about 1908, and the second half of his short life was marred by bohemian debauchery.

VERSE: Maaliskuum lauluja (1896); Yökehräjä (1897); Sata ja yksi laulua (1898); Ajan aalloilta (1899); Hiihtäjän virsiä (1900); Pyhä kevät (1901); Kangastuksia (1902); Helkavirsiä (2 vols, 1903–16); Simo Hurtta (2 vols, 1904–19); Talvi-yö (1905); Halla (1908); Tähtitarha (1912); Elämän koreus (1915); Juhana herttuan ja Catharina Jagellonian lauluja (1919); Päivän kehrä (1953); Runot (3 vols, 1961–64).—PLAYS: Tuonelan joutsen (1898); Johan Wilhelm (1900); Sota valosta (1900); Naamioita (6 vols, 1905–11); Karjalan kuningas (1917).—NOVELS: Tuomas Vitikka (1906); Jaana Röntty (1907); Olli Suurpää (1908); Musti (1916).—MISCELLANEOUS: Suomalaisia kirjailijoita (1909); Elämäni kuvakirja (1925); E. L.:n pakinoita (2 vols, 1960).—Kootut teokset (coll. works; 16 vols, 1926–30).

J. Siljo, E. L. Iyyrikkona (1912); L. Onerva, E. L. (2 vols, 1932); O. Nuorto, E. L. (1938); E. J. Ellilä, E. L.:n kirjalliset julkaisut (1946); H. M. Wuolijoki, Kummituksia ja kajavia (1947); V. Tarkkainen, E. L.:n runoudesta (1954); S. Vapaasalo, Studier in E. L.:s Kalevalaromantik (1961).

W.K.M. (M.A.B.)

Leip, HANS (*Hamburg 22 IX 1893), German novelist and poet. The author of the internationally popular song of the Second World War, Lili Marlen, which shows his grasp of significant situations and strong sentimental appeal.

NOVELS: Godekes Knecht (1925); Jan Himp und die kleine Brise (1933); Drachentalb singe (1949); Der grosse Fluss im Meer (1954); The River in the Sea, tr. H. A. Piehler and K. Kirkness, 1958).—VERSE: Die Nüchtezettel der Sinsebal (1927); Die kleine Hafenorgel (1937); Heimkunft (1947).

H. L., Leben und Werk (ed. R. Italiaander, with biblio., 1958). R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Leipoldt, CHRISTIAAN FREDERIK LOUIS (*Worcester, Cape Colony 28 XII 1880; † ibid. 12 IV 1947), Afrikaans poet, dramatist and prose-writer; in turn politician, journalist and doctor, the youngest of the 'triumvirate' with whom Afrikaans poetry began. Leipoldt's lyrical poetry is both cosmopolitan and highly individual. His first volume was inspired by the horror of the injustice of war and the suffering caused by it, especially to children. Its spontaneity, passionate feeling, grim humour and freedom from convention came as a revelation to his people and to overseas critics. His individualism grew into a feeling of bitter loneliness from which he sought temporary escape in the sensuous enjoyment of nature, in which he found a strongly exotic flavour. In his dramatic monologues and some of his plays he shows dramatic power, and he is also a good story-teller and causeur.

VERSE: Oom Gert vertel en ander Gedigte (1911); Dingaansdag (1920); Uitgesoekte Gedigte vir Jong Suid-Afrika (1925); Die Bergtragedie (1932); Slampampertiedjies (1936); Geseënde Skaduwees (1949).—Vyftig Gedigte (anthology; 1946).—PROSE: Waar Spoke Speel (1927); Wat agter lê en ander Verhale (1930); Die Rooi Rotte en ander Verhale (1930); Uit my Oosterse Dagboek (1932).

P. J. Nienaber, L. Eensame Veelsydige (1948) and Perspektief en Profiel (1951); J. Kromhout, L. as Digter (1954); M. P. O. Burgers, C. L. L. (1960). G.D. (N.D.C.)

Leiris, MICHEL (*Paris 20 IV 1901), French poet and essayist. Since 1924 member of the Surrealist group (SURREALISM). Besides his work as an ethnologist, specializing in African art, he has created poetry which is fiery, original and sincere. A long autobiography, La règle du jeu (1948 ff.) sums up his experiences both as a man and as an intellectual, in prose comparable with that of Marcel Proust*.

POEMS: Le point cardinal (1927); Tauromachie (1937); Haut-mal (1943); Aurora (novel; 1946); Bagatelles végétales (1956); Vivantes cendres innommées (1961).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: L'âge d'homme preceded by La littérature considérée comme une tauromachie (1946; Manhood, tr. R. Howard, 1968); La règle du jeu, I: Biffures (1948), II: Fourbis (1955), III: Fibrilles (1966); Nuits sans nuit (1961); Brisées (crit. essays; 1956).

M. Blanchot, La part du feu (1940); M. Nadeau, M. L. ou la quadrature du cercle (1963). M.G.

Leisewitz, JOHANN ANTON (*Hanover 9 V 1752; †Brunswick 10 IX 1806), German dramatist. While studying at Göttingen Leisewitz met Hölty* and Boie* and joined the HAINBUND. He practised as a lawyer in Brunswick, where he became a friend of Lessing*. His tragedy Julius von Tarent was second to Klinger's* Zwillinge in the Hamburg competition (1776). From 1778 he was in the service of the Duke of Brunswick. Incurably diffident, Leisewitz published little and ordered the destruction of his manuscripts. Julius von Tarent, well constructed and powerfully felt, is among the best works of STURM UND DRANG.

Julius von Tarent (1776; with fragments ed. R. M. Werner, 1889).—Schriften (1816); sel. ed. K. Freye, Sturm und Drang (1911).—Briefwechsel mit der Braut (ed. H. Mack, 1906); Tagebücher (ed. H. Mack and J. Lochner, 2 vols, 1916–20).

G. Kutschera von Aichbergen, J. A. L. (1876); W. Kühlhorn, L.s. 'Julius von Tarent' (1912).

H.B.G.

Leiva Ramírez, FRANCISCO DE (*Málaga 1630; †ibid. 1676), Spanish minor dramatist in the Calderonian school. His most famous play is Cuando no se aguarda y príncipe tonto.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XLVII.

N. Díaz de Escobar, F. de L. (1899); J. Mathias, Un dramaturgo del siglo XVII: F. de L. (1970).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Leiwick, HALPER (*Minsk district 1888; †New York 1962), Yiddish poet and playwright. He participated in revolutionary activities in Tsarist Russia, in 1906 spent four years in a Moscow prison; in 1912 he was exiled to Siberia, escaped, and settled in New York (1913). For many years he worked as an interior decorator, at the same time publishing his poetry, until in the 1930s he became generally recognized as the leading contemporary Yiddish poet. His poetry reflects his prison experiences and blends universalism with national awareness. His successful mystical play The Golem was set to music as an opera, and performed in Italian in Milan. For the last four years of his life he was paralysed. Only a few of his poems and plays are available in translations (Hebrew, Polish, English) and included in various anthologies. Most of his numerous plays appeared in literary periodicals.

Geklibene verk (5 vols, Vilna, 1925–28); Di geule komedye (1934); Abelard un Heloise (1936); Lieder fun gan-eyden (1937); Ale verk (2 vols, 1940); In Treblinka bin ikh nit geven (1945); Di Khassene fun Fernwald (1949); A blat oif an appel-boim (Buenos Aires, 1955). J.S.

L. E. L.: see Landon, LETITIA ELIZABETH MACLEAN.

Leland, CHARLES GODFREY (*Philadelphia 15 VIII 1824; ∞17 I 1856 Eliza Bella Fisher; †Florence, Italy 20 III 1903), American poet. Of his more than 50 books only Hans Breitmann's Ballads, which satirizes German-American pseudo-idealism, is still read.

Meister Karl's Sketch-Book (1855); The Breitmann Ballads (1871); The Gypsies (1882); Memoirs (1893).

G. H. Genzmer in Dictionary of American Biography, XI (1933); M. Thalmann, 'Hans Breitmann' in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc. Amer., LIV (1939). E.R.

Leland, JOHN (*?1506; †1552), English antiquary. Educated at St Pauls, Cambridge and Oxford, Leland was appointed 'King's antiquary' (1533) and compiled a detailed topographical and antiquarian record after touring England for six years.

The Laboryouse journey and Serche of Johan Leylande (1549; repr. T. Hearne in Itinerary, I, 1710); The Itinerary of John Leland the Antiquary

(ed. T. Hearne, 9 vols, 1710–12; ed. L. T. Smith, 5 vols, 1906–10).

E. Burton, Life of L. (1896); H. B. Walters, The English Antiquaries of the 16th, 17th and 18th Centuries (1934); T. D. Kendrick, British Antiquity (1950). W.A.A.

Lemaire, JEAN, DE BELGES (*Bavai, Hainaut 1473; †1524), French writer. Historiographer to Margaret of Austria and later to Louis XII, whose Gallican policy he defended, he illustrates by his varied interests and appreciation of all the arts the early Renaissance movement in France. His poetry shows the excessively rich rhyme and alliteration of the rhétoriqueurs but marks a great advance in harmony and picturesqueness. He introduced the terza rima into France and practised with success the alexandrine. His vocabulary is rich in technical terms, neologisms, and descriptions of colour and light. The Épîtres de l'Amant Vert (1511) reveal his mastery in a semi-humorous, semi-pathetic style. He advocates a close cultural union between France and Florence in the Concorde des deux langages (1511) and the description there of the Temple of Venus reveals his pagan philosophy. His largest prose work, the Illustrations de Gaule et Singularités de Troie (1511–13), reproduces the legend of the Trojan origin of the Franks, used later by Ronsard* in the Franciade. Lemaire points forward to the Pléiade but merits a high place in his own right as an artist sensitive to beauty in all its forms.

Œuvres (ed. J. Stecher, 4 vols, 1882–91; repr. 1969); La Plainte du Désiré (1503; ed. D. Yabsley, 1932); La Concorde des deux langages (ed. J. Frappier, 1947); Les Épîtres de l'Amant Vert (ed. idem, 1948); Le temple d'honneur et de vertus (ed. H. Hornik, 1957).

P. Spaak, J. L. de Belges, sa vie, son œuvre et ses meilleures pages (1926); G. Doutrepoint, J. L. de Belges et la Renaissance (1934); K. Munn, A Contribution to the Study of J. L. de Belges (1936). M.Y.

Lembcke, CHRISTIAN LUDVIG EDVARD (*Copenhagen 15 VI 1815; †1841 Laurence Charlotte Jørgensen; †Frederiksberg 21 III 1897), Danish poet. His family was of German origin, and the majority of his poems which have survived are inspired by an anti-German Danish patriotism. Best known is his poem Vort Modersmaal ('Our Mother Tongue'). He translated Shakespeare's* works (1861–73), and also made some translations from Byron*, Thomas Moore* and Swinburne*.

Digte (1870); Udvalgte Digte (ed. V. Andersen, 1901). E.B.

Lemche, ELLEN GYRITHE (*Copenhagen 17 IV 1866; †1893 Johan Henrich Lemche; †Lyngby 3 II 1945), Danish novelist. She was one of the leaders in the movement for the emancipation of women in Denmark. Most famous among her books are the novel Edwards gave (5 vols, 1900–12) and the trilogy Tempeltjenere ('Guardians of the Temple'; 1926–28), the former the story of a family, the latter being concerned with the emancipation of women.

Soedtmanns Jomfruer (1898); Folkets Synder (1899); Lotte van Joost (1924); Strømmen (4 vols, 1930–32); De fagre Riger (1945). E.B.

Lemelin, ROGER (*Quebec 7 IV 1919; †1945 Valéda Lavigueur), Canadian novelist. After earning his living since the age of 14 in Quebec's Lower Town and lumber camps, he began to write about life in working-class districts of French Canada. Noted for its insight and realism, his first book, Au pied de la pente douce (1944; The Town Below, tr. S. Putnam, 1948), was awarded the Prix David and the Grand Prix de l'Académie française, but it was also criticized for lack of religious respect. He continued to write in a cynical and sardonic vein, providing material for radio series.

Les Plouffe (1948; The Plouffe Family, tr. M. Finch, 1950); Pierre le magnifique (1954; In Quest of Splendour, tr. H. L. Binsse, 1955).—Fantasies sur les péchés capitaux (fables; 1948).

G. Trottier, 'R. L., romancier et conteur' in Rev. Dominicaine, LII (1950); W. E. Collin, 'R. L.' in Queen's Quart., XLI (1954). R.Su.

Lemene, FRANCESCO, CONTE DE (*Lodi 1634; †Milan 24 VII 1704), Italian lyric, pastoral and religious poet. A follower of Marino*, he sought to please and astonish his listeners with unexpected metaphors, strange contrasts and figures of speech. His languid and affected style anticipated the ways of the next generation.

Poesie diverse (1699; 1726).

C. Vignati, 'F. de L. e il suo epistolario inedito' in Archivio storico lombardo, XIX (1892); A. Franzoni, F. de L. (1904); V. Saulino, F. de L. nella vita e nelle opere (1921); A. Oliva, F. de L. nella letteratura del suo secolo (1929); W. Binni, 'Prearcadia settentrionale' in L'Arcadia e il Metastasio (1963). U.L.

Lemierre, ANTOINE MARIN (*Paris 12 I 1723; †Saint-Germain-en-Laye 4 VII 1793), French dramatist and poet. His tragedies enjoyed limited success in spite of his experiments with horror, spectacle, and subjects drawn from modern history. He wrote two long didactic-descriptive poems: La Peinture (1769) and Les Fastes (1779).

Hypermnestre (1758); Terée (1761); Idoménée (1763); Artaxerce (1766); Guillaume Tell (1766); La Veuve du Malabar (1770).—Œuvres (1810).

H. C. Lancaster, French Tragedy in the Time of Louis XV, II (1950). G.B.

Lemnius Margadant, SIMON (*Guat, Val Müstair 1511; †Chur 1550), Ræto-Romansch humanist and poet. Luther*, annoyed by his Latin epigrams, had him expelled from Wittenberg. His bucolic Amores scandalized the Grisons Reformers. Returning a poet laureate from Bologna, he taught Latin in Chur, where he died of the plague. He composed the first translation of the Odyssey and of the Batrachomyomachia into Latin hexameters; notably however an important national epic in Latin, the Raeteis, describing the wars for the independence of the Grisons and the victory over Austria on the Calven (1499).

Episodia de Joachim Marchioni Brandenburgensi et eius conjuge (1532); Epigrammaton Libri Duo (1538); Liber Tertius (1538); Lutii Pisaei Juvenalis Monachopronomachia (1539, 1866); Elegia in commendationem Homeri... (1539); Amorum Libri Quatuor (1542); Dionysius Lybicus Poeta, De Situ habitabilis orbis... nuper latinus factus (1544); Odysseae Homeri Libri XXIII... heroico latino carmine facti... accessit et Batrachomyomachia (1549); Raeteis (1874; Ger. trs 1792–97, 1882; Ital. tr. 1902).

G. E. Lessing, 'Rettung des S. L.' in Kritische Briefe (1753); P. Merker, S. L., ein Humanistenleben (1904); J. Michel, 'Die Quellen zur Raeteis des S. L.' in Bündner Monatsblatt (1917) and Vom Humanismus... in Graubünden (1930); G. Ellinger, 'S. L. als Lyriker' in Festgabe für F. von Bezold (1921) and Die neulateinische Literatur in Deutschland in der 1. Hälfte des 16. Jh. (1929); G. Sieveking, 'Die Beichte des S. L. an Gian Travers: aus den Gedichten des S. L.' in Raetia, VI (1944) and 'Die drei Engadiner Humanisten: Gian Travers, Marcus Tattius und S. L.' in Bündner Monatsblatt (1946); P. Wismann, 'S. L.' in Bedeutende Bündner (1970). R.R.B.

Lemon, MARK (*London 30 XI 1809; ∞1839 Helen Romer; †Crawley, Sussex 23 V 1870), English humorist, writer of novels, stories for children, and some 60 plays: co-founder and co-editor of Punch: contributor to Household Words.

FOR CHILDREN: The Enchanted Doll (1849); A Christmas Hamper (1860).—NOVELS: Faulkner Lyle (1866); Golden Fetters (1867).—PLAYS: The Chimes (with G. A. & Beckett; 1844); Hearts Are Trumps (1849); A Moving Tale (1850).—The Jest Book (1864).

A. A. Adrian, M. L.: First Editor of Punch (1966). R.M.H. (K.W.)

Lemonnier, CAMILLE (*Ixelles 24 III 1844; ∞Mlle Panneels; †Brussels 13 VI 1913), Belgian novelist and critic. He abandoned law, then local government, for literature. His work, permeated with the sensuousness and sensuality of the Flemish painters, prompted the Belgian literary renaissance, which dates from the Banquet Lemonnier, organized by the Jeune Belgique writers in 1883. Social outcasts, injustices and aberrations supplied many of his themes, and his frank and lyrical naturalism, inspired by Zola*, involved him in three law-suits.

NOVELS: Sedan (1871); Un mâle (1881); Thérèse Monique (1882); L'hystérique (1885); Le possédé (1890); L'homme qui tue les femmes (1892); L'homme en amour (1897).—SHORT STORIES: Contes flamands et wallons (1875); Le Bestiaire (1893).—CRITICISM: La Belgique (1888); Constantin Meunier (1904).—Une vie d'écrivain (autobiog.; 1945).—Anthologie (1903).

B. M. Woodbridge, Le roman belge contemporain (1930). B.M.W.

Le Moyne, JEAN (*Montreal 1913), Canadian essayist. A journalist for the Montreal daily La Presse before becoming editor-in-chief of La Revue moderne (1953–59), then script-writer for the National Film Board, he achieved prominence when essays written over a 25-year period appeared in the collection Convergences (1961; Eng. tr. P. Stratford, 1966). R.Su.

Lenartowicz, ALEKSANDER TEOFIL (*Warsaw 27 II 1822; †Florence 3 II 1893), Polish poet, largely self-taught. In 1848 he went into exile and settled (1860) in Florence where he worked as a sculptor. His poetry is direct, sincere and melodious; he makes extensive use of folk-loristic themes.

Lirenka (1855; 'Die Lierinka', Ger. tr. A. Woycke in Proben neuerer polnischer Lyrik, 1861); Zachwycenie (1855; Die Entzückung, tr. idem, 1861); Gładiatorowie (Paris, 1857); Bitwa Racławicka (ibid., 1859); Rytmy narodowe (1881).—Poesie polacche (Ital. tr. E. Marcucci, 1871).—Wybór poezyj (4 vols, 1876); Poezje (1968).

J. Kasprzowicz, Lirnik mazowiecki (1893); H. Biegeleisen, Lirnik mazowiecki... (1913). S.S. (P.H.)

Lenau, NIKOLAUS, pseud. of NIKOLAUS FRANZ NIEMBSCH VON STREHLENAU (*Csatad, Hungary 13 VIII 1802; †Oberdöbling nr Vienna 22 VIII 1850), Austrian poet. The son of an unstable father, Lenau was much spoiled by his mother and grew up temperamental and restless. He spent 1821–31 in inconclusive studies in Pressburg and Vienna. Visiting Stuttgart in 1831, he was enthusiastically received by the Swabian poets, who arranged the publication of his poems (1832). He emigrated to America in 1832, but soon returned disappointed. His love-affair with Sophie, the wife of his friend Max von Löwenthal, increased his melancholy, and shortly before his marriage to Marie Behrends (1844) he became incurably insane. Lenau was a poet of despair. His feeling for Nature was deep but subjective. His loosely constructed narrative poems are valued mainly for their lyrical passages.

Gesamtausgabe (ed. E. Castle, 6 vols, 1910–23; ed. W. Dietze, 2 vols, 1970); Sämtliche Werke. Briefe (ed. H. Engelhard, 1959); Briefe an Sophie

Löwenthal (ed. P. Härtling, 1968).—Sel. tr. H. D. Wireman in Gems of German Lyrics (1869).

E. Castle, N. L. (1902) and L. und die Familie Löwenthal (2 vols, 1906); C. von Klenze, The Treatment of Nature in the Works of L. (1902); V. Errante, L.: storia di un martire della poesia (1935; Ger. tr. C. Rau, 1948); J. Turoczi-Trostler, L. (1955; Ger. tr. B. Heilig, 1961); W. Martens, Bild und Motiv im Weltschmerz (1957).—Lenau-Almanach (1959 ff.). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Lenéru, MARIE (*Brest 2 VI 1875; †Lorient 23 IX 1918), French writer. At 14 she became deaf and almost blind. Her plays were frank discussions of contemporary personal problems. She left an uncompromising Journal and idealized 'heroic energy' in her biography of Saint-Just.

PLAYS: Les affranchis (1910); Le redoutable (1912); La Paix (1921); Le bonheur des autres (1925).—Journal and Saint-Just (2 vols, 1922). S. Lavaud, M. L. (1932). G.B.

Lenin, VLADIMIR ILYICH, pseud. of V. I. ULYANOV (*Simbirsk [now Ulyanovsk] 22 IV 1870; ∞1898; †Gorky 21 I 1924), Russian revolutionary and journalist. He was active as a Marxist revolutionary first in Kazan and from 1893 in St Petersburg. In 1897 he was exiled to Siberia where he wrote his Razvitie kapitalizma v Rossii ('The Development of Capitalism in Russia'; 1899). On leaving Russia in 1900 he edited for a while the Marxist paper Iskra and helped to organize the Russian Social-Democratic party, which in 1903 became split into the Bolsheviks favouring an alliance with the peasants and the Mensheviks who advocated collaboration with the liberal bourgeoisie. In 1912 Lenin became the principal contributor (from abroad) of the paper Pravda. In 1917 he returned to Russia, organized the October coup d'état and became head of the government. Once the civil war was over in 1921, he inaugurated the New Economic Policy (NEP) and proceeded with the industrialization of Russia, but at the same time showed great concern for cultural matters. It was he who in 1920 resisted the one-sided attempts of the PROLET CULT to create a purely 'proletarian' art and literature. He was genuinely fond of literature and wrote a number of articles about it, especially about Tolstoy*.

Several eds of L.'s works; the latest are: Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (55 vols, 1958–65); sel., Izbrannye proizvedeniya (2 vols, 4th ed. 1943).—The Collected Works (tr. D. Kvitko, 13 vols, 1927); Collected Works (1960–); The Letters of L. (tr. E. Hill and D. Mudie, 1957); What Is to Be Done (tr. S. V. and P. Utechin, 1963).

On L.'s attitude towards art and lit.: S. Girinis, 'L. ob iskusstve' in Kulturny Front, IV (1924); L. o Tolstom (1928); B. Volin, L. i literatura (1928); V. Bonch-Bruевич, 'L. o poezii' in Na literaturnom postu, IV (1931); A. Leites, 'L. kak literator' in

Literaturnaya gazeta, IV (1932); M. Gorky, V. I. L. (3rd ed. 1932); E. Dobin, L. i iskusstvo (1934); Max Eastman, Artists in Uniform (with supp.; 1934); B. Meilakh, L. i problemy russkoy literatury (1947); L. Trotsky, L. (1951); L. o literature (1957); O literature i iskusstve (1957); N. K. Krupskaya, Reminiscences of L. (1959); A. S. Bessmertny, Vechno zhivoy (1960); E. D. Starova, Takim byl V. I. L. (1961); A. Balabanova, Impressions of L. (1964); M. Gorky, L. (1967). J.L.

Lennepe, DAVID JACOB VAN (*Amsterdam 15 VII 1774; ∞1800 Cornelia Chr. van Orsoy, ∞1819 Anna C. van de Poll; †ibid. 11 II 1853), Dutch classical poet; in 1799 Professor at Amsterdam, published, in addition to Latin verse and important editions and translations, the influential treatise Over het belangrijke van Hollands grond en oudheden voor gevoel en verbeelding (1826; incl. 'Hollandsche Duinzang'). J.W.W.

Memorabilia illustris Athenaei Amstelodamensis (1832); Verhandeling en Hollandsche Duinzang (ed. with intro. Garnt Stuiveling, 1966).

J. van Lennepe, Gedichten van Mr C. en Mr D. J. van L. (1861); G. Stuiveling, 'D. J. van L. in 1826–27' in Nieuwe Taalgids, LVI (1963). J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Lennepe, JACOB VAN (*Amsterdam 24 II 1802; ∞Jkvr. Henriëtte S. W. Roëll; †25 VII 1868), Dutch poet, novelist, man of letters and historian, son of D. J. van Lennepe*. In 1829 he became States Attorney; from 1853 until 1856 he was a member of the Second Chamber. As a student he was influenced by Bilderdijk*, later he became a disciple of Scott* in epic and shorter poems: Jacobaas Weeklacht op het huis te Teylingen (1839; Jacoba's Lament at the House of Teylingen, tr. S. F. Sanders, n.d.). He also wrote burlesque verse and commemorative plays but he owed his fame to chatty historical novels. A great talent for narrative, fascinating plots and his Dutch phlegmatic temperament make one forget the lack of psychological depth which, at any rate in his masterpiece, De lotgevalen van Ferdinand Huyck (2 vols, 1840; The Count of Talavera, tr. A. Arnold, 1880), and in several short stories, was less conspicuous than is usually presumed. In addition to a weaker modern novel, Klaasje Zevenster (5 vols, 1865; Adventures de Nicolette Sept-étoiles, tr. L. Paul Delinotte, 1878), he wrote interesting studies about Vondel*, whose works he edited excellently in 12 vols (1855–69).

De pleegzoon (2 vols, 1833; The Adopted Son, tr. E. W. Hoskin, 1847); De Roos van Dekama (2 vols, 1836; Eng. tr. F. Woodley, 1847); Onze Voorouders (6 vols, 1838–44); Elisabeth Musch (2 vols, 1850); Een schaking in de 17de eeuw (1850).—VERSE: Academische Idyllen (1827); Gedichten (1827); Nederlandsche legenden (1828–31); Gedichten (1851).—PLAYS: Het dorp aan de grenzen (1830); De vrouwe van Waardenburg (1859); Een Amsterdamsche jongen (1859).—Romantische werken (23 vols, 1856–72); Poëtische werken (13 vols, 1859–72).

R. C. Bakhuizen van den Brink, Studiën en Schetsen, III (1876); C. B. Huet in Litterarische Fantasiën en Kritieken, II, XV (1881–88); J. H. van den Bosch in Noord en Zuid, XII (1889) and in Taal en Letteren, II (1891); M. F. van Lennep, Het leven van Mr J. van L. (2 vols, with biblio., 1909); J. Koopmans in De Beweging, IX (1913).

J.W.W.

Lennep, WARNER WILLIAM VAN (*Amsterdam 28 VIII 1833; †3 V 1903), half-brother of Jacob van Lennep*; translator of Keats* Hyperion (1879; ed. with intro. J. Six, 1927).

J.Sm.

Lenngren, ANNA MARIA, née MALMSTEDT (*Uppsala 18 VI 1754; ∞1780 Carl Petter Lenngren; †Stockholm 8 III 1817), Swedish poet. She began publishing satirical verse at the age of 18 and made her mark with The Conseillen (1777), which poked fun at female follies and foibles. She contributed extensively to Stockholms Posten, of which her husband was co-editor with Kellgren*, whom she admired. With her dictum of 'the palace for the high and contentment for the low' she documented her social sympathies, and she attacked the upper classes in a number of witty satires, notably Grefvinnans besök. Her idylls are among her most lovable works; though not always free from sentimentality and moralizing, they broke entirely away from the pastoral fashion and were often pointed with irony and satire. Towards the end of her life domesticity became her ideal, and the didactic poem, Några ord till min k. Dotter, i fall jag hade någon (1798), exhorts women not to let politics and learning obscure their true calling of worthy wife and mother. She was the foremost realist of the post-Gustavian poets; influenced by Bellman*, but with a wit, epigrammatic finish and elegance all her own.

Skaldeförsök (1819); Samlade skrifter (ed. T. Hjelmqvist and K. Warburg, 1916–26).

K. Warburg, A. M. L. (rev. ed. 1917); A. Blanck, A. M. L., poet och pennskaft (1922) and A. M. L. (1948).

C.H.K. (I.S.)

Lenormand, HENRI RENÉ (*Paris 3 V 1882; †ibid. 16 II 1951), French dramatist. In his studies in Freudian psychology, most of them played by Georges and Ludmilla Pitoëff, Lenormand's intention was to make man 'the plaything of the forces of nature'; to abandon him to the 'dissolving powers that emanate from his unconscious mind'.

Le temps est un songe (1919); Les ratés (1920); Le Simoun (1920); Le mangeur de rêves (1922); L'homme et ses fantômes (1924); Crépuscule du Théâtre (1934).—Théâtre complet (10 vols, 1921–42).—Les confessions d'un auteur dramatique (3 vols, 1949–52).

R. Brasillach, Animateurs de théâtre (1936); P. Blanchart, Le théâtre de L. (1947); S. Radine, Anouilh, L., Salacrou (1951).

T.W.

Lenz, JACOB MICHAEL REINHOLD (*Sesswegen, Livonia 12 I 1751; †Moscow 24 V 1792), German dramatist. Son of a prosperous clergyman, Lenz broke off theological studies to accompany two noblemen to Strasbourg in 1771. He met Goethe* and later courted Friederike Brion. In 1776 he followed Goethe to Weimar, but had to leave owing to his eccentric conduct. He became insane in 1778. After being cared for by Schlosser, Goethe's brother-in-law, he was taken home in 1779. He recovered his sanity, but not his talent.

Lenz's capricious, unreliable nature is reflected in the restless, spasmodic and egocentric character of his work. His great gift was for the reproduction of superficial reality in a cinematic technique of short scenes. His attempt to fuse comedy and tragedy was a failure.

Die Landplagen (verse; 1769).—PLAYS: Lustspiele nach dem Plautus (1774); Der Hofmeister (1774); Der neue Menoza (1774); Die Freunde machen den Philosophen (1776); Die Soldaten (1776); Der Engländer (1777).—FICTION: Zerbin (1776); Der Landprediger (1777); Der Waldbruder (pub. Schiller, 1797).—Anmerkungen übers Theater (criticism; 1774).—Gesammelte Schriften (ed. L. Tieck, 3 vols, 1828); Sämtliche Werke (ed. F. Bley, 5 vols, 1909–13; ed. E. Lewy, 4 vols, 1909–17); sel. ed. K. Freye, Sturm und Drang (1911).

E. Schmidt, L. und Klinger (1888); M. N. Rosanov, L. (1909); H. Kindermann, L. und die deutsche Romantik (1925).

H.B.G.

Lenz, SIEGFRIED (*Lyck, East Prussia 17 III 1926), German novelist, writer of short stories and radio plays. A committed writer, he frequently incorporates his personal experience into his work. He can look at the past, as in the collection of short stories So zärtlich war Suleyken (1955), analytically, objectively and unsentimentally. An admirer of Faulkner*, Hemingway*, Camus*, and Dostoyevsky*, he considers himself a modern realist who believes that truth is 'double' and that 'every story should have at least two narrators'. Persecution, guilt and deadly conflict—as in the two novels Städtgespräch (1963) and the best-selling Deutschstunde (1968)—are his special themes.

NOVELS: Es waren Habichte in der Luft (1951); Duell mit dem Schatten (1953); Brot und Spiele (1954); Der Mann im Strom (1957).—SHORT STORIES: Das Feuerschiff (1960); The Lightship, tr. M. Bullock, 1964; Der Spielverderber (1965).—PLAYS: Zeit der Schuldlosen (1962); Das Gesicht (comedy; 1964).

H. Lehnert, 'Die Form des Experiments als

Gleichnis' in Frankfurter Hefte, XVIII (1963); K. G. Just, 'L. als Erzähler' in Wirkendes Wort, XVI (1966); C. A. Russ, 'The short stories of S. L.' in Ger. Life and Letters, XX (1966).

F.M.K.

Leo, ARCHPRIEST: see ALEXANDER THE GREAT.

Leo VI, EMPEROR: see Leo VI the Wise.

Leo Choirosphactes (fl. c. 900), high Byzantine official who left letters giving important information on the reign of Leo* VI, particularly on relations between Constantinople and Bulgaria.

Correspondance (ed. G. Kolias, Salonica, 1939; with Fr. tr.). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Leo Grammaticus: see Symeon Magistros, biblio.

León, LUIS DE (*Belmonte, Cuenca ?1527; †Madrigal 1591), Spanish poet and religious writer. He joined the Augustinian Order in 1544, studied at Salamanca and held several professorships there. His criticisms of the Vulgate, a vernacular translation of the Son of Solomon, suspicions of Judaism and the spite of personal enemies caused his arrest by the Inquisition in 1572; he was released in 1576. He returned to teach at Salamanca, edited St Teresa's* works and died as Provincial of his Order.

His Latin works consist of theological and Biblical treatises. He also wrote Spanish commentaries on Job and the Song of Solomon which are in excellent prose. His commentary on Proverbs, xxxi—La perfecta casada—is a delightful treatise on a married woman's duties. The prose dialogue on the names of Christ is eloquent and profound; it contains a fervent apology for Spanish as a literary language. León's translations of Virgil's* Eclogues and Horace's* Odes are sometimes mediocre, though they helped him to form his technique. His own odes, modelled on Horace, but expressing a Christian-Platonic attitude to the difference between earthly life and spiritual reality, are among the greatest Spanish poems. One praising the life of retirement and another about Roderick the Goth are also fine poems. They were published by Quevedo* in 1631, having had considerable manuscript diffusion during his life-time. His poetical translations of some psalms and of parts of Job are probably the best examples of Biblical poetry in Spanish. 18th-century poets made León one of their own models; his influence in his own day was relatively small.

Obras (ed. A. Merino, 6 vols, 1804–16; 1885); Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXXVI, LIII, LXII; La perfecta casada (ed. E. Wallace, Chicago, 1903; ed. A. Bonilla y San Martín, 1917); Exposición del Miserere (facsim. of 1632 ed.; New York, 1903); De los nombres de Cristo (ed. F. de Onís, 3 vols, 1914– 21); Obras poéticas (ed. J. Llobera, 2 vols, 1932–33); Poesías completas (ed. F. García, 1942); Cantar de cantares (ed. J. Guillén, 1936); Poesías (ed. P. A. C. Vega, 1955); Poesie (ed. with Ital. tr. O. Macrí, 1964).

Colección de documentos inéditos para la historia de España, X, XI (1847; cont. documents rel. to Inquisitorial process); J. Fitzmaurice-Kelly, Fray L. de L. (1921); A. F. G. Bell, Fray L. de L.: A Study of the Spanish Renaissance (1925); K. Vossler, L. de L. (Buenos Aires, 1946); D. Alonso, Poesía española (1951); A. Guy, La pensée de Fray L. de L. (1943; Span. tr. 1960); R. J. Welsh, Introduction to the Spiritual Doctrine of Fray L. de L. (1951); M. de la Pinta Llorente, Estudios y polémica sobre Fray L. de L. (1956); P. Sainz y Rodríguez, Introducción al estudio de Fray L. (1960); M. Nerlich, El hombre justo y bueno: inocencia bei Fray L. de L. (Frankfurt, 1966); O. Macrí, La poesía de L. de L. (1969).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

León, MOSES DE: see Moses de León.

León, RICARDO (*Barcelona 1877; †Madrid 1943), Spanish novelist, employed in the Bank of Spain. His novels represent a weak attempt to oppose Christian and traditional virtues to the naturalism of the 19th century. His style is pompous, his plots and characters conventional. Though Casta de hidalgos (1908; A Son of the Hidalgos, tr. Ca Paez, 1921) and other novels scored a big popular success, all his work is now dated.

Obras completas (2 vols, 1956).—Alcalá de las Zegries (1909); La escuela de los sofistas (1910); Los centauros (1912); El amor de los amores (1910); Los caballeros de la cruz (1916).

J. Casares, Crítica profana (1915); J. M. González de la Torre, R. L. o el genio de la lengua (1939); E. G. de Nora, La novela española contemporánea (3 vols, 1958–62). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Leonardo da Vinci (*Vinci 15 IV 1452; †Clos-Lucé, Amboise 2 V 1519), Italian artist, musician, scientist and writer. The illegitimate son of Piero d'Antonio and a certain Caterina, Leonardo began his career as an apprentice to Andrea del Verrocchio. In 1483 he entered the service of Lodovico il Moro in Milan, where his activities included hydraulics, mechanics and engineering as well as painting, sculpture and architecture. His interest in scientific subjects deflected him from art, especially in Florence, from 1503 to 1506, when he devised a scheme for canalizing the river Arno and invented a flying-machine; and in Rome, in 1515, when he was at work on a scheme for draining the Pontine marshes. In 1516 he followed Francis I to France where he was given a pension and a castle at Clos-Lucé. Leonardo's writings, fragmentary and mainly scientific in character, were not intended for publication. Written in cryptograms or from right to left and often illustrated by drawings, which he found more expressive than words, the MSS were scattered after his death and have only partly been recovered. Among the best-known of his writings are the Trattato della pittura (Paris, 1631) and Trattato del moto e della misura dell'acqua (1828). Devoid of literary pretensions, Leonardo liked to style himself 'omo senza lettere'; his prose is in fact remarkable for directness and lack of artificiality.

Prose (ed. L. Negri, 1928); Scritti scelti (ed. A. Dobelli, 1932); Pagine scelte (ed. A. Pettoello, 1935); Literary Works (Ital. and Eng.; ed. J. P. Richter, 2nd ed., 2 vols, 1939); L. da V. on Painting: A Lost Book (ed. C. Pedretti, foreword by Sir K. Clark, 1965).

G. Mazzoni, L. da V. scrittore (1919); G. Fumagalli, L. prosatore (1936) and L. 'Omo senza lettere' (2nd ed. 1939); G. Calvi, Vita di L. da V. (1939); E. M. Almedingen, L. da V., a Portrait (1969); C. M. Franzero, L. da V. (1969). B.R.

Leonardo de Argensola: see Argensola.

Leone Ebreo: see Abarbanel, JUDAH.

León-Felipe: see Camino, LEÓN-FELIPE.

Leon of Modena: see Modena, JUDAH ARYEH [LEONE] DL.

Leonora Christina, COUNTESS OF SLESVIG AND HOLSTEIN (*Frederiksborg 8 VII 1621; †1636 Count Corftz Ulfeldt; †Maribo 16 III 1698), Danish autobiographer. She was the daughter of the Danish King Christian IV and Mme Kirstine Munk. Her husband was accused of treason in 1659 and they were both imprisoned in Bornholm. On their release they went to the Continent, from where Leonora Christina went to England, but she was again arrested and taken back to Copenhagen. Here she was imprisoned for 22 years (1663–85) in the Blue Tower of Copenhagen, mainly because of the hatred which the Queen Dowager felt against her. She spent her last years in a nunnery at Maribo.

While in prison she wrote her own story, which was not discovered until 1869. It ranks as the most important Danish prose work of the 17th century—a fascinating human document, brilliantly written in a vivid style, yet full of genuine pathos.

Jammersminde (ed. S. Birket Smith, 1869; Memoirs of Leonora Christina, tr. F. E. Bunnett, 1872; facs. ed. 1931); Jammers Minde og andre selvbiografiske Skildringer (1949).

S. Birket Smith, L. C. paa Maribo Kloster (1872) and L. C. Grevinde Ulfeldts Historie (2 vols, 1879–81). E.B.

Leonov, LEONID MAXIMOVICH (*Polukhino 1899), Soviet author. He started writing in 1922 as a member of the SERAPION BROTHERS. His first narratives were highly stylized and idiomatic. At the same time he showed at the outset signs of Dostoyevsky's* influence, in his Konets melkogo cheloveka (1924) and especially in his novel Vor. His novel Barsuki deals with the Civil War, Sot' and Skutarevsky with the constructive period, whereas his biggest novel, Russky les, has Hitler's invasion for its background. He is one of the best Soviet novelists with a philosophic bent, and his disciplined style is a link between Soviet literature and former Russian realism. He also wrote several plays.

Barsuki (1925; The Badgers, tr. H. Kazanina, 1947); Vor (1926; The Thief, tr. H. Butler, 1931); Sot' (1930; Eng. tr. I. Montague and S. Nolbandov, 1931); Skutarevsky (1932; Eng. tr. A. Brown, 1936); Doroga na okean (1935); V nashi gody (1949); Russky les (1954; The Russian Forest, tr. B. Isaacs, 1966); Vztyatie Velikoshumska (1968).—Sobranie sochineniy (9 vols, 1960–62); Izbrannoye (1945); Teatr (2 vols, 1960); Literatura i vremya (1967).—Invasion (tr. G. Shelley in Four Soviet War Plays, 1945).

V. Kirpotin, Romany Leonida Leonova (1935); I. M. Nusinov, L. L. (1935); V. A. Kovalev, Romany Leonida Leonova (1954); E. J. Simmons, Russian Fiction and Soviet Ideology (1958); E. B. Boguslavskaya, L. L. (1960); Helen Muchnik, From Gorky to Pasternak (1961); L. A. Fink, Dramaturgiya Leonida Leonova (1962); V. A. Kovalëv, L. L. (1964); Tvorchestvo Leonida Leonova (1969). J.L.

Leontius, Bishop of Neapolis in Cyprus (fl. first half 7th century), Byzantine hagiographer. His surviving works are the Vita S. Ioannis Eleemosynarii and Vita S. Stimeonis Sali, containing lively pictures of contemporary social and ecclesiastical history. J.M.H.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, XCIII (with Lat. tr.; 1860); Vita S. Ioannis Eleemosynarii (ed. H. Gelzer, 1893; tr. in E. Dawes and N. H. Baynes, Three Byzantine Saints, 1949); L. Rydén, Das Leben des heiligen Narren Symeon von Leontios von N. (Stockholm, 1963). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Leontius Machairas (fl. first half 15th century), a Greek living in Cyprus under Latin rule. His Chronicle in Cypriot dialect deals mainly with the period 1359–1432, and for the later period is largely based on its author's own experiences.

Recital Concerning the Sweet Land of Cyprus Entitled Chronicle (ed. with Eng. tr. and notes R. M. Dawkins, 2 vols, 1932). J.M.H.

Leontius of Byzantium (fl. first half 6th century), Byzantine theologian. Originally a Nestorian, he was then attracted to the Alexandrian school and wrote against the Nestorians in his Libri tres adversus Nestorianos et Eutychianos. His accepted contribution to orthodox teaching is found in his development of the doctrine of the hypostatic union. The canon of his writings is not yet satisfactorily established. J.M.H.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, LXXXVI (1860; with Lat. tr.); B. Altaner, Patrologie (Freiburg, 1960).

S. Rees in Jour. Theol. Stud., XL (1939) and XLI (1940); B. Altaner, 'Der griechische Theologe L.' in Theologische Quartalschrift, CXXVII (1947); D. B. Evans, L. of B.: An Origenist Christology (1970). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Leontyev, KONSTANTIN NIKOLAYEVICH (*Kaluga province 1831; †12 XI 1891), Russian author. He combined his Byzantine brand of Christianity with a kind of Nietzschean individualism, aesthetic amorality and hatred of everything connected with egalitarian or liberal-democratic tendencies. A surgeon by profession, he spent some ten years in the consular service in Turkey and the Balkans, then as civil servant in Russia, and the last years in the Optina monastery where he died a monk. Towards the end of his life he wrote one of the most intelligent criticisms of Tolstoy's* novels. An intensely unstable, self-contradictory but original mind, Leontyev shared the Slavophil faith in the great future of Russia as against the 'decaying' West.

Iz zhizni khristyian v Turtsii (1876); Vostok, Rossiya i slavyanstvo (2 vols, 1885–86); O romanakh Tolstogo (1890; 1911, 1965); Sobranie sochineniy (9 vols, 1912–14); Stranitsy vospominaniy (1922).

Pamyati Leontyeva (1911); T. G. Masaryk, The Spirit of Russia (1919); N. Berdyayev, K. L. (1926; tr. G. Reavey, 1940). J.L.

Leopardi, GIACOMO, COUNT (*Recanati 29 VI 1798; †Naples 14 VI 1837), Italian poet. Leopardi's childhood, of importance for the understanding of his poetry, is said to have been unhappy, though Leopardi himself considered childhood the only happy period of life and much of his poetry expresses his yearning to return to it. His relationship with his mother was unsatisfactory; he describes her, in his Zibaldone, as severe and unaffectionate, secretly rejoicing when her children died. From other sources it is known that Contessa Adelaide was solicitous for her children's health (they were among the first in the Papal States to be vaccinated against smallpox) and her coldness has perhaps been exaggerated. Count Monaldo directed his children's education, arranging public examinations for them once a year, to which the citizens of Recanati were invited. In emulation of his father, Giacomo became extremely erudite at an early age. He soon outstripped his tutors and pursued his studies alone, teaching himself Greek and browsing among his father's remarkable library. Flattered by his precocity, his parents allowed him to over-work, with the result that his eyesight was injured and he developed curvature of the spine. In 1819, during a period of blindness, he awoke to a sense of futility and experienced for the first time the full strength of tedium, or, as he called it, 'noia', to which he recurrently succumbed for the rest of his life.

'Noia', the most Leopardian feature of the poet's pessimism, was therefore no mere intellectual abstraction but an actual experience, dependent to some extent upon his physiological condition. He found escape only through suffering or by surrendering the reason to illusions prompted by the heart. Real happiness, for which man craved, did not exist, and the increasing appetite of modern man for exact knowledge destroyed more and more his capacity to yield to the illusion of happiness. It was the function of the poet to re-create that capacity. Leopardi's association of illusory happiness with childhood leads him to accept uncritically the Rousseauesque conviction of the happy savage. Civilization he identified with contamination; he shared none of the contemporary optimism concerning economic progress; modern Italy in particular he saw as decadent, corrupt and apathetic.

Of Leopardi's Canti, the most remarkable are those in which he frees himself from the conventional rhetoric of his day and creates his own poetic language, as in L'infinito, La sera del dì di festa, Il sabato del villaggio, La quiete dopo la tempesta. La ginestra is an important expression of his mature philosophy.

VERSE: Puerili e abozzi vari (ed. A. Donati, 1924); Canti (ed. I. Sanesi, 1943).—The Poems of L. (orig. text with verse tr.; ed. G. L. Bickersteth, with intro., 1923); Translations From L. (R. C. Trevelyan, 1941); Poems From L. (tr. J. Heath-Stubbs, 1946).—PROSE: Operette morali (1827; ed. G. Gentile, 1940); Essays, Dialogues and Thoughts of Count G. L. (tr. P. Maxwell, 1905); Zibaldone di pensieri (ed. F. Flora, 1937–38); Epistolario (ed. F. Moroncini, 7 vols, 1941).—Selected Prose and Poetry (ed. and tr. I. Origo and J. Heath-Stubbs, 1966); Opere (ed. G. Getto, comm. E. Sanguineti, 4th ed. 1967).

G. Ferretti, Vita di L. (1945); I. Origo, L., a Study in Solitude (1953); J. H. Whitfield, G. L. (1954); R. Wis, G. L., studio biografico (1959). B.R.

Leopold, CARL GUSTAF AF (~Stockholm 3 IV 1756; †ibid. 9 XI 1829), Swedish writer. He upheld Augustan nationalism both in theory and practice, and after Kellgren's* death was the foremost authority in the academic camp. He was Gustav* III's literary adviser after Kellgren, wrote plays and respectfully flattering omissions but otherwise confined himself to solemn odes and didactic poems in the style of Pope* and Voltaire*. After Gustav III's death, Leopold concentrated on essays and journalism, somewhat influenced by the new trends, such as Rousseauism. In the new century he became the main target of attacks from the young Romantics.

Samlade skrifter (6 vols, 1814–16, 1831–33).

O. Holmberg, L. (4 vols, 1953–62).

C.H.K. (I.S.)

Leopold, JAN HENDRIK (*'s Hertogenbosch 11 V 1865; †Rotterdam 21 VI 1925), Dutch poet, contributor to De Nieuwe Gids since 1893, studied classical literature, Spinoza* and the Stoa. His spiritual loneliness, accentuated by deafness and his teaching job, led to a despair which was only conquered for short periods. The poetry of his youth, influenced by Gorter* and Verlaine*, had already attained the perfect diction in which the discrepancy between poetical intention and final expression seems to be overcome. In his later works translations are numerous, but entirely made into his own. Unfinished posthumous poems sometimes still show a natural diction which enhances their tragic strain; many of these and all his finished writing show a rare perfection in the command of language.

J.W.W.

VERSE: Verzen (ed. P. C. Boutens, 1912); Verzen (1913); Oostersch (1924); Verzen (2 vols, 1926).—Verzamelde verzen (ed. P. N. van Eyck, 1935); Verzamelde werk (ed. P. N. van Eyck and J. B. W. Polak, 2 vols, 1951).—Nabetrachten van een concertganger (prose; 1929).—The Flute (tr. H. J. C. Grierson, 1949); The Valley of Irdin (tr. P. J. de Kanter, 1957).

A. Verwey, Proza, IV (1921); A. Roland Holst in De Gids, LXXXV (1921); P. N. van Eyck, ibid., LXXXVIII (1924), in Groot Nederland, XXV (1927) and in Verzamelde werk, IV (1961); M. Nijhoff in De Gids, XCII (1929); H. A. Mulder in Opwaartsche Wegen, IX (1931); J. Hulscher in De Gids, XCIX (1935); F. Schmidt Degener in Phoenix (1942); W. E. G. Louw, Die invloed van Gorter op L. (1942); W. A. P. Smit in De Gids, CIX (1946); J. D. Ph. Warners, Het Nederlandsche kwatrijn (1947); J. M. Jalink, Eine Studie über Leben und Werk des Dichters J. H. L. (1949); J. B. W. Polak, biblio. in Folium, I (1951); J. Kamerbeek Jr, 'Over L.'s Eén druppel wijn' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, XLV.3 (1952); W. Gs Hellenga and H. van der Merwe Scholtz, Kreatieve analyse van taalgebruik (1955); N. A. Donkersloot, J. H. L. (1965); M. J. G. de Jong, L.'s 'Cheops' (1966); A. L. Sötemann, 'L. en Chrysispos' and 'L. en Dionysius van Halicarnassus' in De Nieuwe Taalgids (1967), no. 3 and (1968), no. 3. J.J.O.

Leo the Deacon (fl. second half 10th century), Byzantine historian and ecclesiastic. His History covers the period 959–976, with the later Bulgarian campaign of Basil II in 986 in which Leo took part. It was produced about 992 and is probably unfinished. Leo's work is marked by great individuality and is a valuable source for the second half of the 10th century.

J.M.H.

Historia (ed. C. B. Hase, 1828; with Lat. tr.); Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXVII (1864; with Lat. tr.).

G. Moravcsik, Byzantinoturcica (2nd ed. 1958); N. Panayotakes, Leōn ho Diakonos (1965).

J.M.H. (R.B.)

Leo VI the Wise, BYZANTINE EMPEROR 886–912. His achievement in the fields of administration and law is considerable, and in politics his work has probably been underestimated. His fourth marriage violated ecclesiastical canons and caused a rift in the Byzantine Church. Leo was educated by Photius* and was brought up in the atmosphere of the Amorian and Macedonian renaissances. He wrote sermons, astrological and theological works as well as secular and ecclesiastical poetry. Tradition ascribes to him the Oracula Leonis. He also issued a number of laws or novels, and the legal code, the Basilics, was completed in his reign. The Proble-mata was a youthful work based on the so-called pseudo-Maurice*. The Tactica is a military handbook drawing largely on earlier writers and again particularly the pseudo-Maurice. Some of Leo's work is still unpublished.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CVII (1863; with Lat. tr.); Problemata (ed. A. Dain, 1935); Tactica (ed. R. Vári, 2 vols, Budapest, 1917–22); L'Extrait Tactique (ed. A. Dain, 1942); Naumachica (ed. idem, 1943); Sylloge tacticorum (ed. idem, 1938); Novels (ed. with Fr. tr. P. Noailles and A. Dain, 1944).

C. Mango, 'The legend of L. the Wise' in Zbornik Radova Vizantološkog Instituta, VI (Belgrade, 1960).

J.M.H. (R.B.)

Le Pan, DOUGLAS VALENTINE (*Toronto 25 V 1914; ∞1948 Sarah Katherine Chambers), Canadian poet and novelist who occupied various high Federal Government posts (1949–59), then became Professor of English, and from 1964 to 1970 Principal of University College, Toronto.

Wounded Prince and Other Poems (1948); The Net and the Sword (1953).—The Deserter (novel; 1964).

M. Davies, 'Bird of heavenly airs' in Canad. Lit., XV (1963).

R.Su.

Lera, ÁNGEL MARÍA DE (*Baidés, Guadalajara 1912), Spanish novelist whose works show a keen sense of social concern.

Los clarines del miedo (1958); La boda (1959); Bochorno (1960); Los olvidados (1960); La trampa (1962); Hemos perdido el sol (1963); Tierra para morir (1964); Las últimas banderas (1967).

J.E.V.

Lermontov, MIKHAIL YUR'EVICH (*Moscow 2 X 1814; †Pyatigorsk 15 VI 1841), Russian poet, with distant Scottish ancestors (Learmonth). His father, an army officer and a petty landowner, married the daughter of the wealthy widow, Arsenyev, who treated her son-in-law with contempt. At the age of three Lermontov lost his mother and was brought up first in Tarkhany, the estate of his maternal grandmother, and then in Moscow. In 1830 he entered Moscow University but two years later left for St Petersburg where he finished the cadet school and obtained a commission in a Guard regiment. In spite of his dissipated life, he always found time to write poetry. Because of his biting Na smert' Pushkina ('On the Death of Pushkin'; 1837) he was sent to a line regiment in the Caucasus which was tantamount to exile. In less than a year's time he was allowed to come back to St Petersburg where he was now lionized as a new hope of Russian poetry. In 1840 he had a duel with the son of the French ambassador and historian, de Barante, and was again exiled to the Caucasus. While staying, in the summer of 1841, at the Caucasian spa, Pyatigorsk, he quarrelled with a certain Major Martynov. A duel followed in which Lermontov was killed.

In spite of his early death, Lermontov's creations during the last four years of his life were great enough to entitle him to a place second only to Pushkin*, from whom he differed however by his incurably Romantic and gloomy outlook upon the world. He was the most Byronic of all the Russian poets. Yet his rancorous Byronism was neither derivative nor posing—it was an integral part of his own complicated character, that of a frustrated idealist who felt a stranger in this world. The weakest part of his work are his juvenile plays, reminiscent of both Byron* and Schiller*. His genius reached its maturity in his later lyrics, in his two defiant narrative poems Demon and Mtsyri, and also in his masterpiece in prose Geroy nashego vremeni ('A Hero of Our Time'). The principal character of this novel—a strong but 'superfluous' and therefore frustrated enfant du siècle—is rendered with the skill of a born psychologist. Lermontov's descriptive power, too, both in verse and in prose, is matchless, no matter whether he conjures up the Caucasian scenery, the battle scenes (as in Valerik) or his impressions of nature. His lyrical poems are above all personal confessions, but at their best they are on the level of the highest poetry of Russian or any other literature.

Sochineniya (2 vols, 1847; 2nd ed. 1860, 1861); Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (4 vols, 1939, 1947–48); Sobranie sochineniy (4 vols, 1958–62); Izbrannye proizvedeniya (2 vols, 1967).—TRANSLATIONS: The Demon (trs: F. Storr, 1894; E. Richter, 1910; R. Burness, 1918; G. Shelley, 1930); A Song About Tsar Ivan Vasilyevich, His Body-Guard and the Valiant Merchant Kalashnikov (trs: E. L. Voynich, 1911; J. Cournoos, 1929); A Hero of Our Nowadays (tr. S. Phillimore, 1920); A Hero of Our Time (tr. R. Merton, 1928); A Hero of Our Own

Times (tr. E. and C. Paul, 1940); sel. poems in C. M. Bowra, A Book of Russian Verse (2 vols, 1943–47); Bela (tr. J. Domb and G. Schoenberg, 1945).

Studs and biogs of L. by: D. S. Merezhkovsky (1909); N. A. Kotlyarevsky (1912); D. N. Ovsyaniko-Kulikovsky (1914); P. E. Schegol'ev (1922); B. Eichenbaum (1924); S. Shuvalov (1927); S. V. Ivanov (1938); N. L. Brovsky (1945); I. Andronnikov (1948).—V. A. Manilov, Materialy dlya biografii Lermontova (1936); L. Y. Ginzburg, Tvorcheskiy put' Lermontova (1940); Literaturnoye nasledstvo ser. (2 vols, 1948); B. Eichenbaum, Statyi o Lermontove (1961); U. R. Fokht, Tvorchestvo Lermontova (1964); D. E. Maximov, Poeziya Lermontova (1964); Tvorchestvo M. Yu. Lermontova (1965); T. Ivanova, Posmertnaya sud'ba poeta (1967). J.L.

Lerner, LAURENCE DAVID (*Cape Town 12 XII 1925; ∞Natalie Winch), South African novelist, poet, short-story writer and critic. He left South Africa in 1949, and now teaches at the University of Sussex. An accomplished writer, with a keen eye for detail, little of his work reflects his South African background.

VERSE: Domestic Interior and Other Poems (1959); Directions of Memory (1964); Selves (1969).—NOVELS: The Englishman (1959); A Free Man (1968).—CRITICISM: The Truest Poetry (1960); The Truth-tellers (1967). U.La.

Lernet-Holenia, ALEXANDER (*Vienna 21 X 1897), Austrian writer of lyric poetry, plays, essays, stories and novels. An officer in the First World War, he returned to Austria after a long period in South America in 1939 to become an officer again. His lyric poetry was strongly influenced by Pindar*, Hölderlin* and Rilke*, his novels and comedies mainly deal with Austrian high society.

PLAYS: Demetrius (1926); Österreichische Komödie (1926); Ollapotrida (1927).—NOVELS: Ljubas Zobel (1932); Die Standarte (1935); Mars im Widder (1941); Drei Reiterromane (1963).

J. Schondorff, Österreiches Theater des XX Jahrhunderts (1961); Festschrift zum 70. Geburtstag (1967); A. Ayren, 'A. L.-H. 70 Jahre' in Neue deutsche Hefte, XIV.115 (1967). D.E.

Leroux, ÉTIENNE, pseud. of STEPHANUS PETRUS DANIEL LE ROUX (*Oudtshoorn, Cape Province 13 VI 1922; ∞1948 René de Wet Malherbe [o/o 1969], ∞Elizabeth Joubert), controversial Afrikaans novelist; trained as a lawyer, now a gentleman-farmer. The leading figure in the revival of Afrikaans prose during the 1960s, he uses Jungian concepts and archetypal patterns and is much given to experiment.

PROSE: Die Eerste Lewe van Colet (1956); Hilaria (1957); Die Mugu (1959); Sewe Dae by die

Silbersteins (1962; Seven Days at the Silbersteins, tr. Charles Eglington, 1964); Een vir Azazel (1964; One for the Devil, tr. idem, 1969); Die Derde Oog (1966. The Third Eye, tr. Amy Starke, 1969); 18-44 (1967); Isis Isis (1969).

P. J. Nienaber, Perspektief en Profiel (3rd ed. 1969); J. C. Kannemeyer, Op weg na Welgevonden (1970). N.D.C.

Leroux, GASTON (*Paris 6 V 1868; †Nice 15 IV 1927), French novelist. Following Gaboriau* and contemporaneously with Leblanc*, one of the originators of the detective story: he created a famous amateur detective, Rouletabille, who triumphed over criminals and professional policemen alike by the use of pure reason and deduction. A second series, based on the activities of an 'old lag' Chéri-Bibi, descends into facile melodrama. Many of his books have been translated into English.

Rouletabille (1907); Le mystère de la chambre jaune (1908); Le parfum de la dame en noir (1909); Chéri-Bibi (1914).—Hommage à G. L. (1954).

Ellery Queen, Queen's Quorum (1948). M.G.

Le Roy, GRÉGOIRE (*Ghent 7 XI 1862; †Ixelles 1941), Belgian poet, Jeune Belgique. A gentle melancholy, transparent symbolism and delicate lyricism characterize the work of this school-fellow of Maeterlinck* and devotee of Verhaeren*, who abandoned law for literature.

Chanson d'un soir (1889); Mon cœur pleure d'autrefois (1889); Chanson de pauvre (1907); Le rouet et la besace (1912); L'ombre sur la ville (1935); La nuit sans étoiles (1940).

V. Mallinson, Modern Belgian Literature 1830-1960 (1966). B.M.W. (J.C.D.)

Lesage, ALAIN RENÉ (*Sarzeau, Morbihan 8 V 1668; ∞ 1694 Marie-Elisabeth Huyard; †Boulogne 17 XI 1747), French novelist and dramatist. Of middle-class stock, Lesage produced his large literary output while leading an uneventful family life in Paris. He began with adaptations of Spanish comedies before writing Turcaret (1709; ed. F. Guirand, 1938), a bold satire in Molière's* vein on the shady financier. Refused further productions by the Comédie Française, he turned to the small popular theatres of the Paris fairs, for which he wrote about 100 farces alone or in collaboration. The basis of his novels is Spanish. His first success, Le Diable boiteux (1707; ed. R. Étiemble in Romanciers du XVIIIe siècle, 1960), was modelled freely on Luis Vélez* de Guevara's El diablo cojuelo (1641). All his other novels have Spanish sources or themes. However, he transforms and transcends his material. His masterpiece, Gil Blas, though in appearance a Spanish picaresque novel, can be attached to no one original, and the manners and characters of which it is a lively satire are French, as is the style.

NOVELS: Gil Blas de Santillane, I-II (1715), III (1724), IV (1735; ed. M. Bardon, 2 vols, 1942); Guzman d'Alfarache (1732); Les Aventures de M. Robert Chevalier (1732); Estebanille Gonzalès (1734); Le Bachelier de Salamanque (1736).—PLAYS: Crispin rival de son maître (1707); other plays in Théâtre de la Foire (1721-37); Théâtre (Garnier, 1911).—Œuvres complètes (12 vols, 1821).

H. Cordier, Essai bibliographique sur les œuvres de L. (1910); E. Lintilhac, L. (1893); C. Dédéyan, A.-R. L.: 'Gil Blas' (1956); M. Spaziani, Il teatro minore di L. (Rome, 1957). G.B.

Lescailje, KATHARINA (*Amsterdam 26 IX 1649; †ibid. 8 VI 1711), Dutch poet, who continued her father's bookshop and printing office, wrote and translated plays and fluid traditional verse.

PLAYS: Kassandra (1684); Ariadne (1693).—Mengel- en tooneelpoëzie (verse; 3 vols, 1731).

Levens van enige voornaame Nederlandsche mannen en vrouwen, I (1777). J.W.W.

Leshenkov, SERGEY ANTONOVICH: see Klychkov, SERGEY.

Leskov, NIKOLAY SEMĖNOVICH (*Gorokhovo 4 II 1831; †St Petersburg 21 II 1895), Russian author. The employment he held in his youth made him travel all over Russia, but in 1861 he settled in St Petersburg. In his two novels, Nekuda (1864) and Na nozhakh (1871), he turned against the ultra-radicals of the 1860s, although Nekuda was a diagnosis rather than an indictment. The two novels were denounced as reactionary and their failure made him shift to the chronicle-type of narrative, an excellent example of which he gave in Soboryane (1872). He also turned to several other genres: documentary anecdotes, impressions, recollections, legends, and particularly the stylized picaresque SKAZ, a story told by a lower middle-class person with the preservation of his accent and all the peculiarities of his language. Leskov's best example of the skaz-type are: Levsha, Zapechatlenny Angel, Ocharovanny strannik and Zayachiy remiz. His tense, full-blooded narrative, Lady Macbeth mtsenskogo uyezda (1865), is the basis of Shostakovich's opera of the same name (Eng. tit. Katerina Ismailova). Leskov introduced into his works all the social strata of his nation: landowners, serfs, peasants, artisans, intellectuals, merchants, officials and the clergy. In all this he showed his exceptional feeling for the language, his healthy optimism, his love of Russia and of the Russian people. Gorky* once referred to him as the 'most truly Russian of all the Russian writers'. Although appreciation of Leskov's work came late, he influenced a number of Russian modernists (Remizov*, Zamyatin*, Bely*) and, through them, several Soviet writers, beginning with Zoshchenko*.

Sobranie sochineniy (36 vols, 1902-03); Pis'ma I. S. Leskova (1928); Ocharovanny strannik (1932); Sobranie sochineniy (11 vols, 1956-58).—The Tales of Leskov (tr. R. Norman, 1944 ff.).—The Cathedral Folk (tr. I. F. Hapgood, 1924); The Enchanted Pilgrim (tr. D. Magarshack, 1946); The Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk District (tr. W. Morison in Representative Russian Stories, 1946); The Amazon and Other Stories (tr. D. Magarshack, 1949, 1962).

B. M. Drugov, N. S. L. (1961); M. Goryachkina, Satira Leskova (1963); N. S. Pleshchunov, Romany Leskova 'Nekuda' i 'Soboryane' (1963). J.L.

Leśmian, BOLESŁAW, pseud. of B. LESMAN (*Warsaw 12 I 1879; †ibid. 5 XI 1937), Polish poet and translator. A lawyer and registrar, he entered the Polish academy of literature in 1933. In his few volumes of poetry, there is a mixture of romantic lyricism, folk-song, philosophy and an unrealistic imagination. He published several works in Chimera and had a great influence on some of the 'Skamander' group of poets, especially Tuwim*. He is now considered one of the most original 20th-century poets. His erotic poetry is especially noteworthy.

VERSE: Sad rozstajny (1912); Ląka (1920); Napój cienisty (1936); Dzieńba leśna (1938).—Wzór poezji (1946); Poezje (ed. J. Trznadel, 1965).

O. Forst de Battaglia, 'B. L.' in Pologne Littéraire, VI (1927); Wiadomości Literackie, XLVIII (1937; entire issue is devoted to B. L.); A. Szczerbowski, B. L. (1938); J. Trznadel, Twórczość L. (1964); Studia o L. (ed. M. Głowiński and J. Sławiński, 1971). S.S. (P.H.)

Lessing, GOTTHOLD EPHRAIM (*Kamenz 22 I 1729; †Brunswick 15 II 1781), German critic and dramatist. Son of a Protestant pastor, Lessing was educated at the Fürstenschule, Meissen, and at Leipzig University. In 1749 he settled in Berlin as a journalist. His controversy with S. G. Lange*, culminating in Lessing's Vademecum, first made him famous, and Miss Sara Sampson (1755), the first domestic tragedy ('bürgerliches Trauerspiel') in Germany, enjoyed great success in 1755. In 1759 he wrote the brilliant series of critical letters (Literaturbriefe), of which the 17th, demolishing Gottsched's* reputation, is especially famous. From 1760 to 1765 Lessing was secretary to General Tauentzien in Breslau, employing his leisure in classical studies, which led to Laokoon (1766). In this Lessing attacked Winckelmann's* views, tracing the differences between the arts to the differences in their media. In 1767 Lessing became house critic to the Hamburg Theatre, combating in Die Hamburgische Dramaturgie (1767-68) the French drama and recording his interpretation of Aristotle's* Poetics. In 1770 he became librarian at Wolfenbüttel. In 1776 he married Eva König, who died in childbirth in 1778.

In 1778/79 Lessing attacked the Lutheran belief in the infallibility of Scripture. Silenced by decree, he wrote his noble plea for tolerance, Nathan der Weise (1779).

Lessing, the first figure of European stature in modern German literature, furthered the German theatre by theoretical writing and by his plays, clarified aesthetic thought, and fought tenaciously for truth, combining penetrating intellect, shrewd common-sense and an upright character.

TRAGEDIES: Philotas (1759); Emilia Galotti (1772).—COMEDIES: Der junge Gelehrte (1747); Der Freigeist (1749); Die Juden (1749); Minna von Barnhelm (1767).—CRITICAL: Beiträge zur Historie und Aufnahme des Theaters (1750); Vademecum für den Herrn S. G. Lange (1754); Briefe, die neueste Litteratur betreffend (1759); Abhandlungen über die Fabel (1759).—RELIGIOUS: Rettungen (1754); Berengarius Turonensis (1770); Ein Mehreres aus den Papieren eines Ungenannten (1777); Über den Beweis des Geistes und der Kraft (1777); Eine Duplik (1778); Eine Parabel (1778); Anti-Goeze (1778); Die Erziehung des Menschengeschlechts (1780).—VARIOUS: Briefe antiquarischen Inhalts (1768-69); Wie die Alten den Tod gebildet (1769).—Sämtliche Werke (30 vols, 1791-94; ed. K. Lachmann and F. Muncker, 24 vols, 1886-1924; ed. J. Petersen, 25 vols, 1925); Gesammelte Werke (ed. P. Rilla, 10 vols, 1954-58).—Laocoon, Nathan, Minna (tr. W. A. Steel, 1930).

K. G. Lessing [his brother], G. E. L.s Leben (3 vols, 1793-95); E. Schmidt, L. (2 vols, 1884-92); G. Kettner, L.s Dramen (1904); W. Dilthey, 'L.' in Das Erlebnis und die Dichtung (1905); R. Petsch, L.s Faustdichtung (1911); W. Oehlke, L. und seine Zeit (2 vols, 1919); C. Schrempf, L. als Philosoph (1921); G. Fittbogen, Die Religion L.s (1923); H. Leisegang, L.s Weltanschauung (1931); A. M. Wagner, L. (1931); B. von Wiese, L. (1931); H. B. Garland, L.: The Founder of Modern German Literature (1937, 1962); O. Mann, L. (1948) and L. (1961); H. Schneider, L.: Zwölf biographische Studien (1951); P. Rilla, L. (1960); W. Drews, L. (1962). H.B.G.

L'Estrange, SIR ROGER (*Hunstanton 17 XII 1616; †London 11 XII 1704), English journalist, pamphleteer and translator in verse and prose, and an accomplished musician. A Royalist who suffered imprisonment (1644-48) and fled to Holland, returning in 1651, L'Estrange became 'surveyor of the imprimery' (censor) in 1663. Fleeing to Holland again (1677), he published The Observer after his return (1681), and became M.P. for Winchester (III 1684/85). His translations of Aesop's Fables (2 pts, 1692-99) and The Visions of Don Francisco de Quevedo (1667; ed. J. M. Cohen, 1963) were popular. A man of swift and fluent ability, he impressed contemporaries with wit and competence.

An Account of the Growth of Knavery (1677);

Five Love Letters from a Nun to a Cavalier (1678); Twenty Select Colloques out of Erasmus Roterodamus (1680; ed. C. Whibley, 1923); Citt and Bumpkin (2 pts, 1680; I, ed. B. J. Rahn, 1965).

G. Kitchin, Sir R. L'E.: a Contribution to the History of the Press in the 17th Century (1913); C. Whibley in Literary Studies (1919). R.M.W.

Leti, GREGORIO (*Milan 29 V 1630; ∞1675 Maria Guérin; †Amsterdam 9 VI 1701), Italian polygraph, 'an adventurer in the realm of literature'. He wrote scores of political and historical works, often forging, plagiarizing, lying; more often displaying his biting wit and power of observation.

Dialoghi Politici (Geneva, 1666); Vita di Sisto V (Lausanne, 1669; The life of Pope Sixtus the Fifth, tr. E. Farnsworth, 1754); Teatro Britannico (Amsterdam, 5 vols, 1684); Amours de Messaline (Cologne, 1689); Vita di Elisabetta, Regina d'Inghilterra (Amsterdam, 2 vols, 1692); Historia e memorie recondite sopra la vita di O. Cromwell (ibid., 2 vols, 1692).

A. Cameroni, Uno scrittore avventuriero del sec. XVII, G. L. (1894); L. Fassò, Avventurieri della penna nel seicento (1923); G. Spini, 'Il viaggio di G. L.' in Ricerca dei libertini (1950); V. Gabrieli, 'G. L.: disavventure di un avventuriero' in Nuova Antologia (1953). U.L.

Leto, POMPONIO GIULIO (*Teggiano nel Cilento 1428; †Rome 1497), Italian humanist, founder of the Accademia Romana (or Pomponiana). A fanatic of the cult of ancient Rome, Leto spoke only Latin and worshipped at an altar sacred to Romulus.

V. Zabughin, G. P. L. (3 vols, 1909-12); R. Sabbadini in Giornale storico della lett. ital., LX (1912); C. Dionisotti, ibid., CX (1937); A. Lesen, 'P. L. sabino' in Convivium, III (1931). B.R.

Letteris, MEIR HALEVY or MAX (*Zolkiev, Galicia 30 VIII 1800; †Vienna 19 V 1871), Hebrew poet and translator. Among his many works may be mentioned Tofes Kinor Ve-Ugav (Vienna, 1860), Moshe al Har Nebo and Jona Homla (1860). He translated from the French, German and English. S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Leucippus of MILETUS (5th century B.C.), Greek philosopher. He was the originator of the atomic theory which was developed by Democritus*. D.J.F.

Lever, CHARLES JAMES (*Dublin 31 VIII 1806; ∞c. 1833 Kate Baker; †Trieste 1 VI 1872), Irish novelist. Educated Trinity College, Dublin, and in Germany; practised medicine in various parts of Ireland; edited Dublin University Magazine 1842-1845; held British consular appointments in Spezia and Trieste. His early novels were slapdash and rollicking (satirized by Thackeray* in Phil Fogarty); his later show more careful craftsmanship. Uneven in quality, his work contains many authentic pictures of post-Napoleonic Ireland and Europe.

Harry Lorrequer (1837); Charles O'Malley (1840); Jack Hinton (1843); Tom Burke of Ours (1844); Arthur O'Leary (1844); The Knight of Gwynne (1847); The Martins of Cro' Martin (1850); The Dodd Family Abroad (1853-54); A Day's Ride (1863).

W. J. Fitzpatrick, Life and Letters of L. (1879); L. Stevenson, Doctor Quicksilver (1939).

R.McH.

Le Verrier, JEAN: see Boutier, PIERRE.

Levertin, OSCAR IVAR (*Gryt 17 VII 1862; †Stockholm 22 IX 1906), Swedish author. Of Jewish parentage, Levertin became lecturer in literature at Uppsala in 1889. Threatened with tuberculosis, he went to Davos shortly afterwards and there associated with Heidenstam*, with whom he collaborated in the anti-Naturalist manifesto, Pepitas Bröllop (1890). The loss of his first wife (1889), together with Heidenstam's influence, set free Levertin's poetic gifts (he had already written prose works in a Naturalist vein), which tended to deal, in sombre but beautiful lines, with life's transience. His extremely wide culture is reflected in his prose essays, stories and novels. He became Professor at Stockholms Högskola in 1899, and from 1897 he acted as critic to Svenska Dagbladet, exerting considerable influence on Swedish taste.

STORIES: Småmynt (1883); Konflikter (1885); Rocconoveller (1899); Magistrarna i Österås (1900).—VERSE: Legender och visor (1891); Nya dikter (1894); Kung Salomo och Morolf (1905).—ESSAYS: Teater och drama under Gustav III (1889); Från Gustav III:s dagar (1896); Diktare och drömmare (1898); Svenska gestalter (1903).—Samlade skrifter (ed. A. Lundegård and E. Levertin, 24 vols, 1907-12).

D. Sprengel, O. L. (1907; rev. ed. 1918); W. Söderhjelm, O. L. (2 vols, 1914-17); F. Böök, O. L. (1944); C. Fehrman, Levertins lyrik (1945); A. Levertin, Den unge L., minnen och brev (1947); B. Julén, Hjärtats landsflyckt (1962).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Levi, CARLO (*Turin 29 XI 1902), Italian novelist, essayist and painter. Levi's reputation as a writer rests mainly on his famous Cristo si è fermato a Eboli (1945; Christ Stopped at Eboli, tr. F. Frenaye, 1948), an autobiographical account of life in the remote and primitive south Italian province of Lucania, where he was confined for his anti-Fascism in 1935-36. It is a book of great humanity, brilliantly written. His other works have been relatively less successful.

Paura della libertà (wr. 1936; pub. 1947; Of Fear and Freedom, tr. A. Gourevitch, 1950);

L'orologio (1950; The Watch, tr. J. Farrar, 1952); Le parole sono pietre (1955). J.F.C. (B.M.)

Levi ben Gerson: see Gersonides.

Levin, JUDAH LEIB: see Yehahal.

Lévi-Strauss, CLAUDE (*Brussels 28 XI 1908), French ethnologist and philosopher; Professor at the University of São Paulo, and since 1959 at the Collège de France. Lévi-Strauss has stimulated contemporary sociological thought with his studies on social anthropology. Tristes tropiques (1955; A World on the Wane, tr. J. Russell, 1961), which goes beyond his own field and emerges as a genuine philosophy of the evolution of man, earned him lasting respect in the intellectual world. Influenced by the linguistic methods used by Ferdinand de Saussure, Lévi-Strauss is one of the principal exponents of structuralism as applied to the social sciences.

Les structures élémentaires de la parenté (1940; Eng. tr. J. H. Bell et al., 1968); Race et histoire (1952); Anthropologie structurale (1958; Eng. tr. C. Jacobson and B. G. Schoepf, 1963); La pensée sauvage (1962; Eng. tr. 1966); Le totémisme d'aujourd'hui (1962; Totemism, tr. R. Needham, 1964); Le cru et le cuit (1964); Du miel aux cendres (1966); L'origine des manières de table (1968); L'homme nu (1971).

G. Charbonnier, Entretiens avec L.-S. (1961; Eng. tr. J. D. Weightman, 1969); L'Arc, XXXVI (special no.; 1965); C. Leach, 'C. L.-S.—anthropologist and philosopher' in New Left Rev., XXXIV (1965); G. Steiner, 'A conversation with C. L.-S.' in Encounter, XXVI.4 (1966); S. Sontag, Against Interpretation (1967); Y. Simonis, C. L.-S. ou la passion de l'inceste (1968). M.G.

Levita: see Bachur, ELIJAH.

Levitov, ALEXANDER IVANOVICH (*Tambov province 20 VI 1835; †Moscow 4 I 1877), Russian 'populist' author of humble origin. In his stories he describes not only abject poverty—especially in his Stepnye ocherki (1875)—but also tramps, pilgrims and homeless wanderers, often in a strong satirical vein.

Sobranie sochineniy (8 vols, 1911); Izbrannyye sochineniya (2 vols, 1932–33); Sochineniya (1 vol., 1956).

I. V. Vladislavlev, Russkie pisateli (1924); A. Ya. Silayev, Liry zvon kandal'ny (1963). J.L.

Levshin, VASILY ALEXEYEVICH (*1746; †1826), Russian author. He wrote on a great variety of subjects but became best known by some of his plays, which appeared in his Trudy (1796).

V. B. Shklovsky, Chulkov i L. (1933). J.L.

Levstik, FRAN (*Spodnje Retje, Kranj province 28 IX 1831; †Ljubljana 16 XI 1887), Slovene poet, story-writer, critic and theoretician; his treatment of traditional and domestic themes provides classic exemplars of realism. In his collection of poems Pesmi ('Songs'; 1854), his essay Popotovanje iz Litije do Cateža ('Journey From L. to C.'; 1858), his story Martin Krpan (1858), his cycles of love poems Tonine pesmi ('Songs for Toni'; 1858) and Franjine pesmi ('Songs for Frances'; 1870), his Otročje igri v pesenah ('Children's Games in Song'; 1880–86) and his critical and polemical writings, Levstik conceived works which, while presenting the peasant's world or inspired by it, would also express general human problems in a synthesis of rationalistic and classical realism.

Zbrano delo (coll. works; 9 vols, incomplete, 1948–61).

A. Slodnjak, 'F. L. (1831–87), the first representative of realism in Slovene literature' in Slavon. and East Eur. Rev., XXXV (1956); B. Paternu, Estetske osnove Love literarne kritike (1962).

A.S. (tr. H.Le.)

Lewes, GEORGE HENRY (*London 18 IV 1817; †1840 Agnes Jervis; †ibid. 28 XI 1878), English man of letters. He lived with George Eliot* from 1854 until his death. Brilliantly versatile, a born popularizer, Lewes familiarized English readers with Comte* and Spinoza*, wrote scientific articles, novels, a standard Life of Goethe (2 vols, 1855) and dramatic criticism that remains of interest. R.F.

NOVELS: Ranthorpe (1847); Rose, Blanche and Violet (3 vols, 1848).—DRAMATIC CRITICISM: The Spanish Drama (1846); On Actors and the Art of Acting (1875); Dramatic Essays reprinted from The Examiner (ed. W. Archer and R. Lowe, 1896).—PHILOSOPHY: Biographical History of Philosophy (4 vols, 1845–46); Comte's Philosophy of the Sciences (1853); Problems of Life and Mind (5 vols, 1874–79).

A. T. Kitchel, G. L. and George Eliot (1934); A. R. Kaminsky, G. H. L. as Literary Critic (1968). R.F. (M.A.)

Lewis, ALUN (*Aberdare, Glam. 1 VII 1915; †1941 Gweno Ellis; †Burma 5 III 1944), Anglo-Welsh poet and short-story writer. A writer of promise, whose career was tragically cut short by the war. An early story, 'The Wanderers', shows imaginative power not afterwards surpassed.

Raiders' Dawn (1941); The Last Inspection (1942); Ha! Ha! Among the Trumpets (1945); Letters From India (1946); In the Green Tree (1948).—Selected Poetry and Prose (with biog. intro. Ian Hamilton, 1966).

J. S. Williams, 'The poetry of A. L.' and 'The short stories of A. L.' in Anglo-Welsh Rev., XIV (1964–65) and 'The poetry of A. L.' in Poetry

Wales, II (1966); Brynmor Jones, 'A. L.' in Bibliography of Anglo-Welsh Literature, III (1968); B. Chamberlain, A. L. and the Making of the Case of Broadsheets (1970); J. Davies, 'The poetry of darkness: A. L.'s Indian experience' in Anglo-Welsh Rev., XIX.43 (1970). C.P. (M.W.T.)

Lewis, CECIL DAY (*Ballintogher, Ireland 27 IV 1904; ∞1928 Constance Mary King [o/o 1951], ∞1951 Jill A. H. Balcon; †Hadley Wood, Herts 22 V 1972), English poet and critic. In the 1930s his name was often associated with Auden* and Spender* among the innovating 'modern poets', though in essence he was nearer to the traditional than they. He was appointed poet laureate in 1968. As NICHOLAS BLAKE he wrote detective novels.

Collected Poems 1929-53 (1954); Pegasus (1957); The Gate (1962); The Whispering Roots (1970).—VERSE TRANSLATION: The Georgics of Virgil (1941); The Aeneid (1952); The Eclogues (1963).—CRITICISM: A Hope for Poetry (1934); The Poetic Image (1947); The Lyric Impulse (1965).—NOVELS: The Friendly Tree (1936); Child of Misfortune (1939).—The Buried Day (autobiog.; 1960).

Biblio. by G. Handley-Taylor and T. d'A. Smith (1968). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Lewis, CLIVE STAPLES (*Belfast 29 XI 1898; ∞1956 Mrs Joy Gresham; †Oxford 22 XI 1963), English writer, Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford. His writings embrace a study of courtly love, essays in Christian ethics, novels which combine imagination and fancy, poetry medieval and modern, fantasies for children and the 16th-century volume of the Oxford History of English Literature (1954). The boundary between his novels and his writings on ethics is not sharply defined.

The Allegory of Love (1936); Studies in Words (1960); An Experiment in Criticism (1961); The Discarded Image (1964); Studies in Medieval and Renaissance Literature (1966).—NOVELS: The Pilgrim's Regress (1933); Out of the Silent Planet (1938); Perelandra (1943); as Voyage to Venus, 1953; That Hideous Strength (1945).—ETHICS: The Problem of Pain (1940); The Screwtape Letters (1942); Miracles (1947); Mere Christianity (1952); The Four Loves (1960).—Surprised by Joy (autobiog.; 1955).—Poems (1964); Narrative Poems (ed. W. Hooper, 1969).—Letters (ed. W. H. Lewis, 1966).—CHILDREN'S BOOKS: The Chronicles of Narnia: The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe (1950), Prince Caspian (1951), The Voyage of the Dawn Treader (1952), The Silver Chair (1953), The Horse and His Boy (1954), The Magician's Nephew (1955), The Last Battle (1956).

R. L. Green, C. S. L. (1963); Light on C. S. L. (ed. J. Gibb, 1965). H.An. (W.R.A.)

Lewis, ETHELREDA (*England; ∞Joseph Lewis; †Port Alfred, Cape Province 31 VII 1946), South African novelist. Mrs Lewis was the author of three novels before she won popularity by editing the reminiscences of A. A. SMITH ('Trader Horn') (1851-1931). To avoid confusion between Smith's reminiscences and her own work she adopted the pseudonym 'R. Hernekin Baptist', under which she wrote four novels on African problems. Wild Deer (1933) is the most cogent of these.

NOVELS: The Harp (1925); The Flying Emerald (1925); Mantis (1926); Four Handsome Negresses (1931); A Cargo of Parrots (1938); Love at the Mission (1938).—The Life and Works of Alfred Aloysius Horn, an Old Visitor (biog.; 3 vols, 1927-29). E.R.S.

Lewis, (HARRY) SINCLAIR (*Sauk Center, Minn. 7 II 1885; ∞1914 Grace Hegger, ∞1928 Dorothy Thompson; †Rome 10 I 1951), American novelist. After six minor novels he gained wide notice with Main Street (1920), which depicts the emptiness and conformity of Mid-Western small-town life. In his many novels Lewis attacks the middle class of industrialized America for its herd instincts, its worship of streamlined conveniences, its shallow and meaningless idealism. Babbitt (1922) satirizes the average businessman of a growing city; Arrowsmith (1925) shows the difficulties of a scientist in the face of commercial medical interests; Elmer Gantry (1927), set in Kansas City, is a savage attack on the hypocrisy of commercially exploited evangelical religion. Lewis was the first American to win the Nobel prize for distinction in world literature (1930).

The Job (1917); Mantrap (1926); The Man Who Knew Coolidge (1928); Dodsworth (1929); Ann Vickers (1933); Work of Art (1934); Selected Short Stories (1935); It Can't Happen Here (1935); Bethel Merriiday (1940); Gideon Planish (1943); Cass Timberlane (1945); Kingsblood Royal (1947).

Mark Schorer, S. L.: An American Life (1961); S. N. Grebstein, S. L. (1962).

H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

Lewis, MATTHEW GREGORY, 'MONK LEWIS' (*London 9 VII 1775; †at sea 14 V 1818), English novelist, dramatist and translator. A diplomat who wrote novels of terror. B.H.

NOVELS: The Monk (3 vols, 1796); Romantic Tales (4 vols, 1808).—PLAYS: The Castle Spectre (1798); The East Indian (1800).—Journal of a West Indian Proprietor (1834).

E. Birkhead, The Tale of Terror (1921); A. Parreaux, The Publication of The Monk (1960); L. F. Peck, A Life of M. G. L. (1961).

B.H. (M.Bu.)

Lewis, MERIWETHER (*Albermarle Co., Va. 18 VIII 1774; †Tennessee 11 X 1809), American explorer. Private secretary to President Jefferson*, he led the expedition overland to the Pacific. His record of misfortunes and final success makes one of the great travel narratives. H.L.C.

History of the Expedition Under the Command of Captains Lewis and Clark to the Sources of the Missouri . . . (ed. P. Allen, 1814); Original Journals of the Lewis and Clark Expedition, 1804-1806 . . . (ed. R. G. Thwaites, 8 vols, 1904-05).

J. Mirsky, The Westward Crossings: Balboa, Mackenzie, L. and Clark (1946); R. H. Dillon, M. L.: A Biography (1965). H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Lewis, SAUNDERS (*Wallasey 15 X 1893; ∞1924 Margaret Gilchrist), Welsh poet, dramatist, journalist and critic; lecturer in the University College of Swansea (1923-36) and at Cardiff (1951-57). His brilliant historical studies reveal a wide culture and throw much new light upon the Welsh literary tradition. As president of the Welsh Nationalist Party during its formative period he wrote numerous political essays and his later weekly articles (in the late 1930s and 1940s) were an outstanding contribution to Welsh journalism. In 1933 he became a Roman Catholic. His plays and his two short novels deal imaginatively with fundamental themes: sacrificial loyalty, and love and marriage. His poems include biting satires and poems of praise.

Gwaed yr Uchelwyr (1922); Williams Pantycelyn (1927); Ceiriog (1929); Monica (1930); Ieuan Glan Geirionydd (1931); Braslun o Hanes Llennyddiaeth Gymraeg, I (1932); Daniel Owen (1936); Buchedd Garmon (1937); Canlyn Arthur (1938); Amllyn ac Amig (1940); Byd a Betws (1941); Straeon Glasynys (1943); Ysgrifau Dydd Mercher (1945); Blodeuwedd (1948); Dwy Gomed (1952); Siwan (1955); 'Gymerwch Chi Sigaret? (1956); Brad (1958); Esther a Serch yw'r Doctor (1960); Merch Gwern Hywel (1964); Cymru Fydd (1967); Problemau Prifysgol (1968).

S. L. (ed. P. Davies, 1950); J. Rowlands, 'Nofelau S. L.' in Ysgrifau Beirniadol, V (ed. J. E. C. Williams, 1970). B.Re.

Lewis, WYNDHAM (*on a ship in the Bay of Fundy 18 XI 1882; ∞1929 Anne Hoskyns; †London 7 III 1957), English author and artist. In 1914 he challenged the Futurists by starting 'Vorticism'. Powerful, original, provocative in writing as in painting, merciless in criticism of automatism and sentimentalism, he is highly inventive as a creator, and intellectual if eccentric in his judgement of society. His very remarkable style is muscular and direct.

NOVELS: Tarr (1918); The Childermass (1928; Pt 1 of The Human Age); The Apes of God (1930); The Revenge for Love (1937); The Human Age, Pts 2 and 3 (Monstre Gai, Malign Fiesta; 1955).—Rotting Hill (stories; 1951).—One Way Song (verse; 1933).—VARIOUS: The Art of Being Ruled (1926); Time and Western Man (1927); The Lion and the Fox (1927); Men Without Art (1934); The Writer and the Absolute (1952).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Blasting and Bombardiering (1937); Rude Assign- ment (1950).—Letters (ed. W. K. Rose, 1963).—W. L.: An Anthology of His Prose (ed. E. W. F. Tomlin, 1969).

H. Kenner, W. L. (1954); G. Wagner, W. L.: A Portrait of the Artist as the Enemy (1957).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Leyden, JOHN (*Denholm 8 IX 1775; †Batavia 27 VIII 1811), Scottish poet and Orientalist. A shepherd's son, Leyden was educated at Edinburgh University and licensed to preach in 1798. He assisted Scott* in collecting materials for the Border Minstrelsy. He worked as surgeon and naturalist in India, was Professor at Bengal and a judge; he died of fever while acting as interpreter in Java to Lord Minto. Leyden was a good ballad poet; he knew more than 30 languages and translated the Gospels into five. His character and learning are celebrated in Lockhart's* Life of Scott.

Discoveries of Europeans in Africa (1799); contrib. to M. G. Lewis, Tales of Wonder (1801); Scenes of Infancy (1803); ed., Scottish Descriptive Poems (1803); Malay Annals (1821); Memoirs of Baber (1826).—Poetical Works (ed. T. Brown, 1875).

W. Scott in Edinburgh Annual Register (1811); J. Reith, Life (1923). J.K.

Leyeles, A., pseud. of AARON GLANZ (*Vloclavek 1889; †New York 1966), Yiddish poet and critic. He left Poland in 1905, and after three years studying in London settled in New York (1909). He was co-founder of the journal In-zikh, the literary forum of the 'introspective movement' in Yiddish poetry. His plays, Shloime Molcho (1926), Osher Lamdan (1928) and Stalin un Trotsky (1928), form a Messianic trilogy.

VERSE: Labyrinth (1918); Yoong harbst (Warsaw, 1922); A Yid oif'n Yam (1930); Tsu Dir, Amerike (1934); Fabius Lind (1937).—Ziger un bazigte (play; 1931).—Velt un wort (essays; 1958).—Sel. poems and plays in Heb. tr. (Jerusalem, 1960). J.S.

Leykin or Leikin, NIKOLAY ALEXANDROVICH (*St Petersburg 1841; †ibid. 1906), Russian author of countless humorous-satirical sketches and narratives, many of which deal with the merchant life in Moscow. He also wrote several novels. In the 1880s he was editor of Oskolki ('Fragments') in which Anton Chekhov* started his literary career.

L. Myshkovsky, Chekhov i russkie yumoristicheskie zhurnaly 80-kh godov (1926). J.L.

Lezama Lima, José (*1912), Cuban poet and novelist who founded a number of literary magazines, notably Orígenes. His poetry is personal and hermetic; his masterpiece the novel Paradiso (1966), written in baroque prose and evoking, primarily through sensations and intellectual experiences, the life of Havana from the beginning of the century to the 1920s.

Dador (1960); La expresión americana (Madrid, 1969).—Órbita de L. L. (ed. Armando Álvarez Bravo, 1966). J.F.

Lhérisson, JUSTIN: see HAITIAN LITERATURE.

L'Hermite, FRANÇOIS [or TRISTAN]: see TRISTAN l'Hermite.

L'Hôpital, MICHEL DE (*1507; †1573), French statesman, lawyer and author. In 1554 he was appointed superintendent of finances and in 1560 Chancellor of France, but his efforts to promote a peaceful solution of religious controversies and to discourage persecution caused his disgrace (1568).

La Harangue faite par Monsieur le chancelier de France le treiziesme jour de janvier 1560; Discours de la pacification des troubles de l'an 1567; Epistolarum seu sermonum lib. VI (1585).—Œuvres complètes (ed. P.-J.-S. Dufey, 5 vols, 1824-26).

E. Dupré-Lasale, M. de l'H. avant son élévation au poste de chancelier de France (2 vols, 1875-99); A. Buisson, M. de l'H. (1950). E.V.

LI CH'ANG-CH'Ī, courtesy name of LI CHÊN (□Lu-ling 1376; †1452), Chinese short-story writer, had a fairly successful official career. He took part in the compilation of the great encyclopaedia Yung-lo ta-tien (1407) and later became a provincial commissioner. Chien-têng yü-hua, modelled on Ch'ü* Yu's earlier collection, is his best-known surviving work.

Chien-têng yü-hua (1420; 5 stories tr. in W. Bauer and H. Franke, Die goldene Truhe, 1959; The Golden Casket, tr. C. Levenson, 1965).

H. Franke, 'Zur Novellistik der frühen Ming-Zeit' in Zeitschrift der deutschen morgenländischen Gesellschaft, CIX (1959). A.R.D.

LI CHIH (*Ch'üan-chou 23 XI 1527; †Peking 6 V 1602), Chinese scholar. His open revolt against tradition finally cost him his life. He became attracted by Buddhism and in 1588 went to live in a Buddhist monastery. In his writings he attacked orthodox Confucianism (though not Confucius*), often with great vehemence. Equally unorthodox was his study of novels (considered vulgar by Confucians) and drama. He produced important editions of Shui-hu chuan and other works. Although his writings were officially destroyed after his death, many have survived.

Fên-shu (1590); Ts'ang-shu (1597); Hsü fên-shu; Hsü ts'ang-shu.

O. Franke, 'Li Tschī; Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der chinesischen Geisteskämpfe im 16. Jh.' in Abhandlungen der Preussischen Akad. der Wissenschaft (1937) and 'Li Tschī und Matteo Ricci', ibid. (1938); R. G. Irwin, The Evolution of a Chinese Novel (1953); W. T. de Bary, 'Individualism and humanitarianism in late Ming thought' in Self and Society in Ming Thought (1970).

A.R.D.

LI CHIH-CH'ANG (*1193; †1278), Chinese writer, became a disciple of Ch'ang-ch'un, the head of the Taoist Ch'üan-chên sect, in 1218 and, when his master was invited by Genghis Khan, accompanied him on his 'journey to the West' (1220-24) which he recorded. The book is an important source for Mongol history. He was head of the Ch'üan-chên sect, 1238-56.

Hsi-yu chi (1228; The Travels of an Alchemist, tr. A. Waley, 1931). A.R.D.

LI CH'ING-CHAO (*Chi-nan 1084; †1151-56), Chinese woman writer. The daughter of literary parents, she shared her husband's interest in collecting books, paintings, bronzes and stone inscriptions of which he made a notable collection (mostly lost with the fall of North China in 1127). Two years later her husband died. Only a small amount of her writings, notably about 50 tz'ü-poems, have survived, but these give her claim to be China's greatest woman poet.

Shu-yü tz'ü (37 poems tr. in Hu Pin-ching, Li Ch'ing-chao, 1966). A.R.D.

LI HO (*791; †817), Chinese poet. Li, who was a descendant of the T'ang imperial house, is reputed to have begun writing poetry at the age of six. His work stands at the beginning of the shift of T'ang poetry towards the aestheticism which dominated it in the 9th century. But though critics have rightly styled him the 'ghostly genius' for his strange themes and imagery, poems of political satire are also found in his collection.

Li Ch'ang-chi ko shih (coll. poems; The Poems of Li Ho, tr. J. Frodsham, 1970).

M. T. South, Li Ho (Adelaide, 1967). A.R.D.

LI HUA (†766), Chinese essayist. Li was among the principal forerunners of Han* Yü in the movement of reaction against the euphuistic prose of the 'Six Dynasties' era. He was chiefly remembered for a single famous piece, Tiao ku-chan-ch'ang wên ('On an Old Battle-Field', tr. H. A. Giles in Genis of Chinese Literature, 2nd ed. 1923).

Li Hsia-shu chi (coll. works).—E. G. Pulleyblank, 'Neo-Confucianism and neo-Legalism in T'ang intellectual life, 755-805' in The Confucian Persuasion (ed. A. F. Wright, 1960). A.R.D.

LI JU-CHÊN (□Ta-hsing c. 1763; †c. 1830), Chinese novelist. Little is known of Li's career, which appears to have been undistinguished. However, he held a radical outlook on women's position in contemporary society. In his long novel Ching-hua yüan, the work of ten years (1810–20), he obliquely attacked women's lack of opportunity for education and public service and the institutions of concubinage and foot-binding. He is also known for Yin-chien (1810), a work on phonetics, original in its method.

Ching-hua yüan (Flowers in the Mirror, abr. tr. Lin Tai-yi, 1965; Chs 96–100 tr. with stud. H. C. Chang in Allegory and Courtesy in Spenser, 1955). A.R.D.

Li KUNG-TSO (□Lung-hsi 770; †c. 850), Chinese short-story writer. Li's Nan-k'o chi (tr. E. D. Edwards in Chinese Prose Literature, II, 1938) is among the finest of the T'ang dynasty stories of the miraculous. It provided the theme for T'ang* Hsien-tsu's play of the same name. Three other stories of his have survived.

Hsieh Hsiao-o chuan (tr. C. C. Wang in Traditional Chinese Tales, 1944); Li T'ang; Lu-chiang Feng Ao. A.R.D.

Li Po (*701; †Tang-t'u 762), Chinese poet. Li's birth-place is uncertain but he grew up at Ch'ang-ming, Szechwan. He left home c. 720 and for 20 years followed a largely wandering life, seeking from time to time to secure official employment on the recommendation of his poems, although he never took the state examinations which were the normal entry into public life. He went to the capital, Ch'ang-an, in 742 and joined the retinue of court poets in the Han-lin academy. For two years he remained, honoured as a poet but without obtaining the political post which he desired. Then, disappointed and perhaps also because of intrigues against him, he resumed his wanderings. He was involved (757) in the abortive revolt of Prince Lin and banished to Yeh-lang, Yunnan (758) but pardoned before he arrived there.

Li became China's most popular poet and the model par excellence for romantic spontaneous verse. By the character of his life, his Taoist leanings and his drunkenness he has attracted many legends. The freeness of his verse is commonly contrasted with the classicism of his great contemporary Tu* Fu. Yet while it is true that for many of his poems he employs the ballad and other earlier freer forms, he shows particular strength in the strictly formal, epigrammatic, four-line chüeh-chü ('cut-short poem'). It is natural that Li should be credited with the introduction of the short tz'ü-poem (set to music) but the attribution is probably anachronistic.

The Works of Li Po (tr. S. Obata, 1923); 'Li T'ai-po's Gedichte', tr. E. von Zach in Asia Minor, I (1924; Bks 2, 3), III (1926; Bks 1, 4), IV (1927; Bks 5–8) and V (1928; Bks 9, 10).

Hsü Sung-nien, Li Thai-po, son temps, sa vie et son œuvre (1935); A. Waley, The Poetry and Career of Li Po (1950). A.R.D.

Li SHANG-YIN (□Ho-nei 813; †Ch'eng-chou 858), Chinese poet. Though Li had a great literary reputation, his public career was relatively undistinguished. His poetry shows formal strictness; it is model in its parallelism, and its allusions (often recondite) are skilfully introduced. But his more immediately personal expression distinguishes him from his great 8th-century predecessors. He wrote a number of love-poems (usually headed 'Without Title').

Li I-shan chi (coll. works; 100 poems tr. with stud. J. J. Y. Liu, The Poetry of Li Shang-yin, 1969). A.R.D.

Li Yü (*Nanking 937; †K'ai-feng 978), Chinese poet. Li was the sixth son of the second Emperor of the Southern T'ang dynasty, who was himself a well-known poet. In 961 he succeeded to what remained of his father's territory (the latter had surrendered his imperial title in 958). He was deprived of his kingdom by the Sung Emperor, T'ai-tsu, and taken as a prisoner to K'ai-feng (975). His poetic quality is known from 45 surviving tz'ü-poems. Although he continued to use the nature and love themes of earlier tz'ü-writers, he frequently employed them symbolically to express the unhappiness of his life. Thus he gave to the tz'ü-form a deeper expressiveness.

Nan-T'ang erh-chu tz'ü ('Tz'ü-Poems of the Two Rulers of S. T'ang'; contains the poems of Li Yü and his father, Li Ching).—Die Lieder des Li Yü (tr. A. Hoffmann, 1950); Poems of Lee Hou-chu (tr. Liu Yih-ling and S. Suhrawardy, Bombay, 1948). A.R.D.

Li Yü (*Ju-kao 1611; †Hangchow ?1680), Chinese dramatist, poet and essayist. Li was forced throughout a life often poverty-stricken to support his many dependants by writing and producing plays. Besides his own plays he revised P'i-p'a chi and other famous dramas. The subjects of his essays include dramatic composition, acting, travel and hygiene. He published two collections of short stories, and two novels are attributed to him, one, the erotic Jou p'u-t'uan (Jou Pu Tuan [Brit. tit. The Before Midnight Scholar], tr. R. Martin from Ger. tr. F. Kuhn, 1963). His work is characterized by originality and humour, and by simple, vigorous expression.

PLAYS: Li-wêng shih-chung ch'ü.—VERSE AND ESSAYS: I-chia yen (3 ser.); Hsien-ch'ing ou-chi (one essay, 'On Charm in Women', tr. Lin Yutang in China Critic, XII, 1936; W. Eberhard, 'Die vollkommene Frau' in Ostasiatische Zeitschrift, XV–XVI, 1939–40).—SHORT STORIES: Wu-shêng hsi (c. 1655); Shih-érh lou (1658; Der Turm der fegenden Wolken, tr. F. Kuhn, 1951). A.R.D.

Liang CH'EN-YÜ or LIANG PO-LUNG (□K'un-shan ?1508; †?1580), Chinese dramatist, of whose life little is known. His great success, Huan-sha chi, initiated a new dramatic school, the K'un-ch'ü, named after Liang's native place. The K'un-ch'ü was supreme for nearly 300 years. Since the sung sections were the more important in this type of drama, the success of Huan-sha chi and the development of the K'un-ch'ü owed much to the skill of Liang's musical collaborator, Wei Liang-fu.

Tsiang Un-kai, K'ouen K'iu, le théâtre chinois ancien (1932); Yao Hsin-nung, 'The rise and fall of the K'un Ch'ü' in T'ien Hsia Monthly, II (1936). A.R.D.

Liang CH'Y-CH'AO (□Hsin-hui 23 II 1873; †Peking 19 I 1929), Chinese publicist and scholar, at first supported K'ang* Yu-wei. After the 'Hundred Days Reform' (1898) he fled to Japan, where he published the influential journal Hsin-min ts'ung-pao (1902-07). After the 1911 revolution he became a republican and until 1917 was prominently engaged in politics, while continuing to promote journals and write extensively. He was one of the foremost intellectual leaders of modern China.

Yin-ping shih ho-chi (coll. works; 1936).—History of Chinese Political Thought During the Early Tsin Period (tr. L. T. Chen, 1930); Intellectual Trends in the Ch'ing Period (tr. I. C. Y. Hsü, 1959). J. R. Levenson, Liang Ch'i-ch'ao and the Mind of Modern China (2nd ed. 1959). A.R.D.

Libanius (*Antioch 314; †c. 393), Greek rhetorician. Of a wealthy pagan family, he studied at Athens, taught in Constantinople, Nicomedia and, from 354, Antioch; imperial secretary under the Emperor Julian* 362-363. In his later years a literary figure renowned throughout the Greek-speaking world, he was in correspondence with most of its distinguished men. Among his pupils were John* Chrysostom, Theodore* of Mopsuestia, Basil* and Gregory* of Nazianzus. Author of 64 speeches dealing mainly with public and municipal affairs, 51 school declamations, 143 model rhetorical exercises (progymnasmata), some 1,600 letters, and minor rhetorical works. Petty, vain, wrapped in literary pretensions and pagan antiquarianism, Libanius is yet a likeable character, always ready to use his eloquence to fight injustice, and his work is a most valuable source for the political and cultural history of his time.

Libanii opera (ed. R. Förster, 12 vols, 1903-23); L. Harmand, L.: Discours sur les patronages (1955); A. F. Norman, L.: Autobiography (1965) and Select Speeches of L., I (with tr.; 1969).

G. R. Sievers, Das Leben des L. (1868); O. Seeck, Die Briefe des L. (1906); J. Misson, Recherches sur le paganisme de L. (1914); L. Hugl, Der Antiochikos des L. (1919); R. A. Pack, Studies in L. (1935); G. Misch, History of Autobiography in Antiquity, II (1950); P. Petit, L. et la vie municipale à Antioche au IV<sup>e</sup> siècle (1955) and

Les étudiants de L. (1956); A. J. Festugière, Antioche païenne et chrétienne (1959). R.B.

Libedinsky, YURY NIKOLAYEVICH (*Urals 1898), Soviet author. He was a founder of the proletarian 'October-group' (Oktyabr') of authors in 1922. In the same year he achieved his first success with Nedelya, a narrative about the victory over the reactionaries in a Siberian town. Komissary (1925), dealing with the re-education of a number of former war heroes for peaceful purposes, has a considerable documentary value.

Nedelya (1922; A Week, tr. A. Ransome, 1923); Zavtra (1923); Na povorote (1927); Rozhdenie geroya (1930); Gory i lyudi (1947); Sovremenniki (1958); Dela semeynye (1963); Povesti (1967).

L. (1928); I. Vladislavlev, Literatura velikogo desyatiletia (1928); D. Mazin, 'Rozhdenie geroya i nash metod' in Za literaturnom postu, XIII-XV (1930). J.L.

Lichtenberg, GEORG CHRISTOPH (*Oberramstädt 1 VII 1742; †Göttingen 24 II 1799), German moralist. A notable physicist, he became Professor at Göttingen (1769), visited England and then returned to Göttingen, where he remained until his death. In literature he was an able dilettante, who wrote trenchant criticisms and shrewd aphorisms. He opposed STURM UND DRANG and the whole sentimental movement, especially Lavater*.

Über Physiognomik wider die Physiognomen (1773); Fragment von Schwänzen (1773); Ausführliche Erklärung der Hogarthischen Kupferstiche (1794-99); Aphorismen (in periodicals; first coll. in Vermischte Schriften, 9 vols, 1800-05).—Gesammelte Werke (2 vols, 1949).

R. M. Meyer, Swift und L. (1886); E. Bertram, G. C. L. (1919); P. Requadt, L. (1948); P. Rippmann, L. (1953); A. Schneider, L. (2 vols, 1953); C. Brintzer, L. (1956); H. Schöffler, L. (1956). H.B.G.

Lidin, VLADIMIR GHERMANOVICH, pseud. of V. GOMBERG (*Moscow 3 II 1894), Soviet novelist and short-story writer whose realism developed under the influence of Chekhov*, Bunin* and, in part, Dostoyevsky*. His best-known novel Ostupnik (1928) deals with student life and manners during the NEP period.

Idut korabli (1926); Ostupnik (1928; The Apostate, tr. H. Ch. Matheson, 1931); Iskateli (1929); Velikty ili Tikhiy (1932); Mogila neizvestnogo soldata (1932).—Sobranie sochineniy (6 vols, 1928-30).

V. M. Friche, Zametki o sovremennoy literature (1928); I. Vladislavlev, Literatura velikogo desyatiletia (1928). J.L.

Lidman, SARA ADELA (*Missenträsk, Västerbotten 30 XII 1923), Swedish novelist and dramatist. In her first novels man's betrayal of his responsibility to society and the problem of the unloved members of the community are treated in the microcosm of isolated settlements in Northern Sweden. She later condemns racial oppression in Africa and Asia and criticizes those who betray human responsibility by remaining neutral.

PROSE: Tjårdalen (1953); Hjortronlandet (1955); Regnspiran (1958); The Rain Bird, tr. E. Harley Schubert, 1963; Bära Mistel (1960); Jag och min son (1961); Gruva (1968).—PLAYS: Job Klockmakares dotter (1954); Aina (1956); Marta, Marta (1970). I.S.

Lidman, SVEN (*Karlskrona 30 VI 1882; †Stockholm 14 II 1960), Swedish author. Lidman's first poems were flamboyantly fin-de-siècle, but his subsequent family chronicles, notably Huset med de gamla fröknarna (1918), showed considerably more breadth and maturity. He became a revivalist preacher in 1921, though even before this he had experienced and expressed the religious stirrings which hall-mark his later work.

VERSE: Pasiphaë (1904); Primavera (1905); Källorna (1906); Elden och altaret (1907); Oroligt var mitt hjärta (1933).—NOVELS AND MEMOIRS: Stensborg (1910); Thure-Gabriel Silfverstådhl (1910); Köpmän och krigare (1911); Carl Silfverstådhl's upplevelser (1911); Såsom genom eld (1920); Människan och tidsandan (1932); På resan genom livet (1934); Guds eviga nu (1936); Blodsarv (1937); Var inte förskräckt (1939); Uvald av Gud (1940); Gossen i grottan (1952); Lågan och lindansaren (1952); Mandoms möda (1954); Vällust och vedergällning (1957).

F. Böök, Resa kring svenska parnassen (1926); B. Holmquist et al., Boken om S. L. (1952).

C.H.K. (I.S.)

Lidner, BENGT (*Göteborg 16 III 1757; †Stockholm 4 I 1793), Swedish neo-Romantic poet. As a youth he won Gustav* III's favour by drafts for plays and spirited occasional verse, but his play Eric XIV (pub. 1800) was coldly received and he fell from grace. It was after this he produced his best works, the lyrical epics Grefvinnans Spastaras död (1783) and Året MDCCLXXXIII (1784) and the opera Medea (1784). All testify to the subjectivity and almost morbid love of horror themes, making Lidner a typical exponent of 18th-century Romanticism. Between 1788 and 1790 he wrote a number of sacred oratorios and patriotic odes, returning in his last years to religious verse and omissions.

Samlade skrifter (ed. Sv. Vitterhetssamfundet, 1930 ff.).

K. Warburg, L. (1889); M. Lamm, Upplysnings-tides romantik (2 vols, 1918–20); L. Josephson, B. L. (1947). C.H.K.

Lie, JONAS LAURITZ IDEMIL (*Eiker 6 XI 1833;

∞1860 Thomasine Lie; †Fleskum 5 VII 1908), Norwegian novelist, playwright and poet. Lie's childhood was spent in Tromsø in north Norway, where the dramatic scenery made a lasting impression on him. He became a lawyer but continued to cultivate the literary interests he had developed as a student. In 1868 he went bankrupt, and it was then that he decided to resort to the pen as a means of livelihood. He achieved success with his first short novel, Den Fremtsynte (1870; The Visionary, tr. J. Muir, 1894), which, with its Nordland background and remarkable mixture of fantasy and reality, owes much to childhood impressions. Subsequently, in a long series of novels depicting the family life of the Norwegian middle classes, of which Lodsen og hans Hustru, Familjen paa Gilje and Kommandørens Døtre are outstanding, Lie earned the title of hjemmenes dikter, 'the writer of the home'. It is as a painter of milieu that Lie excels; social criticism is often implicit in what he wrote, but, except in the naturalistic Livsslaven, it does not obtrude. In his collections of stories in eventyr style, Trold (2 vols, 1891–92), he once more gave rein to his predilection for the fantastic.

VERSE: Digte (1866–67); Faustina Strozzi (1875); Digte (1889).—PLAYS: Grabows Kat (1880); Lystige Koner (1894); Lindelin (1897); Wulffie & Comp. (1900).—NOVELS AND VARIOUS: Fortællinger og Skildringer fra Norge (1872; incl. 'Nordfjord, hesten'; Little Grey, the Pony of Nordfjord, tr. Hon. Mrs Arbuthnott, 1873); Tremasteren 'Fremtiden' eller Liv Nordpaa (1872; The Barque 'Future' or Life in the Far North, tr. Mrs Ole Bull, 1879); Lodsen og hans Hustru (1874; The Pilot and His Wife, tr. G. Tottenham, 1877); Thomas Ross (1878); Adam Schrader (1879); Rutland (1880); Gaa Paa (1882); Livsslaven (1883; One of Life's Slaves, tr. J. Muir, 1895); Familjen paa Gilje (1883; The Family at Gilje, tr. S. E. Eastman, 1920); En Malstrøm (1884); Otte Fortællinger (1885); Kommandørens Døtre (1886; The Commodore's Daughters, tr. H. L. Brækstad and G. Hughes, 1892); Et Samliv (1887); Maisa Jons (1888); Onde Magter (1890); Trold (1891–92; Weird Tales From Northern Seas, sel. tr. R. Nisbet Bain, 1893); Niobe (1893; Eng. tr. H. L. Brækstad, 1897); Naar Sol gaar ned (1895); Dyre Rein (1896); Faste Forland (1899); Naar Jernteppet falder (1901); Ulfvungerne (1903); Østenfor Sol, vestenfor Maane og bagom Babylons Taarn (1905); Æventyr (1909); J. L. og hans samtidige, Breve i Udvalg (ed. C. Nærup, 1915).—Samlede Digterverker (ed. V. Erichsen and P. Bergh, 10 vols, 1920–21).

E. Lie, J. L. En livsskildring (1933); F. Ingerslev, J. L. (Copenhagen, 1939); C. O. Bergström, J. L.s väg till Gilje (Örebro, 1949); H. Midbøe, Dikteren og det primitive (4 vols, 1964–66); Å. H. Lervik, Ideal og virkelighet. Ekteskapet som motiv hos J. L. (1965); A. Gustafson in Six Scandinavian Novelists (rev. ed. 1968). R.G.P.

Liebermann, AHARON SAMUEL, pseud. ARTUR FREEMAN, BAR DRORA, DANIEL YISH CHAMUDOT (*Luna, Russia 20 V 1845; †Syracuse, N.Y. 18 XI 1880), Hebrew essayist and revolutionary leader. His novel Hasid Hakol (1875) was published in Vienna in the Hebrew monthly Hashachar. He edited Haemeth, the first Socialist monthly paper in Hebrew. S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Liefde, JAN DE (*Amsterdam 25 XII 1814; †ibid. 6 XII 1869), Dutch Mennonite parson and fairly good writer, especially of boys' books. From 1864 to 1868 he lived in London.

Galerij van Bijbelsche vrouwen (1842); De diligence (1845); Almanak voor hart en huis (1850); A Dutchman's Difficulties in English (1865); De blauwe heer (1870). J.W.W.

Lieh-tzu, title of a probably fictitious Chinese 'ancient worthy'. The book Lieh-tzu shows a close affinity to Chuang-tzu*; it probably originally formed part of a corpus of Chuang-tzu texts in the 3rd century B.C. The content and style of the present book, which has often been considered to date from the 4th century A.D., are very unequal. One chapter gives a rather adulterated account of the teaching of the 4th-century B.C. philosopher Yang* Chu.

The Book of Lieh Tzu (tr. A. C. Graham, 1960).

A. C. Graham, 'The date and the composition of the Liehtzyy' in Asia Major, new ser., VIII (1961). A.R.D.

Ligne, CHARLES-JOSEPH, PRINCE DE (*Brussels 3 V 1735; ∞ Marie Françoise de Lichtenstein; †Vienna 13 XII 1814), Belgian soldier, ambassador, historian, essayist and letter-writer. This elegant writer, forefather of Belgian letters, is often compared with Saint-Simon*. He has left shrewd and racy portraits of Louis XVI, Marie-Antoinette, Rousseau*, Voltaire*, Napoleon and Catherine* II of Russia.

Lettres à la Marquise de Coigny (1787); Mélanges littéraires, militaires et sentimentales (1795); Letters and Memoirs of the Prince de Ligne (tr. L. Ashton, 1927).

G. Charlier, Œuvres choisies du Prince de L. (1941). B.M.W.

Liiv, JUHAN (*Alatskivi 30 IV 1864; †Kavastu-Koosa 1 XII 1913), Estonian poet and short-story writer. His literary beginnings coincide with his early experiences as a teacher at his author-brother's school in Väike Maarja and his acquaintance with Liisa Golding, with whom he was in animated correspondence for some time. After several years with various publishing concerns he fell seriously ill of a mental complaint. From 1894 to his death of consumption nearly 20 years later Liiv's life was one of intense suffering.

His writings consist of narrative prose and lyrical verse. The first belongs to the period before 1894 and shows him as the pioneer of Estonian realism; the second was composed in lucid intervals and shows him as a Symbolist. Some of his verse is among the best in the language.

VERSE: Luuletused (1909).—STORIES: Kümme lugu (1893); Käikimäe kägu (1893); Vari (1894); Nõia tütar (1895); Elu sügavusest (1909).—Kirjatööde kogu (coll. writings; 1904); Kogutud teosed (coll. works; 1921–35); Valitud luuletused (sel. poems; 1964).—Verse tr. in W. K. Matthews, Anthology of Modern Estonian Poetry (1953).

F. Tuglas, J. L. (1914) and J. L. elu ja looming (1927); A. Vinkel, J. L. (1964).

W.K.M. (M.A.B.)

Lilburne, JOHN (*Sunderland 1615; ∞ c. 1641 Elizabeth Dewell; †Eltham 29 VIII 1657), English political pamphleteer. The younger son of a country gentleman, he was apprenticed to a London draper. Imprisoned (1638–40) for printing and circulating seditious unlicensed books, he fought in the Parliamentary army (1642–45) but refused to subscribe to the Solemn League and Covenant and surrendered his commission (1645). Continually imprisoned, he wrote a succession of pamphlets advocating social and constitutional reforms and with Walwyn and Overton* was a leader of the Leveller party. Banished (1652–53), on his return to England he was gaoled for refusing to promise compliance to the Government. The Resurrection of John Lilburne now a Prisoner in Dover Castle (1656) proclaimed his becoming a Quaker.

England's Birthright Justified (1645; in Tracts on Liberty in the Puritan Revolution, III, ed. W. Haller, 1934); The Legal Fundamental Liberties of the People of England (1649; in The Leveller Tracts, ed. W. Haller and G. Davies, 1944).

T. C. Pease, The Leveller Movement (1916); D. M. Wolfe, Milton in the Puritan Revolution (1941) and ed., Leveller Manifestoes of the Puritan Revolution (1944); M. A. Gibb, J. L. the Leveller (1947); J. Frank, The Levellers (1955); P. Gregg, Free-Born John (1961); H. N. Brailsford, The Levellers and the English Revolution (1961).

R.M.W.

Lilienblum, MOISHE LEIB (*Kaidany, Lithuania 22 X 1843; †Odessa 12 II 1910), Hebrew poet, essayist, scholar and communal leader. He was influenced by the teachings of the Russian revolutionary leaders Chernyshevsky* and Pisarev*. His positivist-Socialist treatise Mishnah (1878) adapted the Russian positivists for the Jewish youth. His most famous book was Chatot Neurim (1876), an autobiography.

Kehal Refaim (Odessa, 1870); Derech Teshuba (Warsaw, 1899); Kol Kitvei M. L. L. (4 vols, 1913). S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Liliencron, (FRIEDRICH ADOLF AXEL) DETLEV, FREIHERR VON (*Kiel 3 VI 1844; ∞1878 Helene, Freiin von Bodenhausen; †Alt-Rahlstedt nr Hamburg 22 VII 1909), German poet and writer. His father was a customs official, his mother the daughter of an American general. He himself became an officer but resigned in 1875 because of his debts. Recognition as a poet and writer came late in life, but has increased steadily since. Soldiers' life and his north German home-country form the basis of all he wrote. Though not a deep thinker, he was one of the few writers who saw both sides of military and human experience: the dirt and the glory. His style is extremely vivid with colourful sensual impressions producing an effect not unlike that of a film. The label of impressionism with which the critics sought to categorize him will no longer serve. Liliencron may be considered a born, utterly undogmatic Naturalist.

Briefe in neuer Auswahl (letters; ed. H. Spiero, 1927).—Verse in Eng. tr.: Library of the World's Best Literature (ed. C. D. Warner, 1896–97).—Sämtliche Werke (15 vols, 1904–08); Auswahl (ed. R. Dehmel, 8 vols, 1911–13, 1922; ed. H. Stern, 1964).

O. J. Bierbaum, D. von L. (1892, 1910); H. Benzmann, L. (1904, 1912); D. von L. Erinnerungen und Urteile (ed. F. Böckel, 1912); H. Spiero, L. (1913); H. Maync, D. von L. (1920).

R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Liliev, NIKOLAY, pseud. of NIKOLAY MIHAYLOV (*Stara Zagora 26 V 1885; †Sofia 6 X 1960), Bulgarian poet. Educated in France, he was a leading Symbolist and wrote verse of fine musical and evocative quality. His critical studies in Zlatorog, edited by his friend V. Vassilev*, influenced many after the First World War. His later life was devoted to literary translation and directing the National Theatre, Sofia.

Ptitsi v noshta (1918); Lunni petna (1922); Sihove (1932).

I. Meshekov, N. L. (1936); G. Konstantinov, N. L. (1963). V.P.

Lilja, GERTRUD (*Långasjö 15 V 1887; ∞1938 Axel Johansson), Swedish writer. Lilja's novels and short stories have mainly modern themes. She is more interested in character than in plot and aims to defend a sensitive conscience, a sense of justice and unselfishness.

Den ensamma (1926); Paulina (1927); Människor (1928); Bergakungen (1930); Karl-Uno och sångerskan (1932); Stundom en idyll (1934); Fröken Andersson och ungdomen (1935); Kvinnorna i släkten (1936); Hök och duva (1942); Det hemlösa hjärtat (1946); När sommaren är förliden (1951); Den enfaldiga (1953); Men samt föll på hälleberget (1955); Döttrarna (1964).

R. Oldberg, Några moderna svenska författare (1944). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Lillo, BALDOMERO (*Lota 1867; †1923), Chilean short-story writer. His early life was spent in a mining area, and in Santiago, where he lived after 1898, he supported the cause of the urban worker. His stories are among the first in Chile to reflect the modern social preoccupation of the Spanish-American novelist.

Sub terra (1904); Sub sol (1907). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Lillo, GEORGE (*London 4 II 1693; †3 IX 1739), English dramatist. The son of a jeweller, Lillo wrote ballads, operas and domestic tragedies based on Elizabethan models. B.H.

The Merchant (1731; renamed The London Merchant, or The History of George Barnwell); Fatal Curiosity (1736; ed. W. H. MacBurney, 1966).—The Works of Mr George Lillo; with Some Account of his Life (ed. Thomas Davies, 1810).

P. von Hofmann-Wellenhof, Shakespeare's Pericles and L.'s Marina (1885); L. Hoffman, G. L. (1888); W. H. Hudson, A Quiet Corner in a Library (1915); A. Sherbo, English Sentimental Drama (1957); E. Bernbaum, Drama of Sensibility (1958).

B.H. (M.Bu.)

Lima, JORGE DE (*União, Alagoas 23 IV 1893; †Rio de Janeiro 15 XI 1953), Brazilian poet, novelist and artist. From 1925 he became an adherent of Modernismo, exploiting in his poetry the folk-lore and negro culture of his native region. His move to Rio de Janeiro in 1930 and his conversion to Catholicism in 1935 concluded his regionalist phase, and his subsequent work, under the influence of Claudel*, Patrice de La* Tour du Pin and SURREALISM, represents varying stages of synthesis between the major poetic forms, the surrealist style and image, and his own unlimited response to the outer world and the spiritual life, culminating in the epic Invenção de Orfeu (1952), probably the most difficult and certainly the finest achievement of 20th-century Brazilian poetry. Exploring the common roots of poetic and religious experience and their manifestations in the temporal and spatial universe, rich in irony and allegory and superb in mastery of the resources of language, Jorge de Lima represents all that is most expansive, anti-parochial and vital in the Brazilian scene. His unjustly neglected novels, ranging from the autobiographical and the socially committed to surrealist fantasy, complement his poetry.

POETRY: Poemas (1927); Novos poemas (1929); Poemas escolhidos (1932); Tempo e eternidade (1935; in collab. with Murilo Mendes); A única inconsútil (1938); Poemas negros (1947); Livro de sonetos (1949); Anunciação e encontro de Mira-Celi (in Obra poética, 1950).—NOVELS: O anjo (1934); Calunga (1935); Guerra dentro do beco (1950).—COLLECTED WORKS: Obra completa, I (poetry and essays; 1958); coll. of the main novels (1959).

Crit. essays repr. in Obra completa (1958); poet. His best-known work is the ballet Den Stora Genius, performed on Charles XI's 14th birthday, 1669. He also wrote a great deal of elegant occasional verse, and adaptations of two of his religious poems appear in the 1937 Swedish hymnary.

Samlade vitterhetsarbeten af svenska författare från Stjernhjelmen till Dalin (ed. P. Hanselli, 1866).

E. Ingers, E. L. (1908). C.H.K.

Lindström, SIGFRID, pen-name TRISTAN (*Lidhult 19 IV 1892; †Lund 1 V 1950), Swedish writer. Lindström's favourite genre was the philosophical tale in prose and verse, which he invested with his own highly personal touch. His tone was both playful and bitter, pessimistic but heroic.

Sagor på vers och prosa (1948).

O. Holmberg, S. L. (1951). C.H.K.

Ling MENG-CH'U (□Wu-ch'êng 1580; †19 II 1644), Chinese writer, is chiefly remembered for his collection of stories, Ch'u-k'o p'o-an ching-ch'i (1628) and Êrh-k'o p'o-an ching-ch'i (1632), written under the influence of Fêng* Mêng-lung's three collections. Eleven of his stories were included with the 29 by Fêng in the popular anthology Chin-ku ch'i-kuan.

Sel. tr. in The Courtesan's Jewel Box (tr. H.-Y. and G. Yang, Peking, 1957). A.R.D.

Ling, PEHR HENRIK (*S. Ljunga 15 XI 1776; †Stockholm 3 V 1839), Swedish poet. The 18th-century Gothic renaissance in Sweden inspired him to create a Nordic mythology for educational and patriotic purposes; but his many historical plays were unsuccessful and his epics Gylfe (1810) and Asarne (1816–26) did not fare much better.

Samlade arbeten (1859–66).

C. A. Westerblad, L. Tidshistoriska undersökningar (4 vols, 1913–46). C.H.K.

Lingard, JOHN (*Winchester 5 II 1771; †Hornby 17 VII 1851), English Roman Catholic historian whose lucid, factually accurate History was avowedly aimed at convincing his countrymen that they misunderstood his Church.

Antiquities of the Anglo-Saxon Church (2 vols, 1806); History of England from First Invasion by the Romans to the Accession of William and Mary in 1688 (1819–30).

M. Haile and E. Bonney, Life and Letters of J. L. (1911); J. Fletcher, J. L. (1925).

R.M.H. (K.W.)

Linklater, ERIC (ROBERT RUSSELL) (*Penarth, Wales 1899; ∞1933 Marjorie MacIntyre), Scottish novelist, dramatist and journalist, assistant editor Times of India, Bombay (1925–27), assistant in English, Aberdeen University (1927–28) and Rector (1945–48). His travels in America and the East colour his writings. A brilliant and witty writer of picaresque novels, plays and dialogues, he is also a sound biographer and military publicist. He has more recently turned to history.

FICTION: Juan in America (1931); Magnus Merriman (1934); Juan in China (1937); Private Angelo (1946); Position at Noon (1958).—The Stories of E. L. (1968).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: The Man on My Back (1941); A Year of Space (1953); Fanfare for a Tin Hat (1970).—VARIOUS: The Cornerstones (1941); The Raft and Socrates Asks Why (1942); The Great Ship and Rabelais Replies (1944); The Art of Adventure (1947).—BIOGRAPHY AND HISTORY: Ben Jonson and King James (1931); Mary Queen of Scots (1933); Robert the Bruce (1934); The Campaign in Italy (1951); The Prince in the Heather (1965); The Survival of Scotland (1968). G.W.C. (W.R.A.)

Linna, VÄNÖ (*Urjala 20 XII 1920; ∞1945 Kerttu Seuri), Finnish novelist. Abandoning the life of a farm labourer, he worked in a Tampere factory until enlisted for military service. He saw action during the Continuation War (1941–44) and afterwards returned to a factory job until becoming a full-time writer in 1955. He still lives in Tampere and his work has been influenced by the working-class intellectual movement associated with the Tampere Library. Linna's major novels examine the feelings and response of ordinary people to war (Tuntematon sotilas) and to rapid social change (Täällä Pohjantähden alla). His themes are the universal problems of man set in a Finnish background. The characterization of troops and working people is uncompromisingly realistic and depends much on Finnish peasant humour and the subtle nuances of dialect. The combination of the universal and the vernacular explains Linna's popularity both abroad and in Finland, where his major works are the most widely read of any Finnish author and have been adapted for stage and cinema. Most critics regard Linna as the successor of Sillanpää* and the outstanding novelist of his generation.

NOVELS: Päämäärä (1947); Musta rakkaus (1948); Tuntematon sotilas (1954; tr. The Unknown Soldier, 1957); Täällä Pohjantähden alla (3 vols, 1959–62; Ici, sous l'étoile polaire, I and II, tr. J.-J. Fol, 1962–63).

M. Kurjensaari, 'V. L. ja "Tuntematon sotilas"' in Tuntematon sotilas (1956 ed.); M. Kuusi, 'Kansalliskirjailija' in Parnasso (1960); E. Häkli, 'Tuntemattoman sotilaan käännöksistä' in Bibliophilos (1961); K. Laitinen, 'Two aspects of war: V. L. and Veijo Meri' in Books Abroad (1962); N.-B. Storbom, V. L. (1964). M.A.B.

Linnaeus: see Linné, CARL VON.

Linnankoski, JOHANNES, pseud. of JOHAN VIKTOR PELTONEN (*Askola 18 X 1869; ∞1899 E. J.

Druger; †Helsinki 10 VIII 1913), Finnish author. His literary career began in the 1890s, but he attracted notice only in 1903, when the play Ikuinen taistelu ('The Eternal Struggle') appeared under his pseudonym. The peak of his reputation was reached with Laulu tulipunaisesta kukasta (1905; The Song of the Blood-Red Flower, tr. W. Worster, 1920). In this and in subsequent novels criticism has discovered the influence of Selma Lagerlöf*. His best book is Pakolaiset (1908; Fugitives, tr. J.-L. Perret, 1926). As a writer he is remarkable for his honesty, romantic idealism and psychological understanding. Linnankoski was a practical idealist, much of whose work lay outside literature.

NOVELS AND STORIES: Taistelu Heikkilän talosta (1907); La fermière de Heikkilä, tr. J.-L. Perret, 1942); Sirpaleita (1913); Hilja maitotytöt (1920).—PLAYS: Kirot (1907); Simson ja Delila (1911); Jeftan tytär (1911).—Kootut teokset (coll. works; 3 vols, 1908–15).

W. Söderhjelm, J. L. (1918); A. Anttila, V. P.—J. L. (2 vols, 1921–27) and J. L.:en 'Ikuinen taistelu' (1922); L. Valkama, Tutkimus J. L.:en 'Pakolaisten' tyylistä (1957). W.K.M. (M.A.B.)

Linné (LINNAEUS), CARL VON (*Stenbrohult 23 V 1707; †Uppsala 10 I 1778), Swedish naturalist. Though he did not write any strictly literary work, he was a pioneer of Swedish culture by virtue of his clear and straightforward style and his almost idyllic preoccupation with his own country in a period of political stress and overwhelming influences from abroad. The personal Nemesis theory which he worked out later in life is in many points worthy of Strindberg*. C.H.K.

Skrifter av Carl von Linné (ed. Vetenskapsakademien, 1905–13).—Cat. of the works of L. pub. in Sandbergs Antikvariatförteckning (1957).

T. M. Fries, L. (2 vols, 1903); K. Hagberg, C. L. (1939; tr. A. Blair, 1952); E. Malmström, C. von L. Geniets kamp för klarhet (1964). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Linschoten, JAN HUYGHEN VAN (*Haarlem 1563; ∞1595 Reynou Meynertsd. Semeysnz.; †Enkhuizen 8 II 1611), Dutch writer. As clerk to the Archbishop of Goa (1583–89) he collected information about the coastal regions of the Indian Ocean and the Pacific. From 1589 to 1591 he was Fugger's agent in the Azores and made (1594–95) two unsuccessful journeys with Houtman in search of the Northern Passage. J.J.M.

Itinerario, voyage ofte schipvaert naer Oost ofte Portugaels Indien (ed. L.-Vereeniging, 3 vols, 1910, 1934); Reysgheschrift; Extract ende sommier van alle renten... des Conincks van Spaengien; Beschryvinghe van de gantsche Custe van Guinea (1596); Journalen of his journeys to the North (1601; ed. L.-Vereeniging, 1914).

J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Lins do Rêgo Cavalcanti, José (*Pilar, Paraíba 3 VII 1901; †Rio de Janeiro 12 IX 1957), Brazilian novelist. A leading member of the group of writers concerned with the social and economic problems of the Brazilian North-East, his first series of novels was centred on the symbol of the 'sugar-cane cycle', from germination to grinding in the mill and thence to the refinery. Abundant and improvisatory, the formal weakness of his fiction is compensated by its humanity and invention.

Menino do engenho (1932); Doidinho (1933); Bangüê (1934); O moleque Ricardo (1935); Usina (1936); Pureza (1937); Pedra Bonita (1938); Água-mãe (1941); Fogo morto (1943); Euridice (1947); Os cangaceiros (1953).

H. J. Maxwell, L. do R.'s Sociological Novels (1954); José Aderaldo Castello, J. L. do R.: Moder-nismo e regionalismo (1961). J.T.B.

Linton, ELIZA LYNN (*Keswick 10 II 1822; ∞1858 William Linton; †London 14 VII 1898), English novelist of large output, successful professional journalist, severe critic of 'the modern girl'.

Azeth the Egyptian (1846); Joshua Davidson (1872); Autobiography of Christopher Kirkland (1885; largely autobiog., but with sexes changed); The Girl of the Period, and other Essays (1883); My Literary Life (ed. B. Harriden, 1899).

G. S. Layard, E. L. L., Her Life, Letters and Opinions (1901). R.M.H. (M.A.)

Lippi, LORENZO, also known under the anagrammatic pseud. of PERLONE ZIPOLI (*Florence 3 V 1606; ∞1646 Elisabetta Susini; †ibid. 15 IV 1664), Italian poet and painter. Lippi drew the subject for his burlesque poem Il Malmantile Racquistato from Basile's* Pentameron. The poem is remarkable for the lively, though veiled, allusions to Florentine personalities and scenes; also for its comical and colloquial style and language.

Il Malmantile Racquistato (1676; with comm. by Puccio Lamoni [anag. of Paolo Minucci], 1750).

G. Zaccagnini, L'elemento satirico nello 'Scherno degli Dei' e nel 'Malmantile' (1897); A. Alterocca, La vita e l'opera poetica e pittorica di L. L. (1914); L. Palumbo, 'Il "Malmantile Racquistato" di L. L.' in Gymnasium, XXX (1955). U.L.

Lipsius, JUSTUS (*Issche 18 X 1547; †Louvain 23 IV 1606), Dutch classical scholar and philosopher, Professor at Jena, Leiden and Louvain, today noted mainly for his epoch-making edition of Tacitus* (1574). In his own time he was widely known for his works on ancient Stoicism and especially for his very influential treatise De Constantia (1584), advocating a Christianized Stoicism; it was frequently translated (Eng. tr. Sir John Stradling, 1594, ed. R. Kirk and C. M. Hall, 1939; Dutch tr. J. Mourentorf, 1584, ed. H. van Crombruggen, 1948; Ger. tr. A. Virritius, 1599, ed. L. Forster, 1965) and, through Du* Vair and P. Charron*, influenced Corneille*. With M. A. Muret*, Lipsius inaugurated the European vogue of the terse and epigrammatic prose style, based on Tacitus and Seneca*, of which Bacon's* Essays (1597) is the best-known English example. His manual of Politics (1590; Eng. tr. W. Jones, 1594) was important in its day and involved him in a controversy with Coornhert*.

Opera omnia (4 vols, 1675).

F. van der Haeghen, Bibliographie Lipsienne (1880); L. Zanta, La renaissance du stoïcisme au 16e siècle (1914); T. van de Bilt, L. de Constantia en Seneca (1946); G. Williamson, The Senecan Amble (1950); J. L. Saunders, J. L. the Philosophy of Renaissance Stoicism (1955); G. Oestreich, 'J. L. in sua re' in Festgabe für Fritz Neubert (1965); M. Croll, Style, Rhetoric and Rhythm (1966); A. Gerlo, H. D. L. Vervliet and I. Vertessen, La correspondance de J. L. conservée au Musée Plantin (1967); A. Gerlo and H. D. L. Vervliet, Inventaire de la correspondance de J. L. (1968); G. Güldner, Das Toleranzproblem in den Niederlanden im Ausgang des 16. Jahrhunderts (1968); H. D. L. Vervliet, L.'s jeugd (1969). L.W.F.

Lisān al-Dīn ibn al-Khaṭīb (*1313; †1374), Arabic writer. He was a vizier of the Nasrid Kings of Granada and ended his life in prison, at the hands of assassins hired by powerful enemies. He is known both as a historian and as a poet. S.M.S.

A. R. Nykl, Hispano-Arabic Poetry (1946); S. M. Stern, Les chansons mozarabes (Palermo, 1953). S.M.S. (R.O.)

Lisitzki, EPHRAIM (*Minsk 31 I 1885), Hebrew poet, who emigrated to America before the First World War. He is the most prolific and versatile of all American Hebrew poets. His first collection of lyrics and poems, Shirim, appeared in 1928.

Naftule Elohim (1934); Medorot Doachot (1937); Be-Oholei Kush (Negro songs; 1953); Anshei Middot (1958). S.A. (M.Ge.); Y.F.)

Lisky, I. A., pseud. of SUMMER FUCHS (*eastern Galicia 1903), Yiddish novelist.

Productivistsia (London, 1937); For, du kleiner kozak (ibid., 1942); Melokho bezoyrn (ibid., 1947). J.S.

I.'Isle, or Lisle, WILLIAM (*Tandridge, Surrey ?1569; †Wilbraham XI 1637), English verse translator, best known as a fine Anglo-Saxon scholar. From Eton he went to King's College, Cambridge (Fellow 1592); later Esquire Extraordinary to James* I. L.'Isle's Old English studies were primarily to establish the doctrinal position of the early Church in England.

The Faire Aethiopian (tr. of Heliodorus; 1631; 2nd ed. 1638); Virgil's Eclogues (tr.; 1628); Four Bookes of Du Bartas (tr.; 1638).—A Saxon Treatise Concerning The Old and New Testament (1623; reissued as Divers Ancient Monuments in the Saxon Tongue, 1638).

E. N. Adams, Old English Scholarship (1917). B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Lista y Aragón, ALBERTO (*Seville 1775; †ibid. 5 X 1848), Spanish poet. He took religious Orders and was Professor of mathematics, history and the humanities at Seville and at the college of San Mateo in Madrid. Keeping a perfect equilibrium between 18th-century neo-classicism and 19th-century Romanticism, this intelligent, tolerant priest exercised a deep influence on his disciples (Espronceda*, Ventura de la Vega*), made an interesting adaptation of Pope's* Dunciad, introduced some metric innovations and, faithful to the models of the old Sevillian school of poetry, wrote good poems on religious subjects, e.g. his famous ode A la muerte de Jesús. Although generally less good on philanthropic subjects, his celebrated Himno al desgraciado is interesting.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LXVII; Ensayos literarios y críticos (1844); Poesías inéditas (ed. J. M. de Cossío, 1927).

J. C. J. Metford, 'A. L. and the Romantic movement in Spain' in Liverpool Stud. in Span. Lit., I (1940); H. Juretschke, Vida, obra y pensamiento de A. L. (1951). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Lithgow, WILLIAM (*Lanark 1582; †ibid. ?1645), Scottish traveller. His peregrinations ranged from the Shetlands to Tunis and from Hungary to Spain, over 19 years. His autobiographical travel-tale is vivid and fascinating reading.

The Totall Discourse of Rare Adventures and Painful Peregrinations (1632; repr. 1906); A True and Experimental Discourse upon the last siege of Breda (1637); The Siege of Newcastle (1645); Poems (ed. J. Maidment, 1863).

S. C. Chew in The Crescent and the Rose (1937); B. Penrose in Urbane Travelers 1591-1635 (1942). J.K.

Litré, EMILE (*Paris 1 II 1801; †ibid. 2 VI 1881), French writer. Littré was the chief exponent of materialistic positivism, in a period which pinned its faith to science. He played a political role in the Third Republic, becoming a député in 1871 and a Senator in 1875. His learning was deep and varied. His chief work remains his dictionary, which is a treasure-house of modern French.

Analyse raisonnée du cours de philosophie positive (1845); Histoire de la langue française (1862); Dictionnaire de la langue française (1863-72); A. Comte et la philosophie positive (1863); La science au point de vue philosophique (1873).

C. A. Sainte-Beuve, Notice sur L. (1863); M. de

Fleury, Éloge de L. (1920); J. Fileyosant, L. poète (1933).
M.G.; J.P.R.

Litwos: see Sienkiewicz, HENRYK.

Liu AN (†122 B.C.), Chinese writer. Liu, grandson of the first Han Emperor, Kao-tsu, became King of Huai-nan in 164. He gave his patronage to poets, writers and Taoist adepts. The book Huai-nan tzü, ascribed to him, is considered to be the work both of Liu and of his protégés. This finely written collection of philosophic essays, though predominantly Taoist in tone, embraces many schools of earlier and contemporary thought. More than half of the book was lost at an early date. Liu and his court also produced many fu-poems (126 were collected in the Han imperial library) and are likely to have been concerned in the transmission of the anthology Ch'u-tz'ü.

Huai-nan tzü (part. trs: E. Morgan, 'The Operations and Manifestations of Tao Exemplified in History' in Jour. N. China Branch Roy. Asiat. Soc., LII, 1922, 'An Ancient Philosopher's View of the Perfect Life' in Asiat. Rev., XXI, 1925 and Tao, the Great Luminant, 1933; B. E. Wallacker, The Huai-nan-tzu, Book Eleven, 1962).—FU-POEMS: Chao-yin shih (tr. D. Hawkes in Ch'u Tz'ü: The Songs of the South, 1959).

E. Erkes, 'Das Weltbild des Huai-nan-tze' in Ostasiatische Zeitschrift (1917).
A.R.D.

Liu CHI (□Ch'ing-t'ien 1 VII 1311; †16 V 1375), Chinese poet and scholar. Liu was among the principal advisers of the first Ming Emperor in his struggle for the throne and for a time after his accession (1368). A prolific poet of considerable merit, he also left a small book of philosophic dialogues, Yü-li tzü, sceptical in spirit.

Ch'êng-i po chi (coll. works; sel. trs in: H. A. Giles, Gems of Chinese Literature, 2nd ed. 1923; G. Margouliès, Anthologie raisonnée de la littérature chinoise, 1948).
A.R.D.

Liu CHIH-CHI (□P'êng-ch'êng 661; †An-chou 721), Chinese historian. Liu is regarded as the founder of historical criticism in China with his Shih-t'ung (completed 710). The work is divided into 'inner' (discussing historical presentation) and 'outer' chapters (containing his criticisms of earlier histories).

E. G. Pulleyblank, 'Chinese historical criticism: Liu Chih-chi and Ssu-ma Kuang' in Historians of China and Japan (ed. with W. G. Beasley; 1961).
A.R.D.

Liu HSIANG (□Fêng 79; †8 B.C.), Chinese scholar. Liu held office under Emperors Hsüan, Yüan and Ch'êng. He took part as a Ku-liang scholar in the Shih-ch'ü discussions on the classics (51), but his great work, completed by his son Liu* Hsin, was the collation of the books of the imperial library

(26 onwards). He prepared a description of each book and these descriptions he later collected under the title Pieh-lu, thus becoming China's first bibliographer. His Shuo-yüan, Hsin-hsü and Lieh-nü chuan (The Position of Women in Early China, tr. A. R. O'Hara, 1945) are collections of historical material with a moral intention. He is also said to have edited the famous anthology Ch'u-tz'ü, which contains nine of his own fu-poems (Ch'u Tz'u: The Songs of the South, tr. D. Hawkes, 1959).

A.R.D.

Liu HSTEH (□Tung-kuan c. 465; †c. 522), Chinese literary critic. Liu held a court post under Liang Wu-ti (c. 520) and became intimate with the heir-apparent Hsiao* T'ung, who greatly admired his Wên-hsin tiao-lung (501-502; The Literary Mind and the Carving of Dragons, tr. V. Y.-C. Shih, 1959). In this work, Liu treats the origin of literary forms which he derives in every case from the Confucian classics, and the psychology and technique of writing.

A.R.D.

Liu Hsin (□Fêng c. 46 B.C.; †A.D. 23), Chinese scholar. Liu, who had assisted his father, Liu* Hsiang, in his bibliographical labours, succeeded to his office and completed his work. His 'Seven Summaries' (Ch'i-lüeh), an annotated catalogue of the imperial collection, was largely incorporated by Pan* Ku in his Han shu (Ch. 30). He also obtained official recognition of the 'old' texts of the classics. K'ang* Yu-wei wrongly contended that he forged them, particularly the Tso-chuan and Chou-li, to support Wang Mang's usurpation of the empire.

B. Karlgren, 'On the nature and history of the Tso chuan' in Göteborgs Högskolas Årsskrift, XXXII (1926) and 'The early history of the Chou li and Tso chuan texts' in Bull. Mus. Far Eastern Antiq., III (1931); H. Maspéro, 'La composition et la date du Tso tchuan' in Mélanges chinois et bouddhiques, I (1932).
A.R.D.

Liu O (□Tan-t'u 18 X 1857; †Ili 23 VIII 1909), Chinese novelist and scholar, received an unconventional education through his father's interest in Western sciences. Beginning as a doctor, he later engaged in river conservancy and the promotion of railways and mines. He was banished to Ili (1908). His only novel, Lao-ts'an yu-chi (first pub. 1904-07), which was an attack upon the administrative system, has been justly acclaimed. Among the first to realize the significance of the Yin oracle-bones, he gathered and published reproductions of a large epigraphic collection.

Lao-ts'an yu-chi (20 chs; The Travels of Lao Ts'an, tr. H. Shadick, 1952; supp., 6 chs, 1935; tr. Lin Yutang in Widow, Nun and Courtesan, 1951).

J. Průšek, 'Liu O et son roman le Pèlerinage du Vieux Boîteux' in Archiv Orientální, XV (1946).

A.R.D.

Liu PAI-YÜ (*Peking 1915), Chinese short-story writer and essayist, who published his first collection (Ts'ao-yüan shang) in 1937, is best known for his war stories. A writer with considerable descriptive powers, he maintained some individuality amid the imposed stereotypes of the 1950s and 1960s.

FICTION: Huo-kuang tsai ch'ien (1950; Flames Ahead, Peking, 1954); Ts'ao-ch'ên liu tien-chung (1952; Six A.M. and Other Stories, Peking, 1953). —ESSAYS: Hung ma-nao chi (1962; sel. tr. in Chinese Lit., 1959, No. 11; 1960, Nos 7 and 11; 1961, Nos 2 and 6; 1963, No. 3). A.R.D.

Liu SHIH-P'EI (□□-chêng 26 V 1884; †Peking 20 XI 1919), Chinese scholar. Liu, himself the last of a distinguished scholarly family, was among the last important scholars in the native tradition. Between 1903 and 1909 he engaged in revolutionary activities and was interested in socialism and anarchism. Then he swung to an anti-revolutionary position. In 1915 he supported the attempt to make Yüan Shih-k'ai Emperor.

Liu Shên-shu hsien-shêng i-shu (coll. scholarly works; 1941).—M. Gaster, Chinese Intellectuals and the Revolution of 1911 (1969). A.R.D.

Liu TSUNG-YÜAN (□□-tung 773; †Liu-chou 819), Chinese essayist and poet. Liu's career at the capital was cut short when he was involved in the downfall of Wang Shu-wên, who had held the chief political power in 805. He was banished to a provincial post at Yung-chou, Hunan. In 815 the supporters of Wang Shu-wên were recalled but sent once again to the provinces; Liu went to Liu-chou, Kwangsi.

Although later acclaimed one of the 'eight [prose] masters of the T'ang and Sung dynasties' and thus a model for ku-wên ('old-style') prose, he played a less active part in the T'ang ku-wên movement than his friend Han* Yü. He lacked Han's self-confidence and did not gather disciples; he adhered to Buddhism of a contemplative kind in contrast to the other's dogmatic Confucianism. His long stay in Yung-chou enabled him to make many excursions to famous beauty-spots and, in describing these, he produced a new essay-genre, yu-chi ('records of travel'). Revealing a great love of nature, these essays contain some of China's finest descriptive prose. The same excellence in description of nature appears in his poetry. In the field of scholarship he produced a critical study of the early historical work, Kuo-yü.

Liu Ho-tung chi (coll. works; sel. trs in: H. A. Giles, Gems of Chinese Literature, II, 2nd ed. 1923; W. Bynner, The Jade Mountain, 1929; S. Jenyns, Selections From the Three Hundred Poems of the T'ang Dynasty, 1940, and A Further Selection, 1944).

A. R. Davis, 'The fortunate banishment—Liu

Tsung-yüan in Yung-chou' in Jour. Orient. Soc. Australia, IV.2 (1966; incl. tr. of the 'Eight Records of Yung-chou'). A.R.D.

Liu YÜ-HSI (□□-yang 772; †842), Chinese poet. Liu was, like his friend Liu* Tsung-yuan, involved in Wang Shu-wên's downfall (805). He spent 805–827 in provincial exile, during which he encountered popular songs for which he wrote words. Thereby he contributed to the development of the tz'ü-poem. Perhaps under his influence, his friend Po* Chü-i wrote similar song-words.

Liu Pin-k'o wên-chi (coll. works; sel. trs in: H. A. Giles, Gems of Chinese Literature, 2nd ed. 1923; W. Bynner, The Jade Mountain, 1929; G. Margouliès, Anthologie raisonnée de la littérature chinoise, 1948). A.R.D.

Liu YUNG (□□-chung-an, Fukien first half 11th century), Chinese poet, passed the metropolitan examination in 1034, but achieved only minor provincial posts. He made a great contribution to the development of the Sung tz'ü-lyric, turning it towards an increased colloquial diction and longer forms with more detailed descriptions.

Yüeh-chang chi (coll. tz'ü; sel. tr. in Anthologie de la poésie chinoise classique, ed. P. Demiéville, 1962). A.R.D.

Liutprand of Cremona (*?Pavia c. 920; †972), of Lombard birth, attached himself to the Emperor Otto I, who made him Bishop of Cremona (961). His Relatio de legatione Constantinopolitana is a rhetorical, amusing and pedantic description of his mission to Byzantium. His Antapodosis ('Tit-for-Tat'), an earlier work, in prose and verse, is, in spite of its diffuse and gossiping character, a historical work of some value, as is his short Gesta Ottonis.

Ed. J. Becker (1915).

F. A. Wright, The Works of L. of C. (1930); M. Lintzel, Studien über L. von C. (1933). F.J.E.R.

Livesay, DOROTHY (*Winnipeg, Manitoba 12 X 1909; ∞1937 Duncan C. Macnair [†1959]), Canadian poet who has been welfare worker, English teacher in Zambia and University writer-in-residence. Her work is characterized by simplicity and muted rhythm, and much of it is devoted to direct and indirect social protest.

Green Pitcher (1928); Poems for People (1947); New Poems (1955); Selected Poems (1957); Unquiet Bed (1967); Documentaries (1968).

M. W. Steinberg, 'D. L., poet of affirmation' in Brit. Columbia Libr. Quart., XXIV (1960). R.Su.

Livijn, CLAS (*Skänninge 12 XI 1781; †Stockholm 12 X 1844), Swedish neo-Romantic author. His

Samvetets harpa (1822), modelled on E. T. A. Hoffmann*, was the first fantastic tale in Swedish literature. His best book is Spader dame (1824), whose typically Romantic hero reflects much of Livijn himself.

Samlade skrifter (ed. A. I. Arwidsson, 2 vols, 1850–52).

J. Mortensen, C. L. (1913).

C.H.K.

Livingstone, DAVID (*Blantyre, Lanarkshire 19 III 1813; ∞1844 Mary Moffatt; †Ilala 1 V 1873), Scottish missionary and explorer. Worked in a cotton-mill from the age of ten; qualified as a medical missionary and set out for Bechuanaland in 1840. Discovered the Victoria Falls of the Zambesi; explored the Zambesi, 1858–63; and in 1866–71 explored the country between Nyasa and Tanganyika. He opened up all Central Africa to Christianity; was the means of abolishing the slave trade; and explored vast tracts of Africa with heroic courage and scientific thoroughness.

Missionary Travels (1857); The Zambesi and its Tributaries (1865); Last Journals (1874); The Zambesi Journal (ed. J. P. R. Wallis, 1956).

W. G. Blaikie, Personal Life of D. L. (1880); H. Johnston, L. and the Exploration of Central Africa (1891); H. G. Adams, D. L. (1922); R. Coupland, L.'s Last Journey (1945). J.K.

Livingstone, DOUGLAS (JAMES) (*Kuala Lumpur 5 I 1932), South African poet. After 13 years in Rhodesia, he now works as a bacteriologist in Durban.

The Skull in the Mud (1960); Sjambok and Other Poems From Africa (1964); Eyes Closed Against the Sun (1970). U.La.

Livius Andronicus, LUCIUS (second half of 3rd century B.C.), Greek-born schoolmaster, the first to translate Greek tragedies and comedies for performance at the Roman festivals. Fragments of eight tragedies and three comedies survive, as also of a translation into Saturnian verses of Homer's* Odyssey which was still read in Horace's* boyhood. In 207 he composed a choral hymn in honour of Juno, the style of which struck the historian Livy* as crude in the extreme.

E. H. Warmington, Remains of Old Latin, II (with tr.; 1936).

E. Fraenkel, 'L. A.' in A. Pauly, G. Wissowa et al., Real-Encyclopädie der classischen Altertumswissenschaft, supp. V, 598 ff. (1931); S. Mariotti, Livio Andronico e la traduzione artistica (Milan, 1952). H.D.J.

Livius de Frulovisiis, TITUS (*Ferrara c. 1400), humanist, Latin playwright and historian. After teaching as a schoolmaster in Venice, where his satiric comedies won him hostility, he came to England and was appointed poet and orator to the Duke of Gloucester. Later, however, he returned to Italy. He dedicated his Vita Henrici Quinti to Henry VI. S.J.L.

Vita Henrici Quinti (ed. T. Hearne, 1716); Opera inedita (ed. C. W. Previté-Orton, 1932).

R. Weiss, 'Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, and T. L. F.' in Fritz Saxl: Memorial Essays (ed. D. J. Gordon, 1957). S.J.L. (Tor.)

Livy (TITUS LIVIUS) (*Padua 59 B.C.; †ibid. A.D. 17), Roman historian. Livy devoted almost all his life to his great history of Rome in 142 books from the beginnings to the death of Drusus in 9 B.C. The work is divided into decads and pentads—1–5 the legendary period up to the Gallic conquest, 6–15 to the beginning of the Punic Wars, 21–30 the Second Punic War, 31–45 the Macedonian Wars. The treatment was annalistic up to Book 109, where the civil wars rendered that method unsuitable. Of this vast work only 35 books remain (1–10, 21–45). Periochae or summaries of the missing books (except 136 and 137) are extant, and a very few fragments of the text itself have been found. Livy wishes to present a splendid panorama of Roman greatness rather than to appraise facts and analyse causes, and accordingly he is frequently content with a superficial estimation or arbitrary selection of authorities, while invaluable primary sources are neglected. For the early period Livy follows Valerius* Antias and Claudius* Quadrigarius, to whom Polybius* and Coelius* Antipater are added from 20 onwards. In literary powers Livy has had few equals. His style is plain and manly in narrative, bold and colourful in speeches, and wonderfully sustained and consistent throughout. In portrayal of character he is rivalled only by Tacitus*, whom he perhaps surpasses in the subtlety of his psychology. In antiquity Livy enjoyed high esteem but the parent work was replaced for the general reading public by epitomes. There is no indication of the survival of a complete Livy after the time of Priscian*.

J.A.W.

Ed. R. S. Conway et al. (Bks 1–35; 5 vols, 1914–65); ed. with comm. W. Weissenborn and H. J. Müller (10 vols, 1880–1924); R. M. Ogilvie, A Commentary on L., Books 1–5 (1965).—Trs: B. O. Foster et al. (14 vols, with gen. index, 1919–59); A. de Selincourt, L.: The Early History of Rome (Bks 1–5; 1960) and L.: The War With Hannibal (Bks 21–30; 1965).

H. Taine, Essai sur Tite-Live (8th ed. 1910); H. Bornecque, Tite-Live (1933); A. Klotz, Livius und seine Vorgänger (1940–41; repr. 1964); M. L. W. Laistner, The Greater Roman Historians (1947); A. H. McDonald, 'The style of L.' in Jour. Roman Stud., XLVII (1957); R. Syme, 'L. and Augustus' in Harvard Stud. in Class. Philol., LXIV (1959); P. G. Walsh, L.: His Historical Aims and Methods (1961); Latin Historians (ed. T. A. Dorey, 1966). J.D.

Ljubiša, STJEPAN MITROV (*Budva 28 II 1824; †Vienna 11 XI 1878), Montenegrin writer. Self-educated, he read widely and entered politics. His stories of his own region, in its own dialect, have particular philological and ethnological interest.

Pripovijesti crnogorske i primorske (1875); Pričanja Vuka Dojčevića (1877); Pripovijesti (1882); Celokupna dela (2 vols, 1930); Pripovetke (sel. stories; 1969).

V. Latković, S. M. L. (1964).

V.J.

Llorente, TEODOR (*1836; †1911), the most prominent of the poets who contributed to reviving Catalan literature in Valencia. He translated Goethe's Faust and many modern writers into Spanish.

J.M.B. i R. (G.W.R.)

Lloyd, EVAN (*Llanycil, Merioneth 15 IV 1734; †ibid. 26 I 1776), Anglo-Welsh poet, was friendly with Henry Bilston Legge, John Wilkes* and David Garrick*. His satirical verse varies from doggerel to polished couplet, from cool wit to harsh invective. The Methodist (1766) was declared to be libellous and Lloyd was imprisoned in the King's Bench prison in V 1768.

C.P.

The Powers of the Pen (1766; 1768); The Curate (1766, 1832); Conversation (1767); An Epistle to David Garrick (1773).—Poetical Works (1840).

E. Alfred Jones, 'Two Welsh correspondents of John Wilkes' in Y Cymmrodor, XXIX (1919); C. Price, 'David Garrick and E. L.' in Rev. Eng. Stud., new ser., II (1952), 'The unpublished letters of E. L.' in Jour. Nat. Libr. Wales, VIII (1953–54) and A Man of Genius and a Welchman (inaugural lecture, U. C. Swansea; 1963).

C.P. (M.W.T.)

Llull, RAMON (*Palma de Mallorca 1235; †?1315), Catalan poet, writer and philosopher. In his youth he married and wrote lyric poetry in the style of the troubadours, but destroyed his poems and abandoned his family following a religious crisis. His main purpose thenceforth became the conversion of the infidels. He urged upon Christian missionaries a full study and understanding of Hebrew, Arabic and Oriental languages, religions and thought, so that they should be fully equipped to discuss other religions and show the superiority of Christianity. He himself knew Arabic and wrote some of his works in that tongue. A man of tireless energy, he spent over 30 years travelling through Europe and North Africa preaching, debating and writing. He urged unwilling Popes and Kings to summon a Council to convert the infidels and to unite all the orders of knighthood for a Crusade.

His extant works number 243 and include several versions, in Latin and Catalan, of his ambitious and monumental Ars magna, an abstruse method of thought which set out, with the aid of diagrams, to provide an answer to all philosophical and theological problems. Other fundamental works are the Libre de contemplació en Déu, a lengthy encyclopaedia of medieval thought, and the Libre del gentil e los tres savis, in which a Gentile presides over a rational and amical dispute between a Jew, a Muslim and a Christian. He also wrote an influential treatise on chivalry, the Libre de l'Orde de cavalleria.

Llull is the author of the first novel written in a Romance language, Blanquerna (c. 1285), a vivid and well-constructed utopia in which the five essential stages of existence, as Llull saw them, are displayed; after describing the marriage of Blanquerna's parents, Llull shows his hero successively as a monk, Bishop, Pope and hermit. The novel also contains a masterpiece of mysticism, the Libre d'Amich e Amat. Fèlix, or Libre de meravelles, is a typical medieval dialogue on the marvels of the physical world; attached to it is the Libre de las bèsties, a collection of animal fables of Oriental origin. Llull also wrote a considerable amount of poetry, of strictly didactic purpose, in a Provençalized language; the best-known are the autobiographical poems Lo desconort and the Cant de Ramon. Most of the rest of his vast output was in Latin on philosophical and theological subjects. His influence in the later Middle Ages and beyond was profound, and many apocryphal exploits and works were attributed to him. He was beatified by the Roman Catholic Church.

Obres essencials (intro. J. Rubió, 2 vols, 1957–60); Opera Latina (1959– ).—Trs by E. A. Peers: Book of the Lover and the Beloved (1923; rev. 1925); Blanquerna (1926); The Tree of Love (1926); Book of the Beasts (1927).

E. A. Peers, R. L., A Biography (1929) and Fool of Love (1946); E. W. Platzeck, R. L., sein Leben, seine Werke, die Grundlagen seines Denkens (2 vols, 1962); A. Llinarès, R. L., philosophe de l'action (1963); J. N. Hillgarth, R. L. and Lullius in 14th Century France (1971).

G.W.R.

Llwyd, MORGAN (*probably in Cynfal, Merioneth 1619; †c. 1641 ?Ann; †3 VI 1659; †Wrexham), Welsh prose-writer. He early came under the influence of Walter Cradock, the Puritan leader, and during the Civil War he was probably a chaplain with the Parliamentary forces. For a time he was an itinerant preacher in North Wales; he also ministered to a church at Wrexham. He commands a vigorous and supple style and his best work abounds in poetic imagery and pregnant aphorisms. His Llyfr y Tri Aderyn combines a tract for the times with a discussion of spiritual rebirth. He also wrote some poetry.

Llythur ir Cymru Cariadus (?1653); Dirgelwch i rai iw ddeall... sef tri aderyn yn ymddiddan (?1653); Gwaedd ynghymru yn wyneb pob cydwybod (?1653); Lazarus and his Sisters discoursing of Paradise... (1655); An Honest Discourse between Three Neighbours... (1655); Gair o'r Gair (1656); Yr Ymroddiad and Y Disgybl ai Athraw o Newydd (1657; both tr. from John Sparrow's Eng. tr. of the works of Jacob Böhme); Cyfarwyddid i'r Cymru (1657); Gwyddor Uchod (1657).—Gweithiau M. L. (I, ed. T. E. Ellis, 1899; II, ed. J. H. Davies, 1908).

W. J. Gruffydd, Llenyddiaeth Cymru (1926); E. L. Evans, M. L. (1930); Hugh Bevan, M. L. y Llenor (1954); G. F. Nuttall, The Welsh Saints 1640–1660 (1957). B.Re.

Lo KUAN-CHUNG, courtesy name of Lo PÊN (*c. 1330; †c. 1400), Chinese novelist. Hardly anything is known of the life of Lo author of two of China's most famous novels. The earliest extant print of his San-kuo-chih t'ung-su yen-i dates from the Chia-ching period (1522–66); a number of abridged editions of this appeared in the latter half of the 16th century. However, the most current text is that extensively revised by Mao Tsung-kang (1644). Lo himself had almost certainly based his own work on a professional story-teller's text. His romance Shui-hu chuan is equally not originally conceived. The story, founded on historical events of the early 12th century, was a frequent subject of Yüan drama and occurs also in Hsüan-ho i-shih, which comes from the latter part of the 13th century. Again Lo's work (oldest surviving edition not older than the Chia-ching period) has been much extended and revised (the popular edition was made by Chin Jen-jui, 1644). Although some ten of his novels were known during the Ming dynasty, only three others have survived, although only in altered versions. He also wrote three plays of which one has been preserved.

San-Sui p'ing-yao chuan; Sui-T'ang chih-chuan; Ts'an-T'ang Wu-tai-shih yen-i.—San Kuo or Romance of the Three Kingdoms (tr. C. H. Brewitt-Taylor, 2 vols, 1925); All Men Are Brothers (Shui-hu chuan); tr. P. S. Buck, 2 vols, 1933).

R. G. Irwin, The Evolution of a Chinese Novel (1953) and 'Water Margin revisited' in T'oung pao, XLVIII.4–5 (1960); C. T. Hsia, The Classic Chinese Novel (1968). A.R.D.

Lobo, EUGENIO GERARDO (*Cuerva, Toledo 24 IX 1679; †Barcelona 1750), Spanish poet. As an army officer he took part in the War of Succession, in the reconquest of Orán and in the battles of Italy. He died general and governor of Barcelona. He is an interesting poet, tolerable in his epics, good in his satires and at times excellent in his letrillas, ballads and décimas.

Poesías (ed. L. A. Cueto in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LXI).

V. Barrantes, 'Biografía de E. G. L.' in Semanario Pintoresco Esp., CCLXVI (1850); J. Rubio, 'Algunas aportaciones a la biografía y obras de E. G. L.' in Rev. de Filol. Esp., XXXI (1947).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Lobo, FRANCISCO RODRIGUES (*Leiria c. 1580; †1622), Portuguese poet and novelist. He studied at Coimbra and later entered the service of the Duke of Braganza, at a time when Portugal was under Spanish dominion.

His finest work, Corte na aldeia e noites de inverno (1619), consists of a series of discussions between five friends, in the style of Castiglione's* Cortegiano, but subtly expressing also the nostalgia of the Portuguese for their lost independence. Lobo also left a collection of romances (ballads), nearly all in Spanish; a book of eclogues, strongly moralistic in tone; a long epic on the Portuguese national hero, Nuno Alvares; and a trilogy of pastoral novels, chiefly notable for the abundance of excellent lyrics they contain.

Corte na aldeia e noites de inverno (1619; ed. A. Lopes Vieira, 1945).—NOVELS: A primavera (1601); O pastor peregrino (1608); O desenganado (1614).—VERSE: Primeira e segunda parte dos romances de . . . (1596); Églogas (1605; ed. J. Pereira Tavares, 1928); O condestabre de Portugal D. Nuno Alvares Pereira (1610).—Obras políticas e pastoris (4 vols, 1774).—Poesias (ed. A. Lopes Vieira, 1940).

R. Jorge, F. R. L. (1920); C. A. Ferreira, 'F. R. L. Fontes inéditas' and 'F. R. L.' in Bíblas, XIX (1943); M. de L. Belchior Pontes, Itinerário poético de R. L. (1959). T.P.W.

Lobo (y) Lasso de la Vega, GABRIEL (*Madrid 1559), Spanish poet and dramatist. He wrote a number of rather mediocre ballads and two tragedies, one in defence of Dido's chastity, the other about the fall of Constantinople. He also wrote an epic about Hernán Cortés*.

Primera parte del romancero y tragedias (1587); Romancero general (1600, 1604, 1605; ed. A. González Palencia, 2 vols, 1947).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Locher, JAKOB, called PHILOMUSUS (*Ehingen 1471; †1528), Swabian humanist. He studied from 1487 under Sebastian Brant* in Basle; his free translation of the latter's Narrenschiff as Stultifera navis (1497) was better known and more influential than the original (see Alexander Barclay*). From 1506 he was Professor of poetry at Ingolstadt; he prepared the German editio princeps of Horace* (1498).

D. O'Connor, 'Notes on the influence of Brant's Narrenschiff outside Germany' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XX (1905); J. Kärtner, J. L.s 'S. N.' und ihr Verhältnis zum N-Sch. S.B.s (diss. Frankfurt, 1923). F.P.P.

Locke, DAVID ROSS (*Vestal, N.Y. 20 IX 1833; †Toledo, Ohio 15 II 1888), American humorist. He invented the satirical butt, Petroleum V. Nasby, a corrupt and illiterate preacher. Published during the Civil War, his humorous papers viciously attacked slavery and were enjoyed by Lincoln.

H.L.C.

The Nasby Papers (1864); Divers Opinions of

Yours Trooly, Petroleum V. Nasby (1865); The Nasby Letters (1893).

C. Clemens, Petroleum Vesuvius Nasby (1936); W. Blair, Native American Humor (1937); J. C. Austin, Petroleum V. Nasby (D. R. L.) (1965).
H.L.C. (I.W.)

Locke, JOHN (*Wrighton 29 VII 1632; †Oates 28 X 1704), English philosopher and social thinker. His Essay Concerning Human Understanding (1690) is a source of British empiricism; while his Two Treatises of Government (1690) influenced political thought on the Continent and in America in a liberal, constitutionalist direction. His philosophical work contains elements of medieval thought, of British common sense, and responses to the scientific revolution of the 17th century. Locke lectured at Christ Church, Oxford, was a confidant and servant of Shaftesbury, promoted school reforms, and in 1688 became Fellow of the Royal Society.

Epistola de Tolerantia (1689); Second Letter Concerning Toleration (1690); Third... (1692); Two Treatises on Government (1690; ed. P. Laslett, 1959); An Essay Concerning Human Understanding (1690; enlarged 1694, 1700; ed. A. C. Fraser, 2 vols, 1894); Some Thoughts Concerning Education (1693; enlarged 1699); The Educational Writings of J. L. (ed. J. W. Adamson, 1922); The Educational Writings of J. L. (ed. J. Axtell, 1969); The Reasonableness of Christianity (1695); A Vindication (1695); A Second Vindication (1697); Posthumous Works (1706); Works (3 vols, 1714; 10 vols, 1823); L.'s Travels of France 1675-79 (ed. J. Lough, 1953); Essays on the Law of Nature (ed. W. van Leyden, 1954); Two Tracts on Government (ed. P. Abrams, 1967).

A. C. Fraser, L. (1890); S. Alexander, L. (1908); J. Gibson, L.'s Theory of Knowledge (1917); H. O. Christophersen, A Bibliographical Introduction to the Study of J. L. (1930); J. L. (1933); N. K. Smith, J. L. (1933); B. Willey, The Seventeenth Century Background (1934); K. MacLean, J. L. and the English Literature of the 18th Century (1936); R. I. Aaron, J. L. (1937, 1955); H. MacLachlan, The Religious Opinions of Milton, L. and Newton (1941); J. W. Yolton, J. L. and the Way of Ideas (1956); M. Cranston, J. L., A Biography (1957); P. Long, A Summary Catalogue of the Lovelace Collection of Papers of J. L. in the Bodleian Library (1959); E. L. Tuveson, The Imagination as a Means of Grace (1960); C. B. McPherson, The Political Theory of Possessive Individualism: Hobbes to L. (1962); J. L. Problems and Perspectives (ed. J. W. Yolton, 1969).
G.Mo.

Locker Lampson, FREDERICK (*Greenwich 29 V 1821; ∞1850 Lady Charlotte Bruce, ∞1874 Hannah Lampson; †Rowfant 30 V 1895), English writer of vers de société, showing great neatness and polished simplicity.

London Lyrics (1857; 1904); Patchwork (1879); Rowfant Rhymes (1895); My Confidences (1896).
A. Birrell, An Appendix to the Rowfant Library (1900).
R.M.H. (M.A.)

Lockhart, JOHN GIBSON (*Wishaw 14 VII 1794; ∞1820 Sophia Scott; †Abbotsford 25 XI 1854), Scottish biographer and novelist. Educated at Glasgow and Balliol College, Oxford; called to the Scottish Bar 1816. Important contributor to Blackwood's Magazine, and editor of The Quarterly Review, 1825-53. Lockhart is a vigorous critic and, in Peter's Letters, a clever satirist; of his novels, Adam Blair has strength; but his chief claim to fame is his biography of his father-in-law, Sir Walter Scott*. Second only to Boswell's* Johnson, this Life has great qualities: proportion, humour, sympathy, sound criticism, a sense of drama, and brilliant, concentrated character-sketches.

Peter's Letter to his Kinsfolk (1819); Valerius (1821); Some passages in the Life of Adam Blair (1822; intro. D. Craig, repr. 1963); Ancient Spanish Ballads (1823); Reginald Dalton (1823); Matthew Wald (1824); Life of Robert Burns (1828); History of Napoleon Bonaparte (1829); Memoirs of the Life of Sir Walter Scott, Bart (7 vols, 1837-38).

A. Lang, The Life and Letters of J. G. L. (2 vols, 1896); M. Lochhead, J. G. L. (1954).
J.K.

Lodeizen, HANS [JOHANNES] AUGUST FREDERIK (*Naarden 20 VII 1924; †Lausanne 26 VII 1950), Dutch poet, often considered a forerunner of the EXPERIMENTELEN. He wrote poems with new images and associations, of a surprisingly paradoxical nature—nostalgic pessimism combined with lust for life.

Het innerlijk behang (1949); Het innerlijk behang en andere gedichten (1952).—Paul Rodenko, Over H. L. (1954).
J.J.O.

Lodensteyn, JODOCUS VAN (*Delft 6 II 1620; †Utrecht 6 VIII 1677). Dutch religious poet, belonged to a mystical pietistic movement, pupil and friend of Voetius, minister at Sluis and Utrecht. His poetry, which is sometimes simple and naive, at other times baroque and passionate, remained popular for a long time with the Dutch and German devout mystics. His Uytspanningen appeared in 1676.

S. Gorter, 'L.'s Liederen' in Letterk. Studiën, I (1871); P. Proost, J. van L. (1880, 1882; 1st ed. with, 2nd ed. without, biblio.); D. T. Enklaar, 'Het voorbeeld van L.'s medicynmeester' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Lett., LVI (1937); M. J. A. de Vrijer, Uren met L. (1944); J. C. Trimp, J. van L. als piëtistisch dichter (1952); A. van Duinkerken, 'J. van L.' in De Gids, CXX (1957).
A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Lodge, THOMAS (*London 1558; ∞Jane Aldred; †ibid. 1625), English lyric poet, pamphleteer,

dramatist, and writer of verse and prose romance. At Merchant Taylors' (1571), Trinity College, Oxford (1573), Lincoln's Inn (1578), he turned from law to literature, mixing in the circles of Greene*, Rich*, Daniel*, and Drayton*. After defending plays against Gosson* (1580), he attempted to live by writing social criticism (Alarum against usurers, 1583), narrative poetry (Scillaes Metamorphosis, 1589), novels (Rosalynde, 1590), plays (The Wounds of Civill War, 1594), and satire (A Fig for Momus, 1595). Lodge made two voyages to America (1585–86, 1591–93), became a Roman Catholic, and abandoned poetry for medicine, graduating at Avignon (1598), and practising with distinction, in London and abroad, for the rest of his life. Rosalynde, most adept of the imitations of Lyly's* euphuistic style, went through nine editions before 1614.

Complete Works (4 vols, Hunterian Club, 1883 and 1963); Rosalynde (ed. G. Bullough in Narrative and Dramatic Sources of Shakespeare, II, 1958); Scillaes Metamorphosis (ed. E. S. Donno in Elizabethan Minor Epics, 1963); The Wounds of Civill War (ed. J. D. Wilson, Malone Soc., 1910). S. A. Tannenbaum, A Concise Bibliography (1940); N. B. Paradise, T. L. (1931); C. J. Sisson, T. L. and Other Elizabethans (1933); A. Walker, 'Life of T. L.' in Rev. Eng. Stud., IX (1933), X (1934); E. A. Tenney, T. L. (1935); P. L. Ryan, T. L. (1959); W. D. Rae, T. L. (1967). T.P.M.

Loerke, OSKAR (*Jungen 13 III 1884; †Berlin 24 II 1941), German poet. He has been compared with Rilke* and George*. The lack of obvious brilliance in form and the esoteric mysticism of his 'revelation' have, however, limited his appeal.

VERSE: Wanderschaft (1911); Atem der Erde (1930; his best work); Der Silberdistelwald (1934); Abschiedshand (ed. H. Kasack, 1949).—ESSAYS: Zeitgenossen aus vielen Zeiten (1925); Hausfreunde. Charakterbilder (1939).—SELECTED WORKS: Lyrischer Nachlass (1942); Gedichte (sel. H. Kasack, 1954); Tagebücher 1903–39 (1955); Gedichte und Prosa (2 vols, 1958); Reisetagebücher (1960); Der Bücherkarren: Besprechungen im Berliner Börsen-Courier 1920–28 (ed. H. Kasack and R. Tgahrt, 1965).

H. Kasack, O. L. (1951); O. L. 1884–1964 (ed. B. Zeller, 1964). R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Loewisohn, SOLOMON (*Moor, Hungary 1788; †ibid. 15 VI 1821), Hebrew poet, scholar, essayist and historian. As a young man he went to Vienna and became a proof-reader of Hebrew books. His first book was philological, Sicha Beolam Hane-shamot (Prague, 1811). Mechkare Erez (1819; 2nd ed. entitled Erez Kedumim, Vilna, 1839; Ger. tr. Biblische Geographie, 1821) was the first Biblical geographical dictionary. The first and only volume of his history in German was Vorlesungen über die neuere Geschichte der Juden (1820). But these works are of less value in Hebrew literature than his Melitzat Yeshurun or Ars Poetica (Vienna, 1816). This, with his Hamelitza Medaberet, a single poem in blank verse, establishes his fame as a poet. S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Lofraso, ANTONIO DE (*Alghero, Sardinia; fl. late 16th century), Spanish novelist. Little is known of his life, except that he was a soldier and lived for some time in poverty in Barcelona about 1572. His unreadable pastoral novel was praised ironically by Cervantes* in Don Quixote, I. 6.

Los diez libros de Fortuna de amor (Barcelona, 1573; London, 1740). E.M.W.

Logan, JOHN (*Soutra 1748; †London 25 XII 1788), Scottish poet. A minister in Leith from 1773, Logan was forced by intemperance to resign his charge and took to letters in London. He dabbled with drama; but his forte is the lyric, of which The Braes of Yarrow is the most melodious example. (See also Michael Bruce*.)

Poems (1781); Essays on the Manners and Governments of Asia (1782); Runnamede (1783); A View of Ancient History (1788); Sermons (2 vols, 1790).

J. Anderson, Life of J. L. (1795). J.K.

Logau, FRIEDRICH VON (*Breslau VI 1604; †Liegnitz 25 VII 1655/56), German epigrammatist, councillor to the Dukes of Brieg. His epigrams treat most of the principal themes of the period and show a shrewd, honest and Christian person, whose invaluable comments on 17th-century life were admired by Lessing*.

Erstes Hundert Teutscher Reimensprüche Salomons von Golaw (1638); Salomons von Golaw Deutscher Sinn-Getichte Drey Tausend (1654; ed. G. Eitner, 1872; sel. ed. H. Walter, 1956).

P. Hempel, Die Kunst L.s (1917; repr. 1967); S. H. Moore, 'A neglected poet: F. von L.' in Ger. Life and Letters (1949–50); A. Lindquist, Det tyska 1600-tals epigrammets motiver och tendenser (1949). L.W.F.

Lohenstein, DANIEL CASPER, later VON (*Nimptsch 1635; †Breslau 1683), German poet, dramatist and novelist. He early made the acquaintance of Hofmann* von Hofmannswaldau and his first drama, Ibrahim Bassa (1653), was written at school in Breslau under Gryphius* influence; his elegy, Cypresstafel, on the death of his sister, often considered his best poem, was written when he was a student. He practised law in Breslau, where he later attained high administrative office, and accompanied embassies to the imperial court. His lyric poetry shows brilliant formal sense and remarkable mastery of the conceit. His dramas show a world without transcendence, dominated by capricious fate, and his characters are moved by intrigue, self-preservation, cruelty and lust; the hero stands for no ideal, but is a technician in the art of life. His great unfinished novel, Grossmüthiger Feldherr Arminius (2 vols, 1689), unexpectedly contains some sober and dignified prose, though pathos and artificially intensified emotion predominate. In 1672 he published a translation from Gracián*, with Marino*, a characteristic author for this often puzzling, often underestimated writer.

Trauerspiele (dramas; crit. ed. K. G. Just, 3 vols, 1953–57).—LYRICS: Many limited eds during his lifetime; coll. ed., Blumen (1680); many of his poems in B. Neukirch, Herrn von Hofmannswaldau und anderer Deutscher auserlesene und bissher ungedruckte Gedichte (7 vols, 1695–1727; crit. ed. A. G. de Capua and E. A. Philippson, 1961–, in progress).—Cleopatra and sel. poems (ed. F. Bobertag in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., XXXVI, 1882–89).

Biblio. by H. von Müller in Werden und Wirken, Festgruss für K. W. Hiersemann (1924); H. Cysarz, 'L.' in Schlesische Lebensbilder, III (1928); M. Wehrli, Das barocke Geschichtsbild in L.s Arminius (1938); H. Hildebrandt, Die Staatsauffassung der schlesischen Barockdramatiker (1939); E. Lunding, Schlesisches Kunstdrama (Copenhagen, 1940; brilliant); H. Schöffler, Deutscher Osten im deutschen Geist (1940); L. Brede, 'Das grosse Gemüt in den Dramen L.s' in Literaturwissenschaftliches Jahrb. der Görresgesellschaft, VIII (1933); F. Schaufelberger, Das Tragische in L.s Trauerspielen (1945); K. G. Just, L.s Trauerspiele (1961); E. Verhofstadt, D. C. von L. (1964); G. Gillespie, D. C. von L.s Historical Tragedies (1965); E. M. Szarota, Künstler, Grübler und Rebellen (1967) and L.s Arminius (1970); W. Vosskamp, Zeit- und Geschichtsauffassung bei Gryphius und L. (1967); Peter Skrine, 'Blood, bombast and deaf gods' in Ger. Life and Letters, XXIV (1970–71).

L.W.F.

Lohmann, FERDINAND H. (*Eckernförde 1848; †nr Börne, Texas 18 VI 1921), Texas-German poet; teacher in Illinois and Texas.

VERSE: Texas-Blüten (Utica, 1908); To My Darling, and Other Poems (1910).—VARIOUS: Die deutsche Sprache (Chicago, 1904); Comfort, Texas (1904).

H. H. Fick in Monatshefte f. dt. Sprache (Wisc.), Jahrb. (1921); S. Metzenthin-Raunick, Deutsche Schriften in Texas, I (1935–36). E.R.

Lo-Johansson, IVAR (*Ösmo 23 II 1901), Swedish writer. Lo-Johansson was himself from the class of statare (i.e. farm labourers receiving payment in kind), and his novels are vehement and moving expositions of their miserable lot. He is considered one of the leading proletarian writers in Sweden.

Romaner och noveller (14 vols, 1950–51); Analfabeten (1951); Stockholmaren (1954); Journalisten

(1956); Författaren (1957); Socialisten (1958); Soldaten (1959); Proletärförfattaren (1960); Elektra (1967); Martyrerna (1968); Karriärsterna (1969). R. Oldberg, I. L.-J. (1957). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Lokhvitskaya, MYRRHA ALEXANDROVNA (*1869; †1905), Russian poetess. Intensely feminine, nostalgic and sensuously emotional, her musical verses had an accent of their own to which she later added a mystical element.

Stikhotvoreniya (5 vols, 1896–1904; VI, 1908).

N. Poyarkov, Poety nashikh dney (1907). J.L.

Lollo, ALBERTO (*Florence ?1508; †Ferrara 1568), Italian orator and scholar, known also as the author of a pastoral comedy, Aretusa (1564).

Aretusa (crit. ed. A. F. Pavanello, 1901).—E. Carrara, La poesia pastorale (1904–08). B.R.

Lomonosov, MIKHAIL VASILYEVICH (*Denisovka 1711; †St Petersburg 4 IV 1765), Russian author and scientist. Born into a fisherman's family near Archangel, he went at the age of 19 to study in Moscow, suffering great privations. In 1736 he was at the University of Marburg. Later he was forcibly enrolled into a Prussian regiment, but in 1741 escaped to Russia where, in 1745, he soon became Professor of chemistry and a member of the Academy of Sciences. He was intensely active not only as a Russian pioneer of modern science but also as a poet, dramatist, grammarian and reformer of the language. It was he who, in 1757, systematized the new, i.e. spoken, literary language, relegating the use of certain Church Slavonic elements only to the rhetorical 'grand style' in odes and heroic epics, as distinct from the more colloquial 'middle' and 'low' styles. As poet he confined himself mainly to his unfinished heroic epic Pëtr Velikiy ('Peter the Great'), and then to odes. He wrote 24 of them, with a grand rhetorical sweep successfully combined with what might be called scientific imagination. He moreover sanctioned Trediakovsky's* reform of Russian prosody by definitely substituting for the old syllabic metre the more suitable tonic iambic metre with regular, accented feet. By his scientific essays and letters Lomonosov also made a valuable contribution to Russian prose, thus justifying Belinsky's* saying that 'our literature begins with Lomonosov; he was its father and its nurse; he was its Peter the Great'.

Sochineniya (5 vols, 1891–1902); Russkaya poeziya (ed. S. A. Vengerov, 1894); Russkaya proza XVIII veka, I (1950); Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (10 vols, 1950–59); Stikhotvoreniya (1954); Sochineniya (1961).

A. Budilovich, L. kak pisatel' (1872); V. N. Menushkin, M. V. L. (1911); P. de Lur-Saluces, L. le prodigieux moujik (1933); A. Martel, L. et la langue littéraire russe (1933); B. G. Kuznetsov,

Tvorcheskiy put' Lomonosova (1956); A. A. Morozov, M. V. L. (1962); I. Z. Serman, Poeticheskiy stil Lomonosova (1966). J.L.

London, JACK, properly JOHN GRIFFITH (*San Francisco, Calif. 12 I 1876; ∞1900 Elizabeth Maddern [o/o1905], ∞1905 Charmian Kittredge; †Glen Ellen, Calif. 22 XI 1916), American novelist and short-story writer. He spent his early days doing odd jobs and devouring books on adventure and discovery. After following the gold rush to the Klondyke unsuccessfully, he wrote The Call of the Wild and became one of the most popular writers of his time. He wrote 50 books based on his belief in Socialism and evolution and reflecting man's continuous struggle with the forces around him, with settings from the wilds of Alaska to an industrial community during a strike.

The Son of the Wolf, Tales of the Far North (1900); The Call of the Wild (1903); The Sea-Wolf (1904); White Fang (1906); The Iron Heel (1907); Martin Eden (1909); John Barleycorn (1913); The Valley of the Moon (1913); The Star Rover (1915). —Best Short Stories of J. L. (1945); The Bodley Head J. L. (4 vols, 1963–66); Letters From J. L. (ed. K. Hendricks and I. Shepard, 1965).

C. London, The Book of J. L. (2 vols, 1921); I. Stone, Sailor on Horseback: The Biography of J. L. (1938); P. S. Foner, J. L.: American Rebel (1947); R. O'Connor, J. L.: A Biography (1964); F. Walker, J. L. and the Klondike (1966).

H.L.C. (I.W.)

London Chronicles, several series of civic annals for London compiled over a considerable period. The earliest surviving one, generally ascribed to Arnold Fitz Thedmar, is the Latin Liber de Antiquis Legibus (1274) covering the period 1188–1272. There are others, in Latin (e.g. for 1194–1330) and French (e.g. for 1259–1344). The earliest surviving English annals date from the 15th century, many of them dealing with contemporary events. No doubt many others have been lost.

A Chronicle of London from 1089 to 1483 (limited ed. for the Common Council of the City of London, 1827; apparently ed. N. H. Nicolas and E. Tyrell); The French Chronicle of London (ed. G. J. Aungier, 1844); Liber de Antiquis Legibus (ed. T. Stapleton, 1846); 'Annales Londonienses, 1194–1330' (ed. W. Stubbs in Chronicles of the Reigns of Edward I and Edward II, 1882); Chronicles of London (ed. C. L. Kingsford, 1905); The Great Chronicle of London (ed. A. H. Thomas and I. D. Thornley, 1938); sel. tr. and further bibl. in English Historical Documents (general ed. D. C. Douglas; IV, 1327–1485, ed. A. R. Myers, 1969; V, 1485–1558, ed. C. H. Williams, 1967).

C. L. Kingsford, English Historical Literature in the 15th Century (1913). R.W.B. (T.F.H.)

Longepierre, HILAIRE BERNARD DE REQUELEYNE,

BARON DE (*Dijon 18 X 1659; †31 III 1721), French dramatist and poet. His undistinguished tragedies belong to the decline of the genre after Racine*. His Sésotris (1695; never pub.) seems to have been the first French tragedy on an Egyptian subject (Rameses II), apart from the Cleopatra theme. His other subjects were Greek (Médée, 1694; Electre, 1702). A scholar and critic, he translated the Greek elegiac poets and imitated them in French verse (Idylles nouvelles, 1690).

Médée (1694; ed. T. Tobari, 1967).

R. Portalis, L. (1905); H. C. Lancaster, History of French Dramatic Literature in the 17th Century, IV (1940) and Sunset (1945). G.B.

Longfellow, HENRY WADSWORTH (*Portland, Me. 27 II 1807; ∞1831 Mary Potter, ∞1843 Frances Appleton; †Cambridge, Mass. 24 III 1882), American poet. He spent three years in Europe learning modern languages, taught and translated at Bowdoin, then transferred to Harvard as Smith Professor. His verses combined the romantic, the sentimental and the moralistic in harmonious lines which immediately caught public taste. Ballads and Other Poems (1842) includes such favourites as 'The Wreck of the Hesperus' and 'The Village Blacksmith'. His versified narratives, Evangeline: a Tale of Acadie (1847), The Song of Hiawatha (1855) and The Courtship of Miles Standish (1858), give romantic glow to American themes. Longfellow's verse was tremendously popular in Europe and America during his lifetime.

The Belfry of Bruges (1846); Tales of a Wayside Inn (1863); The Divine Comedy of Dante Alighieri (1865–67).—The Works of H. W. L. (ed. S. Longfellow, 1886–91); H. W. L.: Representative Selections (ed. O. Shepard, 1934); The Letters of H. W. L. (1966– ).

S. Longfellow, The Life of H. W. L. (2 vols, 1886); L. R. Thompson, Young L. 1807–43 (1938); S. Arms, The Fields Were Green (1953); E. Wagenknecht, L.: A Full-Length Portrait (1955); N. Arvin, L.: His Life and Work (1962); C. B. Williams, H. W. L. (1964). H.L.C. (I.W.)

Longford, EDWARD ARTHUR PAKENHAM, 6TH EARL (*Co. Westmeath 29 XII 1902; ∞1925 Christine Trew; †1961), Irish dramatist and poet; director of Longford Productions. Much of his energy was devoted to running the Gate Theatre, for which he produced many translations.

Yahoo (play; 1933).—Poems From the Irish (1944). E.T.W.

'Longinus', author of the Greek treatise On the Sublime, a work of great influence on European literary criticism from the time of Boileau* to the early 19th century; his true name and date are not known, but internal evidence suggests that he wrote in the 1st century A.D. He defines the sublime in literature as 'supremacy and excellence in language, which aims at dumbfounding the audience by deploying all the orator's power at once'. He discusses the success of classical Greek poetry and prose, from Homer* to Demosthenes*, in attaining the sublime, quoting in addition Genesis and Cicero*. He concludes by discussing the relation of literature to society.

Eds: W. Rhys Roberts (1907; with comm. and tr.); W. Hamilton Fyfe (1927; with tr.); D. A. Russell (1968; text and comm., 1964; tr., 1965; also in idem and M. Winterbottom, Ancient Literary Criticism, 1972).

T. R. Henn, L. and English Criticism (1934); M. H. Abrams, The Mirror and the Lamp (1953); J. Brody, Boileau and L. (1958).

T.B.L.W. (E.W.H.)

Longinus, JOHANNES: see Długosz, JAN.

Longstreet, AUGUSTUS BALDWIN (*Augusta, Ga. 22 IX 1790; ∞1816 Frances Parke; †Oxford, Miss. 9 VII 1870), American humorist. He was in turn a lawyer, editor, minister, politician and college president. His Georgia Scenes, Characters, Incidents . . . (1835), written in the vernacular, give a realistic and humorous version of frontier life.

J. D. Wade, A. B. L.: A Study of the Development of Culture in the South (1924). H.L.C.

Longus, Greek author of a pastoral novel, Daphnis and Chloe (probably 3rd century A.D.).

Ed. J. M. Edmonds (1916; with tr. G. Thornley, 1957); tr. P. Turner (1956).

B. P. Reardon, Les courants littéraires grecs des IIe et IIIe siècles après J.-C. (1971).

T.B.L.W. (E.W.H.)

Longuyon, JACQUES DE (fl. early 14th century), French poet, author of Les Vœux du Paon, a continuation of the Roman d'Alexandre (ALEXANDER THE GREAT), written for Thibaut de Bar, Bishop of Liège (1309–12) and in existence in some form by 1313. A rambling adventure romance, its great popularity was due to the episode of the oaths to accomplish chivalric exploits, taken on a peacock at a banquet. There are continuations by Jean* Brisebarre and Jean de la Mote and variants of the oath theme in Les Vœux du Héron and other works. The Middle Scots Bulk of Alexander (1438) combines a translation of this poem with a version of the Fuerre de Gadres (Eustache*).

The Bulk of Alexander (Fr. and Scots texts ed. R. L. Graeme Ritchie, 1921).—A. Thomas in Histoire littéraire de la France, XXXVI (1927).

F.W.

Löns, HERMANN (*Kulm 29 VIII 1866; †nr Rheims 26 IX 1914), German poet and story writer. His literary fame rests on his stories about animal life and the Lüneburg Heath, with their inimitable descriptions of nature, animals and simple people. The emphasis he put on national literature, race and soil made him later an idol of National Socialism.

Der kleine Rosengarten (verse; 1911; Little Garden of Roses, tr. C. F. Rogers, 1929).—NOVELS: Der Wehrwolf (1910; Harm Wulf, tr. M. Saunders, 1931); Das zweite Gesicht (1911).—STORIES: Mein braunes Buch (1906); Mümmelmann (1909).—Sämtliche Werke (ed. F. Castelle, 8 vols, 1924); Nachgelassene Werke (ed. W. Deimann, 2 vols, 1928).

L.-Gedenkbuch (ed. F. Castelle, 1926); E. Löns, H. L. (3 vols, 1927–41); A. Potthoff, L. und das Volkslied (1928); W. Deimann, Der Künstler und Kämpfer (incl. letters; 1935); M. Apfelstaedt, 'Denn wir fahren gegen Engelland'—über die Entstehung des L.'schen Matrosenliedes (1941); A. Kutscher, Ein L.-Brevier (with biblio.; 1943); H. L. Mitteilungen, VI (1964); W. Deimann, Der andere L. (1965). R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Loosjes, ADRIAAN (*Hooft, Texel 13 V 1761; ∞1782 Cornelia M. Herdingh; †Haarlem 28 II 1818), Dutch man of letters and bookseller. As a social worker of much initiative he was ahead of his time. He wrote patriotic historical novels and other didactic works which at the time had a great influence and are still attractive because of their naïveté.

VERSE: M. A. de Ruyter (1784); De Bijbel (1816); Mengeldichten (2 vols, 1813–15); Nagelaten gedichten (2 vols, 1819–20).—PLAYS: Capellen tot den Poll (1785); De Watergeuzen (1790).—NOVELS: Het leven van Maurits Lynslager (4 vols, 1808); Het leven van Hillegonda Buisman (4 vols, 1814); Het leven van Robert Hellemans (4 vols, 1815); Het leven van Johannes Wouter Blommesteijn (4 vols, 1816).

C. Busken Huet in Litterarische Fantasiën en Kritieken, XXIV (1881–88); J. Koopmans in De Beweging, I (1905), in De Nieuwe Taalgids, VI (1911) and in Groot Nederland (1911); M. de Haan, A. L. (with biblio.; 1934); A. van Duinkerken, Het Tweede Plan (1945). J.W.W.

Loots, CORNELIS (*Amsterdam 6 VI 1765; ∞Elisabeth Helmers; †ibid. 10 X 1834), Dutch poet and orator, admirer of Vondel* and Bilderdijk*. An occasional poet, he wrote good rhetorical verse.

Melpomene (1799); De Algemeene Vrede (1802); Beschouwing van Amsterdam (1803); De Batavieren ten tijde van Caesar (1805); Nederlands Verlossing (1813); De Hollandsche taal (1814); Het eeuwgetijde der Beurs van Amsterdam (1814); De Gedichten (4 vols, 1816–17); De mensch (1819); Nieuwe Gedichten (1821); Nagelaten Gedichten (ed. H. C. Tollens and M. C. van Hall, 2 vols, 1856).

E. J. Potgieter, Kritische Studiën, I (1875); C.

Busken Huet, 'De School van Bellamy' in Litterarische Fantasiën en Kritieken, XXIV (1881-88); S. Kalff, 'C. L.' in Tijdschr. voor Geschied., Land- en Volkenkunde, XXXIX (1924).—'Lootsi-ana' in libr. of the Maatschappij der Nederl. Letterkunde, Leiden. J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Looy, JACOBUS VAN, pseud. A. BROUWER (*Haarlem 12 IX 1855; †1892 Titia van Gelder; †Haarlem 24 II 1930), Dutch poet and prose writer. A painter himself, he was, in his graphic style, typical of Dutch impressionism, his travel sketches being almost a painter's diary. His novels and stories also put much emphasis on external effects, but are certainly not lacking in psychological insight.

PROSE: Proza (1889); Gekken (1892); Feesten (1903); De wonderlijke avonturen van Zebedeus (1910; enlarged ed., 3 vols, 1925); Reizen (1913); Jaapje (1917); Nieuwjaarsdag (1919); Jaap (1923); Op reis (1929); Nieuw proza (1929); Jacob (1930).—VERSE: Ode aan Rembrandt (1906); De ar (1920).—Gedichten (coll. verse; 1932).

M. A. Pit, Bibliografie van het werk van J. van L. (1926); M. J. Brusse, J. van L. over zijn werk (1930); H. Robbers in Levensberichten Maatschappij Nederl. Letterkunde (1931); T. van Looy-van Gelder, Tot het lezen van J. van L. (2 vols, 1937-38); M. A. Jacobs, J. van L. en zijn literair werk (with biblio., 1945); L. M. van Dis, J. van L. (1952). J.J.O.

Lope de Vega: see Vega Carpio, LOPE FÉLIX DE.

Lopes, FERNÃO (*c. 1380; †c. 1460), Portuguese chronicler. Apparently of humble origin, in 1418 he was appointed keeper of the archives by John I and in 1434 was commissioned to write the history of the Kings of Portugal. Three chronicles that can be ascribed to him with certainty are extant. These cover the troubled period of social and political revolution that led to the establishment of the dynasty of Avis in 1385. It is almost certain that Lopes wrote other works that were utilized by later chroniclers such as Rui* de Pina.

Both from the historical and the literary point of view, Lopes' work is of outstanding merit. With a critical approach unusual in a medieval historian he proclaims his intention of recording the unadorned truth, carefully sifting the evidence at his disposal and relying as far as possible on official documents. He expounds his modern conception of how history should be written in the prologue to his Chronicle of John I. In this—his finest work—Lopes documents, with extraordinary insight into the issues involved, what was in effect the first anti-feudal revolution in modern Europe. He does not disguise his contempt for the feudal aristocracy and higher clergy who sided with the invading Spaniard, nor his sympathy for the plebs and their leaders of the commercial middle class who supported the Portuguese pretender, John of Avis. But his vivid and masterly presentation of the whole complex panorama of events goes a long way towards vindicating Southey's* appraisal of him as 'the greatest chronicler of any age or nation'.

Crónica de Dom Pedro (ed. D. Peres, 1932); Crónica de Dom Fernando (ed. idem, 2 vols, 1933-35); Crónica de Dom João I (ed. A. Sérgio, 2 vols, 1946-49; with important stud.).

A. Braamcamp Freire, 'Introdução' in Primeira parte da crônica del rei D. Joham, etc. (1915); A. F. G. Bell, F. L. (Oxford, 1921); M. Rodrigues Lapa, 'F. L. e os cronistas' in Lições de literatura portuguesa, época medieval (3rd ed. 1952); A. J. Saraiva, 'F. L.' in História da cultura em Portugal, I (1950). T.P.W.

López, LUIS CARLOS (*Cartagena de Indias 1883; †1950), Colombian lyric poet. Following on MODERNISM, he wrote poems and poetical sketches of provincial life. His poems are simple and homely. Some see in him a poet of wit and humour only, but there is in his poems rather the enriched wisdom of a Gutiérrez* Nájera or a Silva*.

De mi villorio (Madrid, 1908); Posturas difíciles (1909); Varios a varios (in collab.; 1910); Poesías (1940). E.Sa. (J.F.)

López Albújar, ENRIQUE (*Piura 23 XI 1872; †1965), Peruvian short-story writer, who cultivated the theme of the oppressed Indian in fiction. Regionalisms are frequent in his style, his method realist in the extreme and his outlook pessimistic.

Cuentos andinos (1920; new ed. 1924); Nuevos cuentos andinos (1937).—Matalaché (novel; 1925).—De mi casona (autobiog.; 1924). E.Sa. (J.F.)

López de Ayala, ADELARDO (Guadalcanal, Seville 1 V 1828; †Madrid 30 XII 1879), Spanish dramatist. He studied law at Seville and died Prime Minister. He is mainly remembered by his alta comedia (El tanto por ciento, 1861; Consuelo, 1878), psychological portraits of middle- and upper-class society. The moralizing intention is softened by subtle satire and mastery of dialogue. His erotic sonnets are of considerable beauty.

Obras (ed. M. Tamayo, 7 vols, 1881-85).

J. O. Picón, Autores dramáticos contemporáneos, II (1882); C. Solsona y Baselga, A. Estudio político (1891). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

López de Ayala, PERO (*Vitoria 1332; †Calahorra 1407), Spanish chronicler, poet and translator. He took a prominent part in the civil war during the reign of Peter the Cruel, whom he deserted for Henry II. He also fought against Portugal and was captured at Aljubarrota (1385). He became Chancellor of Castile in 1399. His long and interesting poetic miscellany, the Rimado de palacio, consists of a realistic satire on contemporary society, religious lyrics and verse translations of St Gregory's* Moralia on the Book of Job. He also wrote a treatise on falconry and prose translations of Job, the Moralia, and works by Livy* and Boccaccio*. His chronicles of Peter, Henry II, John I and Henry III of Castile, written in magnificent prose, mark an epoch in Spanish historiography. The dramatic story of Peter's cruelty, defeat and death is told with tremendous power, although some details are fictional: Ayala rewrites history to justify his defection. The later reigns are treated more soberly but with greater accuracy and historical sense. E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Poesías (ed. A. F. Kuersteiner, 2 vols, New York, 1920; sel. tr. S. G. Morley in Estudios hispánicos. Homenaje a Archer M. Huntington, Wellesley, 1952); Libro de la caza de las aves (ed. J. Gutiérrez de la Vega, 1879); Libro de Job and Flores de los morales de Job (ed. F. Branciforti, Messina-Florence, 1962, 1963); chronicles in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LXVI, LXVIII.

F. Meregalli, La vida política del Canciller A. (Milán, 1955); R. B. Tate, 'L. de A., humanist historian?' in Hispanic Rev., XXV (1957); L. Suárez Fernández, El Canciller P. L. de A. y su tiempo (1962); F. Branciforti, 'Regesto delle opere di P. L. de A.' in Saggi e ricerche in memoria di Ettore li Gotti, I (Palermo, 1962); J. Gimeno Casaldueiro, 'P. L. de A. y el cambio poético de Castilla a comienzos del siglo XV' in Hispanic Rev., XXXIII (1965); E. B. Strong, 'The R. de P.: L. de A.'s rimed confession', ibid., XXXVII (1969); R. P. Kinkade, 'On dating the R. de P.' in Kentucky Romance Quart., XVIII (1971). A.D.D.

López de Gómara, FRANCISCO (*Seville ?1510; †ibid. ?1560), Spanish historian. He studied at Alcalá, became a priest and was in Cortés* household. His well-written American histories owed much to Cortés himself, and his work was attacked for being too favourable to that leader. Philip II banned Gómara's history in 1553; Díaz* del Castillo's Verdadera historia was a reply to it.

Biblioteca de Aut., Esp., XXII; Historia de las Indias (1552; pt 2 tr. as The pleasant historie of the conquest of the Weast India, T. N[icholas], 1578; facs. repr. ed. H. J. Priestly, New York, 1940); Conquista del Nuevo Mundo (1552; Madrid, 1922); Annals of the Emperor Charles V (Span. text and Eng. tr. R. B. Merriman, Oxford, 1912); Cortés, The Life of the Conqueror by His Secretary F. L. de G. (tr. L. B. Simpson, 1964). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

López de Mendoza, ÍÑIGO: see Santillana, ÍÑIGO
LÓPEZ DE MENDOZA, MARQUÉS DE.

López de Ubeda, FRANCISCO (?pseudonym), Spanish novelist. His name appears on the title-page of La pícara Justina (1605), a boring female picaresque novel, whose rich vocabulary interests philologists. His identity is disputed. The novel has been supposed to date from 1582; more probably it was composed in imitation of Alemán's* Guzmán (1599).

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXX; La pícara Justina (ed. J. Puyol y Alonso, 3 vols, 1912; tr. Capt. J. Stevens, The Spanish Libertines, 1707).

R. Foulché-Delbosc, 'L'auteur de la Pícara Justina' in Rev. Hispanique, X (1903); M. Bataillon, '"La picaresca". A propos de La pícara Justina' in Wort und Text. Festschrift für Fritz Schalk (1963); A. A. Parker, Literature and the Delinquent (1967). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

López Maldonado, GABRIEL (*Toledo; †after 1615), Spanish poet. Little is known of his life except that he belonged to an academy in Valencia in 1592. He was a friend of Padilla*, and Cervantes* praised his poems, which are typical of second-rank 16th-century poetry.

Cancionero (1586; facs. 1932). E.M.W.

López-Picó, JOSEP MARIA (*1886; †1959), Catalan poet, founded in 1915 the literary paper La Revista, which for 20 years mirrored Catalan literature and thought, and was a vehicle for the entry of European thought and letters into Catalonia. His influence on Catalan poetry was towards 'cerebralism'.

Obres completes (1948- ). J.M.B. i R. (G.W.R.)

López Pinciano, ALONSO (*Valladolid 1547; †after 1627), Spanish humanist. He was physician to the widow of Maximilian II. His Philosophia antiqua poética (1596) is an epistolary commentary on Aristotle's* Poetics. He advocated classical models; this work was used in controversy by Lope de Vega's* academic enemies. It is important in the history of Spanish criticism.

Filosofía antigua poética (ed. A. Carballo Picazo, 3 vols, 1963).

M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Historia de las ideas estéticas en España, II. E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

López-Portillo y Rojas, José (*Guadalajara 26 V 1850; †Mexico City 22 V 1923), Mexican novelist, noteworthy as a regionalist and for his representation of rural life during the period of Porfirio Díaz.

Seis leyendas (1883); La parcela (1898); Sucesos y novelas cortas (1900); Los precursores (1909); Fuertes y débiles (n.d.); Historias, historietas y cuentecillos (1918).

J. S. Brushwood, Mexico in Its Novel (Univ. of Texas, 1966). E.Sa. (J.F.)

López Silva, José (*Madrid 1860; †Buenos Aires 1925), Spanish playwright and poet. La musa del

arroyo (1911) is a good example of his poems about Madrid, describing popular types and customs. He is best remembered by his género chico plays, in the manner of Ricardo de la Vega*. The most famous is La Revoltosa (1897), written in collaboration with Fernández Shaw and with excellent music by Chapí.

Los barrios bajos (1894); Los Madriles (1896); Chulaperías (1898); El barquillero (with José Jackson; 1900); El alma del pueblo (1905); La gente del pueblo (1908).

M. Zurita, Historia del género chico (1920); N. Alonso Cortés, 'L. S.' in Rev. de la Biblioteca del Ayuntamiento de Madrid (1929) and Quevedo en el Teatro (1930); J. Deleito y Pifuel, Origen y apogeo del 'género chico' (1949).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

López Soler, RAMÓN (*Barcelona 1806; †Madrid 1836), Spanish novelist. As co-founder and contributor to the review El Europeo (1823) he exercised considerable influence in spreading Romanticism in Spain. In his first historical novel, Los bandos de Castilla (1830), whose prologue is a Romantic manifesto, he imitated Sir Walter Scott*; in La catedral de Sevilla (1834), Victor Hugo*.

Memorias del príncipe de Wolfer (1839).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

López Velarde, RAMÓN (*Jerez 1888; †1921), Mexican poet. He developed the intimate, sentimental aspect of MODERNISM. The poems of La sangre devota (1916) celebrated his ideal love for Fuensanta but there is also a tormented sensuality. In Zozobra (1919) he developed an original, vigorous language which expressed the strong tensions within him between purity and corruption, province and metropolis.

El minuterero (1924); El son del corazón (1932).—Poesías completas y El minuterero (2nd rev. ed. 1957).

A. W. Phillips, R. L. V.: el poeta y el prosista (Mexico, 1962).

E.Sa. (J.F.)

López y Fuentes, GREGORIO (*1897; †1969), Mexican novelist of the post-Revolutionary period. La siringa de cristal (1914) was a collection of poetry, but in 1922 he published his first novel, El Vagabundo. Drawing on his experiences of the Revolution, he later published Campamento (1931). El Indio (1935; They That Reap, tr. A. Brenner, 1937) is probably his best-known novel; it deals with rural life and customs in a primitive Indian village after the Revolution. He also wrote three political novels, Mi general (1934), Huasteca (1939) and Acomadicio (1943). In Los peregrinos inmóviles (1944) he returned to the theme of the Indian.

J. S. Brushwood, Mexico in Its Novel (Univ. of Texas, 1966).

J.F.

Lorca, FEDERICO GARCÍA: see García Lorca, FEDERICO.

Lorenzini, CARLO: see Collodi, CARLO.

Lorenzino de' Medici: see Medici, LORENZINO DE'.

Lorenzo de' Medici: see Medici, LORENZO.

Lorenzoni, GIOVANNI (*Gradisca d'Isonzo 1884; †Capriva 1950), Friulian philologist and poet whose verse, although influenced by the Italian poet Giovanni Pascoli*, is of great delicacy.

Versi friulani (Udine, 1926; II, Gorizia, 1948).—P. Smeda de Marco, 'Il poeta friulano G. L.' in Atti dell'Accademia di Udine, XII.6 (1951–54); arts by C. Ermacora, A. Faleschini and P. S. Leicht in Sot la nape, III (1951).

L.C.

Lotarëv, IGOR VASILYEVICH: see Severyanin, IGOR.

Loti, PIERRE, pseud. of LOUIS MARIE JULIEN VIAUD (*Rochefort 14 I 1850; †Hendaye 10 VI 1923), French novelist, who was elected to the French Academy in 1891. Loti was trained for a naval career, attained the rank of captain, and was placed on the retired list in 1910, but returned to the service during the First World War. Most of the countries he visited provided the background for a novel, a romance of native life in which the author, thinly disguised, often plays a leading part. Loti's naturally poetic prose is a perfect vehicle both for his own subjective Romanticism and for the touching faith and emotions of his characters, whether natives of exotic countries—Turkey in Aziyadé (1879) and Les désenchantées (1906), Polynesia in Le mariage de Loti (1882), Japan in Madame Chrysanthème (1887)—or simple Breton fishermen in Pêcheur d'Islande (1886) and Mon frère Yves (1883) and Basque peasants in Ramuntcho (1897).

T.W.

Le roman d'un spahi (1881); Le roman d'un enfant (1890); Fantôme d'Orient (1891); L'Inde (sans les Anglais) (1903); Prime jeunesse (1919).—Journal intime, 1878–81 (1925).—Œuvres complètes (11 vols, 1893–1911).

N. Serban, P. L., sa vie et son œuvre (1924); R. de Traz, P. L. (1948); P. G. Ekström, Évasions et désespérances de P. L. (1953).

T.W. (M.T.)

Lotichius Secundus, PETRUS (*Niederzell, nr Schlüchtern 2 XI 1528; †Heidelberg 1 XI 1560), German neo-Latin poet. Modelling himself on Ovid* and Virgil* and compared by his contemporaries to Tasso*, he wrote Latin elegiac verse of much beauty, sincerity and formal perfection.

Elegiarum liber et carminum libellus (1551); coll. works (eds: J. Hagen, 1586; P. Burmannus Secundus, 1754; C. F. Kretschmar, 1773); sel. poems (ed. K. Heiler, 1926).

Biogs by: W. Henkel (1873); A. Ebrard (1884);

A. Schröter, Beiträge zur Geschichte der neulateinischen Literatur (1909). D.G.D.

Lottmann, FRITZ (*Emden 7 X 1880; †Oldenburg 2 IX 1918), East Frisian novelist. His power of characterization is superior to his mastery of language, which too often borrows from literary German.

Freye Staatjes und Lieder eines wandernden Friesen (under pseud. Fritz Fresenius; 1905); Dat Has sünner Lücht (1919).

A. Janssen, 'F. G. L.' in Mitteilungen Quickborn, XIV (1921); G. Cramer, Studien zu L.s Roman 'Dat Hus sünner Lücht' (diss. Hamburg, 1938). G.C.

Louw, NICOLAAS PETRUS VAN WYK (*Sutherland, Cape Colony 11 VI 1906; †18 VI 1970), Afrikaans poet, dramatist, critic and literary theorist, the greatest figure in Afrikaans literature. University lecturer in Cape Town, later Professor in Amsterdam and Johannesburg, he was the leader of the revival of Afrikaans poetry during the 1930s.

His poetry is usually seen as a development through three phases. The first is a reaction of scope, initially against a previous generation of poets and finally challenging the justice of the human condition. It is dynamic, individualistic poetry, although romanticism is revealed in the love poems. From the sometimes involved form of the first phase he moved in the second phase to folk poetry. In his last phase, 'poetry of the idea' blooms again, together with some great elegies and odes. His handling of language and poetic form is superb throughout.

Essays prove him to be a penetrating thinker who explains himself in the dialectic tradition. Those on Afrikaans culture and nationalism have had a profound effect on South African thought, and as a literary theorist, he caused Afrikaans criticism to alter course during the 1950s.

The later part of his career was mainly devoted to writing plays. Germanicus (1956) is considered his greatest play.

VERSE: Alleenspraak (1935); Die Halwe Kring (1937); Die Dieper Reg (1938); Raka (1941; Eng. tr. Anthony Dows); Gestalties en Diere (1942); Nuwe Verse (1954); Tristia (1962).—PROSE: Lojale Verset (1939); Berigte te Velde (1939); Maskers van die Erns (1956); Liberale Nasjonalisme (1958); 'n Wêreld deur Glas (1958); Swaarte en Ligpunte (1958); Vernuwing in die prosa (1961).—PLAYS AND RADIO PLAYS: Dias (1952); Dagboek van 'n Soldaat (1961); Die Held (1962); Koning Eenoog (1963); Kruger breek die pad oop (1964).

D. J. Opperman, Digters van dertig (1953); P. J. Nienaber, Beeld van 'n digter (1966); Smal swaard en blink (Festschrift; ed. E. van Heerden, 1966).

N.D.C.

Louw, WILLIAM EWART GLADSTONE (*Sutherland,

Cape Province 31 V 1913; ∞1944 Rosa Nepgen), Afrikaans poet, scholar and critic. A sensitive poet of lyric and descriptive verse, mainly love poetry and religious poetry, his first book heralded a renewal of Afrikaans poetry.

VERSE: Die Ryke Dwaas (1934); Terugtog (1940); Adam e. a. Gedigte (1944).—STUDIES AND CRITICISM: De Nieuwere Afrikaanse Poëzie (1939; in Dutch); Die invloed van Gorter op Leopold (1942); 'Die Afrikaanse Poësie na 1900' in Kultuurgeskiedenis van die Afrikaner, III (ed. P. de V. Pienaar, 1968). G.D. (N.D.C.)

Louÿs, PIERRE, pseud. of PIERRE LOUIS (*Ghent 10 XII 1870; †Paris 4 VI 1925), Pierre Louÿs was the friend of Gide* and Valéry*, and, in 1891, founded the magazine La Conque. He led a glittering existence until, ill and almost blind, he finished his life in semi-seclusion. He sought in his verse and in his prose poems to recreate the sensuous atmosphere of ancient Greece, with the literature of which he was thoroughly imbued. He was an exacting artist, whose novels were often regarded as challenges to Protestant morality.

Astarté (1891); Les chansons de Bilitis (1894); Aphrodite (1896); La femme et le pantin (1898); Les aventures du Roi Pausole (1901); Poétique (1917); Le crépuscule des nymphes (1925); Journal inédit (1926–27); Journal intime (1929); Les poèmes de P. L. (complete ed. A. Michel, 2 vols, 1946).—Collected Works (ed. M. S. Buck and J. Cleugh, New York, 1932).

Le tombeau de P. L. (1925); R. Cardinne-Petit, P. L. (2 vols, 1944–49); C. Farrère, Mon ami P. L. (1953). M.G.; J.P.R.

Love, NICHOLAS (fl. 1400), English author of The Mirrour of the Blessed Lyf of Iesu Christ, a prose translation of the Meditationes Vitae Christi, once attributed to Bonaventura*.

Ed. L. F. Powell (1908).

R.W.B.

Loveira, CARLOS (*El Santo 1882; †La Habana 1928), Cuban novelist and journalist. He presents the social life and political turmoil of his country in a realistic manner. His best-known novel, Juan Criollo (1927), depicts the underworld and social corruption of Havana.

Los inmorales (1919); Generales y doctores (1920; ed. and intro. S. M. Bryant and J. R. Owre, New York, 1965); Los ciegos (1922).

E.Sa. (J.F.)

Lovelace, RICHARD (*Woolwich, Kent, or in Holland 1618; †London 1657), English Cavalier lyric poet and courtier, the author of two lost plays, and the friend of painters, musicians and poets. Of grave nobility and graceful wit as well as fanciful conceit, educated at Charterhouse and Oxford, Lovelace was in the Bishops' Wars (1639– 40); imprisoned after presenting the Kentish petition to the Commons (1642) he went abroad, to be imprisoned on returning (1648). His last years were impoverished.

Lucasta (1649); Lucasta. Posthume Poems (ed. D. P. Lovelace and E. Revett, 1659); Poems (ed. C. H. Wilkinson, 1930; repr. 1953).

C. H. Hartman, The Cavalier Spirit and Its Influences in the Life of R. L. (1925); M. Weidhorn, R. L. (1970). B.L.J. (H.N.D.)

Lovelling, ROSALIE (*Nevele 19 III 1834; †ibid. 4 V 1875), Flemish poet and short-story writer, fixes sharply observed moments of everyday country life in simple genre scenes, which often have an undercurrent of sadness and disillusionment. She wrote in collaboration with her sister Virginie.

Gedichten (1870); Novellen (1874); Nieuwe novellen (1874); Polydoor en Theodoor en andere novellen (1883).

M. Basse, Het aandeel der vrouw in de Nederlandsche letterkunde, II (1921); H. Piette, Les sœurs L. (1942). R.F.L.

Lovelling, VIRGINIE (*Nevele 17 V 1836; †Ghent 1 XII 1923), Flemish novelist, poet and short-story writer, with A. Bergmann* the principal exponent of Flemish realism. She wrote two aggressively anti-Catholic novels and a series of well-constructed and acutely observed novels.

In onze Vlaamsche gewesten (1877; under pseud. W. E. C. Walter); Sophie (2 vols, 1885); Kinderverhalen (1883–86); Idonia (1891); Een dure eed (1892); Mijnheer Connehaye (1895); De twistappel (1904); Erfelijk belast (1906); Een revolverschot (1911).—Herinneringen (ed. A. van Elslander, 1967).—Volledige Werken (10 vols, 1933–36).

L. Baekelmans, Vier Vlaamsche prozaschrijvers (1931); H. Piette, Les sœurs L. (1942). R.F.L.

Lover, SAMUEL (*Dublin 1797; ∞1852 Mary Waudby; †Jersey 1868), Irish novelist and songwriter. After writing for the Dublin magazines, he settled in London in 1837, where he was successful as a painter, popular writer and entertainer. Handy Andy (1842), a farcical Irish novel, is his best-known work. R.McH.

Legends and Stories of Ireland (1831); Rory O'More (1836); Songs and Ballads of Ireland (1839). E.T.W.

Lovinescu, EUGEN (*Fălticeni 1881; †Bucharest 1943), Rumanian critic. He founded the review Zburătorul in 1919 and was the leading spirit in the associated Modernist movement.

Pași pe nisip (1906); Critice (10 vols, 1909–29); Istoria literaturii române contemporane (5 vols, 1926–29); Istoria literaturii române contemporane, 1900–1937 (1937); Memorii (4 vols, 1930–41).—

Texte critice (sel.; intro. and ed. I. Negoitescu, 1968); Scrieri (ed. E. Simion, 1969– ).

Ileana Vrancea, E. L., Critic literar (1965) and E. L., Artistul (1969). F.J.B.

Lowell, AMY (*Brookline, Mass. 9 II 1874; †ibid. 12 V 1925), American poet. Born to wealth and high culture, she had a private education and travelled widely abroad. In England she met Pound*, absorbed his theories of IMAGISM and took over leadership of the movement. Her most characteristic poems were written in this phase, rich in perception of external detail—of sight, sound and movement. Her critical works have won her acclaim, especially John Keats (1925).

H.L.C.

VERSE: A Dome of Many-Coloured Glass (1912); Sword Blades and Poppy Seed (1914).—Selected Poems of A. L. (ed. J. L. Lowes, 1928).—CRITICAL WORKS: Tendencies in Modern American Poetry (1917); A Critical Fable (1922).

S. F. Damon, A. L.: A Chronicle, With Extracts From Her Correspondence (1935); H. Gregory, A. L.: Portrait of the Poet in Her Time (1958); F. C. Flint, A. L. (1969). H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

Lowell, JAMES RUSSELL (*Cambridge, Mass. 22 II 1819; ∞1844 Maria White, ∞1857 Frances Dunlap; †ibid. 12 VIII 1891), American poet, essayist and diplomat. One of the Cambridge 'Brahmins', he was educated in law at Harvard, but soon turned to a literary career. Two volumes of poems, A Fable for Critics (1848), The Vision of Sir Launfal (1848), and the first series of Biglow Papers (1848) brought him fame. He became first editor of the Atlantic Monthly; later served as minister to Spain and to England. His poems, numerous articles on political and social questions and literary essays show his versatility, but suggest a lack of sustained conviction.

A Year's Life, and Other Poems (1841); Poems: Second Series (1848); Commemoration Ode (1865); The Biglow Papers, 2nd ser. (1867); The Cathedral (1870); Among My Books (1870); My Study Windows (1871).—The Complete Writings of J. R. L. (ed. C. E. Norton, 16 vols, 1894; incl. letters).

H. E. Scudder, J. R. L.: A Biography (2 vols, 1901); R. C. Beatty, J. R. L. (1942); L. Howard, A Victorian Knight Errant: A Study of the Early Career of J. R. L. (1952); M. Duberman, J. R. L. (1966); C. McGlimchee, J. R. L. (1967).

H.L.C. (I.W.)

Lowell, ROBERT TRAILL SPENCE (*Boston, Mass. 1 III 1917; ∞2 IV 1940 Jean Stafford, ∞28 VII 1949 Elizabeth Hardwick), American poet and playwright, grandson of the 19th-century poet of the same name. Educated at Harvard, then at Kenyon (graduating 1940), he married his first wife and converted to Catholicism. During the Second World War he refused the status of conscientious objector and was jailed. Land of Unlikelihood (1944) in its tortured style and compressed images reflects the spiritual conflict within the early poetry. Life Studies (1959) shows an easier manner, although the poems are still obsessive in their concern with the poet's family history, a second marriage and his own mental stress. Translations of verse and his series of plays on American themes, The Old Glory (1965) show the same vivid intensity that has made him the most widely praised American poet since the war.

POETRY: Lord Weary's Castle (1946); The Mills of the Kavanaghs (1951); Imitations (1961); For the Union Dead (1964); Notebooks 1967-68 (1970).

H. B. Staple, R. L.: The First Twenty Years (1962); R. J. Fein, R. L. (1970). D.E.Mo.

Löwenhjelm, HARRIET (*Hälsingborg 18 II 1887; †Säby 24 V 1918), Swedish lyric poet and artist. She originally wrote her verses for private enjoyment. Many were purely playful, but others had a deep though often unplumbed seriousness. They covered a wide range of subjects, and the illustrations, which she did herself, formed an intrinsic part. Her work was not published until 1919, and only achieved real recognition with the second edition.

Dikter (ed. C. Möerner, 1919; 2nd ed. 1927).

O. Holmberg, Madonnan och järnjungfrun (1927); E. Björkman-Goldschmidt, H. L. (1947).

C.H.K.

Lowry, MALCOLM (*New Brighton, Merseyside 28 VII 1909; †London 1957), English novelist, attracted critical attention by the stylistic brilliance of his novel about Europeans in Mexico, Under the Volcano (1947). A collection of short stories, Hear Us O Lord From Heaven Thy Dwelling Place, was published posthumously in 1961.

Ultramarine (1933; new rev. ed. 1963); Dark as the Grave Wherein My Friend Is Laid (completed from L.'s notes by Margerie Lowry and Douglas Day; 1968).—Selected Poems (1962).—Selected Letters (1965). W.R.A.

Lowth, ROBERT (*Winchester 27 XI 1710; ∞1752 Mary Jackson; †London 3 XI 1787), English biographer, grammarian and Hebrew scholar whose Oxford lectures drew attention to the Bible as a fund of poetry. He was Bishop of London.

R.M.H.

Life of William of Wykeham (1758); Short Introduction to English Grammar (1762); Lectures on Hebrew Poetry (1753; Eng. tr. G. Gregory, 1793).

W. Bent, Memoirs of Life and Writing of Bishop L. (1787); R. S. Cripps, 'Two British interpreters of the Old Testament' in Bull. John Rylands Libr., XXXV (1953); J. H. W. Atkins, English Literary Criticism: the 17th and 18th Centuries (1951).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Loyola, IGNATIUS, St (*Loyola 1491; †Rome 1556), Spanish religious author. The life of the founder of the Jesuit Order belongs to religious rather than to literary history. His chief work, the Ejercicios espirituales, has had an enormous influence on subsequent religious literature. These spiritual exercises were first written in Spanish at Manresa in 1522 and were printed in 1548. They consist of concise notes for the priest who will expound them, and they cover sin, Christ's earthly life, the Passion and his risen life. Their influence may be traced in many works of devotion and edification.

Ribadeneyra's* life of St Ignatius is a landmark in the history of Spanish biography. He was also the subject of many poems and plays in the Spanish 17th century.

Ejercicios espirituales (facs. ed., Rome, 1908; Spiritual Exercises, ed. and tr. J. Rickaby, 1915; tr. W. H. Longridge, 1919); Monumenta Ignatiana (15 vols, Madrid, 1903-19); Obras completas (ed. I. Iparraguirre, 1952).

A. Codina, Origenes de los ejercicios espirituales (1926). E.M.W.

Lozza, PATER ALEXANDER (*Marmorera 29 VI 1880; †Casti 13 II 1953), Ræto-Romansch poet. In 1895 he entered a Capuchin monastery in Genoa; later he was curé in Tumejl and Salouf and published a number of lively poems and short stories inspired by nature, the simple rural life and his love of his homeland.

Ziteil, Flours segls ours da la veia (with Ger. tr. L. Uffer; 1951); Poesias (1954); Las novellas (1961).

G. Deplazes, P. A. L., Prosa e poesia (1953); G. P. Thöny, 'P. A. L.' in Annalas de la Soc. Retorum, LXXVI (1963). R.R.B.

Lu CHI (□Wu-chün 261; †303), Chinese poet and essayist. After the overthrow (280) of the Wu kingdom of which his father had been Grand Marshal, Lu returned home and devoted himself to study. During this time he wrote an account of the rise and fall of Wu (Pien-wang lun; 'Le discours de la perte du Wou', tr. E. Gaspardone in Sinologica, V, 1958). He re-entered public life (289) and was executed during the revolts of the early 4th century. More than 100 of his poems have survived. His most notable work is a poetical essay on 'the art of letters' (Wên-fu; tr. S.-H. Chen in Anthology of Chinese Literature, ed. C. Birch, 1965).

Lu Shih-hêng chi (coll. works; sel. trs in: G. Margouliès, Anthologie raisonnée de la littérature chinoise, 1948; E. von Zach, Die chinesische Anthologie, 2 vols, Harvard, 1958).

E. R. Hughes, The Art of Letters (1952).

A.R.D.

LU CHU-YÜAN (*Chin-ch'i 1139; †Ching-mên 18 I 1193), Chinese philosopher. In 1182 Lu was appointed to the imperial academy, where he is said to have propagated Ch'êng* Hao's teaching. In 1190 he was appointed to a local magistracy at Ching-mên in which he gained a reputation for practical moral judgements. He was the principal philosophical opponent of Chu* Hsi and founder of the idealist Hsin-hsüeh school. Where Chu stressed study and enquiry, Lu maintained the importance of observation and intuition, on account of which he has been thought to have been influenced by Dhyāna Buddhism. His key proposition is: 'the world is my mind, my mind is the principle of the world'—i.e. all things are complete within the self.

Hsiang-shan ch'üan-chi (coll. works).

Siu-chi Huang, Lu Hsiang-shan (1944); further biblio. in W.-T. Chan, An Outline and an Annotated Bibliography of Chinese Philosophy (1969).

A.R.D.

LÜ PU-WEI (†235 B.C.), Chinese statesman. Lü began his career as a merchant and became the leading statesman (250–237) of the state of Ch'in. His biography has gained many unsavoury elements, presumably from the hands of those who sought to defame the first Emperor of the Ch'in dynasty (221–210). Lü is alleged to have been the Emperor's natural father. The book Lü-shih ch'ün-ch'iu (?240), to which he gave his name, is an eclectic compilation of the thought of all contemporary schools on many topics, and, as such, is of great historical importance.

Frühling und Herbst des Lü Bu We (tr. R. Wilhelm, 1928).—D. Bodde, Statesman, Patriot and General in Ancient China (1940). A.R.D.

LU YU (□Shan-yin 13 XI 1125; †26 I 1210), Chinese poet, is said to have been prevented from passing the metropolitan examination of 1154 by the jealousy of the chief minister, Ch'in Kuei. He gained the favour of Emperor Hsiao-tsung (1163–89), but was soon banished to the provinces. From 1170 until 1178 he was in Szechwan, treading in the tracks of Tu* Fu, whom he admired and with whom he is compared. In 1175 he joined the staff of his fellow-poet Fan* Ch'êng-ta. He served again in the capital 1188–89 and 1202–03, but most of his later life was spent on his farm at Shan-yin. The most prolific of the major Chinese poets, his poetry runs the gamut of subjects and emotions, although a patriotic emphasis is prominent and he shows an especial fondness for pastoral beauty. He also left a history of the Southern T'ang dynasty and many notes and miscellanea.

Chien-nan shih-kao (coll. verse; 1220; sel. trs: C. M. Candlin, The Rapier of Lu, 1946; H.-Y. and G. Yang in Chinese Lit., 1963, No. 8 and 1965, No. 5); Wei-nan wên-chi (coll. prose; 1210; incl. tz'ü-poems).

K. Yoshikawa, An Introduction to Sung Poetry (tr. B. Watson, 1967). A.R.D.

Lubicz-Milosz, OSCAR WENCESLAS DE: see Milosz.

Lubis, MOCHTAR: see INDONESIAN AND MALAYSIAN LITERATURES.

Lubomirski, STANISŁAW HERAKLIUSZ, PRINCE (*1642; †Ujazdów 17 I 1702), Polish political writer and poet. Son of a rebel, he held high posts and was active politically. His prose shows political wisdom and incurable scepticism. His works were very popular. He translated and adapted the fashionable French, Italian and Spanish dramatic idylls and farces.

TREATISES: Rozmowy Artaksesa i Ewandra (1673); Adverbiorum moralium... libellus (1688); De vanitate consiliorum... (1699).—VERSE: Tobiasz wyzwolony... (1683).—Wiersze zebrane i wydrukowane (1782); Wybór pism (1953).

S. Morawiecki, S. H. L. Kilka kart z lat młodych oligarchy, 1661–1667 (1901); W. Szczygieł, Źródła rozmów Artaksesa i Ewandra... (1929). S.S. (P.H.)

LUCAN (MARCUS ANNAEUS LUCANUS) (*Corduba 3 XI 39; †Rome 30 IV 65), Latin poet. The grandson of the elder and nephew of the younger Seneca*, Lucan was brought as an infant by his father, M. Annaeus Mela, to Rome. Educated there, possibly under the Stoic Cornutus, he showed early brilliance and was recalled from his further studies at Athens by Nero to membership of the intimate court circle. Later, however, he incurred the enmity, possibly rooted in literary jealousy, of the Emperor and was forbidden, at least publicly, to exercise his literary talents. This doubtless induced him to join the conspiracy of Piso, on the discovery of which he was ordered to commit suicide.

The theme of his only extant work, the unfinished Bellum civile (often called the Pharsalia) in ten books of hexameters, is the war between Pompey and Caesar*. Lucan avoided fitting historical subject-matter to the traditional epic machinery and tells his story with few deviations from historical fact, though with a marked sympathy for the republican cause. His treatment is strongly rhetorical, but, though occasionally marred by superfluity of description, indicative of a genuine poetic power. He is less dependent on Virgil* than are Valerius* Flaccus, Silius* Italicus and Statius*, and is therefore the most interesting of the post-Augustan epic poets.

Ed. A. E. Housman (rev. impr. 1927; repr. 1950); eds with comm.: C. E. Haskins and W. E. Heitland (1887); R. J. Getty, Bk I (1940); J. P. Postgate, Bks VII (rev. O. A. W. Dilke, 1960) and VIII (1917).—Trs: J. D. Duff (1928); R. Graves (1966).

R. Pichon, Les sources de Lucain (1912); J.

Aymard, Quelques séries de comparaisons chez L. (1951); J. Brisset, Les idées politiques de L. (1964); M. P. O. Morford, The Poet L. (1967). A.J.D.

Lucas of Túy, known as EL TUDENSE (fl. early 13th century), Latin chronicler, a Bishop commissioned by the wife of Alfonso IX of León to write a Chronicon mundi. It begins as a universal chronicle and extends to 1236, but the scope is limited to León and Castile after the Moorish invasion; Lucas is a strongly patriotic and credulous historian.

A. Schott, Hispania illustrata, IV (1608); Crónica de España por Lucas Obispo de Túy (Span. tr.; ed. J. Puyol, 1926); P. Hogberg, 'La chronique de L. de T.' in Rev. Hispanique, LXXXI (1933). E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Lucebert, pseud. of LUBERTYS JACOBUS SWAANSWIJK (*Amsterdam 15 IX 1924; †A. Koek), Dutch poet, internationally famous painter (relations with Cobra group). Dubbed 'Emperor of the Fifties' by his contemporaries, he indeed wrote poems which are examples of the upheaval in Dutch poetry around 1950. He rarely uses conventional forms, rhyme or metre, unless as ironic complicated language games. On the surface a Lucebert poem appears a torrent of associations with juxtapositions of images, but careful analysis of several of his poems proves convincingly that they form a dense world of their own. (See also EXPERIMENTELEN.)

Val voor vliegengod (prose and poetry; 1959); Gedichten 1948-1963 (1965).—Gedichte und Zeichnungen (tr. Ludwig Kunz, 1962).

Paul Rodenko, Tussen de regels (1956); A. Morriën, Concurreren met de sterren (1959); C. Buddingh', Eenvoudig verlichte waters (1960); H. U. J. d'Oliveira, 'De limiet van het middenwit' in Merlyn, 1.2 (1963) and in K. Fens et al., Literair lustrum (1967); P. Calis, Daling van temperatuur (1964).—Interview in H. U. J. d'Oliveira, Scheppen riep hij gaat van Au! (1965). J.J.O.

Lucena, JUAN DE (*?Toledo ?c. 1430), Spanish moralist. Probably a converso scholar, diplomat and printer, who served in Italy and returned there c. 1481 to escape the Inquisition. His Libro de vita beata (1463) is an imaginary discussion on happiness between Santillana*, Mena* and Alfonso de Cartagena*, adapted from the Dialogus de felicitate vitae of Bartolommeo Fazio; its satirical review of society includes a defence of the conversos. Lucena also wrote an Epistola exhortatoria a las letras some years later. His prose is good.

A. Paz y Melia, Opúsculos literarios de los siglos XIV a XVI (1892); R. Lapesa, De la edad media a nuestros días (1967); A. Alcalá, 'J. de L. y el pre-erasmismo español' in Rev. Hispánica Moderna, XXXIV (1968). E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Lucian (*c. A.D. 120), Greek essayist from Samosata on the upper Euphrates. After failing as a sculptor, he became a travelling lecturer and studied philosophy in Athens; later an administrator in Roman Egypt. His essays (mostly in dialogue form) show a deep knowledge of classical Greek, to which he owes his vocabulary and style, and also an amused and ironic view of contemporary life, which he pillories cheerfully. He has preserved much valuable information on ancient art, and criticizes contemporary literary and oratorical styles. The True History has an endearing vein of inspired nonsense.

Eds: C. Jacobitz (1836-41; repr. 1966); A. M. Harmon et al. (1913-67; with tr.).

M. Caster, L. et la pensée religieuse de son temps (1938); J. Bompaigne, L. écrivain (1958); J. Schwartz, Biographie de L. (1965); B. P. Reardon, Les courants littéraires grecs des IIe et IIIe siècles après J.-C. (1971). T.B.L.W. (E.W.H.)

Lucić, HANIBAL (*Hvar 1485; †ibid. 1553), Dalmatian poet, composer of the first original romantic Croatian drama, Robinja (Venice, 1585). His classical education and familiarity with the poetry of the Italian Renaissance are reflected in his writing; some of his lyric poems are of extreme beauty and perfection.

Scladanya izvorsnich pisan razlicich (coll. poems; Venice, 1556); Pjesme (1874). V.J.

Lucidor: see Johansson, LARS.

Lucilius, GAIUS (*Suessa Aurunca c. 180; †Naples c. 102 B.C.), Latin satirist. Of a prosperous family and well-educated, Lucilius came to Rome c. 160. Among his friends was Scipio Africanus, of whose literary circle he was a prominent member. His 30 books of miscellaneous poems (Saturae) were published at intervals from 131. Some 1,300 lines are now extant.

The Saturae, on which Horace* modelled his earlier satires, contained reflections on all aspects of contemporary life. With Lucilius, satire became a literary genre, and the asperity of his criticism gave it, for the first time, its modern connotation.

C. Lucilli carminum reliquiae (ed. with comm. F. Marx, 2 vols, 1904-05; repr. 1963; tr. E. H. Warmington in Remains of Old Latin, III, 1938).

C. Cichorius, Untersuchungen zu L. (1908; repr. 1964); G. C. Fiske, L. and Horace (1920; repr. 1966); J. Wight Duff, Roman Satire (1936); O. Weinreich, Römische Satiren (1949); M. Puelma Piwonka, L. und Kallimachos (1949); I. Mariotti, Studi luciliani (1960). A.J.D.

Lucretius CARUS, TITUS (*c. 100/90; †c. 55/53 B.C.), Latin philosopher-poet. Probably a Roman citizen of aristocratic birth, Lucretius dedicated his unfinished didactic poem, the De rerum natura, in six books of hexameters, to C. Memmius, whom Catullus* accompanied to Bithynia. The statement of St Jerome* that Cicero* revised certain portions doubtless reflects some intimacy with the orator and his brother: the statement that the poem was written in the lucid intervals of a long insanity, induced by a love-philtre and culminating in suicide, is hardly credible.

The De rerum natura is a passionate exposition of the physical system of Epicurus* in which Lucretius' main aim was to banish superstitious belief in the gods and in the terrors of an after-life. The permanence of matter, as shown by the atomic theory of Epicurus, is the theme of the first two books: these are followed by a series of proofs of the mortality of the soul (3), the nature of sensation and thought (4), celestial and terrestrial phenomena (5, 6): one of the most interesting sections deals with the origin of life and the birth and growth of civilization (5).

The treatment in verse of such subject-matter was in itself no small achievement. Lucretius, deliberately turning to the severe and archaic style of Ennius*, aimed rather to instruct and convert as a philosopher than to give pleasure as a poet. But many passages of striking pathos and beauty show a poetic ability not less than, though different from, that of Virgil*.

Eds: C. Lachmann (4th ed. 1871); K. Büchner (1966); eds with comm. and tr.: H. A. J. Munro (4th ed., 3 vols, 1886); C. Bailey (3 vols, 1947).—Trs: W. H. D. Rouse (1931); R. E. Latham (1951).

W. Y. Sellar, The Roman Poets of the Republic (1881); J. Masson, L. Epicurean and Poet (2 vols, 1907–09); E. E. Sikes, L. (1936); C. A. Gordon, A Bibliography of L. (1962); P. Boyancé, Lucrèce et l'épicurisme (1963); L. (ed. D. R. Dudley, 1965); D. West, The Imagery and Poetry of L. (1969).

A.J.D.

Ludus Coventriae, an erroneous and misleading name given to Brit. Mus. MS Cot. Vesp. D. VIII, a cycle of Corpus Christi plays in an East Midlands dialect, owned by Robert Hegge of Durham until its purchase by Sir Robert Cotton* (c. 1629). The MS contains three groups of plays: one relates to the life of the Virgin and her mother, St Anne, and the second is a Corpus Christi cycle with a Passion play (originally independent) interpolated into it. None of these plays is connected with the Corpus Christi cycle of the Coventry* trade-guilds. No provenance can be proved; but on grounds of dialect, the prominence of the St Anne plays and the loss of the Corpus Christi plays known to have existed at Lincoln, there is a strong case for regarding all the plays in Hegge MS to have belonged originally to Lincoln.

The cycle resembles the Cornish Ordinalia (*Cornish* Mysteries*) in being written for performance on a single, fixed stage, but in the form and content of the text Ludus Coventriae more nearly resembles the York*, Towneley* and Chester* Cycles; but unlike them, it was not apportioned to trade-guilds for performance on pageant-carts. This again strengthens the case for Lincoln as the place of origin, as the topography of that city would make any attempt at perambulatory staging very difficult.

The earliest record of a Corpus Christi play in Lincoln dates from 1471. Shortly afterwards the Corpus Christi procession was transferred to St Anne's Day (26 VII): responsibility for production rested with the St Anne Guild. Yet if these facts strengthen the association of the Hegge Plays with Lincoln, no convincing reason has yet been supplied to explain why the author of the Banns should state that the plays will be given in 'N[nomen; name]-town'. The same applies to The Castle of Perseverance which is also thought to belong to Lincoln (MORALITY PLAYS).

Ludus Coventriae, or the Plaie called Corpus Christi (ed. K. H. Block, 1922; repr. 1960).

E. L. Swenson, 'An inquiry into the composition and structure of L. C.' in Studies in Language and Literature, I (Minneapolis, 1914); F. M. Salter, 'Old Testament plays of L. C.' in Philol. Quart., XII (1933); Hardin Craig, English Religious Drama (1958). G.W.

Ludwig, Otto (*Eisfeld an der Werra 12 II 1813; ∞ Emilie Winkler; †Dresden 25 II 1865), German writer. He studied musical composition under Mendelssohn-Bartholdy in Leipzig (1839–40), but began to write during a second Leipzig period (1842–43). His life was outwardly uneventful, yet ended as a painful tragedy of literary gifts cancelled by a hypersensitive critical faculty. Always delicate, by 1860 he suffered complete nervous collapse. A pioneer realist—he originated the term 'poetic realism'—he mistakenly battled with drama, successfully completing Der Erbförster (1850) and Die Makkabäer (1852); Agnes Bernauer occupied him in various versions all his life. His pre-occupation with literary theory, and particularly his dissections of Shakespeare*, increasingly choked his creative powers; constantly remodelling, he left little finished, but his two Novellen, Zwischen Himmel und Erde and Die Heithereithen, both careful psychological studies, show the perfection he was capable of achieving.

Dramatische Werke (2 vols, 1853–54); Zwischen Himmel und Erde (1856; Eng. tr. B. Q. Morgan, 1928).—Shakespeare-Studien (1871; 1971).—Sämtliche Werke (ed. P. Merker, 18 vols, incomplete, vols I–VI, 1912–22); Werke (ed. W. Leuschner-Meschke, 1961–).—Briefe (ed. K. Vogtherr, 1935); Tagebücher (ed. idem, 1936).

A. Stern, O. L. (1891, 1906); M. Lis, Les œuvres dramatiques d'O. L. (2 vols, 1922–23); H. Schöneweg, L.s Kunstschaffen und Kunstdenken (1941); W. H. McClain, Between Real and Ideal (1963).—O. L.-Kalender (after 1938 O.-L. Jahrb.; ed. W. Greiner, 13 vols, 1929–41). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Ludwigslied, German stanzaic poem in Rhenish dialect, commemorating the victory of the West Frankish King Louis III over the Normans at Saucourt (881); composed before, but recorded (in a unique MS, Valenciennes) after, Louis' death in 882. Louis' career and his battle are reduced to a stylized sequence in which God tests him in adversity and exacts penance of the sinners amongst the Franks. The same subject appears in the Old French poem Gormond et Isembart (CHANSONS DE GESTE).

Ed. W. Braune and K. Helm, Althochdeutsches Lesebuch (1962); C. C. Barber, Old High German Reader (1951).

R. Harvey, 'The provenance...' in Medium Ævum, XIV (1945; ?L. wr. in France); W. Schwarz, 'The L.' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XLII (1947); J. Knight Bostock, Handbook of Old High German Literature (1955). F.P.P.

Lugones, LEOPOLDO (*Río Seco 13 VI 1874; †Buenos Aires 19 II 1938), Argentinian poet, essayist and critic. Beginning as a modernista inspired by Darío*, he developed into a nationalist and popular poet of traditionalist themes and feeling, though never forsaking scrupulous standards of diction and form. Objective rather than lyrical, with a tendency towards the narrative in his later work, Lugones aimed at elevation of feeling and the inculcation of noble ideas of nationalism in his compatriots. E.Sa.

Las montañas del oro (1897); Los crepúsculos del jardín (1905); Lunario sentimental (1909; new ed. 1926); Odas seculares (1910; new ed. 1923); El libro fiel (Paris, 1912); El libro de los paisajes (1917); Las horas doradas (1922); Romancero (1924); Poemas solariegos (1927).—Obras poéticas completas (Madrid, 1952).

J. L. Borges, L. L. (2nd ed., Buenos Aires, 1965). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Lugovskoy, VLADIMIR ALEXANDROVICH (*1901; †1957), Soviet poet. Influenced at first by SYMBOLISM and Acmeism, he joined the CONSTRUCTIVIST group and finally became a member of the RAPP. He wrote poems about the Civil War, as well as some excellent verses about children. This did not prevent him, however, from being also a meditative philosophic seeker imbued with optimism.

Lirika (1958); Seredina veka (1958); Solntsevorot Sinyaya vesna (1961); Stikhotvoreniya i poemy (1966).

L. I. Levin, V. L. (1963).

J.L.

Lugo y Dávila, FRANCISCO DE (*Madrid ?159–; †?ibid. after 1659), Spanish novelist. Little is known of his life except that he spent some years in Mexico. His mediocre collection of novels was published in 1622. He also wrote some genealogies.

Teatro popular: novelas (ed. E. Cotarelo, 1906). E.M.W.

Lu Hsün, pseud. of CHOU SHU-JÊN (*Shao-hsing 25 IX 1881; †Shanghai 19 X 1936), Chinese short-story writer and essayist, was sent in 1902 on a government scholarship to Japan, where he began a medical course. He did not complete it but turned to writing. Returning home in 1909, he became a schoolteacher. From 1912 to 1926 he worked in the Ministry of Education in Peking and from 1920 he concurrently lectured at Peking National University and other Universities. He was a leader of the 'literary revolution' and published his first short story, 'Diary of a Madman', in 1918. He left Peking with other radicals in 1926 and finally took refuge in Shanghai (1927).

While in Japan, he read much European literature in Japanese translations, and he was the first to give a truly Chinese expression to Western social ideals. He is acknowledged as China's greatest modern writer, and has been made by the Chinese Communists into the supreme revolutionary hero. Although his numerous essays had much immediate influence, the 25 short stories of his collections Na-han (1923) and P'ang-huang (1926) are likely to prove his most enduring works. Their style is mordant but not without humour. (A Q ch'eng-chuan has been translated into many languages.) He published many translations, mainly retranslated from Japanese, especially of Russian 19th- and 20th-century authors.

Lu Hsün ch'üan-chi (complete works; 20 vols, 1938, 2 supp. vols, 1946–52; part. trs: C.-C. Wang, Ah Q and Others, 1941; H.-Y. and G. Yang, Selected Works of Lu Hsün, 4 vols, Peking, 1956–60).

Huang Sung-k'ang, Lu Hsün and the New Culture Movement of Modern China (1957); J. D. Chinnery, 'The influence of Western literature on Lü Xùn's "Diary of a Madman"' in Bull. School Orient. and Afr. Stud., XXIII (1960); B. Krebová, 'Lu Hsün and his collection "Old Tales Retold"' in Archiv Orientální, XXVIII (1960); T.-A. Hsia, The Gate of Darkness (1968). A.R.D.

Luiken, JOAN, or JAN (*Amsterdam 16 IV 1649; ∞1672 Maria de Oude; †ibid. 5 IV 1712), Dutch poet and mystic, originally trained as a painter and later famous as an etcher-illustrator. He started with lyrical love and Nature poems (De Duytse Lier, 1671), unsurpassed in his time, arranged in careful thematical harmony and with captions influenced by the mystic Böhme*. After his religious conversion numerous collections of mystic-pantheistic and emblematic verse followed; in addition to didactic verse he also wrote songs of intimate religious beauty.

Jezus en de ziel (1678); Voncken der liefde Jesu (1687); Spiegel van het menselijk bedrijf (1694); Zedelijke en stichtelijke gezangen (1704); Beschouwing der wereld (1708); De onwaardige wereld (1710); De bykorf des gemoeds (1711); Het leeraam huisraad (1711); Des menschen begin, midden

en einde (1712); Geestelijke brieven (1714); Verzameling van eenige gheestelijke brieven (1741); Het overvloeijend herte (1767).

P. van Eeghen and J. Ph. van der Kellen, Het werk van J. en C. L. (1905); C. B. Hylkema in De Gids, LXVII, LXXII (1904, 1909); J. Koopmans in De Beweging, I (1905); J. van der Valk in Ons Tijdschrift, XII (1908); J. P. van Melle, De 'oude' J. L. (1912); J. C. van der Does in Stemmen des Tijds, XVII, XVIII, XX (1928-31); J. Meeuwesse, J. L. als dichter van de Duytsche Lier (1952).

J.W.W.

Luis, FRAY: see León, Luis de.

Lukáč, EMIL BOLESLAV (*Hodruš 1 XI 1900), Slovak poet, and one of the most gifted of those writing since 1918. Lukáč owes something to Ady*, Krasko* and the French Symbolists; but his mature work is highly personal and bears the stamp of its time.

Spoved' (1922); Dunaj a Seina (1925); Moloch (1938); Bábel (1944); Óda na poslednú a prvú (1967).—Hudba domova (sel. with stud. M. Tomčík, 1965).

R.A.

Lukács, GYÖRGY (*Budapest 13 IV 1885; †ibid. 4 VI 1971), Hungarian literary critic and philosopher. One of the leading Marxist exponents of the century, Lukács first became prominent in 1912 when his monograph on modern drama appeared. His literary studies, mainly on French, German and Russian subjects, show him to be strongly influenced by German philosophical style.

A modern dráma fejlődésének története (2 vols, 1912); Balzac, Stendhal, Zola (1946; Studies in European Realism, tr. E. Bone, 1950); Goethe és kora (1946; Goethe und seine Zeit, 1946); A történelmi regény (1947; The Historical Novel, tr. H. and S. Mitchell, 1962); Der Junge Hegel (1948); Deutsche Realisten des 19. Jh. (1951); Az ész trónfosztása (1965); Az esztétikum sajátossága (2 vols, 1965).—Werke (Luchterhand, Neuwied, 1962- ).

G. H. R. Parkinson, G. L., the Man, His Work and His Ideas (1970).

G.F.C.

Lukin, VLADIMIR IGNATYEVICH (*1737; †1794), Russian playwright. His plays, e.g. Mot lyuboviyu ispravlennoy (1765), formed a transition to the sentimental middle-class drama. His insistence that dramatis personae should reflect Russian life and speech had a good effect on subsequent playwrights, including Fonvizin*.

Sochineniya i perevody (2 vols, 1765; 2 vols, 1868).

J.L.

Lull, RAMÓN: see Llull, RAMON.

Lulofs, BARTHOLOM HENDRIK (*Zutphen 22 III

1787; †Groningen 20 VI 1849), Dutch poet and writer of concise prose, from 1815 Professor at Groningen.

Nederlandsche redekunst (1820); Reistogtje in 1826 (2 vols, 1827-28); J. van den Vondel opgehelderd (1833); Gelderlands voortreffelijke dichter Mr A. C. W. Staring (1843); Handboek van den vroegsten bloei der Nederl. letterkunde (1845).—Taalkundige werken (ed. A. de Jager, 6 vols, 1875-78).

C. van Herwerden in Levensber. Maatschappij Nederl. Letterk. (1850); W. B. S. Boeles, Gedenkboek der hoogeschool te Groningen (1864).

J.W.W.

Luna, ÁLVARO DE (*Cañete ?1390; †Valladolid 1453), Spanish prose writer and poet. He was Constable of Castile, Master of the Order of Santiago and virtual ruler under John II until his struggle with the nobles (e.g. Santillana*) caused his dismissal and execution. He wrote a treatise in defence of women (1446); his poems are in the Cancionero de Baena.

Libro de las virtuosas e claras mugeres (ed. M. Menéndez y Pelayo, 1891); see also Baena*.

Crónica de don A. de L. (ed. J. de Mata Carriazo, 1940).—C. Silió, Don A. de L. y su tiempo (Buenos Aires, 1939).

A.D.D.

Lunacharsky, ANATOLY VASILYEVICH (*Poltava 1875; †Moscow 1933), Russian author, a theoretician of proletarian literature and Soviet commissar for education. His early book, Religiya i sotsializm ('Religion and Socialism'; 1908-11), written under the impact of Mach and Avenarius, was severely attacked by Lenin* himself, but later he became an ideologically 'reformed character'. He wrote a great deal about Western and Russian literature, as well as about the theatre, and several plays with an ideological or philosophic basis.

O teatre i dramaturgii (2 vols, 1958); Sobranie sochineniy (7 vols, 1963-67).—Faust and the City, Vasilisa the Wise, The Magi (tr. L. A. Magnus, Three Plays, 1923); On Literature and Art (1965).

A. B. Khalatov, Pamyati Lunacharskogo (1935).

J.L.

Lundegård, AXEL (*V. Sallerup 17 XII 1861; †Stockholm 20 XII 1930), Swedish writer. Lundegård was an intimate friend of Victoria Benedictsson* and, after his début with the realistic short stories I gryningen (1885), his first work was done with her or on her drafts. After her death he incorporated extracts from her papers and diaries in other works, notably an autobiography and the novel Elsa Finne (2 vols, 1902). His own novels began as a revolt from the radicalism of the 1880s; later on he devoted himself with considerable success to historical themes.

Skrifter i urval (7 vols, 1932-33).

S. Linder, 'A. L.' in Ibsen, Strindberg och andra (1936). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Lundkvist, ARTUR (*Oderljunga 3 III 1906; ∞1936 Maria Wine), Swedish poet, essayist and critic. Lundkvist has been much influenced by Surrealism and, in his earlier prose, by D. H. Lawrence* and psychoanalysis. He uses in his work many motifs from his extensive travels. As a critic, he advocates poetry as a vital necessity irrespective of politics or social propaganda.

VERSE: Glöd (1928); Naket liv (1929); Svart stad (1930); Vit man (1932); Eldtema (1939); Dikter mellan djur och Gud (1944); Skinn över sten (1947); Liv som gräs (1954); Ögonblick och vågor (1962); Texter i snön (1964); Besvärjelser till tröst (1969).—NOVELS AND ESSAYS: Atlantvind (1932); Negerkust (1933); Floderna flyter mot havet (1934); Ikarus' flykt (1939); Diktare och avslöjare i Amerikas moderna litteratur (1942); Indiabrand (1950); Den förvandlande draken (1955); Vulkanisk Kontinent (1957); Självporträtt av en drömmare med öppna ögon (1966); Brottställen (1968).

R. Oldberg, Nutidsförfattare (1949); K. Espmark, Livsdyrkaren A. L. (1964). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Lunts, LEV NATANOVICH (*St Petersburg 1901; †Hamburg 1924), Soviet playwright, essayist and theoretician of the SERAPION BROTHERS' group.

PLAYS: Vne zakona (1921); Obezyany idut (1921); Bertrand de Born (1922); Gorod pravdy (1924); The City of Truth, tr. J. Silver, 1929).—Na zapad (essay; 1923).

M. Gorky, 'Pamyati Luntsa' in Beseda, V (1924). J.L.

Luria, ISAAC, known as HA'ARI (*Jerusalem 1534; †Safed 1572), Palestinian Hebrew mystic. Educated in Cairo, he became accidentally a student of CABBALAH and composed commentaries on some parts of the Zohar (see Moses* de Leon). In 1569 he came to Safed, then the centre of Cabbalah studies, and taught a small circle of disciples until his death in a pestilence. He created an entirely new system of Cabbalah, which resembles the ancient Gnosis without there being any literary connection between the two. Its influence was lasting, especially in the form in which it was popularized by the vast ethical and ascetic literature of the following centuries and by Hasidism (Ba'al* Shem Tov). Luria's oral teachings were transmitted through the numerous writings of his chief disciple Chaim Vital*. Luria composed some hymns for the Sabbath meal (Zemirot) which are still in vogue.

**Etz Chayim* (Korzec, 1785).

S. Schechter, 'Safed in the 16th century' in Studies in Judaism, II (1908); J. Abelson, Jewish Mysticism (1913); M. Wiener, Die Lyrik der Kabbalah (1920); A. E. Waite, The Holy Kabbalah

(1929); G. G. Scholem, Major Trends in Jewish Mysticism (2nd ed. 1946); E. Mueller, History of Jewish Mysticism (1946). C.R.

Luria, SOLOMON, known as RASHAL or MAHARSHAL (*Poland c. 1510; †Lublin 7 XI 1573), Polish Hebrew religious writer and poet, head of the Lublin Talmudic academy and a leading authority on Jewish law. He insisted on direct recourse to the TALMUD and freed its text from many corruptions. He bitterly criticized contemporary social evils.

LEGAL WORKS: Chokmat Shelomoh (Cracow, 1587); Yam shel Shelomoh (Stettin, 1861).—VERSE: Seder ha-Zemirot (Lublin, 1596); Divre Shelomoh (Ostrog, 1794).

M. Balaban, Die Judenstadt von Lublin (1919); A. Lourié, Die Familie Lourié (1923); S. Hurwitz, The Responsa of S. L. (1938). C.R.

Lustig, ARNOŠT (*Prague 21 XII 1926), Czech novelist. Lustig spent the years 1942–45 in concentration camps, and this experience has deeply marked his stories and novels.

Noc a naděje (1957); Démanty noci (1958); Můj zdnámý Vili Feld (1961). R.A.

Luther, MARTIN (*Eisleben 10 XI 1483; ∞1525 Katharina von Bora; †ibid. 18 II 1546), German Reformer. Son of a miner, he studied at Erfurt University 1501, became an Augustinian monk (1505), taught at Wittenburg University (from 1508), visited Rome (1510–11), became doctor of theology (1512). He published his 95 theses against the sale of indulgences in 1517, was excommunicated in 1520 and outlawed by the Diet of Worms 1521. He broke with Erasmus* (1525) and with Zwingli* (1529). Until his death he worked tirelessly for the Church he had created, the doctrine of which was established by the Augsburg Confession, 1530. In literature he is chiefly remembered for three great monuments: the German Bible, his hymns and his polemical prose writings. Luther's translations of the Bible (New Testament, 1522; Old Testament, 1523–34), based on the Greek version of Erasmus and the Hebrew of Reuchlin*, is a work of art. Translating according to sense rather than literally, following his principles in the Sendbrief vom Dolmetschen (1530), and using a vivid, homely German salted with popular phrases and colloquialisms, Luther produced a German Bible that had by his death, thanks to the great rise of printing, gone into 377 editions. The hymns (Geistliche Lieder, 1524 ff.) combine piety with a truly popular spirit and with their rhythm and sense of language are at their best works of genius, the spiritual Volkslieder of his people. In the series of Reformation tracts, sermons, commentaries and catechisms, all written in the direct and homely German which made such a popular appeal and which establishes him as one of the architects of modern German, Luther produced a body of writings, the best of which (An den christlichen Adel deutscher Nation, 1520; Von der Freiheit eines Christenmenschen, 1520; Vorrede zum Römerbrief, 1522) with their rugged force and compelling, if often loose and unsystematic method of composition, are typical of their author. Finally, Luther's letters and discourses with friends (Tischreden, 1566) show him in a more personal, sometimes distressingly frank light. By his encouragement of hymns and music Luther started the stream of German church music that leads to Bach. He encouraged religious drama (Vorreden auf Buch Judith und das Buch Tobias, 1534) and wrote German versions of Aesopian fables (1530), an example others followed. His rejection of HUMANISM, except where it served religious ends, obscured the development of German humanism and turned it into confessional channels. Finally, in bringing about the Reformation Luther provided most of German 16th-century literature with its subject-matter. As a writer Luther owed much to the work of scholars and humanists before him. Yet he was a literary genius whose services to German literature cannot be overestimated.

Erlanger Ausgabe, Lateinische Schriften (38 vols, 1829–86), Deutsche Schriften (2nd ed., 67 vols, 1862–85); Weimarer Gesamtausgabe, Pt 1 (58 vols, 1883–1948), Pt 2, Tischreden (1912 ff.), Pt 3, Deutsche Bibel (1906 ff.), Pt 4, Briefe (11 vols, 1930–47); Fabeln (ed. E. Thiele, 2nd ed. 1911); Geistliche Lieder (ed. F. Klippgen, 1912; ed. W. Lucke, 1923; Eng. tr. L. W. Bacon, 1883); smaller eds of L.'s works: O. Clemen and A. Leitzmann (8 vols, 1912–33); G. Buchwald (4th ed., 10 vols, 1924); A. E. Berger (3 vols, 1917); sel. polemical writings (ed. idem in Dt. Lit. in Entw.-Reihen, I, 1930); L.s Werke in Auswahl (ed. O. Clemen, 8 vols, 1950–59).—Briefe (ed. L. Enders, 18 vols, 1884–1914); Tischreden (ed. W. Preger, 1888; ed. E. Kroker, 1903).—TRANSLATIONS: L.'s Primary Works (ed. D. D. Wace and C. A. Buchheim, 1896); Works (tr. and ed. P. Holmann, 1915 ff.); Reformation Writings (ed. B. L. Woolf, 1952 ff.); L.'s Works (ed. J. Pelikan and H. T. Lehmann, 55 vols, 1955 ff.).—Table Talk (ed. and tr. W. Hazlitt, 1848); L.'s Correspondence (tr. and ed. P. Smith, 1913); Conversations (sel., tr. and ed. idem and H. P. Gallinger, 1915).

BIBLIOGRAPHY: Jahrbuch der L.-Gesellschaft (1919 ff.); L. (quart.; 1919 ff.); G. Kawerau, L.s Schriften nach der Reihenfolge der Jahre verzeichnet (2nd ed. O. Clemen, 1929); R. Poser, Synoptisches Inhaltsverzeichnis der gebräuchlichsten L.-Ausgaben (1935); J. Benzing, L.-Bibliographie (1966).

BIOGRAPHIES: Th. Kolde (2 vols, 1884–93); J. Köstlin (2nd ed., 2 vols, 1903; Eng. tr. 1883); Preserved Smith (1911); A. Hausrath (3rd ed., 2 vols, 1914); G. Buchwald (3rd ed. 1917); J. MacKinnon (4 vols, 1925–30).—Roman Catholic viewpoint: H. Denifle (2 vols, 1904–06); H. Grisar (3rd ed., 3 vols, 1924–25; Eng. tr., 6 vols, 1913–17); J. Maritain, Three Reformers (1928).

STUDIES: P. Pietsch, L. und die neuhochdeutsche Sprache (1884); C. Beard, L. and the Reformation in Germany (1889); E. Wolff, Faust und L. (1912); P. Benrath, Goethe und L. (1919); E. König, 'Erasmus und L.' in Hist. Jahrb., XLI (1920); A. Risch, L.s Bibelverdeutschung (1922); H. Abert, L. und die Musik (1924); H. Bornkamm, L. und Böhme (1925), Meister Eckhart und L. (1936) and L. im Spiegel der deutsche Geistesgeschichte (1955); R. H. Tawney, Religion and the Rise of Capitalism (1926); E. Buonaiuti, Lutero e la riforma in Germania (1926); R. Pascal, The Social Basis of the German Reformation (1933); G. Roethe, L.s Bedeutung f. d. hochdeutsche Literatur (1933); A. H. Gerberich, L. and the English Bible (1933); W. G. Moore, 'The literary quality of L.'s style' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XXVIII (1933); H. Bach, Laut- und Formenlehre der Sprache L.s (Copenhagen, 1938); G. Hultsch, Nietzsche und L. (1940); K. Vietor, 'Lutheranism, catholicism and German literature' in Albert Schweitzer Jubilee Book (Cambridge, Mass. 1946); W.-E. Peuckert, Die grosse Wende (1948); R. H. Bainton, Here I Stand (1950); G. Rupp, L.'s Progress to the Diet of Worms (1951); R. H. Fife, The Revolt of M. L. (1957); V. H. H. Green, L. and the Reformation (1964); H. Blum, M. L., Creative Translator (1965); J. Atkinson, M. L. and the Birth of Protestantism (1968). D.G.D.

Luxorius, the most prolific of three mediocre poets who lived at Carthage under the Vandal Kings Thrasamund and Hilderic (496–530). He wrote a Virgilian cento and epigrams in various metres in imitation of Martial*.

Eds: A. Baehrens, Poetae Latini minores, IV (1883); F. Buecheler and A. Riese, Anthologia Latina, I (1894); M. Rosenblum, L. A Latin Poet Among the Vandals (with tr.; 1961). A.J.D.

Luzán Claramunt de Suelves y Gurrea, IGNACIO (*Saragossa 28 III 1702; †Madrid 19 V 1754), Spanish scholar. As a boy he travelled extensively through Italy, studied law in the University of Catania (1727) and lived in Naples till 1733, when he returned to Spain to hold important posts. He wrote a Latin compendium of Descartes* ideas, translated Milton*, among others, knew Greek well and was conversant with Italian, French, English and German literatures. His Poética (1737), mainly based on Muratori's* Della perfetta poesia, more serene and profound and less rhetorical than Boileau's* Art poétique, written in excellent, precise prose, lays down the neo-classical rules for literature. Within this framework Luzán showed independence of judgement and finesse in his appreciation of different literary genres and authors. Though he defended the unities, he praised Lope de Vega* and Calderón*. For him poetry 'is the imitation of nature for the use or enjoyment of men', but he admits that in the work of art enjoyment must often have priority over truth. His ideas started a bitter polemic in the Spanish theatre which lasted almost the whole century.

Poética (1737; 2 vols, Madrid, 1789; ed. L. de Filippo, 2 vols, 1956); Poesías in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXXV, LXI.—'Painting' and 'Virtue' (tr. in H. W. Longfellow, Poets and Poetry of Europe, 1845).

J. Cano, La Poética de L. (Toronto, 1928); L. A. de Cueto in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LXI; M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Historia de las ideas estéticas, III (1901); J. A. Cook, Neo-Classical Drama in Spain: Theory and Practice (Dallas, 1959).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Luzi, MARIO (*Florence 20 X 1914), Italian poet. His poetry is often religious in inspiration and has passed from HERMETICISM, in the 1940s, to more accessible themes in the post-war period.

Avvento notturno (1940); Quaderno gotico (1947); Onore del vero (1957); Il giusto della vita (1960; coll. poems); Nel magma (1963).

G. Zaggarro, L. (1968).

B.M.

Luzzatto, EFRAIM (*San Daniele 1729; †Lausanne 1792), Hebrew poet. He practised medicine for some years in Italy. In 1763 he became physician at the hospital of the Portuguese Jewish congregation in London. His poems are notable for their naturalness and lightness of expression. He was one of the first to free himself from the influence of the artificial Arabic prosody, then usual in Hebrew poetry.

Elle Bnei Haneurim (London, 1768; 2nd ed. intro. M. Letteris, Vienna, 1839); Kol Shachal (Smyrna [Berlin], 1790).

S.A.

Luzzatto, MOSES HAYYIM (*Padua 1707; †Acre 6 V 1746), Hebrew mystic, poet and scholar. At 16 he wrote his first Biblical drama, Shimshon u-Pelishtim, of which only fragments have been preserved. This was followed by a study on Hebrew prosody, Leshon Limudim (1724), a scientific demonstration of the neo-classical Italian-Hebrew style in contrast to medieval Hebrew poetry, which was strongly influenced by Arabic poetry. His Psalter contains, like the Davidic one, 150 chapters and is written in imitation of the Biblical style. It was destroyed, for the orthodox found it sacrilegious, and only two chapters have been preserved. In 1727 he wrote his allegorical drama Migdal Oz as a wedding gift to the son of his teacher, Bassan, and a lasting contribution to modern Hebrew literature. After this first period came a mystical phase, when he was entirely captivated by CABBALAH which from his early youth attracted him more than poetry and science. He later composed many mystical works, including a Zohar Tinyanu ('Second Zohar'; MS unpub.; sel. chs pub. 1889) in Aramaic. All these works were destroyed in the course of persecutions and excommunication. Luzzatto left for Amsterdam, where he wrote Layesharim Tehila (1743) and his most popular ethical work Mesilat Yesharim (1740).

Mesilat Yesharim, the Path of the Upright (crit. ed. with tr. M. M. Kaplan, 1936).

A. Kahan, Rabbi H. L. (Warsaw, 1899); I. Landman, M. L. (New York, 1908); S. Ginzburg, The Life and Works of M. H. L. (Philadelphia, 1931; with biblio.).

S.A.

Luzzatto, SAMUEL DAVID, known as SHADAL (*Trieste 22 VIII 1800; †Padua 30 IX 1865), Italian and Hebrew writer. Born of a noble but poor family, he planned, at the age of 14, his future scientific work as 'regenerator of his nation'—and kept to this plan. In 1829 he became Professor at the Padua Collegio Rabbinico. The end of his life was clouded by family misfortunes and political events which ruined the college. In his numerous works he expounded an emotional, anti-philosophical, yet scientific attitude to Jewish religion and history; the same emotion also pervades his poetry, much of which deals with national themes. He was a recognized master of Hebrew style. As a scholar, he is the author of important commentaries.

Kinnor Na'im (verse; 2 vols, 1825–79; 2nd ed. 1913).—ESSAYS: Prolegomeni ad una grammatica ragionata della lingua ebraica (1836); Discorsi morali agli studenti israeliti (1857); Discorsi storico-religiosi agli studenti israeliti (1870).—LETTERS: Iggerot Shadal (9 vols, 1882–94); Epistolario italiano-francese-latino di S. D. L. (1890).—Autobiografia di S. D. L. (autobiog.; 1882; Autobiographie S. D. L.s, tr. M. Grünwald, 1882).

Gedenkbuch zum 100. Geburtstag L.s (ed. S. Bernfeld, 1900); M. Klotz, S. D. L. als Bibelexeget (1925); S. Morais, Italian Hebrew Literature (1926); M. Wiener, Jüdische Religion im Zeitalter der Emanzipation (1933); N. H. Rosenbloom, L.'s Ethico-Psychological Interpretation of Judaism (1965).

C.R.

Lyashko, NIKOLAY, pseud. of NIKOLAY NIKOLAYEVICH LYASHCHENKO (*Lebedyani 1884; †1953), Soviet novelist and author of short stories with a strongly proletarian outlook. A humane revolutionary, he is at his best when describing the worker's life from personal experience.

Domennaya pech' (1924); Sobranie sochineniy (6 vols, 1926–27); Sladkaya katorga (1936, 1950).

J.L.

Lybeck, MIKAEL (*Nykarleby 18 III 1864; †Grankulla X 1925), Finnish-Swedish poet, playwright and novelist. After travels abroad he published his first poems in 1890, his first prose in the following year; but his first mature prose-work (Den starkare) did not appear till 1900. In this Lybeck reveals his sceptical dislike of religious fanaticism, a dislike which recurs in Hennerson (1916) and in the play, Den röde André (1917). His most successful work is the novel Breven till Cecilia (1920), in which his gift of psychological analysis and his ability to write sober and subtle prose are displayed at their best. He was much influenced by Ibsen* and Kielland*. B.M.E.M.

VERSE: Dikter (1890); Dikter II (1895); Dödsfångaren (1918).—NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: Unge Hemming (1891); Allas vår Margit (1893); Dagar och nätter (1896); Tomas Indal (1911); Samtal med Lackau (1925).—PLAYS: Ödian (1908); Dynastin Peterberg (1913); Bror och syster (1915); Schopenhauer (1922); Domprosten Bomander (1923).—Samlade arbeten (12 vols, 1921–25; first 10 rev. and ed. M. L.).

E. Kihlman, M. L. (1932); S. Björck, Lyriska läsovnningar (1962). B.M.E.M. (I.S.)

Lycophron of Chalcis (first half of 3rd century B.C.), Greek scholar-poet; worked in the Alexandrian library on the collection of comedies, but was himself a tragedian, one of the seven who formed the Alexandrian 'Pleiad'. Of the 20 plays whose titles have survived, the tragedy Cassandra dealt with a theme of near-contemporary history, and Menedemus was a satyr-play about his teacher, the philosopher of that name. His only extant work is Alexandra, a long and extremely obscure dramatic monologue in which a slave reports to Priam the prophecies of Cassandra.

Alexandra (ed. with tr. A. W. Mair in Callimachus, Aratus, L., 1921; ed. L. Mascialino, 1964). A.H.G.

Lycurgus (*c. 390; †324 B.C.), Athenian orator supported Demosthenes* against Macedon. He managed Athenian finance with renowned probity (338–324) and acted as unofficial prosecutor of Athenians of suspect patriotism. In his one surviving speech he prosecutes one Leocrates for having deserted his country after Chaeronea; the style breathes an old-fashioned severity, is somewhat rigid, long-winded, and lacking in grace, but employs the Isocratean period more forcefully than did its inventor.

Ed. F. Durrbach (rev. O. Navarre, 1932; with Fr. tr.).

J. F. Dobson, The Greek Orators (1919); A. and M. Croiset, Histoire de la littérature grecque, IV (1947); G. Kennedy, The Art of Persuasion in Greece (1963). J.H.K. (S.U.)

Lydgate, JOHN (*Lydgate, Suffolk c. 1370; †Bury St Edmunds c. 1450), English priest and Chaucerian

poet; a voluminous writer of extraordinary versatility. Like his contemporaries he freely adapted from other medieval poets (Boccaccio*, Guido delle Colonne*, etc.), but his reputation, once as great as Chaucer's*, has greatly diminished.

The Fall of Princes (ed. H. Bergen, 4 pts, 1924–27); The Life of Our Lady (ed. J. A. Lauritis, R. A. Klinefelter and V. F. Gallagher, 1961); The Pilgrimage of the Life of Man (ed. F. J. Furnivall and K. B. Locock, 3 pts, 1899–1904); Reson and Sensuallyte (ed. E. Sieper, 2 pts, 1901–03); The Siege of Thebes (ed. A. Erdmann and E. Ekwall, 2 pts, 1911–30); The Temple of Glas (ed. J. Schick, 1891); The Troy Book (ed. H. Bergen, 4 pts, 1906–35); Minor Poems (ed. H. N. MacCracken, 2 pts, 1911–34).

E. P. Hammond, English Verse Between Chaucer and Surrey (1927); C. S. Lewis, 'The 15th-century heroic line' in Essays and Stud., XXIV (1938); H. S. Bennett, Chaucer and the 15th Century (1947); W. F. Schirmer, J. L. (Tübingen, 1952; Eng. tr. 1961); A. Renou, The Poetry of J. L. (1967).

R.W.B. (T.F.H.)

Lydus: see John the Lydian.

Lyell, SIR CHARLES (*Kinnordy 14 XI 1797; ∞1832 Mary Horner; †London 22 II 1875), Scottish geologist. Educated at Oxford; secretary of the Geological Society 1823; F.R.S., 1826; Professor of geology at King's College, London, 1831–33; knighted 1848; created baronet 1864. His Principles, 'being an attempt to explain the former changes of the earth's surface by reference to causes now in action', exercised a profound influence on 19th-century scientific thought.

Principles of Geology (3 vols, 1830–33; 12th ed. 1875); Elements of Geology (a supp.; 1838); Travels in North America (1845) and A Second Visit (1849); The Geological Evidences of the Antiquity of Man (1863); Life, Letters and Journals (2 vols, 1881).

W. Gibson in Victorian Stud. (1958). J.K.

Lyly, JOHN (*?Kent 1554; †1606), English novelist, poet and dramatist. Son of a landed gentleman, Lyly took degrees at Oxford and Cambridge before embarking on a literary career in London, in which he was assisted by the patronage of the Earl of Oxford* and by being appointed (1585) deputy-master of the choir-boys of St Paul's, who acted several of his plays. Disappointed in his hope of becoming Master of the Revels, Lyly became a Member of Parliament (1589–1601), and wrote an anti-Puritan pamphlet in the Marprelate controversy.

The two parts of Euphues constitute the first English novel of manners, for Lyly makes the courtships of Euphues and Philautus a critical study of contemporary aristocratic life by means of witty dialogues and disquisitions on women, love, friendship and etiquette. His 'euphuistic' style, with its antithetical parallelism of phrases and clauses, its calculated assonance and transalliteration and its recondite allusions to mythology and natural history, was highly artificial but imposed an influential artistic discipline on English prose (EUPHUISM).

With the exception of the realistic Mother Bombie (1594), Lyly's plays are courtly allegories based upon classical myths and legends. Their aristocratic lovers, romantic atmosphere, witty dialogue, pleasant songs, and humorous sub-plots anticipate Shakespearean comedy.

PROSE: Euphues. The Anatomy of Wyt (1578); Euphues and his England (1580); Pappe with an Hatchet (1585).—PLAYS: Alexander and Campaspe (1584); Sapho and Phao (1584); Endimion (1591); Gallathea (1592); Midas (1592); The Woman in the Moone (1597); Love's Metamorphosis (1601).—The Complete Works of John Lyly (ed. R. W. Bond, 3 vols, 1902; repr. 1967).

J. Goodlet, 'Shakespeare's debt to J. L.' in Eng. Studien, V (1882); C. G. Child, J. L. and Euphuism (Erlangen, 1894); G. P. Baker, 'J. L.' in C. M. Gayley, Representative English Comedies, I (1903); J. D. Wilson, J. L. (1905); P. W. Long, 'The purport of L.'s Endymion' in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc., XXIV (1909) and Mod. Philol., VIII (1911); A. Feuillerat, J. L. (1910); M. W. Croll and H. Clemons, 'The sources of euphuistic rhetoric' in Euphues (1916); T. K. Whipple, 'Isocrates and euphuism' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XI (1916); V. M. Jeffery, J. L. and the Italian Renaissance (1929); W. Riegler, 'The immediate source of euphuism' in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc., LIII (1938); G. Wilson Knight, 'L.' in Rev. Eng. Stud., XV (1939); B. F. Huppé, 'Allegory of love in L.'s court comedies' in E. L. H., XIV (1947); G. K. Hunter, J. L.: The Humanist as Courtier (1962); M. Schlauch, Antecedents of the English Novel, 1400–1600 (1963); J. Powell, 'J. L. and the language of play' in Elizabethan Theatre (ed. B. Harris and J. R. Brown, 1966). W.A.A.

Lynch, BENITO (*1885; †1951), Argentinian novelist who wrote mainly on rural themes. He became known as a novelist in 1916 with Los caranchos de la Florida. In his major novels, El inglés de los güesos (1924) and El romance de un gaucho (1933), urban outsiders act as disturbing influences on the simple rural people. J.F.

Plata dorada (1909); Raquela (1918); La evasión (1922); Las mal llamadas (1923); El antojo de la patrona (1925); De los campos porteños (1931). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Lyndsay, SIR DAVID, of the Mount (*?Cupar 1490; †1522 Janet Douglas; †Edinburgh c. 1554), Scottish poet; Lyon King of Arms (1538) and Scottish ambassador to France and elsewhere. A verse historian and a pungent satirist and moralist who took Church and court as his targets, Lyndsay was a poetical herald of the Scottish Reformation. He survived as a popular moralist down to the early 19th century; and his long morality play, The Thre Estaitis, was brilliantly revived and displayed as strong, lively and dramatic at the Edinburgh Festival in 1948. The quality of its social and ecclesiastical criticism now requires reassessment in the light of recent historical study, especially of the late medieval Church. The Historie of Squyer Meldrum is a biographie romancée, a sophisticated late medieval romance of love and war.

The Dreame of Schir D. L. (c. 1528; pub. 1558); The Complaynt of Schir D. L. (1530; pub. 1559); The Testament . . . of our Souerane Lordis Papyngo, King James the Fyft (1530; pub. 1538); The Tragedie of the Cardinall [Beaton] (1547); Ane Satyre of the Thrie Estaitis (first perf. ?1540; pub. 1602; ed. J. Kinsley, 1954); The Historie and Testament of Squyer Meldrum (pub. 1594; ed. J. Kinsley, 1959); Ane Dialog betuix Eperience and ane Courteour (1554).—Works (1568; 6 other 16th-century eds; standard ed. D. Hamer, 4 vols, 1931–36).

W. Murison, Sir D. L. (1938); J. MacQueen in Stud. in Scot. Lit., III (1966); A. J. Mill, ibid., VI (1968). J.K.

Lyra, FRIEDRICH WILHELM (*Achelriede nr Osnabrück VII 1794; †Osnabrück 16 XI 1848), writer of Low German short stories and anecdotes, and folklorist.

Plattdutsche Briefe, Erzählungen, Gedichte usw. mit besonderer Rücksicht auf Sprichwörter und eigenthümliche Redensarten des Landvolkes in Westphalen (1845).—Schnack un Schnurren (ed. G. Kuhlmann, 1913).

A. Meyer, F. W. L. und seine 'Plattdutschen Briefe' (diss. Griefswald, 1927). G.C.

Lysias (*c. 459; †c. 380 B.C.), Athenian orator, of a wealthy Sicilian metic family, escaped from the Thirty Oligarchs (404), returning in 403, when he prosecuted his brother's betrayer: his speech (Against Eratosthenes) narrates the events vividly. He then made a career of speech-writing for litigants. Of about 200 speeches, some 30 survive, amusing and characteristic being On the Stump (defending a man charged with uprooting a sacred olive) and For the Disabled Man (defending a claim to a pension). But his qualities of simple purity, deft character-drawing and concealed art in portraying the common man with realism are seen at their best in the speech On the Murder of Eratosthenes.

Ed. W. R. M. Lamb (with tr., 1930); 16 orations, ed. E. S. Shuckburgh (rev. ed. 1885).

R. C. Jebb, The Attic Orators (2nd ed. 1893); E. S. Forster, 'Guilty or not guilty? Four Athenian trials' in Greece and Rome, XII (1943); K. Freeman, The Murder of Herodes and Other Trials (1946; best intro. for English readers); J. J. Bateman, 'L. and the law' in Trans. Amer. Philol. Assoc., LXXXIX (1958); G. Kennedy, The Art of Persuasion in Greece (1963); S. Usher, 'Individual characterisation in L.' in Eranos, LXIII (1965). J.H.K. (S.U.)

Łysohorsky, ÓNDRA, pseud. of ERVÍN GOJ (*Frýdek 6 VII 1905), Czech Silesian poet. A native of the Silesian region centred on Ostrava, Łysohorsky fashioned the Lach dialect of this area, transitional between Czech and Polish, into a literary medium, thus taking Silesian regionalism a step further than Bezruč*, whose influence is strong in the matter and manner of his poetry. The result is a series of poems of considerable power and freshness, in which personal emotions and Socialist beliefs are expressed against the background of the Silesian mountains, rivers, mines and factories.

Spiwajuco piasť (1934); Hlos hrudy (1935); Aj lašské řeky plynu do moře (sel. poems; 1958).—Jediný pohár (Czech trs from Ł.; 1964); Brázdou k vesmíru (Slovak trs; 1960); Selected Poems (tr. E. Osers et al., 1972). R.A.

Lytton, GEORGE, 1ST BARON (*Hagley, Worcs 17 I 1709; ∞1742 Lucy Fortescue, ∞1749 Elizabeth Rich; †ibid. 22 VIII 1773), English poet and statesman, industrious writer in literary modes of his day and kindly patron of letters. R.M.H.

Progress of Love (1732); To the Memory of a Lady: a Monody (1747); Observations on Conversion and Apostleship of St Paul (1747); Dialogues of the Dead (1760); Life of Henry II (4 vols, 1767–71); Works (ed. G. E. Aysgough, 1774).

R. Phillimore, Memoirs and Correspondence of George, Lord L. (1845). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Lytton, EDWARD BULWER, 1ST LORD LYTTON (*London 25 V 1803; ∞1827 Rosina Wheeler; †Torquay 18 I 1873), English novelist, playwright and statesman, whose precocious talents produced the poem Ishmael in 1820. Against a background of political and editorial activities and matrimonial disaster, he poured forth marketable novels dealing with crime, historical subjects, folk-lore, the occult and pseudo-scientific, finally attempting realism. His skill in construction and choice of imposing subject won him a reputation hardly sustained. He also wrote essays, epic and satirical verse, the stage successes Lady of Lyons (1838) and Money (1840) and another play, Richelieu (1838). R.M.H.

Pelham (1828); Eugene Aram (1832); Last Days of Pompeii (1834); Harold (1848); The Caxtons (1849); My Novel (1853); The Haunted and the Haunters (1859).

Life, Letters and Literary Remains (by his son; 2 vols, 1883); V. A. G. R. B. Lytton, B. L. (1948); K. Hollingsworth, The Newgate Novel (1963). R.M.H. (M.A.)

Lytton, EDWARD ROBERT BULWER, 1ST EARL OF; pseud. OWEN MEREDITH (*London 8 XI 1831; †Paris 24 XI 1891), English statesman and poet, son of the above, author of over-fluent verse novels, an epic fantasy, and some shorter lyrics.

Lucile (1860); King Poppy (epic fantasy; 1875); Glenaveril (2 vols, 1885).—LYRICS: Wanderer (1857); Marah (1892); Poems by Owen Meredith (sel. with pref.; 1890).

A. B. Harlan, O. M. (1946). R.M.H. (M.A.)

M

Ma CHIH-YÜAN (□Ta-tu=Peking), 13th-century Chinese dramatist. Little is known of the life of Ma, one of the four great Yüan dramatists, beyond that he served as an official in Kiangsu and Chekiang. He wrote 15 tsa-chü plays of which seven are extant. The most famous is Han-kung ch'iu (tr. D. Keene in Anthology of Chinese Literature, ed. C. Birch, 1965), which treats the traditional story of the lady Wang Chao-chün, who was given by Emperor Yüan (48–33 B.C.) as a wife to the chief of the Hsiung-nu (Huns) in order to secure peace. He is also among the most admired writers of san-ch'ü lyrics (sel. tr. in R. F. S. Yang and C. R. Metzger, Fifty Songs From the Yüan, 1967).

PLAYS: Huang-liang mêng; Ch'ing-shan lei; Yüeh-yang lou; Ch'ên T'uan kao-wo; Chien-fu pei; Jên Fêng-tzû. A.R.D.

Mabbe, or Mab, JAMES (*?Surrey 1572; †Abbotsbury, Dorset 1642), English scholar who translated from the Spanish. Matriculating at Magdalen College, Oxford (9 II 1587/88), he became a Fellow (1594–1633). Secretary to Sir John Digby in Madrid (1611–13), Mabbe wrote under the pseudonym 'Don Diego Puede-Ser' (James May-be). B.L.J.

DRAMA TRANSLATION: The Spanish Bawd (1631; ed. H. W. Allen, 1923).—PROSE TRANSLATIONS: The Rogue (1622; ed. J. M. Fitzmaurice-Kelly, 1924); Cervantes' Exemplarie Novells (1640; ed. S. W. Orson, 2 vols, 1900).—Sel. in The Spanish Ladie and Two Other Stories (1928). B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Mabillon, JEAN (*Saint Pierremont 23 XI 1632; †Paris 27 XII 1707), French scholar and the greatest member of the Benedictine Congregation of St Maur. His most influential work has been his De re diplomatica (2 pts; 1681–1704), which inaugurated the scientific study of medieval documents.

Annales Ordinis Sancti Benedicti (6 vols, 1703–39).

E. de Broglie, M. et la société de l'abbaye de St Germain (2 vols, 1888); D. Knowles, Historian and Character (1963). D.H.

Macarius (MAKARY), Metropolitan of Moscow (*1428; †1563), Russian compiler of the Velikie Chetyi Minei (1552) or the 'Great Saints' Calendar', with the lives of the saints arranged by months, according to their anniversaries. He was connected also with the Stepennaya kniga (1563; 'Book of the Tsars' Genealogy'), advocating Moscow as the 'third Rome' and thus justifying her ascendancy over the other principalities.

Velikie Chetyi Minei (1868–1917). J.L.

Macaulay, CATHERINE, née SAWBRIDGE (*Wye 2 IV 1731; ∞1760 George Macaulay, ∞1778 William Graham; †Binfield 22 VI 1791), English historian and miscellaneous writer, famous in her day for her radical views, for which Johnson* teased her. R.M.H.

History of England from Accession of James I to Brunswick Line (8 vols, 1763–83); Letters on Education (1790); Observations on Burke's Reflections on the Revolution in France (1790).

L. M. Donnelly, 'The celebrated Mrs M.' in William and Mary Quart., VI (1949). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Macaulay, THOMAS BABINGTON MACAULAY, 1st LORD (*Rothley Temple, Leics 25 X 1800; †London 28 XII 1859), English historian, essayist, poet and statesman, who from the Edinburgh Review's publication of his essay 'Milton' enjoyed a brilliant contemporary reputation. His contributions to the Review over two decades were collected as Critical and Historical Essays (1843). His History of England (5 vols, 1849–61), creation of a Whig patriot, showed the same mastery of rhetorical prose and ability to marshal and give colour to a vast array of material. As poet he turned to history for his subjects.

Lays of Ancient Rome (1842); Speeches (1854).—Works (ed. Lady Trevelyan, 8 vols, 1866).

Sir George Trevelyan, Life and Letters of Lord M. (2 vols, 1876); Sir Charles Firth, Commentary on M.'s History (1938). R.M.H.

McAuley, JAMES PHILLIP (*Sydney 12 X 1917), Australian poet and critic; school-teacher, lecturer and since 1961 Professor of English at the University of Tasmania; founder of the quarterly review Quadrant (1955). A convert to Catholicism (1952), his critical essays constantly emphasize the 'architectonic role' of traditional religious and metaphysical systems in the unifying and ordering of human culture, and his poems view creative art as essential to the quest for rediscovery of man's true spiritual self amidst the disintegrating forces of modern civilization. His most ambitious work is the historical narrative poem, Captain Quiros (1964), but his powers are best displayed in short, meditative lyrics, such as 'Terra Australis'.

VERSE: Under Aldebaran (1946); A Vision of Ceremony (1956); Surprises of the Sun (1969).—The End of Modernity (criticism; 1959).

V. Buckley, Essays in Poetry, Mainly Australian (1957); D. Bradley, 'M. McA.—the landscape of the heart' in The Literature of Australia (ed. G. Dutton, 1964). A.M.G.

MacCaig, NORMAN (*Edinburgh 14 XI 1910), according to Hugh MacDiarmid* 'the best Scottish poet writing in English today', belongs to Edinburgh, where for many years he has been a teacher with a real vocation. In his speculative verse, mainly on Scottish themes, he rings the changes with great ingenuity and the most dexterous play of words.

Riding Lights (1955); The Sinai Sort (1957); A Common Grace (1960); A Round of Applause (1962); Surroundings (1966); Rings on a Tree (1968); A Man in My Position (1969).

H. MacDiarmid, 'The poetry of N. MacC.' in Akros, VII (Mar. 1968).
W.R.A.

MacCarthy, SIR DESMOND (*1877; ∞1906 Mary Warre-Cornish; †Cambridge 7 VI 1952), English literary and dramatic critic. He edited the monthly Life and Letters and was a regular contributor first to the New Statesman, later, in weekly causeries on current literature, to the Sunday Times. A critic of catholic tastes, he was skilled in lucid exposition, conservative but generous.

Remnants (1918); Experience (1935); Leslie Stephen (1937); Drama (1940); Shaw (1951); Memories (1953); Theatre (1954).

E. M. Forster, D. MacC. (1952).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

McCarthy, MARY (*Seattle 21 VI 1912; ∞1933 Harold Johnsrud [o/o], ∞1938 Edmund Wilson* [o/o], ∞Bowden Broadwater [o/o], ∞1961 James West), American novelist and critic. Vassar-educated, she wrote for liberal journals such as Partisan Review, specializing in reviewing plays. Her sharp wit and keen mind give an edge to her fiction, which deals incisively with the American intellectual life of the Eastern seaboard.

The Company She Keeps (1942); The Groves of Academe (1953); A Charmed Life (1956); Memories of a Catholic Girlhood (1957); Sights and Spectacles 1937-1958 (1958); On the Contrary (1961); The Group (1963); Birds of America (1971).

D. Grumbach, The Company She Kept: A Revealing Portrait of M. McC. (1967). D.S.R.W.

Macchiavelli, NICCOLÒ: see Machiavelli, NICCOLÒ.

McCourt, EDWARD ALEXANDER (*Ireland 10 X 1907; ∞1938 Ann Margaret Mackay), Canadian novelist, critic and Professor of English at the University of Saskatchewan since 1944; his subjects range from Canadian history to academic freedom.

Music at the Close (1947); Walk Through the Valley (1958); Fasting Friar (1963).—CRITICISM: Canadian West in Fiction (1949).

R. G. Baldwin, 'Patterns in the novels of E. McC.' in Queen's Quart., LXVIII (1962).

R.Su.

McCrae, HUGH RAYMOND (*Melbourne 1876; †Sydney 1958), Australian writer, brings to life satyrs and fauns, picaresque types from medieval tradition, themes of Scottish balladry, and whimsies of harlequinade. In later poems there is piquant treatment of everyday life. The verse throughout is polished yet lithe, intelligently resourceful yet unconcerned with abstract or moral ideas or the local scene.

F.T.M.

Poems (1939); The Best Poems of H. McC. (ed. R. G. Howarth, 1961).

A.M.G.

McCrae, JOHN (*Guelph, Ontario 30 XI 1872; †Boulogne 1918), Canadian poet, remembered chiefly for one poem, 'In Flanders Fields', published in Punch, 1915.

In Flanders Fields, and Other Poems (1919).

M.H.M.M. (R.Su.)

McCullers, CARSON, née SMITH (*Columbus, Ga. 19 II 1917; ∞1937 Reeves McCullers; †29 IX 1967), American novelist and short-story writer. She never quite fulfilled the early promise of her first novel, The Heart is a Lonely Hunter (1940), in which an intense world of private anguish opposes the public hysteria of the Depression. The isolation and pain of her characters' lives is caught in the scene of the melancholy Southern town and the awkwardness of the protagonists. The grotesque patterns of The Ballad of the Sad Café (1951) again illustrate with stoicism and pity the painful impossibility of reciprocal love.

NOVELS: Reflections in a Golden Eye (1941); The Member of the Wedding (1946); Clock Without Hands (1961).—The Square Root of Wonderful (plays; 1958).

W. V. O'Connor, The Grotesque (1962); C. E. Eisinger, Fiction of the Forties (1963); Contemporary American Novelists (ed. H. T. Moore, 1964); O. Evans, The Ballad of C. McC. (1966); L. Graver, C. McC. (1969).
G.A.K.

MacDiarmid, HUGH, pen-name of CHRISTOPHER MURRAY GRIEVE (*Langholm 11 VIII 1892; ∞Margaret Skinner, ∞1932 Valda Trevlyn), Scottish poet and essayist, a Communist and one of the founders of the Scottish National Party. His early poetry raised the Scots dialect from the trough of banality into which it had sunk. His long philosophical poem, A Drunk Man Looks at the Thistle (1926), 'breaking' (according to David Daiches) 'on a startled and incredulous Scotland with all the shock of a childbirth in church', is now recognized as a classic. In the 1930s MacDiarmid largely abandoned the Scots he had revived to write in a strange and difficult English full of scientific terminology. The influence of his vivid and aggressive personality is as yet incalculable.

POETRY: Sangschaw (1925); Penny Wheep (1926); To Circumjack Cencrastus (1930); First Hymn to Lenin (1931); Scots Unbound (1932); Sion Limits (1934); Second Hymn to Lenin (1935); In Memoriam James Joyce (1955); Collected Poems (1962; rev. ed. 1967); A Lap of Honour (1967); A Clyack Sheaf

(1969); More Collected Poems (1970).—The Golden Treasury of Scottish Poetry (ed.; 1940).—Contemporary Scottish Studies (1926); Scottish Scene (with Lewis Grassic Gibbon; 1934); Scottish Eccentrics (1936); The Islands of Scotland (1939).—The Uncanny Scot (sel. prose; ed. K. Buthlay, 1968); Selected Essays (ed. D. Glen, 1969).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Lucky Poet (1943); The Company I've Kept (1966).

K. D. Duval and S. G. Smith, H. MacD. (1962); K. Buthlay, H. MacD. (1964); D. Glen, H. MacD. and the Scottish Renaissance (1964).

G.W.C. (W.R.A.)

MacDonagh, DONAGH (*Dublin 1912; †1968), Irish poet and playwright, son of Thomas MacDonagh (†1916); district justice. Co-editor of The Oxford Book of Irish Verse (1958), he is best known for his verse play Happy as Larry (1946).

VERSE: Veterans (1941); The Hungry Grass (1947); A Warning for Conquerors (1968).—Step-in-the-Hollow (play; 1959). E.T.W.

MacDonald, ALEXANDER: see SCOTTISH GAELIC LITERATURE.

MacDonald, GEORGE (*Huntly 10 XII 1824; ∞1851 Louisa Powell; †Ashstead 18 IX 1905), Scottish novelist and poet. A Congregational minister at Arundel and Manchester 1850–56, he then settled in London but spent his later years mainly at Bordighera, Italy. His works include novels of Scottish country life, sympathetic, powerful in characterization, exalting the dignity of country labour; stories for children, of delicate fancy and unobtrusive symbolism; poetry, largely in Scots dialect, marked by sincere religious fervour.

NOVELS: Phantastes (1858); David Elginbrod (1863); Alec Forbes (1865); Robert Falconer (1868); Sir Gibbie (1879); Lilith (1895).—Phantastes and Lilith (intro. C. S. Lewis, 1962).—FOR CHILDREN: At the Back of the North Wind (1871); The Princess and the Goblin (1872); The Princess and Curdie (1883).—POETIC AND DRAMATIC: Within and Without (1855); Poems (1857); The Disciple (1867); The Diary of an Old Soul (1880).

Greville MacDonald, G. MacD. and His Wife (1924); R. L. Wolff, The Golden Key: a Study of the Fiction of G. MacD. (1961).

G.W.C. (W.R.A.)

MacDonogh, PATRICK (*1902; †1961), Irish poet; a lyrical writer whose best work derives from the rhythms of Gaelic poetry.

One Landscape Still (1958).

E.T.W.

McDougall, COLIN (*Montreal 13 VII 1917; ∞1941 Diana Ekers), Canadian writer and registrar at McGill University. His prize-winning novel Execution (1958) is a powerful and penetrating analysis of the effects of war on Canadian soldiers fighting in Italy during the Second World War.

R. Sutherland, 'The vital pretense' in Canad. Lit., XXVII (1966). R.Su.

Macedo, JOAQUIM MANUEL DE (*Itaboraí, Rio de Janeiro 24 VI 1820; †Rio de Janeiro 11 IV 1882), early Brazilian novelist and dramatist. His large output had an immense popular success through his ability to combine the average sentiments and moral values of the people of Rio de Janeiro with extravagant adventures and no less extravagant emotions. Virtue and the family triumph in the end. The comforting effect is enhanced by his rambling and colloquial mode of narration. His novels and plays are invaluable as the expression of the taste of their period and place of origin, and they are not without relevance today. His two books on people and places in Rio de Janeiro are informative and entertaining.

NOVELS: A moreninha (1845); O mdoço louro (1845); Rosa (1849); O forasteiro (1855); O culto do dever (1865); O Rio do quarto (1869); Um noivo e duas noivas (1871); A Baronesa do amor (1879).—PLAYS: Teatro de M. (3 vols, 1863; 2nd ed. 1895).—OTHER WORKS: A nebulosa (poem; 1857); Um passeio pela cidade do Rio de Janeiro (2 vols, 1862–63; frequently repr.); Memórias da Rua do Ouvidor (1878; frequently repr.).

Machado de Assis, 'O teatro de J. M. M.' in Semana literária (1–8 May 1866; repr. in Obra completa, III, 1962); Humberto de Campos, 'As modas e os modos no romance de M.' in Rev. da Acad. Brasileira de Letras (Oct. 1920); Rachel de Queiroz, pref. to A moreninha (1945). J.T.B.

Macedo, JOSÉ AGOSTINHO DE (*Beja 11 IX 1761; †Pedrouços 2 X 1831), Portuguese poet, critic and pamphleteer. A neo-classic, he sought to widen the scope of Portuguese poetry by introducing the themes of science and philosophy, and to improve on Camões' epic in his own O Gama (1811), later re-written as O Oriente (1814). Devoid of any poetic talent, Macedo was essentially a pamphleteer of a particularly virulent type. His writings are indispensable to an understanding of the literary and political background of his age.

VERSE: Contemplação de natureza (1801); Newton (1813); A meditação (1813); A lyra anacreontica (1819); Viagem extática ao templo da sabedoria (1830).—CRITICISM: O motim literário (1811); Censura dos Lusíadas (1820).—PERIODICALS: A besta esfolhada (1828–31); O desengano (1830–31).—VARIOUS: Cartas (1821; 1827); Cartas e opúsculos (ed. T. Braga, 1900).

C. Olavo, A vida turbulenta do padre J. A. de M. (1939); Castelo Branco Chaves, 'J. A. de M.' in Estudos críticos (1932). T.P.W.

Macedonski, ALEXANDRU (*Bucharest 1854; †ibid., 1920), Rumanian poet. Son of an army officer.

he wrote poems at an early age and at 19 edited the review Oltul. He was arrested after an editorial criticizing the government but was shortly released. In 1880 he founded Literatorul, which adopted the ideas of Symbolism and played an important part in propagating them in Rumania. His first volume of poetry, Poezii, appeared in 1882 and in this and subsequent collections (Excelsior, 1895; Flori sacre, 1912; Poema rondelurilor, 1927) the poet appears both as a Romantic and as a Symbolist. His poems dealing with the luckless fate of the genius in society have led to a comparison with Eminescu*, but much of his work certainly carries the seal of Symbolism and his own studies of the techniques of the Symbolists produced some remarkable Rumanian verse.

Opere (2 vols, 1966).—A. Marino, Viața lui A. M. (1966) and Opera lui A. M. (1967); G. Călinescu, Istoria literaturii române, compendiu (3rd ed. 1968). D.J.D.

Macer, AEMILIUS (*Verona; †16 B.C.), Latin didactic poet and friend of Virgil*. His works, which included an Ornithogonia and Theriaca in the style of Nicander*, were highly regarded in antiquity.

W. Morel, Fragmenta poetarum Latinorum (1927; repr. 1963). A.J.D.

Macer, GAIUS LICINIUS (*c. 110; †66 B.C.), Roman historian, wrote a history of Rome from the earliest times in not less than 16 books. While not impartial, he cited his authorities and was himself used as a source by Livy*.

Fragments in H. Peter, Historicorum Romanorum reliquiae, I (2nd ed. 1914; repr. J. Kroymann and W. Schaub, 1967, with biblio. from 1900). J.F.L. (A.J.D.)

Mácha, KAREL HYNEK (*Prague 16 XI 1810; †Litoměřice 6 XI 1836), Czech poet. Mácha, without doubt the greatest of Czech poets, came of a poor Prague family and grew up in the still half-German atmosphere of the Bohemian capital. In school and at Prague University, where he studied law, he came under the influence of the national regeneration movement, notably of Jungmann*. The study of philosophy and of Polish and English Romantic literature opened up for him new worlds of imaginative experience and left their mark on his literary work. A flamboyant yet sombre and incalculable figure, he lived an unconventional life in Prague, interspersed by wanderings in Italy (1834) and among the ruined castles and wild countryside of north Bohemia, until material circumstances compelled him to take a post in a lawyer's office at Litoměřice (IX 1836). His passionate and often unhappy love for a shallow coquette, Eleonore Schomek (the Lori of his letters), dominated the latter part of his life. On 1 X she gave birth to a son; Mácha decided to marry her and was making preparations for the wedding when he died, probably of cholera.

His earliest poems were written in German (Versuche des Ignaz Mácha, MS of 1829) and show the influence of Schiller* and German Romanticism. His poetic genius reveals itself in his Czech works. These fall into three categories: lyrical poems; prose sketches, stories and fragments; and the epic-lyric poem Máj (1836). Several works in the first two categories deal with Bohemia and its history. He sees the past glories and present low estate of his country through romantic eyes, but, unlike most of his contemporaries, refrains from envisaging a future revival of Czech greatness. In other (especially prose) works he meditates on the purpose of human life, on the relationship of man to the fascinating but intangible and at times demonic beauty of nature, and on the consuming, but inadequate and disillusioning character of human love.

All these themes except the patriotic are fused in Máj, one of the great poems of Slavonic Romanticism. Externally a Byronic robber-romance, it is an inspired projection of its author's vision of life, expressed in language the peculiarly fascinating melodic quality of which owes little or nothing to predecessors and contemporaries. The Prague reviewers, preoccupied with the function of literature as a weapon in the national struggle, received the poem coldly. Later generations of Czech literary critics have made amends for the short-sightedness of their predecessors.

Dílo Karla Hynky Máchy (ed. K. Janský, 3 vols, 1948–50); Spisy K. H. M. (ed. K. Janský et al., 2 vols, 1959–61).—Trs of Máj: Eng., H. H. McGovern (1949), R. A. Ginsburg (1932); Fr., H. Jelinek and G. Pasquier (1936); Ger., E. Neumann (4th ed. 1937); Ital., E. Lo Gatto (1950).

Various authors, Torso a tajemství Máchova díla (1936); Věčný M. (1940); J. Mukařovský, Máchové studie (1948); K. Janský, K. H. M. Život uchvatitele krásy (1953); H. Granjard, M. et la renaissance nationale en Bohême (1957). R.A.

Machado, SIMÃO (*Torres Novas c. 1570; †Barcelona 29 VI 1634), Portuguese playwright. He spent the latter part of his life in Barcelona as a Franciscan Friar. His plays contain some lively comic scenes and are written, like many of those of Gil Vicente*, partly in Spanish, partly in Portuguese. The Comédia do cerco de Dio is interesting for its presentation of Indian characters.

Comédia do cerco de Dio; Comédia da pastora Alfea; pub. in Comédias portuguesas (1601; 2nd ed. 1631).

T. Braga, 'S. M.' in Eschola de Gil Vicente (1898); C. H. Frèches, 'Les "comédias" de S. M.' in Bull. d'hist. du théâtre portugais, II (1951). T.P.W.

Machado de Assis, JOAQUIM MARIA (*Rio de Janeiro 21 VI 1839; ∞1869 Carolina Augusta Xavier de Novais; †ibid. 29 IX 1908), Brazilian novelist. An epileptic of humble mulatto origin, he rose from being a printer's apprentice through journalism to a high place in the Brazilian civil service. In 1896 he was co-founder of the Academia Brasileira de Letras, and was elected its President for life in the following year. He reached maturity with his Mémoires posthumes de Brás Cubas (1881), Quincas Borba (1891) and Dom Casmurro (1900), novels centred on upper-class society in Rio de Janeiro and characterized by their ironical bitterness of tone and their deliberately discursive and ambiguous style of narration. Limited in the world they portray, they reveal an extraordinary depth of human insight in terms of detached and sardonic humour and a unique combination of the trivial and the tragic. He was a master of Brazilian prose and an influential critic. His short stories rival the irony and powers of observations of his novels.

Poesias completas (1901).—NOVELS: Ressurreição (1872); A mão e a luva (1874); Helena (1876); Yaiá Garcia (1878); Esau e Jacó (1904); Memorial de Aires.—SHORT STORIES: Contos fluminenses (1870); Histórias da meia-noite (1873); Papéis avulsos (1882); Histórias sem data (1884); Várias histórias (1896); Páginas recolhidas (1899); Relíquias de casa velha (1906).—Obras completas (incl. crit. studs; 3 vols, 1959); Obras completas (Instituto Nacional do Livro; in prep.).

A. Meyer, M. de A. 1935–1958 (1958); Lúcia Miguel Pereira, M. de A. Estudo crítico e biográfico (3rd ed. 1946); Eugênio Gomes, M. de A. (1958); H. Caldwell, M. de A. (1970). J.T.B.

Machado y Ruiz, ANTONIO (*Seville 26 VII 1875; ∞Leonor Izquierdo Cuevas; †Collioure, France 22 II 1939), Spanish poet. He was educated in Madrid at the Institución Libre de Enseñanza, the ethical and aesthetic influence of whose leaders (Giner*; Cossío*) over Machado's poetry was considerable. He later became Professor of French at several provincial Institutos. The death of his young wife accentuated his retiring character. During the Civil War he threw his prestige on the Republican side, and in the great exodus of 1938 crossed the French frontier on foot.

With only one volume of collected poems he occupies a unique position in contemporary Spanish poetry. His style is terse, almost bare of metaphors; his rhyme mainly assonant; his subjects, things of everyday life. Yet this apparent simplicity is full of thought and subtleties which echo the best popular and culto traditions. After the early, sober lyricism of Soledades (1903) he evolved towards a poetry of meditation, in search of God through 'galleries of dream'. An unrivalled painter and interpreter of Castile, the whole range of his ideas, his serene pessimism, his peculiar gift of humanizing landscapes and of giving life to inanimate things, are best seen against the background of his famous Campos de Castilla (1912). At the core of all his production lies a pre-occupation with time, appearing in such recurrent themes as water and afternoons. His later poems are short and aphoristic. In collaboration with his brother Manuel he wrote good poetic drama. His prose essays on literary subjects are of great interest. His poetry has been compared to the best of Yeats*.

Poesias completas (1917; constant repr. Madrid, Buenos Aires); Obras completas de Manuel y A. M. (4 vols, 1947).—Several poems tr. in: Samuel Putnam, The European Caravan (1931); Translations From Hispanic Poets (1938).—Eighty Poems (tr. W. Barnstone, 1959); Castilian Ilexes (sel. poems tr. C. Tomlinson and H. Gifford, 1963); Juan de Mairena (tr. B. Belitt, 1963).

A. M., Vida y obra. Bibliografía. Antología. Obra inédita (Hispanic Inst., New York, 1951); R. de Zubiria, La poesía de A. M. (1955); S. Serrano Poncela, A. M. (1954); R. Gullón, Las secretas galerías de A. M. (1958) and Una poética para A. M. (1970); A. J. McVan, A. M. (with tr. of poems; New York, 1959); P. de A. Cobos, Humor y pensamiento de A. M. en la metafísica poética (1963); M. Tuñón de Lara, A. M., poeta del pueblo (1967); A. Sánchez Barbudo, Los poemas de A. M. (1967); M. U. Guerra, El teatro de Manuel y A. M. (1969). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Machado y Ruiz, MANUEL (*Seville 29 VIII 1874; †Madrid 19 I 1947), Spanish poet, son of the founder of the Spanish Folk-Lore Library. He studied literature at Seville and worked as librarian, journalist and theatre critic. Like his brother Antonio, he was elected academicien. Less profound than his brother but more sensual and humorous, he combined the colour and music of MODERNISM with Andalusian folk-lore. The mixture of French and Spanish influences, visible in his treatment of Andalusian life and in the elegant scepticism of his first books (Alma, 1902; Museo, 1907; El mal poema, 1909), shows to best advantage in erotic themes and in the historical sonnets inspired by famous paintings. Later he evolved towards a style which was inspired by the Andalusian copla and produced his best works: Cante hondo (1912), Sevilla y otros poemas (1919). In collaboration with his brother he wrote good poetic drama, the most successful being La Lola se va a los puertos (1930) and La duquesa de Benamejí (1932), the latter in prose and verse.

See biblio. to prec. art.

M. Pérez Ferrero, Vida de Antonio M. y M. M. (1947); G. Brotherston, M. M., a Revaluation (1968). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Machairas: see Leontius Machairas.

Machar, JOSEF SVATOPLUK (*Kolín 29 II 1864; †Prague 17 III 1942), Czech poet. After contemplating an army career Machar became a bank official in Vienna, where he lived from 1891 to 1917. From 1894 he was a prominent figure in Czech literary life, leading the 'realist' reaction against the neo-Romantic poetry of Vrchlický* and Hálek*. From Vienna he maintained contact with Czech political circles and his friendship with T. G. Masaryk* brought him a year's imprisonment in the First World War (1916-17). After the establishment of the Czechoslovak Republic he was appointed inspector-general of the army (1919-24).

After his early subjective lyrics (Confiteor, 3 vols; first pub. 1887-92; def. ed. 1899-1901) Machar began to produce the realistic, analytical, often satirical poems that are most characteristic of his genius. In Tristium Vindobona (1893) he subjects Czech romantic patriotism to searching criticism. Social criticism is the keynote of Magdaléna (1894). His most ambitious work is the verse cycle Svědění věků ('The Conscience of the Ages') which vies with Victor Hugo* and Vrchlický in portraying the whole of human history in a series of striking episodes. The work is characterized by Machar's admiration for the uninhibited joy and strength of Greek and Roman civilization and his Nietzschean hatred of Christianity.

Machar vividly portrayed his wartime experiences in Kriminal (1918; The Jail, tr. P. Selver, 1921).

Sebrané spisy (coll. works; 52 vols, 1927-40).

V. Martinek, J. S. M. (with biblio.; 1948).

R.A.

Machaut, GUILLAUME DE (*?1300; †V 1377), French musician and poet, whose patrons included the Kings of Bohemia and Navarre and members of the French royal family. He was appointed canon of Rheims in 1337. While he is still recognized as a great musician, his verse, which deals with courtly themes in an allegorical and didactic style reminiscent of the *Roman* de la Rose*, appeals little to the modern reader. But he is an important figure because his innovations in treatment and technique were adopted by the French poets of the 14th and 15th centuries. They include a more personal and realistic treatment of courtly themes and of allegory, the standardization of a lyric-narrative form called the dit, and above all of such forms as the ballade, rondeau, virelay etc. (Margival*). His most original work is the Livre du Voir Dit (?1364). He also influenced Gower* and Chaucer*.

Livre du Voir Dit (ed. P. Paris, 1875); Poésies lyriques (ed. V. Chichmaref, 2 vols, 1909); Œuvres (ed. E. Hoepffner, 3 vols, 1908-21, unfinished; with excellent intro.).

A. Thomas, 'G. de M. et l'Ovide moralisé' in Romania, XLI (1912); G. L. Kittredge, 'Chaucer's Troilus and G. de M.' in Mod. Lang. Notes, XXX

(1915); A. Machabey, G. de M., la vie et l'œuvre musicale (2 vols, 1955). A.H.D.

Machen, ARTHUR, pseud. of ARTHUR LLEWELLYN JONES (*Caerleon, Mon. 3 III 1863; ∞1887 Amelia Hogg, ∞1903 Dorothea Hudleston; †Beaconsfield 15 XII 1947), Anglo-Welsh translator and short-story writer. Intended for a medical career, he drifted into journalism and acting. His story, 'The Bowmen', published in the Evening News (2 IX 1914) gave rise to the story of the Angels of Mons. Machen was responsible for a notable translation of the Memoirs of Casanova (12 vols, 1894), for two delightful volumes of autobiography, and for some distinctive short stories that capture an atmosphere of evil and terror.

The Great God Pan (1894); Hieroglyphics: a Note Upon Ecstasy in Literature (1902); London Adventure, or, the Art of Wandering (1924); Children of the Pool and Other Stories (1936).—AUTOBIOGRAPHIES: Far Off Things (1922); Things Near and Far (1923).—Works (Caerleon ed., 9 vols, 1923).

V. Starrett, A. M. (1918); R. E. Roberts, 'A. M.' in The Bookman, LXII (1922); H. Danielson, A. M.: A Bibliography (1923); G. H. Wells, 'A Welsh Border writer' in The Welsh Outlook (1924); A. M. (ed. Fr. B. Sewell, 1960); A. Reynolds and W. Charlton, A. M.: A Short Account of His Life and Work (1963); W. D. Sweetser, A. M. (1964); A. Goldstone and W. Sweetser, A Bibliography of A. M. (1965). C.P. (M.W.T.)

Machiavelli, NICCOLÒ (*Florence 3 V 1459; †ibid. 22 VI 1527), Italian political theorist and historian. Little is known of his early life and education. His political career began in 1498 when he served the Florentine Republic first as Cancelliere and later as secretary to the Dieci de Libertà e di Pace. From 1499 to 1509 he was sent on important political missions, including those to Louis XII of France, Cesare Borgia, Pope Julius II and to Germany and France.

It was Machiavelli's conviction that mercenary armies endangered the security of a state. From 1505 to 1507 he was occupied in attempting to raise a militia for the defence of Florence. Through his influence, a committee, the Nove della Milizia (1506), was set up, with Machiavelli as secretary, and an army of 5,000 infantry was raised. Despite these efforts, aimed at maintaining the independence of the Florentine Republic, the Medici returned to power in 1512. Machiavelli was deposed from office and forbidden to leave Florentine territory. Implicated in the anti-Medicean conspiracy of 1513, he was imprisoned and tortured. Adjudged innocent, he was placed under house arrest at a villa at San Casciano near Florence. Here, to employ his enforced leisure, he wrote his famous work, Il Principe (1513). Allowed eventually to revisit Florence, he became a member of the Accademia degli Orti Oricellari, before whom he read his Discorsi della prima deca di Tito Livio (1513-21). Introduced into the Medici circle in 1519, he was once more entrusted with negotiations and commissioned to write the annals of Florence, which he completed in 1525 and presented to Clement VII (Giulio de' Medici) under the title of Istorie Fiorentine. In 1526 he was nominated Cancelliere of the Cinque Procuratori delle Mura and worked on a project for fortifying the city. After the sack of Rome (1527) the Medici were again expelled and the republic re-established. Machiavelli hoped to obtain the post of secretary to the Dieci della Guerra, but having served the Medici he was considered suspect. Bitterly disappointed, he fell ill and died in a few days.

Il Principe was originally to have been dedicated to Giuliano de' Medici but on his death in 1516 the work was addressed to Lorenzo di Piero de' Medici, Duke of Urbino, a petty tyrant who scarcely answered Machiavelli's purpose. It had been the intention of Pope Leo X (Giovanni de' Medici) to form in Emilia a state for Giuliano de' Medici, his brother, as Alexander VI had attempted to do for Cesare Borgia in the Romagna. Machiavelli was impelled by this to instruct Giuliano how the art of statecraft might enable him to create a strong state, defended by its own army, free, independent and secure from usurpation or foreign domination. The last chapter (XXVI) gives the key to Machiavelli's hopes and intentions. Il Principe, though the most famous of Machiavelli's works, is less representative of his political views than the Discorsi. In addition, account should also be taken of the dialogues, Dell'arte della guerra (1521). Of Machiavelli's literary works, the most important is his brilliant comedy, La Mandragola (?1513).

Tutte le opere storiche e letterarie di N. M. (ed. G. Mazzoni and M. Casella, 1929); Opere (ed. E. Raimondi, 3rd ed. 1967); Il Principe (ed. L. Russo, 7th ed. 1940).—The Literary Works of M. (ed. and tr. J. R. Hale, 1961); The Prince (Eng. ed. L. A. Burd, intro. Lord Acton, 1891; tr. G. Bull, 1968); The Discourses of N. M. (tr. L. J. Walker, with intro., chronol. tables and notes, 2 vols, 1950).

F. Ercole, La politica di M. (1926); P. Villari, The Life and Times of N. M. (tr. Linda Villari, 1929); A. H. Gilbert, M.'s 'Prince' and Its Fore-runners (Durham, N.C., 1939); J. H. Whitfield, M. (1947); R. Ridolfi, The Life of N. M. (tr. C. Grayson, 1963). B.R.

Macias (second half 15th century), Galician semi-legendary poet, often celebrated in Spanish and Portuguese literature as the type of the constant lover. He is represented as a melancholy character who persistently pays court to his lady until he is killed by her jealous husband. The subject is treated by Lope de Vega* in Porfiar hasta morir (1638). Some 20 poems are ascribed to Macias, but the authorship of many of them is doubtful.

H. A. Rennert, Macias, o namorado. A Galician

Trobador (Philadelphia, 1900); H. R. Lang, Cançãoeiro gallego-castelhano (New York, 1902). T.P.W.

Macías Picavea, RICARDO (*Santofía 1847; †Valladolid 1899), Spanish writer, Professor of Latin and history at the Instituto of Valladolid. El problema nacional (1891) is a thoughtful analysis of Spanish life and decadence, and an exposition of the reforms he deemed necessary. His good, sober style can be seen in Tierra de Campos (2 vols, 1897-98), a powerful novel of Castilian rural life. His work on Spanish education (La instrucción pública en España y sus reformas, 1882) is very valuable. R.M.N.

Maciejowski, IGNACY, pseud. SEWER (*Warsaw 28 VII 1839; †Cracow 22 IX 1901), Polish novelist. After the 1863 rising he spent several years abroad. Of his typically Positivist novels, at times based on real events, those on peasant life are the best.

Nafta (3 vols, 1894); Biedronie (1896); Starzy i młodzi (1896); Matka (1898); Bajecznie kolorowa (1898); Ponad siły (1901).—SHORT STORIES: Świat ludowy (1889); Nowele (1895).—Szkice z Anglii (3 vols, 1882).

P. Chmielowski, 'J. M.' in Nasi powieściopisarze (1895). S.S. (P.H.)

Macinghi Strozzi, ALESSANDRA (*Florence 1407; ∞ Matteo Strozzi; †ibid. 1471), Italian letter-writer. Her letters to her sons in exile are an interesting reflection of Florentine family life.

Lettere di una gentildonna fiorentina del secolo XV ai figliuoli esuli (ed. C. Guasti, 1877; new ed. G. Papini, 1914, with biblio., repr. with intro. A. Doren, Jena, 1927).

Maria D'Ancona, Una gentildonna fiorentina del 1400 (1907). B.R.

Mačiulis-Maciulevičius, JONAS: see Maironis.

McKay, CLAUDE (*Clarendon, Jamaica 15 IX 1890; ∞?1915; †Chicago, Ill. 22 V 1948), West Indian novelist and poet. From mountain peasant to urban policeman, he published two volumes of dialect verse which show his disenchantment with the harsh life of the latter. In 1912 he went to the U.S.A. to study agriculture, but further disenchantment drove him from the institutions to a life of odd jobs. His verse, sharpened by his bitter experience of race prejudice, by his pride of race and his sense of justice, won him left-wing acclaim and prominence in the Harlem literary renaissance. In 1919 he travelled to Britain where he worked on Sylvia Pankhurst's Workers' Dreadnought. In 1921 he became associate editor of The Liberator in New York and, after a visit to Moscow, for some ten years afterwards travelled, mainly in France and Morocco.

His early dialect verse reveals a human pity that later saves his angry American protest poems from the destructive effects of hatred. His experience of American colour prejudice produced his most vigorous poems, but his most elegant owe everything to a nostalgia for his native Jamaica, as does his best novel. His three novels are set respectively in Harlem, Marseilles and the Jamaica of his childhood; but it is in the third, Banana Bottom (1933), that the theme of his quest for true Negro identity in an alien environment is best fulfilled, polemicism being subordinated to aesthetic considerations.

Songs of Jamaica (1912); Constab Ballads (1912); Spring in New Hampshire and Other Poems (1920); Harlem Shadows (1922); Home to Harlem (1928); Banjo (1929); A Long Way From Home (autobiog.; 1937); Selected Poems (1953).

A. D. Drayton, 'McK.'s human pity' in Introduction to African Literature (ed. Ulli Beier, 1967); Wayne Cooper and R. C. Reinders, 'A black Briton comes "home": C. McK. in England, 1920' in Race, IX.1 (1967); Kenneth Ramchand, The West Indian Novel and Its Background (1970).

A.D.Dr.

Mackenzie, SIR COMPTON (*West Hartlepool 17 I 1883; ∞1905 Faith Stone [†1960], ∞1962 Christina MacSween [†1963], ∞1965 Lilian MacSween; †30 XI 1972), English novelist. He contributed to the exciting intellectual and emotional atmosphere preceding the First World War with a vivacious novel of theatre life (Carnival, 1912) and a searching analysis of adolescence (Sinister Street, 2 vols, 1913-14). After war experience he was prolific in output, diversified, lively and individual.

NOVELS: The Passionate Elopement (1911); Guy and Pauline (1915); The Four Winds of Love (6 vols, 1937-45); The Monarch of the Glen (1941); Whisky Galore (1947).—Literature in My Time (1933).—MEMOIRS: Gallipoli Memories (1929); First Athenian Memories (1931); Greek Memories (1932; re-issued 1939); Aegean Memories (1940).—My Life and Times (10 vols, 1963-71).

K. Young, C. M. (1968).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Mackenzie, SIR GEORGE (*Dundee 1636; †London 8 V 1691), Scottish lawyer, politician and author; defended Argyll 1661; became King's Advocate in 1677; as criminal prosecutor in the Covenanter persecutions he was named 'Bluidy Mackenzie'. A versatile writer in a pure English prose; and an acquaintance of Dryden*, to whom he was 'that noble wit of Scotland'. In 1682 he founded the Advocates' Library in Edinburgh.

Aretina; or, The Serious Romance (1661); Religio Stoici (1663); Moral Gallantry (1667); Discourse on the Laws and Customs of Scotland in Matters Criminal (1678); Institutions (1684); A Moral Essay, Preferring Solitude to Publick

Employment (1685).—Works (ed. T. Ruddiman, 2 vols, 1716-22).—Biblio. in Trans. Edinburgh Biblio. Soc. (1936). J.K.

Mackenzie, HENRY (*Edinburgh 26 VIII 1745; ∞1776 Penuel Grant; †ibid. 14 I 1831), Scottish author and lawyer, a leader of Edinburgh literary society. A writer of graceful classical prose with high moral tone and a sentimental pathos which appealed to his age; one of the first reviewers of Burns*; and a keen observer of men and manners. Mackenzie's novels were popular and influential. Scott* called him 'the historian of feeling'.

The Man of Feeling (1771; ed. B. Vickers, 1967); The Man of the World (1773); Julia de Roubigné (1777); contrib. to The Mirror (1779-80) and The Lounger (1785-87); The Life of Dr. Blacklock (1793).—Works (8 vols, 1808); Anecdotes and Egotisms (1927).

Sir Walter Scott, 'M.' (in the Novelists' Libr., 10 vols, 1821-24; pub. as Lives of the Novelists, 1906); H. W. Thompson, A Scottish Man of Feeling (1936); biblio. of sentimentalism in Vickers' ed. of The Man of Feeling. J.K.

Mackenzie, SEAFORTH (KENNETH IVO) (*Perth 1913; †Goulburn 1955), Australian novelist and poet. His partly autobiographical novel, The Young Desire It (1937), depicts the schooldays of a sensitive adolescent boy and his growth towards maturity. Outstanding among the other three novels is The Refuge (1954). The best of his poetical works are distinguished by a gravely reflective lyricism and delicate formal control.

Selected Poems (ed. D. Stewart, 1961).—NOVELS: Chosen People (1938); Dead Men Rising (1951).

E. Jones, K. M. (1969).

A.M.G.

Maclaren, IAN, pen-name of JOHN WATSON (*Manningtree, Essex 3 XI 1850; ∞1878 Jane Burnie Ferguson; †Mount Pleasant, Iowa 6 V 1907), Scottish novelist. He was a Free Church minister at Logiealmond, Perthshire from 1875 to 1877 (the 'Drumtochty' of his books), at Glasgow (1877-80), and at Sefton Park, Liverpool (1880-1905). A very able preacher, his sketches of Scottish country life won him enormous popularity but show little instinct for writing and fall under the general condemnation of the 'Kailyard School'.

Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush (1894); The Days of Auld Lang Syne (1895); Kate Carnegie (1896); Young Barbarians (1901).

W. R. Nicoll, I. M. (1908); G. Blake, Barrie and the Kailyard School (1951). G.W.C. (W.R.A.)

MacLavery, MICHAEL (*Monaghan 1907), Irish novelist and short-story writer. A fine novelist of the Irish scene, MacLavery is also one of the leading Irish short-story writers of his time.

NOVELS AND STORIES: Call My Brother Back (1939); Lost Fields (1942); The White Mare (1943); In This Thy Day (1945); The Three Brothers (1948); The Game Cock (1949); Truth in the Night (1952); School for Hope (1954); The Choice (1958); Brightening Day (1965). E.T.W.

MacLean, SORLEY (*Raasay 1911), a Scottish Gaelic poet who joins to his command of the whole resources of that language a contemporary sensibility and a deep involvement with the major issues of our time. His most ambitious work, An Cuilithionn (The Cuillin), portrays the history and struggles of the Skye crofters against the background of world history: it has been published as yet only in parts, some in Four Points of a Saltire (1970).

Dain do Eimhir (1943; tr. I. C. Smith, 1971).
Lines Rev., XXVIII (1969) and XXXIV (1970).
W.R.A.

MacLeish, ARCHIBALD (*Glencoe, Ill. 7 V 1892; †1916 Ada Hitchcock), American poet. While an expatriate in France, he wrote poems subjective in content and showing the influences of Eliot* and Pound*. His later poems increase in social consciousness; his radio plays in verse treat contemporary issues with great technical virtuosity; his essays reassert the case for democracy and emphasize the poet's usefulness in society.

VERSE: Tower of Ivory (1917); The Happy Marriage (1924); Streets in the Moon (1926); The Hamlet of A. MacL. (1928); New Found Land (1930); Conquistador (1932); Poems, 1924-1933 (1933); Public Speech (1936); Collected Poems (1954); The Wild Old Wicked Man and Other Poems (1968).—VERSE PLAYS: The Fall of the City (1937); Air Raid (1938); J. B. (1958); Heracles (1967).—PROSE: A Time to Speak: The Selected Prose of A. MacL. (1941); A Time to Act: Selected Addresses (1943); The American Story: Ten Broadcasts (1944); Poetry and Experience (1961); A Continuing Journey (1968).

R. Brenner, Poets of Our Time (1941); S. L. Falk, A. MacL. (1965). H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

MacLennan, HUGH (*Glace Bay, Nova Scotia 20 III 1907; †1936 Dorothy Duncan [†1957], †1959 Frances Aline Walker), major Canadian novelist and essayist who completed a doctorate in classics, taught at Lower Canada College from 1935 to 1945, then became Professor of English at McGill University. His works explore the problems of national identity, effects of tradition, the generation gap and French-Canadian separatism, and have been widely translated.

Barometer Rising (1941); Two Solitudes (1945); The Precipice (1948); Each Man's Son (1951); Watch That Ends the Night (1959); Return of the Sphinx (1967).—ESSAYS: Cross Country (1949);

Thirty and Three (1954); Scotchman's Return (1960); Seven Rivers of Canada (1961).

G. Woodcock, H. MacL. (1969). R.Su.

Macleod, FIONA, pseud. of WILLIAM SHARP (*Paisley 12 X 1856; †1884 Elizabeth Sharp; †Sicily 14 XII 1905), Scottish man of letters. Educated in Glasgow, Sharp settled in London in 1879. Under his own name he wrote biographies of Rossetti* (1882), Shelley* (1887), Heine* (1888), Browning* (1890), and a few volumes of poems. In 1894 he began, under the pseud. 'Fiona Macleod', a series of Celtic tales and poems. A talented prose writer, sensitive and delicate at his best, although he often falls into mere fine writing, Sharp played an important part in the Celtic revival.

FIONA MACLEOD: Pharais, a Romance (1894); The Mountain-Lovers (1895); The Sin-Eater (1895); The Washer of the Ford (1896); The Laughter of Peterkin (1897); The Dominion of Dreams (1899); The Immortal Hour (1900); Tristram and Iseult (1902); The Silence of Amor (1902); The House of Usna (1903); Deirdre (1903); Winged Destiny (1904); Letters (1907).—Collected Works (7 vols, 1910).

WILLIAM SHARP: Selected Writings (5 vols, 1912).
W. S., a Memoir by Mrs S. (2 vols, 1912).
J.K.

MacLeod, MARY: see SCOTTISH GAELIC LITERATURE.

McLuhan, HERBERT MARSHALL (*Edmonton, Alberta 21 VII 1911; †1939 Corrine Keller Lewes), Canadian scholar, Professor of English at the University of Toronto (1946-67), and director of the University Centre for Culture and Technology (since 1963). His interpretations of the significance of the modern mass communications, including provocative statements on the socio-psychological aspects of the shift from the printed page to electronic media and the emergence of a new 'tribal village' mentality encompassing the globe, have gained him international fame.

The Mechanical Bride, Folklore of Industrial Man (1951); Gutenberg Galaxy, Making of Typographical Man (1962); Understanding Media, Extensions of Man (1964); with Quentin Fiore, The Medium Is the Massage (1967).

T. Emery, 'Revolutions in communication' in Canad. Lit., XIV (1962); D. Duffy, M. McL. (1969). R.Su.

McMahon, BRYAN (*Co. Kerry 1909), Irish short-story writer, novelist and dramatist. A school-teacher, he has written clear and graphic studies of childhood. His style is simple, poetic and forceful.

NOVELS: Children of the Rainbow (1952); The Honey Spike (1967).—STORIES: The Lion-Tamer (1948); The Red Petticoat (1955).—The Song of Anvil (play; 1960).
E.T.W.

MacNamara, BRINSLEY: see Weldon, JOHN.

MacNeice, LOUIS (*Belfast 12 IX 1907; †London 1963), Irish poet; educated at Oxford, lectured at Birmingham, London and Cornell Universities. For many years a writer and producer for the B.B.C., he emerged as one of the most creative explorers of radio in plays like The Dark Tower (1947). MacNeice was an influential poet in the 1930s and produced one of the finest poems of that period, Autumn Journal (1939), recording the bewilderment of the classically educated liberal faced with the chaos of European politics.

Collected Poems (ed. E. R. Dodds, 1967).—TRANSLATIONS: Agamemnon (1936); Goethe's Faust (1951).—PLAYS: The Mad Islands (1964); One for the Grave (1968); Persons From Porlock (1969).—CRITICISM: Modern Poetry (1938; 2nd ed. 1969); The Poetry of W. B. Yeats (1941); Varieties of Parable (1965).—The Strings Are False (autobiog.; 1965).

J. Press, L. MacN. (1965); W. T. McKinnon, Apollo's Blended Dream (1971). E.T.W.

Mac Orlan, PIERRE, pseud. of PIERRE DUMARCHEY (*Péronne 26 II 1883; †Saint-Cyr-sur-Morin 27 VI 1970), French novelist. Author of the Petit Manuel du parfait aventurier (1920), he depicted the underworld and its milieux—ports, the colonies, Montmartre etc. His work, which he described as 'social chimera', has inspired many poets and painters, and to these he dedicated his memoirs (Masques sur mesure, 1965).

POETRY: Œuvres poétiques (1946); Chansons pour accordéon (1953).—NOVELS: Le chant de l'équipage (1918); À bord de l'Étoile matutine (1920; Eng. tr. M. Cowley, 1924); La cavalière Elsa (1921); Marguerite de la nuit (1925); Le quai des brumes (1927); La tradition de minuit (1930); One Floor Up, tr. V. Holland, 1932; La Bandera (1931); L'ancre de la miséricorde (1941); Le bal du Pont du Nord (1946).—Œuvres complètes (25 vols, Geneva, 1971).

P. Berger, P. M. O. (1951); A. Bloch, 'P. M. O.'s fantastic vision...' in Mod. Lang. Quart., XXIV.2 (1963). M.G.

Macpherson, JAMES (*Ruthven, Inverness 27 X 1736; †Belville, Inverness 17 II 1796), Scottish author. Appointed Surveyor-General of the Floridas in 1764, and agent to the Nabob of Arcot in 1779. His Fingal and Temora purported to be translations of the Gaelic of Ossian but it seems likely that, while he used Gaelic fragments, they were largely his own invention. Despite the storm of controversy which followed their publication (see especially Boswell's* Johnson), they were admired by Goethe* and had a marked influence on the literature of the Romantic period (OSSIAN). His prose is rhetorical, imaginative, romantic and tedious.

Fragments of Ancient Poetry collected in the Highlands of Scotland and translated from the Gaelic (1760); Fingal; an ancient Epic Poem in six Books (1762); Temora, an ancient Epic Poem in eight Books (1763); A History of Great Britain from the Restoration (1775).—Works (ed. M. Laing, 2 vols, 1805).

T. B. Saunders, J. M. (1894); J. S. Smart, J. M.: an Episode in Literature (1905); D. S. Thomson, The Gaelic Sources of M.'s Ossian (1952) and art. in Aberdeen Univ. Rev., XL (1963). J.K.

Macrobius, AMBROSIIUS THEODOSIUS (fl. c. 400), Roman philosopher and grammarian. His Saturnalia is a miscellany mainly on antiquarian subjects, with interesting criticism of Virgil*. His Neo-Platonic commentary on Cicero's* Somnium Scipionis was a favourite text in the Middle Ages and well known to Chaucer*. His style is fluent and easy but without literary grace.

Eds: F. Eyssenhardt (1868; 2nd ed. 1893); J. Willis (2 vols, 1963).—Tr. P. V. Davies (with intro. and notes; 1969).

T. Whittaker, M. (1923). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Macropedius, GEORGIUS, or JORIS VAN LANGHEVELDT (*Gemert 1485 or 1486; †'s-Hertogenbosch 1558), Dutch educationist and neo-Latin playwright, studied at Louvain, became a Hieronymian and was successively head of the Latin schools at 's-Hertogenbosch, Liège, Utrecht and again 's-Hertogenbosch. He knew many languages, including some Semitic ones, and was a talented mathematician. For scholastic use he wrote a great number of manuals, spiritual songs and 12 dramas. The latter entitle him to a place of honour among the neo-Latin poets. The subject-matter of five of these plays is taken from the Bible (Adamus [dedic. 1551], Josephus [dedic. 1544], Jesus scholasticus [1556], Asotus, Lazarus [1541]); of the remaining seven (Rebelles, Aluta, Andrisca [1539], Bassarus [1540], Hypomene [dedic. 1553], Petriscus [1536], Hecastus), two treat sacred subjects, the others are comedies. Hecastus (1539) is an indirect adaptation of Elckerlijc (Everyman*).

Biblio. by F. Van der Haeghen (n.d.).—Asotus (c. 1507; pub. 1537; ed. D. Jacoby); Rebelles and Aluta (both 1535; ed. J. Bolte, 1897).

D. Jacoby, 'G. M.' in Allgemeine deutsche Biographie, XX (1884); C. H. Herford, Studies in the Literary Relations of England and Germany in the 16th Century (1886); J. Hartelust, De dictione G. M. (1902); G. Kuiper, Orbis Artium en Renaissance, I (1941); P. van Tieghem, La littérature latine de la Renaissance (1944); R. C. Engelberts, G. M.'s Bassarus (1968). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Madách, IMRE (*Alsó-Sztrégova 21 I 1823; ∞1845 Erzsébet Fráter; †ibid. 5 X 1864), Hungarian playwright and poet. The tragic aftermath of the 1848–49 revolution and his own unhappy life explain the gloom of Madách's works. The greatest philosophical poet of Hungary, he is renowned for his dramatic poem Az ember tragédiája (1861; The Tragedy of Man, tr. C. H. Meltzer and P. Vajda, 1933; tr. J. C. W. Horne, 1963), a Faust-like poem whose lofty thought often surpasses its language.

A civilizátor (1859); Mózes (1860).—M. I. összes művei (ed. G. Halász, 2 vols, 1942).

G. Voinovich, M. I. és Az Ember Tragédiája (1914); B. Alexander, M. I. (1923); A. Hevesi, 'M. and The Tragedy of Man' in Slavon. Rev., IX (1930/31). G.F.C.

Madariaga, SALVADOR DE (*Corunna 23 VII 1886; ∞ Constance Archibald), Spanish trilingual author. Educated at the French École Polytechnique, an engineer by profession, he was successively Oxford Professor of Spanish literature, ambassador, director of the Disarmament Section of the League of Nations, Republican minister and a self-imposed exile under Franco's régime. He is the chief exponent of Spanish culture abroad. Political and international writings aside, his works number poems, novels and plays. Yet he is essentially an essayist who, whether in Spanish, English or French, shows a clear, elegant style and an acute, brilliant mind (see Shelley and Calderón, 1920; Englishmen, Frenchmen, Spaniards, 1927; Don Quixote, An Introductory Essay, 1935). His later works include history and biography, with provocative, well-documented books on Spain (1942), The Rise and Fall of the Spanish Empire (1947), Colón (1940), Hernán Cortés (1942) and Bolívar (1952).

The Genius of Spain (1923); Portrait of Europe (1952); On Hamlet (1948; with a tr. of Hamlet in Span. verse; Buenos Aires, 1949).—NOVELS: The Sacred Giraffe (1925); The Heart of Jade (1944).—VERSE: Romances de ciego (1922); La fuente serena (1927); Rosa de cieno y ceniza (1942).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Madox, THOMAS (*1666; ∞ Catharine Edwards; †?Arsley, Beds 13 I 1726/27), English legal antiquary, a member of the Middle Temple but never called to the Bar, who specialized in study of the common law. He left 94 volumes of transcripts.

Formulae Anglicanum . . . a Collection of Charters (1702); The History and Antiquities of the Exchequer (1711); Firma Burgi (1726); Baronia Anglica (1736).

D. Douglas, English Scholars (2nd ed. 1951).

B.L.J.

Madrigal, ALFONSO DE, known as EL TOSTADO (*Madrigal de la Sierra ?1400; †1455), Spanish learned writer. He studied at Salamanca, travelled, engaged in controversy at Rome and became a member of John II's council in Castile and Bishop of Avila. His name is a synonym of literary fecundity. He wrote 21 volumes of commentary on the Bible, many works of theology and general learning, and an ambiguous treatise on love and its effects.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LXV; Tractado cómo al ome es nescesario amar (ed. A. Paz y Melia in Opúsculos literarios de los siglos XIV a XVI, 1892). E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Maehl, JOACHIM (*Niendorf, Holstein 15 IX 1827; †Kiel 4 VII 1909), Low German short-story writer. His favourite subject-matter is the conciliation, through human qualities, of the contrast between rich and poor, upper and lower classes. His concentration on the people, scenery and life of his native Holstein—in a deliberate opposition to Fritz Reuter*—enhances the genuineness of his work.

Stückschen ut de Mus'kist: Tater-Mariken, ein Bild aus dem Volksleben (1867); Jean, Lütje Denkmal. Eine Theodicee in Form eines Cultur- und Liebeslebens (1868); Fanny oder: Wat sik hebben schall, dat krigt sik doch (1869); Lütj Anna oder En Stückschen von Em un Ehr (1871); Geschichten frisch ut Leben un deep ut Hart (1896).

I. Spiering, J. M., ein niederdeutscher Erzähler (diss. Hamburg, 1930). G.C.

Maerlant, JACOB VAN (*Vrije van Brugge c. 1225; †Damme shortly after 1291), Dutch poet of enormous productivity who had great influence on the younger generation as founder of the didactic school. The notion that he stayed in South Holland was contested by J. Noterdaeme (according to whom he should have been clerk to the squires of Roden at Snellegem), but defended by J. van Mierlo* and H. C. Peeters. First he wrote two poems, now lost, on the miraculous power of stones (Lapidarijs) and on dreams (Sompnarijs); next Alexanders Geesten (after the Alexandreis of Walter of Châtillon*) and a number of romances of chivalry from the French of Robert* de Borron and Benoît* de Ste Maure; further several didactic works after (?) Aristotle's* Secreta secretorum, Thomas* of Cantimpré's De natura rerum, Petrus* Comestor's Historia scolastica; and his main work Spiegel Historiael (after Speculum historiale by Vincent* of Beauvais), fragmentary at his death and later continued by Lodewijk van Velthem* and Philip Utenbroeke; finally a Dutch translation of Bonaventura's* life of St Francis* and a number of strophic poems which bear witness to his being not only a genuine artist but a man independently seeking a solution to the serious problems of his time.

Torec (ed. J. te Winkel, 1875); Merlijn, Historie van den Grale (ed. J. van Vloten, 1880); Alexanders Geesten (ed. J. Franck, 1882); Historie van Troyen (ed. N. de Pauw and E. Gaillard, 1889–92); Heimelijchheit der Heimelijcheden (ed. A. A. Verdenius, 1917); Der Naturen Bloeme (ed. J. Verwijs, 1878); Rijmbijbel (ed. J. B. David, 1858– 59); Spiegel Historiael (ed. M. de Vries and E. Verwijs, 1857-63; episode of Amys en Amelis, ed. J. J. Mak, 1954); St Franciscus' Leven (ed. P. Maximilianus, 1954); Strophische Gedichten (ed. J. Verdam and P. Leendertz Jr., 1918); Van den lande van Oversee (facs. ed. G. Stuiveling, 1966).

J. te Winkel, M.'s werken als spiegel van de 13e eeuw (1892); J. Koopmans, 'M.-studien' in Taal en Letteren, VII-IX (1897-99); A. Arents, J. van M., Proeve van bibliographie (1943); J. van Mierlo, J. van M. (1946); E. H. J. Noterdaeme in Annales de la Soc. d'Émulation de Bruges, LXXXVIII (1951) and in Handel. v. d. Zuidnederl. Maatsch. voor Taal- en Letterk. en Gesch., XV (1961); H. C. Peeters, 'Nieuwe inzichten in de M. problematiek', ibid., XVIII (1964); J. Janssens, De Mariale Persoonlijkheid van J. van M. (1963).

J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Maeterlinck, MAURICE POLYDORÉ MARIE BERNARD (*Ghent 29 VIII 1862; ∞1919 Renée Dabon; †Nice 5 V 1949), Belgian poet, Jeune Belgique writer, dramatist and philosopher. Though called to the Bar, Maeterlinck practised little. He won an exaggerated reputation as the 'Belgian Shakespeare' with his delicately Symbolist poems, Serres chaudes (1889), and his first play, La Princesse Maleine (1889). Maeterlinck's originality lies in the transposition of SYMBOLISM to the stage. His plays, exquisitely constructed, though simplified to the point of affectation, are obsessed with a sense of fatality. Debussy set his Pelléas et Mélisande (1892) to music. The inconsequential philosophy emerging from his natural history studies is now largely discredited. A Nobel prize-winner in 1911, he was created Count in 1932. Georgette Leblanc, the actress for whom he wrote many of his plays, and whom he repudiated after an association lasting 20 years, published the biographical Souvenirs (1930).

Hot Houses (verse; tr. B. Miall, 1915).—PLAYS: La Princesse Maleine (tr. G. Harry, 1915); Pelléas et Mélisande (1892; tr. E. Winslow, 1894); Intérieur (1892; tr. W. Archer, 1898); Monna Vanna (1902; tr. A. Sutro, 1904); L'oiseau bleu (1908); The Blue Bird, tr. A. Teixeira de Mattos, 1909).

PHILOSOPHY: Le trésor des humbles (1896; The Treasure of the Humble, 1897); La vie des abeilles (1901; The Life of the Bees, 1901); Le temple enseveli (1901); The Buried Temple, 1902); La vie des termites (1927; The Life of the White Ant, 1927)—all tr. A. Sutro.

J. Bithell, Life and Writings of M. M. (1913); W. D. Hall, M. M., A Study of His Life and Thought (1960).

B.M.W. (J.C.D.)

Maeztu y Whitney, RAMIRO DE (*Vitoria 4 V 1874; †Madrid 29 IX 1936), Spanish writer. A leftist leader of the so-called '98 GENERATION, he became champion of orthodox Catholicism and was murdered during the Spanish Civil War. He was a complicated personality. His most famous work, Defensa de la hispanidad (1934), is a passionate exegesis of Spanish civilization from an exclusively Catholic point of view. He was also an acute literary critic.

Hacia otra España (1899); Don Quijote, Don Juan y La Celestina (1926); La crisis del humanismo (1919); Inglaterra en armas (1916).

V. Marrero, M. (1955); L. Aguirre Prado, R. de M. (2nd ed. 1959); G. Fernández de la Mora, M. y la teoría de la Revolución (1956).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Maffei, ANDREA (*Molina nel Trentino 19 IV 1798; †Milan 27 XI 1885), Italian poet, celebrated for his translations of German, French and English masterpieces, which he adapted to contemporary Italian taste.

Opere edite e inedite (10 vols, 1847-52); Versi editi ed inediti (2 vols, 1858).

E. Benvenuti, A. M. poeta originale e traduttore (1911); see also Giornale storico della lett. ital., LXI (1913).

B.R.

Maffei, FRANCESCO SCIPIONE, MARCHESE (*Verona 1 VI 1675; †ibid. 11 II 1755), Italian scholar and dramatist. Soldier (1703-04); archaeologist; palaeographer; a precursor of Alfieri*. Maffei wrote Verona illustrata (4 vols, 1732)—a history of the writers and antiquities of Verona—and Merope (1713), a tragedy in verse which, though of scant poetic merit, was the result of a constructive programme of dramatic reform based on the fusion of elements drawn from classical and French drama. Other works include comedies, operatic libretti, occasional verse, the Giornale dei letterati (founded in collab. with Apostolo Zeno*, 1710) and many scholarly treatises on a wide range of subjects. He visited England in 1736, where he was presented to the royal family and met the patrons of the Italian circle.

Merope (ed. C. Garibotto, 1954); Verona illustrata (ed. G. Donadelli, 2 vols, 1825-26); Opere drammatiche e poesie varie (ed. A. Avena, 1928); Epistolario (ed. C. Garibotto, 2 vols, 1955).—Opere (21 vols, 1790).

G. Silvestri, Un europeo del Settecento, S. M. (1954).—T. Copelli, Il teatro di S. M. (1907); Studi maffeiiani (various authors; Turin, 1909); G. Gasperoni, S. M. e Verona settecentesca (1955).—G. E. Dorris, Paolo Rolli and the Italian Circle in London (1967).

M.W.

Magallanes Moure, MANUEL (*La Serena 1878; †1924), Chilean poet of the modernista school (MODERNISM), using both rhythm and rhyme effectively in his versification; his subject-matter is restricted to the simple one of highly idealized love for women, treated from a variety of aspects: dramatic, humorous, lyrical.

Facetas (1902); Matices (1904); La jornada (1910); La casa junto al mar (1918); Florilegio (anthol. by the author, with stud. P. Prado; 1921); Sus mejores poemas (1925). E.Sa.

Magalotti, LORENZO (*Rome 13 XII 1637; †Florence 2 III 1712), Italian poet, short-story writer, philosopher and scientist. Secretary of the Accademia del Cimento; travelled widely in Europe, including Britain (1667 and 1668–69; F.R.S., 1709). He translated Waller's **Battle of the Bermudas*, John Philips' **Splendid Shilling* and Cyder (Il Sidro di J. Phillips, 1752), and part of Milton's **Paradise Lost*. His lively travel books and his scientific works foreshadow the encyclopaedic spirit, and suggest that he was perhaps the most European of all Italian men of letters of his time for breadth of intellectual outlook.

Saggi di naturali esperienze (1667; mod. ed. E. Falqui, 1947); Relazioni di viaggio in Inghilterra, Francia e Svezia (ed. W. Moretti, 1968); various important colls of letters (1721, 1761, 1769, 1825). —Opere (1806).—Un principe di Toscana in Inghilterra e in Irlanda nel 1669 (attrib. to M.; ed. A. Crinò, 1968; tr. The Travels of Cosimo the Third, 1821).

S. Fermi, L. M. scienziato e letterato (1903) and Bibliografia magalottiana (1904); R. D. Waller, 'L. M. in England' in Ital. Stud. (1937); W. Moretti, 'L. M. e il suo secolo' in Atti dell'Accad. Toscana di Scienze e Lett., La Colombaria, XXI (1956); G. Güntert, Un poeta scienziato del Seicento, L. M. (1966). U.L.

Magariños Cervantes, ALEJANDRO (*Montevideo 3 X 1825; †1893), Uruguayan writer, known chiefly as a poet, though he also published or wrote novels, plays and a wide variety of essays. A fluent versifier, in his poems (in the style of Zorrilla*) as in his stories he deals with the theme of the native Indian, in the Romantic idealizing manner.

Caramurú (1848); La estrella del sud (2 vols, 1849); La vida por un capricho (1850); Brisas del Plata (1864); Album de poesías (1878); Palmas y ombúes (2 vols, 1884–88). E.Sa.

Maggi, CARLO MARIA (*Milan 8 V 1630; †ibid. 22 IV 1699), Italian poet and playwright. His poems and comedies in Milanese dialect are full of verve and imagination; they reject the fashion of 'marinismo', and have a satirical and didactic flavour. He can be considered the father of Milanese poetry.

Opere (5 vols, 1700–01); Commedie e Rime in lingua milanese (2 vols, 1701; mod. eds: Il teatro milanese, ed. D. Isella, 2 vols, 1964; 'Le rime milanesi', ed. idem in Studi Secenteschi, VI, 1966).

E. De Marchi, C. M. M. (1885, 1930); L. Medici and G. A. Maggi, La vita e l'opera di C. M. M.

(1930); W. Binni, 'La commedia del M.' in L'Arcadia e il Metastasio (1963); M. Capucci, 'Lettura del M. lirico' in Studi Secenteschi, III (1963). U.L.

Māgha (c. A.D. 650), author of the Sanskrit Śiśupālavadha, the story of the death of Śiśupāla, the son of the Chedi king, in a quarrel with Krishna over the consecration of King Yudhiṣṭhira. Despite a fondness for verbal tricks in the latter part of the poem, Māgha displays considerable imagination and simple strength.

H.G.R. (J.E.B.G.)

Maginn, WILLIAM (*Cork VII 1794; †Walton-on-Thames 21 VIII 1842), Irish journalist. He was the originator and one of the authors of Noctes Ambrosianae, a series of dialogues which ran in Blackwood's from 1822 to 1835. For Blackwood's he also created the character of Ensign O'Doherty who contributed some humorous but unflattering reflections on Irish life, and helped to bring the Irish peasantry into literary fashion. Maginn was also co-founder and editor of Fraser's Magazine.

Miscellaneous Writings (5 vols, 1855–57).

E.T.W.

Magloire Saint-Aude, CLÉMENT: see HAITIAN LITERATURE.

Magno, CELIO (*Venice 1536; †ibid. 1602), Italian poet. His Rime (1600) include a cantata in celebration of the victory of Lepanto. He was a member of the Accademia della Fama, founded by Federigo Badoer.

G. Zanella, Della vita e degli scritti di C. M. (1881); A. Pilot, 'Le canzoni di C. M. in relazione con la lirica veneta del tempo' in Archivio veneto (1909) and 'Giudizi sul Petrarca del Groto e di C. M.' in Miscellanea Crescini (1927). B.R.

Magnússon, GUÐMUNDUR: see TRAUSTI, JÓN.

Magny, OLIVIER DE (*Cahors c. 1529; †Paris 1561), French poet. He was secretary to the poet H. Salel, and later to Jean d'Avanson whom he accompanied on a diplomatic mission to Rome (1555–56). Passing through Lyons he probably inspired the unhappy love-poems of Louise Labé*. In Rome he was a comrade of Du* Bellay and, in composing his book of sonnets, Les Soupirs (1557), worked on the same themes of exile and disillusionment which run through Du Bellay's profounder Regrets. De Magny's other poems (the majority, sonnets and odes) are agreeably facile, much influenced by Ronsard*.

Les Amours (1553); Les Gaietés (1554; ed. A. R. Mackay, Geneva, 1968); Les Soupirs (1557); Les Odes (1559).—Poésies complètes (ed. E. Courbet, 6 vols, 1871–80); Poésies choisies (ed. M. de Beaurepaire-Froment, 1913).

J. Favre, O. de M. (1885).

G.B.

Mahfūz, NAJIB (NAGUIB MAHFOUZ) (*Cairo 1912), Egypt's and the Arabs' leading novelist. A graduate in philosophy, after an apprenticeship in the historical novel (Radopis, 1943), he turned to naturalist realism, in works (Bidāya wa nihāya, 1949) dealing with 20th-century Cairo lower middle-class life, described with masterly knowledge and insight. His trilogy, Bain al-Qasrain, Qasr al-Shauq, Al-Sukkariyya (1956–57), traces the story of a family from the First World War to the end of the Second. In his later phase (Al-Liṣṣ wal-Kilāb, 1962; Aulād Ḥārātina, 1962; Al-Shahhādah, 1965) his interests are more subjective; he uses the interior monologue, sometimes abandoning serial chronology, employing symbolism and allegory, preoccupied with the theme of the search for identity and revealing a quasi-mystical strain.

Al-Qāhira al-Jadida (1945); Khan al-Khalili (1946); Zuqāq al-Midaq (1949; Midak Lane, tr. T. Le Gassick, 1968).

J. Jomier, 'La vie d'une famille au Caire d'après trois romans de Naguib Mahfuz' in Mideo, IV (1957); T. Le Gassick, 'A malaise in Cairo' in Middle East Jour., XXI (1967). M.A.M.

Mahipati (*1715; †1790), Marāṭhī poet; wrote the Bhaktā Vijaya ('Triumph of the Poet Saints') and numerous similar works. He was a sedulous hagiographer lacking in talent.

Bhaktivijaya (tr. Stories of Indian Saints, ed. J. E. Abbott, N. R. Godbole and J. F. Edwards, Poona, 1933–34); Bhaktalīlāmṛta (tr. Nectar From Indian Saints, ed. idem, 1935). H.G.R. (I.R.)

Mähl, ALBERT (*Kiel 5 VI 1893; †Hamburg 19 I 1970), Low German poet and playwright, and High German novelist. His early ballads were followed by reflective and didactic lyrics, less impressive for his poetic talents as such than in his powerful mastery of Low German which he raised anew from a dialect into a vehicle of genuine, though sometimes difficult poetry. Less successful as a playwright, he is remarkable for his theoretical writings in which he examines the philosophical and historical interrelation between race, poetry and language.

VERSE: Hemmingstedt. Niederdeutsche Chorballede (1928); Utsaat (1931); Grappenkram (1935); Hart vull Drift (1940); Nordland (1943); Niederdeutsche Gedichte (1948).—PLAYS: Wieben Peters (1941); De Pott is twei (after Kleist's Der zerbrochene Krug; 1942); De verloren Sohn (1950).—STORIES: Das feurige Lied (1937); Der Fahnenträger (1941).—ESSAYS: Niederdeutsche Art und Sprache (1934); Lebensgefühl und Gestaltung (1943); Plattdesches Dichten (1949).

A. Stempel in Mitteilungen Quickborn, XXVII (1934). G.C.

Mahony, FRANCIS SYLVESTER, used pseud. FATHER PROUT (*Cork 1804; †Paris 18 V 1866), Irish essayist and priest, a figure in Victorian bohemian circles, whose poetic gift, classical learning and views on life and letters appear in his contributions to Fraser's Magazine as Father Prout.

Reliques of Father Prout (2 vols, 1836); Facts and Figures from Italy, by Dom Jeremy Savonarola (1847); Final Reliques of Father Prout (ed. D. Jerrold, 1876).

Works (1881; with memoir by C. Kent).

R.M.H. (K.W.)

Mailer, NORMAN (*Long Branch, N.J. 21 I 1923; ∞1944 Beatrice Silverman [o/o 1952], ∞1954 Adele Morales [o/o], ∞Elizabeth Daniel [o/o], ∞Beverley Bentley [o/o]), American novelist. Mailer came to prominence with The Naked and the Dead (1948), a novel about the Second World War influenced in technical organization by the work of John Dos* Passos, and in characterization very much a novel of the 1930s. This mixture of violence and acute observation of social forces characterizes Mailer's later fiction, seen at its most gothic in An American Dream (1965). In his life-style as well as his fiction he has provided shrewd and dynamic interpretations of contemporary events. He has run for public office and his later work has concentrated on an incisive style of political reporting and social criticism.

FICTION: Barbary Shore (1951); The Deer Park (1955); Why Are We in Vietnam? (1967).—NON-FICTION: Advertisements for Myself (1959); The Presidential Papers (1963); Cannibals and Christians (1966); Armies of the Night (1968); Miami and the Siege of Chicago (1968); A Fire on the Moon (1970); The Prisoner of Sex (1971).—Deaths for the Ladies and Other Disasters (poetry; 1962).

Contemporary American Novelists (ed. H. T. Moore, 1964); J. W. Aldridge, Time to Murder and Create (1966); H. M. Harper Jr, Desperate Faith (1967); R. Foster, N. M. (1968); R. Poirier, N. M. (1972). G.A.K.

Maillart, JEHAN, 14th-century French poet. A lawyer at the royal chancellery, he undertook Le Roman du Comte d'Anjou (1316) for Pierre de Chambli, counsellor to King Philip IV. The traditional story of the persecuted wife is given new, convincing treatment. The plot discards marvellous adventures for incidents of everyday human life. Psychological interest is afforded by the example of humble, charitable souls, contrasting with a few brutal and evil persons. The general didacticism is enlivened by realistic description, and the language is sometimes characteristically Parisian with its light mockery, worthy of Villon*.

Ed. M. Roques (1931).

M.F.L.

Maimonides, MOSES, or MOSES BEN MAIMON (*Cordova 30 III 1135; †Fostat [Old Cairo] 13 XII 1204), Spanish Hebrew religious writer and Arabic philosopher. Because of the Almohade persecution the family left Spain in 1160 and lived for a while in Fez, then, after a short stay in Palestine, Maimonides settled in Egypt, where he was physician to the Sultan, and rabbi. Maimonides is equally important as a legal writer and as a philosopher. In the field of Jewish law he composed a work on the 613 commandments, a commentary in Arabic on the whole Mishnah (1168) and the Mishneh Torah or Yad Hazaqah, the greatest of all medieval expositions of Jewish law (1180). In philosophy, besides smaller works on logic etc., Maimonides wrote above all the Guide of the Perplexed (Dalālat al-Hā'irīn, Hebrew Moreh Nevukhim; Heb. trs Samuel ben Tibbon and Judah al-Ḥarizi*), completed in 1190. This is a complete presentation of Jewish religion with the methods of Aristotelian philosophy. It had immeasurable influence both upon Jews (including Spinoza*) and upon Christian philosophers (through the anonymous Latin translation of the 13th century, and that by J. Buxtorf Jr, 1629) until as late as John Spencer in the 17th century. The appearance of the Hebrew translation was the signal for a bitter fight between partisans and opponents of philosophy, culminating in a partial ban on the book, forbidding it to all under 25. Much of the Hebrew literature of the 13th–14th century was for or against the Guide. Maimonides also wrote letters on various subjects, responsa (answers to legal inquiries) and a series of medical works.

613 Commandments (Constantinople, c. 1517; The Book of Divine Commandments, tr. C. B. Chavel, I, 1940); Shemonah Peraqim (Arabic in Porta Mosii by E. Pococke, 1654; Heb. tr. Samuel ben Tibbon, 1494; The Eight Chapters, tr. J. I. Gorfinkle, 1912); Code (Italy, c. 1480; The Mishneh Torah, tr. M. Hyamson, I, 1937; complete tr. Yale Univ. Press, 15 vols, 1949– ); Sanā'at al-Mantiq (Heb. Milloth ha-Higgayon, 1550; Terminologie logique, tr. M. Ventura, 1935; Maimonides' Treatise on Logic, tr. I. Efros, 1938); Peraqim ba-Hazlaḥah (De Beatitudine, ed. H. S. Davidowitz and D. H. Baneth, 1939); Guide (Arabic ed. S. Munk, 1856–66; Heb. tr., best ed. Y. Ibn-Shmu'el, 1945; tr. al-Ḥarizi, ed. L. Schlossberg, 3 vols, 1851–79; The Guide of the Perplexed, tr. M. Friedländer, 3 vols, 1881–85; Maimonides: The Guide of the Perplexed, sel. with intro. and comm. J. Guttmann, tr. C. Rabin, 1952).—Maimonidis Epistulae (ed. D. H. Baneth, I, 1946); Responsa (ed. Z. Freimann, 1934); M. M.'s Epistle to Yemen (Arab. orig. and 3 Heb. versions; ed. from MSS with intro. and notes A. S. Halkin and tr. B. Cohen, New York, 1952); L'explication des noms de drogues (ed. M. Meyerhof, 1940).

A. Heschel, M., eine Biographie (1935); B. Bokser, The Legacy of M. (1950); H. Serouya,

Maimonide, sa vie, son œuvre (1951).—M. M., Anglo-Jewish Papers (ed. I. Epstein, 1935); Essays on M. (ed. S. W. Baron, 1935); H. L. Roth, The Guide of the Perplexed (1948); J. Sarachek, The History of the Anti-Maimonidean Controversy, I (1932); S. Zeitlin, M. a Biography (2nd ed. 1955); D. J. Silver, Maimonidean Criticism and the Maimonidean Controversy (1965). C.R.

Mainard or Maynard, FRANÇOIS (*Toulouse 1582; †Saint-Céré, Quercy 28 XII 1646), French poet. Considered the chief disciple of Malherbe*, Mainard wrote firm and harmonious verse on amorous and political themes. He excelled in the ode and the epigram, which last he often cast in the form of irregular sonnets or of dizains. Garrison's edition (1885) confused him with another poet, FRANÇOIS MÉNARD. His authorship of the pastoral poem Philandre is also contested.

Œuvres (1646; ed. with adds F. Gohin, 1927).

C. Drouhet, Le poète F. M. (1909); F. Lachèvre, 'Le problème des deux M.' in Rev. d'Hist. Litt. (1910). G.B.

Maier, PETRU (*Tîrgu-Mureş 1760; †1821), Transylvanian priest, historian and philologist, an important representative of Școala ardeleană (the Transylvanian school). He studied at the Catholic seminaries in Blaj, Rome and Vienna and returned to become a priest in the town of Reghin in Transylvania. He devoted himself in both his philological and his historical works to proving the Latin origins of the Rumanians, their continuity in Dacia, and stressing, indeed overstressing, the latinity of the Rumanian language.

D. Macrea, 'P. M.' in Lingviști și filologi români (1959); A. Radu, 'Opera omiletică a lui P. M.' in Studii teologice, XIX.9–10 (1967); G. Ivașcu, Istoria literaturii române, I (1968). D.J.D.

Maiorescu, TIRU (*Craiova 1840; †Bucharest 1917), Rumanian critic and politician. Son of a teacher, he studied at Vienna, Berlin and Paris. During his years abroad he was profoundly influenced by Hegel* and Kant*, an influence reflected in his criticism. He became Professor of philosophy and logic at Iași University and in 1864 called the first meeting of what was to become the literary society Junimea, which attracted such figures as Eminescu*, Creangă* and Caragiale*. Three years later he founded the review Convorbiri literare, and this was to print much of his work. In his study O cercetare critică asupra poeziei române de la 1867 (1867) he advocated the creation of a truly national verse based on popular poetry. A year later he published În contra direcției de astăzi în cultura română in which he denounced foreign, particularly French, influences in Rumanian culture. His Comediile d-lui Caragiale (1885) proclaimed his belief in art for art's sake, and this led to a series of polemics with Dobrogeanu-

Gherea*, advocate of the social role of literature. Maiorescu was among the first to foster literary criticism in Rumania.

Critice (ed. P. Georgescu, 2 vols, 1967).—T. Vianu, 'T. M.' in Istoria literaturii române moderne (1944); Z. Ornea, Junimismul (1966). D.J.D.

Mair, CHARLES (*Lanark, Upper Canada 21 IX 1838; ∞1868 Elizabeth McKenny; †Victoria, B.C. 1927), Canadian writer, now known chiefly for descriptive passages in his work and the poetic drama Tecumseh (1886).

Dreamland and Other Poems (1868); Through the MacKenzie Basin (1908); Master Works of Canadian Authors, XIV (ed. J. W. Garvin, 1926). N. Shrive, C. M.: Literary Nationalist (1965). M.H.M.M. (R.Su.)

Mairet, JEAN (*Besançon 10 V 1604; †ibid. 31 I 1686), French dramatist. He advocated the doctrine of the unities in the preface (1631) to his Silvanire, a reworking of a pastoral play by H. d'Urfé*. His Sophonisbe (1634) was the first 'regular' French tragedy, and inaugurated the genre which came to dominate the French stage. Soon after, he returned to romantic and sometimes irregular tragi-comedies.

Chryseide et Arimand (1625; crit. ed. H. C. Lancaster, Baltimore, 1925); Silvie (1626; crit. ed. J. Marsan, 1932); Silvanire (1630; crit. ed. H. Otto, Bamberg, 1890); Les Galanteries du duc d'Ossone (1632; ed. E. Fournier, Le Théâtre français au XVIe et XVIIe siècles, 1871); Virginie (1633); Sophonisbe (1634; crit. ed. C. Dédéyan, 1969); Marc-Antoine (1635); Solyman (c. 1637); L'illustre corsaire (1637).

E. Dannheisser, Studien zu J. de M.s Leben und Wirken (Ludwigshaven, 1888); A. Gasté, La Querelle du Cid (1899); H. C. Lancaster, A History of French Dramatic Literature in the 17th Century, I (1929); G. Brereton, French Tragic Drama in the XVIth and XVIIth Centuries (1972). G.B.

Maironis, pseud. of JONAS MAČIULIS-MACIULEVIČIUS (*Pasandras, Raseiniai district 21 X 1862; †Kaunas 28 VI 1932), Lithuanian poet. He studied for the priesthood and was Professor of moral theology successively at the St Petersburg theological academy and the University of Kaunas. His earliest verse was in Polish, but by 1888 he had already written his symbolical poem Lietuva ('Lithuania'), which he dedicated to the cause of the national renaissance. The mainly lyrical verse he wrote later contains both patriotic and religious elements, and Raseinių Magdė ('Maggie of Raseiniai'; 1909) is a satire on materialism. Maironis is perhaps best known for his dramatic trilogy—Kęstučio mirtis ('The Death of Kęstutis'), Vytautas pas kryžiuočius ('Vytautas With the Teutonic Knights') and Didysis Vytautas-Karalius ('King Vytautas the Great; 1922–29)—which idealizes feudal monarchy. The language of his literary works is direct, simple and clear, and his nationalist and romantic poetry had considerable influence on later authors.

VERSE: Pavasario balsai (1895); Jaunoji Lietuva (1895); Mūsų vargai (1920).—Raštai (works; 5 vols, 1926–30).

J. Tumas, J. M.-M. (1924); J. Būtėnas, M. (1958). W.K.M. (H.Le.)

Mais, ROGER (*Kingston, Jamaica 11 VIII 1905; †ibid. 21 VI 1955), West Indian journalist, playwright, poet and novelist. After a rural childhood in the Blue Mountains, he lived in the city as civil servant, reporter, publisher, planter, photographer and painter in turn. Involved in the nascent nationalist movement in Jamaica in the 1940s and imprisoned in 1944 for his ill-timed but perceptive attack on colonialism, 'Now We Know'. His prison experience contributed to the polemical element in his first novel. A light-skinned member of the Jamaican middle class, his humanistic sympathy for the poor and oppressed shocked his social peers, but his intense integrity helped to bring about penal and social reform.

His early literary output included short stories, plays and poetry. His novels are neither political nor, strictly speaking, protest, but they have a vital Jamaican setting. The compassion underlying the more sociological first novel explodes in the others into a fine study of human frailty. His plays and poetry are not of the same high standard.

Face and Other Stories (Jamaica, 1942); The Hills Were Joyful Together (1953); Brother Man (1954); Black Lightning (1955).—The Three Novels of R. M. (1966).

'R. M. supplement' in Public Opinion (incl. 'Now We Know'; Jamaica, June 1966); Karina Williamson, 'R. M.: West Indian novelist' in Jour. Commonwealth Lit., II (Dec. 1966); Jean Creary, 'A prophet armed' in The Islands In-Between (ed. Louis James, 1968); Gerald Moore, The Chosen Tongue (1969); Kenneth Ramchand, The West Indian Novel and Its Background (1970).

A.D.Dr.

Maistre, JOSEPH MARIE, COMTE DE (*Chambéry 1 IV 1754; †Turin 26 II 1821), French essayist. De Maistre was a Savoyard by birth who emigrated to Lausanne when Savoy was annexed by France. He was the diplomatic representative of the King of Sardinia at St Petersburg. He formulated a violent, esoteric and pessimistic theory on the twin subjects of ultramontanism and the divine right of kings. His thought, obsessed by the sense of sin, and his theory of atonement through suffering (war as a necessary evil, the social value of capital punishment), exercised a strong influence on 19th-century writers, such as Baudelaire*.

Considérations sur la France (1796; crit. ed. R.

Johannet and F. Vermales, 1935); Du pape (2 vols, 1819; Eng. tr. A. E. McD. Dawson, 1850); Les soirées de Saint Petersbourg ou entretiens sur le gouvernement temporel de la Providence (2 vols, 1821).—Œuvres complètes (14 vols, 1884–87).—The Works of J. de M. (sel. tr. and intro. J. Lively, 1965).

F. Paulhan, J. de M. et sa philosophie (1893); G. Goyau, La pensée religieuse de J. de M. (1921); E. Dermenghen, J. de M. mystique (1923; new ed. 1946); R. Johannet, J. de M. (1932); F. Bayle, Les idées politiques de J. de M. (1945); J. Laurent, J. de M. (1951); C. J. Gignoux, J. de M., prophète du passé, historien de l'avenir (1963); J. S. MacClelland, The French Right (From De Maistre to Maurras) (1970). M.G.; J.P.R.

Maistre, XAVIER, COMTE DE (*Chambéry 8 XI 1762; †St Petersburg 12 VI 1852), French writer, younger brother of Joseph de Maistre*, whom he accompanied to Sardinia and Russia. He fought with the Russian army in the Caucasus and in Persia. He wrote a number of sensitive short stories but is best known for his Voyage autour de ma chambre (1794), a series of personal meditations written with humour.

Le lépreux de la cité d'Aoste (1811); Le prisonnier du Caucase (1815); La jeune sibérienne (1815).

A. Berthier, X. de M. (1921); M. de la Fuye, X. de M., gentilhomme européen (1934).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Maitland, FREDERIC WILLIAM (*London 28 V 1850; ∞1886 Florence Fisher; †Las Palmas 19 XII 1906), English legal historian who edited early records, founded the Selden Society to encourage study of the history of English law, and wrote a number of highly esteemed works.

Bracton's Note-Book (3 vols, 1887); Domesday Book and Beyond (1897); Roman Canon Law in Church of England (1898); History of English Law before Edward I (with Sir F. Pollock; 1895); Life and Letters of Sir Leslie Stephen (1906); Constitutional History of England (ed. H. A. L. Fisher, 1908).

A. L. Smith, F. W. M. (with biblio.; 1908); H. A. L. Fisher, F. W. M. (1910); H. E. Bell, M. (1965). R.M.H. (M.A.)

Maitland, SIR RICHARD, of Lethington (*Haddingtonshire 1495; ∞1530 Mary Cranston; †ibid. 20 III 1586), Scottish statesman, historian, collector of early Scots verse (the Maitland Folio MS was purchased by Pepys* in 1692 and presented to Magdalene College, Cambridge) and a verse satirist of keen observation and melancholy.

Historie and Chronicle of the Hous of Seytoun (Maitland Club, 1820); The M. Folio Manuscript (ed. W. A. Craigie, 2 vols, 1919–27). J.K.

Majdak, ZVONIMIR (*Zrinjska 26 I 1938), Croatian poet and novelist. A graduate of Zagreb University, Majdak is one of a number of younger generation writers whose work is concerned with young people living in a post-war urban setting. His poetry treats of old themes in modern settings and is often colloquial in idiom.

NOVELS: Bolest (1964); Mladić (1965).—POEMS: Tip na zelenoj livadi (1960); Pesme (1960); Ukleti motociklista (1963). B.J.

Majerová, MARIE, pseud. of MARIE TUSAROVÁ, formerly STIVŇOVÁ, née BARTOŠOVÁ (*Úvaly 1 II 1882; †1967), Czech novelist. Inspired by her Socialist and later Communist faith, she portrayed the life and history of the Czech proletariat in a few novels and several collections of short stories, most memorably in Siréna (1935).

Sebrané spisy (1952–61).—Biblio. in H. Winklerová, Národní umělkyně M. M. (1957). R.A.

Majnun (this nickname means 'madman', his name being QAIS), 7th-century Arabic poet. His unhappy love for Laila, which bereft him of his reason, is celebrated in countless Persian, Turkish and other Islamic romances (Fuzulî*). S.M.S.

Major, or Mair, JOHN (*North Berwick c. 1470; †St Andrews 1550), Scottish historian. At the Sorbonne c. 1493–c.1516; Professor at Glasgow c. 1520 (teacher of John Knox*), at St Andrews in 1523 (teacher of Buchanan*); Provost of St Salvator's, St Andrews, 1533–50. Learned, dispassionate, boldly critical of the Church without a trace of Protestantism, asserting that 'historiographi prima lex est verum scribere', he is one of the finest products of the Scottish medieval tradition.

De Historia Gentis Scotorum Libri sex, seu Historia Majoris Britanniae... e veterum monumentis concinnata (1521; tr. A. Constable, 1892). J.K.

Makal, MAHMUT (*Demirci village, nr Niğde in Central Anatolia 1933), Turkish author of peasant origin; trained in a Village Institute. His notes and essays about life in his village, which he began, at the age of 15, to send to Varlık, the popular literary review, when re-published in book form (Bizim köy, 1950), made him a celebrity overnight. It brought home as never before the plight of villages in Turkey to the Turkish reading public and was translated into many languages. His later works continued, less sensationally, to stress the difficulties of the neglected Anatolian peasantry. Quite unconsciously he was the initiator of the participation of Village Institute graduates in Turkish literary activity.

ESSAYS: Bizim köy (1950; 10th ed. 1970; A Village in Anatolia, tr. Sir Wyndam Deeds, 1953); Köyümden (1952; entitled Hayâl ve gerçek, 1957); Memleketin sahipleri (1954); 17 nisan

(1959); Kalkınma masalı (1960); Eğitimde yolumuz nereye? (1960); İplik pazarı (1964); Kamçı teslimi (1965); Yer altında bir Anadolu (1968).—SHORT STORIES: Kuru sevdâ (1957); Köye gidenler (1959). Paul Stirling in intro. to A Village in Anatolia (1953). F.I.

Makarenko, ANTON SEMĖNOVICH (*1888; †1939), Soviet educationist and author whose books Pedagogicheskaya poema (1934; The Road to Life, tr. S. Gary, 1936; tr. I. and T. Litvinov, 1951), dealing with juvenile delinquents after the Civil War, and Kniga dlya roditeley (1938) gave him an international reputation.

Flagi na bashnyakh (1939); Sochineniya (6 vols, 1950–52).

E. N. Medynsky, A. S. M. (1944); W. L. Goodman, A. S. M. (in Eng.; 1949).—Other biogs by: E. Balabanovich (1951); B. Kostelyanets (1954); Y. Lukin (1954); N. A. Morozova (1957); M. P. Pavlova (1963). J.L.

Makary, METROPOLITAN: see Macarius.

Maksimović, DESANKA (*Valjevo 16 V 1898), Serbian poetess and novelist. Studied in Belgrade and Paris, and taught in Belgrade. She is best known for her melodious, rhythmical subjective lyrics, but has also treated harsher themes from the war years.

Pesme (1924); Vrt detinjstva (1927); Ludilo srca (1931); Gozba na livadi (1932); Nove pesme (1932); Pesnik i zavičaj (1946); Otadžbino tu sam (1951); Otvoren prozor (1954); Zarobljenik snova (1959); Ne zaboraviti (1969); Izabrane pesme (sel. poems; 1969). V.J.

Malalas: see John Malalas.

Malamud, BERNARD (*Brooklyn 26 IV 1914; ∞1945 Ann de Chiara), American novelist. His first novel The Natural (1952) is a baseball story which in its mixture of realism and fantasy illustrates his characteristic interweaving of mystery and misery. The Assistant (1957) merges the myth of St Francis* with the idea of Jewish endurance to reveal the tough grace which his characters, who are 'schlemiehl' types, are forced to recognize in themselves and the world about them. His most ambitious novel, The Fixer (1967), contains the most harrowing sense of humiliation and persecution but the overriding impression is of the capacity to endure.

NOVELS: A New Life (1961); Pictures of Fidelman (1969); The Tenants (1971).—STORIES: The Magic Barrel (1958); Idiots First (1963).

L. Fiedler, The Jew in the American Novel (1959) and No! in Thunder (1960); I. Hassan, Radical Innocence (1961); A. Kazin, Contemporaries (1962); M. Klein, After Alienation (1964);

On Contemporary Literature (ed. R. Kostelanetz, 1964); Contemporary American Novelists (ed. H. T. Moore, 1964); N. Podhoretz, Doings and Undoings (1964); J. Baumbach, The Landscape of Nightmare (1965); S. E. Bowman, B. M. (1966); T. Tanner, City of Words (1971). G.A.K.

Malaparte, CURZIO, pseud. of KURT ERICH SUCKERT (*Prato 9 VI 1898; †Rome 19 VII 1957), Italian novelist and essayist. Malaparte wrote two of the most spectacular post-war Italian books: Kaputt (1944; tr. C. Foligno, 1948) and Le pelle (1949; The Skin, tr. D. Moore, 1952). Both are autobiographical, the first dealing with Malaparte's experiences on the Russian front, the second with life in Naples immediately after its liberation. Malaparte always owed much of his success to his journalistic talent and to his flair for anticipating changes in literary fashion and in politics. J.F.C. (B.M.)

FICTION: Avventura di un capitano di sventura (1927); Sodoma e Gomorra (1931); Sangue (1937); Donna come me (1940).—GENERAL: La technique du coup d'état (Paris, 1931); Il sole è cieco (1947); Storia di domani (1949); Maladetti toscani (1956). G. Martelli, C. M. (1968). B.M.

Malashkin, SERGEY IVANOVICH (*1888), Soviet novelist and short-story writer of peasant origin. Although partly influenced by Tolstoy* and Dostoevsky*, he was a champion of the PROLET-CULT.

Bol'noy chelovek (1926); Goryacheye dykhanie (stories; 1931); Devushki (1956); Krylom po zemle (1963). S. Rozenblum, S. M. (1962). J.L.

Malczewski, ANTONI (*Kniahinin 3 VI 1793; †Warsaw 2 V 1826), Polish poet. A soldier in the Napoleonic wars, he later travelled extensively in Europe. His only work, a short epic poem Maria, was not acclaimed until well after his death. It is now considered one of the greatest achievements of Romanticism. Although the hero is Byronic, it is an original work, which marks the beginning of the 'Ukrainian school' in Polish poetry. P.H.

Maria . . . (1825; Marya, Eng. tr. A. P. Coleman and M. M. Coleman, 1935; crit. ed. A. Brückner, 1925).—Pisma (2 vols, 1857).

A. Bielowski, A. M. Jego żywot i pisma (1843); J. Ujejski, A. M., Poeta i poemat (1921); J. Krzyżanowski, 'A. M.' in Polish Romantic Literature (1930). S.S.

Malebranche, NICOLAS (*Paris 6 VIII 1638; †ibid. 13 X 1715), French philosopher. A priest and member of the Oratory, Malebranche was the principal disciple of Descartes*, whose system he developed in a more fully theological direction. His doctrine of occasionalism subordinated the human will at every point to the divine will. His obsessive search for an ordered universe was typical of his age.

La Recherche de la vérité (1674–75; ed. F. Bouillier, 1880); Entretiens sur la métaphysique et la religion (1688; ed. P. Fontana, 1922); Traité de l'amour de Dieu (1697; ed. D. Rouston, 1923).—Œuvres complètes (ed. A. Robinet and P. Costabel, 20 vols, 1958–68).

H. Goubier, La philosophie de M. (1926).

G.B.

Malespini, CELIO (*Venice 1531; †?1609), Italian adventurer and man of letters; translator of Brunetto Latini's* Tresor and Antonio Torquemada's* Jardin de flores curiosas. Of his Duecento novelle (1609) many are imitated from Boccaccio*, Doni*, Montemayor* and La* Sale.

G. B. Marchesi, Per la storia delle novelle italiane nel secolo XVI (1897); G. Rua, 'Dal novelliere di C. M.' in Archivio per lo studio delle tradizioni popolari, IX (1890); G. E. Saltini, 'Di C. M. ultimo novelliere italiano in prosa del secolo XVI' in Atti della Società Colombaria, V (1907); L. Frati in Giornale storico della lett. ital., LI (1908); L. Di Francia, Novellistica, II (1925).

B.R.

Malgonkar, MANOHAR (*Karwar, Mysore State 1914), Indian novelist. Educated in Dharwar, he was for a long time interested in hunting, but has now settled on his coffee and cardamom estate. His historical scholarship is reflected in his three books of history, one of them on the princely family of Dewas with which he had personal contact.

Distant Drum (1960); Combat of Shadows (1962); The Princes (1963); A Bend in the Ganges (1964).
C.D.N.

Malherbe, DANIEL FRANÇOIS (*Daljosafat, Cape Colony 28 V 1881; ∞ Mynie Mostert; †Bloemfontein 12 IV 1969), Afrikaans poet, novelist and playwright. He took an active part in the movement for the acknowledgement of Afrikaans and was the first to be appointed Professor of Afrikaans (Bloemfontein, 1918–42). He wrote lyrics, epic poetry and ballads, dramas and one-act plays. His novels fall into three groups: those on South African life, Biblical novels, and historical novels dealing with the life of early pioneers. National fervour, the glorification of work as man's vocation, and a love of nature characterize his writings.

VERSE: Karoo Blommetjies (1909); Klokgrassies (1914); Die Timmerman (1921); Die Skaduwee van 'n Vrou (1923); Somerdae (1928); Brood op die Weg (1939).—PROSE: Vergeet Nie (1913); Hans-die-Skipper (1929); Die Hart van Moab (1933); Die Profeet (1937); Vlam van die Suurveld (1943); Spore van Vlieland (1948).—DRAMA: Meester

(1927); Amrath die Tollenaar (1935); Die Meul dreun (1943).

B. Kok et al., D. F. M.: Die Mens en sy Kuns (1941); F. E. J. Malherbe, Wending en Inkeer (1948).
G.D. (N.D.C.)

Malherbe, FRANÇOIS DE (*Caen 1555; †Paris 16 X 1628), French poet. The son of a Protestant lawyer, Malherbe spent the first 50 years of his life in search of advancement under powerful patrons. In 1605 he became the 'official' poet of Henri IV. He remained poor and fulfilled with some asperity his hard-won rôle of literary and linguistic arbiter. His influence, reinforced by Boileau's* later praise (in L'Art poétique, 1674), has marked him as the creator of French classical poetry, 'regular', dignified and tending to rhetoric and abstraction. In prosody, he formulated the conditions of the 'classic' ALEXANDRINE. He did much to discredit the 16th-century poets, as Ronsard*, condemning their linguistic innovations and all uncouth but picturesque terms. His own verse, composed with great labour, is stiff but often impressive in its vigour and sonority. He is at his best in the political and occasional ode, and in religious poetry, such as his renderings of certain psalms.

VERSE: Les Larmes de Saint-Pierre (1587); Ode au roi Henri le Grand (1600); Ode à Marie de Médicis (1600); Consolation à Du Périer (?1601); Prière pour le roi Henri le Grand (1605); Ode au roi Louis XIII allant châtier les Rochelois (1628).—Œuvres poétiques (1630).—LITERARY THEORY: in L'Académie de l'Art Poétique (pub. P. de Deimier, 1610); Commentaire sur Desportes (ed. F. Brunot, 1891; in H. Racan, Mémoires pour la vie de M., 1672).—Œuvres complètes (ed. L. Lalanne, 5 vols, 1862); Poésies (ed. J. Lavaud, 1936); Œuvres poétiques (ed. R. Fromilhague and R. Lebègue, 2 vols, 1968).

F. Brunot, La doctrine de M. (1891; repr. 1969); M. Souriau, La versification de M. (1912); R. Lebègue, La poésie française de 1560 à 1630, II (1951); R. Fromilhague, La vie de M. (1954).

G.B.

Malinovsky, ALEXANDER ALEXANDROVICH: see Bogdanov, A.

Malkum Khān, MĪRZĀ (*Isfahan 1833; †Rome 1908), Persian playwright, essayist and reformer. Born of Armenian parents, he studied in Persia and Europe. Later he entered politics as a modernizing reformer. He was exiled more than once for critical views of the Persian government. In Istanbul, he founded the influential liberal paper Qānūn, and in 1871 he presented to the Shah a plan for a National Assembly. His writings greatly influenced Persian intellectuals and the course of the Persian revolution of 1906.

Se Namayesh-nāma (Berlin, 1921; Les comédies

de Malkom Khan, tr. A. Briceux, 1933); Majmū'i-yi-Āthār (Tehran, 1948).

E. G. Browne, The Press and Poetry of Modern Persia (1914); H. Kamshad, Modern Persian Prose Literature (1966). E.Y.

Mal Lara, JUAN DE (*Seville 1527; †ibid. 1571), Spanish humanist. He studied with Hernán Núñez* at Salamanca and taught in a school of humanities in Seville. He compiled a very entertaining collection of proverbs, apologues and anecdotes. He also wrote Latin and Spanish poems and some official accounts of ceremonial events. His tragedies have not survived.

La philosophia vulgar (1568; ed. A. Vilanova, 4 vols, 1959); Descripción de la galera real del serenísimo Sr. D. Juan de Austria (1876); Recebimiento que hizo la... ciudad de Sevilla a la... Majestad del Rey D. Philipe (1882); Poesias in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XLII.

F. Sánchez y Escribano, J. de M. L., su vida y sus obras (New York, 1941). E.M.W.

Mallarmé, STEPHANE (*Paris 18 III 1842; ∞1863 Marie Gerhard; †Valvins 9 IX 1898), French poet. At the age of twenty Mallarmé came to England to improve his English in order to be able to read Poe* and after spending nine months in London, worried by his love affairs and soothed by London fogs, he married and took his certificat d'aptitude for teaching English. This he proceeded to do for most of his life in various provincial lycées, and finally more happily among his many friends in Paris until his retirement in 1894. After that he lived for the most part quietly in his country house near Fontainebleau. His poetic output was small, but his influence was and still is very great. In his famous salon in the Rue de Rome he preached the importance of the world of ideas and of the existence of an ideal in order to combat in his own way the errors of a scientific age. The fact that he taught English led him to consider the French language from a new angle. Poetry must not be fettered by the use of words in their customary contexts. Every word must be new born for the purpose of creating the desired idea. An object must not be named because the name destroys it; it must be evoked by the corresponding analogy (see SYMBOLISM). In this way Mallarmé invented his own vocabulary and was on the way to inventing his own typography whose cunning spacing and immense capital letters were expected to produce the ideal book. His theory of language formed an integral part of his general theory of poetry. His writing was designed to transmute everyday realities into their higher 'correspondences' in the same way as the Philosophers' Stone was supposed to turn everything into gold. All his poetry was intended to form part of the 'Grand Œuvre' which was to be his individual contribution to an ideal book intended as the joint work of the world's poets. Ill health and a premature death prevented him from realizing his ambition, and as he grew older his theories made his work increasingly obscure—a process best illustrated by Un coup de dés jamais n'abolira le hasard (1897).

VERSE: Poésies (1887); Album de Vers et de Prose (1887); Pour un tombeau d'Anatole (ed. J. P. Richard, 1961).—PROSE: Les Dieux Antiques (1880); Les Poèmes d'Edgar Poe (1888); Divagations (1897); Correspondance (ed. H. Mondor and L. J. Austin, I–III, 1959–69).—Œuvres complètes (ed. H. Mondor and G. Jean-Aubry, 1945).

A. Thibaudet, La poésie de M. (1926); H. Mondor, Vie de M. (2 vols, 1941); E. Noulet, L'œuvre poétique de S. M. (1940); J. Scherer, Le 'Livre' de M. (1957); G. Davies, Les 'Tombeaux' de M. (1950); J. P. Richard, L'Univers imaginaire de M. (1961); A. R. Chisholm, M.'s Grand Œuvre (1962). G.M.T. (M.T.)

Mallea, EDUARDO (*Bahía Blanca 1903), Argentinian novelist and essayist. Son of a doctor, he studied in Buenos Aires. His first published work was Cuentos para una inglesa desesperada (1925) but he was then silent until 1936 when he published La ciudad junto al río inmóvil, a series of fictional studies of uprootedness in Buenos Aires. The quest for his own and Argentina's identity was pursued in essays like Conocimiento y expresión de la Argentina (1935), Meditación en la costa (1937), El sayal y la púrpura (1935) and Historia de una pasión argentina (1935) and in the novels, especially La bahía del silencio (1940; The Bay of Silence, tr. E. Grummon, 1944). Mallea excels in the portrayal of empty and arid characters like the spinster in Todo verdor perecerá (1941; All Green Shall Perish, tr. J. Hughes, 1967) and the upper-class family of Las Águilas (1943).

NOVELS: Fiesta en noviembre (1938); El alejamiento (1945); El Retorno (1945); Los enemigos del alma (1950); Chaves (1953); Simbad (1957); La barca de hiel (1967). J.F.

Mallet, originally Malloch, DAVID (*Crieff c. 1705; ∞c. 1734 ? Susanna, ∞1742 Lucy Elstob; †London 21 IV 1765), Scottish poet; tutor to the family of Montrose; a friend of James Thomson* and his imitator in blank verse. Forgotten as a dramatist, Mallet is best known as the author of the ballad William and Margaret.

'William and Margaret' in Hill's Plain Dealer, XXXVI (1724); The Excursion (1728); Eurydice (1731); Of Verbal Criticism (1733); Mustapha (1739); Life of Bacon (1740); Alfred, An Opera (with Thomson; 1740); The Hermit, or Amyntor and Theodora (1747); ed., Bolingbroke, Works (1754); Britannia (1755); Elvira (1763); Ballads and Songs (ed. F. Dinsdale, 1857).—Works (4 pts, 1743; 3 vols, 'corrected', 1759).

S. Johnson, Lives of the English Poets (ed. G. B. Hill, 3 vols, 1905). J.K.

Malmberg, BERTIL (*Härnösand 13 VIII 1889; †Lidingö 11 II 1958), Swedish poet. Malmberg's best work is marked by disciplined despair and soul-searching, notably the epic collection Dikter vid gränsen (1935). He has also written the charming, partly autobiographical child studies Åke och hans värld (1924; Åke and His World, tr. M. Wenner-Gren, 1940), a novel Fiskebyn (1919), a collection of fine essays Värderingar (1937), and a political play Excellensen (1943) with a theme from Nazi Germany.

Bränder (1908); Uppgörelse och löfte (1911); Dåd och dröm (1912); Atlantis (1916); En blödande jord (1917); Illusionernas träd (1932); Sångerna om samvetet och ödet (1938); Flöjter ur ödsligheten (1941); Men bortom marterpålarna (1948); Med cyklopöga (1950); Klaviatur (1955).

A. Ahlberg, B. M. (1939). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Malmström, BERNHARD ELIS (*Tysslinge 14 III 1816; †Uppsala 21 VI 1865), Swedish poet and University lecturer in aesthetics. His reputation as a poet now rests on his romance Hvi suckar det så tungt uti skogen? (1839) and the elegy Angelika (1840). He is notable, however, for his animated anti-Romantic attitude which had great influence in the middle of the 19th century.

Dikter (1845; 1847); Samlade skrifter (8 vols, 1866–69).

Bo Bergman, 'Minne av B. E. M.' in Svenska Akad. Handlingar, LI (1940). C.H.K.

Malón de Chaide, FRAY PEDRO (*Cascante, Navarre ?1530; †Barcelona 1589), Spanish religious writer. He became an Augustinian in 1567 and taught at Burgos, Huesca and Saragossa before he became Prior of a monastery at Barcelona. His book on St Mary Magdalene is Ciceronian in style and very readable. His verse translations from the Bible recall Fray Luis de León's*.

Libro de la conversión de la Magdalena (ed. P. F. García, 3 vols, 1930–47); Apologías de la lengua castellana (ed. J. F. Pastor, 1931).

P. Rousselot, Les mystiques espagnols (1867); J. M. San Juan Urmeneta, Fray P. M. de C. (1957). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Malone, EDMOND (*Dublin 4 X 1741; †London 25 V 1812), Irish scholar and antiquarian; member of Samuel Johnson's* Club. A pioneer of the text and chronography of Shakespeare*, he also produced an important essay on the English stage (1790). His edition of Shakespeare (1790) and the larger 'Third Variorum' (1812) completed by others after his death created new standards in Shakespearean scholarship.

Arthur Brown, E. M. and English Scholarship (1963). E.T.W.

Malory, SIR THOMAS (†1471), English author of eight Arthurian prose romances; uncertainly identified with a knight of Newbold Revel, Warwicks, born early in the 15th century, who spent nearly twenty years of his life in prison. Until the discovery of a 15th-century MS at Winchester College in 1934, Caxton's* version of the romances (printed 1485; entitled since, from the colophon, Le Morte Darthur) was the only authority. Malory's immediate source is the labyrinthine matter of the 13th-century French romances, and many parallels have been demonstrated between them; but his own contributions are of equal importance. A difference of tone is achieved by a subtle addition of proverbs, aphorisms and humour; and from time to time he introduces traditional native conceptions of chivalry and heroic valour. His Works, written in a style which is usually plain and vigorous but which sometimes attains nobility, are the most influential expression of Arthurian material in English. See ARTHURIAN LEGEND.

Le Morte Darthur (ed. H. O. Sommer, 1889–91); The Works of Sir T. M. (ed. E. Vinaver, 3 vols, 2nd ed. 1967; good biblio.).

Essays on M. (ed. J. A. W. Bennett, 1963); M.'s Originality (ed. R. M. Lumiansky, 1964); The Ill-Famed Knight (ed. W. Mathews, 1966).

R.W.B. (T.F.H.)

Malraux, ANDRÉ (*Paris 3 XI 1901), French novelist and essayist. For Malraux, literature has always meant the digestion of concrete experience. After spending some time with an archaeological expedition in Indo-China, he took part in the Chinese revolution of 1926, opposed Hitler's Germany (Le temps du mépris), then organized the Spanish Republican air force during the Civil War (L'espoir). From 1940 to 1944 he was an active member of the Resistance movement in France. In 1945 he became Minister of Information, and later Minister of Culture under General de Gaulle's Presidency (1958–69).

His fiction deals with some of the key problems of our time and moves in a world of apocalyptic grandeur. Malraux asserts a doctrine of human liberty against every form of fatalism, sets up revolutionary and cultural fraternity as an antidote to the agonies of solitude, and meets the absurdities of life with a form of despairing optimism, which he calls 'tragic humanism'. His novels are vast panoramas showing the figures of men flung headlong into action (for the most part, revolutionary action) and compelled to take the measure of their visions. In spite of many shifts in his political attitude, Malraux has remained fundamentally consistent. His Psychologie de l'art (1947)—one of the finest essays in art criticism of recent years—reaffirms its author's determination to conquer 'destiny' and 'transcend humanity by purely human means'.

NOVELS: Les conquérants (1928; Eng. tr. W. S.

Whale, 1929); La voie royale (1930; Eng. tr. S. Gilbert, 1935); La condition humaine (1933; Storm Over Shanghai, tr. A. MacDonald, 1934); Le temps du mépris (1935; Days of Contempt, tr. H. M. Chevalier, 1936); L'espoir (1937; Days of Hope, tr. S. Gilbert and A. MacDonald, 1938); La lutte avec l'ange (Lausanne, 1943).—Œuvres complètes (7 vols, Geneva, 1945).—ESSAYS: La tentation de l'Occident (1926); Essais de psychologie de l'art: Le musée imaginaire (1947), La création artistique (1948), La monnaie de l'absolu (1950; The Psychology of Art, tr. S. Gilbert, 3 vols, 1949 ff.); Saturne, essai sur Goya (1950); Les voix du silence (1951); La métamorphose des dieux (1957); Antimémoires (1967); Oraisons funèbres (1971); Ces chênes qu'on abat (1971).

G. Picon, A. M. (1946); special no. of Esprit (Oct. 1948); G. Picon, M. par lui-même (1953); J. Delhomme, Temps et destin (1955); C. D. Blend, A. M., Tragic Humanist (1962); J. Hoffmann, L'humanisme de M. (1963); A. Vandegans, La jeunesse littéraire d'A. M. (1964); A. Goldberger, Visions of a New Hero (1965); Clare Malraux, Le bruit de nos pas (3 vols, 1965–69); D. Boak, A. M. (1968). M.G.; J.P.R.

Malthus, THOMAS ROBERT (*The Rookery, nr Guildford 17 II 1766; ∞1804 Harriet Eckersall; †St Catherine's, nr Bath 23 XII 1834), English clergyman and political economist. Malthus pointed out the social dangers of uncontrolled increases of population and this led him into controversy with Godwin* and other reformers.

An Essay on the Principle of Population (1798); An Inquiry into the Nature and Progress of Rent (1815); Principles of Political Economy (with life by W. Otter; 2nd ed. 1836).

J. Bonar, M. and His Work (1885).

B.H. (K.W.)

Malyshevskii, ALEXANDER GEORGIEVICH (*1890; †1938), Soviet author whose first narrative—about the Bolshevik victory in the Crimea—Padenie Daira (1924) depicts, with lyrical exuberance, the elemental nature of the masses. His subsequent novels, Fevral'skiy sneg (1928) and Sevastopol' (1929), are more disciplined. His ambitious Five-Year-Plan novel, Lyudi iz Zakholustya (1930; 1950), was left unfinished.

Sobranie sochineniy (1947); V. V. Ermilov, O traditsiyakh Sovyetskoi literatury (1955); G. Struve, Soviet Literature (1950). J.L.

Mameli, GOFFREDO (*Genoa 5 IX 1827; †Rome 6 VII 1849), Italian poet-patriot, disciple of Mazzini*. His poem beginning 'Fratelli d'Italia, l'Italia s'è desta', set to music by Michele Novaro, became the Italian national anthem. He died fighting under Garibaldi in defence of the Roman Republic.

Scritti editi ed inediti di G. M. (ed. A. G. Barrili, 1902); Poesie (crit. ed. F. L. Mannucci, 1927).

L. Collino, Il poeta M. (1927); A. Custodero, G. M. e il suo 'Inno' (1929); A. Viviani, M. (1937); G. Bottai, Incontri (1938). B.R.

Mamiani, TERENCE DELLA ROVERE (*Pesaro 1799; †Rome 1885), Italian patriot and philosopher. A liberal in politics, he opposed Mazzini's* doctrines and eventually identified himself with the policy of Cavour. As a philosopher he opposed Rosmini* with whom he entered into controversy. His Confessioni d'un metafisico (1865) is his most representative philosophical work. Of his political writings, D'un nuovo diritto europeo (1859) asserts the illegality of foreign intervention and the reciprocal independence of Church and state. He is the author of a historical novel, Il Liuto (1856–57), on the subject of Guido Cavalcanti* and Monna Vanna.

Scritti politici (1853); Poesie (1864); Poesie e prose (ed. G. Mestica, 1886; with biog.).

F. Partini, T. M. e i suoi tempi (1911); G. Gentile, Le origini della filosofia contemporanea in Italia, I (1917); G. Ruffini, T. M. sulla via dell'esilio (1938; cont. the unpub. Giornale della mia vita, 1829–31). B.R.

Mamin-Sibiryak, DMITRY NARKISOVICH (*in the Urals 1852; †St Petersburg 1912), Russian author of the Naturalist school, writing mainly about the exploitation in the mining industries and the corn trade in the Urals. In such novels as Privalovskie milliony, Khleb and Zoloto he shows, with much moral indignation, the ravages of capitalism. His outlook was that of a 'populist'.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (12 vols, 1915–17); Sobranie sochineniy (8 vols, 1954–55).

S. A. Vengerov, Istochniki slovary russkikh pisateley, IV (1917); B. D. Udintsev, Fol'klor v zapisnykh knizhkh Mamina-Sibiryaka (1966).

J.L.

Manasseh ben Israel (*La Rochelle c. 1604; †Middelburg 26 XI 1657), Dutch Jewish religious writer. Rabbi in Amsterdam from 1620, he opened the first Hebrew printing house in Holland. He wrote in Spanish, Portuguese, and Hebrew and was in correspondence with many scholars. He believed the Messiah would come once Jews were scattered in every country in the world; hence he tried to obtain their readmission to England and made a visit to London in 1655. His negotiations with Cromwell resulted in the resettlement of the Jews in England in 1656.

El Conciliador (4 vols, 1632–51; The Conciliator, a Reconciliation of the Apparent Contradictions in Holy Scripture, tr. E. H. Lindo, 2 vols, 1842); De la Fragilidad Humana (1642); Esperança de Israel (1650; Hope of Israel, tr. M. Wall, 1650); Nishmat

Chayim (1651); Humble Addresses to the Lord Protector (1655; this and other documents in L. Wolf, M. ben I.'s Mission to Oliver Cromwell, 1901); Vindiciae Judaearum (1656).

C. Roth, A Life of M. ben I. (1934). C.R.

Manasses: see Constantine Manasses.

Mande, HENDRIK (*Dordrecht c. 1360; †Beverwijk c. 1431), Dutch mystic. Secretary to the future Count William VI, he was converted to the DEVOTIO MODERNA in 1391 or 1393, finding his spiritual home in the monastery at Windesheim. He became very famous as an illuminator of manuscripts, visionary and author of mystical tracts in the vernacular. He died on a journey to Holland.

Anthol. by B. Spaapen (1951).

G. Visser, H. M. (1899; with a number of tracts) and in Archief voor Nederl. Kerkgesch., new ser., I (1902); C. G. N. de Vooys, ibid., I and II; J. van Mierlo in Dietsche Warande (1909), II; G. I. Liefstinck in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Letterk., LI (1932). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Mandel'shtam, OSIP EMLYEVICH (*St Petersburg 1891; †1942), Russian poet. Together with N. Gumilëv* and Anna Akhmatova*, he was one of the most talented representatives of the 'Acmeist' group. Among his terse and disciplined poems antique motifs are frequent. Although never prolific, he maintained throughout a high poetic level, without involving himself in politics.

Kamen' (1913); Tristia (1922); Shum vremeni (1925; re-issued as Egipetskaya marka, 1928); Stikhotvoreniya (1928); Sobranie sochineniy (2 vols, New York, 1955; Washington, 1964, 1966).—The Prose of O. M. (tr. C. Brown, 1965, 1967).

I. N. Bushman, Poeticheskoe iskusstvo Mandel'shtama (1964); E. M. Tager, O Mandel'shtame (1966). J.L.

Mander, CAREL VAN (*Meulebeke 1548; †Amsterdam 2 IX 1606), Dutch painter, poet and writer. After a journey to Italy (1574–77) he finally settled in Haarlem where he founded an academy of art. Himself a second-rate painter, his writings promoted the Italianate tendency among younger artists; Het Schilder-Boeck (1604) is the best known. The religious poems of his De Olijfberg, Bethlehem (1609) and especially De Gulden Harpe (1627) show his Baptist pacifism; apart from the use of the iambic metre they are still in the REDERIJKER tradition. His translations of Virgil's* Bucolics and Georgics, however, are imbued with the Renaissance spirit. He edited an anthology, Den Nederduytschen Helicon (1610), which includes some of his own poems. J.J.M.

H. E. Greve, De bronnen van K. van M. (1903); R. Jacobsen, C. van M. (1906); R. Haecker, Das Lehrgedicht von K. van M. (1916); E. Valentiner, K. van M. als Maler (1930); W. A. P. Smit, Dichters der Reformatie in de 16de eeuw (1939); A. F. Mirande and G. S. Overdiep, Het Schilder-boek van C. van M. in hedendaags Nederlands overgebracht (4th ed. 1950; Fr. tr. 1884; Ger. tr. 1906); H. A. Noë, Een Nederl. schilder uit de 16de eeuw (1953) and C. van M. en Italië (1954).

J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Mandeville, BERNARD DE (*Dort, Holland c. 1670; †London 21 I 1733), Dutch physician and author, resident in London and writing in English: social philosopher whose 400-line doggerel Grumbling Hive (1705), republished in 1714 as Fable of the Bees, or Private Vices Public Benefits, embodied paradoxical and cynical system of morality, provoking replies from Law*, Berkeley* and others.

R.M.H.

Origin of Honour, and Usefulness of Christianity in War (1732); Fable of Bees (ed. F. B. Kaye, with hist. comm., 2 vols, 1924; ed. P. Harth, 1970).

W. Law, Remarks on a Late Book, Entituled The Fable of the Bees (1724); J. M. Robertson, Pioneer Humanists (1907); F. B. Kaye, 'The writings of B. M.' in Jour. Eng. and Germanic Philol., XX (1921) and 'The M. canon: a supplement' in Notes and Queries (3 May 1924); J. C. Maxwell, 'Essays in politics in M.' in Philosophy, XXVI (1951). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Mandeville, JEHAN DE, 'SIR JOHN MANDEVILLE', ostensible author of an influential book of travels written originally in French (earliest MS 1371). His nationality (English or French) is not known, and earlier identifications with e.g. Jean de Bourgogne, a Liège physician, remain uncertain. The account of the 'travels' has a number of sources, notably the French translations by Jean le Long of various medieval itineraries, and the works of Vincent* of Beauvais; it is possible that the writer never travelled at all. There are many fabulous details of men, monsters and events. The Travels exist also in 15th-century English versions, as well as in medieval translations into many other languages.

Eds of two Eng. versions: M.'s Travels (MS Cotton Titus C.XVI; ed. P. Hamelius, 2 vols, 1919–23; also ed. M. C. Seymour, 1967); The Bodley Version of M.'s Travels (Bod. MSE Musaeo 116; ed. M. C. Seymour, 1963).

M. Letts, Sir J. M., The Man and His Book (1949); J. W. Bennett, The Rediscovery of Sir J. M. (1954). T.F.H.

Manetho (fl. c. 280 B.C.), Egyptian priest. Aiming to acquaint the new Greek ruling class with Egyptian traditions, he wrote in Greek a history of Egypt up to Alexander's conquest. Later drawn upon by Christians eager to find confirmation for Old Testament chronology, the work is founded upon a genuine native tradition.

C. Müller, Fragmenta historicorum Graecorum, II (1878); F. E. Robbins and W. G. Waddell, Ptolemy's Tetrabiblos and M. (1940; text and tr.).

T. Nicklin, Studies in Egyptian Chronology (1928); W. Helek, Untersuchungen zu M. und den ägyptischen Königslisten (1956). R.B.

Manetti, ANTONIO (*Florence 1423; †ibid. 1497), Italian biographer, author of Vita di Filippo di Ser Brunellesco, of Uomini singolari in Firenze dal 1400 innanzi, and Notizia di Guido Cavalcanti. A version of the short story, 'Il Grasso Legnaiuolo', has been attributed to him.

Operette istoriche edite ed inedite (ed. G. Milanese, 1887); for the short story, see M. Barbi in Studi di filol. ital., I (1927).

A. Pompeati in Rivista d'Italia (15 Apr. 1927); L. Di Francia, Novellistica, I (1924). B.R.

Manetti, GIANNOLLO (*Florence 1396; †Naples 1459), Italian humanist and theologian. His treatise De dignitate et excellentia hominis (Basle, 1532) is an important profession of faith in the value of life. His historical works include Vitae Nicolai V. pontif. max. libri II and Vitae Dantis, Petrarchae ac Boccaccii (pub. 1747), these latter being derived mainly from the biographies by Leonardo Bruni*.

Le vite di Dante, Petrarca e Boccaccio scritte fino al secolo XVI (ed. A. Solerti, 1904).

F. Pagnotti, 'La vita di Niccolò V scritta da G. M.' in Archivio della Società Romana di storia patria, XIV (1891; with complete list of M.'s works); V. Rossi, Il Quattrocento (3rd ed. 1933). B.R.

AL-Manfalūṭī, MUṢṬAFĀ LUṬFĪ (*Manfalūṭ 30 XII 1876; †Cairo 25 VII 1924), Egyptian Arab essayist and short-story writer. In his essays he discussed the social and cultural problems created by the Westernization of Egypt. He may be said to have introduced the essay as a literary form into modern Arabic literature; the influence of his extremely rich and classicist style has been profound.

COLLECTED ESSAYS: al-Nazarāt (3 vols, 1902–10); Mukhtārāt (1912).—Al-'abarāt (1946).—Sel. trs N. Barbour in Islamic Culture, VII–X (1933–36).

H. A. R. Gibb, 'M. and the "New Style"' in Bull. School Oriental Stud., V (1929); M. Shalabi, M. L. M. al-adīb al-ishṭirākī (n.d.).

C.R. (M.M.B.)

Manfredi, EUSTACHIO (*Bologna 20 IX 1674; †ibid. 15 II 1739), Italian poet and prose writer. Professor of mathematics, Bologna (1699); an expert in hydraulics and a distinguished astronomer; 'Acidelpusiano' in Arcadia. Manfredi wrote letters, some 30 scientific works in Italian or Latin (Ephemerides motuum coelestium, 4 vols, 1715–50) and many sonnets and canzoni in an academically Petrarchan style whereby he aspired to refine Italian verse.

Rime scelte di E. M. con alcune sue prose (ed. F. Foffano, 1888).—Lirici del Settecento (ed. M. Fubini and B. Maier, 1959; with biblio.).

D. Provenzal, I riformatori della bella letteratura italiana (1900); W. Binni, 'Il petrarchismo arcadico e la poesia del M.' in L'Arcadia e il Metastasio (1963). M.W.

Mangan, JAMES CLARENCE (*Dublin 1803; †ibid. 20 VI 1849), Irish poet. He was a gifted lyrical poet, handicapped by a nervous temperament and by being forced to drudge as a scrivener from an early age; drink and opium, in which he sought escape, hastened his death. A fitful genius appears in his poems, which consist of original poems, versions of German and Oriental poems and translations and versions from the Irish. His best work, which belongs mainly to this last group, is marked by lyrical intensity and distinctive melody.

R.McH.

VERSE: German Anthology (2 vols, 1845); Poets and Poetry of Munster (1849); The Tribes of Ireland (1852); Poems (1859).—PROSE: Prose Writings (ed. D. J. O'Donoghue, 1904); Autobiography (ed. J. Kilroy, 1969).

D. J. O'Donoghue, The Life and Writings of J. C. M. (1897); R. Holzapfel, Bibliography (1969); W. B. Yeats and Thomas Kinsella, Davis, M., Ferguson? (1970). E.T.W.

Manger, ITZIK (*Czernowitz 1901; †Tel Aviv 1969), Yiddish poet. Son of a tailor, he grew up in great poverty. He began his literary career in Iași (Rumania) but moved to Warsaw (1920) where he remained until the Second World War. Spending the war years in London, he finally settled in New York. On his second visit to Israel he fell ill and eventually died in a Tel Aviv hospital. Manger's poetry is unsurpassed in contemporary Yiddish literature, for its transformation of traditional images into highly sophisticated modern idioms. A group of his poems, entitled Manger's Megilla, was presented as a musical.

Shtern oif'n dakh (Bucharest, 1929); Lamtern in vint (1933); Khumash-Lieder (1935); Megile-lieder (1936); Felker singen (1936); Velvel Zbarsher shraibt brif (1937); Noente geshtalin (essays; 1938); Dos bukh fun gansen (1939); The Book of Paradise, tr. Leonard Wolf, New York, 1965; Volkn iber'n dakh (London, 1942); Hotsmakh Shpil (ibid., 1947); Der Shneider-gezeln Note Manger singt (ibid., 1948); Medrash Itzik (Paris, 1951); Lid un balade (New York, 1952).—Jubilee ed. of works (Geneva–Paris, 1951). J.S.

Mānī (*Babylon 14 IV 216; †Gundishapur 26 II 277), Persian prophet and the founder of Manichaeism, was brought up in Babylonia, a cross-road of various creeds in the 3rd century. For 37 years he preached his dualistic doctrine in the Sassanian empire and on missionary journeys abroad. At length he incurred the wrath of the Zoroastrian clergy and was put to death under Bahram I.

Mānī aimed at a universal religion. His syncretic doctrine combines Zoroastrian, Christian, Gnostic and Buddhist elements. Manichaeism cosmogony and its austere ethics are based on the supposition of two eternal forces: light and darkness (good and evil). Our world is a 'mixture' of the two, brought about by the initiative of the demons of darkness. The creation of man is a devil's device to perpetuate the imprisonment of the spirit in the matter. Redemption can be achieved by restoration of the original separation of the two elemental forces and annihilation of our world. Manichaeism, despite severe persecutions, spread far and wide between China and Spain within a short time. In Europe it severely challenged Christianity in the 4th and 5th centuries.

Discoveries of writings in Middle Iranian, Turkish, Chinese and Coptic, including some of Mānī's own works, have put Manichaeism studies on a new footing. They are in prose and verse and contain hymns, prayers, homilies, epistles, polemics and other religious works.

E. Chavannes and P. Pelliot, Un traité manichéen trouvé en Chine (1911); A. von Le Coq, Türkische Manichaica (3 vols, 1912-22); F. C. Andreas and W. B. Henning, Mitteliranische Manichaica (3 vols, 1932-33); H. J. Polotsky, Manichäische Homilien (1934); W. B. Henning, Ein manichäisches Bet- und Beichtbuch (1937) and 'Book of the Giants' in Bull. School Orient. and Afr. Stud., XI (1943); C. R. C. Allberry, Manichaean Psalm-Book (1938); C. Schmidt, Kephalaia (1940); Tsui Chi, Mo Ni Chiao Hsia Pu Tsan (1943); M. Boyce, Manichaean Hymn Cycles (1954); J. Asmussen, X'āstvānīft (1965).

F. C. Cumont, Recherches sur le manichéisme (3 vols, 1908-12); P. Alfarić, Les écritures manichéennes (2 vols, 1918-19); H. Ch. Puech, Le Manichéisme (1949); G. Widengren, M. and Manichaeism (1965).—W. B. Henning, Bibliography of Important Studies on Old Iranian Subjects (Tehran, 1950). E.Y.

Mānikkar Vācakar (c. A.D. 800), Tamil Śaivite poet, author of the Tiruvācakam ('sacred utterance').

F. Kingsbury and G. E. Phillips, Hymns of the Tamil Śaivite Saints (1921). H.G.R.

Manilius, MARCUS, 1st-century Latin poet of whose life no details are known. His didactic poem (possibly unfinished) in hexameters, the Astronomica, was written under Augustus and Tiberius. The first book describes the creation and the disposition of the stars in the heavens; the other four books are more concerned with astrology.

Manilius writes with a pleasing enthusiasm, not altogether devoid of poetic merit. His style varies from the dull and dry to the over-rhetorical, and he lacks narrative ability. But many passages show a vigorous mental force and power of expression. His versification reveals a competent technical skill and elegance.

M. Manilii Astronomica (ed. J. van Wagenigen, 1915, comm., 1921; ed. A. E. Housman, 5 vols, 1903-30, rev. ed. 1937; Bk 2 ed. with comm. and tr. H. W. Garrod, 1911).

J. Woltjer, De Manilio poeta (1881); R. Ellis, Noctes Manilianae (1891); R. B. Steele, 'The Astronomica of M.' in Amer. Jour. Philol., LIII (1932); E. Riess, 'The influence of astrology on life and literature at Rome' in Class. Weekly, XXVII (1933). A.J.D.

Maning, FREDERICK EDWARD (*Dublin 5 VII 1811; †London 25 VII 1883), New Zealand prose writer. He migrated to New Zealand in 1833 and took a Maori wife. He is difficult to categorize as a writer. His War in the North (1862) and Old New Zealand (1863; facs. ed. 1970), popular and in constant demand since they first appeared, commonly considered lively but unreliable histories, are best considered works of fiction based upon fact, of a more shrewd calculated art than was credited.

Hinemoa: A Maori Love Story (1881); Maori Traditions (1885). K.Sm.

Maniu, ADRIAN (*Bucharest 1891; †1968), Rumanian author, member of the traditionalist Gîndirea circle. He wrote mystery plays, poems and works in poetic prose, characterized by a primitivist technique and a stark use of colour words.

PLAYS: Salomeea (1915); Meşterul (1922).—POEMS: Lîngă pămînt (1924); Drum spre stele (1930); Cîntece de dragoste şi moarte (1932); Cartea ţării (1934); Versuri (1938).—PROSE: Figuri de ceară (1912); Din paharul cu otrăvă (1919).—Scrieri (1968- ). F.J.B.

Manley, MARY DE LA RIVIÈRE (*Jersey or at sea between Jersey and Guernsey 7 IV 1672; ∞ c. 1688 John Manley; †Lambeth Hill 11 VII 1724), English writer and editor of The Examiner. A literary adventuress who wrote political scandal disguised as romance.

Letters written by Mrs Manley. To which is added a Letter from a Supposed Nun in Portugal, to a Gentleman in France, in Imitation of the Nun's Five Letters in Print. By Colonel Pack (1696); Secret Memoirs and Manners of Several Persons of Quality, of both Sexes. From the New Atlantis (1709); The Adventures of Rivella, or the History of the author of the Atlantis by 'Sir Charles Lovemore' (1714).—Lucius (play; 1720; 'corrected').

P. B. Anderson, 'Mistress D. M.'s biography' in Mod. Philol., XXXIII (1936); G. B. Needham, 'Mrs M.: an 18th century Wife of Bath' in Huntington Libr. Quart. (1951). B.H. (M.Bu.)

Mann, HEINRICH (*Lübeck 27 III 1871; †Santa Monica, Calif. 12 III 1950), German novelist. His novels have strong ideological and political implications, and he became the prototype of the Zivilisationsliterat attacked by his brother Thomas Mann*. His bitter satire is directed chiefly against the upper middle-classes of the Wilhelmian empire. The film version of his novel Professor Unrat (1904; The Blue Angel, 1932) is perhaps more famous than the novel itself. His novel Die kleine Stadt (1909; The Little Town, tr. W. Ray, 1930) shows for once his brilliant, though hectic prose style unspoiled by distortions. Der Untertan (1918; The Patriot, tr. E. Boyd, 1921) is despite its limitations an impressive document of political wrath and human indignation. In exile Mann continued to be a prolific writer and a passionate fighter for a new European humanism.

Im Schlaraffenland (1900; In the Land of Cockaigne, tr. A. D. B. Clark, 1929); Mutter Marie (1927; Mother Mary, tr. W. Chambers, 1928); Eugénie (1928; Royal Woman, tr. A. J. Ashton, 1930); Ein ernstes Leben (1932; Hill of Lies, tr. E. and W. Muir, 1934).—COLLECTED WORKS: Gesammelte Romane und Novellen (1916; 2nd ed., 12 vols, 1925); Ausgewählte Werke (ed. A. Kantorowicz, 15 vols, 1951 ff.); Gesammelte Werke (1959 ff.).

H. Jhering, H. M. (1951); U. Weisstein, H. M.: Eine historischkritische Einführung in sein dichterisches Werk (1962); L. Winter, H. M. und sein Publikum (1965); R. N. Linn, H. M. (1967).

R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Mann, LEONARD (*Melbourne 1895), Australian novelist. His first novel, Flesh in Armour (1932), presents Australian war service abroad. Others are concerned with the gold-rush, peasant acquisitiveness in a local setting, intense psychological crime study, and city life in depression years. His narrative casualness creates some admirable effects, but also some indifferent writing.

Human Drift (1935); A Murder in Sydney (1937); The Go-Getter (1942). F.T.M.

Mann, MENDEL (*Płońsk, Poland 1916), Yiddish novelist. He studied painting in Warsaw before starting to write in 1938. After the Germans invaded Poland, he escaped to Russia and fought in the Red Army in the battles before Moscow and Berlin. Returning to Poland after the war, he published his first books of poems in Łódź. In 1946 he left Poland, worked for several years in Israel, and in 1961 settled in Paris as editor of a Yiddish daily. His war experiences are related in a trilogy of novels, and several books of short stories deal with Israeli themes. Most of his works have Hebrew translations.

Oifgewakhte erd (Tel Aviv, 1953); In a farvoorlozten dorf (Buenos Aires, 1954); Bay di toyern fun Moskve (1956; Las puertas de Moscu, Buenos Aires, 1958; At the Gates of Moscow, tr. C. Derrick and I. M. Lask, 1963); Nakht iber Glushina (1957); Bay der Weissel (1958); Di gass fun bliendike mandlen (Buenos Aires, 1958); Dos falln fun Berlin (3rd novel of war trilogy; 1960); Dos hois tsevishen derner (Tel Aviv, 1960); Der shwarzer demb (Paris, 1969). J.S.

Mann, THOMAS (*Lübeck 6 VI 1875; ∞1905 Käthe Pringsheim; †Zürich 12 VIII 1955), younger brother of Heinrich Mann*. After the death of his father, a Lübeck merchant, the family moved to Munich. The autobiographical background is strongly apparent in his first novel, Die Buddenbrooks (1900), which made him a leading German writer at the age of 25. The great Russian, Scandinavian and French novelists of the 19th century, and, of the German novelists, mainly Theodor Fontane*, all influenced Mann's first great success. So did Goethe*, Wagner*, Nietzsche* and Schopenhauer*, whom Mann himself repeatedly acknowledged as his masters. But the substance of the novel is based on his own life and experience, and expressed in a style which even then was strongly individual. Characteristically, Die Buddenbrooks, like many of his later novels, had been planned as a shorter narrative and assumed its considerable volume only during composition. The 24 years which passed before the publication of the next great novel were filled with little masterpieces treating separately and more concisely those motifs which had been suggested in Buddenbrooks and were to reappear in later novels—the struggle between the artist and the 'normal' citizen in Tonio Kröger (1903); music as an expression of irrational and frequently destructive powers in Tristan (1903); the interdependence of physical and moral decay and creative genius in Der Tod in Venedig (1913). Shorter novels—Königliche Hoheit (1909), Lotte in Weimar (1939), Der Erwählte (1951)—present the purest expression of Mann's style, that peculiar 'irony towards both sides' which is always aimed both at the characters and the narrator himself, and gives relative value to every statement made. These short novels are of lighter substance and purer fiction than the long works of his later years with their richness of philosophical, social and political problems. Der Zauberberg (1924) brought him European fame, culminating in the Nobel prize in 1929. This work is still in the tradition of the German Bildungsroman, but no longer pivots round a central figure; furthermore, it questions the whole genre of the novel, whilst re-establishing it by its very existence—a process which is repeated in the two following great novels. The tetralogy Joseph und seine Brüder—Die Geschichten Jakobs (1933), Der Junge Joseph (1934), Joseph in Ägypten (1936), Joseph der Ernährer (1944)—is, in content and volume, Mann's most ambitious work. The novel becomes a Bible commentary (Genesis, xxxvii–l) written, however, from the ironical perspective of modern liberalism. Mann employs Old Testament language in the Joseph novels, Goethe's own words in Lotte in Weimar, the language of Luther's* time and of the old folk-books in Doktor Faustus, and of medieval Europe in The Holy Sinner—always ironically expanded, and blended with modern expressions, more especially Americanisms. Out of the German catastrophe grew the novel Doktor Faustus (1949), which uses the old legend, data from the lives of Nietzsche and Hugo Wolf, an interpretation of music based on Schopenhauer and Schönberg, and countless 'roman à clef' allusions to contemporary persons and events—lunacy and genius symbolizing the fate of Germany. With Felix Krull, a work of his younger days taken up again, the aged writer returns from his excursions into science, philosophy, religion and politics to the realms of pure literature where his mastery will remain unchallenged.

TRANSLATIONS: H. T. Lowe-Porter, Buddenbrooks (1924), Lotte in Weimar (1940), The Holy Sinner (1952), The Magic Mountain (1927), Tales of Jacob (1934), The Young Joseph (1935), Joseph in Egypt (1938), Joseph the Provider (1944), Doctor Faustus (1950); K. Burke, Tonio Kröger (1925), Tristan (1925), Death in Venice (1925); A. C. Curtis, Royal Highness (1916).

SHORT STORIES: Der kleine Herr Friedemann (1898); Herr und Hund (1919); Bashan and I, tr. H. G. Scheffauer, 1923; Unordnung und frühes Leid (1926); Early Sorrow, tr. idem, 1929; Mario und der Zauberer (1929); Mario and the Magician, tr. H. T. Lowe-Porter, 1930; Die vertauschten Köpfe (1940).—ESSAYS: Friedrich und die grosse Koalition (1915); Frederick the Great and the Grand Coalition, tr. H. T. Lowe-Porter, 1925; Betrachtungen eines Unpolitischen (1918); Rede und Antwort (1922); Die Forderung des Tages (1930); Leiden und Grösse der Meister (1935); Schopenhauer (1938); Adel des Geistes (1945); Neue Studien (1948); Altes und Neues (1953); Wagner und unsere Zeit (ed. Erika Mann, 1963).—LETTERS: Briefe an Paul Amann 1915–52 (ed. H. Wegener, 1959); Briefe an Ernst Bertram 1910–55 (ed. I. Jens, 1960); Briefe (3 vols, ed. Erika Mann, 1961 ff.); Briefe an R. Faesi (ed. R. Faesi, 1962); Die grosse Kontroverse: Ein Briefwechsel um Deutschland (exchange of letters with W. von Molo; 1963); T. M.—Heinrich Mann: Briefwechsel 1909–1949 (ed. U. Dietzel, 1965).—COLLECTED WORKS: Gesammelte Werke (Stockholmer Gesamt-Ausgabe, 1938 ff.); Gesammelte Werke (12 vols, 1956); Sämtliche Erzählungen (1958); Gesammelte Werke (12 vols, 1960); T. M., Werke (Fischer Taschenbuchausgabe, 1967 ff.).—SELECTED WORKS IN ENGLISH: The Thomas Mann Reader (sel., arr. and ed. J. W. Angell, 1950); Stories of Three Decades (tr. Helen Tracy Lowe-Porter, 1955); Stories of a Lifetime. The Collected Stories (2 vols, 1961).

K. Hamburger, M. und die Romantik (1932); J. Cleugh, T. M. A Study (1933); H. J. Weigand, T. M.'s Novel Der Zauberberg (1933); R. Peacock, Das Leitmotiv bei T. M. (1934); H. Slochower, M.'s Joseph Story (1938); J. G. Brennan, T. M.'s World (1942); E. Cassirer, 'M.'s Goethebild' in Germanic Rev., XX (1945); A. Bauer, M. und die Krise der bürgerlichen Kultur (1946); F. Lion, T. M. (1946); The Stature of T. M. (ed. Ch. Neider, contrib. by W. H. Auden, H. T. Lowe-Porter, J. B. Priestley, S. Zweig, André Gide, 1947); J. Fouguère, M. ou la séduction de la mort (1947); H.-E. Holt-husen, Die Welt ohne Transzendenz. Eine Studie zu Doktor Faustus (1949); V. Mann, Wir waren fünf. Bildnis der Familie M. (1949); H. Hatfield, T. M. (1951) and T. M. A Collection of Critical Essays (1964); K. W. Jones, Fifty Years of T. M. Studies (biblio.; 1955); B. Allemann, 'T. M.' in Ironie und Dichtung (1956); R. H. Thomas, T. M., The Mediation of Art (1956); E. Heller, The Ironie German (1958); I. Diersen, Untersuchungen zu T. M. (1959); K. Sontheimer, T. M. und die Deutschen (1961); H. Koopmann, Die Entwicklung des intellektuellen Romans bei T. M. (1962); R. Baumgart, Das Ironische und die Ironie in den Werken T. M.'s (1964); Georg Lukács, Essays on T. M. (1964); K. Schröter, T. M. in Selbstzeugnissen und Bilddokumenten (1964); H. Bürgin and H.-O. Mayer, T. M.: Eine Chronik seines Lebens (1965); Aus den Familienpapieren der Manns (ed. U. Dietzel, 1965); K. Hamburger, Der Humor bei T. M.: Zum Joseph-Roman (1965); H. Lehnert, T. M.: Fiktion, Mythos, Religion (1965); A. White, T. M. (1965); R. Gray, 'T. M.' in The German Tradition in Literature (1965); M. Hamburger, 'Praeceptor Germaniae: T. M.' in From Prophecy to Exorcism (1965); J. C. Thirlwall, In Another Language: A Record of the Thirty-Year Relationship Between T. M. and His English Translator, Helen Tracy Lowe-Porter (1966).

R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Manne, MORDECAI ZVI (*Radiskovitz, nr Wilna 5 V 1859; †ibid. 5 X 1886), Hebrew poet and painter. (His pen-name, 'Ha-Mezayer', an anagram of his first names, means, in Hebrew, 'the painter'.) Having received the customary religious training, he later studied the Talmud in Minsk and painting at Wilna and St Petersburg. His poems have genuine feeling and an atmosphere of despair and sadness. His patriotic songs, particularly his poem Masat Nafshi ('My Longing'), are still sung at Zionist gatherings.

Kol Kitvei (poems; 1st ed., Warsaw, 1897; complete ed., 2 vols, 1946). S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Manninen, OTTO (*Kangasniemi 13 VIII 1872; ∞1907 Anni Emilia Swan; †Helsinki 6 IV 1950), Finnish poet, verse-translator and scholar. After graduating at Helsinki University (1897) he devoted himself to literature and from 1913 onwards to University teaching. As an original poet Manninen began late (1905), though he already had a high reputation as a translator of Homer*, Molière*, Goethe*, Heine*, Petőfi*, Arany*, Runeberg* and Ibsen*. His own verse is remarkable for its symbolism, emotional subtlety, ethical depth and formal perfection. A severe self-criticism made it a fraction of his total output.

VERSE: Säkeitä (2 vols, 1905–10); Virranytven (1925); Matkamies (1938); Runoja (1950); Muistojen tie (1951); Valikoima runoja (sel. poems; 1958).

V. Tarkkainen, O. M. runoilijana (1933); H. Fromm, O. M. Ein finnischer Dichter (1952).

W.K.M. (M.A.B.)

Manning, HENRY EDWARD (*Totteridge 15 VII 1808; ∞1833 Caroline Sargent; †London 14 I 1892), joined the Roman Catholic Church 1851, became Archbishop of Westminster (1865) and Cardinal (1875); antagonistic to Newman*.

Sermons (4 vols, 1842–50); Eternal Priesthood (1883); Towards Evening (1889).

E. S. Purcell, Life of Cardinal M. (2 vols, 1896).
M.A.

Manno, GIUSEPPE (*Alghero, Sardinia 1786; †Turin 1868), Italian historian and philologist, remembered chiefly for his Della fortuna della parole (1831), which was followed in 1866 by Della fortuna delle frasi. He is also the author of several historical works on Sardinia.

Della fortuna della parole (ed. B. Migliorini, 1947; with chronol. table and biblio.).
B.R.

Mannynge, ROBERT, or ROBERT OF BRUNNE (*Bourne, Lincs; fl. 1283; †c. 1340), English poet; best known for his Handlyng Synne, a verse translation of William of Wadington's Manuel des Péchiez, amplified by interesting comments on contemporary life.

Handlyng Synne (ed. F. J. Furnivall, 2 pts, 1901–03); The Story of England of R. M. of Brunne A.D. 1338 (ed. idem, 2 vols, 1887).

R. Crosby, 'R. M. of Brunne: a new biography' in Proc. Mod. Lang. Assoc., LVII (1942); D. W. Robertson, 'The cultural tradition of Handlyng Synne' in Speculum, XXII (1947).

R.W.B. (T.F.H.)

Manoello Giudeo: see Immanuel ben Solomon.

Manrique, GÓMEZ (*Amusco c. 1412; †Toledo 1490), Spanish poet and dramatist. He was of noble family and took an active part in politics; he helped arrange the marriage of Ferdinand and Isabella. His didactic poems (he completed Mena's* Coplas contra los pecados mortales) are better than his rather trivial lyrics. He also wrote dramatic pieces, including a good Nativity play, which is the earliest surviving Spanish play except for the *Auto* de los Reyes Magos*.

Cancionero (ed. A. Paz y Melia, 2 vols, 1885).—H. Sieber, 'Dramatic symmetry in G. M.'s Representación' in Hispanic Rev., XXXIII (1965).
E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Manrique, JORGE (*?Paredes de la Nava c. 1440; ∞c. 1470 Guiomar de Meneses; †Calatrava 24 IV 1479), Spanish poet. He was Gómez Manrique's* nephew; his wife was the great-granddaughter of López* de Ayala. He took part in the civil wars and died in battle. His magnificent elegy on his father's death, Coplas por la muerte de su padre don Rodrigo, contrasts the vanity of worldly things with spiritual life and the immortality of fame. In it he uses Biblical and patristic images and ideas as well as those of his own time. The language is simple, almost colloquial, and his speech-rhythms never interrupt the flow of his verse. The poem has been the subject of innumerable commentaries, glosses and translations. Its reputation has survived all later changes in poetic taste and it is perhaps the most famous of all Spanish poems. His other poems are far below this level, but they are highly competent, and some have real, though underestimated, merit.

Cancionero (ed. A. Cortina, 1929; 3rd ed. 1952); Poesia (ed. J. M. Alda-Tesán, 1965); Coplas (tr. H. W. Longfellow, Boston, 1833); Glosas a las Coplas de J. M. (ed. A. Pérez Gómez, 6 vols, 1961–63).

A. Krause, J. M. and the Cult of Death in the Cuatrocientos (Berkeley, 1937); P. Salinas, J. M. o tradición y originalidad (Buenos Aires, 1947); P. N. Dunn, 'Themes and images in the Coplas of J. M.' in Medium Aevum, XXXIII (1964); A. Serrano de Haro, Personalidad y destino de J. M. (1966); R. P. Kinkade, 'The historical date of the Coplas and the death of J. M.' in Speculum, XLV (1970).
E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Mansabu, SAYIDI ABU BAKARI BIN ABDU-RAHMANI (*Lamu, Kenya 1829; †ibid. 18 III 1922), Swahili poet, known as Mansabu, 'root-stock', because he was a descendant of the Prophet Muhammad on both his mother's and his father's side. As he was resident in Zanzibar for many years, he was one of the few poets who was appreciated by both the northern and the southern Swahili. So far as is known, all his work was religious; best known are his two versifications of the Maulidi, the recital at the Prophet Muhammad's nativity.

J. Knappert, Swahili Islamic Poetry, I–III (Leiden, 1970).
J.Kn.

Mansel, HENRY LONGUEVILLE (*Cosgrove, Northants 6 X 1820; ∞1855 Charlotte Taylor; †ibid. 30 VII 1871), English metaphysician who asserted the relativity of all knowledge and regarded religion as revelation rather than understanding. He was Dean of St Paul's. (See Maurice*.)

Metaphysics, or the Philosophy of Consciousness (1860); Philosophy of the Conditioned (1866); Letters, Lectures and Reviews (1873); Gnostic Heresies of the First and Second Centuries (with sketch; 1875). R.M.H.

Mansfield, KATHERINE, pseud. of KATHLEEN MANSFIELD BEAUCHAMP (*Wellington 14 X 1888; ∞George Bowden [o/o 1918], ∞1918 John Middleton Murry*; †Fontainebleau 9 I 1923), short-story writer. Educated first in New Zealand, she went to London (1903) to study music and thereafter saw little of her country, yet at the core of her work is the recollection of her New Zealand childhood and the child's point of view intensified and transformed as her illness worked upon her. This weighed heavily for over 30 years upon short-story writing by her compatriots, at once a seminal and a limiting factor in New Zealand writing. Her much-admired sensibility has recently been attacked by Frank O'Connor [Michael O'Donovan*] and Brigid Brophy*. Her command of poignancy for the purposes of her stories and the superbly controlled prose are less vulnerable features of her art.

SHORT STORIES: In a German Pension (1911); Prelude (1918); Je ne parle pas français (1919); Bliss (1920); The Garden Party (1922); The Dove's Nest (1923; a miscellany, 1934); Something Childish (1924); The Aloe (1930); Collected Stories (1945).—Poems (ed. J. M. Murry, 1923); Maata (novel; juvenile work).—VARIOUS: Journal (ed. J. M. Murry, 1927; definitive ed., 1954); Letters (1928); The Scrapbook (1946); Letters to John Middleton Murry 1913–22 (1951).

R. E. Mantz, The Critical Bibliography of K. M. (1931); R. E. Mantz and J. M. Murry, Life (1933); A. Sewell, K. M.: A Critical Study (1952); A. Alpers, K. M. (1953) and K. M.: A Biography (1953); I. A. Gordon, K. M. (1954); N. Hormasji, K. M.: An Appraisal (1967). K.Sm.

Manson, HARLEY WILLIAM DANIEL (*Tabora, Tanganyika 1925; †Pietermaritzburg 29 V 1969), South African playwright. His verse dramas deal with complex moral issues, and do not have specifically South African themes or settings.

The Festival (1959); Pat Mulholland's Day (1964); The Green Knight (1969). U.La.

Månsson, FABIAN (*Hässlö 20 I 1872; †Stockholm 4 I 1938), Swedish politician and author. Månsson was deeply interested in the injustices of class warfare. This comes out clearly in his various historical novels which, though often too subjective, vividly depict country and people. He also wrote two histories, Folkvandringarnas historia (1937) and Vikingatidens historia (1939).

Rättfärdiggörelsen genom tron (1916); Sancte Eriks gård (3 vols, 1922–26); Gustav Vasa och Nils

Dacke (3 vols, 1928–38); Fabian har ordet (sel. speeches and arts; 1940).

F. Ström, Fabian (1948).

C.H.K.

Mantovano, BATTISTA, pseud. of GIOVAN BATTISTA SPAGNOLI (*Mantua 17 IV 1448; †1516), Italian humanist and poet. General of the Carmelite Order in 1513. He wrote much religious Latin verse, but is remembered for ten vigorous Virgilian eclogues (1498) which were imitated in England by Alexander Barclay* (1514).

Opera (Antwerp, 1576); Eclogues (crit. ed. W. P. Mustard, 1911).

E. Carrara, La poesia pastorale (1910); E. Faccioli in Mantova, Le lettere, II (with biblio.; 1958). N.K.W. (J.G.-R.)

Mantū, SA'ADAT HASAN (*1912; †1955), Urdu short-story writer.

Black Milk (tr. Hamid Jalal, [1955]). R.R.

Mantuan: see Mantovano, BATTISTA.

Manuchihri, AHMAD ABU'L-NAJM (†c. 1041), Persian poet. He took his pen-name Manuchihr from his first patron, the Ziyarid prince Manuchihr ibn Qabus (1012–28); later he joined the court of Ghazna. He is one of the outstanding poets of the Ghaznavid period. His Divān contains about 3,000 verses, mostly panegyrics. Some of his nature poems are almost unsurpassed in Persian poetry in their refreshing enthusiasm, keen observation and original imagery.

Divān-i Manuchihri (ed. and Fr. tr. A. de B. Kazimirsky, 1886).

J. Rypka, History of Iranian Literature (1968). E.Y.

Manuel, NIKLAUS, called 'DEUTSCH' (*Berne c. 1484; †ibid. 20 IV 1530), Swiss dramatist, painter, poet, soldier, statesman and Reformer. Manuel wrote satirical dramas and Shrovetide plays in the tradition of Gengenbach*. In Vom Papst und seiner Priesterschaft (1522) and Der Ablasskrämer (1525) he satirizes Papal pretensions and Catholic abuses with much wit and force in popular and often poetic tones; in Barbali (1526) he attacks the practice of making young girls become nuns. His Krankheit und Testament der Messe (1528) is one of the best pro-Luther* satires. As a painter influenced by Holbein and Dürer his best work, of which only copies now exist, was the famous Totentanz of the Berne Dominican monastery.

Vom Papst und seiner Priesterschaft (1522; ed. F. Vetter, 1923; ed. A. E. Berger in Dt. Lit. in Entw.-Reihen, V, 1935); Vom Papsts und Christi Gegensatz (1522); Der Ablasskrämer (1525; ed. P. Zinsli, 1960).—Sämtliche Werke (ed. J. Baechtold, 2 vols, 1878).

S. Singer, 'Sprache und Werke des N. M.' in

Aufsätze und Vorträge (1912); L. Stumm, N. M. Deutsch als bildender Künstler (1925); C. Grunseisen, N. M. (1937); C. von Mandach and H. Koegler, N. M. Deutsch (1940); A. Beerli, Le peintre poète N. M. et l'évolution sociale de son temps (1953).
D.G.D.

Manuel Calecas (†1410), Byzantine scholar and theologian. He broke with the Greek Church and finally became a Dominican. He translated Latin theologians (e.g. Boethius* and Anselm*) into Greek, and himself wrote theological treatises in defence of the Latin doctrinal point of view and in opposition to the Orthodox Hesychasts.

J.M.H.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CLII (1866; with Lat. tr.) and CLIV (1866; De processione Spiritus Sancti, under Demetrius Cydones); Adversus Iosephum Bryennium (ed. G. Mercati in Studi e Testi, LVI, 1931); Epistolae (ed. R.-J. Loenertz, ibid., CLVI, 1950; with biblio. and Fr. summary of the Greek letters).

G. Mercati, Notizie di Procoro e Demetrio Cidone, Manuele Caleca e Teodoro Meliteniota ed altri appunti (1931).
J.M.H. (R.B.)

Manuel Moschopoulos (fl. c. 1300), Byzantine scholar. His writings on grammar and his scholia on classical authors are important for the range of learning and the nature of educational methods under the early Palaeologi.

Erotēmata (ed. P. Egenolff, Anonymi grammaticae epitoma, 1877); Sylloge onomatōn Attikōn (ed. F. Asulan, Venice, 1524).
J.M.H.

Manuel II Palaeologus (*1350; †1425), BYZANTINE EMPEROR 1391–1425, a gifted man who travelled widely in Europe, in addition to spending part of his youth at the Ottoman court. His letters reflect both the current political difficulties of Byzantium and their author's cosmopolitan and cultured outlook.
J.M.H.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CLVI (with Lat. tr.; 1866); Lettres (ed. E. Legrand, 1893); E. Trapp, M. II Palaiologos: Dialoge mit einem 'Perser' (1966).

J. W. Barker, M. II P. (1391–1425): A Study in Late Byzantine Statesmanship (1969).

J.M.H. (R.B.)

Manuel Philes (c. 1275–1345), Byzantine scholar and over-prolific versifier, author of a vast number of occasional poems written for patrons. His constant complaints of poverty are in part conventional.

Carmina (ed. E. Miller, 2 vols, 1854); Carmina inedita (ed. Ae. Martini, 1900). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Manuzio (MANUTIUS), PAOLO (*Venice 12 VI 1512; †Rome 6 IV 1574), Italian humanist and printer, succeeded his father Aldus in the management of the Aldine press; famous for his work on Cicero*.

A. A. Renouard, Annales de l'imprimerie des Aldes (3rd ed. 1834; tr. and abr. E. Goldsmid, 1887).
D.H.

Manyōshū ('Collection of Ten Thousand Leaves [or, Ages]'), Japanese poetical anthology, containing 4,516 poems in 20 books, by about 450 poets, collected some years after 759. Its compilation is sometimes ascribed to Tachibana no Moroe, but usually to Ōtomo* no Yakamochi, who certainly played a large part in arranging the poems; but the circumstances of the compilation are not clear, and the order of the poems, although partly systematical, shows signs of incomplete editing. There are 262 chōka, long poems, and almost all the remainder are tanka, short poems of only 31 syllables. Although the long poems appeal more to Western readers, the tanka developed into the standard Japanese verse form. Some of the poems may date as far back as 400, but the majority belong to the period 650 to 750. Of several outstanding poets, those traditionally considered the best are Kakinomoto* no Hitomaro and Yamabe* no Akahito; Ōtomo no Yakamochi was also excellent. The poems are lively, frank, vivacious and spirited: their manner is direct and simple, sometimes even naive, though their simplicity often conceals great artistry. They may be considered as belonging to the golden age of Japanese poetry, whereas the Kokinshū*, the next anthology, and subsequent anthologies are its silver age, in which technique superseded emotion and elegance replaced plain beauty. The themes of the poems are very varied; this also is in contrast to later anthologies, in which tradition came to impose a rigid limitation on what themes could be used. The position of women in the Manyōshū is prominent, both as poets and as characters in poems. The Manyōshū is undoubtedly one of the finest works in Japanese literature. Apart from its literary value, it is a mine of information for Japanese philology, history and mythology.

R. H. Brower and E. R. Miner, Japanese Court Poetry (1961; outstanding crit. assessment, with tr. and analyses of sel. poems); complete tr. J. L. Pierson, The Manyōshū, I–XX (1929–63; table of contents, 1964); Nippon Gakujutsu Shinkōkai, The M., One Thousand Poems (1940; repr. 1965); sel. poems tr. in: A. Miyamori, Masterpieces of Japanese Poetry (1936); G. Bownas and A. Thwaite, Penguin Book of Japanese Verse (1964); J. L. Pierson, Selection of Japanese Poems Taken From the Manyōshū (1966).
E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Manzini, GIANNA (*Pistoia 24 III 1896), Italian novelist and short-story writer. The predominant theme running through Gianna Manzini's work is the loneliness of woman. As a result of it her characters take refuge in a world of dreams and memories which she describes in a prose that is lyrical, imaginative, yet always controlled by her strong critical sense. She has often been compared with Virginia Woolf*, by whom she has been greatly influenced.

Tempo innamorato (1928); Incontro col falco (1929); Boscovivo (1932); Un filo di brezza (1936); Rive remote (1940); Forte come un leone (1947); La sparviera (1956). J.F.C. (B.M.)

Manzoli, PIER ANGELO DE LA STELLATA, now identified with PALINGENIO (*La Stellata, Ferrara ?1500; †?1543), Italian poet and philosopher, member of the Ferrarese circle of Calvinist tendency which gathered round Renée de France. His Zodiacus vitae (1535-36) was condemned by the Inquisition.

For the identification of M. with Pal.: G. Bertoni in Giornale storico della lett. ital., C (1932). —F. Flamini, Spigolature d'erudizione e di critica (1895); G. Toffanin, Il Cinquecento (3rd ed. 1929); B. Croce in La Critica, XXX (1932); A. Meozzi in La rinascita (for M.'s influence abroad; 1939).

B.R.

Manzoni, ALESSANDRO (*Milan 7 V 1785; ∞1808 Henriette Blondel [†1833], ∞Teresa Borri-Stampa; †ibid. 22 V 1873), Italian poet and novelist. His mother, Giulia Beccaria (daughter of the author of Dei delitti e delle pene), separated from her husband, Pietro Manzoni, and lived in Paris. In 1805 she was joined there by her son who through his friendship with Claude Fauriel was introduced to the new Romantic tendencies of European literature. In 1810 his wife, the daughter of a banker of Geneva, abjured the Calvinist religion. Almost contemporaneously Manzoni himself underwent a spiritual re-conversion to Roman Catholicism, from which he had become estranged. His philosophic conversion from sensist doctrines to Rosminianism proceeded gradually over a quarter of a century, and traces of the development are to be seen in his works.

His historical novel, I Promessi Sposi (1827), is held by many to be the greatest Italian literary work after the Divina Commedia. Similar in some respects to Scott's* novels, it is concerned with deeper issues than is usual in historical romances. Ostensibly a story of petty tyranny and victimization, set in Spanish-dominated Lombardy of the early 17th century, it involves its humble protagonists, Renzo and Lucia, in issues which far transcend their particular vicissitudes; in war, famine, tumults, plague, and in the profound enigmas of the conflict between the will of man and the will of God, between human concepts of justice and Providence. Linguistically the work is an important landmark in the history of Italian prose. Eventually converted, after 1829, to the view that Florentine should be recognized as the language of Italy, Manzoni re-wrote his novel to conform with Florentine usage. The corrected, definitive version was published in 1840. In relation to Romanticism the work stands alone. It founded no school and its imitators overlooked its essential qualities. Nevertheless Manzoni has been regarded as the head of the Italian Romantic movement. He was in reality a modern classicist who absorbed the new Romantic trends but retained classic serenity, harmony and control.

His minor works include two verse dramas, Il Conte di Carmagnola (1820) and Adelchi (1822), the former important in relation to literary history for its preface and for the violation of the dramatic unities. Of his poems, the most famous is his ode on the death of Napoleon, 'Il Cinque Maggio' (1821). His Inni Sacri (1812-22) are the poetic expression of his religious faith.

I Promessi Sposi (ed. L. Russo, with crit. comm., 2nd ed. 1967; The Betrothed, tr. A. Colquhoun, 1951); Poesie (ed. E. Chiorboli, 1948; with intro. and notes); Le Tragedie, Gl'Inni Sacri, Le Odi (ed. M. Scherillo, 1922); Liriche e tragedie (ed. M. Apollonio, 1940); Osservazioni sulla morale cattolica (ed. F. Crispolti, 1906; new crit. ed. M. Barbi and F. Ghisalberti in Opere Varie, II, 1943, also cont. the tragedies, the Inni Sacri and the Odi); for M.'s writings on the Italian language: B. Reynolds, The Linguistic Writings of A. M. (1950; with unpub. material).—Tutte le opere (ed. A. Chiari and F. Ghisalberti, 1954 ff.); Opere (ed. L. Caretti, 2nd ed. 1964).

L. Tonelli, M. (1928); A. Momigliano, A. M. (1929); B. Croce, A. M. (1930); G. Vidari, M. (1935); D. Budini, A. M. (1940); B. J. Wall, A. M. (1954); A. Colquhoun, M. and His Times: A Biography (1954).

For particular studs see C. Mazzoni, L'Ottocento, II (3rd ed. 1934; bibl.); Annali manzoniani (1939 ff.; Milan, Casa del Manzoni); F. Ghisalberti, Critica manzoniana di un decennio (1949).

B.R.

Mao Tun, pseud. of SHÊN YEN-PING (*T'ung-hsiang, Chekiang 1896), Chinese novelist and short-story writer. In 1920 Mao Tun with Chou* Tso-jên and others founded the Literary Association and became editor of its influential Short-Story Monthly. After participating in the Northern Expedition of 1926, he wrote, against the background of the events of that year, his trilogy Shih, which established him as China's leading novelist. In 1930 he became a founder-member of the League of Left-Wing Writers. Among his other novels, Hung (1930) and Tzū-yeh (1933) stand out; among his short-story volumes, Yeh ch'iang-wei (1929) and Ch'un ts'an (1933). His creative writing ended in 1945. He was Minister of Culture in the People's Government (1949-64) and always prominent in politico-literary circles.

NOVELS: Huan-mieh (1927); Tung-yao (1928); Chui-ch'iu (1928); above three reissued as Shih

(1930); San jên hsing (1931); Lu (1932); Tzū-yeh (1933); Midnight, tr. Hsu Meng-hsiung, Peking, 1957); Fu-shih (1941); Shuang-yeh hung ssu erh-yüeh hua (1943).—SHORT STORIES: Mao Tun tuan-p'ien hsiao-shuo chi (coll.; 1934); P'ao-mo (1935); Yen-yün chi (1937); Wei-ch'ü (1945); sel. tr. in Spring Silkworms and Other Stories (tr. S. Shapiro, Peking, 1956); biblio. of others in C. T. Hsia, A History of Modern Chinese Fiction 1917-1957, (1961).

M. Galik, Mao Tun and Modern Chinese Literary Criticism (Wiesbaden, 1969). A.R.D.

Map, or Mapes, WALTER (*c. 1140; †c. 1209), English ecclesiastic; once credited with much Arthurian material and many satirical poems, but only the De nugis curialium, a miscellany of folklore, history etc., is certainly his: it includes the Epistola Valerii, a famous diatribe against marriage, used by Chaucer* and others.

De nugis curialium (ed. M. R. James, 1914; tr. F. Tupper and M. B. Ogle, 1924); Latin Poems Commonly Attributed to W. M. (ed. T. Wright, 1841).

J. Hinton, 'W. M.'s De nugis curialium: its plan and composition' in Pub. Mod. Lang. Assoc., XXXII (1917). R.W.B. (Tor.)

Mapius Vegius: see Vegio, MAFFEO.

Mapu, ABRAHAM (*Slobodka-Kovna 6 II 1808; †Königsberg 9 X 1867), Hebrew novelist. At an early age he acquired the name of an 'illuy' ('phenomenon'). Later he took up the study of the practical CABBALAH and learned Latin with the help of a Roman Catholic priest, who also encouraged him to learn other European languages. His first novel, Ahavat Zion (Vilna, 1853), was a great literary event in Hebrew modern writing. A romance of the time of Isaiah, it is influenced by the French Romanticists. His second great novel Ashmat Shomron (pub. 1865) had an even more complex plot. Both these historical novels were symbolic of the ideas of the Haskalah ('enlightenment') in that they call for the love of life and work on the land, and were perhaps the first call for Zionism in fiction. His third novel Ayit Zahvu'a (1857), with contemporary characters, was of less merit. He was the first to introduce the novel form in the Hebrew language.

Ahavat Zion (Amnon, Prince and Peasant, tr. F. Jaffe, 1887; In the Days of Isaiah, tr. Shapiro, 1902).—Sel. ed. in Hebrew (intro. Y. Fichmann, 1939).

R. Brainin, A. M. (Piotrkov, 1900); S. Sachs, Le-Toledot M. (Warsaw, 1903); A. Kaplan, Chayei M. (Vienna, 1887); David Patterson, A. M. (London, 1964). S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Maragall, JOAN (*1860; ∞1891 Clara Noble; †1911), Catalan poet, without doubt the finest poet writing in Spain at the turn of the century. Much influenced by the ideological movements of his time and especially by Nietzsche*, his themes were nevertheless essentially the great Romantic ones—nature, love, patriotism, religion—treated in a refreshingly direct fashion. He had a sensitive appreciation of nature, though it was that of a city dweller rather than of a countryman, and he infused without sentimentality human values into the mountains, sea and animals of the fields. Similarly he wrote unaffectedly of love and of his deep family affection. His love of nature gives rise to meditation of a religious type, as in his famous Cant espiritual, where he asks God to let this world, unsurpassable in his eyes, be his heaven after death.

Maragall also wrote on Catalan historical themes. For example, in a series of poems on the Comte Arnau, a figure in Catalan legend akin to the FLYING DUTCHMAN, he developed, influenced by Goethe* and Novalis*, a profound view of life as renunciation which replaced heroic self-assertion.

He conceived poetry as essentially a short lyrical experience and in his aesthetic theories, adumbrated in his Elogis, he anticipated 'pure poetry' in his praise of spontaneous expression ('la paraula viva') of dance and of music. The directness, sobriety and concentration of his own verse is outstanding. He translated widely from the classics and from the German poets.

For some 20 years Maragall wrote regularly for the respected newspaper El diari de Barcelona. His articles, written mostly in Spanish, are significant in that they reflect the views of a humane and enlightened bourgeois in a time of crisis.

Obres completes (25 vols, with intro., 1929-59); Obres completes (2 vols, 1962).

A. Terry, La poesia de J. M. (1963) and 'The Cant espiritual' in Bull. Hispanic Stud., XXXVIII (1961). G.W.R.

Márai, SÁNDOR (*Kassa 11 IV 1900), Hungarian novelist, poet and playwright. A middle-class background and a strong proclivity for French literary culture combine to give Márai's works an elegant smoothness of style. His frequently-recurring theme is the problem of his own middle class in the 20th century. His memoir-type novels represent this style at its best.

NOVELS: A zendülök (1930); Les revoltés, tr. L. Gara and M. Largeaud, 1931); Csutora (1932; Achtung, bissiger Hund, n.d.); A féltékenyek (2 vols, 1937); Die Eifersüchtigen, tr. A. Saternus, Bern, 1947); Vendégláték Bolzanóban (1940); Ein Herr aus Venedig, tr. R. von Stipsicz-Garibaldi and G. von Kommerstädt, 1943); Das Wunder des San Gennaro (1957).—VARIOUS: A szegények iskolája (1939); Napló ['Diary'], 1943-44 (1945), 1945-57 (1958), 1958-67 (1968).

J. Reményi, 'S. M.' in Books Abroad, XXIII (1949). G.F.C.

Marais, EUGÈNE NIELEN (*Pretoria 9 I 1871; ∞1894 Aletta Beyers; †ibid. 29 III 1936), Afrikaans writer and lawyer. In his poetry his inner discord, his sombre outlook and his broken health are revealed. Both the emotional quality and the formal beauty shown in his one volume of poetry place it among the best yet written in Afrikaans. He is an interesting story-teller and a fascinating describer of animal life.

VERSE: Gedigte (1925); Versamelde Gedigte (1933).—PROSE: Natuurkundige en Wetenskaplike Studies (1928); Die Siel van die Mier (1934; The Soul of the White Ant, tr. W. de Kok, 1937, repr. 1971); Burgers van die Berge (1938; My Friends the Baboons, tr. idem, 1939).

F. G. M. du Toit, E. N. M.: Sy Bydrae tot die Afrikaanse Letterkunde (1940); H. van der Merwe Scholtz, Sistematiese Verslag van 'n Stilistiese Analise—E. M.: Die Townenares (1950).

G.D. (N.D.C.)

Maran, RENÉ (*Fort-de-France 5 XI 1887; †Paris 8 V 1960), French novelist, a Negro born in Martinique; his highly successful Batouala (1921; Eng. tr. anon., 1922), the first genuine 'Black novel', won the Prix Goncourt. In its preface, Maran for the first time states the demands of NEGRIUDE, hoping however only for the integration of the Negro in French society. His other works on Africa are those of a French patriot: Les pionniers de l'empire (1943 ff.).

Djouma, chien de brousse (1927); M'bala l'éléphant (1944).—L. Kesteloot, Anthologie négro-africaine (1967).

M. Cook, 'R. M.' in Fr. Rev., XVII (1944).
M.G.

Marañón, GREGORIO (*Madrid 1887; ∞Dolores Moya; †ibid. 1960), Spanish writer. A practising doctor, Professor at Madrid University and member of three Academies. He intervened in politics, and published a considerable number of books and essays on various subjects, besides many articles. His correct, explanatory style is at its best when treating literary or historical subjects in an almost clinical manner: Enrique IV de Castilla (1930), the controversial Don Juan (1940), Amiel (1922), and his interesting studies of Olivares (1936) and Antonio Pérez* (1947). His book on Feijoo* is a first-rate study of that great essayist.

Obras completas (ed. A. Juderías, 4 vols, 1968—).—Amor, conveniencia y eugenesia (1929); Ensayo biológico sobre Enrique IV de Castilla y su tiempo (1930); La evolución de la sexualidad y los estados intersexuales (1930; The Evolution of Sex and Intermediate Conditions, tr. W. B. Wells, London, 1931, New York, 1933); Raíz y decoro de España (1933); Las ideas biológicas del Padre Feijoo (1934); Tiempo viejo y tiempo nuevo (1940); Antonio Pérez (1947; tr. C. D. Ley, 1953); Elogio y nostalgia de Toledo (1951); El Greco y Toledo (1957); Los tres Vélez (1960).

F. J. Almodóvar and E. Warleta, M. o una vida fecunda (1952); L. Granjel, G. M. Su vida y su obra (1960); P. Lain Entralgo, G. M. (1969).
R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Marbod of Rennes (*Angers c. 1035; †1123), French scholar and Latin poet. In 1069 he became Chancellor and then head of the school at Angers, and in 1096 Bishop of Rennes. He was a teacher, interested especially in versification, as his De ornamentis verborum, a school exercise-book, shows. His Liber lapidum, on the virtues of precious stones, is didactic in tone. He wrote poems on the lives of saints, poetical epistles, epigrams as well as hymns and other religious pieces in rhythm and rhyme. Hildebert* styled him 'the Orpheus of our age'.

Migne, Patrologia Latina, CLXXI (1854); Analecta hymnica medii aevi, L (1907); Liber lapidum (tr. C. W. King in Antique Gems, 1860); A. Wilmart, 'Le florilège de Saint-Gatien' in Rev. Bénédictine (1936); Liber decem capitulorum (ed. W. Bulst, 1947).

L. Pannier, Les lapidaires français du moyen âge (1882); P. Studer and J. Evans, Anglo-Norman Lapidaries (Paris, 1924).
F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Marcabru (fl. c. 1130–48), Provençal troubadour from Gascony, of humble birth, perhaps even a foundling. During the period in which he went from castle to castle with his teacher Cercamon, he was known as Panperdut. He himself uses the name Marcaru(n), son of Lady Bruna. His mordant, satirically realistic sirventes earned him many enemies, particularly in the courts of south-west France and Spain. In the end he was killed by the enraged lords of Guyenne. His 30 moral songs (often wilfully obscure, but extraordinarily rich in their imagery) advocate a love which combines courtly restraint with authentically courtly standards of behaviour; sensuality masquerading under courtly forms he attacks (one cannot say that he rejects it when crude and unadorned). These vers are highly original in form and diction. No less individual are his romances, Crusader songs and a well-known pastourelle.
R.R.B.

Poésies complètes (ed. J. M. L. Dejeanne, 1909).

H. Suchier, 'Der Troubadour M.' in Jahrb. für romanische u. eng. Lit., XIV (1874); G. Bertoni, 'Due note provenzali' in Studi medievali, new ser., III (1911); K. Vossler, 'Der Troubadour M. und die Anfänge des gekünstelten Stils' in Sitzungsberichte der bayerischen Akad. der Wissenschaften (1913); K. Lewrent, 'Beiträge zum Verständnis der Lieder M.s' in Zeitschrift für romanische Philol., XXXVII (1913); A. Franz, Der Troubadour M. (1914); P. Boissonnade, 'Les personnages et les événements de l'histoire d'Allemagne, de France et d'Espagne dans l'œuvre de M.' in Romania, XLVIII (1922); C. Appel, 'Zu M.' in Zeitschrift für romanische Philol., XLIII (1923); H. Spanke, 'M.-Studien' in Abhandlungen der Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen, 3rd ser. (1940); G. Errante, M. e le fonti sacre dell'antica lirica (1948); A. Roncaglia, 'Marcabruno: "Lo vers comens quand vei del fau . . ."' in Cultura neolatina, IX (1951); E. Köhler, 'M.s "L'autrier jost" una sebissa' und das Problem der Pastourelle' in Romanistisches Jahrbuch, V (1952); D. W. Robertson, 'Five poems by M.' in Stud. in Philol., LI (1954); R. Lejeune, 'Pour le commentaire du troubadour M.' in Annales du Midi, LXXVI (1964); F. Pirot, 'Ce n'était point le troubadour M.', ibid., LXXXVIII (1966); A. G. Hatcher, 'M.s "A la fontana del vergier"' in Mod. Lang. Notes, LXXXIX (1964); 'Bibliographie commentée du troubadour M.' in Le Moyen Âge (1967); M. Picarel, 'Le début printainier dans les chansons des troubadours: M. et B. de Ventadorn' in Annales de l'Inst. d'études occitanes (1970).

R.R.B. (K.R.)

Marcadé, EUSTACHE (*Paris 10 I 1440), French dramatist. He was the author of the *Mystère de la Vengeance* de Notre Seigneur*, a sequel to the Passion, and the probable author of a Mystère de la Passion (the Arras* Passion) which served as a model to A. Gréban*. Though not a great artist, he was an original writer who gave to the Mystery the form it was to keep during the 15th century and in which the Passion is treated as the culminating incident in the redemption of Man.

Le Mystère de la Passion (ed. J. M. Richard, 1893).

A. Thomas, 'Notice biographique sur E. M.' in Romania, XXXV (1906); E. B. Ham, 'The basic manuscript of the M. Vengeance' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XXIX (1934); G. Frank, The Medieval French Drama (1954).
A.H.D.

Marcel, GABRIEL (*Paris 7 XII 1889), French philosopher and playwright. Since his conversion, at 40, to Roman Catholicism, Marcel has become one of the leading French exponents of Christian EXISTENTIALISM. He discovered the philosophical possibilities of the drama through Ibsen* and Currel*. He also admits the influence of Portoriche* and Schnitzler*. His plays, though they have reached a wider public through the popularization of existentialism, often lack the human touch and remain forcefully expressed intellectual exercises.

PHILOSOPHY: Journal métaphysique (1928; Eng. tr. B. Wall, 1952); Être et avoir (1935; Eng. tr. K. Farrer, 1965); Du refus à l'invocation (1942); Homo viator (1944).—PLAYS: Le soleil invisible (1914); Le cœur des autres (1920); Le monde cassé (1923); L'homme de Dieu (1925); La chapelle ardente (1925); Le chemin de crête (1936); Le dard (1937); Le fanal (1938); Théâtre comique (1947); Rome

n'est plus dans Rome (1951).—A Man of God, Ariadne, The Funeral Pyre (tr. R. Heywood and M. Gabain, 1952).

P. Foulquié, L'existentialisme (1947); G. Pillement, Anthologie du théâtre français contemporain, III (1948); J. Chenu, Le théâtre de G. M. et sa signification métaphysique (1948); K. T. Gallagher, The Philosophy of G. M. (1962); J. Parain-Vial, G. M. (1966); J. B. O'Malley, The Fellowship of Being (1966); S. Keen, G. M. (1966).
T.W. (M.G.)

Marcelin, FRÉDÉRIC: see HAITIAN LITERATURE.

Marcelin, PIERRE: see Thoby-Marcelin, PHILIPPE.

March, AUSIÀS or AUSIAS (*Gandia, Valencia ?1397; ∞1437 Isabel de Martorell, ∞Joana Escorna; †ibid. 3 III 1459), Catalan poet, a member of a prosperous literary family. His life was spent in the King's service; he was the royal falconer. His poems mainly concern his love for various ladies referred to as 'Plena de seny'; 'Lilr entre cards' and 'Mon darrer bé'. The satisfaction of his lust brings him no comfort, for he yearns also for a spiritual love of which his lovers are incapable. His love is thus tortured and contradictory. His appetites control his life, break down his understanding, master his will and drive him to despair; but he is proud of the intensity of his passion. He analyses acutely his perpetual indecision and the ease with which he deceives himself. The tautness of his arguments and originality of his images sometimes make him difficult to follow. He uses Provençal metres and his work derives much from the trobar clus of Arnaut* Daniel but he brings to the troubadour tradition new concentration and sustained argument which completely revitalize the static convention of courtly love. The influence of Dante* and Petrarch* is also apparent.

Ausiàs March is perhaps the greatest poet in Catalan. He had great influence in 16th-century Spain: Garcilaso* is indebted to him, and his works were published in Valladolid (1555) as well as in Valencia and Barcelona. He was put into Castilian by Romaní (1539) and Montemayor* (1560).

Obres (crit. ed. A. Pagès, 2 vols, 1912-14); Poesies (crit. ed. and stud. P. Bohigas, 5 vols, 1952-59).

A. Pagès, A. M. et ses prédécesseurs (1912) and Commentaire des poésies d'A. M. (1925); J. Fuster, 'El ben enamorat i el mal enamorat' in Obres completes, II (1968).
G.W.R.

Marchena Ruiz de Cueto, José (*Utrera 1768; †Madrid 1821), Spanish poet. He took religious Orders but, imbued with Encyclopaedist ideas, abandoned his career. He took part in the French Revolution, was persecuted by Robespierre, but under Bonaparte became secretary to General

Moreau and Murat's protégé. He fled to France with the defeated Napoleonic army but in 1820 returned to Spain, to die a poor and forgotten man. He was such a good Latinist that his forged 'discovered fragment' of the Satyricon was taken for Petronius* by all German scholars. He did good translations of Molière* and Voltaire*. The best of his visionary poems is the beautiful Oda a Cristo crucificado, where the religious theme is chiefly treated from a human point of view. Marchena is a good poet, but the ideological and political tendencies which appear in most of his work handicap, and at times kill, the poet in him.

Obras (ed. M. Menéndez y Pelayo, with intro., 2 vols, Seville, 1892-96).

E. Alarcos, 'El Abate M. en Salamanca' in Homenaje a M. Pidal, II (1925); R. S. Schevill, 'El Abate M. and French thought of the 18th century' in Rev. Litt. Comparée, XVI (1936).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Marchetti, GIOVANNI (*Senigallia 26 VIII 1790; †Bologna 2 III 1852), Italian poet. His best-known work is Una notte di Dante (1838), a poem in terza rima, recounting a meeting between Dante* and Castruccio Castracane, who converse on the misfortunes of Italy and the hopes for her liberation. He wrote also a commentary on Dante's Inferno and an interpretation of the allegorical content.

Poesie nuovamente pubblicate di G. M. (ed. R. Borgognoni, 1878).

L. Grilli, 'Di G. M. e dell'opera sua' in Nuova Antologia (1 Dec. 1925; with biog.). B.R.

Marchetti, GIUSEPPE (*Gemona 1902; †Udine 1966), Friulian philologist and historian. A gifted writer and profound scholar, his grammatical work is of prime importance in establishing a Friulian literary language.

Lineamenti di grammatica friulana (Udine, 1952, 1967); Risultive (anthology; ibid., 1955); La scultura lignea nel Friuli (Milan, 1956); Il Friuli—uomini e tempi (Udine, 1959); Lis predicis dal muini (ibid., 1965, 1966, 1968); Letaris ai furlans (ibid., 1966).

D. Virgili, 'Scritti di G. M.' in Sot la nape, IV (1966); G. Nicoletti, 'Commemorazione di G. M.' in Atti dell'Accad. della Deputazione di Storia Patria (Udine, 1966); Group 'Risultive', 'G. M.' in Quaderni di Cultura, IV.8 (1966-67); D. Virgili, 'La figura e l'opera di G. M.' in Atti dell'Accad. di Scienze, Lettere e Arti di Udine (1969). L.C.

Marchi, EMILIO DE: see De Marchi, EMILIO.

Marchionne DI COPPO DI STEFANO BUONAIUTI (*Florence 1336; †ibid. 7VIII 1385), Italian chronicler; Florentine statesman and diplomat;

Prior (1379). He wrote (1378-85) a Cronaca fiorentina, a robust chronicle of events from the Creation until his own day. He retold the history of Florence, following Villani* up to 1300; the more valuable part of the work (used by Machiavelli*) is that which deals with the revolution of the Ciampi and the turbulent period 1348 to 1385 when Marchionne draws principally on his own extensive experience of public affairs.

La Cronaca fiorentina (ed. N. Rodolico, 1903); Cronisti del Trecento (ed. R. Palmarocchi, 1935).

F. Foffani, 'La cronaca fiorentina di M. di C. S.' in Ricerche letterarie (1897); A. Panella, 'Per la biografia del cronista M.' in Archivio storico ital., LXXXVIII (1930). M.W.

Marcotte, GILLES (*Sherbrooke, Quebec 8 XII 1925), Canadian novelist and critic. He has worked as literary critic for Montreal's Le Devoir, television producer, researcher for the National Film Board, literary director of La Presse, and now combines teaching French at l'Université de Montréal with writing and collaborating on Radio-Canada literary programmes. His work is noted for its intellectual acumen and perceptiveness.

Une littérature qui se fait (1962); Présence de la critique (1966); Le temps des poètes (1970).—NOVELS: Le poids de Dieu (1962; The Burden of God, tr. E. Abbott, 1964); Retour à Coolbrook (1965).

A. Thério, 'Présence de la critique de G. M.' in Livres et Auteurs canadiens (1966). R.Su.

Marcus Aurelius: see Aurelius, MARCUS.

Marcus Diaconus (fl. early 5th century), Greek hagiographer. Native of Asia Minor, copyist by profession, close friend and biographer of Porphyrius, Bishop of Gaza. This life is a priceless circumstantial account of the work of the Church in a pagan city, but has unfortunately been touched up by a later hand.

H. Grégoire and M. A. Kugener, Marc le Diacre: Vie de Porphyre (1930; with Fr. tr.); G. F. Hill, The Life of Porphyry of Gaza by Mark the Deacon (1913); P. Peeters, 'La vie géorgienne de S. Porphyre de Gaza' in Analecta Bollandiana, LIX (1941). R.B.

Marechal, LEOPOLDO (*1900; †1970); Argentinian poet and novelist. He was an Ultraist in the 1920s when he published Días como flechas (1925) and Odas para el hombre y la mujer (1929). His second period began with Laberinto de amor (1935). He is, however, best known for his novel Adán Buenos-ayres (1948), in which the story of a man in Buenos Aires becomes a spiritual search which has analogies with the Dantean quest. He has since published many other collections of poetry including Heptamerón (1966) and a novel following the pattern of Socratic dialogue, El banquete de Severo Arcángelo (1965). J.F.

MARENCO, CARLO (*Cassolunovo di Lomellina 1800; †Savona 1846), Italian tragedian. Medieval Italian history, especially of the time of Dante*, formed the subject of many of his dramas, of which the best known is Pia de' Tolomei (1837). Other successful plays were Buondelmonte e gli Amidei (1827), Corso Donati (1830), Ezzelino III (1832) and Arnaldo da Brescia, which preceded Niccolini's* drama of the same name.

Tragedie (4 vols, 1837–44).

A. Ponte, Arnaldo da Brescia nelle due tragedie di G. B. Niccolini e C. M. (1880); E. Orlandi, Il teatro di C. M. (1900). B.R.

MARENCO, LEOPOLDO (*Ceva 8 XI 1831; †Milan 30 IV 1899), Italian dramatist, son of Carlo Marenco. His tragedies, excessively sentimental even by 19th-century Italian standards, were, like his father's, based on stories from medieval history or legend. Of his comedies, Il falconiere di Pietra Ardena (1870) is best known.

C. Levi, Il Teatro (1919); C. Pellizzi, Le Lettere del nostro secolo (1929). B.R.

MARGIVAL, NICOLE DE (fl. 1300), French poet, precursor of Machaut*. His principal work, Le Dit de la Panthère, is a narrative poem written in the allegorical and didactic style of the *Roman* de la Rose*. It includes examples of the short lyric forms (BALLADE, RONDEAU, VIRELAY etc.).

Le Dit de la Panthère d'Amors (ed. H. Todd, 1883).

E. Hoepffner, 'Les poésies lyriques de N. de M.' in Romania, XLVI (1920). A.H.D.

MARGUERITE d'Angoulême or DE NAVARRE (also DE VALOIS), DUCHESS OF ALENÇON (*Angoulême 11 IV 1492; ∞1509 Charles, Duke of Alençon, ∞1527 Henri d'Albret, King of Navarre; †Odos, nr Tarbes 21 XII 1549), French writer and patroness of letters. She was the affectionate sister of François I, had strong Reformist leanings and protected writers and scholars with Protestant tendencies, as Calvin*, Marot*, B. des* Périers. Her Heptaméron, planned in imitation of the Decameron and unfinished, contains 72 short stories ostensibly told on seven days by an aristocratic group isolated by floods in an abbey in the Pyrenees. Many were anecdotes of contemporary life, interspersed with sentimental and moral discussions. Her poetry is personal, obscure, sometimes allegorical, often mystic and strongly imbued with Platonism.

VERSE: Le Miroir de l'âme pécheresse (1531; A Godly Meditation of the Soul, tr. Elizabeth of England, 1548, repub. 1897); Les Marguerites de la

Marguerite des princesses (1547); Les poésies de M. de Navarre (ed. F. Frank, 4 vols, 1880); Les dernières poésies de M. de Navarre (ed. A. Lefranc, 1895); Poésies inédites (ed. P. Jourda in Rev. du 16e siècle, 1926–30).—PLAYS: La Nativité (ed. P. Jourda, 1939); Théâtre profane (ed. V. L. Saulnier, 1946).—STORIES: L'Heptaméron (1558–59; ed. M. François, 1943; ed. Y. Le Hir, 1967; tr. A. Machen, 1886; tr. J. S. Chartres, 1894); Œuvres choisies (2 vols, New York, 1968).

P. Jourda, M. d'A. (1930) and Une princesse de la Renaissance, M. d'A. (1932); E. V. Telle, M. d'A. et la Querelle des Femmes (1937); L. Febvre, Autour de l' 'Heptaméron' (1944). G.B.

MARGUERITE BROTHERS: PAUL (*Lagh'ouat, Algeria 1 II 1860; †Hossegor 30 XII 1918) and VICTOR (*Blida 1 XII 1866; †Monestier 23 III 1942), French novelists. They were the sons of a general who was killed in 1870. Both went into the regular army, which Paul left in 1881, Victor in 1896. Paul began independently as a Naturalistic writer, but from 1896 to 1908 wrote solely in collaboration with his brother. Their joint output includes a group of novels on the events in 1870–71 (Une époque, 4 vols, 1898–1904), a volume in support of the feminist movement (Femmes nouvelles, 1899) and children's stories (Poum, 1897). After Paul's death, Victor wrote two books which provoked outcries of moral indignation—Les coupables (1922) and La garçonne (1925).

PAUL: Jours d'épreuve (1889); La force des choses (1890); Ma grande (1892); La tourmente (1893).—VICTOR: Appel aux consciences (1925).—TOGETHER: Les deux vies (1902); Histoire de la guerre de 1870 (1903); Zette (children's book; 1903) Le prisme (1905).

S. Barreaux, P. et V. M. (1909).

M.G.; J.P.R.

MARIANA, JUAN DE (*Talavera de la Reina ?1535; †Toledo 1624), Spanish historian and learned writer. He was the illegitimate son of a cleric. He entered the Jesuit Order in 1554, was priested in 1561, taught in Rome, Loreto, Sicily and Paris and lived in Toledo from 1574. He examined and finally approved Montano's polyglot Bible. His Latin treatise on kingship (1599) contained views on tyrannicide which alarmed European opinion after the assassination of Henry IV. The Latin Tractatus VII (1609) contains an attack on the popular theatre and a work on money which caused his imprisonment. His masterpiece, a history of Spain in 30 books, was published in Latin 1592–1605; his own Spanish translation of it in 1601. He based his narrative on earlier chronicles, making some attempt to deny fabulous elements in them but not investigating special points. Its chief merit is its magnificent prose, description, speeches and moral reflections. It closes with Ferdinand and Isabella.

LATIN WORKS: Historiae de rebus Hispaniae (1592–1605); De rege et regis institutione (1599); Libri de regimine societatis (1635).—Scholia in Vetus et Novum Testamentum (1620).—Historia general de España (3 vols, 1780–1804; 9 vols, Valencia, 1783–96; 20 vols, 1817–22; History of Spain, tr. Capt. J. Stevens, 1699).—Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXX, XXXI.

G. Cirot, M. historien (1905); M. Ballesteros Gaibrois, El P. J. de M. La vida de un sabio (1944). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Marichalar, ANTONIO, MARQUÉS DE MONTERA, (*Logroño 1893), Spanish man of letters. Formed in the school of Ortega* y Gasset, he has written good essays on several contemporary figures in English, French and American literature. He is a specialist on 16th-century history and autobiography. His most famous work is an excellent biography of the Duque de Osuna.

Riesgo y ventura del duque de Osuna (1930; The Perils and Fortunes of the Duke of Osuna, tr. H. de Onís, Philadelphia, 1932); Mentira desnuda (essays; 1933); El cortesano (1942); Tres figuras del XVI (1945); Las cadenas del duque de Alba (1947); Un poeta navarro del XVII (1947); Julían Romero (1952). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Marie de France, French poet, possibly Mary, Abbess of Shaftesbury (from 1181 or before to 1216), the natural daughter of Geoffrey IV of Anjou (†1151). The language of the works suggests insular or western French origin. Her importance rests mainly on her Lais (before 1189), short narrative poems based on folk-lore themes and containing a strong love interest, often of a pathetic or tragic kind. Marie herself alleges that some of her themes had already been treated in 'Breton lays'. Foulet and others regard the allusions to the Bretons as mere artifice and the Celtic connections as unimportant. For the Middle Ages, however, a 'Breton lay' means a short narrative poem akin to Marie's Lais in subject, treatment and setting. Chaucer's* Frankleyn's Tale is a fine example.

Lais (eds: K. Warnke, 3rd ed. 1925; A. Ewert, 1944; mod. Fr. adapt. P. Tuffrau, 1925; cont. 12 poems of undoubted authenticity and Guingamor, which may quite possibly be M.'s); Fables (later than the Lais; ed. K. Warnke, 1898; sel. ed. A. Ewert and R. C. Johnston, 1944); Espurgatoire Saint Patrice (after 1189; ed. K. Warnke, 1938).

IDENTIFICATION: C. J. Fox in Eng. Hist. Rev., XXV (1910; Abbess of Shaftesbury); E. Winkler, Französische Dichter des Mittelalters, II: M. de F. (1918; Duchess of Champagne); E. Levi, 'Studi sulle opera di Maria di Francia' in Archivum Romanicum, V (1921; Abbess of Reading); U. T. Holmes in Stud. in Philol., XXIX (1932; daughter of Waleran de Meulan).—J. Bédier, 'Les lais de M. de F.' in Rev. des deux mondes (1891); L. Foulet, 'M. de F. et les lais bretons' in Zeitschrift für romanische Philol., XXIX (1905); E. Hoepffner, Les Lais de M. de F. (1935). F.W.

Marienklage ('Plaint of the Virgin'), a Middle High and Low German Miracle play preserved in three versions. The High German Wolfenbüttel and Trier MSS, closely related to each other, are far eclipsed by the one named after the Holstein monastery of Bordesholm. The Low German Bordesholm Marienklage is not only the most substantial version, preserving the lyrical character of its sources and concentrating on the Holy Virgin, but is also outstanding for its musical score. The MS adds interesting details about the staging and performance.

Sündenfall und [Wolfenbütteler] M. (ed. O. Schönmeyer, 1855); G. Kühl, 'Die Bordesholmer M.' in Niederdt. Jahrb., XXIV (1899). G.C.

Mariken van Nieumeghen, Dutch Miracle play in which the scenes are linked together by prose texts that can easily be left out in a performance; transmitted as a CHAPBOOK; originated c. 1500. The heroine is a girl who lives with the Devil for seven years and is then converted by witnessing a pageant. When the Devil tries to destroy her she is miraculously saved by the Virgin. The unknown author was probably a rhetorician from Antwerp (and not Anna Bijns* as Van Mierlo* tried to demonstrate). The play has strong roots in its own time, the end of the Middle Ages, but also points to the Renaissance by the concrete and even realistic action and by the direct and delicate way of exploring the psychology of the personages. The play was—perhaps by way of a complete prose version—translated into English by Jan van Doesborch* (Antwerp, 1518 or 1519).

Eds: W. H. Beuken (1931); C. Kruyskamp (1966); facs. of the ed. of Willem Vorsterman [Antwerp, 1518–19 or 1514–15] (ed. A. L. Verhofstede et al., 2nd ed., Antwerp, 1951).—A Marvelous History of Mary of Nimmegen (tr. H. M. Ayres with intro. A. J. Barnouw, The Hague, 1924); facs. ed. H. M. Ayres and A. J. Barnouw (1932).

Complete biblio. W. van Eeghem in Versl. en Med. Vlaamse Acad. (1942); L. Roose in Jaarboek De Fonteyne (1950; against attrib. to Anna Bijns by Van Mierlo); G. W. Wolthuis, Duivels-kunsten en Sprookjesgestalten (1952); P. Brachin in Études Germaniques, XVII (1962); W. A. F. Janssen, 'Studies over M. van N.' in Leuvense Bijdragen, LVI (1967).—A. J. Barnouw in Germanic Rev., VI (1931; on the Eng. chapbook). A.v.E.

Marinetti, FILIPPO TOMMASO (*Alexandria 22 XII 1876; †Bellagio 2 XII 1944), Italian novelist, poet and playwright. Famous as the founder of FUTURISM and then as an exponent of 'Fascist culture', Marinetti was more of a literary propagandist than a creative artist. His works have little intrinsic merit—but Futurism, by its hostility to traditional forms and styles and its insistence on modernity and experimentation, helped to clear away much rhetoric and restrictive conventionality.

NOVELS: Mafarka il futurista (1910); Otto anime in una bomba (1919).—VERSE: La conquête des étoiles (Paris, 1902); Destruction (ibid., 1904); La ville charnelle (ibid., 1908); Canto eroi e macchine della guerra Mussoliniana (1942).—ESSAYS: with others, Manifesti del futurismo (4 vols, 1919); Guerra sola igiene del mondo (1915).—PLAYS: Le roi Bombance (Paris, 1905); Tamburo di fuoco (1932); Teatro (3 vols, 1960).

W. Vaccari, Vita e tumulti di F. T. M. (1959); E. Falqui, Bibliografia e iconografia del futurismo (1959). B.M.

Marinković, RANKO (*Vis 22 II 1913), Croatian prose writer and critic. After University in Zagreb, Marinković began publishing in Zagreb in 1931 in the journal Mladost. For long connected with the Croatian National Theatre, he now lectures in Dramatic Art at the Academy of Drama. His best writing centres round the Dalmatian coast and islands which he knows well and he has an exceptional talent for satirical, often 'black' humour. His favourite characters are insignificant people of traditional background faced with immensely incongruous situations, but his novel Kiklop (1965) also treats the theme of the individual caught in the monstrous toils of a large city and its closed society, and struggling against the de-humanizing processes of modern civilization. Marinković's style of writing is complex, a kind of modern baroque combining reality and fantasy, author's interpolations on the characters and the development of the story, dramatic dialogue and tragicomic anti-climax, but he finds difficulty in maintaining sufficient continuity for a full-length novel and his short stories are his best work.

STORIES: Proze (1948); Ni braća, ni rođaci (1949); Oko božje (1949); Pod balkonima (1953); Ruke (1953, 1955, 1962, 1964, 1965); Poniženje Sokrata (1959); Karneval (1964). B.J.

Marino (also Marini), GIOVAN BATTISTA (*Naples 18 X 1569; †ibid. 25 III 1625), Italian poet. From 1599 Marino was employed in Rome by ecclesiastical dignitaries; from 1608 to 1615 he was in Turin; a quarrel with Gaspare Murtola, the poet, fought by means of sonnets, pistol shots and invectives, led to his imprisonment. He then sought the protection of Maria de' Medici and Louis XIII (1615–23). He completed his main work, the mythological poem Adone, in Paris, and returned to Italy in 1623, rich and famous.

Adone (20 cantos; 45,000 lines) tells of the love of Venus and Adonis; the thin plot, interwoven with numberless digressions, is studied with echoes from infinite sources, ancient and modern, and treated with supreme technical skill; the lavish use of metaphors, hyperboles and verbal virtuosity is a prominent feature of this poem as well as of his lyrical poetry. Marino was and is regarded as the most representative Italian writer of his age and the poets who followed in his wake came to be described as 'Marinisti'. (See BAROQUE.)

L'Adone (Paris, 1623; best ed. G. Balsamo-Crivelli, 1922; sel. tr. G. H. M. Priest, 1967); Le Rime (1602); La Lira (2 vols, 1608–14); Epitalami (Paris, 1616); La Murtoleide (Francofort [Italy], 1619); La Sampogna (Paris, 1620); La Galeria (1620; ed. G. Battelli, 1926); Egloghe Boscherecce (1620); La Strage degli Innocenti (1632; ed. G. Pozzi, 1960); The Slaughter of the Innocents by Herod, tr. R. T., 1675); Epistolario (1628; ed. M. Guglielminetti, 1966).—Poesie varie (ed. B. Croce, 1913); Opere scelte (ed. G. Getto, 1949); M. e i Marinisti (ed. G. G. Ferrero, 1954); Opere (sel. ed. A. Asor-Rosa, 1967).

G. F. Damiani, Sopra la poesia del Cavalier M. (1899); A. Borzelli, Il Cavalier G. B. M. (rev. ed. 1927); C. Calcaterra, Il Parnaso in rivolta (1940); F. J. Warnke, 'M. and the English Metaphysicals' in Stud. in the Renaissance, II (1955); J. V. Mirollo, The Poet of the Marvelous, G. B. M. (1963); M. Guglielminetti, Tecnica e invenzione nell'opera di G. B. M. (1964); E. Taddeo, 'Genesi, cronologia e metrica degli idilli della "Sampogna"' in Studi Secenteschi, IV (1964); R. Simon, 'Notes sur quelques lectures de G. B. M.', ibid., V (1965); G. Cerboni Baiardi, 'Storia e struttura della prima lirica mariniana', ibid., VI (1966); W. T. Elwert, La poesia lirica italiana del Seicento (1967); C. Colombo, Cultura e tradizione nell' "Adone" di G. B. M. (1967); S. Warman, 'The subject-matter and treatment of M.'s images' in Studi Secenteschi, X (1970). U.L.

Maritain, JACQUES (*Paris 18 XI 1882; ∞1904 Raïssa Oumansoff), French philosophical writer. Maritain was born of Protestant parents, and became a Roman Catholic in 1906, under the influence of Bloy*. In a philosophical war against Bergson* and the scientists, he championed orthodox Thomism, but renewed his interpretation of St Thomas* in the light of modern thought. His aesthetic theory owes something to both Valéry* and Cocteau*. Politically he has moved from the Action Française to democracy. From 1945 to 1948 he was French ambassador to the Holy See.

La philosophie bergsonienne (1914); Éléments de philosophie (2 vols, 1920–23; An Introduction to Philosophy, tr. E. I. Watkin, 1930); Art et Scholastique (1920); Trois réformateurs (1925; Eng. tr. 1928); Primauté du spirituel (1927; The Things That Are Not Caesar's, tr. J. F. Scanlan, 1930); De la philosophie chrétienne (1933); Science et sagesse (1935); Frontières de la poésie (1935); Humanisme intégral (1936; True Humanism, tr. M. R. Adamson, 1938); Christianisme et démocratie (New York, 1943; Eng. tr. D. C. Anson, 1945); Principes

d'une politique humaniste (New York, 1944); Pour la justice (1945); Les grandes amitiés (1947); L'intuition créatrice dans l'art et dans la poésie (1966).

Raïssa Maritain, Les grandes amitiés (New York, 1941); C. A. Focher, The Philosophy of J. M. (1953); H. Bars, M. en notre temps (1959); M. F. Daly, Natural Knowledge of God in the Philosophy of J. M. (1966). M.G.; J.P.R.

Marivaux, PIERRE CARLET DE CHAMBLAIN DE (*Paris 4 II 1688; ∞ 1717 Colombe Ballogne; †ibid. 12 II 1763), French playwright and novelist. He was the son of a successful banker and his earliest writings are little more than the hobby of a young man of independent means. The turning-point came with the loss of his fortune in the Law bankruptcy in 1722 when he was obliged to earn his living. He turned out a large number of successful comedies which are still performed, and two impressive but unfinished novels. He was elected to the French Academy in 1743. His dramatic work is a reaction against the 'reason' of the 17th-century dramatists and he explores with remarkable insight the neglected bypaths of sensibility. Each of his plays is a drama of discovery, a stripping away of the subterfuges and conventions which are collectively described as amour-propre until the real person is revealed in spite of himself. The final discovery comes as a sudden illumination as when the heroine of his finest comedy, Le Jeu de l'amour et du hasard, exclaims: 'Ah! je vois clair dans mon cœur'. The emotional problems are only solved by the 'ruses', 'stratagems', 'inconstancies', 'false confidences', 'games' and 'chances' which give the plays their titles. In his novels, La Vie de Marianne (1731–41) and Le Paysan parvenu (1735–36), he gives a racy picture of French life which though more perceptive have certain affinities with the contemporary picaresque novel in England.

PLAYS: Annibal (1720); La Surprise de l'amour (1722); La Double inconstance (1723); Le Prince travesti (1724); La Fausse suivante, Le Dénouement imprévu (1724); L'île des esclaves, L'Héritier de village (1725); La Seconde surprise de l'amour (1727); Le Jeu de l'amour et du hasard (1730); Le Triomphe de l'amour (1732); Les Serments indiscrets, L'École des mères (1732); L'Heureux stratagème (1733); La Méprise (1734); La Mère confidente (1735); Le Legs (1736); Les Fausse confidences (1737); La Joie imprévue (1738); Les Sincères, L'Épreuve (1739).—VARIOUS: Le Spectateur français (1722–23); Le Cabinet du philosophe (1734).—Théâtre complet, Romans (ed. M. Arland, 2 vols, 1949).

G. Larroumet, M., sa vie et ses œuvres (1882); G. Deschamps, M. (1897); R. K. Jamieson, M., A Study in Sensibility (1941); C. Roy, Lire M. (1947); M. Arland, M. (1950); P. Gazagne, M. par lui-même (1954); F. Deloffre, M. et le marivaudage (1955); M. J. Durry, À propos de M. (1960);

J. B. Ratermanis, Étude sur le comique dans le théâtre de M. (1961); E. J. H. Greene, M. (1965). M.T.

Markandaya, KAMALA, pseud. of MRS KAMALA PURNIYA TAYLOR (*1924), Indian novelist. Of the family of Purniya, who was chief minister to the Prince of Mysore in Tippu Sultan's time, she is married to an Englishman and lives in England. She was educated in Madras and worked on newspapers. Starting with journalistic facility and feminine preciosity, she has through the years become a competent fiction writer: her recent novels show a conscious attempt to seek deep levels of response.

Nectar in a Sieve (1954); Some Inner Fury (1956); A Silence of Desire (1960); Possession (1963); A Handful of Rice (1966). C.D.N.

Mark (Eugenicus), Bishop of Ephesus (fl. first half of 15th century), Byzantine theologian. He opposed the union of the Greek and Latin Churches negotiated in the Council of Ferrara-Florence. Some of his work remains unedited.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CLX–CLXI (1866; with Lat. tr.).—J. Gill, Personalities of the Council of Florence and Other Essays (1964).

J.M.H. (R.B.)

Markham, GERVASE or JERVIS (*?Cottam ?1568; [London 3 II 1637], English poet, dramatist, translator and writer on agricultural topics. Markham began his career as a soldier, but later became a prolific writer. He is best known for his writings on the management of animals, particularly horses.

VERSE: The most Honourable Tragedy of Sir Richard Grinville, Knight (1595; ed. E. Arber, 1871).—OTHER WORKS: A discourse of Horsemanshippe (1593); Cavalrice, or the English Horseman (1607); A Way to get Wealth (1631–38); The Faithful Farrier (1635). J.B.B.

Markish, PERETZ (*Polonoya 1895; †12 VIII 1952), Yiddish poet, playwright and novelist. He published his first poems in 1917. In 1921 he left the Soviet Union, and travelled widely, but returned in 1926 to become the centre of controversy because the individualistic tone of some of his writings was interpreted as 'nationalistic'. Nevertheless, his critics finally recognized him as a foremost post-revolutionary Soviet Yiddish writer; he was awarded the Order of Lenin (1939). His prolific output during the Second World War culminated in his long poem, Milkhome (2 vols, Moscow, 1948; New York, 1956). During the 'liquidation' of all Yiddish cultural institutions, Markish was arrested (1949) and subsequently executed. Since his 'rehabilitation' some of his earlier works and his long novel, In Trot fun doires, have been re-issued.

VERSE: Stam (1920); Pust un pass (1920); Volhin (1921); Inmitn veg (1922); Di kupe (1922); Farklepte Tsiferbleter (1926); Nit gedayget (1931; 2nd ed. 1939); Vokhn-teg (1931); Lieder (1933).—PROSE: Dor ain Dor ois (1929); Ains oifains (1934); Oifgang oif'n Dniepr (1937); Trot fun Doires (1965).—Piesn (coll. plays; 1933). J.S.

Markov, EVGENY L'VOVICH (*Kursk province 1835; †Voronezh 1903), Russian author and champion of the squire's 'rural' mission against the baleful influence of the town. His two novels, Barchuki (1875) and Chernožemye polya (1878), show an aggressive class-consciousness. He also wrote travel sketches about Crimea, Caucasus, Palestine etc.

V. Litvinov, Biografiya Markova (1904). J.L.

Marko Vovchok: see Vovchok, MARKO.

Mark Twain, pseud. of SAMUEL LANGHORNE CLEMENS (*Florida, Mo. 30 XI 1835; †1870 Olivia Langdon; †Redding, Conn. 21 IV 1910), American writer of novels, travel sketches and stories. The adventures of his boyhood in Hannibal, Missouri, on the banks of the Mississippi, provided the background for his greatest works. He left school at an early age, became a printer's apprentice, a Mississippi steamboat pilot, and later a frontier journalist. His humorous sketches gained him recognition; popularity was assured with The Innocents Abroad (1869), his digressive 'debunking' account of a tour to the Mediterranean and Holy Land. Certain critics claim that his marriage into puritan, conservative surroundings frustrated his native genius, while others hold that his writing develops naturally from the early frontier humour to the later bitter satire. He attacked the social evils of Tudor England in The Prince and The Pauper (1882) and satirized feudal tyranny in A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court (1889). His most significant works—The Adventures of Tom Sawyer (1876), Life on the Mississippi (1883), The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn (1885)—relate picaresque events in an exuberant native idiom, establishing what has come to be called the 'vernacular tradition' in American writing. Sudden bankruptcy drove him to make a world lecture tour, and with the loss of his wife and two daughters, his writings show a deterministic outlook and deep pessimism.

The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County and Other Sketches (1867); M. T.'s (Burlesque) Autobiography (1871); Roughing It (1872); The Gilded Age (1873; with C. D. Warner); M. T.'s Sketches: New and Old (1875); A Tramp Abroad (1880); The American Claimant (1892); Merry Tales (1892); Tom Sawyer Abroad (1894); The Tragedy of Pudd'nhead Wilson (1894); Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc (1896); Following the Equator (1897); The Man That Corrupted Hadleyburg (1900); Christian Science (1907); Is Shake- peare Dead? (1909); The Mysterious Stranger (1916); What Is Man? and Other Essays (1917).—The Writing of M. T. (ed. A. B. Paine, 37 vols, 1922–25); M. T.–Howells Letters: The Correspondence of S. L. C. and William D. Howells, 1869–1910 (ed. H. N. Smith and W. M. Gibson, 2 vols, 1960); The M. T. Papers (1967– ).

A. B. Paine, M. T., A Biography (3 vols, 1912); B. De Voto, M. T.'s America (1932) and M. T. at Work (1942); V. W. Brooks, The Ordeal of M. T. (1920); W. Blair, M. T. and Huck Finn (1960); H. N. Smith, M. T.: The Development of a Writer (1962); J. M. Cox, M. T.: The Fate of Humor (1966); J. Kaplan, Mr Clemens and M. T. (1966). H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Marlinsky, ALEXANDER: see Bestuzhev-Marlinsky, ALEXANDER ALEXANDROVICH.

Marlitt, EUGENIE, pseud. of EUGENIE JOHN (*Arnstadt 5 XII 1825; †ibid. 22 VI 1887), German popular novelist, a singer till deafness cut short her career. Her skilfully contrived best-sellers, published in the Gartenlaube, greatly increased its circulation and were enjoyed chiefly by women.

Goldelse (1867; Eng. tr. A. L. Wister, 1868); Das Geheimnis der alten Mamsell (2 vols, 1868; Eng. tr. idem, 1868); Die Reichsgräfin Gisela (2 vols, 1870; Eng. tr. idem, 1879); Die zweite Frau (2 vols, 1874; Eng. tr. idem, 1874).—Gesammelte Romane und Novellen (10 vols, 1888–90).

J. Pröls, Zur Geschichte der Gartenlaube (1903). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Marlowe, CHRISTOPHER (*Canterbury II 1564; †Deptford 30 V 1593), English poet and dramatist, who went from King's School, Canterbury, with a Matthew Parker scholarship to Corpus Christi College, Cambridge (B.A., 1584; M.A., 1587). In the years between the two degrees Marlowe was apparently abroad in government service, as the Privy Council intervened with the University defending his absence. From 1586 he lived in London, writing verse and plays and mixing with men of letters as one of the 'University Wits'. There is evidence to explain his reputation among contemporaries for atheism; at the time of his death a warrant had been issued for his arrest. Nevertheless, the exact circumstances of his life at the time of the tavern brawl in which he was killed by Ingram Frizer are elusive, and he may have had no more than strong anti-Christian and anti-clerical views. Marlowe's familiarity with Kyd*, Herriot, Royden and the circle round Sir Walter Raleigh* has been interpreted by some as evidence of the existence of an atheistic 'school of night' which has not won general credence. His dramatic work has overshadowed his genius as a lyricist and narrative poet. In the lyrics, Marlowe has the Elizabethan command of rhythms and metre, while his Hero and Leander (1598) does not sacrifice structure and exposition to the demands of imagery and skilled figurative patternings. The versatility which he shows in his dramatic blank verse has been for long obscured by ignorance of Elizabethan methods of recitation on and off the stage. But it is now becoming clear that as a dramatist he succeeds in virtue of the flexibility of his verse, the coherence of his expression, especially in imagery which communicates a sustained conception of character and theme.

B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Tamburlaine the Great (2 pts, 1590; ed. U. M. Ellis-Fermor, 1930); Edward II (1594; ed. H. B. Charlton and R. D. Waller, 1933, rev. F. N. Lees, 1955); Dido Queen of Carthage (1594) and The Massacre at Paris (1600; both ed. H. J. Oliver, 1968); Dr Faustus (1604, 1616; ed. J. D. Jump, 1962); The Jew of Malta (1633; ed. H. S. Bennett, 1931).—The Plays of C. M. (ed. R. Gill, 1971).—The Poems (ed. M. MacLure, 1968).

S. A. Tannenbaum, A Concise Biblio. (1937); R. C. Johnson, C. M. 1946–1965 (Elizabethan Biblio. Supps, VI; 1967).—J. L. Hotson, The Death of C. M. (1925); U. M. Ellis-Fermor, C. M. (1927); F. S. Boas, C. M. (1940); P. H. Kocher, C. M. (1946); F. P. Wilson, M. and the Early Shakespeare (1953); H. Levin, The Overreacher (1954); D. Cole, Suffering and Evil in the Plays of C. M. (1962); E. Waith, The Herculean Hero (1962); J. B. Steane, M., A Critical Study (1964); Twentieth Century Views on M. (ed. C. Leech, 1964). T.P.M.

Marmion, SHAKERLEY (*?Aynho, Northants 1603; †London 1639), English poet and dramatist, educated at Thame and at Wadham College, Oxford (1618–25). One of the 'sons of Ben' (Jonson*), Marmion served in the Low Countries, was involved in a stabbing affray, and just before his death joined Suckling's* cavalry troop. His allegory Cupid and Psyche in heroic verse runs on expansively in a negligent but for the most part inoffensive manner.

Cupid and Psyche (1637; ed. G. Saintsbury in Minor Poets of the Caroline Period, II, 1906; ed. A. J. Nearing, 1944); The Dramatic Works of S. M. (ed. J. Maidment and W. H. Logan, 1875).

A. Hoffman, Das Psyche-Märchen des Apuleius in der englischen Literature (1908); G. E. Bentley, Jacobean and Caroline Stage, IV (1956).

B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Mármol, JOSÉ (*Buenos Aires 4 XII 1818; †12 VIII 1871), Argentinian writer. As a poet he was a Romantic, Spanish rather than French in inspiration; in his political poems he indulged a vein of extreme invective; in his nature poetry he had a gift for description. El Peregrino is an imitation of Childe Harold. His novel Amalia (1851), one of the best-known works of Argentinian literature, is a most vivid transcript in neo-Romantic terms of the barbarities of life in Buenos Aires under Rosas.

A Rosas el 25 de Mayo (1843); Cantos del Peregrino (1846; intro. J. M. Gutiérrez, 1917).—Armonías (1851; intro. C. Muzzio Sáenz Peña, 1917).—Poesías (3 vols, 1854–55).—Obras poéticas y dramáticas (Paris, 1875); Obras poéticas (1889); Poesías escogidas (crit. ed. C. Oyuela, 1922).

M. Suárez-Murias, La novela romántica hispano-americana (New York, 1963). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Marmontel, JEAN-FRANÇOIS (*Bort, Corrèze 11 VII 1723; †Gaillon, Normandy ?31 XII 1799), French novelist and dramatist. His 'philosophic' fiction has dated because of its too openly expressed concern with contemporary moral and social questions. He preached virtue in his Contes Moraux (1761 and 1801), tolerance in his novel Bélisaire (1766) and anti-slavery in Les Incas ou La Destruction de l'Empire du Pérou (1777). He edited the Mercur de France (formerly the Mercur Galant). Earlier in his career he wrote a number of tragedies (Denis le tyran, 1748; Cléopâtre, 1750).

Œuvres complètes (19 vols, 1818); Mémoires d'un père (ed. M. Tournoux, 3 vols, 1891).

S. Lenel, M. (1902).

G.B.

DER Marner (fl. 1230–70), Swabian cleric turned itinerant poet and offering a varied repertoire of MINNESANG, didactic and narrative verse. He accuses his aristocratic rival in the Spruch, Reinmar* von Zweter, of stealing musical settings: he surpasses him in formal talent, learning (he wrote some Latin poems) and rhetorical power, but not in character. His career was evidently luckless. Hugo* von Trimberg admired him.

Ed. P. Strauch (1876; rev. H. Brackert, 1965); Dt. Liederdichter (ed. K. Bartsch and W. Golther, 1928).

W. Meyer, Fragmenta Burana (1901); H. de Boor, Die dt. Lit. im späten Mittelalter (1962).

F.P.P.

Marnix van St Aldegonde, PHILIPS VAN (*Brussels 1540; †Leiden 15 XII 1598), Dutch theologian, poet and writer. He studied at Louvain, Paris and Dôle and after his conversion to Calvinism from 1560 to 1561 at Geneva. After serving in several official capacities he retired to his estate in West Souburg in 1585 until the States of Holland commissioned him to translate the Bible. He moved to Leiden, where he died while engaged in multifarious theological and literary work. In addition to a number of theological (polemic and dogmatic) works in Latin and French he wrote a famous satire on the Roman Catholic Church, Biencorff der H. Roomsche Kercke (1569), drafted in French, later extended and altered again into Tableau des différends de la Religion. His excellent translation of the Psalms (1580; 2nd ed. 1591), however, did not replace Dathenus'* less satisfactory one in the popular esteem. Whether Marnix is also the poet of the Wilhelmus is still uncertain. J.J.M.

P. Arents in Officieel Gedenkboek (1940) and 'Bijdrage tot de M.-Bibliographie' and 'Het Boeck der Psalmen Davids' in Miscellanea J. Gessler (1948); Biencorff (ed. A. Willems, 1858; ed. A. van Toorenbergen, 1862).—Œuvres de P. de M. (ed. E. Quinet, 3 vols, 1857; cont. by A. Lacroix, 2 vols, 1859–60); P. van M. van St. A., Godsdienstige en kerkelijke geschriften (ed. J. J. van Toorenbergen, 3 vols, 1871–78; extended by Marnixiana Anonyma, 1903).

G. Tjalma, P. van M. (1896); G. Oosterhof, La vie de M. et son 'Tableau' (1909); A. Elkan, P. van M., I (1910); A. A. van Schelven, M. van St. A. (1939); J. W. Tunderman, M. van St. A. en de subjectivistische stromingen in de 16e eeuw (?1942); W. A. Nolet, M. als theoloog (1948); W. A. P. Smit, 'Samenhang tussen de Psalmberijmingen van Utenhove, Datheen en M.' in Album Baur, II (1948); I. van Kalken and T. Jonckheere, M. van S. A. (1952); G. J. Sterck, Bronnen en samenstelling van M.'s Biencorff (1952); W. A. Ornée, De Zin in het Nederl. Proza en de Poëzie van P. van M. (1955); A. Gerlo, M. van S. A. (with anthol.; 1960); S. J. Lenselink in Nieuwe Taalgids, LX (1967).

J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Marot, CLÉMENT (*Cahors ?1496; †Turin ?IX 1544), French poet, son of Jean Marot*. Marot is an important transitional writer, continuing on the one hand the late medieval tradition of the French rhétoriqueurs and skilfully using such forms as the ballade, the rondeau and the chant royal; on the other hand, though not a profound scholar, he is attracted by the new humanism, is the first considerable French poet open to Italian influences and writes the earliest French sonnets. His influence dominates French poetry from c. 1525 until the advent of the PLÉIADE in c. 1550. His most interesting work is in his early collected poems, L'Adolescence Clémentine (1532–34), in his witty, often satirical Épigrammes and his occasional Épîtres, his poem L'Enfer (1542) inspired by the rigours of his imprisonment 16 years earlier, his editions of *Le Roman* de la Rose* (1529) and of Villon* (1532) and his metrical version of the Psalms (1541–43). Several times suspected of heresy, in spite of the protection of Marguerite* d'Angoulême and a period of favour at the court of François I, he finally fled to Geneva in 1542 and from there moved on to Savoy and Turin.

Œuvres complètes (ed. G. Guiffrey, R. Yve-Plessis and J. Plattard, 5 vols, 1875–1931); Poetic Works (crit. ed. C. A. Mayer, 5 vols, London, 1958 ff.); Psaumes (crit. ed. S. J. Lenselink, 1969).

P. Villey, M. et Rabelais (1923); P. A. Becker, C. M. (Munich, 1926); J. Vianey, Les Épîtres de M. (1935); J. Plattard, M. (1938); P. Jourda, M. (1967); V.-L. Saulnier, Les Élégiés de C. M. (1968); C. A. Mayer, C. M. (1969). G.B.

Marot, JEAN (*Caen c. 1465; †1526), French poet and chronicler. Secretary to Anne of Brittany (1506), he went to Italy with Louis XII and described in uninspired verse the expeditions to Genoa (1507) and Venice (1509). His son, Clément, succeeded him as valet extraordinaire to François I. He himself wrote fluently, and occasionally with humour, in the style and genres of the rhétoriqueurs.

Œuvres (ed. A. U. Coustelier, 1723); Un poème inédit de J. M. (ed. G. Guiffrey, 1860); L'Épître d'un complaignant l'abusif gouvernement du Pape (1511; ed. J. Colbert de Beaulieu in Scriptorium, III, 1949); La vrai disante advocate des dames (ed. A. de Montaiglon in Recueil de poésies des XVe et XVIe siècles, X, 1875); short extracts in Fleurs de Rhétorique (ed. K. Chesney, 1950).

L. Theureau, Étude sur la vie et les œuvres de J. M. (1873); A. Ehrlich, J. M.'s Leben und Werke (1902); H. Guy, Histoire de la poésie française au 16e siècle, I (1910); F. Joukovsky-Micha, 'Clément et J. M.' in Bibliothèque d'Humanisme et Renaissance, XXIX (1967). M.Y.

Maróthy-Šoltésová, ELENA (*Krupinà 6 I 1855; †1939), Slovak novelist of the realist school whose evocative talent also found successful expression in her autobiographical writings.

Proti prídu (novel; 1894).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Moje deti (1923–24; Mes enfants du berceau à la tombe, tr. J. Cádra, 1928).

J. K. Garaj, E. M. Š. (1939).

R.A.

Marotta, GIUSEPPE (*Naples 5 IV 1902; †ibid. 10 X 1963), Italian short-story writer and journalist. Marotta's books on Naples, consisting of stories and sketches varying in tone from the sentimental to the satirical, have earned him a reputation as a leading comic writer in present-day Italy. His writings are perceptive but fragmentary.

Oro di Napoli (1947; Neapolitan Gold, tr. F. Frenaye, 1950); San Gennaro non dice mai no (1948; Return to Naples, tr. idem, 1951); A Milano non fa freddo (1949); Pietre e nuvole (1950); Gli alunni del sole (1952); Coraggio, guardiamo (1953).

J.F.C. (B.M.)

Marpicati, ARTURO (*Ghedi, Brescia 9 XI 1891; †Rome 1961), Italian novelist, poet and literary critic. The stimulus to much of Marpicati's work comes from his experiences in the First World War. As a novelist he tends to avoid psychological analysis and to concentrate on description; his poems are mostly in free verse. He has also written books expounding Fascist doctrine.

Liriche di guerra (verse; 1918).—NARRATIVE: La Coda di Minosse (1925); Quando fa sereno (1937).—CRITICISM: Saggi storico-critici (1921); Saggi di varia letteratura (1935).—GENERAL: L'accademia d'Italia (1934); Il partito fascista (1935); Uomini e fatti del mio tempo (1942).

G. Zanachi, A. M., scrittore (1937); O. Ramous, Saggio su M. (1939). J.F.C. (B.M.)

Marquand, JOHN PHILLIPS (*Wilmington, Del. 10 XI 1893; ∞1922 Christina Sedgwick [o/o1935], ∞1937 Adelaide Hooker; †Newbury, Mass. 16 VII 1960), American novelist, writer of short stories and detective fiction. Throughout his career he tried to balance the claims of popular and 'high-brow' fiction, but is too often merely glibly urbane. His novel of a stuffy Bostonian, The Late George Apley, won the Pulitzer prize in 1937.

The Unspeakable Gentleman (1922); H. M. Pulham, Esquire (1941); Last Laugh, Mr Moto (1942); So Little Time (1943); Repent in Haste (1945); B. F.'s Daughter (1946); Point of No Return (1949).

P. Hamburger, J. P. M., Esq. (1953); J. J. Gross, J. P. M. (1963.) H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

Marquina, EDUARDO (*Barcelona 21 I 1879; †New York 21 XI 1946), Spanish poet and dramatist. Though influenced by Rubén Darío's* MODERNISM, his lyrical, Mediterranean pantheism (e.g. Vendición, 1909), soon gave way to a poetry of social, patriotic themes (Canciones del momento, 1916). His colourful, historical dramas—timid efforts at renovating the decaying Spanish theatre—scored great success (e.g. En Flandes se ha puesto el sol).

Obras completas (8 vols, 1944).—'When the Roses Bloom Again', tr. in C. A. Turrell, Contemporary Spanish Dramatists (Boston, 1919); 'The Little White Goat', tr. B. G. Proske, and 'The Woodcutters', tr. G. H. Burr, in Translations From Hispanic Poets (New York, 1938).

J. M. Alonso, Vida de E. M. (1965).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Marradi, GIOVANNI (*Leghorn 21 IX 1852; †ibid. 1922), Italian poet. A pupil of Giuseppe Chiarini*, Marradi came under the influence of Carducci*, whose epic quality he emulated. His recitations of his own poems, especially of his Rapsodie garibaldine (1899), were much esteemed.

Poesie (1923); Prose (ed. G. Biagi, 1923).

F. Palleschi, L'arte di G. M. (1922); M. Zimolo, M. (1923). B.R.

Marryat, FREDERICK (London 10 VII 1792; ∞1819 Catherine Shairp; †Langham 9 VIII 1848), English sailor and novelist. His stories, based on his able and adventurous service career, show a gift for circumstantial narrative and a power of creating characters which make them classics of their kind.

Peter Simple (1834); Mr Midshipman Easy (1836); Masterman Ready (1841); Children of the New Forest (1847); The Naval Officer: or ... the Life of Frank Mildmay (3 vols, 1829; avowedly autobiographical).—Novels (ed. R. B. Johnson, 24 vols, 1896–98).

Florence Marryat, Life and Letters of Captain M. (1872); D. Hannay, Life of F. M. (1889); O. Warner, Captain M. (1953). R.M.H.

Marsden, SAMUEL (*Farsley 1765; †Australia 12 V 1838), chaplain in Sydney, explorer and missionary to New Zealand. Australia and New Zealand view Marsden markedly differently. He made several visits to New Zealand, on the first occasion accompanied by J. L. Nicholas, and travelled extensively in North Island. His prose is simple but dignified.

Letters and Journals of S. M. (ed. J. R. Elder, 1932).—J. L. Nicholas, A Narrative (2 vols, 1817). K.Sm.

Marshak, SAMUEL YAKOVLEVICH (*1887; †1964), Soviet poet of verses for children and translator of Blake*, Burns*, Wordsworth*, of Shakespeare's* Sonnets, Kipling*, and English nursery rhymes, songs and ballads. His collection of satirical poster-poems, Uroki istorii (1942), won him a Stalin prize.

Izbrannye perevody (1949); Sochineniya (4 vols, 1957–60); i Vospitanie slovom (1964).—The Ball (tr. H. P. T. Marshall, 1943); The Ice-Cream Man, The Silly Little Mouse, The Circus (tr. Dora Lawson, 1943, 1945); At Life's Beginning (tr. K. Hunter-Blair, 1964); Waxie-Daxie (tr. D. Rottenberg, 1964); Good Manners, etc. (tr. idem, 1965).

V. Buchstab, 'Poeziya Marshaka' in Kniga detyam (1931); B. E. Galanov, S. Y. M. (1965). J.L.

Marsman, HENDRIK (*Zeist 30 IX 1899; ∞1929 Rina Louisa Barendregt; †at sea 21 VI 1940), Dutch poet, critic and novelist. His poetry was important for the generation which began writing in the early 1920s. He originally had affinities with German Expressionism, later used more regular forms but always had the same preoccupation with the relationship of man to his environment, with the cosmos, European culture, friendship and love. His novels are less impressive. His criticism, however, followed the development of his poetry from vehement personal manifestos to a more reflective concern with phenomena outside his own personality, and deeply influenced his contemporaries.

VERSE: Verzen (1923); Tempel en kruis (1940).—ESSAYS: De anatomische les (1926); Herman Gorter (1937); Menno ter Braak (1939).—NOVELS: De dood van Angèle Degroux (1933); Heden ik, morgen gij (with S. Vestdijk, novel in letters; 1936; ed. with documents, 1947); Vera (1962; various versions A. Lehning).—Verzameld werk (definitive coll. sorks; 1st ed. 1960); De briefwisseling tussen P. N. van Eyck en M. (letters; 1968).

Groot-Nederland, special no. (1938); In memoriam H. M. (special no. of Criterium, 1940); S. Vestdijk, De Poolsche ruiter (1946); W. L. M. E. van Leeuwen, Drie vrienden (1947); Arthur Lehnning, De vriend van mijn jeugd (1954) and M. en het expressionisme (1959); A. W. P. van der Ree, Interpretatie van M. (1956); Jacob Smit, De kosmische zelfvergroting van de dichter bij Bilderdijsk, Perk en M. (1957); René Verbeeck, De dichter H. M. (1959); Schrijvers prentenboek, IV (1960); R. Houwink, Persoonlijke herinneringen aan M. (1961); P. de Wispelaere, H. M. (2nd ed., 1963); A. van Duinkerken, Gorter, M., Ter Braak (1967); J. J. Oversteegen, Vorm of vent (1969). J.J.O.

Marston, JOHN (*?Wardington ?IX-?X 1576; ∞ Mary Wilkes; † London 25 VI 1634), English satirist and dramatist who was ordained in 1609. From Brasenose College, Oxford (1591-94), he entered the Middle Temple (1594-1606), becoming known first for his satire. Although his Scourge of Villany, containing an attack on Jonson*, was burned by order of the ecclesiastical authorities (VI 1599), Marston continued in his vein in drama, caricaturing Jonson as Brabant Senior in Jack Drum's Entertainment (1600); Jonson replied with Every Man in His Humour. Fun at the expense of James* I's creation of knights in Eastward Ho (1605), a comedy in the style of Jonson with an intricate plot, brought Marston imprisonment with Chapman*. The play on which his reputation now largely rests, The Malcontent (1604), popularized, in the figure of Mendoza, the Machiavellian schema on the Jacobean stage; foreshadowing the tragi-comedy of Beaumont* and Fletcher and their imitators, it has, though crudely constructed, a satiric vigour which later plays in the genre lack. Like Antonio and Mellida (1602) and Antonio's Revenge (1602) it lacks ultimate dramatic coherence, but exhibits certain poetic and satiric gifts which found better expression in his non-dramatic writings. Despite the fact that Marston was first performed by children, his tragedies are adult treatments which call for a representation of mature passions.

Tragedies and Comedies (1633); The Plays of J. M. (ed. H. H. Wood, 3 vols, 1934-39), The Poems of J. M. (ed. A. Davenport, 1961).

M. S. Allen, The Satire of J. M. (1920); T. S. Eliot, Selected Essays (1934); U. M. Ellis-Fermor, The Jacobean Drama (1936); S. A. Tannenbaum, J. M.: a Concise Bibliography (1940); F. S. Boas, Stuart Drama (1946); G. Pellegrini, Il Teatro di J. M. (1952); A. J. Axelrad, Un malcontent élizabéthain, J. M. (1955); J. Peter, Complaint and Satire (1956); A. F. Caputi, J. M. Satirist (1961); B. Gibbons, Jacobean City Comedy (1968).

B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Marston, PHILIP BOURKE (*London 13 VIII 1850; †13 II 1887), English poet, blind and of tragic personal life, whose verse was admired by, and tended to echo, Rossetti*.

Song Tide and other Poems (1871); Lyrics and Sonnets from the Book of Love (ed. L. Chandler Moulton, 1891).—Collected Poems (with biog. sketch by L. Chandler Moulton; 1891).

C. C. Osborne, P. B. M. (1926).

R.M.H. (M.A.)

Marsus, DOMITIUS (*c. 54; †c. 4 B.C.), Latin poet whose works included epigrams, an epic poem and a treatise De Urbanitate. He is acknowledged by Martial* as one of his predecessors.

W. Morel, Fragmenta poetarum Latinorum (1927; repr. 1963). A.J.D.

Martelli, LUDOVICO (*Florence 1503; †1531), Italian poet. His tragedy Tullia (1533) was imitated by Guillaume Le Breton. In his controversy with Trissino* on the QUESTIONE DELLA LINGUA he held Dante's* De vulgari eloquentia to be apocryphal.

Tullia in Teatro antico italiano, III (1809).

G. Pellegrini in Archivio storico ital., LXXIII (1915); E. Bertana, La Tragedia (1904-05).

B.R.

Martello (or Martelli), PIER JACOPO (*Bologna 28 IV 1665; †ibid. 10 V 1727), Italian poet, dramatist and prose writer; Professor of eloquence, Bologna; 'Mirtilo Dianidio' in Arcadia; a friend of Gravina* in Rome (1708-18). In an unsuccessful attempt to reform the Italian theatre, Martello wrote a series of tragedies in the French style with elements of Arcadian gallantry (Ifigenia in Tauris, Sisara, Perselide) and Il Femia sentenziato (1724), a dramatic satire on Scipione Maffei*. Other works include epic, satiric and religious verse, the Canzoniere (1710) and various literary treatises, notably Del verso tragico (1709) containing an account of 'Martellian verse'—the rhyming couplets of 14 syllables which Martello freely adopted as an Italian equivalent for the French alexandrine.

Opere (7 vols, 1723-35).—Il Femia sentenziato (ed. P. Viani, 1869); Scritti critici e satirici (ed. H. S. Noce, 1963).—Lirici del Settecento (ed. M. Fubini and B. Maier, 1959).

M. Carmi, P. J. M., studio (1906); B. Croce, 'Le prose di P. J. M.' in La letteratura italiana del Settecento (1949); F. Croce, 'P. J. M.' in Rassegna della lett. ital. (1953); W. Binni, 'P. J. M. e le sue commedie "per letterati"' in L'Arcadia e il Metastasio (1963). M.W.

Martens, GASTON (*Zulte 24 IV 1883; †Deinze 10 V 1967), Flemish dramatist. His plays, inspired by village life, blend a colourful realism with lyrical moods and elements of caricature and burlesque.

Paus van Hagendonck (1917); De zot (1918);

Derby (1920); Prochievrijers (1921); De groote neuzen (1924); Het gouden jubelfeest (1926); Paradijsvogels (1934); The Hopeful Travellers, tr. I. Capell, 1953); Het dorp der mirakelen (1947).
R. Roemans, G. M. (1929).

R.F.L. (tr. P.K.)

Martí, José (*La Habana 1853; †Boca de Dos Ríos 1895), Cuban patriot. Son of a Spanish immigrant, he was involved in the 1868 conspiracy and was sent to work in the quarries. When the sentence was commuted to exile, he was able to continue his studies in Spain. He carried on his life-long struggle for the independence of Cuba in articles and political speeches and in various countries—Mexico, Guatemala, Venezuela and New York. He was shot on an expedition which invaded Cuba in 1895. Both as a prose writer and poet he showed considerable originality. His prose essays are often vivid pictures of exemplary or outstanding men—Bolívar*, Whitman*, General Páez. In his lifetime, he published two collections of poems, Ismaelillo (1882) dedicated to his son and Versos sencillos (1891). His Versos libres were published posthumously. Both poetry and prose employ a vivid, connotative language and a personal symbolism and express his essential humanity.

Obras completas (26 vols, Havana, 1966).

J. Marinello, J. M. escritor americano (1958); Ivan A. Schulman, Simbolo y color en la obra de J. M. (Madrid, 1960). J.F.

Martial (MARCUS VALERIUS MARTIALIS) (*Bilbilis, Spain c. A.D. 40; †c. 104), Latin poet. Martial came to Rome in 64 where he earned his living by his poetry. Little is known of his career until 80 when he commemorated the opening of the Colosseum by Titus with his Liber spectaculorum of which 33 poems survive. In 84–85 he published the Xenia and Apophoreta, collections of short mottoes for gifts. Eleven books of epigrams appeared between 86 and 98, when he returned to Spain, where in 102 the last book (12) was published. His death is lamented by the younger Pliny* in 104.

Martial is most notable for his extreme versatility. Many of the epigrams, which are for the most part in elegiac couplets modelled on Ovid* and Catullus*, depict, with acute observation though often with some obscenity, many features of the life of his day. Unlike his friend Juvenal*, Martial was conscious of no moral zeal. The epigrams addressed to Domitian are servile in their (unrequited) adulation: in great contrast are those inspired by his affection for his friends, and a number of touching epitaphs and laments.

Eds: C. Giarratano (3rd ed. 1950); W. M. Lindsay (1903); L. Friedländer (with comm.; 1886, repr. 1961); tr. W. C. A. Ker (2 vols, 1919–20).

G. Boissier, 'The poet M.' in Tacitus and Other Studies (tr. W. G. Hutchison, 1906); P. Nixon,

M. and the Modern Epigram (1927); L. Pepe, Marziale (1950); A. G. Carrington, Aspects of M.'s Epigrams (1960). A.J.D.

Martianus Capella, 5th-century encyclopaedist. His De nuptiis Mercurii et Philologiae, based on Varro's* lost Disciplinae, but using a fantastic allegorical setting, was the most popular medieval handbook of the seven liberal arts. The style of the work is meretricious, and the text corrupt.

J.A.W.

Ed. A. Dick (1925; repr. with adds J. Préaux, 1969).—Comm. by Johannes Scotus (ed. C. E. Lutz, 1939).

P. Wessner, 'M. C.' in A. Pauly, G. Wissowa et al., Real-Encyclopädie der classischen Altertumswissenschaft, XIV.2, 2003 ff. (1930; most modern account). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Martin, CLAIRE, pseud. of MME CLAIRE FAUCHER (*Quebec City 18 IV 1914; ∞1945 Roland Faucher), Canadian novelist and story writer. After working as radio announcer in Quebec and Montreal, she has devoted herself principally to creative writing. Her work is impressionistic and often concerned with love relationships.

Doux-amer (1960); Quand j'aurai payé ton visage (1962).—STORIES AND REMINISCENCES: Avec ou sans amour (1958); Dans un gant de fer, I: La joue gauche (1965), II: La joue droite (1966; I and II combined in In an Iron Glove, tr. P. Stratford, 1968).

G. Archambault, 'La joue droite de C. M.' in Livres et Auteurs canadiens (1966). R.Su.

Martin, VIOLET: see Somerville, EDITH (ANNA) CENONE.

Martin de la Plaza, LUIS (*Antequera 1577; †ibid. 1625), Spanish poet. He studied at Osuna and became a priest. He was one of the poets of Antequera, whose work parallels Góngora's* early Italianate style. His sonnets and odes are rich in texture, with all the typical elaborations of Spanish poetry after Herrera*.

Pedro Espinosa, Flores de poetas ilustres de España (1605; repub., with unpub. 2nd part, J. Quirós de los Ríos and F. Rodríguez Marín, 2 vols, 1896).—Cancionero antequerano (ed. D. Alonso and R. Ferreres, 1950). E.M.W.

Martin du Gard, ROGER (*Neuilly 23 III 1881; ∞1906 Hélène Foucault; †Bellême 23 VIII 1958), French novelist, awarded the Nobel prize for literature in 1937. One of France's most esteemed writers, he did not play a very active part in French literary life. His first two novels, Devenir (1908) and Jean Barois (1913; tr. S. Gilbert, 1949), are studies of the intellectual and moral problems of the pre-1914 generation. His finest work, Les Thibault (1922–40; tr. idem, 2 vols, 1937–41), while dealing with similar themes, is a delicately observed picture of French family life before and during the First World War. His appreciation of peasant life is shown in his two rustic farces, Le Testament du Père Leleu (1923) and La Gonfle (1928), as well as in his Vieille France (1933), a novel with a strong left-wing bias, written when he was toying with the idea of joining the Communist party. The play Un Taciturne (1931) and his novel La Confiance africaine (1932) are striking studies in morbid psychology. He was a life-long friend of André Gide* and published his very frank Notes sur André Gide 1913–51 (1951) in the year of his death.

Les Thibault: Le cahier gris (1922), Le pénitencier (1922), La belle saison (1923), La consultation (1928), La Sorellina (1928), La mort du père (1929), Été 1914 (1936), Épilogue (1940).—Souvenirs autobiographiques et littéraires (1955); Œuvres complètes (2 vols, 1955).

R. Lalou, R. M. du G. (1937); R. Gibson, R. M. du G. (1961); D. L. Schalk, M. du G. (1967).
T.W. (M.T.)

Martineau, HARRIET (*Norwich 12 VI 1802; †Ambleside, Westmorland 27 VI 1876), English writer and reformer. After years of struggle against poverty and illness her successful literary career began with the winning of a prize essay on a Christian subject. She subsequently moved from Unitarianism to scepticism and translated Comte*. Among the causes she supported was abolitionism and she met with some hostility when she went to America (1834). She described herself as a popularizer, wrote stories illustrating political economy, poor-law and taxation, and within her limits was tireless and honest.

Illustrations of Political Economy (9 vols, 1832–34); Society in America (3 vols, 1837); Letters on Mesmerism (1845).—NOVELS: Deerbrook (3 vols, 1839); Feats on the Fiord (1844).—The Positive Philosophy of Auguste Comte (tr.; 2 vols, 1853); Harriet Martineau's Autobiography. With Memorials by M. C. Chapman (3 vols, 1877).

J. E. H. Courtney, Free Thinkers of the Nineteenth Century (1920); T. Bosanquet, H. M. (1927); N. E. Ruenberg, H. M.: an Example of Victorian Conflict (1933); V. Wheatley, Life and Work of H. M. (1957); R. K. Webb, H. M. (1960).

B.H. (M.A.)

Martínek, VOJTĚCH (*Brušperk 11 IV 1887; †Ostrava 25 IV 1960), Czech novelist. He is the author of a number of novels that give a vivid description of the life of miners and peasants in Czech Silesia.

Černá země, I: Jakub Observa, II: Plameny, III: Země dvanácti (1926–32).

J. Vondra and J. Podzimek, Bibliografie knižního díla V. M. (1961).
R.A.

Martínez de la Rosa, FRANCISCO (*Granada 10 III 1787; †Madrid 7 II 1862), Spanish dramatist, poet and statesman. At 22 he was Professor of philosophy at Granada University. During the Napoleonic invasion he came to London to negotiate British help in the Spanish War of Independence. A famous orator in the Cortes of Cádiz (1812), Ferdinand VII's absolutism sent him into exile (1823–31). He became Prime Minister in 1834 and later ambassador, speaker in parliament, and chairman of the council of state. More eclectic than liberal, familiar with French and English thought, he favoured compromise, the happy mean, in all his activities. Thus his poetry evolves smoothly from 18th-century neo-classicism (e.g. El nacimiento de Venus) to typically Romantic themes and expressions (e.g. La soledad); and his drama from comedies in the Moratin manner (e.g. La niña en casa y la madre en la máscara) to his famous La Conjunción de Venecia (1834), the first successful Spanish Romantic drama. Well constructed, it has all the external qualities of Romanticism without its impassioned spirit. His evolution towards Romanticism was marked by Abén Humeya, a historical drama first written in French (1830). He is also the author of a Poética in verse, inspired by Boileau's*, and of the best classical tragedy in 19th-century Spain: Edipo. His essays and prologues are of interest.

Obras completas (5 vols, Paris, 1884–54); Obras dramáticas (ed. J. Sarrailh, 1933); Obras (ed. C. Seco Serrano in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., CXLVIII–CLV, 1962).—‘Anacreontic’ (tr. in J. Kennedy, Modern Poets and Poetry of Spain, 1860); ‘The Alhambra’ (tr. in Longfellow, Poets and Poetry of Europe, New York, 1888).

J. Sarrailh, Un homme d'état espagnol: M. de la R. (1930); L. de Sosa, M. de la R.: político y poeta (1930).
R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Martínez de Toledo, ALFONSO (*?Toledo c. 1398; †ibid. 1468), Spanish prose writer. He was prebendary at Toledo, chaplain to John II and Archpriest of Talavera. He wrote the lives of St Isidore and St Ildefonso (1444) and a historical treatise (1443). His Corbacho, or Arçipreste de Talavera (1438), an attack on worldly love which draws on Andreas* Capellanus' De amore, owes much to the aims and techniques of the popular sermon, and contains some extremely lively passages of everyday speech. E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Arçipreste de Talavera (ed. M. Penna, Turin, 1955; ed. J. González Muela and M. Penna, 1970; tr. L. B. Simpson, Little Sermons on Sin, Berkeley, 1959); Vidas de San Ildefonso y San Isidoro (ed. J. Madoz, 1952).

M. Pardo, ‘Remarques sur l'Atalaya de l'archiprêtre de T.’ in Romania, LXXXVIII (1967); C. J. Whitbourn, The A. P. de T. and the Literature of Love (1970); R. A. del Piero, Dos escritores de la baja Edad Media castellana (1970).
A.D.D.

Martínez Ruiz, José (*Monóvar, Alicante 8 VI 1873; †Madrid 2 III 1967), Spanish writer, better known as AZORÍN. Educated with the Sculapius, he studied law at Valencia and Madrid. He was in politics until 1919 when he turned exclusively to writing. Though he cultivated many genres—criticism, articles, novels, plays etc.—he is fundamentally an essayist, master of a slow-moving, descriptive prose and a great lover of Castile. His sensitivity—his dominant feature—is especially suited to evoking the past and describing Castilian landscape with its old villages and houses, its people and forgotten objects. With great artistry he introduces the recurrent theme of time ('To live is to see things return'). Amongst his best books are Antonio Azorín (1903), Los pueblos (1905), Castilla (1912), El alma castellana (1900), Una hora de España (1924). He is a miniature painter and his descriptions are an accumulation of small, independent pictures completed in short sentences. The over-repetition of this technique is intentional but cannot always avoid being jerky and at times sentimental. His influence has been considerable.

Obras selectas (with intro. A. Cruz Rueda, 1943); Obras completas (9 vols, 1947–53).—Eng. trs: Don Juan (tr. C. A. Philips, 1923); The Sirens and Other Stories (tr. W. B. Wells, 1931); An Hour of Spain, 1560–1590 (tr. A. Raleigh, 1930); 'The Reverse of the Tapestry' (tr. in W. B. Wells, Great Spanish Short Stories, Boston, 1932).

A. Krause, A., the Little Philosopher (1948; Span. tr. 1956); M. C. Rand, Castilla en A. (1956); L. S. Granjel, Retrato de A. (1958); J. M. Martínez Cachero, Las novelas de A. (1960); L. A. LaJohn, A. and the Spanish Stage (1961); E. I. Fox, A. as a Literary Critic (1962); R. E. Lott, The Structure and Style of A.'s 'El caballero inactual' (1963); J. García Mercader, A., biografía ilustrada (1967); A. Sequeros, España y A. (1967); L. Livingstone, Tema y forma en las novelas de A. (1970). J.E.V.

Martínez Sierra, GREGORIO (*Madrid 6 III 1881; ∞ María de la O Lejárraga; †ibid. 1 X 1947), Spanish playwright, producer, poet, novelist, translator and publisher. Working in collaboration with his wife, and following in the steps of Benavente*, Martínez Sierra published poems, short stories and novels. In 1905 there appeared Teatro de ensueño, much influenced by Maeterlinck*, and he later collaborated with Rusiñol*. Canción de cuna (1911) was internationally successful, whilst Don Juan de España (1921) was a significant landmark in the development of the Spanish theatre. From 1916–19 he managed the Teatro Eslava, introducing into Madrid new theatrical techniques, new authors and a completely new, and modern, style. His work reflected the influence of contemporary trends outside Spain. J.E.V.

Obras completas (32 vols, 1920–33); Obras (Madrid, 3 vols, 1948).—Ave María (tr. E. Crocker, Boston, 1921); The Two Shepherds (1931),

The Kingdom of God (New York, 1929) and Take Two From One: a Farce in Three Acts (ibid., 1931; all tr. H. and H. Granville-Barker); The Plays of G. M. S. (tr. H. and H. Granville-Barker and J. G. Underhill, 2 vols, 1923).

M. Martínez Sierra, Gregorio y yo (1953); A. Goldsborough Serrat, Imagen humana y literaria de G. M. S. (1965). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Martini, FERDINANDO (*Florence 1841; †Monsummano Valdinievole 1928), Italian dramatist and journalist. He began his career as a writer of light comedies, L'uomo propone e la donna dispone (1862), Chi sa il gioco non l'insegni (1871), Il peggior passo è quello dell'uscio (1873). As a journalist he wrote under the name of FANTASIO. His Confessioni e ricordi (3rd ed. 1922) contain reminiscences of Giusti*, Guerrazzi*, Brofferio* and other figures of the Risorgimento.

21 Quarantotto in Toscana (ed. F. M.; new ed. 1948); Diario, 1914–18 (ed. G. De Rosa, 1966).

L. Russo in I narratori (1923); A. Donati, F. M. (1926) and in Italia che scrive (1928; with biblio.); P. Pancrazi in Scrittori italiani dal Carducci al D'Annunzio (1937). B.R.

Martinis, MARTINUS EX (*Ramosch 1627; †ibid. 1668) and JOANNES (**ibid.* 1644; †Sent after 1702), his son, Ræto-Romansch poets. Both were clergymen, took an active part in politics and wrote a series of extraordinary vigorous, particularly religious poems, unique in the dynamic use of language and rhythm. Joannes does not hesitate to introduce drastically realistic details. Particularly impressive, even today, is the song of freedom composed by Martinus in 1652 after the redemption of the Lower Engadine from Austria.

La Philomela (1684, 1702, 1751, 1797); Abyss da l'Aeternitat (1693). R.R.B.

Martinus, FRANCISCUS (*Kampen 1611; †1653), Dutch parson and poet, disciple of Huygens* and admirer of Hooft* who in his turn appreciated Martinus' poems.

Dier-al (1631); Camper-Lof (1641); Feestdicht (at the inauguration of the Academy of Gelderland, 1648); Treurdicht tot Verklaringe over het Lyden en Sterven onzes Heeren J. C. (1649); Triumphe der Opstanding (1654).—A few of his songs appeared in De Hollandsche Parnas (1660).

Complete ed. of his poems (1729).—J. C. van Slee, F. M. (1904). A.M.B.W.

Martins, JOAQUIM PEDRO DE OLIVEIRA (*Lisbon 30 IV 1845; ∞1865 Victoria Mascarenhas Barbosa; †Lisbon 24 VIII 1894), Portuguese historian. An autodidact, Martins nevertheless became a leading member of the group of intellectuals and writers sometimes referred to as the 'Coimbra generation' (Antero de Quental*). He wrote a wide range of œuvres de vulgarisation on ethnology, religion, history, politics, economics, and was one of the first exponents of socialism in Portugal. With the gradual deterioration of Portuguese political life in the latter 19th century, his idealistic rationalism turned to black despair and deep pessimism which colours his later historical works. His cult of myth and irrationalism in this period was avidly taken up, with nationalistic overtones, by the next literary generation.

Teoria do socialismo (1872); O helenismo e a civilização cristã (1878); História de Portugal (1879); História da civilização ibérica (1879); Portugal contemporâneo (1881); Os filhos de D. João I (1891); A vida de Nun' Alvares (1893); O príncipe perfeito (incomplete; 1896).

F. de Figueiredo, História dum vencido da vida (1930); A. J. Saraiva, 'Tres ensaios sobre O. M.' in Para a história da cultura em Portugal, I (1946). T.P.W.

Martinson, HARRY (*Jämshög 6 V 1904; ∞1929 Moa Martinson*, ∞1942 Ingrid Lindcrantz), Swedish author. Martinson's needy childhood and a seafaring youth generated the creed of primitivism and nomadism traceable in most of his books. His originally immature verse crystallized into very forceful utterance; and his prose books, often based on his own life and extensive travels, show a great love of nature. His youthful optimism has given way to sadness at the desolation caused by science and intellect outpacing humanity. In his space poem Aniara (1956; tr. H. MacDiarmid and E. Harley Schubert, 1963), depicting the fatal journey of a space ship off course, he sees resignation as man's only hope.

NOVELS AND SKETCHES: Resor utan mål (1932); Kap Farvöl (1933; Cape Farewell, tr. N. Walford, 1934); Nässlorna blommar (1935; Flowering Nettle, tr. idem, 1936); Vägen ut (1936); Vägen till Klockrike (1948; The Road, tr. M. A. Michael, 1955).—VERSE: Spökskepp (1929); Nomad (1931); Natur (1934); Passad (1945); Cikada (1953); Gräsen i Thule (1958).—Sel. tr. in Seven Swedish Poets (tr. F. Fleischer, 1963).

T. Kristensen, H. M. (1941); I. Holm, H. M. Myter, målningar och motiv (1960).

C.H.K. (I.S.)

Martinson, HELGA MARIA [MOA], née SWARTZ (*Vårdnäs 2 XI 1890; ∞1910 K. L. Johansson, ∞1929 Harry Martinson*; †Stockholm 5 VIII 1964), Swedish novelist, who contributes a lasting picture of the statute (poor crofter) and the working-class woman. Influenced by Zola* and Gorky*, she portrays grinding poverty realistically and with social indignation. Her humour and zest for life obviate excessive pessimism.

Mor gifter sig (1936); Vägen under stjärnorna (1940); Jag möter en diktare (1950); Kvinnorna på Kummelsjö (1955).

Å. Runquist, Arbetskildare från Hedenvind till Fridell (1952). I.S.

Martoglio, NINO (*Belpasso, Catania 1870; †Catania 15 IX 1921), Italian poet and playwright, founder of a humorous journal, D'Artagnan. His comedies, in Sicilian dialect, became well known also on the mainland. His masterpieces are L'Aria del Continente (1905) and S. Giovanni Decullatu (1908), written for the actor Angelo Musco, to whom the success of his plays was mainly due.

Centona (complete coll. of poems in Sicilian; 1913; 5th ed. 1920); Teatro dialettale (5 vols, 1919–20; complete).

G. Armò, N. M. (1929); C. Levi, 'Il teatro di N. M.' in Marzocco (16 May 1920). B.R.

Martorell, JOANOT (*Gandia ?1413; †1468), Catalan novelist. Member of a renowned family, he became involved in many disputes. He is known to have resided for some time in London and Portugal. He is famous as the author of the chivalrous novel Tirant lo Blanc, started about 1460 and finished and published by Martí Joan de Galba in 1490. Tirant's early adventures take place in England and are largely based on the romance Guy of Warwick; then he goes to Greece and his exploits are inspired by the almogàver expedition described in Muntaner's* Crònica. Many details about knight-errantry are taken from Lull's (Llull*) Orde de cavalleria. The relationship with contemporary French chivalresque novels, such as the Chevalier de la* Sale, has recently been established.

The novel is very different from the other Catalan romance Curial e Güelfa and the series of books deriving from Amadís de Gaula. Idealism accompanies realistic details and characterization: Tirant is more remarkable for his military skill than his individual prowess; as Cervantes* noticed (Don Quixote, I, vi), he and his comrades eat, sleep and die in their beds; they also make love, and sexual realism is particularly evident. There is much psychological insight and effective dramatic irony. The narrative is sustained and the style direct and vivid. Tirant lo Blanc was translated into Spanish (1511), Italian (1514–19) and French (c. 1737).

Ed. A. M. Huntingdon (1904; facs. repr. of 1490 ed.); ed. M. de Riquer (1947; rev. 1969); selections (Els Nostres Clàssics, 5 vols, 1930); Span. tr. J. F. Vidal Jové (2 vols, 1969).

J. Givanel y Más, 'Estudio crítico de la novela caballeresca T. lo B.' in Archivo de investigaciones históricas (1911); J. A. Vaeth, 'T. lo B.' a Study (1918); D. Alonso, 'T. lo B.: novela moderna' in Primavera temprana de la literatura europea (1960). G.W.R.

Martyn, EDWARD, pseud. SIRIUS (*Tulira, Co. Galway 1859; †ibid. 15 XII 1923), Irish dramatist; founder in 1899 of the Irish Literary Theatre for which he wrote plays under the influence of Ibsen* and helped by George Moore*. R.McH.

Maeve and The Heather Field (1899); The Tale of a Town and An Enchanted Sea (1902); Grangelcolman (1912); The Dream Physician (1914).

George Moore, Hail and Farewell (1914); U. Ellis-Fermor, The Irish Dramatic Movement (2nd ed. 1954); M.-T. Courtney, E. M. and the Irish Theatre (1956). E.T.W.

Martyr, PETER, 'ANGLERIUS'; PIETRO MARTIRE D'ANGHERA (*Arona 1459; †Granada 1526), Italian humanist, resident after 1487 in Spain. Employed by the Spanish court on an embassy to Cairo in 1501-02 and from 1510 an official historian of the Council for the Indies, Martyr was a lively Latin writer. His two main works are of considerable originality; the first a history of the years 1488-1525 in the form of letters (mainly fictitious) and the second the first valuable historical account of Spanish America.

Opus Epistolarum (1530); Decades de Orbe Novo (Seville, 1511; Alcalá, 1516; 1st complete ed. ibid., 1530; Eng. tr. F. A. MacNutt, 2 vols, 1912).

J. Bernays, P. M. A. und sein Opus Epistolarum (1891); J. B. Thatcher, Christopher Columbus . . . With an Essay on P. M. A. (1903). D.H.

Marugg, TIP (SILVIO ALBERTO) (*Curaçao 16 XII 1923), Dutch novelist from the Antilles. His main character works at an oil refinery and feels the tension between his social situation and his own background, between the oil industry and the original population from which he is only one generation removed.

Weekend pelgrimage (1957; Eng. tr. Roy Edwards, 1960); In de straten van Tepalka (1966). J.J.O.

Marulić, MARKO (*Split 18 VIII 1450; †ibid. 5 I 1524), Dalmatian poet and classical scholar; studied in Padua and achieved European celebrity. In his religious fervour and wide humanism he mirrors the merging of the medieval and modern worlds, though he denounced the Renaissance as injurious to Christian faith. His works in Latin comprise poetry, translations and moral dissertations. His epic poems in the vernacular are the first of known authorship in Serbo-Croatian literature. They treat Biblical subjects in an elaborate style though with a sober moralizing purpose in which patriotism is combined with religious faith.

Istorija svete udovice Judit (Venice, 1521); Pjesme (1869).—LATIN WORKS: De institutione bene vivendi (1506); Quinquaginta parabola (1510); De humilitate et gloria Christi (1519); Epistola ad Adrianum VI (1522); Davidias (1954).

J. Badalić and N. Majnarić, Zbornik u proslavu

petstogodišnjice rođenja M. Marulića (1950); M. A. Usmiani, 'M. M., 1450-1525' in Harvard Slavic Stud., III (1957); V. Javarek, 'Three 16th-century Dalmatian poets' in Slavon. and E. Eur. Rev., XLI (1962). V.J.

Marullo, MICHELE (*Constantinople 1453; ∞ Alessandra Scala, poet; †river Cecina 1500), Italian soldier and poet, friend of Sannazaro* and Pontano*. As a mercenary he fought for Caterina Sforza in the defence of Forlì. His distinguished Latin verses include love poems to Alessandra Scala (Silvia) and Hymni naturales, derived from Lucretius*.

B. Croce, M. M. (1937; biog. incl. text, Ital. trs and biblio.); C. Dionisotti in Giornale storico della lett. ital., CXV (1940). B.R.

Marvell, ANDREW (*Winestead-in-Holderness 31 III 1621; ∞?London V 1667 Mary Palmer; †ibid. 16 VIII 1678), English poet and politician. Educated at Hull Grammar School and Trinity College, Cambridge (B.A. 1639) he travelled (c. 1642-46) in Holland, France, Italy and Spain and c. 1651-52 was employed by Lord Fairfax as tutor to his daughter at Nunappleton in Yorkshire. He was appointed Latin Secretary to the Commonwealth in 1657 and in 1659 elected M.P. for Hull, a seat he held till his death; much of his extant correspondence consists of letters from Westminster to the Hull Corporation. At the Restoration he spoke in Parliament on behalf of his friend Milton*. To his contemporaries and through the 18th century he was known as an incorruptible politician and champion of liberty. His prose defence of religious toleration The Rehearsal Transpros'd (1672, 1673) and his satirical poems on Restoration affairs of state such as his Last Instructions to a Painter written in 1667 were widely read. Although not a prolific poet, Marvell encompasses in his verse, in both Latin and English, a wide variety of themes. The 19th century admired the delicacy and sensitivity of his treatment of the themes of nature, innocence and retirement, as in 'The Garden', and the 20th century has emphasized his allusiveness, and his combination of serious intelligence and fine wit, seeing him as one of the last, and major, Metaphysicals (METAPHYSICAL POETRY). As well as the classic invitation to love, 'To His Coy Mistress', his writing encompasses the religious strand of the Metaphysicals in poems like 'A Dialogue Between the Soul and Body'; while his political poems include both his balancing of the values of the old order against the new in 'An Horatian Ode Upon Cromwell's Return From Ireland', and his eulogistic 'First Anniversary' and 'Elegy' on Cromwell.

Miscellaneous Poems (1681; ed. H. Macdonald, 1952); Complete Works (ed. A. B. Grosart, 4 vols, 1872-75); Poems and Letters (ed. H. M. Margoliouth, 2 vols, 1927; rev. 1972); Latin Poetry (ed.

W. A. McQueen and K. A. Rockwell, 1964); Rehearsal Transposed (ed. D. I. B. Smith, 1971).

P. Legouis, A. M., poète, puritain, patriote (1928; trans., abr. and rev., 1965); M. C. Bradbrook and M. G. Lloyd Thomas, A. M. (1940; rev. 1962); L. W. Hyman, A. M. (1964); H. E. Toliver, M.'s Ironic Vision (1965); J. B. Leishman, The Art of M.'s Poetry (1966); J. M. Wallace, Destiny His Choice (1968); M. (ed. M. Wilding, 1969); D. M. Friedman, M.'s Pastoral Art (1970); R. L. Colie, 'My Echoing Song' (1970).—D. G. Donovan, A. M. 1927–67 (biblio.; 1969).

R.M.W.

Marx, (HEINRICH) KARL (*Trier 5 V 1818; ∞1843 Jenny von Westphalen [†1881]; †London 14 III 1883), German political philosopher. Expelled from Prussia in 1843 and again in 1849, he lived in Paris (1843–45) and Brussels (1845–48) and settled in London in 1849.

Marx rejected Hegel's* idealism, but made the latter's dialectical method the basis of his own 'historical materialism'. He attacked bourgeois society and fought for the proletariat in still very readable political pamphlets (in collaboration with Friedrich Engels, the extent of whose contribution can no longer be ascertained): The Communist Manifesto (1848; ed. H. J. Laski, 1948), The 18th Brumaire of Louis Bonaparte (1852; tr. E. and C. Paul, 1926), The Civil War in France (1871; ed. R. W. Postgate, 1921). His difficult main work, Capital (I, 1867; II and III, ed. F. Engels, 1885–95; tr. D. Torr, 1938), is largely successful in its analysis of capitalism, but fails when he tries to visualize a socialist society.

Marx was not concerned with literature, but a Marxian interpretation of it was introduced by the Hungarian György Lukács* and has become an integral part of Marxism.

Gesamtausgabe (ed. D. Rjazanov, Moscow, 1927 ff.).

M. Beer, Life and Teaching of K. M. (1925); E. H. Carr, K. M. (1934); I. Berlin, K. M. (1963); S. Avineri, The Social and Political Thought of K. M. (1968). S.H.S. (P.A.R.)

Masamune HAKUCHŌ, pseud. of MASAMUNE TADAO (*Honami, Okayama 3 III 1879; ∞1911 Shimizu Tsuneko; †28 X 1962), Japanese short-story writer, novelist, dramatist and critic. After graduating at Waseda University in 1901, he became dramatic critic for a Tokyo newspaper and in 1904 published his first short story. Novels and short stories followed in large numbers and in 1910 he gave up journalism to devote himself entirely to writing. In 1912–13 he turned to play-writing, and again in 1924, producing in the next years several successful plays as well as continuing to write novels. After 1930, however, he published little. His whole life, and especially his youth, was dogged by persistent ill health, which coloured his outlook.

His writings are permeated by an attitude of bleak despair, loneliness and desolation, often described as 'nihilistic'. This attitude, reminiscent of Chekhov*, whom he admired, appealed strongly to many Japanese, partly as a reflection of the harshness of their everyday life and partly in reaction against the usual sentimental and romantic trend of novels. His writings are clear, concise and natural, and his style is simple and free from ornamentation.

NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: Sekibaku (1904); Jin'ai (1907); Izuko e (1908); Bikō (1910; summarized tr. of this and prec. two in T. Kunitomo, Japanese Literature Since 1868, 1938); Doro ningyō (1911; 'Clay Doll', tr. G. M. Sinclair and K. Suita in Tokyo People, Tokyo, 1925); Shisha seisha (1916; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, I, 1939); Reirui (1921; Larmes froides, tr. S. Asada and C. Jacob, 1930); Sensaisha no kanashimi ('Sorrows of a War-Victim'; 1946; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, op. cit., II, 1959).—PLAYS: Jinsei no kōfuku (1924; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, op. cit., I, 1939); Ichiman'en (1928).—CRITICISM: Bundan jimbutsu hyōron (1932).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Masaoka SHIKI, pseud. of MASAOKA TSUNENORI (*Matsuyama, Ehime 14 X 1867; †Tokyo 19 IX 1902), Japanese author. Withdrawing from Tokyo Imperial University in 1893 before graduating, he took up a literary career, as a writer and teacher of haiku poetry: as a war-correspondent in the Sino-Japanese War, he was taken ill in 1895 with tuberculosis and for the rest of his life wrote profusely while battling against pain and disease. He was the best haiku poet of modern times.

POEMS: Botan kuroku (1899; 'A Verse Record of My Peonies', tr. E. R. Miner in Japan Quart., XII.2, 1965, and in Japanese Poetic Diaries, 1969); Shiki kushū (1909; posthumous ed.); sel. poems tr. in: A. Miyamori, An Anthology of Haiku (1932); H. G. Henderson, The Bamboo Broom (1933); G. Bonneau, Anthologie de la poésie japonaise (1935); R. H. Blyth, A History of Haiku, II (1964).—Bokujū itteki (essay; 1901).

R. H. Brower, 'M. S. and tanka reform' in Tradition and Modernization in Japanese Culture (ed. D. H. Shively, 1971). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Masaryk, TOMÁŠ GARRIGUE (*Hodonín 7 III 1850; †Lány 14 IX 1937), Czech philosopher and statesman. The son of a coachman and former serf in eastern Moravia, Masaryk lived to be founder and first President of the Czechoslovak Republic. His early schooling was won by sacrifices and good fortune; after studying philosophy and philology at Vienna and Leipzig he became Dozent in philosophy at Vienna (1879) and was appointed Professor at the newly established Czech University in Prague in 1882. He soon established for himself a commanding position in Czech intellectual life; and in the 1890s he entered politics. He was a deputy in the Reichsrat from 1891 to 1893 and again from 1907. His political activities were largely concerned with the struggle for tolerance and freedom of expression and with the defence of Czech rights in the Habsburg empire. In December 1914 he went abroad to enlist the support of the Allies for the Czech cause. His endeavours were crowned with success when the Czechoslovak Republic was proclaimed and he became its first President.

Masaryk's most important writings are perhaps the series of monographs in which he expounded his conception of Czech history (e.g. 'The Czech Question', Česká otázka, 1895; Jan Hus, 1896; Karel Havlíček, 1896). His writings on ethics, religion and sociology, though not the works of a systematic philosopher, exercised a profound influence and bear the stamp of a noble and penetrating mind (e.g. 'The Social Question', Otázka sociální, 1898; and also in 'Ideals of Humanity' and 'Modern Man and Religion'). His masterly analysis of the Russian mind, Russland und Europa (1913), has perhaps been more widely read than any of these.

MEMOIRS: Světová revoluce (1925; Ger. tr. Die Weltrevolution, 1925; The Making of a State, abr. tr. W. Steed, 1927).—VARIOUS: Moderní člověk a náboženství (1896–98; in book form 1934; Modern Man and Religion, tr. A. Bibza and V. Beneš, 1938); Ideály humanitní (1901; The Ideals of Humanity, tr. W. P. Warren, 1938); The Spirit of Russia (I and II tr. E. and C. Paul, 1918; III ed. G. Gibian, 1967); M. on Thought and Life (tr. M. and R. Weatherall, 1938).—COLLECTED WORKS: Spisy (ed. V. K. Škrach, 1926 ff.; ed. J. Král, 1946 ff.; both unfinished).

P. Selver, M. (1940); Z. Nejedlý, T. G. M. (5 vols, 1930 ff.; unfinished); J. Herben, T. G. M. (3 vols, 1926–27); K. Čapek, Hovory s M. em (1928–35); R. Wellek, 'M.'s philosophy' in Essays in Czech Literature (1963); M. Machovec, T. G. M. (1968). R.A.

Mascheroni, LORENZO (*Castagneta, Bergamo 13 V 1750; †Paris 14 VII 1800), Italian poet and prose writer; Professor of algebra and geometry, Pavia (1786–97). Mascheroni wrote the Invito a Lesbia Cidonia (1793), a poem of considerable elegance describing the science departments at Pavia University and inviting the Countess Paolina Grisoni to honour them with a visit. Other works include occasional verse and a number of celebrated mathematical treatises (Geometria del compasso, 1797).

Invito a Lesbia Cidonia e altre poesie (ed. G. Natali, 1918).—Poesie e prose (crit. ed. C. Caversazzi, 1903).

C. Ugoni, Biografia di L. M. (1873); G. Natali, 'L. M. poeta della scienza' in Idee costumi uomini

del Settecento (1926); A. Piromalli, 'L. M.' in Orientamenti culturali. Letteratura italiana: I Minori, III (1961; incl. biblio. of scientific works). M.W.

Masden, JUAN FRANCISCO DE (*Palermo 4 X 1744; †Valencia 11 IV 1817), Spanish historian and critic. Expelled with the Jesuits in 1767, he began in Italy the publication of his interesting Historia crítica de España y de la cultura española (20 vols, 1783–1805). This is an exegesis of Spanish civilization abounding with severe and scholarly criticism, still valuable as a work of reference. In the 20th volume he only reached the 11th century.

Torres Amat, Memorias para ayudar a formar un diccionario crítico de los escritores catalanes (1836); M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Historia de los heterodoxos españoles (1911). R.M.N.

Masefield, JOHN (*Ledbury, Herefordshire 1 VI 1878; ∞1903 Constance de la Cherois-Crommelin; †Abingdon, Berks 12 V 1967), English poet, novelist and playwright; poet laureate from 1930. He served as a seaman in his teens and worked in America. His early poems were influenced by Kipling*, his novels by Conrad* and histories of the buccaneers. His vigorous early romanticism was modified by a decision that poetry must touch the earthly realities of life—hence The Everlasting Mercy (1911) and other long narrative poems. He has also written imaginatively for young readers.

VERSE: Salt Water Ballads (1902); Ballads and Poems (1910); Dauber (1913); The Daffodil Fields (1913); Reynard the Fox (1919); Right Royal (1922); In Glad Thanksgiving (1967).—PLAYS: The Tragedy of Nan (1909); Pompey the Great (1910).—FICTION: Captain Margaret (1908); Lost Endeavour (1910); Sard Harker (1924); Odtia (1926); Dead Ned (1938); Live and Kicking Ned (1939).—FOR YOUNG PEOPLE: The Midnight Folk (1927); The Bird of Dawning (1933); The Box of Delights (1935).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: So Long to Learn (1952); Grace Before Ploughing (1966).

W. H. Hamilton, J. M. (1922); G. O. Thomas, J. M. (1932); L. A. G. Strong, J. M. (1952); M. Spark, J. M. (1953); M. Fisher, J. M. (1963).—Biblio. by G. Handley-Taylor (1960).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Maskoff, JÓZEF: see Zapolska, GABRIELA.

Mason, JOHN (*Northampton 1645/6; †Water Stratford V 1694), English 'enthusiast' minister and poet who was at Clare Hall, Cambridge (1661). Mason was one of the earliest writers of Congregationalist hymns somewhat in the style of Herbert*. They were familiar to Pope*, Wesley* and Watts*. His proclamation of Christ's coming in 1694, attracting about 400 followers, became the subject of numerous pamphlets.

Spiritual Songs, or Songs of Praise (1683); Select Remains of J. M. (ed. Rev. J. Mason, 1745).

C. Hill, 'J. M. and the end of the world' in Puritanism and Revolution (1958).

B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Mason, RONALD ALISON KELLS (*Auckland 10 I 1905; †6 VII 1971), New Zealand poet. Slow to win recognition, he was acknowledged in the 1940s the country's finest and most individual poet, although opinion has lately hardened. A lyricist more of 19th- than 20th-century affinities, his work is dark and severe, and virtually ceased by 1940. His Collected Poems (intro. A. Curnow, 1962) has about 70, principally short, poems.

PAMPHLETS: In the Manner of Men (1923); The Beggar (1924); Penny Broadsheet (1925); No New Thing, Poems 1924-29 (1934); End of Day (1936); This Dark Will Lighten, Selected Poems 1923-41 (1941); Recent Poems (with A. Curnow, D. J. M. Glover and A. R. D. Fairburn; 1941). K.Sm.

Mason, WILLIAM (*Kingston-upon-Hull 12 II 1724; ∞1764 Mary Sherman; †Aston 7 IV 1797), English dramatist and writer of undistinguished verse, friend and literary executor of Gray*, whose poems and letters he high-handedly edited.

R.M.H.

Musaeus, a Monody on the Death of Mr Pope (1747); Aelfrida (1752); Caractacus (1759); Poems (1764); Poems of Mr Gray, with Memoirs of his Life and Writings by W. M. (4 vols, 1775); Sappho, a Lyrical Drama (1809); Correspondence of Gray and M. (ed. J. Mitford, 1853); Correspondence of Walpole and M. (ed. W. S. Lewis, G. Cronin Jr and C. H. Bennett, 1955).

G. Colman's parodies in Odes to Obscurity and Oblivion (1760); Life of M. in The British Poets, LXXVII-LXXVIII (1822); J. W. Draper, W. M. (1924; with biblio.); K. Hopkins, Portraits in Satire (1958).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Massinger, PHILIP (*Salisbury ?XI 1583; †London III 1639/40), English dramatist whose father was a confidential servant of the Herbert family at Wilton. Massinger matriculated at St Alban Hall, Oxford (1602), but left without a degree (1606). From about 1613 he collaborated, in particular with John Fletcher for the King's Men, the foremost London theatrical company, and with Dekker* on The Virgin Martyr for the Revels Company (1622). Massinger wrote two plays for the Cockpit Company (1623-24); and upon the death of Fletcher he became the leading dramatist for the King's Men. As a dramatist Massinger is much of his age, writing plays which are always well-made but comparatively superficial in their treatment of human nature. His blank verse is normally lucid and flexible, neither descending to bathos nor mounting to a false magniloquence.

Only in A New Way to Pay Old Debts (1633; ed. A. H. Cruickshank, 1926) does he lose his restraint, creating in Sir Giles Overreach a character whose frenzy was full-blooded enough to keep the play in the repertoire until the 19th century when the acting style became too austere to cope with it. Massinger could be graceful and witty in comedy.

The Plays (ed. F. Cunningham, 4 vols, 1871); The Beggars Bush (with John Fletcher; 1622; ed. J. H. Dorenkamp, 1967); The Duke of Milan (1623; ed. T. W. Baldwin, 1918); The Bondman (1623; ed. B. T. Spencer, 1932); The Parliament of Love (1624; ed. K. M. Lea, 1928); The Roman Actor (1629; ed. W. L. Sandidge, 1929); The Fatal Dowry (with Nathan Field; 1632; ed. T. A. Dunn, 1969); The Great Duke of Florence (1636; ed. J. M. Stockholm, 1933); The Unnatural Combat (1639; ed. R. S. Telfer, 1932); Believe as you List (1653; ed. C. J. Sisson, 1928); The City Madam (1658; ed. C. Hoy, 1964).

K. Raebel, M.s Drama 'The Maid of Honour' in seinem Verhältnis zu Painters 'Palace of Pleasure' (1901); A. C. Swinburne in Contemporaries of Shakespeare (1919); T. S. Eliot in The Sacred Wood (1920); A. H. Cruickshank, P. M. (1920); M. Chelli, Le drame de M. (1924) and Étude sur la collaboration de M. avec Fletcher et son groupe (1926); K. M. Lynch, The Social Mode of Restoration Comedy (1926); L. C. Knights, Drama and Society in the Age of Jonson (1937); R. H. Ball, The Amazing Career of Sir Giles Overreach (1939); F. S. Boas, Introduction to Stuart Drama (1946); T. A. Dunn, P. M. The Man and the Playwright (1957).

B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Masters, EDGAR LEE (*Garnett, Kan. 23 VIII 1869; ∞1898 Helen Jenkins [o/o1923], ∞1926 Ellen Coyne; †Melrose Park, Pa. 5 III 1950), American poet. He grew up in the 'Spoon River country' in Illinois and became a successful lawyer in Chicago. Both fame and attack came with his Spoon River Anthology (1915), a group of over 200 epitaphs in which the dead of a Middle Western town supposedly confess the truth about their lives. His writings include verse, novels, plays, boys' stories, biographies and an autobiography.

VERSE: A Book of Verse (1898); Domesday Book (1920); The New Spoon River (1924); Selected Poems (1925).—NOVELS: Children of the Market Place (1922); The Tide of Time (1937).—BIOGRAPHY: Lincoln, the Man (1931); Vachel Lindsay, A Poet in America (1935); Whitman (1937); Mark Twain, A Portrait (1938).—Across Spoon River (autobiog.; 1937).

M. Yutron, America's Literary Revolt (1959).

H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

Mastri, PIETRO (*Florence 1868; †ibid. 1932), Italian poet, one of the founders of the periodicals Vita Nuova and Il Marzocco. He was one of the few exclusively lyric poets of his period. In his feeling for nature and in his descriptions he derived principally from Pascoli*.

VERSE: L'Arcobaleno (1900; new ed. 1921); Lo specchio e la falce (1907); La meridiana (1920); La fronda oscillante (1923); La via delle stelle (1927); Ultimi canti (1933).—PROSE: Su per l'erta (1903); La lingua del pappagallo (1922).

A. Garsia in Italia che scrive (1927; with biblio.); P. Pancrazi, Scrittori italiani del Novecento (1934). B.R.

Mastriani, FRANCESCO (*Naples 23 XI 1819; †ibid. 7 I 1891), Italian novelist. His novels (of which there are over 100) are mainly social studies of the Neapolitan lower classes. The best known is La cieca di Sorrento (1852). Una figlia nervosa (1865) is an example of his humorous style.

L. Russo, I Narratori (1923); G. Algranati, Un romanziere popolare a Napoli, F. M. (1914). B.R.

Masuccio Salernitano, known also as TOMMASO GUARDATI (*Salerno ?1420; †?1480), Italian prose-writer, author of Il Novellino (1476), a collection of 50 short stories. The tale of Mariotto Miganelli and Giannozza is similar to the story of Romeo and Juliet.

Il Novellino (ed. L. Settembrini, 1874; ed. A. Sorrentino, 1929; crit. ed. A. Mauro, 1939).

L. Di Francia, Novellistica, I (1924); A. Mauro, Per la biografia di M. S. (1926). B.R.

Mas'ūd, MUḤAMMAD (†Tehran 15 II 1947), Persian novelist and journalist. A schoolteacher of humble origins, he achieved sudden success with his first novel Tafriḥāt-i shāb (under pseud. DHĀTī; 1932), which expressed his deep frustration and despair and his nihilistic tendencies in a colourful idiom. His subsequent novels further vented his profound distrust of human society and unrelenting hatred of the existing order, without however advocating any particular creed. In 1941, when the Allied armies entered Iran, Mas'ūd founded Mard-i Imruz, a clamorous journal whose harsh and defiant editorials finally led to his assassination. A prophet of despair and a rebel without a cause, he developed a mastery of vivid depiction of characters and situations hardly surpassed in modern Persian writing.

Dār Tālāsh-i Ma'āsh (1932); Ashraf-i Makhluqāt (1934); Gulha'i ki dar Jahannam Miruyād (1942); Bahār-i 'Umr (1945).

H. Kamshad, Modern Persian Prose Literature (1966). E.Y.

AL-Mas'ūdi, ABU AL-HASAN 'ALI IBN AL-HUSAIN IBN 'ALI (*Baghdad n.d.; †Fustāt [Old Cairo] 956/957), Arab historian and geographer. Besides travelling through the Fertile Crescent, Egypt and Persia, he visited India, Ceylon, the China Sea,

Zanzibar, Oman and the Caspian lands. He usually accepted the tales of travellers and sailors regarding the lands he could not visit, or used inaccurate translations of histories of peoples whose languages he could not master. His masterpiece, Murūj al-Dhahab wa-Ma'ādin al-Jawhar, finished in 947, is a rich and accurate source of the geography, history and sociology of early medieval Islam; his other indispensable treatise, Kitāb al-Tanbīh w-al-Ishrāf, contains important revisions and additions to the former.

Murūj al-Dhahab wa Ma'ādin al-Jawhar (Prairies d'or, ed. and tr. C. Barbier de Meynard and P. de Courteille, 9 vols, 1861–77; Meadows of Gold and Mines of Gems, incomplete tr. A. Sprenger, 1841; rev. tr. C. Pellat, in progr., I, 1962); Kitāb al-Tanbīh w-al-Ishrāf (ed. M. J. de Goeje, 1894; analysis by S. de Sacy in Notices et extraits des MSS de la Bib. Nat., VIII, 1810, repr. in Prairies d'or: le livre de l'avertissement et de la revision, IX, tr. C. de Vaux, 1896).

G. Sarton, Introduction to the History of Science, I (1927); Al-Mas'ūdi Millenary Commemoration Volume (ed. S. Maqbul Ahmad and A. Rahman, 1960). G.T.S.

Mas'ūd-i Sa'd-i Salmān (*Lahore c. 1047; †1121), Persian poet. He lived at the court of the Ghaznavid princes in India, and in early life enjoyed wealth and a high position; later he was suspected of conspiracy and twice imprisoned. After 19 years in gaol, he was freed in 1106 and was given a post at court. He passed the last years of his life in retirement. Mas'ūd is mainly a panegyrist, but owes his fame chiefly to his moving odes, written in prison, in which he complains of his misfortune and pleads his innocence.

Divān (Tehran, 1878; ed. R. Yasami, 1939).

M. Muhammad Qazvini, Mas'ūd-i Sa'd-i Salmān (tr. E. G. Browne, 1906; repr. from Jour. Roy. Asiat. Soc.); J. Rypka, History of Iranian Literature (1968). E.Y.

Matavulj, SIMO (*Šibenik 14 IX 1852; †Belgrade 20 II 1908), Serbian novelist. As a schoolmaster in Dalmatia, Montenegro and Serbia he acquired familiarity with regional life and character, which he turned to good account in realistic novels and short stories. His literary talent in narration and style, and his objectivity, tolerance and humour are characteristics of his novel of monastic life Bakonja fra Brne (1892).

STORIES: Iz Crne Gore i Primorja (1888); Iz primorskog života (1890); Iz beogradskog života (1891); Pripovetke (sel.; 1969).—Uskok (novel; 1892); Bilješke jednoga pisca (notes; 1939).—Sabrana dela (coll. works; 1961).

G. Dobrašinović, S. M. (1962).

V.J.

Matheolus, or Matthieu le Bigame (*?Boulogne-sur-Mer; fl. 1270–1300; ∞ 'Petronilla'), French Latin poet. A clerk, he was present at the Council of Lyons in 1274 and sometime thereafter contracted a 'bigamous' marriage (i.e. a marriage with a widow) which seems to have cut short his career. His Lamentations (c. 1295) form an encyclopaedia of antifeminism, containing all the misogynistic themes and arguments accumulated by a long line of medieval authors and drawing on a wide variety of sources. The work was translated into French about 1370 by Jean Lefevre* of Resson, who added a sequel of his own, Le Livre de Leesce, controverting Matheolus' arguments. The Lamentations were well known and influential in 15th-century France.

Lat. text and Fr. tr., incl. Le Livre de Leesce, ed. A. G. Van Hamel (1892–1905). F.W.

Mather, COTTON (*Boston 12 II 1663; ∞ 1686 Abigail Phillips, ∞ Elizabeth Hubbard, ∞ Lydia George; † ibid. 13 II 1728), American Puritan clergyman, scholar and historian. His diary tells of his severe soul-searching and mystic visions. Son of Increase, he developed his precocious intellect at Harvard, and laboured fiercely for the Church; dabbled in science; took part in the Salem witch-hunts; and wrote some 444 separate items of which the Magnalia, a monumental piece of historiography, is the most important.

The Wonders of the Invisible World (1693); Magnalia Christi Americana; or, The Ecclesiastical History of New-England (1702).—Selections From C. M. (ed. K. B. Murdock, 1926).

B. Wendell, C. M.: The Puritan Priest (1891); A. P. Marvin, The Life and Times of C. M. (1892); P. Gay, A Loss of Mastery: Puritan Historians in Colonial America (1966). H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Mather, INCREASE (*Boston 21 VI 1639; ∞ 1662 Maria Cotton; † ibid. 23 VIII 1723), American Puritan clergyman; President of Harvard (1685–1701); after taking part in Salem witchcraft persecutions was forced to resign. He represented the colony in England, published nearly 150 titles.

An Essay for the Recording of Illustrious Providences (1684); Cases of Conscience Concerning Evil Spirits Personating Men (1693).

K. B. Murdock, I. M.: The Foremost American Puritan (1925). H.L.C.

Mathews, CORNELIUS (*Port Chester, N.Y. 28 X 1817; † New York 25 III 1889), American journalist and playwright. His tragedy, Witchcraft, or the Martyrs of Salem, was a popular production of 1846 (published 1852). He also compiled volumes of Indian legends.

A Pen-and-Ink Panorama of New York City (1853); The Enchanted Moccasins and Other Legends of the American Indians (1877).—The Various Writings of C. M. (1843).

T. F. Jones in Dictionary of American Biography (1933). H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Mathias, THOMAS JAMES (*?1754; † Naples VIII 1835), English satirical poet and Italian scholar, translator into Italian of Faerie Queene and other poems; editor of Gray*. R.M.H.

Runic Odes imitated from Norse tongue in manner of Mr Gray (1781); Essay on evidence, external and internal, relating to poems attributed to T. Rowley (1783); Pursuits of Literature (4 pts, 1794–97).

K. Hopkins, Portraits in Satire (1958).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Matić, DUŠAN (*Čuprija 31 VIII 1898), Serbian novelist, poet and critic. An outstanding literary figure between the two wars and one of the most prominent figures in the re-emergence of Serbian letters in the early 1950s, Matić has been editor of many literary journals including Književnost. He began publishing poetry in 1923 and was heavily influenced by the French Surrealists but soon developed in the direction of greater lucidity and sharpness of image. His prose is modernist and poetic in texture and his critical writing is creative and discerning, and he remains one of the most influential literary figures in contemporary Belgrade. He has also translated from French, in particular Zola* and Flaubert*.

POEMS: Marija Ručara (1935; with A. Vučo); Bagdala (1954, 1964); Budjenje materije (1959).—NOVELS: Gluvo doba (1959, 1963; with A. Vučo); Kocka je bacena (1957).—ESSAYS: Položaj nadrealizma u društvenom procesu (1932; with O. Davičo and D. Kostić); Jedan vid francuske književnosti (1952); Anina balska haljina (1956); Na tapet dana (1961); Laža i paralaža noći (1962); Proplanak i um (1969). B.J.

Matković, MARIJAN (*Karlovac 21 IX 1915), Croatian dramatist. After graduating in law at Zagreb, Matković studied in Vienna and Paris. He was connected with Zagreb-Film and the Croatian National Theatre and is the editor of the journal Forum. He has been writing for and about the theatre since 1934 and is by far and away the most prolific and most successful post-war playwright in Zagreb. His plays are set mainly in the middle-class urban society of Zagreb between the wars and present some of the problems of the intellectual in a decaying society. He has more recently used satire and allegory in a classical Greek setting to convey topical and political motifs such as the suppression of personal freedoms and the subordination of individuals to the State under a totalitarian regime.

PLAYS: Slučaj maturanta Wagnera (1935); Prometej (1951); Igra oko smrti (1955); Na kraju puta (1954); Vašar snova (1958); Heraklo (1958); Ahilova baština (1961); I bogovi pate (trilogy; 1962); Ranjena ptica (1966). B.J.

Matoš, ANTUN GUSTAV (*Tovarnik 13 VI 1873; †Zagreb 17 III 1914), Croatian writer in many fields. After years of varied activities abroad and in Belgrade he returned to Zagreb to a bohemian existence, but as the most cultured Croat of his time. He was above all a literary critic, an exponent of the principle of art for art's sake in lively essays and articles of wide cosmopolitan erudition.

Iverje (1899); Ogledi (1905); Vidici i putovi (1907); Naši ljudi i krajevi (1910).—A. G. M. (coll. works; 17 vols, 1967); Odabrana dela (sel. works; 1969).

T. Čolak, A. G. M. (1962); M. (coll. essays by various writers; 1965). V.J.

Matos Fragoso, JUAN DE (*Alemtejo, Portugal ?1608; †?Madrid 1689), Spanish dramatist. His plays were much influenced by Calderón's*. He collaborated with Moreto* and Diamante*.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XLVII. E.M.W.

Matos Guerra, GREGÓRIO DE (*Salvador, Bahia 20 XII 1633; †Recife, Pernambuco 1696), Brazilian poet. He qualified as a lawyer in Portugal, and returned to Brazil in 1679 with a promising career already endangered by his inflexible honesty and the satirical verve of his pen. The lay and clerical leaders of Salvador society could not tolerate this fearless admirer of Quevedo* and Góngora*, and after a period of exile in Angola he found it advisable to settle in Recife. His poetry circulated exclusively in manuscript, but found warm admirers where it did not make enemies. His religious and amatory verses are less original but by no means lacking in feeling.

Obras (6 vols, 1923–33). No definitive text.

P. Calmon, A vida espantosa de G. de M. (1933; vol. VI of the above ed.); Maria del Carmen Barquim, G. de M. (1946). J.T.B.

Matras, CHRISTIAN (*Viðareiði 7 XII 1900; ∞1929 Marianna Lüthen), Faroese poet. Matras combines a simplicity of form with great complexity and depth of thought. Although his inspiration is clearly drawn from the Faroes, his themes are mostly of a universal or personal nature.

VERSE: Grátt, kátt og hátt (1926); Heimur og heima (1933); Úr leikum og loyndum (1940).

M.P.B.

Matsunaga TEITOKU, pseud. of MATSUNAGA KATSUGUMA (*Kyoto 1571; †ibid. 3 I 1654), Japanese poet. Having studied the technique of haiku poetry from his youth, he revived and popularized this genre, which later reached its climax with Bashō*. His poems were however considered by later critics to be too dependent on word-play and wit.

E.B.C.

Sel. poems tr. in A. Miyamori, An Anthology of

Haiku (1932); R. H. Blyth, 'Teitoku and the Teimon school' in A History of Haiku, I (1963); D. L. Keene, 'M. T. and the beginning of haikai poetry' in Landscapes and Portraits: Appreciations of Japanese Culture (1971). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Matsuo BASHŌ: see Bashō.

Matthaei, CLARA, pseud. GERTRUD HOFF and WALTER GRAY (*nr Bellville, Texas 1884; ∞1913 Asunción Palacios, ∞1929 Francisco Reyes; †Aguas Calientes, Mexico 2 XI 1934), Texas-German novelist.

Vineta Lieder (1911); Wer bin ich? (1913); 'Bücher mit sieben Siegeln' in Das Wochenblatt (Texas, 1923); 'Der Compadre', ibid. (1924).

S. Metzenthin-Raunick and N. Schulze, 'The tragedy of C. M.' in Southwest Rev., XXI (1935). E.R.

Matthew of Vendôme (*Vendôme; fl. 1185), French Latin grammarian and poet. He studied at Tours, probably under Bernard* Silvester, and taught grammar at Orléans; after a sojourn in Paris he returned to Tours. He wrote many poems, among them a Tobias, a handbook on verse-composition (Ars versificatoria) and a collection of specimen letters in verse. His Milo is a versified tale or comœdia.

E. Faral, Les arts poétiques du XIIe et du XIIIe siècle (1924).—W. Wattenbach, 'Der poetische Briefsteller des M. von V.' in Sitzungsberichte der bayerischen Akad. der Wissenschaften (1872); D. Kelly, 'The scope and treatment of composition in the 12th- and 13th-century Arts of Poetry' in Speculum, XLI (1966). F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Matthew Paris: see Paris, MATTHEW.

Matthey, PIERRE-LOUIS (*Avenex, Vaud 19 VII 1893; †Geneva 1970), Swiss poet, a powerful lyricist who attains rare technical perfection. His first volumes are passionate adolescent poems of great intensity: Seize à vingt (1914); Semaines de passion (1919); Même sang (1920). Later volumes are more preoccupied with the mystery of death and with an original verbal expression, revealing a poet of the school of Mallarmé*: Alcyonée à Pallène (1941), Aux Jardins du Père (1949). Matthey is the translator of several Shakespearean plays and sonnets, of Keats* (Tendre est la nuit, 1950) and of Blake* (Chants de l'innocence et de l'expérience, 1947). J.P.I. (G.G.)

Poésies complètes (incl. trs; 1968). G.G.

Matthiessen, FRANCIS OTTO (*Pasadena, Cal. 19 II 1902; †Boston, Mass. 1 IV 1950), American critic. In his major works he has investigated patterns of American experience and their relation to literary achievement.

Sarah Orne Jewett (1929); Translation: An Elizabethan Art (1931); The Achievement of T. S. Eliot (1935); American Renaissance: Art and Expression in the Age of Emerson and Whitman (1941); Henry James: The Major Phase (1944); The James Family (1947); Theodore Dreiser (1951); The Responsibilities of the Critic: Essays and Reviews (ed. J. Rackliffe, 1952).

H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

Matthieu, PIERRE (*Pesmes, Franche-Comté 10 XII 1563; †Montauban 12 X 1621), French dramatist, historian and poet. Much of his work is occasional or political. His Histoire de France (1605, 1631) gives a contemporary's account of the reigns of Henri IV and Louis XIII. He is known principally for his five tragedies (three of them Biblical), written with moral or polemical intentions for performance by students.

PLAYS: Esther (1585); La Guisarde, Vasthi, Aman, Clytemnestre (1589).—VERSE: Tablettes [or Quatrains] de la vie et la mort (1610; ed. J. Rosny, 1805, G.B.).

Matthieu le Bigame: see Matheolus.

Matthijs, MARCEL (*Oedelem 11 I 1899; †Bruges 30 VIII 1964), Flemish author. His realistic novels and short stories are written in a vigorous and impetuous prose. His characters rebel against a hostile world or emphasize the absurdity of life.

De ruitentikker (1953; rev. ed. 1960; Der enttäuschte Sozialist, tr. G. Hermanowski, 1953); Doppen (1936); Een spook op zolder (1938; rev. ed. as Filomeentje, 1960; Moi, Philomène, Fr. tr. M. Gevers, 1942); Schaduw over Brugge (1940); Wie kan dat begripen? (1949; Wer kann das begreifen?, tr. G. Hermanowski, 1949); Hellegat (1949); Spiegel van leven en dood (1954); De kleine Pardon (1954).

F. Bonneure, M. M. (1965).

R.F.L. (tr. P.K.)

Matthisson, FRIEDRICH VON (*Hohenbodeleben nr Magdeburg 23 I 1761; †Wörlitz nr Dessau 12 III 1831), German poet. At first a master at Basedow's school in Dessau, Matthisson travelled for some years as tutor and companion, then joined the suite of Princess Louise of Anhalt-Dessau, afterwards entering the administration first of Baden (1801) then of Württemberg. His deft, sentimental poems, which Schiller* praised, reveal a decided formal talent and a mind without originality or distinction. He is the poet of Beethoven's Adelaide.

Lieder (1781); Gedichte (1787).—Erinnerungen (5 vols, 1810–15); Schriften (8 vols, 1815–29); Literarischer Nachlass (4 vols, 1832).

H. Döring, M.s Leben (1833); W. Krebs, F. von M. (1912); A. Heers, F. von M. (1913). H.B.G.

Matto de Turner, CLORINDA (*Cuzco 1854; †1909), Peruvian novelist. In her youth she wrote verses and some stories in the manner of Palma* which found favour. Her fame spread in the Spanish-American world with her novel Aves sin nido (1889), a kind of Uncle Tom's Cabin on behalf of the oppressed Peruvian Indian. This was the first of the many similar novels that have since appeared in all countries with an Indian (or Negro) section of the population.

Tradiciones cuzqueñas (2 vols, 1884–86); Indole (1890); Hima-Sumac (1892; play); Herencia (1895). E.Sa.

Maturin, CHARLES ROBERT (*Dublin 1782; †ibid. 30 X 1824), Irish novelist; Protestant curate of St Peter's, Dublin; wrote several novels of considerable power. His best work is Melmoth the Wanderer (1820), a horror story which combines Byronic satanism with psychological complexities.

The Fatal Revenge (1807); The Wild Irish Boy (1808); The Milesian Chief (1812); Woman (1818).

Niilo Idman, C. R. M. (Helsingfors, 1923); W. Scholten, C. R. M. The Terror Novelist (Amsterdam, 1933); F. E. Ratchford and W. H. McCarthy, Correspondence of Walter Scott and C. R. M. (1937). E.T.W.

Matute, ANA MARÍA (*Barcelona 1926), Spanish novelist and author of the effectively written trilogy Primera memoria (1960), Los soldados lloran de noche (1964) and La trampa (1969). J.E.V.

Maugham, WILLIAM SOMERSET (*Paris 25 I 1874; †1915 Gwendolen Maude Syrie Wellcome [o/o]; †Saint Jean Cap Ferrat 16 XII 1965), English novelist, playwright and short-story writer. He was much influenced by French writers, especially Maupassant*. His simple, almost colloquial style, his detachment in letting his story and characters speak for themselves, his skill in contriving critical situations, won for many of his novels and short stories the admiration of critics. In middle life he turned to the theatre and was successful with diverting society plays. He travelled much, and his scenes are laid in many places.

NOVELS: Liza of Lambeth (1897); Of Human Bondage (1915); The Moon and Sixpence (1919); Ashenden (1928); Cakes and Ale (1930); The Razor's Edge (1944).—SHORT STORIES: Orientations (1899); The Trembling of a Leaf (1921); The Casuarina Tree (1926); Cosmopolitans (1936); The Mixture as Before (1940).—PLAYS: Lady Frederick (1912); The Circle (1921); Our Betters (1923); The Constant Wife (1927); The Breadwinner (1930); Sheppey (1933).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: The Summing Up (1938); Strictly Personal (1941).

P. Dottin, W. S. M. et ses romans (1928) and Le Théâtre de W. S. M. (1937); R. H. Ward, W. S. M.

(1937); R. Mander and J. Mitchenson, Theatrical Companion to M. (1955); K. W. Jonas, The World of S. M. (1959); R. A. Cordell, S. M.: A Writer for All Seasons (1961; 2nd ed. 1969); L. Brander, S. M.: A Guide (1963); G. Kanin, Remembering Mr M. (1966); B. Nichols, A Case of Human Bondage (1966).—Biblio. by R. T. Stott (1956).
R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Maulavī, JALĀL-AL-DĪN MUḤAMMAD, RŪMĪ (*Balkh 30 IX 1207; ∞1226 Gowhar Khātūn; †Konia 17 XII 1273), Persian poet and mystic. At the age of five he accompanied his father to Asia Minor, where the latter settled in Konia as a religious teacher. A few years after his father's death in 1231 he began to teach in Konia. Shams-i Tabrizī, a weird and mysterious Sufi, exercised a tremendous influence on the poet, and later he received inspiration from his two favourite disciples, Salāḥ-al-Dīn Zarkūb and Ḥusām-al-Dīn. Maulavī was highly revered by his contemporaries as a spiritual leader. He founded the order of the Maulavis ('Whirling Dervishes'), among whom music and symbolic dancing had a prominent place.

Maulavī is the most eminent mystic poet of Persia, and his Mathnavī, a long poem in six books, containing fables, anecdotes, precepts and reflections, all intended to explain the Sufi doctrine, is regarded as one of the greatest monuments of mystical thought in the Persian language. His other main, and perhaps purer, poetical work is Divān-i Shams-i Tabriz (the collection of his lyrical odes, named after his spiritual leader).

His poetry is distinguished by depth of feeling, richness of thought and imagery, sweeping enthusiasm and spontaneous diction. In his preoccupation with his subject, he often disregards elegance or formal beauty. The doctrine preached by Maulavī is a pantheistic mysticism where Neo-Platonic ideas are combined with Islamic instruction.

VERSE: Mathnavī-yi Ma'navī (Bulaq, 1835; Mathnavī of Jalālū'ddīn Rūmī, ed. and tr. with notes and comm. R. A. Nicholson, 8 vols, 1925–40; Tales From the Masnavi, tr. A. J. Arberry, 1961; More Tales From the Masnavi, tr. idem, 1963); Divān-i Shams-i Tabriz (Tabriz, 1865; ed. B. Furuzanfar, Tehran, 1917/18 ff.; Selections From the Divani Shamsi Tabriz, ed. and tr. R. A. Nicholson, 1898; The Festival of Spring from the Divan of Jaleleddin, tr. [after Rückert's version] W. Hastie, 1903); Rubā'iyāt of Jalāl al-Dīn Rūmī (metrical tr. A. J. Arberry, 1949); Mystical Poems of Rūmī (tr. idem, 1968).—PROSE: Maktūbāt-i Maulānā Jalāl-al-Dīn (Istanbul, 1945); Majālis-i Sab'a-yi Maulānā (ibid., 1937).

F. H. Davis, The Persian Mystics: Jalalud-Din Rumi (1907); C. Huart, Les saints des derviches tourneurs (2 vols, 1918–22); B. Furuzanfar, Maulānā -J. al-D. M. (Tehran, 1936); R. A. Nicholson, Rūmī, Poet and Mystic (pref. A. J.

Arberry, 1951); Afzal Iqbal, The Life and Thought of M. J. Rumi (1955).
E.Y.

Maupassant, HENRI RENÉ ALBERT GUY DE (*Tourville-sur-Arques 5 VIII 1850; †Paris 6 VII 1893), French novelist and short-story writer. Maupassant's parents parted when he was 11 years old and the break-up of the home left a lasting impression on the man and his work. His mother was a sister of Flaubert's* friend, Alfred Le Poittevin, and it was to Flaubert that she turned for advice when her husband left her. From 1872 to 1880 Maupassant worked as a clerk in the civil service. These were the years of his apprenticeship as a writer when he visited Flaubert every week to have his early exercises corrected. Success came with the publication in 1880 of Boule de Suif in a composite volume of short stories called Les Soirées de Médan to which Zola* was a contributor. He was able to leave the civil service and earn his living by writing. He was one of the most popular and highly paid French writers until his early death from syphilis.

The best of his stories are those dealing with the Franco-German war, the Norman peasantry and the lower reaches of the bureaucracy. Their superb craftsmanship and 'slickness' make him the virtual inventor of the commercial short story, but he did not possess the moral and intellectual qualities which belong to the great writer. Pierre et Jean is the most successful of his novels and reveals a depth and insight which are rare in his work.

Boule de suif (1880); La Maison Tellier (1881); Mlle Fifi (1882); Contes de la bécasse (1883); Clair de lune, Miss Harriet, Les Sœurs Rondoli (1884); Toine, Yvette, Contes et nouvelles, Contes du jour et de la nuit (1885); Monsieur Parent, La Petite Roque (1886); Le Horla (1887); Le Rosier de Mme Husson (1888); La Main gauche (1889); L'Inutile beauté (1890).—NOVELS: Une Vie (1883; A Woman's Life, tr. Antonia White, 1949); Bel-Ami (1885); Mont-Oriol (1887); Pierre et Jean (1888; Pierre and Jean, tr. M. Turnell, 1962); Fort comme la mort (1889); Notre cœur (1890).—PLAYS: Histoire du vieux temps (1879); Musotte (1891); La Paix du ménage (1893).—VARIOUS: Des vers (1880); Au Soleil (1884); Sur l'eau (1888); La Vie errante (1890).—Œuvres complètes (ed. A. Gillon and E. Chouveau, 15 vols, 1934–38); The Works of G. de M. (tr. M. Laurie, 10 vols, 1923–29).

H. James, Partial Portraits (1888); E. Maynial, La vie et l'œuvre de M. (1906); G. Selzer, G. de M. (good stud. in Ger.; 1926); R. Dumesnil, G. de M. (1933); A. Artinian, M. Criticism in France (1941); F. Steegmuller, M. (1950); A. Vidal, G. de M. et l'art du roman (1954); E. D. Sullivan, M. the Novelist (1954) and M. the Short Stories (1962); F. Lemoine, G. de M. (1957); M. Turnell, The Art of French Fiction (1959); A. M. Schmidt, M. par lui-même (1962); A. Lanoux, M. le bel-ami (1967).
M.T.

Mauriac, CLAUDE: see NOUVEAU ROMAN.

Mauriac, FRANÇOIS (*Bordeaux 11 X 1885; †Paris 1 IX 1970), French writer. Born into the rich upper middle class of Bordeaux, Mauriac was educated at a Roman Catholic school, at Bordeaux University and at the École des Chartes in Paris. He soon, however, abandoned scholarship for the writing of fiction. In 1922 Le baiser au lèpreux (A Kiss for the Leper, tr. G. Hopkins, 1950) made him famous. In 1933, he was elected a member of the French Academy. His passion for justice led him to take sides against the dictatorship of General Franco. He was active during the Resistance and, under the name of FOREZ, published Le Cahier Noir (1943) in the clandestine Éditions de Minuit. In 1945 he became a brilliant leader-writer on Le Figaro. He won the Nobel prize in 1952.

From the sum total of diverse influences (Pascal*, Racine*, Barrès*, Rimbaud*) Mauriac has evolved a most original type of novel, at once Catholic and pessimistic, concerned with depicting carnal, violent or criminal passions, and in which grace is granted to the sinner's soul only in extremis. His power of psychological evocation, his poetic feeling for 'atmosphere' and his intimate sense of pathos, all expressed in an admirably supple style, have produced a number of great novels and plays.

NOVELS (tr. Gerard Hopkins): La robe prétexte (1914; The Stuff of Youth, 1960); Préséances (1921); Génitrix (1923; tr. 1950); Le désert de l'amour (1925; The Desert of Love, 1949); Orages (1925); Thérèse Desqueyroux (1927; tr. 1947); Destins (1928); Trois récits (1929); Ce qui était perdu (1930; That Which Was Lost, tr. J. H. F. McEwan, 1951); Le nœud de vipères (1932; The Knot of Vipers, 1951); Le mystère Frontenac (1933; The Frontenac Mystery, 1952); La fin de la nuit (1935; tr. in Thérèse, 1947); Les anges noirs (1936; The Dark Angels, 1951); Les chemins de la mer (1939; The Unknown Sea, 1948); La Pharisiennne (1941; A Woman of the Pharisees, 1946); Le sagouin (1951; The Little Misery, 1952); Galigai (1952; The Loved and the Unloved, 1953); L'agneau (1954; The Lamb, 1955); Un adolescent d'autrefois (1969; Maltaverne, tr. J. Stewart, 1970).—ESSAYS: Petits essais de psychologie religieuse (1920); Proust (1926); La rencontre avec Pascal (1926); Souffrances et bonheur du chrétien (1929; Anguish and Joy of the Christian Life, tr. H. Evans, 1967); Le romancier et ses personnages (1933); Journal (1934; new eds 1937, 1947); Vie de Jésus (1936; Life of Jesus, tr. J. Kernan, 1937); La rencontre avec Barrès (1945); Journal 1932-39 (1947); Journal (1950); Mémoires politiques (1967).—PLAYS: Asmodée (1938; tr. Sir B. Bartlett, 1939); Les mal aimés (1945); Passage du malin (1948); Le feu sur la terre (1951); Le pain vivant (1955).

C. du Bos, F. M., ou le problème du romancier catholique (1933); C. E. Magny, Histoire du roman français depuis 1918 (1950); N. Corneau, L'art de F. M. (1951); P. H. Simon, F. M. (1953); M. Alyn, F. M. (1960); K. Goesch, F. M. Essai de bibliographie chronologique (1966); J. E. Flower, Intention and Achievement: An Essay on the Novels of F. M. (1969). M.G.; J.P.R.

Maurice, the name under which a Byzantine military handbook has survived (the so-called Tactica of the PSEUDO-MAURICE). This compilation is attributed to various authors including Urbicius (fl. 491-510), the Emperor Maurice and the Emperor Heraclius (whom recent research favours). At one point the text was worked over by Leo* VI the Wise.

Eds: J. Scheffer (Uppsala, 1664; with Lat. tr.); H. Mihăescu (Bucharest, 1970). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Maurice, FREDERICK DENISON (*Normanston, Lowestoft 29 VIII 1805; ∞1837 Anna Barton, John Sterling's sister-in-law, ∞1849 Georgina Hare-Naylor, Julius Hare's half-sister; †London 1 IV 1872), English clergyman of wide and ardent sympathies, founder of Christian Socialism.

Religions of the World (1847); Social Morality (1869).

C. F. G. Masterman, Life of F. D. M. (1907); J. F. Maurice, Life (1884); A. M. Ramsey, M. and the Conflicts of Modern Theology (1951).

R.M.H.

Maurice de Sully (*Sully-sur-Loire ?1120; †11 IX 1196), French writer and theologian. Archdeacon in 1159, he was a renowned preacher before becoming Bishop of Paris (12 X 1160); he conducted negotiations for the French Kings. His sermons, based on Latin originals, are of a practical nature and enlivened by familiar touches.

P. Meyer, 'Les manuscrits des sermons français de M. de S.' in Romania, V (1876) and XXIII (1894).

C. A. Robson, M. of S. (1952). M.F.L.

Maurik, JUSTUS VAN (*Amsterdam 16 VIII 1846; †ibid. 18 XI 1904), Dutch popular short-story writer, novelist and playwright.

PLAYS: Tooneelstudiën (1872); Een bittere pil (1874); Janus Tulp (1879); Fijne beschuit (1883).—SHORT STORIES: Uit het volk (1879); Van allerlei slag (1881); Burgerluidjes (1884); Uit één pen (1886); Toen ik nog jong was (1901).

J. ten Brink, Geschiedenis der Noord-Nederl. letteren, II (1904); J. H. Rössing, J. de Koo et al., Uit het leven van J. van M. (1904). J.W.W.

Maurina, ZENTA (*Grobina, Latvia 15 XII 1897; ∞1946 Konstantin Raudive), writer of prose in Latvian and (since 1947) in German. The amount, range, development and integrity of her work have yet to be recognized. Even those who know the tragic situations she had to endure remain unaware of the shattering proportions of her ordeals. Besides being severely handicapped by infantile paralysis at the age of six many other enemies warred against her soul and made her 'a specialist in suffering'. Yet deeply affected as she was by her own personal ill-fate, which brought loss of home and country, neglect and poverty, her gifts for writing never faltered and her humane concern grieves even more passionately for the sorrows, cruelties and indignities of mankind. Her life and work constitute a remarkable synthesis between East (especially Russia) and West. Her numerous books of essays and most of all her autobiographical writings—Die weite Fahrt (1951); Denn das Wagnis ist schön (1953); Die eisernen Riegel zerbrechen (1957)—reflect her dominant and unchanging theme, the relationship of man to his fellow men and the world. They are entirely free from literary artifice and written with her heart's blood; they are also steeped in Latvian, German, Russian, European, Western and universal culture, yet the knife-edge of the present always remains to the fore.

IN LATVIAN: Dostojevskis (1933; A Prophet of the Soul, tr. C. P. Finlayson, 1939); Grāmata par cilvēkiem un lietām (1938); Kopotī raksti (1939; I and II of 10-vol. ed. of complete works); Dzīves vīciņā (1941); Kulturās saknes (1944); Francesca (1952); Cilvēces sargi (1955); Sākuma bija prieks (1965); Trimdas tragika (1965).

IN GERMAN: ESSAYS: Mosaik des Herzens (1947); Gestalten und Schicksale (1949); Um des Menschen willen (1955); Auf der Schwelle zweier Welten (1959); Über Liebe und Tod (1960); Die Langeweile und der gehetzte Mensch (1962); Welteinheit und die Aufgabe des Einzelnen (1963); Verfremdung und Freundschaft (1966); Abenteuer des Menschseins (1970).—NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: Im Zuge des Lebens (1956; 2nd ed. 1971); Sieben Gäste (1961); Birkenborke-Benjamin (1967).—Nord- und südliches Gelände (Swedish diaries 1946–51; 1962); Jahre der Befreiung (Swedish diaries 1951–58; 1965); Tod im Frühling (1972).—CRITICAL BIOGRAPHIES: Dostojevskij (enlarged ed. 1952); Porträts russischer Schriftsteller (1968).

P. Ērmanis, Z. M. dzīve (1939) and Trimdas rakstnieki (1947); M. Dietrich, Ein Leben aus abendländischem Geist (1953); O. Schempp, Das Herz hat Flügel (1957); Buch der Freundschaft (Festschrift; 1967). K.W.M.

Maurois, ANDRÉ, pseud. of EMILE HERZOG (*Elbeuf 26 VII 1885; †Neuilly 9 X 1967), French writer. Maurois belonged to a family of Jewish industrialists from Alsace who, after 1870, took refuge in Normandy. He took his University degree in philosophy, and was a pupil of Alain*. In the war of 1914 he served as a liaison officer with the British army. During the war of 1939 he was in the United States and returned to France in 1946. He was created K.B.E. in 1938. He was sympathetic to all things Anglo-Saxon, and won a high reputation in the field of 'romanticized' biography. He was also the author of several novels all dealing, sensitively, with emotional and moral crises set against a middle-class background, and of a number of works on criticism and world affairs. In everything he wrote he showed a fine humanism and an acute intelligence.

NOVELS: Les silences du Colonel Bramble (1918; Eng. tr. T. Wake, 1927); Les discours du docteur O'Grady (1922); Bernard Quesnay (1926); Climats (1928); Le cercle de famille (1932); L'instinct du bonheur (1934); Nouveaux discours du docteur O'Grady (1950); The Return of Doctor O'Grady, tr. G. Hopkins, 1951).—ESSAYS: Ariel, ou la vie de Shelley (1923; Eng. tr. E. D'Arcy, 1924); Dialogues sur le commandement (1925); Captains and Kings, tr. J. L. May, 1925; Disraëli (1927; tr. H. Miles, 1937); Byron (1930; tr. idem, 1930); Lyautey (1931); Voltaire (1935); Edouard VII (1937); Histoire de l'Angleterre (1937; History of England, tr. H. Miles, 1937); Chateaubriand (1938); Journal (New York, 1942); À la recherche de Marcel Proust (1949); The Quest for Proust, tr. G. Hopkins, 1950); Lélia, ou la vie de George Sand (1952; tr. idem, 1953); Les trois Dumas (1957; tr. idem, 1957); Prométhée ou la vie de Balzac (1963).—Aux innocents les mains pleines (play; 1955).—Mémoires (1970).

M. Droit, A. M. (1953); J. Suffel, A. M. (1963). M.G.; J.P.R.

Mauropous: see John Mauropous.

Maurras, CHARLES (*Martigues 20 IV 1868; †Saint-Symphorien 16 XI 1952), French writer. Maurras' background was Catholic and Provençal. He was a spiritual heir of Mistral* and began his literary career as a poet and critic in the classical tradition. After the Dreyfus affair he devoted himself entirely to politics. As editor of L'Action Française he preached a doctrine of exclusive nationalism and for close on 50 years maintained his belief in the traditional and anti-parliamentarian system which he had devised. In 1926 he was condemned by the Pope, and somewhat later, disavowed by the claimant to the French throne. In spite of his hatred of Germany he became one of Pétain's advisers in 1940 and was sentenced in 1945 to life imprisonment.

Le chemin de paradis (1891); Anthinéa (1901); Enquête sur la monarchie (1901); Les amants de Venise (1902); L'avenir de l'intelligence (1905); Les conditions de la victoire (1916); L'allée de philosophes (1924); La musique intérieure (1925); Romantisme et révolution (1925); Les idées royalistes sur les partis, l'état, la nation (1925); La sagesse de Mistral (1931).

P. Lasserre, C. M. et la renaissance classique (1902); A. Thibaudet, Les idées de C. M. (1920); L. Daudet, C. M. et son temps (1930); H. Massis, M. et notre temps (2 vols, 1951). M.G.; J.P.R.

Maximianus (fl. 6th century A.D.). Born in Etruria, Maximianus spent his youth at Rome. He was a friend of Boethius* and author of six elegies which endeavour to reproduce the spirit of the Augustan poets to whom he is indebted.

Eds: A. Baehrens, Poetae Latini minores, V (1883); R. Webster (with comm; 1900).

W. Schetter, Studien zu . . . Maximian (1970).
A.J.D.

Maxim the Greek: see Grek, MAXIM.

Maximus THE CONFESSOR (c. 580–662), Byzantine theologian. He was an imperial official and then monk, and was exiled for his outspoken opposition to imperial ecclesiastical policy. His works include metaphysical, theological and ascetic treatises, and he is particularly important for his use of the pseudo-Dionysian corpus. He was constantly read by later Byzantine ascetics and theologians.

J.M.H.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, IV (scholia on pseudo-Dionysius; 1857) and XC–XCI (1860; both with Lat. tr.).

H. Urs von Balthasar, Liturgie cosmique: Maxime le Confesseur (1947); P. Sherwood, An Annotated Date-List of the Works of M. the C. (Rome, 1952) and 'Survey of recent works on St M. the C.' in Traditio, XX (1964).

J.M.H. (R.B.)

Maximus Planudes (*1260; †1310), Byzantine scholar and humanist. He not only promoted Greek learning but was interested in translating Latin authors. He left a number of works, including poems and an important collection of letters.

L. Bachmann, Anecdota Graeca, II (1828); C. Walz, Rhetores Graeci, V (1833); Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXLVII (1865; with Lat. tr.); letters ed. M. Treu (1890).

J.M.H.

Max Muller, FRIEDRICH (*Dessau 6 XII 1823; ∞1859 Georgiana Grenfell; †Oxford 28 X 1900), German Orientalist and philologist, son of Wilhelm Müller*, long Professor of comparative philology at Oxford, where he promoted study of comparative religion and mythology; translator of sacred Oriental books.

Rigveda (1873); Chips from a German Workshop (4 vols, 1867–75); Deutsche Liebe (1857); Lectures on Science of Language (1882); Science of Religion (1875); Auld Lang Syne (2 vols, 1898); My Autobiography (fragment; 1901).—Life and Letters (by his widow; 1902).

R.M.H.

May, KARL (*Hohenstein-Ernstthal 24 II 1842; †Radebeul 31 III 1912), German novelist. Son of a weaver, he had a very difficult start in life and was sent to prison. It is not difficult to find faults in his adventure stories: his prose style is undistinguished; his psychology is too simple to be true; descriptive details are often incorrect and his noble savages are nearer to Rousseau* than to reality. But no other German writer of adventurous travel stories has had a stronger impact on the imagination of young and grown-up readers alike. His vivid descriptions of countries and people he had never seen, above all of the American Wild West (at his best in Winnetou, 3 vols, 1893), of the Muslim Near East (Durch die Wüste, 1892) and the Balkans (Der Schut, 1892), have helped to overcome provincialism.

R.W.L.

Old Surehand (1894); Der Schatz im Silbersee (1894); Im Lande des Mahdi (1896); Im Reiche des silbernen Löwen (1898–1902); Mein Leben (ed. E. A. Schmid, 1914).—Gesammelte Werke (65 vols, 1892–1945); K. M. Jahrbuch (1918 ff.).

E. A. Schmid, Eine Lanze für K. M. (1918); L. Gurlitt, Gerechtigkeit für K. M. (1920); O. Forst-Battaglia, K. M. (1930); H. Plischke, Von Cooper bis K. M. (1951); V. Klotz, 'Durch die Wüste und so weiter: Über K. M.' in Akzente, IX (1962); W. Raddatz, Das abenteuerliche Leben K. M.s (1965); H. Wollschläger, K. M. in Selbstzeugnissen und Bilddokumenten (1965); R. H. Cracroft, 'The American West of K. M.' in American Quart., XIX (1967).

R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

May, THOMAS (*?Mayfield 1595; †London 13 XI 1650), English poet, dramatist, translator and historian. May began his career as a dramatist, but meeting with little success turned to translation. His translations were highly esteemed, and he was favoured by Charles I. He nevertheless acted in the Civil War as a propagandist for the Parliamentary party.

VERSE: The Reign of King Henry II (1623); The Victorious Reign of King Edward III (1635).—PLAYS: The Heir: A Comedy (1622); The Tragedy of Antigone (1631).—TRANSLATIONS: Lucan's Pharsalia (1626–27); Virgil's Georgics (1628).—PROSE: The History of the Parliament of England which began November the Third, 1640 (1647).

A. G. Chester, T. M.: Man of Letters (1932).

J.B.B.

May, SIR THOMAS ERSKINE, LORD FARNBOROUGH (*London 8 II 1815; ∞1839 Louisa Laughton; †ibid. 17 V 1886), English constitutional jurist and historian, writer of authoritative works on parliamentary rules and procedure, and of a continuation of Hallam's* Constitutional History.

A Treatise on the Law, Privileges, Proceedings and Usage of Parliament (1844); Rules, Orders and Forms of Procedure of House of Commons (1854); Constitutional History of England since Accession of George III (1861–63); Democracy in Europe (2 vols, 1877).

R.M.H.

Maya, RAFAEL (*Popayán 19 III 1897), Colombian poet; his earliest work was in the MODERNISM tradition, and though to that extent derivative, expressed a powerful lyrical gift. One of his finest works is the Navegación nocturna (1959), a poem which meditates on the theme of inner solitude.

E.Sa. (J.F.)

VERSE: La vida en la sombra (1925); Coros del mediodía (1928); Domus aurea (1930); Después del silencio (1935); Poesía (1940, 1944).—PROSE: Alabanzas del hombre y de la tierra (3 vols, 1937–45).

E.Sa.

Mayakovsky, VLADIMIR VLADIMIROVICH (*Bagdady 1894; †Moscow 1930), leader of Russian FUTURISM and the most important poetic mouthpiece of the Revolution immediately after 1917. Russian Futurism was partly influenced by Marinetti* and partly by Khlebnikov's* 'Dadaist' experiments upon the Russian language. As a reaction against Symbolism, it not only tried to depoeitize poetry but in the first manifesto of the Russian Futurists in 1912 it decried all traditional art and literature. A perfect craftsman of the 'depoeitized' manner, Mayakovsky made use of grotesquely hyperbolic images, of unexpected associations and situations. Such products as the 'tragedy' Vladimir Mayakovsky, or Oblako v shtanakh ('A Cloud in Pants') which he wrote before 1917, are both intensely egotistic. His Voyna i Mir (1916), however, is permeated with a strong revolutionary spirit, and his play Misteriya-Boof ('Mystery-Bouffe'; 1917–18) is a blasphemous but highly grotesque apotheosis of the proletarian revolution. His subsequent long poem 150,000,000 (1920) described an allegoric fight between Russia and capitalist America; his Vladimir Ilyich Lenin (1924) was a panegyric written on the occasion of Lenin's* death; and his two plays, Klop ('The Bedbug'; 1928) and Banya ('The Bath-House'; 1929), are excellent satires on philistine opportunism and the Soviet bureaucracy during the NEP period.

As a 'loudspeaker' of the Revolution, Mayakovsky evolved his own particular kind of topical propaganda poetry, the so-called agitka—'as simple as mooing', but quite effective on the platform. Yet in spite of his devotion to the Revolution and the collective man Mayakovsky failed to repress his own longing for personal happiness as can be gathered from his poem Lyublyu ('I Love'; 1922), and it was largely due to his unsatisfied love-life that he committed suicide.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (5 vols, 1934, 1939); Sobranie stikhotvoreniy (2 vols, 1950); M. and His Poetry (ed. H. Marshall, 2nd ed. 1945); Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (13 vols, 1955–60); Izbrannyye proizvedeniya (2 vols, 1963); Sobranie sochineniy (8 vols, 1968).

B. M. Eichenbaum, M. (1940); V. Fevral'sky, M.-dramaturg (1940); V. V. Kamensky, Zhizn' s Mayakovskim (1940); V. B. Shklovsky, O Mayakovskom (1940); I. Eventov, M.-satirik (1941); N. Maslin, Osnovnye etapy tvorcheskogo razvitiya Mayakovskogo (1948); C. M. Bowra, 'The Futurism of V. M.' in The Creative Experiment (1949);

V. I. Kozlovsky, V. V. M. (1950); R. Usievich, M. (1950); V. Pertsov, M. (1957); S. Vladimirov, Ob esteticheskikh vzglyadakh Mayakovskogo (1959); G. S. Cheremin, Ranniy M. (1962); A. Metchenko, M. (1964); S. Paperny, M. i sovetskaya literatura (1964).

J.L.

Mayáns y Siscar, GREGORIO (*Oliva, Valencia 9 V 1699; †ibid. 21 XII 1781), Spanish scholar; Professor of law at Valencia University. Amongst his many works there stand out: the first biography of Cervantes* (1737); the Orígenes de la lengua española (1737), in which Juan de Valdés* Diálogo de la lengua was first published; and the Retórica (1757), in its time the best study and anthology of Spanish prose.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXIII, XXXVII, XLII, LXII, LXV; Orígenes de la lengua española (ed. E. Hartzenbusch, 1873); Correspondencia literaria in Rev. de Archivos, XII, XIII, XIV (1905).—The Life of Cervantes (tr. J. Ozell and R. Tousey, 1738; and in Don Quixote, tr. Jarvis, 1742).

M. González Vallas, Elogio histórico de G. M. y S. (1822); A. Morel-Fatio, 'Un érudit espagnol au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle' in Bull. Hispanique, XVII (1915).—J. Sempere y Guarinos, Ensayo de una biblioteca española de los mejores escritores del reinado de Carlos III (6 vols, 1785–89).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Mayer, KARL (*Neckarbischofsheim 22 III 1786; †Tübingen 25 XI 1870), German poet, one of the Swabian circle, friend of Kerner*, Uhland* and Schwab*. His special gift was nature-miniature, a form between a lyric and an epigram.

Lenaus Briefe an einen Freund (1853); Gedichte (1864); Autobiographie (1864); Ludwig Uhland, Seine Freunde und Zeitgenossen (2 vols, 1867).

G. Storz, Schwäbische Romantik (1967).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Maykov, APOLLON NIKOLAYEVICH (*23 V 1821; †1897), Russian poet who, with Fet*, Polonsky*, A. Tolstoy* and Shcherbina*, represented the aesthetic trend during the sway of civic poetry. His best poems deal either with nature or with antique themes; when he, too, took up civic themes his poetry deteriorated.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (4th ed. 1894; another ed., 4 vols, 1914).—Poésies (tr. T. Martel and T. Larghine, 1902).

M. L. Zlatkovsky, A. N. M. (1898); V. I. Pokrovsky, A. N. M. (1904).

J.L.

Maykov, VALERIAN NIKOLAYEVICH (*28 VIII 1823; †Peterhof 15 VII 1847), Russian critic and brother of Apollon. He represented the 'positivist' criticism in Russia and, in his polemics against Belinsky*, tried to find out the exact relationship between literature and life.

Kriticheskie opyty (1891).

J.L.

Maynard, FRANÇOIS: see Mainard, FRANÇOIS.

Mayy ('LITTLE MARY'), pseud. of MARIE ZIYĀDAH (*Nazareth 1886; †Cairo 22 X 1941), Arabic essayist. Born of Maronite Lebanese parents, she was educated in a convent in the Lebanon and studied in Cairo, where she spent the rest of her life. Her first book was French poems, Fleurs de Rêve (1911), under the pseudonym ISIS COPIA. Her first Arabic work was a biography of the feminist Malak Ḥifnī* Nāṣif (1920). Her literary output was mainly journalistic, though she gained wide fame, including a fervent tribute from Tagore*.

Kalimāt wa-ishārāt (1922); Al-Musāwāh (1922); Sawānīḥ fatāh (1922); Ẓulumāt wa-ashī'ah (1923); Luṭ'ed ombre, sel. from this and other works, tr. F. Gabrieli, with important intro., 1945; al-Ṣaḥā'if (1924); Bain al-jazr wal-madd (1924; M. Z. fi Mudhakkarrātīha (ed. J. Jabr, n.d.).

E. Rossi, 'Una scrittrice araba cattolica' in Oriente Moderno, V (1925); M. Fahmi, Muhādārāt 'an M. Z. (1955); M. F. Arnett, 'Marie Ziyada' in Middle Eastern Affairs, VIII (1957); J. Jabr, M. Z. fi hayātīha wa adabīha (1960); M. A. Hasan, M. adibat al-sharq wa'l 'urūba (?1963); A. Sharara, M. Z. (1965). C.R. (M.M.B.)

AL-MĀZINĪ, IBRĀHĪM 'ABD-AL-QĀDIR (*Cairo 1890; †10 VIII 1949), Egyptian Arab novelist, short-story writer and literary critic; was deeply influenced by English literature and by Mark* Twain, whose short stories he took as models for his own; later he was also influenced by Artsybashev*. He combines a great power of observation with an effective but kindly humour and linguistic aptness. His philosophy of life has been described as lā-mubālīyya, 'the I-don't-care-a-damn spirit'. He collaborated with al-'Aqqād* in writing an iconoclastic work of literary criticism in two volumes, al-Diḥwān (1921).

Diḥwān (verse; 1914, 1917).—NOVELS: Ibrāhīm al-kātib (1931); Ibrāhīm al-thānī (1943); Thalāthāt riḡāl wa imra'a (1943); 'Aud 'alā bad' (1943); Midū wa shurakāh (1943).—STORIES: Ṣundūq al-dunyā (1929); Khuyūṭ al-'ankabūt (1935); Fi'l-fariq (1937); 'Al-māshī (1944); Min al-nāfidha (1949).—CRITICISM: al-Shi'r wa-ghāyatuhu (1915); Hiṣn al-hashīm (1924); Qabḍ al-rīḥ (1927); Bashshār ibn Burd (1944).

E. Saussey, 'I. al-M. et son "Roman d'I."' in Bull. d'études orientales, II (1932); Ni'māt Fu'ād, Adab al-M. (1954); M. Nāṣif, Ramz al-tijl, dirāsa fi adab al-M. (1965); A. Zubaidi, 'The Diwan School' in Jour. Arabic Lit., I (1970).

C.R. (M.M.B.)

Mažuranić, IVAN (*Novi Vinodolski 11 VIII 1814; †Zagreb 4 VIII 1890), Croatian poet and politician, from 1873 Ban (governor) of Croatia; reformer of the Croatian legal and educational systems and founder of Zagreb University. His early literary works include the completion of the missing cantos of the Osman of Gundulić*. Smrt Smail-Age Čengića (1846), his greatest work, vividly describes the death of a Turkish chieftain at the hands of the Montenegrins and the events surrounding it.

Smrt Smail-Age Čengića (1846; The Death of Smail-Aga Čengić, tr. J. W. Wiles, 1925); Pjesme (1895); Izabrana djela (sel. works; 1969).

A. Barac, M. (1945); M. Živančević, I. M. (1964); E. D. Goy, 'The tragic element in Smrt Smail-age Čengića' in Slavon. and E. Eur. Rev., XLIV (1966). V.J.

Mazza, ANGELO (*Parma 16 XI 1741; ∞1775 Caterina Stocchi; †ibid. 10/11 V 1817), Italian poet. Abate galante; Professor of Greek, Parma (1772); 'Armonide Elideo' in Arcadia; 'il poeta dell'armonia'. The translator of Dryden's* Alexander's Feast and an imitator of Pindar*, Mazza wrote numerous Odi, nebulously expressing Platonic ideas and the beneficent power of harmony, voluptuous epithalamiums and a quantity of canzonette. He also translated from Pope*, Akenside*, Gray*, Thomson* and Parnell*.

Opere (ed. G. Paganino, 5 vols, 1816–19).—Lirici del Settecento (ed. M. Fubini and B. Maier, 1959); M. Vitale, Antologia della letteratura italiana, IV: Il Settecento (ed. G. Petronio, 1967).

M. T. Balestrino, A. M. (1932); G. Pellegrini, La poesia didascalica inglese nel Settecento italiano (1958). M.W.

Mazzei, LAPO (*Prato 1350; ∞1376 Tessa d'Ugolino, ∞1410 Margherita Binducci; †Florence 30 X 1412), Italian epistolary writer. He served the Florentine Signoria on diplomatic missions and administered the hospital of Santa Maria Nuova. Philanthropic and highly cultured (he preferred Dante* to Petrarch*) he engaged in a large correspondence (1390–1410) with Francesco Datini, a rich merchant of Prato. These letters (500), among the best of the 14th century, are terse, vivacious and valuable social documents illustrative of Tuscan life.

Lettere (ed. C. Guasti, 2 vols, 1880; with important intro.); Prosatori minori del Trecento (ed. G. De Luca, 1954).

A. D'Ancona, 'Due antichi fiorentini' in Varietà storiche e letterarie, II (1885); G. Petrocchi, 'Dispute per l'anima di un mercante' in Ascesi e mistica trecentesca (1957); I. Origo, The Merchant of Prato (1957). M.W.

Mazzini, GIUSEPPE (*Genoa 22 VI 1805; †Pisa 10 III 1872), Italian patriot, political theorist and critic. Enrolled as a member of the Carboneria in Genoa, Mazzini was betrayed and imprisoned at Savona (1830–31); he went into exile in Marseilles where he founded the association, La Giovine Italia. The journal of the same name, of which six numbers were issued between 1832 and 1834, was an organ of propaganda for the ideal of a united Italy under republican government. At Berne Mazzini founded La Giovine Europa (1834), an association envisaging the brotherhood of European nations, among which Italy, rather than France, was to be the guiding light. In 1837 he transferred to London where he earned his living by journalism and private teaching and where the Carlyles* gave him encouragement and support. The favourable impression he made upon English liberals did a great deal for the Italian cause. On the election of Pius IX he addressed to him an exhortation to bring about the unification of Italy (1847). Soon afterwards he was in Paris where he founded the Associazione Nazionale Italiana, to replace La Giovine Italia. In 1849, on the proclamation of the Roman Republic, Mazzini was elected one of the triumvirs. On the fall of the Republic he took refuge again in London where he joined forces with Ledru-Rollin, Ruge, Darasz and Kossuth. His influence was directly responsible for the many unsuccessful revolutionary outbreaks in Italy from 1850 onwards. In 1858, distrusting the sincerity of the French, he founded Pensiero ed Azione, a journal which combated the policy of Cavour. From this time on his influence gradually waned.

As a literary critic he supported the Romantic movement as representative of the aspirations of the people. He considered art subordinate to morality and patriotism. His writings are brilliant, creative, and intensely subjective. Typical of his critical work are D'una letteratura europea (1st pub. in Antologia, 1829), Dell'amor patrio di Dante (?1826-27), La filosofia della musica (1836) and Byron e Goethe (1847). I Doveri dell' Uomo (1860), dedicated to the Italian working class, represents a synthesis of his philosophy and his views on politics and life.

Scritti editi e inediti di G. M. (18 vols, 1861-91); Scritti scelti (ed. J. White-Mario, new ed. 1924; new ed. C. F. Goffio, 1964).—Essays by Joseph Mazzini (tr. T. Okey, 1894); The Duties of Man and Other Essays (intro. T. Jones, Everyman, 1907; repr. 1936); Selected Writings (tr. with intro. N. Gangulee, 1945).

Bolton King, The Life of M. (2nd ed. 1911); G. O. Griffith, M.: Prophet of Modern Europe (1932); G. Calogero, Il pensiero filosofico di G. M. (1937); E. E. Y. Hales, M. and the Secret Societies (1956). B.R.

Mc- is alphabetized as Mac-.

Mechthild von Magdeburg (*c. 1212; †Helfta c. 1280), German mystic; many years a Beguine in Magdeburg, finally a Cistercian at Helfta near Eisleben. Her revelations and prayers (mixed rhapsodic prose and verse) were written in Low German, but only a Latin and a High German version (by Heinrich* von Nördlingen, Das fließende Licht der Gottheit, c. 1344) are fully extant. Her diction accommodates the phraseology of the Canticle and of MINNESANG. She was little known in her day.

Ed. P. Gall Morel (1869; repr. 1963) and (with mod. tr.) W. Schleussner (1929); Eng. tr. L. Menzies (1953).

J. Ancelet-Hustache, M. de M. (1927); H. Neumann, 'M. von M.' in Medieval Ger. Stud. ... Fr. Norman (1965). F.P.P.

Medek, RUDOLF (*Hradec Králové 8 I 1890; †Prague 22 VIII 1940), Czech novelist, poet and dramatist. Medek is remembered as the author of novels which chronicle the anabasis of the Czechoslovak legions across Siberia in the First World War.

NOVELS: Ohnivý drak (1921); Velké dni (1923); Ostrov v bouři (1925); Mohutný sen (1926); Anabase (1927).—Plukovník Švec (play; 1928). R.A.

Medici, LORENZINO DE' (*Florence 23 III 1514; †ibid. 26 II 1548), Italian poet. The son of Pierfrancesco de' Medici and Maria Soderini, Lorenzino was the cousin of Duke Alessandro, whom he murdered in 1537, hoping to be acclaimed a modern Brutus. In his Apologia he states in his defence that 'i tiranni, in qualunque modo e' si amazzino, sieno ben morti'. His comedy, Aridosia (1536), is based on Plautus* and Terence*.

Opere (under the pseud. C. Teoli; 1862); Apologia (crit. ed. in Orazioni scelte del sec. XVI, ed. G. Lisio, 1897); Aridosia e Apologia (incl. Rime and letters; ed. F. Ravello, 1917, with notes).

F. Martini, L. de' M. e il tirannicidio nel Rinascimento (1882); E. Rho, L. il tirannicida (1928); I. Sanesi, La Commedia, I (1944). B.R.

Medici, LORENZO, surnamed THE MAGNIFICENT (*Florence 1 I 1449; †Careggi 8 IV 1492). The grandson of Cosimo the Great and son of Piero and of Lucrezia Tornabuoni, Lorenzo succeeded to the government of Florence in 1469. By his skilful balance of power he secured for the Italian states a period of respite from war. As a patron of the arts Lorenzo was a worthy descendant of Cosimo, whose library he enriched and whose example he emulated, gathering about him humanists such as Ficino* and Pico della Mirandola*, poets such as Poliziano*, Luigi and Luca Pulci*, and artists such as Michelangelo [Buonarrotti*]. Lorenzo's Rime, composed for Simonetta Cattaneo and Lucrezia Donati, show the influence of the poets of the dolce stil nuovo, whose concepts he deliberately revived, together with many of Petrarch's, and combined with the Neo-Platonic doctrines of Ficino. In his Selve d'amore, despite its largely imitative character, Lorenzo's own love of natural beauty is vividly communicated. Il Simposio o I Beoni is a parody in terza rima of Dante's* Divina

Commedia and Petrarch's* Trionfi. The Nencia da Barberino, of which the authenticity is doubtful, is a parody on rustic love-poetry. Among his best-known poems are the Trionfi e canti carnascialeschi and the canzoni a ballo. His religious drama, San Giovanni e San Paolo, an interesting example of the genre of SACRA RAPPRESENTAZIONE, was acted in Lorenzo's home in 1489 with himself in the rôle of Constantine. Two short stories, Giacoppo and La Ginevra, are now considered to be his.

Opere (crit. ed. A. Simioni, 2 vols, 1913-14, with biblio.; repr. 1939); Poesie volgari (ed. J. Ross and E. Hutton, 2 vols, 1912); Simposio (crit. ed. M. Martelli, 1966).

A. Lipari, The 'Dolce stil nuovo' According to L. de' M. (1936); D. Loth, L. the Magnificent (1930); F. G. Fiori, L. il Magnifico (1938); A. Rochon, La jeunesse de L. de M. (1963). B.R.

Medrano, FRANCISCO DE (*Seville ?1570); †ibid. ?1607), Spanish poet. He became a Jesuit novice in 1584, studied at Montilla and Salamanca, and was priested in about 1593. He left the Order for unknown reasons in 1602 and resided in Seville. His poems were published posthumously in Palermo (1617). His poetry is classical and of great delicacy. He translated Horace* very well and used Horatian themes and techniques in his original verses. His diction is careful, but less elaborate than, for instance, Herrera's*.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXXII.

M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Horacio en España (1885); A. Lumsden, 'Sentiment and artistry in the work of three golden-age poets' in Liverpool Studies in Hispanic Literature (1946); D. Alonso and S. Reckert, Vida y obra de M. (2 vols, 1948-58). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Medwall, HENRY (*c. 1462), English dramatist. As chaplain to Cardinal Morton he wrote Nature (?c. 1495), a fairly conventional, if sophisticated, medieval morality. Author of the first extant English secular play, *Fulgens and Lucre*s (written ?c. 1497). This romantic comedy debates the familiar medieval and Renaissance theme of the nature of true nobility. A low-life sub-plot parodies the serious action of the play.

Nature (c. 1530-34; ed. A. Brandl, Quellen des weltlichen Dramas, 1898); *Fulgens and Lucre*s (c. 1512-16; ed. F. S. Boas and A. W. Reed, 1926).

A. W. Reed, Early Tudor Drama (1926); Pearl Hogrefe, The Sir Thomas More Circle (1959); F. P. Wilson, The English Drama 1485-1585 (1969). C.B.

Megged, AHARON (*Poland 1920), Hebrew narrative writer and playwright; settled in Palestine in 1926. He was a member of the kibbutz Sdot Yam. His first book to be published in Israel was Ruah Yamim (1950), a collection of short stories.

His novel, Ha-Hai 'Al Ha-Met (1967; tr. The Living and the Dead, 1970), deals with the problem of his own generation in coping with the shadow of the achievements of an earlier generation.

L.Y.

Mehmet Emin Yurdakul (*Istanbul V 1869; †ibid. 14 I 1944), Turkish poet and nationalist. From a peasant family, he was educated in Istanbul; later he became governor of Sivas and Erzurum. In 1921 he joined the nationalists and was elected a Member of Parliament. His poems written in spoken Turkish, in syllabic metre, caused a sensation in the period of the mannered Servetifünun school. They sing the simple life and sufferings of the peasantry. However, they lack the warmth of the folk poems which had inspired him.

Türkçe şiirler (1890; Türkische Gedichte, tr. O. Hauser, 1919); Türk sazı (1914); Ey Türk uyan (1914; Türke erwache!, tr. A. Wurzbach, 1915); Tan sesleri (1915); Ordunun destanı (1915); Dicle önünde (1916); Turan'a doğru (1918); İsyân ve Dua (1918); Zafer Yolunda (1918); Dante'ye (1920); Mustafa Kemal (1928); Ankara (1939).

O. Hachtmann, 'Mehmed Emin Bey' in Die schöne Literatur, XXII-XXIII (1915); Ruşen Eşref, Diyorlar ki (1918); Yusuf Akçura, 'Millî şair E. Bey' in Türk Yılı (1928); Uluğ İğdemir, 'M. E. Y.' in Aylık Ansiklopedi, I (1945); Enver Naci Gökşen, M. E. Y. (1963). F.I.

Mei SHĒNG (□Huai-yin; †140 B.C.), Chinese poet. Mei was first in the service of King P'i of Wu, but left, because of the latter's rebellious designs, for Liang where King Hsiao gave a ready welcome to poets. King P'i revolted and was executed in 154. Mei, who had become known for his remonstrances to P'i, was now summoned to the imperial court; but he was dissatisfied with the post given him and, pleading illness, he returned to Liang. He was again summoned by the new Emperor Wu but died on his way to the capital. With Mei, the fu-poem began to assume a form distinct from the Ch'u-tz'ü; its subject-range was greatly extended. His Ch'i-fa, with its bold language and imagery, had great influence on later fu. He has been erroneously stated to be the first writer in the five-word metre.

Ch'i-fa (tr. E. von Zach in Die chinesische Anthologie, II, Harvard, 1958). A.R.D.

Meijer, HENDRIK ARNOLD (*1810; †Soerabaya 1854), Dutch naval officer, Romantic poet; wrote De Boekanier (1840; ed. W. Drop, 1964) and Heemskerk (1847). J.Sm.

Meilhac, HENRI (*Paris 23 II 1831; †ibid. 6 VII 1897), French dramatist, elected to the French Academy in 1888. While working as a bookseller's assistant, Meilhac wrote for the Journal Pour Rire and La Vie Parisienne. His first play, a vaudeville, was produced in 1855 and was followed by a number of similar works, including L'autographe (1859), Le petit-fils de Mascarille (1861), La vertu de Célime (1861). In collaboration with Ludovic Halévy* he wrote the libretti for a number of Offenbach's operettas, La belle Hélène (1864), Barbe-Bleue (1866), La vie Parisienne (1866), La Grande Duchesse de Gérolstein (1867), La Périhole (1868), Le petit Duc (1878). Also with Halévy, he wrote a number of comedies, the best known of which is Froufrou (1869).

Théâtre de M. et Halévy (8 vols, 1900–02).

E. Sée, Le théâtre français contemporain (1928);
F. Gaiffe, Le rire et la scène française (1932).

T.W.

Meinloh von Sevelingen (*Söflingen nr Ulm; 12th century), the first Swabian minnesinger; ministerialis. His twelve stanzas, based metrically on der Kürenberger's*, unite archaic elements and an almost completely Romance theory (grudgingly accepted) of amour courtois.

Olive Sayce, Poets of the Minnesang (1967).—
C. von Kraus, Anmerkungen zu Minnesangs Frühling (1939).

F.P.P.

Meireles, CECÍLIA (*Rio de Janeiro 7 XI 1901; †ibid. 9 XI 1964), Brazilian poetess. Originating from Symbolism rather than from Brazilian Modernismo, from Viagem—1929–1937 (1939) onwards her poetry widened to reflect her travels and her increasing sensitivity to the culture of Europe and the East. Richly imaginative, and capable of a poetry of a dream-like fluidity, her best work is sustained by a conceptual precision never at variance with her evocative lyricism. The unsuccessful anti-colonial rebellion of 1789 serves as the point of departure of her admirable Romanceiro da Inconfidência (1953), a model of controlled, intelligent and subtle poetic nationalism.

Nunca mais... e poema dos poemas (1923);
Baladas para el-Rei (1925); Vaga música (1942);
Mar absoluto (1945); Retrato natural (1949).—
Obra poética (2nd ed. 1967; cont. Viagem and later poetry, full biblio. and useful crit. stud. by Darcy Damasceno).

J.T.B.

Mela, POMPONIUS (*Tingentera, Spain), Roman geographer, wrote c. A.D. 40 a description of the world, starting from the Straits of Gibraltar, going anti-clockwise round the Mediterranean coast, thence along the Atlantic coast, and concluding with the Near East. The work, in a tolerable Latin, is very compressed, but diversified with some vivid descriptions.

J.A.W.

Ed. C. Frick (1880; repr. with adds W. Schaub, 1968).—H. F. Tozer, History of Ancient Geography (1897; 2nd ed. M. Cary, 1935); E. Norden, Die antike Kunstprosa (5th ed., 2 vols, 1958).

J.A.W. (J.D.)

Melanchthon (originally Schwarzerd), PHILIPP (*Bretten, Baden 16 II 1497; †Wittenberg 19 IV 1560), German reformer and humanist. Collaborator and friend of Luther*, Melanchthon (or MELANTHON, as he later wished his name to be spelled) was a brilliant and many-sided scholar and pedagogue. Shy, sensitive and modest, by nature conciliatory, he became Professor of Greek at Wittenberg University (1518), formulated Protestant doctrines in his Loci Communes (1521 ff.), and was mainly responsible for drawing up the Augsburg Confession (1530). He infused the spirit of scholarly humanism into Protestant thought and doctrine and as 'Praeceptor Germaniae' rendered invaluable service to German higher education. Almost all his writing is in Latin.

Loci communes (ed. Th. Kolde, 4th ed. 1925; Eng. tr. and comm. C. L. Hill, 1944).—Unterricht der Visitatoren (1528; ed. H. Lietzmann, 1912); Opera (ed. C. G. Bretschneider and H. E. Bindseil, 28 vols, 1834–60; completed by Supplementa Melanthonia, 4 vols, 1910–26); Declamationes (ed. K. Hartfelder, 1891–95); Briefe (ed. O. Clemen, 1926); Werke in Auswahl (ed. R. Stupperich, 6 vols, 1951 ff.).—Selected Writings (tr. C. L. Hill, 1962).

J. Camerarius, Vita (1566); G. Ellinger, P. M. (1902); H. Engelland, M., Glauben und Handeln (1931); F. Hildebrandt, M.: Alien or Ally (1946); R. Stupperich, M. (Eng. tr. 1965).

D.G.D.

Melbancke, BRIAN (∞Southwark 3 VI 1583 Sara Baker), English prose writer who made good use of other men's work in his Philotimus. A member of St John's College, Cambridge, he described himself as of Gray's Inn (1583).

B.L.J.

Philotimus. The Warre betwixt Nature and Fortune (1583).

H. E. Rollins in Stud. in Philol., extra ser., I (1929); M. P. Tilley, ibid., XVII (1930); H. E. Rollins, Thomas Deloney and B. M. (1937); D. C. Allen, 'M. and Gosson' in Mod. Lang. Notes (1939); R. Maud, 'The date of B. M.'s Philotimus' in Library, XI (1956).

B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Meleager (*Gadara; †Cos; 2nd/1st centuries B.C.), Greek epigrammatist. His Charites (satires after the style of Menippus*) are lost, but over 130 epigrams, mostly erotic, remain, distinguished by stylistic elegance and verbal ingenuity. He collected the epigrams of his famous predecessors into an anthology, the Garland, which formed the original nucleus of our Greek Anthology.

W. R. Paton, The Greek Anthology (with tr.; 1916–18); A. S. F. Gow and D. L. Page, Hellenistic Epigrams (with comm.; 1965).—H. Ouvré, Méleagre de Gadara (1894); C. Radinger, Meleagros von Gadara (1895).

A.H.G.

Meléndez Valdés, JUAN (*Ribera del Fresno, Badajoz 11 III 1754; †Montpellier 24 V 1817),

Spanish poet. He studied at Salamanca where he was influenced by Cadalso* and Jovellanos* and where he became Professor of the humanities. His timid, hesitant nature caused him, after much wavering, to choose Napoleon's side in the War of Independence. He died in exile. His poetry embodies and epitomizes the various poetic themes of the period. There are the bucolic and erotic themes of his Odas, Letrillas and ballads, a sensual array, where his 'poetic mistress' is rather a symbol of femininity than a reality. Then there are the philosophical, philanthropic themes influenced by Jovellanos, Rousseau*, Gessner* etc. (e.g. his famous ode to the glory of the arts). Finally there are the early Romantic themes of the exquisite ballad Doña Elvira. His soft musicality, delicate feeling and wealth of language and imagery, make Meléndez the greatest lyricist of 18th-century Spain, an isolated figure between the Golden Age and the Romantic revival.

Poesías (4 vols, 1820); Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LXIII; Poesías selectas (intro. P. Salinas; in Clás. Cast.); Poesías inéditas (ed. A. Rodríguez-Moñino, 1954); Los besos de amor (ed. R. Foulché-Delbosc in Rev. Hispanique, I, 1894).—Some trs in H. W. Longfellow, Poets and Poetry of Europe (1888); A. R. Spofford, Library of Choice Literature (Philadelphia, n.d.); T. Walsh, Hispanic Anthology (New York, 1920).

M. J. Quintana, 'Vida de M. V.' in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XIX; W. E. Colford, J. M. V.: A Study in the Transition From Neo-Classicism to Romanticism in Spanish Poetry (1942); G. Demerson, D. J. M. V. et son temps (1961); R. Frolid, Un poeta iluminista: M. V. (Milan, 1967).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Melgar, MARIANO (*Arequipa 1791; †Humachiri 1815), Peruvian poet. He left his training for the priesthood, joined the Independence movement and was executed on the battlefield. He wrote verse fables and experimented in yaraví, a Quechua song form. He also wrote verses in classical style and translated Ovid's* Remedia amoris.

Poesías (intro. F. García Calderón, Nancy, 1878). J.F.

Meli, GIOVANNI (*Palermo 6 III 1740; †ibid. 20 XII 1815), Sicilian dialect poet. Abate; parish doctor (1766–72); Professor of chemistry, Palermo (1787); an enthusiastic admirer of contemporary philosophy and of the Italian epic. Meli wrote Arcadian verse of unusual freshness and spontaneity (Anacreontiche; La Buccolica, 1767–87) and several long poems in a festive, satirical vein (La fata galanti, 1761–62). Some of his works are suffused with a philosophic humanitarianism (Don Chisciotte e Sancier Panza, 1785–87), others reveal a bitter pessimism. His most mature verse may be found in the Favuli murali (1810–14). In his dialect Meli is said to approach a literary 'Siciliano illustre' more often than the idiom of popular speech.

Opere (ed. G. Santangelo, 2 vols, 1965–68).—Lirici del Settecento (ed. M. Fubini and B. Maier, 1959; with biblio. and notes on 'La lingua del M.'). G. A. Cesareo, La vita e l'arte di G. M. (1924); G. Etna, pseud. [=V. Musco], G. M. (1963).—Studi su G. M. nel II Centenario della nascita (1942). M.W.

Melissus, PAULUS, Latinized name of PAUL SCHEDE (*Melrichstadt 20 XII 1539; †Heidelberg 3 II 1602), German humanist. Typical wandering humanist, philologist, musician and diplomat. He visited England and impressed Queen Elizabeth* (1582). His neo-Latin verse, fluent and, in his love poems, of high quality, anticipates many baroque conventions. He wrote popular German psalms.

Die Psalmen Davids (1572; ed. M. H. Jellinek, 1896); Schediasmata (1574); Schediasmatum reliquiae (1575); Epigrammata (1580).

O. Taubert, Paul Schedes Leben und Schriften (1864); P. de Nolhac, Un poète rhénan, ami de la Pléiade, P. M. (1923). D.G.D.

Mell, MAX (*Maribor 10 XI 1882), Austrian poet, dramatist and prose writer. His popularity in Austria is due partly to his attempt to write in a specifically Austrian literary tradition. Encouraged and influenced by Hofmannsthal* in his early verse writing, he tries to adapt the practices of the Styrian peasant theatre to literary drama and to revive the forms of the Morality play and baroque religious drama while taking his subject-matter from contemporary rural life.

PLAYS: Das Wiener Kripperl von 1919 (1921); Das Apostelspiel (tr. Apostle Play, 1934), Das Schutzengelspiel and Das Nachfolge-Christi-Spiel (trilogy; 1923–27).—STORIES: Barbara Naderers Viehstand (1914); Das Donauweibchen (1938).—Gedichte (verse; 1919; expanded 1929 and 1953).—Prose, Dramen, Verse (4 vols, 1962).

I. Emich, M. M. (1957); G. Styx, Mythos, Tragik, Christentum. Zu den dramatischen Dichtungen M. M.s (1959); Licht aus der Stille (Festschrift; ed. I. Emich, 1962). K.P.

Mel'nikov-Pechersky, PAVEL IVANOVICH (*Nizhny Novgorod 22 X 1819; †1 II 1883), Russian author, known mainly by his two vast and excellent novels, V lesakh (1871–75) and Na gorakh (1875–81). In these he depicted the strange community of the conservative 'Old Believers' on the upper Volga and in the Urals. He has a fine flair for exceptional characters, but he is often too much carried away by ethnographic and folkloristic detail.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (14 vols, 1897–98; 1909); Rodniki byut povsyudu (1960).

P. S. Usov, 'M.-P.' in Istoricheskiy Vestnik,

IX-XII (1884); O. Miller, Russkie pisateli posle Gogolya (3rd ed. 1886). J.L.

Melo, FRANCISCO MANUEL DE (*Lisbon 23 XI 1608; †Alcantara 13 X 1666), Portuguese poet, moralist and historian. Of noble birth, Melo distinguished himself as soldier, diplomat and writer. He fought at the battle of the Downs (1639) and, living at a period when Portugal was annexed to Spain, took part in the campaign against the Catalan rebels in 1640. The victim of an intrigue, he was arrested in 1644 and after a rigorous imprisonment was deported to Brazil. Formally pardoned only in 1657, his last years were spent on diplomatic missions to London, Paris and Rome, and in editing his writings.

Melo wrote extensively in Spanish and Portuguese. Though he left three large volumes of verse compositions, it is as a writer of prose that he excels. A shrewd moralist and critic in the Apólogos Dialogais (dialogues on current topics), he also left five historical narratives, Epanáforas de Vária História (1660), in Portuguese, and an excellent history of the Catalan war, in Spanish. His other works include: a witty though reactionary discourse on married life, Carta de Guia de Casados (1651); a farce, O Fidalgo Aprendiz, which is an amusing treatment of the 'bourgeois gentilhomme' theme prior to the play of Molière*; and 500 letters, Cartas Familiares. For all his versatility and accomplishments, Melo remains a product of his age and class—a depressing example of the static mentality of the 17th-century Peninsula aristocrat.

VERSE: Las tres musas del Melodino (1649); Obras métricas (3 vols, Lyons, 1665); Relics of Melodino (tr. Edward Lawson, 1815; 2nd ed. 1820). —O poeta Melodino (ed. J. Pereira Tavares, 1921; anthol.).—HISTORY: História de los movimientos y separación de Cataluña (1645; ed. J. O. Picón, Madrid, 1912); Epanáforas de varia historia portugueza (ed. E. Prestage, 1931).—VARIOUS: Carta de guia de casados (ed. E. Prestage, 1916); The government of a wife, tr. Capt. J. Stevens, 1697); Cartas familiares (Rome, 1664; sel. letters ed. M. Rodrigues Lapa, 2nd ed. 1942); Obras morales (2 vols, Rome, 1664); Apólogos dialogais (1721; ed. F. Nery, Rio de Janeiro, 1921); Auto do fidalgo aprendiz (ed. Mendes dos Remédios, 1898).

E. Prestage, D. F. M. de M. Esboço biographico (1914) and D. F. M. de M. (1922). T.P.W.

Melshin, L.: see Yakubovich, PETER FILIPPOVICH.

Melville, HERMAN (*New York 1 VIII 1819; ∞1847 Elizabeth Shaw; †ibid. 28 IX 1891), American novelist, poet and short-story writer. Virtually unrecognized in his own day, his vast symbolic novel of the quest for the white whale, Moby Dick (1851), is now considered one of the great novels of all time. Before 1851 he had published five novels: Typee (1846), a fanciful account of his stay in the South Seas after deserting a ship; Omoo (1847), of a mutiny, and beachcombing in Tahiti; Mardi (1849), an allegorical romance of Polynesian adventure; Redburn (1849), of Melville's Liverpool voyage at 19; White-Jacket (1850), of abuses in the navy. With the exception of Mardi, which shows his weakness for undramatized speculation, they were well received. With Moby Dick and Pierre; or the Ambiguities (1852), a confused novel with a Hamlet hero, Melville lost his initial popularity and supported his family in poverty. His theory of the novel was to provide entertainment, but also 'more reality than real life itself can show'. He continued writing: Israel Potter (1855), a picaresque tale; The Piazza Tales, six sketches including 'Benito Cereno'; The Confidence Man. His poetry, Battle Pieces, grew from his response to the suffering and heroism of soldiers in the Civil War, and Clarel from meditations on his journey to the Holy Land (1856-57). The carefully-wrought novel, Billy Budd, 'Melville's testament of acceptance', was left in manuscript at his death.

Clarel (1876); John Marr and Other Sailors (1888); Timoleon (1891); Billy Budd and Other Prose Pieces (1924); Poems (1924); Journal Up the Straits (1935).—The Works of H. M. (16 vols, 1922-24); Collected Poems of H. M. (ed. H. P. Vincent, 1945); H. M.: Representative Selections ... (ed. W. Thorp, 1938).

R. M. Weaver, H. M.: Mariner and Mystic (1921); L. Mumford, H. M. (1929); W. E. Sedgwick, H. M.: The Tragedy of Mind (1944); N. Arvin, H. M. (1950). H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

Melville, SIR JAMES (*Raith, Fife 1535; ∞Christina Boswell; †Hallhill, Fife 13 XI 1617), Scottish diplomat and historian. He was page in France to Mary, Queen of Scots; her Privy Councillor, and diplomatic missioner to England and the Palatinate. His Memoirs of My Own Life (1683; ed. Bannatyne Club, 1827) are of great historical value. J.K.

Melville, JAMES (*Montrose 26 VII 1556; ∞?Elizabeth Drury, ∞c. 1611 Deborah Clarke; †Berwick 13 I 1614), Scottish diarist and Reformer; nephew of the Presbyterian champion, Andrew Melville. His Diary (1556-1601; pr. Woodrow Soc., 1842) is a valuable ecclesiastical record. J.K.

Mena, JUAN DE (*Córdoba 1411; ∞[2nd] Marina Méndez de Sotomayor; †Torrelaguna 1456), Spanish poet. He studied at Salamanca and in Italy. Later he became secretary to John II of Castile. He translated a Latin compendium of the Iliad, composed other Spanish prose works, and was the most famous poet of his time. His works include a number of short, strongly intellectual poems, lyric or occasional, and three ambitious works: Claro-escuro, a love poem in alternately simple and obscure stanzas of octosyllables and ARTE MAYOR; La coronación del Marqués de Santillana (1438), an allegorical tribute in octosyllables; and his greatest poem, El laberinto de Fortuna (1444). In all of these he used many Latinisms of vocabulary and syntax. The allegorical Laberinto is a vision of past and present, whose aim is to win support for Álvaro de Luna*; it is influenced by Ovid*, Virgil*, Lucan* and Dante*, and its 297 stanzas of arte mayor have great descriptive and emotional power. It was commented by Hernán Núñez* and by Sánchez* de las Brozas and was widely read during the next two centuries. At the end of his life, the disillusioned Mena began his moralizing Coplas contra los pecados mortales; three poets, including Gómez Manrique*, wrote endings.

R. Foulché-Delbosc, Cancionero castellano del siglo XV in Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XIX (1912); El laberinto de Fortuna o las trecientas (ed. J. M. Blecuá, 1943; ed. J. G. Cummins, 1968); La Yliada en romance (ed. M. de Riquer, 1949).

M. R. Lida de Malkiel, J. de M. poeta del prerrenacimiento español (1950); F. Street, 'La vida de J. de M.' in Bull. Hispanique, LV (1953); R. Lapesa, 'El elemento moral en el Laberinto de M.: su influjo en la disposición de la obra' in Hispanic Rev., XXVII (1959); A. Vårvaro, Premesse ad un' edizione critica delle poesie minori di J. de M. (Naples, 1964); P. O. Gericke, 'The narrative structure of the L. de F.' in Romance Philol., XXI (1967-68). E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Menachem ben Saruq (*Tortosa c. 910; †Cordova c. 970), Spanish Hebrew grammarian and lexicographer. He introduced the science of the Hebrew language to Spain and wrote a dictionary of Biblical Hebrew which was used in Europe for a long time. His grammatical theories were largely demolished by his opponent Dunash* ben Labrat, but it was Menachem's pupils who developed Hebrew grammar in Spain.

Machbereth (ed. H. Filipowski, 1854); Liber Responsum (ed. S. G. Stern, 1870).

S. Gross, M. ben S., Beitrag zur Geschichte der hebräischen Grammatik und Lexicographie (1872); H. Hirschfeld, Literary History of Hebrew Grammarians and Lexicographers (1926). C.R.

Ménage, GILLES (*Angers 15 VIII 1613; †Paris 23 VII 1692), French scholar, critic and poet; the author of linguistic studies variously judged as bold and fantastic. His contemporary influence was second to Vaugelas*. His verse tended to préciosité. The pedant Vadius in Molière's* Femmes Savantes is plausibly his caricature.

Origines de la langue française (1650); Observations sur la langue française (1672); Menagiana (1695).

E. Samfresco, M. (1902); H. Ashton, M. et ses élèves (Ottawa, 1920); G. Montgrédien, La vie littéraire au XVII<sup>e</sup> siècle (1947). G.B.

Menander (*342/341; †c. 292 B.C.), Athenian dramatic poet, the supreme writer of New Comedy, and hence an important figure in the ancestry of modern European drama, on which he had a formative influence through Latin adaptations by Plautus* and Terence*; at least eight of their plays are directly based on originals by him. Immensely popular in the ancient world, Menander was performed, read and studied for some 800 years, but failed to survive the hostility or indifference of the Dark Ages. Discoveries of papyrus, mainly in the 20th century, have added two nearly complete plays (Dyskolos, Samia) and substantial parts of several others (Aspis, Epitrepontes, Misoumenos, Perikeiromene, Sikyonios), as well as many shorter fragments, to the stock of excerpts and quotations previously known. Menander transformed comedy, and inspired other literature, by his strong sense of design, his keen interest in the everyday world and its ethical values, and his superb gift for reproducing speech in flexible but precise forms of dramatic verse. He learnt much from his predecessors, both in comedy and in tragedy, and refined what he had learnt by the light of an education in which Theophrastus*, Aristotle's* successor, is likely to have been influential. His subjects for drama centre on love-affairs and family relationships, in which he finds humour, pathos, and the opportunity to typify and differentiate a range of characters who attain universality from his reflective observation, which blends sympathy with its perception of human faults and failings.

Dyskolos (eds: H. Lloyd-Jones, 1960; E. W. Handley, 1965, with comm.); Samia and Aspis (ed. C. Austin, 1969-70; with crit. comm.); Sikyonios (ed. R. Kassel, 1965); Misoumenos (ed. E. G. Turner in Oxyrhynchus Papyri, XXX, 1968; with other new frags).—Discoveries 1960-69: W. G. Arnott, 'M. since the Dyskolos' in Arethusa (1970); Zeitschrift für Papyrologie (1970-71).—Other works: A. Koerte and A. Thierfelder, Menandri quae supersunt (1938 ff.; corr. repr. 1957-59); Epitrepontes (ed. U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorf, 1925, with Ger. comm.; The Arbitrants, tr. G. Murray, 1945); Perikeiromene (The Rape of the Locks, tr. G. Murray, 1942).—Major surviving works and sel. frags: ed. F. H. Sandbach (1972; with comm.); tr. P. Vellacott (with Theophrastus, Characters; 1967).

T. B. L. Webster, Studies in M. (2nd ed. 1960) and Studies in Later Greek Comedy (2nd ed. 1970); A. Schäfer, M.s Dyskolos (1965); A. Barigazzi, La formazione spirituale di M. (1965); C. Dedoussi, E. W. Handley, L. Kahil, F. H. Sandbach et al. in Fondation Hardt: Entretiens, XVI (1970). E.W.H.

Menander Protector (fl. second half 6th century), Byzantine historian; protector may imply a military office or may be an honorary title. He wrote a history from 558, which has survived only in fragments, reaching to the year 581. He modelled himself on Agathias*, whose history he continued.

Excerpta de legationibus (ed. C. de Boor, 1903); Excerpta de sententiis (ed. U. P. Boissevain, 1906); Fragmenta historicorum Graecorum, IV (ed. C. Müller, 1851; with Lat. tr.).—Ger. tr. E. Doblhofer in Byzantinische Diplomaten und östliche Barbaren (1955).

N. Iorga, 'Médallions... 3. Ménandre' in Byzantion, II (1925); P. N. Ure, Justinian and His Age (1951); O. Veh, Beiträge zu M. Protektor (1955). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Ménard, LOUIS NICOLAS (*Paris 19 X 1822; †ibid. 12 II 1901), French writer. Ménard worked out a philosophical system in terms of a highly personal symbolism, based on Greek mythology. His work exercised a great influence on Leconte* de Lisle and the Parnassian school, on Barrès*, and on many modern thinkers.

Prométhée délivré (1844); Prologue d'une révolution (1849; new ed. 1904); Poèmes (1855); De la morale avant les philosophes (1860); Réveries d'un païen mystique (1876; def. ed. 1910); Lettres d'un mort, opinions d'un païen sur la société moderne (1895).—Lettres inédites (1932).

H. Peyre, L. M. (2 vols, 1934). M.G.; J.P.R.

Menčetić, Šiško (*Ragusa [Dubrovnik] 27 II 1457; †ibid. 1527), Ragusan poet, one of the earliest whose work survives. He was an aristocrat, typical of his period, a prolific writer of love lyrics in the artificial Petrarchan manner.

Pjesme (c. 1507; 1870, 1937).—J. Torbarina, Italian Influence on the Poets of the Ragusan Republic (1931). V.J.

Mencius: see Mêng-tzü.

Mencken, HENRY LOUIS (*Baltimore, Md. 12 IX 1880; ∞1930 Sara Haardt; †ibid. 29 I 1956), American critic. His volumes of intimate reminiscences tell of his boyhood and early newspaper work in Baltimore. He began magazine writing on the Smart Set; in 1924 he founded the American Mercury with George Jean Nathan and edited it until 1933. He gaily and recklessly shocked his readers with sharp satires on American life, criticizing Christian morality, democratic principles, bourgeois culture; and defending new writers such as Anderson*, Dreiser* and O'Neill*. His The American Language (1919; 4th ed. 1936) is a pioneer scholarly work in the field. A writer of tremendous output, his literary career was tragically cut short by thrombosis in 1948.

CRITICISM: George Bernard Shaw: His Plays (1905); The Philosophy of Friedrich Nietzsche (1908); A Little Book in C Major (1916); In Defense of Women (1918); Prejudices (6 vols, 1919–27); Notes on Democracy (1926); Christmas Story (1946).

—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Happy Days, 1880–1892 (1940); Newspaper Days, 1899–1906 (1941); Heather Days, 1890–1936 (1943).

I. Goldberg, The Man M.: A Biographical and Critical Survey (1925); E. Kemler, The Irreverent Mr. M. (1950); W. Manchester, Disturber of the Peace. The Life of H. L. M. (1951). H.L.C.

Mendele Moicher Sforim ('Mendele the Bookseller'), pseud. of SHOLEM JACOB ABRAMOVITCH (*nr Minsk 1835; †Odessa 1917), Yiddish author, the 'grandfather' of modern Yiddish literature. Not only did he transform the Yiddish language from a colloquial idiom to a literary medium but he also introduced into Yiddish literature the novella and the social novel. His style is rich and colourful. In spite of his Romanticism, in itself an innovation in Yiddish literature, he is considered to be the first great Yiddish realist. He also played a decisive part in reviving Hebrew as a literary medium.

IN HEBREW: Mikhtav al davar ha-khinukh (1856); Mishpat shalom (1860); Toldot ha-teva (3 vols, 1862–72; natural history); Haavot ve-habanim (1867; novel); Sipurey massiot (c. 1881; short stories).—IN YIDDISH: Dos kleyn menshele (1866); The Parasite, tr. Gerald Stillman, New York, 1956; Fishke, der kroomer (1869; Fishke, the Lame, tr. A. S. Rappaport, 1929; new tr. Gerald Stillman, New York, 1960); Di Takse oder di bande shtot baalei toives (satirical play: 1869); Di Kliatche (1873; The Nag, tr. Moshe Spiegel, New York, 1955); Dos Yudl (allegorical poem of Jewish history; 1875); Kitsur massouos Binjamin ha-shlishi (1878; wr. in Yiddish; The Travels and Adventures of Benjamin the Third, tr. Moshe Spiegel, New York, 1949); Der Priziv (1884; drama); Dos wunshfingerl (1888–89); Shloimo Reb Khaim (1899; autobiog. novel).—Ale verk fun M. M. S. (17 vols, 1911–12). J.S.

Mendelssohn, MOSES (*Dessau 6 IX 1729; †Berlin 4 I 1786), German philosopher. Mendelssohn educated himself, becoming first a private tutor, then bookkeeper of a business, which he afterwards acquired. A Jew of generous and upright character, he was the friend to whom Lessing* alluded in his apologia for Die Juden. Mendelssohn belonged whole-heartedly to the rationalistic tradition and is the characteristic representative of the ENLIGHTENMENT, which he furthered in clear incisive writings, displaying tolerance, breadth and nobility of mind. His most influential publication was Phädon. He contributed criticisms to the Literaturbriefe and also urged the emancipation of the Jews in Jerusalem (1783).

Philosophische Gespräche (1755); Briefe über die Empfindungen (1755); Über die Evidenz in den metaphysischen Wissenschaften (1764); Phädon oder über die Unsterblichkeit der Seele (1767); Morgenstunden oder über das Dasein Gottes (1785).—Schriften (7 vols, 1843–45).

S. Hensel, Die Familie M. (3 vols, 1879); M. Kayserling, M., sein Leben und sein Wirken (1883); M. Goldstein, M. und die deutsche Ästhetik (1904); B. Berwin, M. im Urteil seiner Zeitgenossen (1919); F. Bamberger, Die geistige Gestalt M. M.s (1929). H.B.G.

Mendès, CATULLE (*Bordeaux 20 V 1841; ∞Judith Gautier; †Saint-Germain-en-Laye 8 II 1909), French poet, dramatist, novelist and critic. One of the most active of the young PARNASSIAN poets, Mendès founded the Revue Fantaisiste (1859) and was one of the contributors to the Parnasse Contemporain (1866). A prolific writer of short stories, romantic plays, dramatic criticism and an enthusiastic advocate of Richard Wagner* in France.

VERSE: Philoméla (1864); Poésies (1876); Poésies nouvelles (1893).—NOVELS: La maison de la vieille (1874); Zo'har (1886); La première maîtresse (1887).—CRITICISM: La légende du Parnasse contemporain (1884); Richard Wagner (1886); L'art du théâtre (3 vols, 1895–1900); Rapport sur le mouvement poétique français 1867–1900 (1902).—PLAYS: Médée (1898); Glaïgny (1906); La vierge d'Avila (1906).

A. Bertrand, C. M., biographie critique (1908); J. Cocteau, Portraits-souvenir (1928); M. Souriau, Histoire du Parnasse (1929); J. F. Herlihy, C. M. critique dramatique et musical (1935). T.W.

Mendes, MURILO MONTEIRO (*Juiz de Fora, Minas Gerais 13 V 1901), Brazilian poet. Contemplative rather than militant, his early poetry bears witness to the technical and cultural liberation wrought by Modernismo. The nativismo of the movement left him sceptical. His conversion to Catholicism was marked by publication, with Jorge de Lima*, of Tempo e eternidade (1935). Biblical and liturgical echoes, the prophetic tone, and a deep concern with the interrelation of poetic and Christian contemplation predominate from henceforth.

Poemas (1930); História do Brasil (1932); A poesia em pânico (1938); O visionário (1941); As metamorfoses (1944); Mundo enigma (1945); Poesia liberdade (1947); Contemplação de Ouro Preto (1955); Poesias (1959); Tempo espanhol (1959).

'Tristão de Ataíde' [Alceu Amoroso Lima], Estudos, 5th ser. (1935); M. de Andrade, Aspectos da literatura brasileira (1943); Otto Maria Carpeaux, 'Unidade de Murilo Mendes' in Região, XI (Recife, 1949); Ruggero Jacobbi, 'Introduzione alla poesia di M. M.' in Poesie di M. M. (1961). J.T.B.

Mendes Pinto, FERNÃO: see Pinto, FERNÃO MENDES.

Mendoza, DIEGO HURTADO DE: see Hurtado de Mendoza, DIEGO.

Mendoza, ÍÑIGO DE (*?Burgos c. 1425; †?Valladolid c. 1507), Spanish poet. He was a Franciscan. His lengthy poem Vita Christi (1467–68; rev. and pr. 1482) ends with the massacre of the Innocents. It contains some amusing satirical passages, a semi-dramatic dialogue about Christ's birth and songs, hymns etc. He wrote some religious pieces and a few amatory and political poems. He may be the author of the satirical *Coplas* de Mingo Revulgo*. E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Cancionero (ed. J. Rodríguez-Puértolas, 1968). C. Stern, 'Fray I. de M. and medieval dramatic ritual' in Hispanic Rev., XXXIII (1965); J. Rodríguez-Puértolas, Fray I. de M. y sus 'Coplas de Vita Christi' (1968) and Poesía de protesta en la Edad Media castellana (1968); see also Montesino*, biblio. A.D.D.

Menéndez Pidal, RAMÓN (*Corunna 13 III 1869; ∞1900 María Goyri; †Madrid 15 XI 1968), Spanish scholar, historian, Professor of Romance philology at Madrid (1899–1939), founder and director of the Madrid Centre of Historical Studies (1907), founder and editor of the Revista de Filología Española (1914), and director of the Spanish Academy (1925–39, 1947 onwards).

As a philologist he established the principles of Spanish historical grammar; he produced major critical editions of the Poema de Mio Cid, Alfonso* X's Crónica, the *Fernán* González* and other medieval texts; his works on the continuity of the epic tradition in Spanish literature (heroic epic, ballad, theatre) are fascinating; his analysis of the CID as an historical figure and his general introduction to the Historia de España show his skill in narrative. He always championed the 'traditional' school of literary history; and, although recent scholarship has challenged some of his conclusions, it has endorsed others, as when his theory about the existence of an early Spanish lyric poetry was confirmed by the discovery of the MOZARABIC poems.

La leyenda de los Infantes de Lara (1896; rev. 1934); Manual de gramática histórica española (1904; rev. 1952); Cantar de Mio Cid (3 vols, 1908–12; rev. 1954–56); L'épopée castillane à travers la littérature espagnole (Paris, 1910; Span. ver. rev. Buenos Aires, 1945); Primera crónica general (1906; rev. 2 vols, 1955); Poesía juglaresca y juglares (1924; rev. 1957); Los orígenes del español (1926; rev. 1950); Flor nueva de romances viejos (1928; rev. 1933); La España del Cid (2 vols, 1929; rev. 1947); The Cid and his Spain, tr. H. Sutherland, 1934); Reliquias de la poesía épica española (1951); Romancero hispánico (2 vols, 1953); La Chanson de Roland y el neotradicionalismo (1959); El Padre Las Casas. Su doble personalidad (1963).—Mis páginas preferidas (2 vols, 1957).—The Spaniards in Their History (tr. W. Starkie, 1950).

J. A. Maravall, M. P. y la historia del pensamiento (1960); 'Bibliografía de don R. M. P.' in

Revista de Filol. Esp., XLVII (1964); C. Conde, M. P. (1969); Y. Malkiel, 'Era omne esencial' in Romance Philol., XXIII (1969-70); C. Smith, R. M. P. (1970). E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Menéndez y Pelayo, MARCELINO (*Santander 3 XI 1856; †ibid. 19 V 1912), Spanish critic and historian. He held the Chair of Spanish literature at Madrid (1878-98) and was director of the national library (1898). He wrote extensively on all aspects of Spanish literature; his taste was catholic and his prose excellent. His belief in realism and characterization made him unjust to Góngora* and Calderón*, but much of his criticism remains valid as well as interesting. An excellent historian of ideas and a learned investigator, though a poor textual scholar, his militant Roman Catholicism never warped his critical insight.

La ciencia española (3 vols, 1876; 1887-88; 1933); Horacio en España (2 vols, 1877; 1926); Historia de los heterodoxos españoles (2 vols, 1880-82; ed. A. Bonilla y San Martín, 3 vols, 1911-17); Calderón y su teatro (1881); Historia de las ideas estéticas en España (9 vols, unfinished, 1883-91; new ed. 1890-1912); Estudios de crítica literaria (5 vols, 1883-1908); Antología de poetas líricos castellanos (13 vols, unfinished, 1890-1908; prologues repr. as Historia de la poesía castellana, 3 vols, 1911-16); Ensayos de crítica filosófica (1892); Antología de poetas hispano-americanos (4 vols, 1893-95; prologues repr. as Historia de la poesía hispanoamericana, 2 vols, 1911-13); Bibliografía hispanolatina clásica (1902; unfinished); Orígenes de la novela in Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., I, VII, XIV, XXI (1905-15).—Edición nacional de las obras completas de M. M. y P. (65 vols, 1940-50).

M. Olguín, M. M. P.'s Theory of Art, Aesthetics and Criticism (1950); A. M. Cayuela, M. y P. orientador de la cultura española (2nd ed. 1954); M. Artigas, La vida y obra de M. y P. (1955); D. Alonso, M. P., crítico literario (1956); E. Sánchez Reyes, Don Marcelino (1956) and M. P. (1962). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Mêng CHIAO (□Wu-k'ang 751; †Wên-hsiang 814), Chinese poet, was a great friend of Han* Yü and much admired by him. Their style was very similar so that they were able to produce joint poems, writing alternate couplets or quatrains (preserved in Han's collected works).

Mêng Tung-yeh chi (sel. trs in: G. Margouliès, Anthologie raisonnée de la littérature chinoise, 1948; A. C. Graham, Poems of the Late T'ang, 1965). A.R.D.

Mêng HAO-JAN (□Hsiang-yang 689; †740), Chinese poet. Mêng lived till he was 39 as a recluse on the Lu-mên Mountain. In 728 he travelled to the capital to take the official examinations, in which he failed. While in Ch'ang-an he became a friend of Wang* Wei and of the minor poet Chang Chiu-ling. He returned to Hsiang-yang where he is said to have got a promise from the governor, Han Ch'ao-tsung (appointed 734), of recommendation at court. It was probably about this time that Mêng met Li* Po, then a protégé of Han. Later he was for a time on Chang Chiu-ling's staff at Ching-chou (c. 737). In style, it is usual to couple him with Wang Wei. Both show the influence of T'ao* Ch'ien and Hsieh* Ling-yün, though Mêng is nearer the latter in his preference for 'regulated' metres (more than two-thirds of his poems are lû-shih).

Mêng Hao-jan chi (sel. tr. in W. Bynner, The Jade Mountain, 1929). A.R.D.

Mêng-tzû, 'MASTER MÊNG', title of MÊNG K'ô (*Tsou ?c. 370 B.C.), Chinese philosopher. Mêng-tzû's legend shows considerable similarities with that of Confucius*, whose teaching he is said to have received from the disciples of the latter's grandson, Tzû-ssü. Like Confucius, but more successfully, he offered himself as a political adviser to various rulers; c. 328 he was in Sung, and thereafter at the court of Wei (Liang), which he left after the accession of King Hsiang (319). From 318 to 314 he was at King Hsüan's court in Ch'i. After this he seems to have tried to obtain employment in his native Lu.

In the book Mêng-tzû, which lacks four of its original 11 parts, the developing systematization of Confucius' teaching is revealed. An attempt is made to propound an ideal rural economy. At the same time there is a concern with individual human nature which Mêng-tzû sought to prove was essentially good.

Tr. J. Legge in The Chinese Classics, II (2nd ed. 1895); Mencius (tr. L. A. Lyall, 1932).

A. Waley, Three Ways of Thought in Ancient China (1939); further biblio. in W.-T. Chan, An Outline and an Annotated Bibliography of Chinese Philosophy (1969). A.R.D.

Menippus OF GADARA (early 3rd century B.C.), Greek writer and Cynic philosopher. The satires for which he was famous are all lost, but his technique of mixing prose and verse passages in the same work established a literary pattern ('Menippean satire') which was introduced to Rome by Varro*; Petronius* Satyricon and Seneca's* Apocolocyntosis provide surviving examples.

R. Helm, Lukian und Menipp (1906). A.H.G.

Menzini, BENEDETTO (*Florence 29 III 1646; †Rome 7 IX 1704), Italian lyric and satirical poet. Frustrated ambition and his embittered temperament prompted Menzini to write his satires; in these he accused everybody, poets, clergymen, women, pseudo-philosophers, of hypocrisy, envy and avarice, singling out his personal enemies for violent attacks. His poems are remarkable for satirical power and for the liveliness of his elegant style.

Poesie (1680); Arte Poetica (1690); Satire (Amsterdam; Florence, 1718); Lettere (1828); Lettere inedite (1897).—Opere (4 vols, 1731–32).

I. Carini, L'Arcadia dal 1690 al 1890 (1891); U. Limentani, 'B. M.' in La satira nel Seicento (1961); W. Binni, 'La formazione della poetica arcadica' in L'Arcadia e il Metastasio (1963).

U.L.

Me'or Hagolah: see Gershom ben Judah.

M. E. R., pseud. of MARIA ELIZABETH ROTHMANN (*Swellendam, Cape Colony 28 VIII 1875), Afrikaans prose writer. In her unpretentious short stories and sketches (her novels are not of the same value) she shows a fine psychological insight, founded on her profound respect for individual character.

STORIES AND SKETCHES: Onweershoogte e. a. Verhale (1927); Drie Vertellings (1944); Uit en Tuis (1946); Die Gewer (1950).—NOVELS: Na vaste Gange (1944); Die eidelose Waagstuk (1948).

G.D.

Mera, JUAN LEÓN (*Ambato 1832; †Quito 1894), Ecuadorean author. La virgen del sol (1861), a narrative poem, and Cumandá, a novel, are both on Indian themes in the romantic, idealized style of the 19th century.

E.Sa.

Cumandá o Un drama entre salvajes (Quito, 1879; school ed., Boston and New York, 1932).

Concha Meléndez, La novela indianista en Hispanoamérica, 1832–89 (Madrid, 1934).

E.Sa. (J.F.)

Mercantini, LUIGI (*Ripatransone, Ascoli Piceno 20 IX 1821; †Palermo 17 XI 1872), Italian poet-patriot. His verse was sung by the volunteers fighting for the liberation of Italy. Particularly successful was his Inno a Garibaldi beginning 'Si scopron le tombe, si levano i morti', set to music by Alessio Olivieri. Also famous was his poem on the expedition of Carlo Pisacane*, La Spigolatrice di Sapri (1857).

Canti (ed. G. Mestica, 1855; with biog.); Poesie (ed. A. Mabellini, 1921).

S. Topi, L. M. (1905); O. Pierini, Rievocazione nazionale di L. M. (1911).

B.R.

Mercanton, JACQUES (*Lausanne 16 IV 1910), Swiss novelist and critic; converted to Roman Catholicism. His first book was his thesis: Poésie et religion dans l'œuvre de Barrès (1940). A thinker and psychologist, he is preoccupied with the tragedy of human destiny, man's quest for happiness, his fluctuating sentiments, his desire of love and his need to escape from it, and the thought that only in the Church are permanency and peace to be found.

NOVELS: Thomas l'incrédule (1943); Le soleil ni la mort (1948); La joie d'amour (1951); De peur que vienne l'oubli (1962); La Sibylle (1967).—CRITICISM: Poètes de l'univers (1947); Racine (1966); Les heures de James Joyce (1967). J.P.I. (G.G.)

Mercier, LOUIS-SÉBASTIEN (*Paris 6 VI 1740; †Paris 25 IV 1814), French dramatist. His work typifies the serious drama of the late 18th century. He wrote or adapted historical plays and composed several moralizing dramas of middle-class or popular life, following Diderot's* formula of the drame bourgeois. His Tableau de Paris (14 vols, 1781–89) and Le Nouveau Paris (6 vols, 1797–1800) described contemporary life in the capital.

Jenneval (1768); La Destruction de la Ligue (1782); Le Déserteur (1782); La Mort de Louis XI (1783); La Brouette du vinaigrier (1784).

L. Bédard, S. M. (1903).

G.B.

Meredith, GEORGE (*?Portsmouth 12 II 1828; ∞9 VIII 1849 Mary, daughter of T. L. Peacock*, ∞IX 1864 Marie Vulliamy [†1889]; †Boxhill 18 V 1909), English novelist and poet. At first Meredith's writing was unsuccessful and he was forced to work at journalism and publishers' reading, but by the end of his life his cottage at Boxhill had become a literary shrine. Meredith's readers must work for their pleasure, and must be prepared to find explanation and probability jettisoned, but the reward is great. Meredith uses human relations as an exploration, not as a statement, of his social and psychological theories. He can create life-portraits, Jonsonian humours like the Egoist, or brilliantly complex Dianas and Amintas. His novels borrow from his poetic methods, and his best poem, Modern Love, based on his own first marriage, uses some of the novelist's methods to deal with one of Meredith's favourite subjects—the embrace which turns into a fight.

VERSE: Poems (1851); Modern Love, and Poems of the English Roadside, with Poems and Ballads (1862); Last Poems (1909).—PROSE: The Shaving of Shagpat (1856); The Ordeal of Richard Feverel (3 vols, 1859); Evan Harrington (3 vols, 1861); Emilia in England (3 vols, 1864; renamed Sandra Belloni); Rhoda Fleming (3 vols, 1865); Vittoria (3 vols, 1867); The Adventures of Harry Richmond (3 vols, 1871); Beauchamp's Career (3 vols, 1876); On the Idea of Comedy and the Uses of the Comic Spirit (1877); The Egoist (3 vols, 1879); The Tragic Comedians (2 vols, 1880); Diana of the Crossways (3 vols, 1885); One of Our Conquerors (3 vols, 1891); Lord Ormont and his Aminta (3 vols, 1894); The Amazing Marriage (2 vols, 1895); Celt and Saxon (1910; unfinished).—Letters (ed. C. L. Cline, 3 vols, 1968).

R. de Gallienne, G. M.: Some Characteristics

(1890; with biblio.); W. Jerrold, G. M.: an Essay Towards Appreciation (1902); G. M. Trevelyan, The Poetry and Philosophy of G. M. (1906); T. S. Short, On Some of the Characteristics of G. M.'s Prose-Writing (1907); W. Chislett, G. M.: a Study and an Appraisal (1925); J. B. Priestley, G. M. (1926); A. Woods, G. M. as Champion of Women and Progressive Education (1937); L. Stevenson, The Ordeal of M. (1954); N. Kelvin, A Troubled Eden (1961).
B.H. (M.A.)

Meredith, OWEN: see Lytton, EDWARD ROBERT BULWER, 1ST EARL OF.

Meres, FRANCIS (*1565; †1647), English miscellanist. The most important of Meres' works, Palladis Tamia (1598), is a brief survey of Elizabethan literature containing valuable references to Marlowe's* death and 12 plays by Shakespeare*.

A Paradise of Dainty Devices (1595; cont. verse by Meres); Gods Arithmetick (1597); Palladis Tamia (repr. in part G. G. Smith, Elizabethan Critical Essays, 1902; section 'Poetrie', ed. D. C. Allen, 1933).

H. S. Symmes, Les débuts de la critique dramatique en Angleterre (1903); J. W. Atkins, English Literary Criticism: the Renaissance (1947).
W.A.A.

Merezhkovsky, DMITRY SERGEYEVICH (*St Petersburg 1865; ∞ 1889 Zinaida Gippius*; †Paris 1941), Russian poet and pamphleteer. In the 1880s he wrote 'civic' poetry and then joined the modernist trend, which he soon tried to imbue with a new religious consciousness, championed by his periodical Novy put' ('New Path'; 1903-04). He was not an outstanding poet, but his polemical essays of philosophic-literary criticism were usually provocative, the most important being the first volume of his Tolstoy and Dostoyevsky (1901-02). He achieved international reputation by his erudite though rather schematic trilogy of novels: Yulian Otstupnik (1894), Voskresshie bogi (1896) and Pëtr i Alexey. Another trilogy full of antitheses consists of the play Pavel I (1908), the novel Alexander I (1911) and 14. dekabrya (1918). It was along his own schematic and dogmatic lines that he interpreted also a number of great figures in Russian literature: Pushkin*, Lermontov*, Gogol*, Tyutchev* etc. He was particularly hard on Gorky*. From 1903 onwards his Religious-Philosophic Society proved rather attractive for 'God-seeking' intellectuals anxious to return to religion. In 1920 he and his wife emigrated to Paris whence they waged an implacable war on Bolshevism. During that period his would-be philosophic novels and other writings became more turgid and pretentious than ever. His importance is mainly historical: he represents a certain phase typical of the Russian intelligentsia at the turn of the 20th century.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (24 vols, 1914-15). —Tolstoy as Man and Artist (1902); December the 14th (tr. N. A. Duddington, 1923); Akhmaton (tr. idem, 1927); Napoleon (tr. C. Zvegintsov, 1929); The Secret of the West (tr. J. Cournot, 1933); The Resurrection of the Gods (tr. B. G. Guernsey, 1938); The Romance of Leonardo da Vinci (tr. idem, 1964).

E. Lundberg, M. i ego novoye khristianstvo (1914); J. Chuzeville, D. M. (1922); Z. Hippius, D. M. (1951); O. Maslenikov, The Frenzied Poets (1952).
J.L.

Mérimée, PROSPER (*Paris 28 IX 1803; †Cannes 23 IX 1870), French novelist and short-story writer. An accomplished linguist and archaeologist, Mérimée entered the civil service and was appointed inspector of historical monuments in 1834. He became a senator in 1853. Through his friendship with the Empress Eugénie he was an intimate of Louis-Napoleon's household. His earliest writings, which he playfully attributed to an imaginary Spanish actress (Clara Gazul) and to various 'Illyrian' poets (in La Guzla), exploited the Romantic taste for the exotic. He then experimented with the historical novel before coming to the nouvelle (long short story), in which he excelled. Colomba (1841), Carmen (1845) and several shorter examples are masterpieces of exotic characterization and violent incident written in a deliberately detached style. His translations popularized Pushkin*, Gogol* and Turgenev* in France.

PLAYS: Théâtre de Clara Gazul (1825); Le Carrosse du Saint-Sacrement (1829). —Chronique du règne de Charles IX (novel; 1829). —NOUVELLES: Mosaïque (cont. 'Mateo Falcone', 'Vision de Charles XI', 'Tamango' etc.; 1830); Les Âmes du Purgatoire (1834); La Vénus d'Ille (1837); Lokis (1869). —VARIOUS: Notes d'un voyage en Corse (1840); Histoire de Don Pèdre Ier (1843). —Œuvres (ed. P. Trahard and É. Champion, 12 vols, 1927); Romans et Nouvelles (ed. M. Parturier, 2 vols, 1967).

A. Filon, M. et ses amis (1894); W. H. Pater, P. M. (1900); P. Trahard, La jeunesse de M. (1925), P. M. de 1834 à 1853 (1928) and La vieillesse de P. M. (1930); R. Baschet, Du Romantisme au Second Empire: M. (1959); P. Léon, M. et son temps (1962).
G.B.

Merivale, CHARLES (*London 8 III 1808; ∞ 1850 Judith Frere; †Ely 27 XII 1893), English historian and enthusiastic writer of Latin verse. He was Dean of Ely.

History of the Romans under the Empire (7 vols, 1850-62); Conversion of the Northern Nations (1866); Autobiography and Letters (ed. by his daughter, 1899).
R.M.H. (K.W.)

Merken, LUCRETIA WILHELMINA VAN (*Amsterdam 21 VIII 1721; ∞ 1768 Nicolaas S. van Winter*; †Leiden 24 X 1789), Dutch poet, the most famous of her time; she also wrote classicist plays.

J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

PLAYS: Artemines (1745); Tooneelpoezij (with N. S. van Winter; 2 vols, 1774–86).—VERSE: Het nut der tegenspoeden (1762); David (1767); Germanicus (1779).

A. Verwey, Nederlandsche dichters (1894); C. van Schoonneveldt, Over de navolging der klassiek-Fransche tragedie . . . (1906); W. Kloos, Een daad van eenvoudige rechtvaardigheid (1909); J. de Vries in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Letterk., XLIX (1930).

J.W.W.

Merrill, STUART (*Hempstead, Long Island 1 VIII 1863; †Versailles 1 XII 1915), French poet. Stuart Merrill, son of an American diplomat, was educated in Paris and the United States, where he published translations from Baudelaire* and Mallarmé* (Pastels in Prose). In 1889 he returned to France. A Symbolist in his early poetry, after the publication of his Credo (1892) he found comfort in a vaguely optimistic pantheism which he expressed in vers libres.

Les gemmes (1887); Les fastes (1891); Poèmes 1887–1897 (1897); Le jeu des épées (1897); Les quatre saisons (1900); Une voix dans la foule (1909); Prose et vers (1925).

M.-L. Henry, S. M., sa vie, son œuvre (1929).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Merwin, WILLIAM STANLEY (*New York 30 IX 1927), American poet. He graduated from Princeton and has made further studies in the Romance languages, the basis for his skilful translations of Pablo Neruda* and the Poem of the Cid (1959). His verse has been influenced by Surrealism and has a new metaphysical quality in Moving Target (1963).

A Mask for Janus (1952); The Dancing Bears (1954); Green With Beasts (1956); The Dark in the Furnace (1960).

D.E.Mo.

Merzlyakov, ALEKSEY FĖDOROVICH (*1778; †1830), Russian poet, critic and translator. Although a classicist, he made his name by his literary imitations of the Russian lyrical folk-songs which were much in vogue in the 18th and early 19th century.

Stikhotvoreniya (2 vols, 1867).

J.L.

Mesa y Rosales, ENRIQUE DE (*Madrid 1878; †ibid. 1929), Spanish poet; studied law at Madrid University. He was a severe theatrical critic. Although he originally followed Rubén Darío's* modernismo, he reacted in favour of traditional forms and themes, turning in particular to the sierra and the landscape and peasants of Castile. Though not a great poet, he is inspired and able.

Obras completas (1930); Poesías completas

(1941).—‘Sing Me a Song, Jimena’ (tr. J. R. Wendell) and ‘Song of the Mountain Fish’ (tr. H. E. Fish) in Translations From Hispanic Poets (New York, 1938).

L. A. Warren, Modern Spanish Literature, II (1929).

R.M.N.

Meschinot, JEAN (*?1422; †1491), SEIGNEUR DES MORTIERS, nr Nantes, French writer. He was attached to the bodyguard of the Dukes of Brittany and to the household of Anne of Brittany (1488). His moralizing and allegorical verse link him to the group of rhétoriciens. His largest work, the Lunettes des Princes (1493), is in prose and verse and, while prolix and pious, shows sincerity and some grim humour.

Les Lunettes des princes (ed. O. de Gourcuff, 1890).

A. de La Borderie, J. M., sa vie et ses œuvres, ses satires contre Louis XI (1896); A. Piaget, ‘Les Princes de G. Chastellain’ in Romania, XLVII (1921); P. Champion, ibid., XLVIII–XLIX (1922–23) and Histoire poétique du 15e siècle, II (1923).

M.Y.

Meshullam ben Kalonymus: see Kalonymus.

Mesonero Romanos, RAMÓN DE (*Madrid 19 VII 1803; †ibid. 30 IV 1882), Spanish writer. He founded and directed the weekly, non-political Semanario pintoresco español (1836–42). He is the best exponent of 19th-century costumbrismo, with its objective portrayal of local customs. A keen observer, gifted with a sober style, his collections of essays (Escenas madrilenas, 1836–42) are indispensable documents for the understanding of 19th-century Madrid life. El antiguo Madrid is a fine, anecdotal description of historical buildings; and Memorias de un setentón are unrivalled memoirs of the period 1808–50. Pérez* Galdós acknowledged his indebtedness to Mesonero.

Obras (8 vols, 1924–26); Obras (ed. C. Seco Serrano in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., 5 vols, 1967).—Panorama matritense (1832–35); Tipos y caracteres (1843–62); El antiguo Madrid, paseos histórico-anecdóticos por las calles y casas de esta villa (1861); Memorias de un setentón natural y vecino de Madrid (1880); text in Costumbristas españoles (ed. E. Correa Calderón, 2 vols, 1950–51).

C. Pitoulet, ‘M. R., costumbrista’ in Esp. Moderna (1903); H. C. Berkowitz, ‘The memory element in M.’s Memorias’ in Romanic Rev., XXI (1930); J. Olmedilla y Puig, Bosquejo biográfico del popular escritor de costumbres D. R. de M. R. (1889).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Messchert, WILLEM (*Rotterdam 3 III 1790; †ibid. 14 II 1844), Dutch poet, publisher and bookseller. He published the Brieven of his admired Bilderdijk* (5 vols, 1836–37) and wrote the beautiful idyll De gouden bruiloft (1825).

VERSE: De Veldslag bij Waterloo (1815); De Watersnood (1820); Nagelaten gedichten (ed. H. Tollens, 1848).—De drie gebroeders Belesteyn (1822).

H. Tollens in De Tijd, VII (1848); Th. Weevers, 'W. M. De verhouding van zijn "De Gouden Bruiloft" tot de "Luise" van J. H. Voss' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, XXX (1936). J.W.W.

Messenius, JOHANNES (*V. Stenby ?1579; †Uleåborg, Finland 6 XI 1636), Swedish historian. His main work, Scondia Illustrata (pub. 1700–05), covers Sweden's entire culture from earliest times to his own. With a view to popularizing Swedish history he also wrote a number of rather cumbrous historical verse plays, strongly marked by Johannes* Magnus' apotheosizing tendencies.

Samlade dramer (ed. H. Schück and H. Lidell, 2 vols, 1886–1954).

H. Schück, M. (1920); H. Lidell, Studier i J. M.:s dramer (1935); H. Olsson, J. M.:s Scondia illustrata (1944). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Meston, WILLIAM (*Midmar, Aberdeenshire c. 1688; †Aberdeen, spring 1745), Scottish burlesque poet, scholar and wit; Jacobite of fluctuating fortunes, whose admiration of Hudibras is apparent in his satires. R.M.H.

Phaethon burlesqued (1720); Knight of the Kirk (1723); Old Mother Grim's Tales (1737); Mob contra Mob, or The Rabblers Rabbled (1738).—Poems (1767; with life). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Mestres, APELES (*1854; †1936), Catalan poet, playwright and artist. Of refined taste, he delighted in both drawing and describing flowers, insects and birds. He was born in an old house (close to Barcelona cathedral), described in his delightful 'La Casa Vella'. Following the historically-minded Catalan Romanticism, he introduced the more idealistic influence of Heine*, Lamartine* and Tennyson*. J.M.B. i R. (G.W.R.)

Metaphrastes: see Symeon Metaphrastes.

Metastasio (TRAPASSI), PIETRO (*Rome 3 I 1698; †Vienna 12 IV 1782), Italian poet and librettist. The adopted son of G. V. Gravina*: 'Artino Corasio' in Arcadia (1718); on leaving Rome (1719), Metastasio lived for 11 years in Naples. He later succeeded Apostolo Zeno* as poet laureate to the imperial court, Vienna (1730–82). Of improvisatory talent, Metastasio wrote occasional verse, five canzonette (1719–49) often considered the foremost expression of Arcadian lyricism, and many melodrammi—operatic libretti lyrical in intonation and completely in tune with the fashionable taste of his day (Didone abbandonata, 1723; Demetrio, Olimpiade, Demofonte, 1730–40). In many of his works situations typical of the French classical theatre abound (Attilio Regolo, 1740), but the tragic conflicts of Corneille* and Racine* are invariably resolved with tender lyricism in the innumerable ariette distributed with formal precision throughout the drama. Metastasio's verse is characterized by a unique transparency of expression, a mellifluous speech based on rational discourse and seemingly endowed with an inner musical life. Other works include oratorios, cantatas, Giustino (a tragedy; 1712) and critical essays (Estratto dell'arte poetica d'Aristotele). Metastasio also left a rich and important correspondence.

Tutte le opere (ed. B. Brunelli, 5 vols, 1943–54; III–V cont. the letters); Opere (sel. ed. E. Sala di Felice, 1965; sel. ed. M. Fubini, with important intro., 1968); Melodrammi (ed. F. Nicolini, 4 vols, 1912–14).—Dramas and other poems (tr. J. Hoole, 3 vols, 1800).

L. Russo, P. M. (3rd ed. 1945).—A. della Corte, 'L'estetica musicale di P. M.' in Paisiello (1922); G. Natali, La vita e le opere di P. M. (1923); A. Trigliani, Il teatro raciniano e i melodrammi di P. M. (1951); W. Binni, L'Arcadia e il M. (1963); F. Gavazzoni, Studi metastasiani (1964); W. Binni and R. Scrivano, 'P. M.' in Introduzione ai problemi critici della letteratura italiana (1967; biblio.).—C. Burney, Life and Letters of M. (3 vols, 1796); S. Worsthorne, 'M. and the history of opera' in Cambridge Jour., VI (1953). M.W.

Metge, BERNAT (*Barcelona c. 1346; †ibid. c. 1413), Catalan writer, eminent for his classical prose style, which reflects the dawn of the Renaissance. He was a secretary in the chancery, and many of his official letters rank as literature. He translated the Història de Valter i Griselda from the Latin version of Petrarch* and was thus the first to introduce the work of the great Italian writer to the Peninsula. His chief work is Lo Sonni (1398), a polished work in which the late King John I appears to him in a dream while he is in prison and is made to exonerate Metge's religious cynicism and political conduct. It also contains extensive borrowings from the classics, especially Cicero*, and a lively dispute on misogyny. His works in verse (the most significant is the Llibre de Fortuna y Prudència) reflect an archaizing Provençal influence.

Obres completes (ed. M. de Riquer, 1959). J.M.B. i R. (G.W.R.)

Methodius (martyred c. 311), Greek Christian writer, lived at Olympus in Lycia and later became Bishop of Philippi. His chief work is the Banquet in which ten virgins sing the praises of virginity in an Oriental garden; the dialogue is modelled on Plato's* Symposium and shows a romantic imaginativeness. Despite the Greek feeling of his work he had a strong antagonism to the Hellenized theology of Origen*, which emerges in his dialogue Aglaophon on the idea of resurrection.

Ed. N. Bonwetsch (1917); ed. H. Musurillo (1963).—Tr. H. Musurillo (Ancient Christian Writers, XXVII, 1958).

N. Bonwetsch, Die Theologie des M. (1903); J. Farges, Les idées morales et religieuses de Méthode (1929). H.C.

Methodius, St (*Salonica before 826; †?Velehrad 6 IV 885), the brother of St Cyril*, was responsible for a considerable part of the earliest Slavonic translation of the Scriptures and of certain liturgical texts. He carried on the Byzantine mission in Moravia after St Cyril's death. The Slavonic literary language established by the two brothers was perpetuated by Methodius' disciples, several of whom fled to the Balkans (Kliment*) and some to Bohemia to escape persecution after their master's death.

Life of M. in D. Čiževskij and C. H. van Schooneveld, Apophoreta Slavica, I (1957).—Further biblio. in OLD CHURCH SLAVONIC LITERATURE. R.A.

Metochites: see Theodore Metochites.

Meulen, ANDRIES VAN DER (†c. 1520), Dutch poet in the REDERIJKER tradition, factor of the Chamber of Rhetoric Pax Vobis, at Oudenaarde. He wrote Een zuverlic bouxkin van der Ketyvigheyt der menschelicker naturen (1543), characteristic of the late medieval vanitas obsession. Some also ascribe to him the Historie van Saladine (1483).

Belg. Museum, VI (1842) and VII (1843); J. Vanderheyden, Het thema en de uitbeelding van de dood . . . (1930). J.J.M.

Mexía, PERO (*Seville ?1499; †ibid. 1551), Spanish historian and humanist. He succeeded Guevara* as Charles V's chronicler. His chronicle, not published in its entirety until 1918, was used by Sandoval* and others. His miscellany, Silva de varia lección (1541), ran through 17 editions before 1600; it provided the source for Marlowe's* Tamburlaine. He also wrote colloquies and dialogues on many topics and a history of the Roman Empire from Caesar* to Maximilian I. His prose is good.

Relación de las comunidades de Castilla in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXI; Historia de Carlos V (ed. J. Deloffre in Rev. Hispanique, XLIV, 1918); Coloquios (1947); Silva de varia lección (2 vols, 1933).—A delectable dialogue concerning phisick (tr. T. Newton, 1580); The foreste (tr. from the Fr. T. Fortescue, 1570–71); The historie of all the Romane Emperors (tr. W. Traheron, 1604); The imperiall historie (ed. E. Grimeston, 1623). E.M.W.

Mey, also Mei, LEV ALEXANDROVICH (*Moscow 13 II 1822; †1862), Russian poet who was above all a talented aesthetic virtuoso. His two dramas, Tsarskaya nevesta (1849; The Tsar's Bride, tr. R.

Newmarch, 1914) and Pskovityanka (1860; The Pskov Maiden, tr. E. Agate, 1931), have been turned into libretti for Rimsky-Korsakov's operas. Mey was also an excellent translator of Béranger* and Heine*. He died of excessive drinking.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (5 vols, 1887; another ed., 2 vols, 1911); Nepropushchennye tsenzuroy stikhi (1922); Izbrannye proizvedeniya (1962).

Y. P. Polonsky, 'L. A. M.' in Russkii Vestnik (1896); B. Sadovsky, 'Poeziya L. A. Meya' in Russkaya Mysl' (1908). J.L.

Meyer, CONRAD FERDINAND (*Zürich 11 X 1825; †1875 Luise Ziegler; †Kilchberg 28 XI 1898), Swiss writer. The descendant of Zürich patricians, Meyer never had to earn a living, but inherited a neurotic personality, which delayed his start in life. Historical studies in Lausanne under Louis Vuillemin after a breakdown (1853) awakened his creativity, but he was only freed from crippling inhibitions after the death of his mother (1856). He was bilingual: not until the Franco-German war did he finally rally to German language, art and literature. But in his lapidary handling of words there always remained something French. He differed from Gotthelf* and Keller* in distancing direct experience, recreating great men and moments, preferably of the Renaissance or Reformation. His long Novellen are unsurpassed virtuoso pieces, as are his ballads and poems.

Der Heilige (1880; Thomas à Beckett, tr. M. V. Wendheim, 1885); Kleine Novellen (sel. tr. W. G. Howard, 1913–15).—Die Hochzeit des Mönchs (1884; Eng. tr. idem, 1913–15); Die Versuchung des Pescara (1887; Eng. tr. C. Bell, 1890).—Sämtliche Werke (ed. H. Mayne, E. Ermatinger et al., 14 vols, 1925).—Briefe, nebst Rezensionen und Aufsätze (ed. A. Frey, 2 vols, 1908); Briefwechsel mit Luise von François (ed. A. Bettelheim, 1905); Historisch-kritische Gesamtausgabe (ed. H. Zeller and A. Zäch, 1958 ff.).

F. F. Baumgarten, Das Werk C. F. M.s (1920, 1948); A. Burkhard, C. F. M. The Style and the Man (1923); R. Faesi, C. F. M. (1925, 1948); H. Maync, C. F. M. und sein Werk (1925); H. von Lerber, C. F. M. (1949); H. Henel, The Poetry of C. F. M. (1954); W. D. Williams, The Stories of C. F. M. (1962). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Meyer, HEINRICH, pseud. K. H. HOUSTON MEYER (*Nürnberg 17 V 1904), German-American novelist, Professor of German at Muehlenberg College, Allentown, Pennsylvania and at Vanderbilt University, Tennessee.

Der deutsche Schäferroman des 17. Jh. (1927); Konrad Bäumlers weiter Weg (1938); Goethe, das Leben im Werk (1951; 2nd ed. 1967); Was bleibt? (1966).

H. W. Pfund in Amer.-Ger. Rev., V (1939).
E.R.

Meyer, JOHANN (*Wilster, Holstein 5 I 1829; †Kiel 16 X 1904), German poet. A talented follower of Groth* in his Low German lyrics, he is unbearably third-rate in his High German poems. His gift petered out in occasional verse.

Ditmarscher Gedichte (2 vols, 1858–59); Platt-deutscher Hebel. Eine freie Übersetzung der Hebelschen alemannischen Gedichte (1859); Gründunnersdag bi Eckernför (1873); Uns' ole Moderspråk, Schwank (1880).—Sämtliche Werke (5 vols, 1906).

K. T. Gaedertz, 'J. M.' in Niedersachsen, IV (1899); J. Heinemann, J. M. ein schleswig-holsteinischer Dichter (3 vols, 1899–1900); C. Voss, J. M., und seine Bedeutung als deutscher Volksdichter (1899).
G.C.

Meyer, LODEWIJK (*1630; †1681), Dutch playwright, surgeon and philosopher, first wrote spectacular plays but became more and more a rationalist in art as well as in matters of faith. With Pels* and others he founded a poetical society, NIL VOLENTIBUS ARDUUM, which strove to regulate all art. In Meyer's time the transition from Dutch baroque to French classicism took place. He adapted De looghenaar (1658) and Ghulde Vlies (1667) from Corneille*; Andromaché (1678) from Racine* and wrote De verloofde Koningsbruidt (1668). He was a friend of Spinoza* and an editor of his Opera Posthuma (1677). His philosophical work, Philosophia Scripturae Interpres (1666), published anonymously, was banned in 1674. He also wrote Nederlandtsche Woordenschat (1669), a philological work.

K. O. Meinsma, Spinoza en zijn kring (1896); J. F. M. Sterck, 'Uit het Amsterdamsche Tooneel-leven op het einde der XVIIde eeuw' in Handelingen Maatschappij Nederl. Lett. (1912–13); J. Bauwens, La tragédie française et le théâtre hollandais au dix-septième siècle (1921); C. L. Thijssen-Schoute, 'L. M. en diens verhouding tot Descartes en Spinoza' in Mededelingen v. h. Spinozahuis (1954).
A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Meysenbug, MALWIDA VON (*Cassel 28 X 1816; †Rome 26 IV 1903), German writer. She followed the political refugees of 1848 into exile, was governess in Alexander Herzen's* London household, later a friend of Wagner*, Nietzsche*, Garibaldi and Mazzini*. She was a pioneer feminist.
H.A.P.

Gesammelte Werke (ed. B. Schleicher, 5 vols, 1922).—Briefe von und an M. von M. (ed. B. Schleicher, 1920); Briefwechsel mit Romain Rolland (ed. idem, 1932).

E. Reicke, M. von M. (1912); B. Schleicher, M. on M. (3rd ed. 1947).
H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Meyster, EVERARD (*1617; †1679), Dutch poet, lived at Amersfoort, made himself famous or ridiculous with fantastic plans. He proposed to make Utrecht into a seaport, organized fantastic feasts and wrote a number of poems: Der Goden Landspel (1655); De Key-Klucht van Jock en Ernst (1661); Bedencking over d'Eemsche Zeevaerd (1670).
A.M.B.W.

J. Scheltema, Geschied- en letterkundig Mengelwerk, V (1833); P. A. F. van Veen, De Soeticheydt des buyten-levens vergeselschap met de boucken (1960).
A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Meyvogel, JACOB COENRAEDSZ., 17th-century Dutch poet, strongly influenced by Cats*, produced devotional doggerel: Schatkist der Liefde (3 vols, 1634), Gulden Spiegel, ofte opwekkinghe tot Chr. deugden (1646), Vermakelijcke Brulofst-Kroon; and a Biblical drama: Thamars ontschaking of de verdoolde liefde van Ammon (1646).
A.M.B.W.

D. F. Scheurleer, Nederlandsche Liedboeken (1912).
R.P.M.

Michael, HERR: see Michael Nicolai.

Michael Acominatus: see Michael Choniates.

Michael Attaleiates (*Attaleia; †after 1079), Byzantine judge and high official. He wrote a history of the years 1034–79, taking Agathias* as his model. He also drew up a detailed charter for a monastery which he endowed in Constantinople.

Historia (ed. I. Bekker, 1853; with Lat. tr.).—G. Moravcsik, Byzantinoturcica (2nd ed. 1958).
J.M.H. (R.B.)

Michael Choniates (*c. 1138; †c. 1222), Byzantine scholar, Archbishop of Athens (1182). He wrote theological works, letters and speeches, and is well known for his gloomy picture of life in Greece after the Fourth Crusade and his poem on the city of Athens.

Ed. Sp. P. Lambros (1879).—G. Stadtmüller, M. C. (1934).
J.M.H.

Michael Critoboulus, 15th-century Byzantine historian, connected with Imbros and a supporter of Muhammad II, to whom he dedicated his history. This work, covering the period 1451–67 and modelled on Thucydides*, is a valuable source and unusual in its point of view.

Fragmenta historicorum Graecorum, V (ed. C. Müller, 1883; with Lat. tr.); V. Grecu, Critobul din Imbros (Bucharest, 1963).

Z. V. Udaltsova in Vizantiiskii Vremennik, XII (1957).
J.M.H. (R.B.)

Michael Glycas (fl. mid-12th century), Byzantine scholar. He left various writings including a poem to Manuel I, theological works, letters and a world chronicle from the Creation to 1118, of little independent value.

Annales (ed. I. Bekker, 1836; with Lat. tr.); Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CLVIII (1866; with Lat. tr.); poems ed. E. Th. Tsolakakis (Salonika, 1959).

H. Pernot, 'Le poème de M. G.' in Mélanges Ch. Diehl, I (1931). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Michaëlis, KARIN MARIE BECH, née BRØNDUM (*Randers 20 III 1872; ∞1895 Sophus Michaëlis*, ∞1912 Charles Emil Stangeland; †Thursø 11 I 1950), Danish novelist and short-story writer. She spent a great part of her life in the U.S.A., and also in Austria and Germany where she had many friends, some of whom she sheltered from the Nazis. She is a fine psychologist, both when describing the little Danish girl Bibi, who is the central character of several of her children's books, and when describing woman at the climacteric, as in her famous novel Den farlige Alder (1910; Eng. tr. The Dangerous Age, 1911). Her book 'Mother' (Mor, 1935) is also a remarkable literary achievement.

NOVELS: Højt Spil (1898); Fattige i Aanden (1901); Birkedommeren (1901); Barnet (1902; tr. The Child: Andrea, 1904); Lillemor (1902); Hellig Enfold (1903); Sønner (1903); Gyda (1903); Trold (1904; tr. Little Troll, 1946); Munken gaar i Enge (1905); De smaa Menesker (1906); Tommelise (1906); Kyllingesorger (1907); Ghettoens Blomst (1907); Over al Forstand (1907); Betty Rosa (1908); Tro som Guld (1909); Elsie Lindner (1912; Eng. tr. 1912); Bogen om Kærlighed (1912); Grev Sylvains Hævn (1913; tr. The Governor, 1913); Glædens Skole (1914); Weiter Leben (1915); Don Juan—efter Døden (1919); 30 Dages Laan (1920); Lille unge Kone (1921); Mette Trap og hendes Unger (1922; tr. Venture's End, 1927); Syv Søstre sad (1923); Træet paa Godt og Ondt (5 vols, 1924–30); Kvindelig, din Tro er stor (1925); Perlerne (1927); Pigen, der smilede (1929); Hjertets Vagabond (1930); Justine (1931); Familien Worm (1933); Lotte Ligeglad (1936); Den grønne Ø (1937; tr. The Green Island, 1938); Mors Øjne (1940).—Bibi-Bøgerne (1929–39; trs Bibi, 1933, and Bibi Goes Travelling, 1934).—SHORT STORIES: Hjertets Drømme (1915); Krigens Ofre (1916); Atter det skilte—(1918).—MEMOIRS: Farlige Famlen (1949); Lys og Skygge (1950). E.B.

Michaëlis, SOPHUS AUGUST BERTHEL (*Odense 14 V 1865; ∞1895 Karin Brøndum, ∞1911 Astrid Nystrøm, ∞1921 Louise Lucie Charlotte Peschardt; †Copenhagen 28 I 1932), Danish poet and novelist. For a period he was a music and art critic. His most important contribution to Danish literature is in his poetry; he is a cultured aesthete, but some of his lyrics are marred by empty rhetoric. His best-known novel is Hellener og Barbar (1914).

VERSE: Digte (1889); Solblomster (1893); Sirener

(1898); Livets Fest (1900); Palmerne (1904); Blaaregn (1913); Romersk Foraar (1921).—NOVELS: Synd (1891); Vanemennesker (1892); Æbelø (1895); Dødedansen (1900); Giovanna (1901); Den evige Søvn (1912); Himmelskibet (1921).—Samlede Romaner (3 vols, 1919). E.B.

Michael Italicus, 12th-century Byzantine scholar and Bishop of Philippopolis. He taught philosophy and rhetoric and left letters and other writings, some of which are still unpublished. J.M.H.

Letters in J. A. Cramer, Anecdota Graeca Oxoniensia, III (1836); R. Browning, 'Unpublished correspondence between M. I... and Theodore Prodromus' in Byzantinobulgarica, I (Sofia, 1962). R.B.

Michael Nicolai, surname unknown (†between 1496 and 1514), Danish poet and hymnist. He was clergyman at Odense and is remembered for his religious lyrics, especially for his rhymed introduction to the rosary devotion, Om Jomfru Marie Rosenkrans, and his poems about Adam and Eve and about the life of man.

Herr Michaels Rimværker (1836). E.B.

Michael Psellus (*Constantinople 1018; †c. 1078), Byzantine scholar and historian. Rising rapidly in imperial favour and recognized as a distinguished scholar, he became in 1045 Professor of philosophy in the University of Constantinople and later on, after a reversal of fortune and an unsuccessful incursion into monastic life, he became tutor to the young Ducas, afterwards the Emperor Michael VII. He has left a comprehensive corpus of writings, illustrating the encyclopaedic knowledge which so impressed his contemporaries, and ranging from letters, orations and philosophical and theological items to his well-known history, the Chronographia. This last covers the years 996–1077 and the greater part of it is based on Psellus' personal experiences. It is a racy and vivid piece of writing, enlivened by the author's private views and comments. His other works provide a wealth of detail about his contemporaries, some of whom are known to us only through him. His Accusation against the Patriarch Michael Cerularius, written at the request of Isaac I Comnenus, reflects the views generally held on the relation between Church and State and on the imperial office. Psellus himself particularly stressed the importance of philosophical studies and appears to have inaugurated a revival of interest in Plato* and the Neo-Platonists. He had great feeling for Byzantine traditions which were based on Christian faith and classical learning. J.M.H.

Chronographia (ed. with Fr. tr. E. Renaud, 2 vols, 1926–28; tr. E. R. A. Sewter, 1953); other works: Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXXII (1864; with Lat. tr.); ed. K. N. Sathas in Mesaionike

Bibliothèque, IV-V (1874-76); ed. E. Kurtz and F. Drexel (2 vols, 1936-41).

C. Zervos, Un philosophe néoplatonicien du XI<sup>e</sup> siècle (1920); J. M. Hussey, Church and Learning in the Byzantine Empire 867-1185 (1937); P. Joannou, Christliche Metaphysik in Byzanz, I: Die Illuminationslehre des M. Psellos und Joannes Italos (1956). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Michal: see Lebenson, MICHA JOSEPH.

Michaux, HENRI (*Namur 24 V 1899; ∞1943 Marie-Louise Ferdière), Belgian novelist, poet and artist, French by adoption. The problem of man's destiny and his relationship to God torments this introvert, whose difficult, incisive writing, like his art, is fantastically surrealist. Austere humour and reticent compassion relieve the mordant satire of his work, reminiscent of Swift*. B.M.W.

Un certain Plume (1931); Un barbare en Asie (1932; Eng. tr. Sylvia Beach, 1949); L'espace du dedans (1944; Eng. tr. Richard Ellmann, 1951); Ailleurs (1948); L'infini turbulent (1957).

R. Bertele, H. M. (1946). B.M.W. (J.C.D.)

Michel, JEAN (†?1501), French dramatist; a physician at Angers. He made a free adaptation of the second and third days of A. Gréban's* Mystère de la Passion under the title of Passion of Jhesu Crist (1486; some 30,000 lines, for performance on four days). He restricted the action to the life of Christ and laid stress on the more fantastic and picturesque elements.

Numerous pr. eds c. 1490 to 1542; Le Mystère de la Passion (ed. O. Jodogne, 1959).

P. de Julleville, Les Mystères (1880); G. Frank, The Medieval French Drama (1954).

A.H.D.; G.B.

Michelangelo: see Buonarroti, MICHELANGELO.

Michelet, JULES (*Paris 21 VIII 1798; †Hyères 9 II 1874), French historian and essayist. Michelet was the son of a printer and raised himself by great industry to the highest University honours. Influenced by Vico* and Herder*, he became the foremost of the French Romantic historians (1827-43). He strove to make of history a 'complete resurrection of the past' based on exact scholarship and imaginative sympathy. His work, however, was over-influenced by personal prejudices (anticlericalism, liberalism). He remained all his life a son of the people and became a generous-minded pamphleteer in the interests of humanitarian democracy (1843-52). His last works (1852-74) are marked by an uninhibited lyrical exuberance.

HISTORICAL: Histoire romaine (1831); Histoire de France des origines à la Renaissance (6 vols, 1833-44; tr. W. K. Kelly, 2 vols, 1844-46); Histoire de la Révolution française (7 vols, 1847-53); Histoire de France de la Renaissance à la Révolution (11 vols, 1855-67); Histoire du 19<sup>e</sup> siècle (3 vols, 1876); Tableau de la France (crit. ed. L. Refort, 1934).—SOCIAL PHILOSOPHY: Le peuple (1846; Eng. tr. C. Cocks, 1846); L'amour (1858); La femme (1859); La Bible de l'humanité (1864).—VARIOUS: L'oiseau (1856); L'insecte (1857); La mer (1861; Eng. tr. W. H. D. Adams, 1875); La montagne (1868; Eng. tr. idem, 1872); Ma jeunesse (1884); Mon journal (1884).

A. R. Pugh, M. and His Ideas on Social Reform (1923); G. Monod, La vie et la pensée de M. (2 vols, 1924); J. Guéhennou, L'évangile éternel (1927); D. Halévy, J. M. (1928); L. Febvre, M. (1946); O. Haac, Les principes inspirateurs de M. (1951); R. Barthes, M. par lui-même (1954); P. Viallaneix, La Voie Royale, essai sur le peuple dans l'œuvre de M. (1959). M.G.; J.P.R.

Michel of Northgate, DAN (fl. 1340), Kentish author of the 'Remorse of Conscience' (1340), a prose translation from French; chiefly of philosophical interest.

Ayenbite of Inwyrt (ed. R. Morris, 1866; corr. P. Gradon, 1965); J. K. Wallenberg, The Vocabulary of D. M.'s 'Ayenbite of Inwyrt' (Uppsala, 1923). R.W.B. (T.F.H.)

Michel's Passion: see Michel, JEAN.

Michiels, IVO, pseud. of RIK CEUPPENS (*Mortsel 8 I 1923), Flemish novelist. After writing for a time in the pessimistic mood prevailing after the Second World War, he became one of the leading writers of experimental prose aiming at consciousness in language structure. This prose is related to the NOUVEAU ROMAN but has its own personal poetic and lyrical style.

Het afscheid (1957; Der Abschied, tr. A. Piper, 1960); Journal brut (1958); Het boek alfa (1963); Le livre Alpha, tr. M. Buysse, 1967); Orchis militaris (1968; Ger. tr. G. Hermanowski, 1969). R.F.L. (tr. P.K.)

Miciński, TADEUSZ (*Warsaw 9 XI 1873; †Czyrykowska, White Russia II 1919), Polish author. His highly personal metaphysical beliefs are seen in almost all his writings, which are among the best examples of early Expressionism in Polish literature. His Symbolist poetry anticipates Surrealism. P.H.

W mroku gwiazd (verse; 1902).—PLAYS: Kniaź Patiomkin (1906); W mroku złotego palacu czyli Bazylissa Teofanu (1909).—NOVELS: Nietota—Księga tajemnicza Tatr (1910); Ksiądz Faust (1913); Wita (1926).—Dęby czarnobylskie (short stories; 1911).

Wiadomości Literackie, LXIV (1925; the entire issue devoted to T. M.); Z. Dębicki, 'T. M.' in Portrety, II (1928). S.S.

Mickiewicz, ADAM BERNARD (*Zaosie 27 XII 1798; †Constantinople 26 XI 1855), Polish poet and playwright, of petty country gentry. He studied at Vilna University. After a period of teaching at Kowno (1819–23), he was arrested for belonging to a patriotic youth group and in X 1824 exiled to Russia. In St Petersburg he got in touch with the Decembrists and went to Moscow where he met Pushkin*. In 1829 he left Russia, paid a visit to Goethe*, from Rome went to Switzerland where he met Krasiński* and after an unfruitful attempt in 1831 to join the Polish revolution he went to Paris. He lived there with an increasing family in straitened conditions till in 1839 he got the Chair of Latin literature at Lausanne. Appointed Professor of Slavonic literature at the Collège de France in 1840, he lost this post after four years through propagating the mystic and political doctrine of A. Towiański. In 1848 he organized a Polish legion in Italy and attempted in vain to secure the Pope's backing. In 1849 for six months he edited the progressive periodical La Tribune des Peuples. He died while organizing Polish forces in Turkey.

With his Ballady i romanse (1822) he opened the period of Polish literary Romanticism, introducing the freshness of popular sources and his own bold imagination. He won over the young and afterwards the general public. In his love lyrics, perfect in form, we feel the human heart responding to a passing sense of happiness, melancholy and despair. His religious lyrics give the measure of the unusual depth of his sentiment. The exotic beauty of nature is revealed in Sonety Krymskie. The romantic drama Dziady gives in parts II and IV the poetic picture of country folk; part III is a Promethean outburst of wounded patriotism, its suffering and messianic hopes. Of his two poetic novels (with some influences of Scott* and Byron* respectively) Grażyna presents a patriotic achievement of a heroic woman, Konrad Wallenrod, a long prepared revenge on the country's enemies. Pan Tadeusz, his masterpiece, portrays the life of the Polish gentry at the beginning of the 19th century. Written in a Homeric manner with a pinch of healthy humour it illustrates the author's love of his lost native country. Księgi narodu polskiego . . . in Biblical prose gave Polish exiles a moral interpretation of Poland's history and pointed the aim of their activity abroad. Mickiewicz translated Byron's Giaour, and verses from several other poets. His status is that of the greatest Polish poet, seer and teacher.

VERSE: Do Joachima Lelewela (1822); Ballady i romanse (1822; Balladen und Romanzen, tr. A. Weiss, 1875); Poezye, II (1823; cont.: (1) Grażyna; Eng. tr. L. Jablonski, Paris, 1851; crit. ed. W. Bruchnalski, 1922; (2) Dziady, pts II and IV; crit. ed. J. Kallenbach, 1923); Sonety (Moscow, 1826; Die Sonette, tr. A. Cornelius, n.d.); Oda do młodości (1827; 'Ode to Youth', tr.

W. L. Linton in Translations . . ., n.d.); Konrad Wallenrod (Petersburg, 1828; Eng. tr. J. Parish, 1925; crit. ed. W. Bruchnalski, 1922); Farys (1828; Eng. tr. as above); Pan Tadeusz (Paris, 1834; Eng. tr. G. R. Noyes, 1917, and in Everyman's Lib., 1932; crit. ed. J. Kallenbach and J. Loś, 1921).—PLAYS: Dziady Część, III (Paris, 1932; Forefathers' Eve, tr. D. P. Radin, 1928; tr. M. Gardner, 1926; crit. ed. W. Borowy, 1920; pts II and IV are in Poezye, II, above); Drames polonais. Les Confédérés de Bar; Jacques Jasiński ou les deux Polognes (fragment; ed. L. Mickiewicz, Paris, 1867).—VARIOUS: Księgi narodu polskiego i pielgrzymstwa polskiego (Paris, 1832; 'The Books of the Polish Nation and of the Polish Pilgrimage' in Konrad Wallenrod . . ., tr. J. Parish et al., 1925; crit. ed. S. Pigon, 1922); Cours de la littérature slave (1845); Les Slaves, Cours professé au Collège de France (3 vols, 1849; repr. 1914); La Tribune des Peuples (ed. L. Mickiewicz, 1907).—CORRESPONDENCE: Correspondance (1820–55) (ed. L. Michiewicz, Paris, 1924).—Dzieła wszystkie (ed. T. Pini and M. Reiter, 12 vols, 1911–13; new ed., 15 vols, 1949 ff.); Dzieła (1955).—Gems of Polish Poetry (tr. F. H. Fortey, 1923); Poems . . . (tr. various hands and ed. G. R. Noyes, New York, 1944); A. M. 1798–1835, Selected Poems (ed. C. Mills, New York, 1956); Œuvres poétiques complètes (tr. C. Ostrowski, 2 vols, 1845; 4th ed. 1859); Poetische Werke (tr. S. Lipiner, 2 vols, 1882–87).

L. Mickiewicz, A. M., sa vie et son œuvre (1888); J. Kallenbach, A. M. (2 vols, 4th ed. 1926); J. Treliak, Młodość Mickiewicza (2 vols, Petersburg, 1897); A. Górski, Monsalwat (4th ed. 1923); G. Sarrazin, 'A. M.' in Les grands poètes romantiques de la Pologne (2nd ed. 1920); M. M. Gardner, A. M., the National Poet of Poland (1911); M. Kridl, A. M., Son rôle dans la littérature polonaise et sa place dans la littérature mondiale (1921); S. Szpotański, A. M. et le romantisme (1923); W. Lednicki, M. en Russie (1929) and 'A. M.' in Life and Culture of Poland (1944); J. Krzyżanowski, 'A. M.' in Polish Romantic Literature (1930); A. Potocki, M.: l'homme et sa légende (1930); M. Czapska, La vie de M. (1931); S. Pigoń, Pan Tadeusz. Wzrost, wielkość i sława (1934) and Kronika życia i twórczości M. 1840–44 (1969); S. Windakiewicz, A. M. Życie i dzieła (1935); E. Krakowski, A. M. philosophe mystique . . . (1935); E. Marek, Destinées françaises de l'œuvre messianique d'A. M. (Fribourg, 1945); B. M. Miazgowski, Les éléments créateurs de la culture slave. D'après les cours d'A. M. au Collège de France . . . (ibid., 1945); L. Wellisz, The Friendship of Margaret Fuller d'Ossoli and A. M. (1947); J. Kleiner, M. (2 vols, 1949–50); K. Pruszyński, A. M. The Life Story of the Greatest Polish Poet (1950); A. M. Poet of Poland. A Symposium (ed. M. Kridl, New York, 1950); W. Weintraub, The Poetry of A. M. (1954); K. Kostenicz et al., Kronika życia i twórczości M. Lata 1798–1824 (1957); W. Bronowy, O poezji M.

(1956); Z. Stefanowska, Historia i profesja (1962); K. Wyka, 'Pan Tadeusz' (1963); M. Dernałowicz, Kronika życia i twórczości M. 1832-34 (1966). S.S. (P.H.)

Mickle, WILLIAM JULIUS (*Langholm, Dumfriesshire 28 IX 1735; ∞1781 Mary Tomkins; †Oxford 28 X 1788), Scottish poet. Mickle failed as a brewer and took to poetry in London. He went to Lisbon in 1779 as secretary to Commodore Johnstone. A good ballad poet, chiefly remembered for There's nae luck about the house and Cumnor Hall, which inspired Scott's * Kenilworth.

The Concubine (1765; rev. as Syr Martyn, 1778); tr. of Camões, Lusiadas (1775); Poems (with life by J. Sim; 1806). J.K.

Micu, SAMUIL: see Clain, SAMUIL.

Middleton, CONYERS (*Richmond, Yorks 27 XII 1683; ∞1710 Mrs Sarah Drake, ∞1734 Mary Place; †Hildersham, nr Cambridge 28 VII 1750), English theologian. A brilliant and sceptical scholar whose curiosity outran his orthodoxy.

Introductory Discourse (1747); A Free Inquiry into the Miraculous Powers (1749).—The Miscellaneous Works of C. M. (4 vols, 1752).

Sir L. Stephen, English Thought in the 18th Century (1876); R. N. Stromberg, Religious Liberalism in 18th Century England (1954).

B.H. (M.Bu.)

Middleton, THOMAS (~London 18 IV 1580; ∞?1613 Mary Marbeck; □Newington Butts 4 VII 1627), English dramatist. The son of a London bricklayer, Middleton was educated at Queen's College, Oxford. By 1602 he was writing for Henslowed (the Admiral's Men) and also for the boys of St Paul's. Thereafter he wrote for several companies, notably, in collaboration with Rowley*, for Prince Henry's Men. He also wrote City pageants and in 1620 became City Chronologer. His comic style is light, fluent and vigorous; his comedy is that of situation rather than of character. His tragic style is more powerful and noble; his best tragedy, The Changeling (acted 1623-24), was written in collaboration with Rowley, who provided the worthless sub-plot. It contains some fine scenes and much good dramatic verse. His most interesting and 'finished' work is A Game at Chesse (acted 1624), an allegorical account of Spanish intrigue, which had remarkable success. Some of Middleton's work was interpolated into Macbeth, and he has been credited with the authorship of the pseudo-Shakespearean The Puritan (1607).

The Honest Whore (1604; with Dekker); A Trick to Catch the Old One (1608); The Roaring Girl (1611; with Dekker); A Game at Chesse (1625); The Changeling (1653; with Rowley); The Spanish Gipsie (1653; with Rowley); Women beware Women

(1657).—Works (ed. A. H. Bullen, 8 vols, 1885-86).

A. Symons, Studies in the Elizabethan Drama (1920); T. S. Eliot, 'T. M.' in For Lancelot Andrewes (1928); S. Schoenbaum, M.'s Tragedies (1955); R. H. Barker, T. M. (1958). J.B.B.

Miegel, AGNES (*Königsberg 9 III 1879; †Bad Salzungen 26 X 1964), German poet and short-story writer. Her lyrical poetry keeps to traditional forms, but draws originality and vitality from the landscape and atmosphere of her home country, which is also characteristic of her prose works. She excels as a writer of ballads.

VERSE: Gesammelte Gedichte (1927); Herbstgesang (1932); Flüchtlingsgedichte (1949).—STORIES: Geschichten aus Altpreussen (1926); Die Blume der Götter (1950).—Werden und Werk (with biblio.; 1938); Ausgewählte Gedichte (1952); Gesammelte Werke (6 vols, 1953-55); Heimkehr (coll. stories; 1962).—Sel. poems in J. Bithell, Contemporary German Poetry (1909).

M. Schochow, A. M. (1929); Stimmen der Freunde zum 60. Geburtstag (1939); I. Meidinger-Geise, A. M. und Ost-Preussen (1955); E. Krieger, A. M. (1959); Leben was war ich dir gut: A. M. zum Gedächtnis (1965). R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Mierlo, JOZEF VAN (*Turnhout 28 XI 1878; †Mortsel 30 V 1958), Flemish literary historian, Jesuit. His numerous studies and his standard work, De letterkunde van de Middeleeuwen (2 vols, 2nd ed. 1949), have completed and in part modified the traditional views of Middle Dutch literature.

R. Roemans, Bibliografie van J. van M. (1956); R. F. Lissens, 'J. van M. en de literatuurgeschiedenis' in Versl. en Med. Koninkl. Vlaamse Acad. (1958). R.F.L.

Migne, JACQUES-PAUL (*Saint Flour 25 X 1800; †Paris 24 X 1875), French priest and publisher, produced editions of many devotional and theological works. Of these the most famous and useful is his great collection of the Fathers, which includes many otherwise inaccessible medieval texts.

Patrologiae cursus completus: Series Latina (221 vols, 1844-64), Series Graeca (with Lat. tr.; 166 vols, 1857-86). D.H.

Mihăescu, GIB (*Drăgășani 1894; †Bucharest 1935), Rumanian author excelling in the representation of obsessive states of mind.

SHORT STORIES: La Grandiflora (1928); Vedenia (1929).—NOVELS: Brațul Andromedei (1930); Rusoaica (1933); Femeia de ciocolată (1933); Zilele și nopțile unui student întîrziat (1934); Donna Alba (1935).—Pavilionul cu umbre (play; 1927).

E. Lovinescu, Istoria literaturii române contemporane, IV (1928); Perpessicius, Mențiuni critice,

III and V (1936, 1946); V. Streinu, Pagini de critică literară (1938); G. Călinescu, Istoria literaturii române (1941). F.J.B.

Mihajlović, DRAGOSLAV (*Čuprija 1930), Serbian novelist and prose writer. Mihajlović is one of the newest generation of writers in Belgrade, coming to the fore with a book of stories, Frede, laku noc (1967), and a sensational novel in 1969, Kad su cvetale tikve. His writing deals in realistic terms with the post-war period of the late 1940s and early 1950s and touches on political themes hitherto taboo in Yugoslav literature and, from Mihajlović's experience, still dangerous ground. His setting is the violent atmosphere of teen-age gang-land in a Belgrade suburb and it relies heavily on Mihajlović's experience as a young man (he himself was a boxer, like the hero of his novel, and a political detainee for a time after the break with the Comintern). His stories are short realistic sketches in a colloquial idiom and his novel is a gripping tale of revenge which develops in accordance with the principles of a classical Greek tragedy. It was also adapted for the stage. B.J.

Mihalić, SLAVKO (*Karlovac 16 III 1928), Croatian poet. A journalist from 1947 in Zagreb and an editor with Lykos, Mihalić was the founder of two literary journals, Tribina (1952) and Knjizevna tribina (1959), and the moving spirit behind the Yugoslav Poetry Festivals which began at Plitvica in 1956. He is also the editor of the journal The Bridge, devoted to translations of Yugoslav literature, and he has been active in many other journals as well as compiling numerous poetry anthologies. His poetry is meditative and basically concerned with the everyday material world and its situations, examined with a bleak humour tinged with nihilism and often verging on despair. With Slamnig*, Mihalić shares a special involvement in the anti-poetic and commonplace which is undoubtedly a reaction to many generations of neo-Romanticism and traditional lyricism in Croatian poetry.

POEMS: Komornam muzika (1954); Put u nepostojanje (1956); Početak zaborava (1957); Darežljivo progonstvo (1959); Godišnja doba (1961); Ljubav za stavarnu zemlju (1964); Prognana Balada (1965); Ballade Bannie, tr. Janina Matillon, (1968); Jezero (1966); Izabrane pjesme (1966); Poslednja večera (1969). B.J.

Mihálik, VOJTECH (*Dolná Streda 30 III 1926), Slovak poet. After uncertain beginnings in poems of religious faith and doubt (Anjeli, 1947), Mihálik was converted to faith in Socialism, which coloured his later work. Some of this is impressive, especially the anti-religious lyrical epic Vzbúrený Jób (1960).

Plebejská košul'a (1950); Archimedove kruhy (1960). R.A.

Mihaylovski, STOYAN (*Elena 7 I 1856; †Sofia 3 VIII 1927), Bulgarian satirist and scholar. A French education prepared him for his career in law, Parliament, journalism (he edited Nash život, Naroden glas, Sofianets and Napred) and University teaching. As a writer, he belonged, like Velichkov*, to Vazov's* generation. His verse and prose alike reflect his philosophy of bitter pessimism and disillusionment with human nature and Bulgarian society in particular. He was truly Bulgaria's Juvenal*.

Poema na zloto (1889); Novissima verba (1889); Satiri (1893); Kniga za bulgarskiya narod (1897); Ot razvala kum provala (1904); Iztochni legendi (1904); Dnes chuk—utre nakovalnya (1905); Kogato bogovete se smeyat (1922).—Sel. works (5 vols, 1918–43).

I. Bogdanov, S. M. 1856–1927 (1947). V.P.

Mihelič, MIRA (*Split 14 VII 1912), Slovene novelist and playwright. While sustaining interesting plots she presents in a critical and realistic manner the moral and political breakdown of the pre-war Slovene bourgeoisie and the post-war fate of the remnants of this class.

NOVELS: Obraz v zrcalu (1941); Tiha voda (1942); April (1959); Hiša večera (1959); Mavrica nad mestom (1964); Otok in struga (1965); Igra v vetru (1967); Stolpnica osamelih žensk (1969).—PLAYS: Svet brez sovraštva (1945); Ogenj in pepel (1949); Operacija (1950); Zlati oktober (1954); Veverica ne sme umreti (1961); Danžena (1968).

A.S. (tr. H.Le.)

Mihura, MIGUEL (*Madrid 21 VII 1905), Spanish satirical dramatist who wrote first in collaboration with Calvo Sotelo and Álvaro de Laiglesia. From 1952 onwards he has presented a series of satirical pieces of which the most successful have been Tres sombreros de copa (1952) and Maribel y la extraña familia (1959). J.E.V.

Mikes, KELEMEN (*Zágon VIII 1690; †Rodostó, Turkey 2 X 1761), Hungarian essayist and translator. Exiled with his master, Ferenc Rákóczi II, to Rodostó, Mikes wrote there his Törökországi Levelek (crit. ed. 1966), which remained unknown until 1786. These belles-lettres in French epistolary style are unique in Hungarian literature. Mikes also translated numerous French religious works.

Mulatságos Napok (ed. L. Hopp, 1970).—B. Zolnai, 'M. K.' in Minerva (1930); R. Gálos, M. K. (1954); D. Mervyn Jones, 'M. K.' in Five Hungarian Writers (1966). G.F.C.

Mikhailovsky, NIKOLAY KONSTANTINOVICH (*Meshchevsk 15 XI 1842; †1904), Russian sociologist and critic. From 1869 on he was connected with Otechestvennye Zapiski ('Fatherland's Annals'). After its closure in 1884 he edited the 'populist' monthly Russkoye Bogatstvo ('The Russian Wealth') and became the most influential theoretician of narodnichestvo (populism) of his time. In his periodical he had several polemics with the Marxists in favour of the 'social revolutionaries' whose ideology was opposed to Marx*.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (10 vols, 1909–13). N. Berdyayev, Subyektivizm i individualizm v obshchestvennoy filosofii (1901); E. E. Kolosov, Ocherki mirovozzreniya Mikhaylovskogo (1912); E. Frangian, N. K. M. als Soziologe und Philosoph (1913); N. Beltov [i.e. G. V. Plekhanov], K voprosu o razvitií monisticheskogo vzglyada na istoriyu (1919); Literaturnoye nasledstvo, VII–VIII (1933). J.L.

Mikhalkov, SERGEY VLADIMIROVICH (*1913), Soviet playwright, author of ballads, political fables and verses for children written in a clear and simple style. He also wrote several plays for children.

Tom Kenti (1938); Ya khochu domoy (1949); Basni (1957); Raki i krokodil (1960). J.L.

Mikhaylovsky, NIKOLAY GRIGORYEVICH: see Garin, N. G.

Mikkelsen, HANS (*?Malmø; ∞?Elsebet?; †Harderwijk, Gelderland 20 XII 1532), Danish translator and pamphleteer. He was merchant and councillor at Malmø, and was burgomaster there, probably 1507–17. He was closely associated with Christian II and in 1523 followed him into exile. At Wittenberg he became a Lutheran, and he edited the first Danish translation of the New Testament (1524), writing the preface to it and translating part of it himself. His polemical writings were violently attacked by the defenders of the Roman Catholic faith.

C. F. Allen, Breve og Aktstykker til Oplysning af Christiørn II.s og Frederik I.s Historie (1854); F. Henderson, A Dissertation on M.'s Translation of the New Testament (1813). E.B.

Mikro, pseud. of CHRISTOFFEL HERMANUS KÜHN (*Williston, Cape Colony 8 X 1903; †Somerset West 17 IV 1968), Afrikaans writer of novels and sketches.

Toilings (1934); Pelgrims (1935); Rou Rieme (1935); Huistes teen die Heuwel (1942); Vreemde-linge (1944); Die Wa-as (1953); Die Porseleinkat (1955); Gonnakolk (1957); Die Weduwee Meraai (1959); Die Koperkan (1959). G.D. (N.D.C.)

Mikszáth, KÁLMÁN (*Szklabonya 16 I 1847; ∞ 1873 Ilona Mauks; †Budapest 28 V 1910), Hungarian author. Mikszáth took an active part in politics and his stories treat the shortcomings of Hungarian society with mild satire and genuine humour. With Mikszáth, the Hungarian novel returned from the fantasy of Jókai* to more realistic themes. He was a deft stylist, frequently using typical dialect anecdotes, and an artist in characterization.

A jó palócok (1882; The Good People of Palócz, tr. C. Bingham, 1893); Szent Péter esernyője (1895; St Peter's Umbrella, tr. B. W. Worswick, 1900); Beszterce ostroma (1895); Uj Zrinyiasz (1898); Különös házasság (1900; A Strange Marriage, tr. I. Farkas, 1964); A fekete város (1911).—Munkái (32 vols, 1910); Hátrahagyott iratai (posthumous works; ed. M. Rubinyi, 16 vols, 1914); crit. ed. Gy. Bisztray and I. Kíraly (1956–).

M. Rubinyi, M. K. élete és művei (1917); A. Schöpplin, M. K. (1941); I. Kíraly, M. K. (1960). G.F.C.

Miladinov, DIMITUR (*Struga 1810; †Istanbul 1862), Bulgaro-Macedonian literary pioneer. He and his brother KONSTANTIN (*Struga 1830; †Istanbul 1862) collected folk verse and lore, contributing effectively to the Bulgarian literary revival by this and by their resistance to Greek cultural domination. Both died in prison in Istanbul.

Bulgarski narodni pesni (Zagreb, 1861).—Coll. works (ed. N. Tabakov, 1965).

I. Shishmanov, Znachenie i zaslugi na bratya M. (1912); M. Arnaudov, Razsvet na bulgarskata narodouka (1928); P. Dinekov, Deloto na D. i K. M. (1961). V.P.

Millà i Fontanals, MANUEL (*1818; †1884), Catalan writer and historian, Professor of history of literature at Barcelona University (1846–84). He wrote a number of Catalan poems after medieval models and was influential in establishing literary criticism on a sound basis. Menéndez* y Pelayo was a pupil of his. J.M.B. i R. (G.W.R.)

Milanesi, GUIDO (*Rome 10 XII 1875; †ibid. 1956), Italian novelist and short-story writer whose works nearly all deal with the sea and are the fruit of his long experience in the Italian navy. Characteristic of his work is a note of fervent nationalism.

Thalatta (1910); Mar sanguigno (1918); L'ancora d'oro (1925); La voce del fondo (1927); La sera di S. Barbara (1938); L'ondata (1940); Racconti di tutti i mari (2 vols, 1941–44). J.F.C. (B.M.)

Milelli, DOMENICO (*Catanzaro 11 II 1841; †Palermo 22/23 XII 1905), Italian poet-patriot. A volunteer under Garibaldi in the Sicilian campaign of 1860, Milelli was later associated with the post-Romantic school of writers known as the SCAPIGLIATURA.

Canzoniere (1884); Nuovo canzoniere (1888); Prometeo (1899); Laocoonte (1899); Kokodé (1903); Fiori d'infanzia (1904); Gemme sparse (1906).—G. Gianfione, D. M., la vita e l'opera (1933); R. Garzia in Leonardo (Feb. 1934).

B.R.

Milescu, NICOLAE SPĂATARUL (*Milești 1636; †Russia 1708), Moldavian boyar, who studied at the Orthodox academy in Constantinople and later settled in Russia where he was the cultural representative of the Patriarch of Constantinople. At the request of the Tsar he went on a diplomatic mission to China (1675–78) and wrote a description of China in Russian. His most important work in Rumanian was a translation of the Old Testament, which has however remained in MS.

Eng. tr. of work on China in J. E. Baddeley, Russia, Mongolia and China (1919).—P. Panaitescu, N. Spătar M. 1636–1708 (Paris, 1925); R. Boureanu, Viața Spătarului M. (1942); D. Almas, Neculai M. S. (1954). D.J.D.

Milet, JACQUES (†1466), French poet and dramatist. He wrote an allegorical poem, entitled La Forêt de tristesse, and a play on the destruction of Troy in the style of the Mysteries (†1452).

L'histoire de la destruction de Troye la Grant (ed. E. Stengel, 1883).

E. T. Oliver, J. Milet's Drama . . . Its Principal Source; Its Dramatic Structure (1899). A.H.D.

Milev, GEO, orig. KASSABOV (*Stara Zagora 15 I 1895; †Sofia 16 V 1925), Bulgarian poet. Editor of the Symbolist and 'modernist' journal Vezni (1919–21), then of the Marxist Plamuk (1925), he became known for his fierce revolutionary verse and devotion to the Party. He was seized after the St Nedelya Church explosion and never seen again.

Antologia na jultata roza (1919); Ikonite spyat (1922); Septemvri (1927).—Sel. works (1950).

P. Penev, G. M. (1945). V.P.

Miljković, BRANKO (*Nis 29 I 1934; †Zagreb 12 II 1961), Serbian poet. Miljković studied in Belgrade and began publishing in 1952, although his first serious works appeared in Delo and Mladost in 1955. His brilliant, eloquent verse with its startling images and immense facility made a reputation for him almost overnight and his early death was a great loss to Yugoslav letters. He was an excellent translator of poetry, especially the French Symbolists, and Mandel'shtam*, and also wrote some critical articles.

POETRY: Uzalud je budim (1957); Smrću protiv smrti (1959); Poreklo nade (1960); Vatra i ništa (1960); Krv koja svetli (1961); Pesme (1965).

B.J.

Mill, JAMES (*Logie Pert, Forfar 6 IV 1773; ∞1804 Harriet Burrow; †Kensington 23 VI 1836), Scottish historian and philosopher; father of John Stuart Mill*. He held a high position in the East India Company, contributed many articles on government to the Encyclopædia Britannica, and took a leading part in founding University College, London. In philosophy, he laid a psychological foundation for Utilitarianism and developed Hartley's* associationism.

History of India (1818); Elements of Political Economy (1821); Analysis of the Phenomena of the Human Mind (1829; ed. J. S. Mill, 1869); A Fragment on Mackintosh (1835); The Principles of Toleration (1837).

G. S. Bower, Hartley and J. M. (1881); A. Bain, J. M. (1882). J.K.

Mill, JOHN STUART (*London 20 V 1806; ∞1851 Mrs Taylor; †Avignon 8 V 1873), English philosopher and political economist. Rigorously educated at home by his Benthamite philosopher father, Mill at 15 found utilitarianism an all-satisfying 'philosophy and religion'; but after a mental crisis at 20, when feeling asserted its importance, his widened intellectual sympathies acknowledged aspects of life not to be measured by empirical standards. His essays on Bentham (1838) and Coleridge (1840) show this modification of outlook, while his Utilitarianism (1863) admits the question of the superiority of certain pleasures. To philosophic thought he contributed System of Logic (1843), containing the classic analysis of inductive proof, and Examination of Sir William Hamilton's Philosophy (1865), which became a focus of controversy between empiricals and intuitives. Principles of Political Economy (1848) shows his discipleship of Ricardo* but foresees the possibility of redistribution of wealth. His social and political essays, including On Liberty (1859) and Subjection of Women (1869), again reveal his perception of the limitations of Benthamism.

Autobiography (1873); Considerations on Representative Government (1861); Thoughts on Parliamentary Reform (1859); Three Essays on Religion (1874).

Letters (ed. H. S. R. Elliot, 1910); Earlier Letters (ed. F. E. Mineka, 1963); W. L. Courtney, Metaphysics of J. S. M. (1879); C. Douglas, J. S. M.; a Study of His Philosophy (1895); M. St J. Packe, Life of J. S. M. (1954). R.M.H.

Millay, EDNA ST VINCENT (*Rockland Me., 22 II 1892; ∞1923 Eugen Boissevain; †Austerlitz, N.Y. 19 X 1950), American poet. She was still a student when her first major poem, Renascence (1917), stirred general interest. The title-poem in The Harp-Weaver and Other Poems (1923) received the Pulitzer prize in 1922; the sonnets in this volume are among her best. First recognized as the voice of rebellious and romantic youth, her poetry has held wide popularity.

A Few Figs From Thistles (1920); Wine From These Grapes (1934); Conversation at Midnight (1937); The Murder of Lidice (1942).—Collected Lyrics (1943); Collected Sonnets (1941).

E. Atkins, E. St V. M. and Her Times (1936); N. A. Brittin, E. St V. M. (1967).

H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

Miller, ARTHUR (*New York 17 X 1915; ∞1940 Mary Slattery [o/o], ∞1956 Marilyn Monroe [o/o], ∞1962 Inge Morath), American playwright. During the Depression, which profoundly affected his view of life, he learnt his craft in the Federal Theatre Project. Death of a Salesman (1949), a moving study of an ordinary man disintegrating under the pressures of modern society, family tension and misplaced ideals, showed in its expressionistic form the interest in experiment that extended to verse in the first version of A View From the Bridge (1956) and to a stream-of-consciousness technique in After the Fall (1963). He has also written prose fiction, developing one short story into a film script (The Misfits, 1961), but the more conventional Ibsenite drama expresses well his conscientious concern with social and political problems. The Crucible (1953) dramatizes one incident from the Salem witch trials of 1692 so as to constitute a characteristic and topical, though oblique, comment on the integrity of the liberal in the modern world.

PLAYS: All My Sons (1947); Collected Plays (1957); Incident at Vichy (1964); The Price (1968).—FICTION: Focus (1945); I Don't Need You Any More (1967).

D. Welland, A. M. (1961); S. Huftel, A. M.: The Burning Glass (1961); L. Moss, A. M. (1967); B. Nelson, A. M.: Portrait of A Playwright (1970). D.S.R.W.

Miller, HENRY (*New York 26 XII 1891), American novelist. He led a vagabond youth. His first books, published in Paris, had a succès de scandale; deliberately disordered, autobiographical, they unite a savage energy with an hallucinatory evocation of metropolitan life. In The Air-Conditioned Nightmare (1945) and other works he vividly attacks the sterility of contemporary life and upholds instinctive natural life. He stresses the imagination; his works explore the world of fantasy and surrealist visions. The trilogy The Rosy Crucifixion (Sexus, 1949; Plexus, 1953; Nexus, 1960), though redeemed by occasional virtuoso passages, is too episodic and disorganized to dramatize effectively his 'death as an ordinary mortal and resurrection as a writer'.

Tropic of Cancer (1934); Max and the White Phagocytes (1936); Tropic of Capricorn (1938); The Cosmological Eye (1939); The Wisdom of the Heart (1941); The Colossus of Maroussi (1941); Remember to Remember (1947); Big Sur and the Oranges of Hieronymus Bosch (1957); Stand Still Like the Hummingbird (1962).

Annette K. Baxter, H. M., Expatriate (1961). H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

Miller, HUGH (*Cromarty 10 X 1802; ∞1837 Lydia Fraser; †Edinburgh 23 XII 1856), Scottish geologist and author. A stone-mason by trade, Miller became a fine prose writer and an important popular expositor of scientific knowledge. He was editor of the Free Church paper, The Witness, 1839–56. My Schools and Schoolmasters (1854) is one of the most notable autobiographies in English.

Poems written in the Leisure Hours of a Mason (1829); Scenes and Legends of the North of Scotland (1835); contrib. to J. M. Wilson's Tales of the Borders (1835); The Old Red Sandstone (1841); First Impressions of England (1847); Footprints of the Creator (1850); Testimony of the Rocks (1857); The Cruise of the Betsey (1858); Essays (1862); Tales and Sketches (1863); Edinburgh and its Neighbourhood (1863).

P. Bayne, H. M. (2 vols, 1871).

J.K.

Miller, JOAQUIN, pseud. of CINCINNATUS HINER MILLER (*Liberty, Ind. 10 III 1839; ∞1863 Minnie Dyer, ∞1883 Abbie Leland; †Oakland, Calif. 17 II 1913), American poet and playwright. His colourful early life on the Western prairies provided material for his rhetorical poetry dealing with the grandeur of the West. His Songs of the Sierras (1871) were briefly popular in England.

Pacific Poems (1870); Life Among the Madocs (1873); Memorie and Rime (1884); Overland in a Covered Wagon: An Autobiography (ed. S. G. Firman, 1930).—The Complete Poetical Works of J. M. (1897).

M. M. Marberry, Splendid Poseur: J. M. American Poet (1953); O. W. Frost, J. M. (1967). I.W.

Miller, JOHANN MARTIN (*Ulm 3 XII 1750; †ibid. 21 VI 1814), German poet and novelist. At Göttingen Miller was one of the original members of the HAINBUND. In 1775 he returned to Ulm, where he spent the remainder of his life as pastor and schoolmaster. His writings belong mainly to his student years. Siegwart (1776; repr. 1969) enjoyed as great a success as Goethe's* Werther. Proverbial for its sentimentality, it has nevertheless well-drawn characters and a basis of good sense and gives a valuable portrayal of contemporary manners.

Gedichte (1783).—Geschichte Karls von Burgheim und Emilie von Reichenau (1778–79); Geschichte Gottfried Walthers, eines Tischlers (1786).—Sel. ed. A. Sauer in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., L. (1893).

E. Schmidt, Charakteristiken, I (1886); H. Kraeger, M. M. (1893). H.B.G.

Miller, JOHN HENRY (*Rheden, Waldeck 12 III 1702; †Bethlehem, Pa. 31 III 1782), one of the first German-American journalists and publishers.

Ed., Der Neuste, Verbessert- und Zuverlässige Calender (1762 ff.); Der Wöchentliche Staatsbote (1762–79).

J. Jackson in Dictionary of American Biography, XII (1933). E.R.

Millin, SARAH GERTRUDE, née LIEBSON (*Barkly West District, Cape 1889; ∞Philip Millin; †6 VII 1968), South African novelist, biographer and diarist. Initially popular, her novels have an obvious racist bias which detracts from their accuracy and lasting interest.

NOVELS: The Dark River (1919); God's Stepchildren (1929); The Sons of Mrs Aab (1931).—General Smuts (biog.; 1936); The Measure of My Days (autobiog.; 1955). U.La.

Milman, HENRY HART (*London 10 II 1791; ∞1824 Mary A. Cockell; †nr Ascot 24 IX 1868), English historian and poet. First Professor of poetry at Oxford, then Dean of St Paul's, Milman wrote negligible verse and scholarly Biblical history.

The History of the Jews (3 vols, 1829); The Life of Edward Gibbon (1839).—Fazio (a play; 1815).—The Poetical Works of H. H. M. (3 vols, 1840). A. Milman, H. H. M. (1900). B.H. (K.W.)

Milne, ALAN ALEXANDER (*London 18 I 1882; ∞1913 Dorothy de Selincourt; †Hartfield, Sussex 31 I 1956), English playwright, essayist and author of children's books. The Fourth Wall (1928) was an early example of a 'thriller' play. His children's books, Winnie-the-Pooh (1926) and The House at Pooh Corner (1928)—immortalizing Christopher Robin and his disarming bear, Pooh—became best-sellers. Toad of Toad Hall (1929) is a dramatization of Kenneth Grahame's* The Wind in the Willows.

The Day's Play (1910); Not That it Matters (1919); It's Too Late Now (autobiog.; 1939); The Norman Church (1948).—PLAYS: Mr. Pim Passes By (1919); The Truth About Blayds (1921); The Dover Road (1922).—VERSE: When We Were Very Young (1924); Now We Are Six (1927).

F. C. Crews, The Pooh Perplex: a Student Case-book (1964). W.R.A.

Milne, EWART (*Dublin 1903), Irish poet; worked with Medical Aid during the Spanish Civil War; teacher, sailor, farmer; has published many volumes of poetry, the best of which is A Garland for the Green (1962). E.T.W.

Milnes, MONCKTON: see Houghton, RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, 1ST BARON.

Milosz, OF OSCAR WENCESLAS DE LUBICZ-MIŁOŚZ (*Czereša, Lithuania 28 V 1877; †Fontainebleau 2 III 1939), French poet. The last of an old and distinguished Lithuanian family, Milosz went to Paris in 1909 and from 1919 to 1926 was Lithuanian minister-resident in France. He then became naturalized and went to live at Fontainebleau in a house which he kept filled with birds. He had a profound knowledge of Eastern civilizations, and an intense feeling for metaphysics which he expressed in a series of strange, mystical, and tormented poems. His influence has, since 1940, been on the increase.

Le poème des décadences (1899); Les sept solitudes and Scènes de Don Juan (1906); L'amoureuse initiation (1910); Miguel Mañara (1912); La confession de Lemuel (1926); Poèmes (1938).—Œuvres complètes (10 vols, 1945).

Hommage à M. (Brussels, 1939); 'M.' in Poésie 42, special no. (1942); J. Rousselot, M. (1949); J. Buge, M. en quête du divin (1963).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Milosz, CZESŁAW (*Szczepanie 30 VI 1911), Polish poet. One of the leading exponents of the 'catastrophism' of the 1930s, he was engaged in clandestine literary activities in Warsaw during the war and published immediately afterwards a collection of poetry in which he tried to come to terms with the conflict between artistic aestheticism and war-time experiences. He settled in Paris in 1951. A leading Polish emigré intellectual, he has published both poetry and prose works analysing the political and cultural climate in Poland. He has since become Professor at Berkeley, U.S.A.

POETRY: Poemat o czasie zastęglym (1933); Trzy zimy (1936); Ocalenie (1945); Światło dzienne (Paris, 1953); Traktat poetycki (ibid., 1957); Miasto bez imienia (ibid., 1969).—Wiersze (London, 1967).—NOVELS: Dolina Issy (Paris, 1955); Sur les bords de l'Issa, tr. J. Hersch, ibid., 1956; Tal der Issa, tr. M. Reifenberg, Cologne, 1957; Zdobycie władzy (Paris, 1955; The Usurpers, tr. C. Wieniewska, London, 1955).—ESSAYS: Zniewolony umysł (Paris, 1953; The Captive Mind, tr. J. Zielonko, London, 1953); Rodzina Europa (Paris, 1956; Native Realm, tr. C. Leach, New York, 1968).—VARIOUS: The History of Polish Literature (Toronto, 1969). P.H.

Milton, JOHN (*London 9 XII 1608; ∞1642 Mary Powell, ∞ibid. 12 XI 1656 Katherine Woodcock, ∞ibid. 24 II 1662/63 Elizabeth Minshull; †ibid. 8 XI 1674), English poet, controversialist and scholar. From St Paul's School he went to Christ's College, Cambridge (1625–32) but instead of entering the Church, spent the next years mainly at his father's home at Hammersmith (1632–35) and Horton (1635–38) reading and preparing his art as poet. He wrote a masque (Comus) for performance at Ludlow Castle in 1634 (pub. 1637) and the elegy Lycidas on the death of his Cambridge contemporary Edward King* in 1637 (pub. 1638). Visiting Europe in 1638–39 Milton met men of letters in Italy and Switzerland, but returned to England on hearing of the Civil War, and settled in London as a private teacher. His plans for writing a major poem were interrupted by his next 20 years of involvement in the controversies of the war and interregnum. His first pamphlet Of Reformation (1641) advocating reform in the Church was followed by pamphlets advocating more liberal divorce, educational reforms, and the abolition of censorship (Areopagitica, 1644). His minor poems were published in 1645 but though during the next 15 years he wrote most of his sonnets, the majority of his time was taken up by his work as Secretary in Foreign Tongues to the Council of State, to which he was appointed after his defence of the regicides in The Tenure of Kings and Magistrates (1649). Thereafter he was involved in writing his official propagandist Defences of the English People (1651, 1654). His last controversial pamphlet, The Readie and Easie Way to Establish a Free Commonwealth (1660), was published when the Restoration was already imminent. Though under arrest briefly in 1660, and though some of his writings were burnt publicly, Milton was not excluded from the Act of Indemnity. His eyesight, impaired from 1644, failed in 1652 and from thenceforth he had to dictate. In this way he wrote Paradise Lost (1667) and Paradise Regained (1671). His early verse is often rich and ornate, but his concern with the struggles and testing of the moral life is evident from the earliest and gives the masque form of Comus a new seriousness. His original plans to write a patriotic epic were abandoned with the failure of the Commonwealth and he turned instead to his great examination of the origin and course of evil in the world in the supra-national epic Paradise Lost. Offering a Christian version of a pagan form, he presented the Christian ethic of 'patience and heroic martyrdom' to supersede the old pagan military heroism, which he identifies with Satan, though many critics have preferred Milton's Satan to his God, finding Satan's heroic defiance more appealing than the austere argumentativeness of the heavenly scenes; with Adam and Eve, Milton established the archetypal literary account of the Garden, capturing its innocence and peace, and poignantly evoking the sense of its loss; Paradise Regained is a bare, severe poem in comparison, a brief epic that relates Christ's withstanding of Satan's temptations. A work perhaps earlier (c. 1650), Samson Agonistes, loosely modelled on Greek tragedy and perhaps influenced by the Italian melodrama, deals with the climactic episode of Samson's career. Once condemned for its Latinity, Milton's style is now appreciated for its richness and complexity. Critical emphasis rests not upon the 19th century's 'organ voice' of the verse, but on its variety and flexibility, on its range from the heroics of Satan to the domestic simplicities of Adam and Eve, from the austere, unadorned manner of Paradise Regained to the melodious patterning of Lycidas; while the rationality and argumentativeness of Milton's manner are no longer thought of as alien to poetry, but as bringing to art a necessary logical rigour and seriousness.

VERSE: Poems (1645; expanded, 1673); Paradise Lost (1671; 2nd ed. 1674); Paradise Regain'd . . . Samson Agonistes (1671); Poetical Works (eds:

M. Y. Hughes, 1935-37; J. Carey and A. Fowler, 1968).—PROSE: Of Reformation Touching Church-Discipline in England (1641); The Reason of Church-Government (1642); An Apology for Smectymnuus (1642); The Doctrine and Discipline of Divorce (1643; rev. 1644); Of Education (1644); Areopagitica (1644); The Tenure of Kings and Magistrates (1649); Eikonoklastes (1649); A Treatise of Civil Power (1659); The Readie and Easie Way to Establish a Free Commonwealth (1660); The Historie of Britain (1670).—Epitaphium Damonis (Latin verse; 1640).—LATIN PROSE: Joannis Miltoni Angli Pro Populo Anglicano Defensio (1651); Defensio Secunda (1654); Epistolae Familiarum Liber Unus (1674); De Doctrina Christiana (ed. C. R. Sumner, 1825).—Complete Works of J. M. (general ed. F. A. Pattison, 18 vols, 1931-38, index 2 vols, 1940; Columbia ed.).—Complete Prose Works (ed. D. M. Wolfe et al., 8 vols, 1953- ; Yale ed.).

J. Addison, Notes upon Paradise Lost from The Spectator (1719); S. Johnson, Lives of the Poets (1779); D. Masson, Life of M. (1859-80); M. Pattison, M. (1879); W. Raleigh, M. (1900); D. Saurat, M.: Man and Thinker (1925; rev. 1944); E. M. W. Tillyard, M. (1930), The Miltonic Setting (1938) and Studies in M. (1951); D. H. Stevens, Reference Guide to M. (1930, 1960); A. Oras, M.'s Editors and Commentators 1695-1801 (1931); H. Darbishire, Early Lives of M. (1932); F. R. Leavis, Revaluation (1936) and The Common Pursuit (1952); H. J. C. Grierson, M. and Wordsworth (1937); J. M. French, M. in Chancery (1939); A. Sewall, A Study of M.'s Christian Doctrine (1939); M. Kelley, This Great Argument (1941); A. Barker, M. and the Puritan Dilemma (1942); C. S. Lewis, A Preface to Paradise Lost (1942); D. Bush, Paradise Lost in Our Time (1945); J. H. Hanford, A M. Handbook (1920, 4th ed. 1946); B. Rajan, Paradise Lost and the 17th Century Reader (1947) and The Lofty Rhyme (1970); A. J. A. Waldock, Paradise Lost and Its Critics (1947); J. M. French, Life Records of M. (1949- ); C. Brooks and J. E. Hardy, Poems of Mr. J. M. (1951); A. Stein, Answerable Style (1953) and Heroic Knowledge (1957); R. M. Adams, Icon: J. M. and the Modern Critics (1955); D. P. Harding, The Club of Hercules; Studies in the Classical Background of Paradise Lost (1957); R. Tuve, Images and Themes in 5 Poems by M. (1957); T. S. Eliot, On Poetry and Poets (1957); I. G. MacCaffrey, Paradise Lost as 'Myth' (1959); The Living M. (ed. F. Kermode, 1960); J. B. Broadbent, Some Graver Subject (1960); W. Empson, M.'s God (1961, 1965); G. A. Wilkes, The Thesis of Paradise Lost (1961); J. I. Cope, The Metaphoric Structure of Paradise Lost (1962); C. Ricks, M.'s Grand Style (1963); R. Daniells, M., Mannerism and Baroque (1963); M. Fixler, M. and the Kingdoms of God (1964); L. L. Martz, The Paradise Within (1964); H. Gardner, A Reading of Paradise Lost (1965); B. Lewalski, M.'s Brief Epic (1966); S. E. Fish,

Surprised by Sin (1967); J. M. Steadman, M. and the Renaissance Hero (1967); D. H. Burden, The Logical Epic (1967); W. R. Parker, M. (2 vols, 1968); M. Wilding, M.'s Paradise Lost (1969); C. Huckaby, J. M.: An Annotated Bibliography 1929-1968 (1969); M., The Critical Heritage (ed. J. Shawcross, 2 vols, 1970-72). R.M.W.

Milutinović, SIMA (*Sarajevo 3 X 1791; †Belgrade 30 XII 1847), Serbian poet, whose varied, adventurous life was matched by the confusion and incongruities of his Romantic verse. His long and detailed epic Serbijanka (1826), dealing principally with the risings against the Turks, in which he took part, has more documentary than poetic value. Other epics, and two historical works in prose, are similarly inspired by his intense patriotism. His influence as tutor to Petar Petrović* Njegoš was significant.

Pjevanija cernogorska i hercegovačka (1835); Istorija Crne Gore (1835); Istorija Srbije (1837); Lirske pesme (1899).—DRAMA: Dika crnogorska (1835); Tragedija Obilic (1837).

S. M. Sarajlija (ed. V. Nedic, 1959). V.J.

Milyukov, PAVEL NIKOLAYEVICH (*15 I 1859; †1942), leader of the Constitutional Democratic (KD) party in the Russian Duma, author of a standard work on the history of Russian culture, of war reminiscences and even of a book on Pushkin*—Zhivoy Pushkin (1937)—which he wrote as a refugee in Paris.

Ocherki po istorii russkoy kul'tury (1898-1903; Outlines of Russian Culture, tr. V. Ughet and E. Davies, 1942).—Other Eng. trs: Russia and Its Crisis (1905); Russia To-Day and To-Morrow (1922).—Vospominaniya, 1859-1917 (2 vols, 1955). J.L.

Mimnermus, Greek elegiac poet (7th century B.C.), wrote in the Ionic dialect. The principal themes of the surviving fragments are the preciousness of life, the joys of sexual love, and the horror of old age.

J. M. Edmonds, Elegy and Iambus, I (1931; with tr.); T. Hudson-Williams, Early Greek Elegy (1926; with comm.).—C. M. Bowra, Early Greek Elegists (1938). J.T.H.

Mináč, VLADIMÍR (*Klenovec 10 VIII 1922), Slovak novelist. His best work is inspired by the Slovak national rising of 1944, in which he took part. His trilogy Generácia is a realistic and sympathetic portrayal of Slovak society in the war and post-war period (Dlhý čas čakania, 1958; Živí a mŕtvi, 1959; Zvony zvonila na deň, 1961). The central volume, dealing with the rising, shows the author at his best.

Smrt' chodí po horách (1948). R.A.

Minamoto NO SANETOMO (*17 IX 1192; †Kama-kura 13 II 1219), Japanese author. In addition to being the third Shōgun, he was an excellent poet, returning to the style of the Manyōshū*.

E.B.C.

Kinkaishū (1213; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Classic Japanese Literature, 1948); sel. poems tr. in: A. Miyamori, Masterpieces of Japanese Poetry (1936); R. H. Brower and E. R. Miner, Japanese Court Poetry (1961); G. Bownas and A. Thwaite, Penguin Book of Japanese Verse (1964).

O. Benl, 'M. S., Shōgun und Dichter' in Oriens Extremus, I (1954). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Minamoto NO TOSHIYORI (*c. 1057; †c. 1129), Japanese tanka poet, very prominent in his time as a representative of the less conservative trend in poetry.

Compiled Kin'yōshū (1124-27); sel. poems of his tr. in A. Miyamori, Masterpieces of Japanese Poetry, I (1936).—O. Benl, Entwicklung der japanischen Poetik bis zum 16. Jahrhundert (1951); R. H. Brower and E. R. Miner, Japanese Court Poetry (1961). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Mingo Revulgo, COPLAS DE: see Coplas de ¡Ay Panadera!

Min ha-Adumin: see De' Rossi, AZARIAH.

Minkov, SVETOSLAV (*Radomir 14 II 1902; †Sofia 22 XI 1966), Bulgarian story-writer and satirist. An original and ingenious humorist, he created in his stories a curious variety of comic, macabre and even surrealist situations. These range from satire of the American modern world to the devastating send-up of the comrade dictator and his acolytes in 'Man With a Tail' and of Party bureaucracy in 'A Really Queer Tale'. Underlying all is his strong vein of human sympathy, evident also in his entertaining travelogues.

Sinyata hrizantema (1922); Ognenata ptitsa (1927); Avtomati (1932); Damata s rentgenovite ochi (1934); Razkazi v taralejova koja (1936); Madrid gori (1936); Drugata Amerika (1938); Lunatin (1945); Kolet ot Amerika (1950); Brakorazvodno srajenie (1960).—Sel. works (ed. E. Petrov, 1955-58). V.P.

Minne, RICHARD (*Ghent 30 XI 1891; †St Martens Latem 1 VII 1965), Flemish poet and prose writer. One of the salient personalities of his generation, he expresses his love of life in a playful and ironic, but more often in a harsh and wanton, manner in natural and direct verse, brimming with discords.

In den zoeten inval (1927; 3rd enlarged ed. 1955); Heineke Vos en zijn biograaf (1933); Wolffijzers en schietgeweren (ed. R. Herreman and M. Roelants, 1942).

A. Demedts, R. M. (1946); Fr. Closset, Die van

't Fonteintje (1949); J. de Haes, R. M. (1958); H. Bossaert, R. M. (1968). R.F.L.

Minot, LAURENCE (*?1300; †?1352), English poet, author of several patriotic and triumphant battle poems written in a northern dialect, celebrating the battles Edward III fought against the Scots at Halidon Hill (1333) etc.

The Poems of L. M. (ed. J. Hall, 3rd ed. 1914). R.W.B.

Minsheu, JOHN (fl. 1617), English lexicographer whose Guide to Tongues contains vocabularies in eleven languages. A friend of Sir Henry Spelman*, Minsheu was probably the first person in England to publish by subscription. B.L.J.

The Guide to Tongues (1617; 1626), The Guide Into The Tongues . . . with etymologies etc. (1627). F. B. Williams in Joseph Quincy Adams: Memorial Studies (1948); J. L. Rosier in Philol. Quart., XI (1961). B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Minsky, N., pseud. of NIKOLAY MAXIMOVICH VILENKIN (*Vilna prov. 1855; †1937), Russian poet who in the 1890s helped to promote, with A. Volynsky* and D. Merezhkovsky*, the modernist trend in Russian literature. His essay to this effect, Pri svete sovesti (1897), bears a strong imprint of Nietzsche*. He himself failed to make a truly creative contribution to Russian modernism.

Polnoye sobranie stikhotvoreny (1907). J.L.

Minucius Felix (fl. c. 200), wrote an able defence of Christianity (Octavius) in dialogue form. The style is far better than that of Arnobius*, to whom it is often ascribed in manuscripts.

Eds: C. Halm in Corpus scriptorum ecclesiastic. Latin., II (1867); Migne, Patrologia Latina, III (1886); J. P. Waltzing (1912); eds with comm.: H. A. Holden (1853); H. von Geisau (2 vols; latest eds 1955–56); tr. G. H. Rendell (1931).

H. J. Bayliss, M. F. and His Place Among the Early Fathers of the Latin Church (1928). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Minulescu, ION (*Bucharest 1881; †ibid. 1944), Rumanian Symbolist poet. Influenced by Macedonski* and the French Symbolists, he first published verse in 1897. His early poetry (Romanțe pentru mai tîrziu, 1908; De vorbă cu mine însumi, 1913) contain the typical motifs of the Symbolist poet—the allure of exotic lands and the sea, bouts of melancholy and eroticism. Later volumes (Strofe pentru toată lumea, 1930; Nu sînt ce par a fi, 1936) show him as a clown, incapable of taking anything seriously. The striking musicality of his verse coupled with his use of neologisms and the language of the bistro make him the most colourful of the Rumanian Symbolists.

Scrieri, I (ed. M. Călinescu, 1966); Romanțe pentru mai tîrziu (ed. idem, 1967); Versuri (1969). C. Millian, Despre I. M. (1968). D.J.D.

Mir (*1722/23; †1810), perhaps the greatest poet of the Urdu ghazal. Urdu took the form from Persian where it already had a tradition going back five centuries before Mir's time. It is a short lyric in which themes of love predominate. The lover's complete dedication to his human beloved, to his God, and to his high ideals in life is expressed in verses which can generally be interpreted simultaneously in all these ways.

R. Russell and K. Islam, Three Mughal Poets (1969). R.R.

Mira Bāi (*1498; †1546), poetess and mystic famed throughout India. She was a Rajput princess and composed her devotional songs to Krishna in a mixture of Rajasthani and Braj Bhāṣā. There is no established text of her poetry and a vast corpus of oral material is still current in her name. S.C.R.W.

Miracles de Notre Dame, the chief surviving cycle of French Miracle plays. The 40 plays in the cycle formed the repertory of a single pu, or literary and dramatic association, which was probably located in Paris. They appear to belong to the second half of the 14th century and are the work of various authors. Their unity is in their theme—the glorification of the Virgin Mary—and in their versification: octosyllabic couplets, with interpolated rondeaux. Each play presents a story of human activity drawn from such varied sources as the chansons de geste, the lives of the saints, the courtly romances, the prose chronicles, the fabliaux and from Gautier* de Coinci's Miracles de la Sainte Vierge (c. 1220) which were rhymed stories, not plays. Each ends with the miraculous intervention of the Virgin.

Les Miracles de Notre Dame (ed. G. Paris and U. Robert, 8 vols, 1876–93).

E. Roi, La comédie sans titre (1902; crit. interpretation); D. Penn, Staging of the 'Miracles de Notre Dame' (New York, 1933); G. Frank, The Medieval French Drama (1954). G.B.

Mira de Amescua, ANTONIO (*Guadix ?1574; †ibid. 1644), Spanish dramatist. He was a priest who, after accompanying the Count of Lemos to Naples, lived in Madrid and became Archdeacon of Guadix. His masterpiece El esclavo del demonio is about a diabolic compact and the conversion of the sinner who made it. Other plays and autos are also excellent.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XIV, XX, XLV; El esclavo del demonio (ed. M. A. Buchanan, Baltimore, 1905).—Teatro (ed. A. Valbuena Prat, 2 vols, 1926–28); El arpa de David (ed. C. E. Anibal, Columbus, Ohio, 1925); Adversa fortuna de Don Álvaro de Luna (ed. L. de Filippo, Florence, 1960; ed. N. E. Sánchez-Arce, Mexico, 1960).

F. Sanz, 'El doctor don A. M. de A.' in Boletín de la Real Acad. Esp., I (1914); E. Cotarelo y Mori, 'M. de A. y su teatro. Estudio biográfico y crítico' in Boletín de la Real Acad. Esp., XVII, XVIII (1930-31).
E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Miranda, FRANCISCO DE SÁ DE (*Coimbra 28 VIII 1481; †Tapada 1558), Portuguese poet. He studied law at Lisbon, later lecturing there and frequenting the court of King Manuel. Some of his verses of this period were included in Garcia de Resende's **Cancioneiro Geral* (1516). Staying in Italy from 1521 to c. 1526, he became imbued with the literary and humanistic ideas of the Renaissance and introduced the Italian style of poetry into Portugal where he played a role similar to that of Boscán* and Garcilaso* de la Vega in Spain. He also introduced the classical comedy with his plays Os Vilhalpandos and Os Estrangeiros, both written in prose.

A noble character of stoical rectitude, Miranda was a stern critic of contemporary life and it is in his moralizing verse epistles that his best work is to be found. Despite his role as innovator he never fully mastered the Italian metres and some of his finest poems—the eclogue Basto, the epistle to John III, etc.—are in the short traditional metres common to Spain and Portugal.

Retiring to his country estate in 1530, Miranda maintained contact with the leading intellectual figures of the day; his influence largely established the new school of poetry that was to culminate in the work of Camões*.

Comédia dos Estrangeiros (1559); Comédia dos Vilhalpandos (1560); As obras do celebrado lusitano, o doutor Francisco de Sá de Miranda (ed. Manuel de Lira, 1595); Poesias (ed. C. Michaëlis de Vasconcelos, with Life; Halle, 1885); Obras completas (ed. M. Rodrigues Lapa; 2nd ed., 2 vols with Life repro. from 1614 ed., 1942-43).—Of doubtful authorship: A vida da egíptaca Santa Maria (ed. T. Braga, 1913).

T. Braga, S. de M. e a escola italiana (1896); C. Michaëlis de Vasconcelos, 'Novos estudos sobre S. de M.' in Boletim da segunda classe, V (1912); A. J. Saraiva, Historia da cultura em Portugal, II (1955).
T.P.W.

Mirandola, PICO DELLA: see Pico, GIOVANNI, COUNT OF MIRANDOLA.

Mirbeau, OCTAVE (*Travières, Calvados 16 II 1850; †Paris 16 II 1917), French author. A journalist, Mirbeau attracted general attention by the violence of his political writings. As a novelist, he pushed naturalism to excess and won a name for himself by the crudity and raw vitality of his work (Le jardin des supplices, 1898). His plays deal for the most part with the struggle between money and the moral sense. Probably his best creation is Isidore Lechat in his play, Les affaires sont les affaires (1903; Eng. tr. S. Grundy, 1905).

NOVELS: Sébastien Roch (1890); Le journal d'une femme de chambre (1900); La 628 E. 8 (1907); Dingo (1913).—Les mauvais bergers (play; 1897).—Œuvres complètes (9 vols, 1934-36).

M. Revon, O. M. (1924). M.G.; J.P.R.

Miriam: see Przesmycki, ZENON.

Mirk, or Myrk, JOHN (fl. ?1403), Prior of Lilleshall, Salop, author of several books of homilies, elaborated by colourful exempla, especially the Festial and Instructions for Parish Priests.

Festial (ed. T. Erbe, Part I only, 1905; text and glossary); Instructions for Parish Priests (ed. E. Peacock, rev. F. J. Furnivall, 1902).

G. R. Owst, Preaching in Medieval England (1926) and Literature and Pulpit in Medieval England (1933).
R.W.B.

Mir Khwānd, MUHAMMAD IBN KHAVAND SHĀH (*1432; †Herat 1498), Persian historian, author of the Rauzat al-Safā, a universal history from the Creation to the year 1505 (the seventh part by the author's grandson Khwānd* Mir). It is written in a florid style and, although a great compilation, is uncritical and often inaccurate.

Rauzat al-Safā (Bombay, 1848; Tehran, 1852; Rauzat us-Safa or Garden of Purity, partial tr. E. Rehatsek, 5 vols, 1891-94).

C. Rieu, Catalogue of the Persian MSS in the British Museum, I (1879).
E.Y.

Miró, GABRIEL (*Alicante 27 V 1879; ∞Clemencia Maignon; †Madrid 28 VII 1930), Spanish novelist. Educated at a Jesuit school, he later studied law, held minor bureaucratic posts, edited a sacred encyclopaedia and lived a humble but happy family life. The dominant feature of this formidable stylist is a Mediterranean sensuality combined with an almost pantheistic love. Cassou* called him 'a hermit drunk with sensuality'. The brilliance of his style and richness of his imagery have blinded many critics to the tightness of his construction, the psychological depth of many of his characters, and his ironic humour. His early works are firmly based on the landscape and towns of his native Levant: Hilván de escenas (1903); Del vivir (1904), in which he first used the pseudonym SIGÜENZA; Las cerezas del cementerio (1910), his first great novel. El abuelo del rey (1912), El libro de Sigüenza (1917) and the important Figuras de la Pasión del Señor (1916), where the drama is portrayed through the eyes and minds of Christ's contemporaries, gave him a national reputation. There is an antithesis in his work between the febrile, anxious existence of modern times and the peace and serenity of a fulfilled life lived out in the context of Nature, a contrast which lies at the back of his most successful works: Nuestro Padre San Daniel (1921) and its continuation El obispo leproso (1926).

Obras completas (ed. conmemorativa, 12 vols, 1932-49).—Eng. trs: C. J. Hogarth, Figures of the Passion of Our Lord (1925); C. Remfry-Kidd, Our Father, St Daniel, Scenes of Clerical Life (1930-32); 'The Man in Mourning and the Sprig of Parsley' in S. Putnam, The European Caravan (1931); 'The Schoolmaster' in W. B. Wells, Great Spanish Short Stories (1932).

L. J. Woodward, 'Les images et leur fonction dans Nuestro Padre San Daniel' in Bull. Hispanique, LVI (1954); C. Sánchez Gimeno, G. M. y su obra (1960); R. Vidal, G. M. Le style. Les moyens d'expression (1964); V. Ramos, El mundo de G. M. (1964). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Miron, GASTON (*Sainte-Agathe-des-Monts, Quebec 1928), Canadian poet; highly esteemed for the artistry and emotional intensity of his work, he has had a great influence on Quebec poetry. His poems have appeared in a number of papers and journals and he has collaborated in the publication of some 70 volumes of poetry by the small press Éditions de l'Hexagone.

Deux sangs (with O. Marchand; 1953).

J. Brault, 'M. le magnifique' in Culture Vivante, II (1966). R.Su.

Mishima YUKIO, pseud. of HIRAOKA KIMITAKE (*Tokyo 14 I 1925; †ibid. 25 XI 1970), Japanese novelist and dramatist. A brilliant student at the Peers' School (Gakushūin) and Tokyo Imperial University, where he studied law, he gave up a career in the Finance Ministry to write, and rapidly achieved fame with his first major work Kamen no kokuhaku (1949), which explores the problem of homosexuality. An abnormal psychological state is also depicted in Kinkakuji (1956), which is based on an actual event but which Mishima develops into a study of obsession: the story concerns a young priest who burns down his temple in order to break the hold which its beauty has upon him. Among Mishima's most interesting works are his modern treatments of themes from Nō plays (Ze'ami* Motokiyo). The range of his writing is very wide, including even an idyllic love-story, but one must admit that the abnormal element predominates; the world of his stories is that of the post-war generation in Japan, who have grown up, if not exactly in a moral vacuum, at least amid spiritual chaos. (In his last years, Mishima was obsessed with a wish to reverse some post-war trends and foster a revival of traditional Japanese values; he formed a kind of small private army, and it was in the course of a demonstration by this group that he committed ceremonial suicide by disembowelment, a form of death which he had described in detail in one of his stories, Yūkoku, 'Patriotism' [see biblio.]. An hour or two before his suicide he had delivered to his publisher the last chapters of a four-volume novel, Hōjō no umi, which he considered the culmination of all his literary work.) He was so prolific a writer that he was accused of being facile—but he was also spoken of as a possible eventual candidate for a Nobel prize. By any standards, he is a major figure in modern Japanese literature.

PROSE: Kamen no kokuhaku (1949; Confessions of a Mask, tr. M. Weatherby, 1956; Geständnisse einer Maske, tr. H. Hiltzheimer, 1964); Ai no kawaki (1950; Thirst for Love, tr. A. H. Marks, 1969); Kinjiki (1951-53; Forbidden Colours, tr. idem, 1968); Manatsu no shi (1952; 'Death in Midsummer', tr. E. G. Seidensticker in Japan Quart., III.3, 1956, repr. with foll. and 7 other stories [incl. Yūkoku] in Death in Midsummer and Other Stories, 1966); Shigadera shōnin no koi (1954; 'The Priest of Shiga Temple and His Love', tr. I. I. Morris in Modern Japanese Stories, 1961); Shiosai (1954; The Sound of Waves, tr. M. Weatherby, 1956; Die Brandung, tr. G. von Uslar and O. Benl, 1959); Kinkakuji (1956; The Temple of the Golden Pavilion, tr. I. I. Morris, 1959; Le pavillon d'or, tr. M. Mécréant, 1961; Der Tempelbrand, tr. W. Donat, 1961); Utage no ato (1960; After the Banquet, tr. D. L. Keene, 1963; Après le banquet, tr. G. Renondeau, 1965); Gogo no eikō (1963; The Sailor Who Fell From Grace With the Sea, tr. J. Nathan, 1965); 1 other story tr. G. Suzuki in Ukiyo: Eleven Short Stories of Post-War Japan (1954); Hōjō no umi (4 vols, 1965-70; The Sea of Fertility, tr. in prep.); Taiyō to tetsu (non-fiction; 1968; Sun and Steel, tr. J. Bester, 1970).—PLAYS: Kindai nōgakushū (1950-55; Five Modern Nō Plays, tr. D. L. Keene, 1958); Dōjōji (1957; one of 3 modern Nō plays additional to prec.; tr. idem in Death in Midsummer and Other Stories, 1966); Yoru no Hyōga aoi (1957; Twilight Sunflower, tr. S. Shinozaki and V. A. Warren, 1958); Nettaiju (1960; 'Tropical Tree', tr. K. Strong in Japan Quart., XI.2, 1964); Sado kōshaku fūjin (1965; Madame de Sade, tr. D. L. Keene, 1968).

D.E.M.

Mistral, FRÉDÉRIC (*Maillane 8 IX 1830; †ibid. 25 III 1914), Provençal writer and poet. After a boyhood spent in the country, Mistral was sent to Avignon, where he became a pupil of Roumanille* and through him made the acquaintance of Provençal poetry. After studying law at Aix-en-Provence, he threw himself into the Provençal renaissance movement which, in 1854, culminated in the founding of the félibrige school. After the publication of Mireille (1859), he became the leading figure in the movement which he expanded into an organization seeking for the whole of southern France some degree of cultural and spiritual independence. He was first recognized as a writer, outside his native province, by Lamartine*, and soon his achievement was applauded throughout France. He was awarded the Nobel prize in 1905. Writing entirely in Provençal, he composed rustic poems of epic character (Mirèio; Calendau, 1867) and lyrics which, employing a structure of simple myths, express their author's profound sense of the grandeur of nature, and his faith in the destiny of man. He published a number of ethnographical studies and a Provençal dictionary.

Lis Isclos d'or (1875); La Raço Latino (1879); Nerto (1884); La Rèino Jano (1890); Tresor dou Félibrige (1878; 1885); Lou pouèmo dou Rose (1897; Eng. tr. The Song of the Rhone, 1937); Museon Arlaten (1899); Memòri e raconte (1906); Memoirs of M., tr. C. E. Maud and A. Strettell, 1907); Lis Oulivado (1912).

P. Lasserre, F. M. (1918); E. Ripert, Le Félibrige (1924) and Notes et commentaires pour le poème de Mirèio, Chant 1 (1933); M. Coulon, Dans l'univers de M. (1930); A. Thibaudet, M. ou la République du Soleil (1930); Léo Languier, M. (1930); M. Girdlestone, The Poetry of F. M. (1937); P. Devoluy, M. et la rédemption d'une langue (1943); R. Aldington, Introduction to M. (1956); various authors, Mélanges pour le centenaire de Mirèille (1961). M.G.; J.P.R.

Mistral, GABRIELA, pseud. of LUCILA GODOY ALCAYAGA (*Vicuña 7 V 1889; †1957), Chilean poet, who won the Nobel prize in 1945. The daughter of a schoolmaster, she taught for many years and became headmistress of a major Santiago school. The suicide of the man she loved left a deep impression. She never married and much of her poetry expresses frustrated motherhood. The later poems of Tala (1938) and Lager (1954) have religious overtones. She stood apart from the experimentalism of the period but attains a freshness and spontaneity through her perception of nature and her intuitive understanding of children. Much of her prose writing remains unpublished.

J.F.

Desolación (1922); Ternura (1925).—Poesías completas (Madrid, 1958).

G. M., Vida y obra, Bibliografía, Antología (New York, 1936); Margot Arce de Vázquez, G. M.: The Poet and Her Work (New York, 1964); F. Alegria, Genio y figura de G. M. (Buenos Aires, 1966).

E.Sa. (J.F.)

Mitchel, JOHN (*Dungiven, Co. Derry 3 XI 1815; †1835 Jane Verner; †Newry 20 III 1875), Irish writer. Under the influence of Thomas Davis* he gave up his solicitor's practice and worked on The Nation newspaper; later founded The United Irishman in support of an extreme nationalist policy; was transported to Tasmania 1848; escaped to the U.S.A. 1853. An able and trenchant political journalist, strongly influenced by his friend Carlyle*. His Jail Journal (1854) is an excellent autobiographical record of his captivity.

R.McH.

Life of Aodh O'Neill (1846); The Last Conquest of Ireland (?1860); History of Ireland (1868).

P. S. O'Hegarty, J. M. (1917). E.T.W.

Mitchell, JAMES LESLIE; see Gibbon, LEWIS GRASSIC.

Mitchell, MARGARET (*Atlanta, Georgia 1900; †1925 J. R. Marsh; †ibid. 16 VIII 1949), American novelist. She spent ten years on the long romantic novel of the Civil War and Reconstruction period, Gone With the Wind (1936; Pulitzer prize, 1937), which became one of the best sellers in the history of American publishing.

H.L.C.

Mitchell, WILLIAM ORMOND (*Weyburn, Saskatchewan 13 III 1914; †1942 Merna Hirtle), Canadian writer, whose story collection Jake and the Kid won the Leacock Medal for humour (1962). He is best known for his highly sensitive and penetrating novel of a child's development in a small prairie town, Who Has Seen the Wind? (1947).

The Kite (1962.—W. H. New, 'A feeling of completion: aspects of W. O. M.' in Canad. Lit., XVII (1963). R.Su.

Mitchison, NAOMI (*Edinburgh 1 XI 1897; †1916 G. R. Mitchison), Scottish novelist, classical scholar and political and educational reformer, made her reputation with her moving and compassionate tales of ancient Greece and Rome, such as The Corn King and the Spring Queen (1931), but her most important novel is probably The Bull Calves (1947), a story of 18th-century Scotland. She has also written skilfully for young people.

The Conquered (1923); Cloud Cuckoo Land (1925); Black Sparta (1928); The Blood of the Martyrs (1939); The Land the Ravens Found (1955). W.R.A.

Mitford, BERTRAM (*Mitford Castle, Northumberland; †4 X 1914), South African novelist, who went to South Africa in 1874 as a stock-farmer, served in the Cape civil service (1878–80) and owned the East London Advertiser (1886–88). His adventure stories, most of which have an African setting, achieved great popularity.

Our Arms in Zululand (verse; 1881).—NOVELS: The Gun Runner (1882); The Weird of Deadly Hollow (1891); Tween Snow and Fire (1892); The Luck of Gerard Ridgeley (1893); The King's Assegai (1894); The Curse of Clement Waynflete (1894); The White Shield (1895); A Veldt Official (1895); The Sign of the Spider (1896); Fordham's Feud (1897); The Induna's Wife (1898); The Ruby Sword (1898); John Ames, Native Commissioner (1899); War and Arcadia (1900); Aletta (1900); The Triumph of Hilary Blachland (1901); The Word of the Sorceress (1902); A Veldt Vendetta (1903); In the Whirl of the Rising (1904); A Secret of the Lebombo (1905); A Frontier Mystery (1905); The White Hand and the Black (1907); A Legacy of the Granite Hills (1909).—Through the Zulu Country (travel; 1883). E.R.S.

Mitford, MARY RUSSELL (*Arlesford 16 XII 1787; †Swallowfield 10 I 1855), English novelist and dramatist. Her life shaped by the necessity of supporting an irresponsible, extravagant and beloved father, she lived in a remote country cottage, working beneath constant threat of poverty. Turning from verse-tragedy, in which she achieved some success, to more lucrative writing, she produced Our Village (5 vols, 1824–32) and those other works evoking her own countryside and its quiet charms which show her power of miniature painting and won her friendships and fame.

PLAYS: Julian (1823); Rienzi (1828); Charles I (1834).—Belford Regis (3 vols, 1835); Atherton and other Tales (3 vols, 1854); Recollections of a Literary Life (3 vols, 1852).

A. G. L'Estrange, Life, told in her Letters (1870) and Friendships of M. R. M. (1882); H. Chorley, Letters, Second Series (1872); Correspondence With Charles Boner and John Ruskin (ed. E. Lee, 1914); V. G. Watson, M. R. M. (1949). R.M.H.

Mitre, BARTOLOMÉ (*Buenos Aires 26 VI 1821; †ibid. 18 I 1906), Argentinian statesman and writer, founder of La Nación (1869). Mitre wrote some important historical works, and his collection of sources now constitutes the Museo Mitre in Buenos Aires. His intellectual influence on his country has been immense. He believed that the historical novel could be used to help form a national consciousness, and set out his ideas in the preface to his own historical novel Soledad (1847).

Rimas (1854; enlarged, 1891). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Mittelholzer, EDGAR (AUSTIN) (*New Amsterdam, British Guiana 16 XII 1909; ∞1942 Roma Halfhide [o/o1958], ∞1960 Jacqueline Pointer; †Farnham, Surrey, England 6 V 1965), West Indian novelist. After a strict colonial Victorian upbringing in Guyana, Mittelholzer, of mixed European origins with a 'ripple of black blood', lived both in the West Indian islands and in England. Guyana, the islands and England provide the setting for his novels. Breaking through with Corentyne Thunder (1941), he became the most prolific West Indian novelist. His popularity was won mainly with his Kaywana trilogy, his talent for story-telling and his use of the macabre, the erotic and violence. But in intention he was a moralist; his early life helps to explain his basic anti-prudery and anti-sentimentality and his theoretic search for a system where individual liberty would co-exist with social order, spiritual stability with sexual candour. However, he lacked the imaginative control and philosophical depth to explore his theories satisfactorily and at his worst ideas and art collapse into sensationalism and banality.

NOVELS: A Morning at the Office (1950); Shadows Move Among Them (1951; produced Broadway as Climate of Eden, 1953); Children of Kaywana (1952); The Harrowing of Hubertus (Kaywana Stock) (1954); Kaywana Blood (1958); Thunder Returning (1961); The Jilkington Drama (1965).—With a Carib Eye (travel book; 1958); A Swarthy Boy (autobiog.; 1963).

Ivan Van Sertima, Caribbean Writers: Critical Essays (1968); F. M. Birbalsingh, 'E. M.: moralist or pornographer?' in Jour. Commonwealth Lit., VII (July 1969). A.D.Dr.

Mňačko, LADISLAV (*Valašské Klobouky 29 I 1919), Slovak journalist and novelist. His best achievement is the novel Smrt' sa volá Engelchen (1959; Death Is Called Engelchen, tr. G. Theiner, 1961) which describes with uncompromising realism the war between Partisans and SS units in eastern Moravia. His book of sketches Oneskorené reportáže (1963) gives a damning picture of the excesses of the Communist régime in the 1950s and is at the same time an attempt at personal atonement. Mňačko emigrated to Israel in 1967, but returned to Czechoslovakia in 1968 when he published another novel Ako chutí moc which had originally appeared abroad (The Taste of Power, tr. P. Stevenson, 1967). Its interest is more political than literary. After the Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia Mňačko again went abroad. R.A.

Mnyampala, MATHIAS (*Dodoma, Tanganyika Territory 1917; †Dar-es-Salaam 1969), Swahili poet and magistrate. His most important work is his Diwani ya Mnyampala (Dar-es-Salaam, 1963); his last work (Waadhi wa Ushairi, 1965) also deserves mention. His finest work is no doubt Utenzi wa Enjili ('The Epic of the Gospel'), a versified life of Jesus (Mnyampala was a Catholic).

J. Knappert, 'The first Christian Utenzi' in Afrika und Uebersee, XLVII (Hamburg, 1964). J.Kn.

Moberg, VILHELM (*Algutsboda 20 VIII 1898; ∞1923 Margareta Törnqvist), Swedish author and dramatist. Many of Moberg's powerful novels deal with agricultural Sweden and the Swedish peasants' traditional feeling of independence, which also inspired the anti-neutral attitude implicit in his historical allegory Rid i Natt! (1941; Ride This Night!, tr. H. Alexander, 1943). His latest novels follow the fortunes of Swedish peasants who emigrated to America in the 19th century.

NOVELS: Raskens (1927); De knutna händerna (1930); A. P. Rosell, bankdirektör (1932); Mans kvinna (1933); Sänkt sedebetyg (1935); Sömnlös (1937); Giv oss jorden (1939); The Earth Is Ours, tr.

E. Björkman, 1940); Soldat med brutet gevär (1944; When I Was a Child, tr. G. Lannestock, 1957); Utvandrarna (1949; The Emigrants, tr. idem, 1951); Invandrarna (1952; Unto a Good Land, tr. idem, 1954); Nybyggarna (1956); Sista brevet till Sverige (1959; The Last Letter Home, tr. idem, 1961); Din stund på jorden (1963; A Time on Earth, tr. N. Walford, 1965).—DRAMA: Dramatik (3 vols, 1958).

S. Mårtensson, V. M. (1956). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Mochnecki, MAURZYC (*Bojaniec 13 IX ?1804; †Auxerre 20 XII 1834), Polish literary critic and historian. He was active in the insurrection of 1830–31 and emigrated afterwards to France. He was the leading literary critic of Polish Romanticism and a fiery advocate of the new literature (Mickiewicz*; Malczewski*). His aesthetic programme is influenced by Schelling* and emphasizes the connection between literature and nation. He was also a pianist and the first Polish music critic. P.H.

O literaturze polskiej wieku XIX (1830); Powstanie narodu polskiego w r. 1830–31 (2 vols, 1834).—Dziela (5 vols, 1863); Pisma po raz pierwszy edycją książkową objęte (1910).

A. Śliwiński, M. M. Żywo i dzieła (1909); P. Bańkowski, M. M. jako teoretyk i krytyk romantyzmu polskiego (1931); J. Szacki, Oficyna, naród, rewolucja (1962). S.S. (P.H.)

Mockel, ALBERT (*Ougrée 27 XII 1866; ∞ Marie Ledant; †Brussels 30 I 1945), Belgian poet and critic, founder of La Wallonie (1886–93), an important Symbolist review. A follower of Verlaine* and Mallarmé*, the poetic output of this melodious exponent of vers libre reflects his passion for Wagnerian themes and pre-Raphaelite idealism.

VERSE: Chantefable un peu naïve (1891); Clarté (1901); La flamme immortelle (1924).—CRITICISM: Propos de littérature (1894); Stéphane Mallarmé, un héros (1899); Émile Verhaeren, poète de l'énergie (1933). B.M.W. (J.C.D.)

Modena, JUDAH ARYEH [LEONE] DI (*Venice 23 IV 1571; †ibid. 24 III 1648), Italian Hebrew poet and religious writer, from 1594 rabbi at Venice. An unstable character, addicted to gambling (though at the age of 13 he had written a treatise against it, Sur me-Ra', Venice, 1596), he exercised, as he said, 26 different professions. He violently denounced CABBALAH and also voiced criticisms against traditional religion. It is not clear whether he did or did not write himself the anti-religious pamphlet Kol Sakhal, to which he composed a refutation, Sha'agat Aryeh (both ed. I. Reggio, 1852).

VERSE: Luchot Avanim (epitaphs; ed. A. Berliner); Divan (ed. S. Bernstein, 1932).—Historia de' riti ebraici (wr. at request of Sir Henry Wotton; Paris, 1637; The History of the Rites ... of the Jews, tr. E. Chilmead, 1650).—Chayei Yehudah (autobiog.; ed. A. Kahana, 1911).

A. Geiger, Leon da M. (1856); S. Stern, Der Kampf des Rabbiners gegen den Talmud (1902); E. Ruskin, L. da M. and the Kol Sakhal (1952). C.R.

Modrzewski (MODREVIUS), ANDRZEJ FRYCZ (*Wolborz c. 1503; †ibid. 1572), Polish-Latin political and religious writer. He studied in Cracow and later visited Wittenberg where he stayed for some time in Melanchthon's* house. Later he became secretary to the Polish King. He was condemned by the Catholic Church. He is the leading political thinker of the Polish Renaissance and his progressive ideas were widely discussed in Europe at the time. P.H.

Ad ... Regem ... Lascius sive de poena homicidii (1543); Ad Regem ... oratio de legatis ad concilium Christianum mittendis (1576); Commentariorum de re publica emendanda libri quinque (1551; Bks IV and V only in 2nd ed. 1557; Von Verbesserung des Gemeinen Nutz ...; tr. 1557; 3rd ed. 1559, augmented by other works may pass as a complete ed. of his works up to 1559); Dziela wszystkie (5 vols, 1953–59).

W. Maliniak, A. F. M. Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der Staats- und Völkerrechtstheorien (1913); S. Kot, A. F. M. Studium z dziejów kultury polskiej XVI wieku (2nd ed. 1923); K. Lepszy, A. F. M. (1953); A. F. M. (monografia bibliograficzna) (1962).

S.S. (P.H.)

Moe, JØRGEN: see Asbjørnsen, PETER CHRISTEN.

Moens, PETRONELLA (*Kubaard 16 XI 1762; †Utrecht 4 I 1843), Dutch poet and writer of good children's books, blind from the age of four. She also wrote smooth verse and prose, sometimes with a peculiar rhythm.

VERSE: De ware Christen (1785); H. de Groot (1790); Winterloveren (1820).—PROSE: De twaalf maanden des jaars (4 vols, 1810); 's Menschen begin, midden en einde (with W. H. Warnsinck; 1824).

W. H. Warnsinck and J. D. Zimmerman, P. M. (1843); M. van Ackere-Doolaege, Hollands blinde dichteres (1872). J.W.W.

Moens, WIES (*St Gillis nr Dendermonde 28 I 1898), Flemish poet and essayist, with van Ostaijen* leader of the Flemish Expressionist movement. In his idealistic Celbrieven (1920) he expressed the belief, peculiar to the 1920s, in a better society, as he did also in revolutionary blank verse with a rhetorical sweep, bare of metre and rhyme, but surprisingly dynamic in rhythm and a fresh though over-ornate imagery. Since 1933 he has defended the 'new order' views in literature.

VERSE: De boodschap (1920); De tocht (1921); Opgangen (1922); Landing (1923); Golfslag (1935);

Het vierkant (1938); Het spoor (1944); De verslagene (1962); Gedichten 1918-1967 (1968).—ESSAYS: De dooden leven (1938); Nederlandsche letterkunde van volksch standpunt gezien (2nd ed. 1941); De spitsboog (1943); Proza, I (1969).

W. Noë, W. M. (1944).

R.F.L.

Moerbeke, WILLEM VAN (*c. 1215; †1286), Dutch philosopher, studied at Paris and entered the Dominican Order. From 1268(?) until 1278 he was penitentiary at the Papal court at Viterbo, from 1278 until his death Archbishop of Corinth. Between 1260 and 1270, at the bidding of Thomas* Aquinas, he translated all the works of Aristotle* from Greek. He translated also Proclus* Elementatio theologica and several of Proclus' commentaries on Plato's* dialogues, making available for the first time pure Neo-Platonism, of which he was himself an influential adherent.

Biographie Nationale de Belgique, VIII (1884-85); P. Glorieux, Répertoire des maîtres en théologie de Paris au XIIIe siècle, I (1933-34).—M. de Wulf, Histoire de la philosophie médiévale, II (5th ed. 1925); M. Grabmann, 'Die Proklos-Übersetzungen des W. von M.' in Byzantinische Zeitschrift, XXX (1929-30); F. Sassen, De wijsbegeerte der middeleeuwen in de Nederlanden (2nd ed. 1948).

J.J.M.

Mofolo, THOMAS (*Khojane, Basutoland 2 VIII 1875; †Teyateyaneng 8 IX 1948), Bantu novelist, wrote in the Southern Sotho language.

Moeti oa Bochabela (1906; The Traveller of the East, tr. H. Ashton, 1934); Pitseng ('In the Pot'; 1910); Chaka (1925; Chaka the Zulu, tr. F. H. Dutton, 1931).

Moir, DAVID MACBETH (*Musselburgh 5 I 1798; †1828 Catherine Bell; †ibid. 6 VII 1851), Scottish physician, poet and humorist. He contributed to Blackwood's Magazine under the pseudonym 'Delta', in prose and verse.

Poems (with memoir by T. Aird; 2 vols, 1852); The Life of Mansie Wuach, Tailor in Dalkeith (repr. from Blackwood's Mag., 1828; repr. 1911).

Sir G. Douglas, The Blackwood Group (1897); I. Jack in English Literature 1815-1832 (1963).

J.K.

Mokuami, also called KAWATAKE (or FURUKAWA) MOKUAMI, pseud. of YOSHIMURA SHINSHICHI (*Edo [=Tokyo] 1 III 1816; †ibid. 22 I 1893), Japanese playwright. Of his plays, which started up after the reopening (in 1853) of Japan from its closure, some are in the old style and some show the influence of the West. They describe life accurately and with understanding, particularly the life of the lower strata of society, including thieves, gamblers etc.

Nezumi kozō (1857); Izayoi Seishin (or Sato

moyō azami no ironui; 1859; The Love of Izayoi and Seishin, tr. F. Motofuji, 1966; summary in A. M. and G. S. Halford, The Kabuki Handbook, 1956); Shima chidori tsuki no shiranami (1881; 'Strolling Thieves', summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Classic Japanese Literature, 1948; 'The Thieves', tr. D. L. Keene in Modern Japanese Literature, 1956); Aoto Zōshi Hana no Nishikie (or Shiranami Gonin Otoko; 'Benten the Thief', tr. Y. Uehara and E. Ernst in E. Ernst, Three Japanese Plays From the Traditional Theatre, 1959); Youchi saga kariba no akebono ('The Soga Brothers' Revenge', summary in Halford, op. cit.).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Molière, assumed name of JEAN-BAPTISTE POQUELIN (*Paris 15 I 1622; †1662 Armande-Grésinde-Claire-Élisabeth Béjart; †Paris 17 II 1673), French dramatist. Molière was the son of a prosperous Parisian tapissier. He lost his mother at the age of ten, was educated at the Parisian Collège de Clermont (1636-41) and may have read law at Orleans. Renouncing his right to the hereditary post of valet-tapissier du roi, which his father had acquired, he joined with the Béjart family and others in founding a new theatrical company, the Illustre Théâtre (1643-45). Having failed in Paris, they embarked on a long period in the provinces (1645-58), operating particularly in Languedoc, Provence and at Lyons. By 1652 Molière had become the leader of the troupe. At about the same date he is thought to have begun writing his first adaptations of Italian or Italian-derived farces, similar to the first two listed in his bibliography (and which are reasonably attributed to him). In X 1658 the company re-established themselves in Paris under the patronage of the King's brother, the Duke of Orleans. They played in the hall of the Petit-Bourbon (near the Louvre), later (I 1661) in the Palais-Royal, where they remained until Molière's death. From 1664 Molière became increasingly in demand for court entertainments and in 1665 Louis XIV replaced the Duke of Orleans as his company's official patron.

As a dramatist-actor-manager Molière's chief campaigns centred on Les Précieuses Ridicules, a one-act satire on literary and social affectation and his first wholly personal triumph (XI 1659); on L'École des femmes, which drew attacks from several quarters and unleashed the 'Comic War' (1662-63); on Le Tartuffe, an attack on religious hypocrisy, produced in a first (lost) version at Versailles in V 1664, but not officially authorized until 1669; and to a lesser degree, on Dom Juan (1665), a portrait of the free-thinking libertine which was withdrawn after its first run and not printed until 1682. (See T. Corneille*). Only the doctors, his most constant target, seem never to have retaliated.

As a man, Molière was one with his company and his plays. The main biographical controversy concerns his marriage with Armande Béjart, described in the marriage certificate as 'about 20' and here and in other documents as the sister of Madeleine Béjart. Madeleine had been a leading member of the company and a companion of Molière since 1643, and was traditionally at one time his mistress. Some modern authorities still do not entirely discount the contemporary belief that Armande was Madeleine's daughter, possibly by the Comte de Modène. Molière's marriage was not smooth, though several children were born, of whom one daughter (Esprit-Madeleine, *1665) survived infancy. Molière's health, undermined by overwork and not impossibly by tuberculosis, deteriorated after 1665. He died a few hours after the fourth performance of Le Malade imaginaire (1673) in which he had played the leading part of Argan.

Molière's plays may be roughly divided into farces, comedies and court entertainments (often with ballet); in a fourth category is his one 'serious' play, Dom Garcie de Navarre. But no systematic classification is possible, since only a minority of the plays belong wholly to any one main type, and farce or ballet often mingles with 'pure' comedy. Nor is there a clear-cut chronological progression, since the early knock-about humour recurs in such late plays as Les Fourberies de Scapin, while perhaps his subtlest work, Le Misanthrope (1666) occurs midway through his Parisian career. His chief fame rests on the following eight full-length plays: L'École des femmes (verse); Le Tartuffe (verse); Dom Juan (prose); Le Misanthrope (verse); L'Avare (prose); Le Bourgeois gentilhomme (prose); Les Femmes savantes (verse); Le Malade imaginaire (prose).

Molière established the comedy of manners in France, and indeed in Europe. His social satire is based on humorous observation and appears tolerant rather than bitter. He created a gallery of great characters, and developed his less individualized minor characters largely from the stock types of the commedia dell'arte.

PLAYS (dates are those of the earliest known productions): La Jalouse du Barbouillé (before 1659; plausibly attrib.); Le Médecin volant (1659 or earlier; plausibly attrib.); L'Étourdi (?1653); Le Dépit amoureux (1656); Les Précieuses ridicules (1659); Sganarelle ou Le Cocu imaginaire (1660); Dom Garcie de Navarre ou Le Prince jaloux (1661; 'comédie héroïque'); L'École des maris (1661); Les Fâcheux (1661; 'comédie-ballet'); L'École des femmes (1662); La Critique de l'École des femmes (1663); L'Impromptu de Versailles (1663); Le Mariage forcé (1664); Les Plaisirs de l'Île Enchantée (pageant) with La Princesse d'Élide (1664; adapt. of Moreto's El desdén con el desdén); Le Tartuffe ou l'Imposteur (1664-69); Dom Juan ou Le Festin de pierre (1665); L'Amour Médecin (1665); Le Médecin malgré lui (1666); Mélicerte (1666, unfinished; 'comédie pastorale héroïque'); Pastorale Comique (1667; verses for ballet); Le Sicilien ou l'Amour peintre (1667); Amphitryon (1668); George Dandin (1668); L'Avare (1668); Monsieur de Pourceaugnac (1669; 'comédie-ballet'); Les Amants magnifiques (1670; 'comédie-ballet'); Le Bourgeois gentilhomme (1670; 'comédie-ballet'); Psyché (1671; 'tragédie-ballet', in collab. with Quinault and P. Corneille); Les Fourberies de Scapin (1671); La Comtesse d'Escarbagnas (1671); Les Femmes savantes (1672).—Euvres (ed. E. Despois and P. Mesnard, 13 vols and 1 album, 1873-1900; ed. M. Rat, 2 vols, 1933).—IN ENGLISH: A. R. Waller, The Plays of M. (8 vols, Edinburgh, 1926); ed. F. C. Green (2 vols, 18th-century tr. of H. Baker and J. Miller, 1929); sel. tr. J. Wood (2 vols, 1953-59).

Le Registre de La Grange (1659-85) (facs. repro. ed. B. E. and G. P. Young, 2 vols, Paris, 1947); G. Michaut, La jeunesse de M. (1922), Les débuts de M. à Paris (1923) and Les luttes de M. (1925); J. Palmer, M. (London, 1930); A. Tilley, M. (Cambridge, 1936); R. Jasinski, M. (1943); H. C. Lancaster, French Dramatic Literature in the 17th Century, Pt III (1936); P. Bénichou, Morales du grand siècle (1948); A. Adam, Histoire de la littérature française au XVIIe siècle, II (1952).

G.B.

Molin, PETRUS, or PELLE (*Multrå 8 VII 1864; †Bodö, Norway 26 IV 1896), Swedish author. Molin embarked on an ambitious novel on Lapp-land, but had not the inner compulsion to complete it. After further experiments in the romantic genre he found his style in realistic, sometimes ironically humorous, tales of primitive peasants and animals in Norrland.

Adalens poesi (ed. G. af Geijerstam, new ed. G. Attorps, 1934).

G. Attorps, P. M. (1930); T. Jonsson, Stor-Norrland och litteraturen (1938). C.H.K.

Molina, TIRSO DE: see Tirso de Molina.

Molinet, JEAN (*Desvres, Pas de Calais 1435; †1507), canon of La Salle, Valenciennes, French writer. He became historiographer to Charles the Bold, Duke of Burgundy (1475), in succession to Georges Chastellain* whose disciple he was. His well-informed prose Chroniques (1475-1506) lack the distinction of Chastellain's. Les Faictz et Dictz are mainly court poems in the moralizing tone and elaborate versification of the rhétoriqueurs but are redeemed by the rich language and vivid realism of the descriptions.

L'Art de Rhétorique vulgaire in Recueil d'arts de seconde rhétorique (ed. E. Langlois, 1902); Le Mystère de Saint Quentin (1501; ed. H. Chatelain, 1908); Chroniques (ed. G. Doutrepont and O. Jodogne, 3 vols, 1935-37); Les Faictz et Dictz (ed. N. Dupire, 3 vols, 1936-39).

P. Champion, Histoire poétique du 15e siècle, II (1923); N. Dupire, J. M., La vie, les œuvres

(1932) and Étude critique des MSS et éditions des poésies de J. M. (1932); U. Damska-Prokop, Expression syntaxique des notions de cause et de conséquence dans les Chroniques de M. (1965).

M.Y.

Molinos, MIGUEL DE (*Muniesa, Saragossa 1627; †Rome 1696), Spanish theologian. He took Orders and, in 1665, went to Rome. His Spiritual Guide appeared in 1675. In 1687 he was compelled by the Holy Office to abjure his quietist doctrines. He spent the rest of his life imprisoned in a monastery. His prose was elegant and terse.

Gula espiritual (Rome, 1675; ed. Rafael Urbano, Barcelona, 1906; tr. The Spiritual Guide, 1688, ed. Kathleen Lyttelton, 1907).

M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Historia de los heterodoxos españoles, V; K. Vossler, Poesie der Einsamkeit in Spanien (1935; Span. tr. 1946); P. Dudon, Le quietiste espagnol, Michel de M. (1921); J. de Entrambasaguas, M. de M. (1935).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Molle, AMBROSIVS VAN (*?Lier; †beheaded 11 VIII 1567), Dutch poet in the REDERIJKER tradition (motto: 'Scientie verheft'), factor of the Chamber of Rhetoric De Jenette at Lier. Together with many members of this Chamber he was an adherent of the new faith, which cost him his life. Several refrains and other small works of his remain, in addition to a suyverlijck tractaetken (on marriage).

L. van Boeckel in Tijdschr. v. Gresch. en Folklore (1941 and 1943). J.J.M.

Møller, POUL MARTIN (*Uldum 21 III 1794; ∞1827 Betty Berg, ∞1836 Eline Svendine Hansine Bülow; †Copenhagen 13 III 1838), Danish poet, short-story writer and essayist. At Copenhagen he was the centre of a group of undergraduates with aesthetic interests, and after graduating in theology he took a witty part in a literary feud, parodying Baggesen* and Grundtvig*. Some of his best poems were written during a journey to China, when he felt a nostalgic longing for Denmark and tried to recapture the atmosphere of daily life in Copenhagen. In 1824 he finished his main work, En dansk Students Eventyr, which was published posthumously in an incomplete form. The first Danish Novelle, it describes with charming humour student life as Møller knew it. Of great merit, also, are his aphorisms and his poetic Blade af Dødens Dagbog ('Leaves From Death's Diary'). In 1831 he was appointed Professor of philosophy at Copenhagen.

Efterladte Skrifter (6 vols, 1855–56); Udvalgte Skrifter (2 vols, 1930).

V. Andersen, P. M., hans Liv og Skrifter (1894); F. Rønning, P. M. M. (1911); J. Brøndum-Nielsen, P. M.-Studier (1940); F. Nielsen, Om P. M. (1961). E.B.

Möllhausen, HEINRICH BALDUIN (*Jesuitenhof nr Bonn 27 I 1825; ∞6 II 1855 Caroline Seifert; †Berlin 28 V 1905), German novelist. Explorer and traveller, later Prussian court librarian and widely acclaimed writer of exotic novels.

NOVELS: Das Mormonenmädchen (6 vols, 1864); Der Hochlandpfeiffer (6 vols, 1868); Der Piratenlieutenant (4 vols, 1870); Das Loggbuch des Kapitäns Eisenfinger (3 vols, 1887); Das Geheimnis des Hulks (1889); Kaptein Meerrose und ihre Kinder (3 vols, 1893).—Die Dreilinden-Lieder (verse; 1896).—Tagebuch einer Reise vom Mississippi nach den Küsten der Südsee (travelogue; intro. A. von Humboldt, 1858).—Illustrierte Romane, Reisen und Abenteuer (ed. D. Theden, 30 vols, 1906).

P. A. Barba, B. M., the German Cooper (1914). E.R.

Molnár, FERENC (*Budapest 12 I 1878; †New York 2 IV 1952), American (formerly Hungarian) playwright, novelist and short-story writer. The most widely known Hungarian playwright of the 20th century, Molnár has proved to be a virtuoso of the stage-play. His sophisticated and often symbolic language, combined with a polished economy of style, reveals him as a gifted and effective dramatist. Of his novels, Az éhes város (1900) and A Pál-utcai fiúk (1907) show him to be a keen observer and recorder of city life.

PLAYS: Liliom (1909; Eng. tr. B. F. Glazer, 1921); A hatyú (1926; The Swan, tr. M. P. Baker, 1929); Olympia (1928); Harmonia (1932); Girl Unknown (1936).—Plays of M. (tr. B. F. Glazer, 1927).—NOVELS: A Pál-utcai fiúk (1907; The Paul Street Boys, 1928); Rabok (1907; Prisoners, tr. J. Szebenyei, 1925); A zenélo angyal (1933; Angel Making Music, tr. V. Katona and P. Barnwell, 1934).—VARIOUS: Companion in Exile (1951).

E. Molnár, Testvérek voltunk (1958); I. Vécsei, M. F. (1966). G.F.C.

Molza, FRANCESCO MARIA (*Modena 1489; †ibid. 1544), Italian humanist and poet. Among his Latin verse is an elegy on the divorce of Henry* VIII. Of his Rime, La Ninfa Tiberina (1538), in ottave, is the most skilful. He also wrote five short stories (1549) and an obscene capitolo in the manner of Francesco Berni*.

Opere (ed. P. A. Serassi, 3 vols, 1774; with biog.). F. Baiocchi, Sulle poesie latine di F. M. M. (1904). B.R.

Molza, TARQUINIA (*Modena 1 XI 1542; ∞Paolo Porrino; †ibid. 8 VIII 1617), grand-daughter of the above, Italian humanist and poet. Tasso* wrote sonnets to her and entitled a dialogue on love after her, La Molza. She was lady-in-waiting to Lucrezia and Leonora d'Este.

Opuscoli (ed. D. Vandelli, with biog., 1750).

A. Solerti, Vita di T. Tasso, I (1895). B.R.

Mon, FRANZ, pseud. of FRANZ LÖFFELHOLZ (*Frankfurt am Main 6 V 1926), German concrete poet, who has been the most consistent experimenter in his country with the typographical, phonic, and semantic possibilities of literary texts. Amongst other forms, such as permutation-poems and 'text-pictures', he has evolved his system of 'articulations' (artikulationen, 1959), which he describes as a series of linguistic gestures. He says that his 'novel' Herzzero (1968) should be read 'with pencil, biro, and felt pencil'.

Movens (experimental miscellany; ed., together with W. Höllerer and M. de la Motte, 1960); sehänge (1964); Lesebuch (1967).

P. Schneider, 'Konkrete Dichtung' in Sprache im technischen Zeitalter, special no., XV (1965); S. S. Pawer, 'Some recent language games' in Essays in German Language, Culture and Society (ed. S. S. Pawer, R. H. Thomas and L. Forster, 1969). F.M.K.

Monaci, ERNESTO (*Soriano nel Cimino, Viterbo 1844; †Rome 1918), Italian philologist and literary historian. His most important contributions to scholarship concern the origins of Italian literature.

Crestomazia italiana dei primi secoli (1889–1917).

E. M. L'uomo, il maestro, il filologo (ed. M. Pelaez, 1920). B.R.

Monbodo, JAMES BURNETT, LORD (*Kincardineshire c. 1714; †Edinburgh 26 V 1799), Scottish judge (1767), philosopher and anthropologist. Eccentric, learned and original, he was a pioneer in anthropology, in studying man as an animal and in examining civilization in the light of savagery. For Johnson's* reactions, see Boswell's* Life.

Of The Origins and Progress of Language (3 vols, 1773–76; 6 vols, 1774–92); Antient Metaphysics; or, the Science of Universals (6 vols, 1779–99).

W. Knight, Lord M. and Some of His Contemporaries (1900). J.K.

Moncada, FRANCISCO DE, COUNT OF OSONA (*Valencia 1586; †Goch, Cleves 1635), Spanish historian. He carried out important diplomatic missions for Philip IV. His history of the Catalan mercenaries in Constantinople and Greece, published in 1623, follows Muntaner's* Catalan chronicle. It is a well-written and lively narration.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXI; Expedición de los catalanes y aragoneses (ed. S. Gili y Gaya, 1924); Empresas y victorias (ed. R. Foulché-Delbosc in Rev. Hispanique, XLV, 1919). E.M.W.

Monge de Montaudon (fl. c. 1180–1213), Provençal troubadour, known as the 'monk of Montaudon'—his real name is not recorded. Born at Vic-sur-Cère (Cantal) he entered the monastery at Aurillac and became Prior of Montaudon. His humorous, satirical and often improper songs and sirventes won him the favour of the great, particularly of Richard* I and Alfonso of Aragon who made him Prior of Aurillac Villafranca. A strangely worldly cleric whose witty lines are still a source of amusement.

E. Philippson, Der Mönch von Montaudon (1873); C. Klein, Die Dichtungen des Mönchs von Montaudon (1885); De la Salle Rochemaure and R. Lavaud, Les troubadours cantaliens (1910).

R.R.B.

Moniot d'Arras, PIERRE, 13th-century French lyric poet belonging to the Arras group; 15 songs and three motets are attributed to him, 18 more are of false or doubtful attribution. He was frequently confused in his own time with MONIOT DE PARIS, of whom nine songs are extant.

Ed. and historical stud. of both poets by H. Petersen Dyggve in Mémoires de la Soc. Néophilol., Helsinki, XIII (1938). F.W.

Monluc, BLAISE DE (*?Château de Saint-Puy, nr Condom c. 1500; ∞1526 Antoinette Ysalguier, ∞1564 Isabeau de Beauville; †Condom 26 VII 1577), French chronicler. A professional Gascon soldier who became Marshal of France (1574), he recounted in his Commentaires his 50 years of campaigning in Italy and against the Huguenots. Interesting particularly for their first-hand realism, his memoirs are also a triumph of self-portraiture. They grew out of a memorandum (Remontrance) addressed in self-justification to Charles IX in 1570.

Commentaires de Messire B. de M. (1592; crit. ed. P. Courteault, 1964; tr. C. Cotton, 1674; sel. ed. J. E. Riols de Fonclare, 1933).

P. Courteault, B. de M. historien (1907).

G.B.

Monnier, HENRI BONAVENTURE (*Paris 6 VI 1799; †ibid. 3 I 1877), French humorist. Monnier was an excellent black-and-white artist, who from 1830 onwards took to writing humorous dialogues and created in Joseph Prudhomme the immortal type of the pompous and limited French middle-class. This character he afterwards brought upon the stage. Monnier was one of the pioneers of realistic fiction.

Scènes populaires dessinées à la plume (1830); Nouvelles scènes populaires (1835–39); Scènes de la ville et de la campagne (2 vols, 1841); Les bourgeois de Paris (1854); Les diseurs de riens (1855); Les mémoires de M. Joseph Prudhomme (2 vols, 1857); La religion des imbéciles (1862).—VAUDEVILLES: Les compatriotes (1849); Grandeur et décadence de M. Joseph Prudhomme (1852); Le roman chez la portière (1855); Peintres et bourgeois (1855).

E. Melcher, Life and Times of H. M. (1951); J. G. Marsh, H. M.: Chronicler of the Bourgeoisie (1951). M.G.; J.P.R.

Monnier, PHILIPPE (*Geneva 2 XI 1864; †ibid. 21 VII 1911), Swiss writer and critic; the prose-poet of his beloved Geneva, celebrated by him in Le livre de Blaise (1904) and Mon village (1909), masterpieces of charm, observation and tender irony. Le Quattrocento (1901) and particularly Venise au XVIII<sup>e</sup> siècle (1907; Eng. tr. 1910) are brilliant and subtle evocations based on years of research in Italy.

Vieilles femmes (1895); Jeunes ménages (1899); Causeries genevoises (1902); Mon village (1909; with intro. P. Seippel, 1919).

P. Godet, Pages d'hier et d'avant-hier (1922).
J.P.I.

Monroe, HARRIET (*Chicago 23 XII 1860; †26 IX 1936), American poet and editor. By the founding of Poetry: A Magazine of Verse in 1912, which she continued to publish until her death, she gave the avant-garde of American poetry a medium in which to express itself. Pound*, Eliot* and Stevens* were all published there early in their careers.

Poets and Their Art (1926; rev. 1932); A Poet's Life (autobiog.; 1937).
D.E.Mo.

Monstereul, JEAN DE: see Montreuil, JEAN DE.

Monstrelet, ENGUERRAND DE (†Cambrai 20 VII 1453), French chronicler; a Picard nobleman. His continuation of Froissart's chronicles, divided into two books (1400–22, 1422–44), gives much interesting information about the Hundred Years' War in spite of an excessive Burgundian bias. It is indifferently written.

La Chronique d'E. de M. (ed. L. Douët d'Arcoq, 6 vols, 1857–62).
A.H.D.

Mont, POL DE (*Wambeek 15 IV 1857; †Berlin 29 VI 1931), Flemish poet, short-story writer, critic, art historian, folk-lorist and orator. A leading figure of the generation of 1880, he introduced to Flanders the ideas of individualism, sensuousness and l'art pour l'art in literature. He is important as a poet of impressionist verse about nature and love.

VERSE: Gedichten (1880); Lentesotternijen (1881); Loreley (1882); Idyllen (1882); Idyllen en andere gedichten (1884); Fladderende vlinders (1885); Claribella (1893); Iris (1894); Zomervlammen (1922).—SHORT STORIES: Op mijn dorpen (1886); De amman van Antwerpen (1903); Vier legenden (1903).—CRITICISM: Drie groote Vlamingen (1901); Eenigen (1914); Een bundel letterkundige opstellen (1914); De schilderkunst in België van 1830 tot 1921 (1921).

G. Meir, P. de M. (1932); R. F. Lissens, Het Impressionisme in de Vlaamsche letterkunde (1934).
R.F.L.

Montagu, ELIZABETH, née ROBINSON (*York 2 X 1720; †1742 Edward Montagu; †London 25 VIII 1800), English critic and hostess.

An Essay on the writings and genius of Shakespeare (1769); E. M., the Queen of the Blue-Stockings. Her Correspondence from 1720 to 1761 (ed. E. J. Climençon, 2 vols, 1906); Mrs M., 'Queen of the Blues' (ed. R. Blunt, 2 vols, 1923; contin. of Climençon's coll.).

R. Huchon, Mrs M. and Her Friends, 1720–1800 (Eng. tr. 1907).
B.H. (M.Bu.)

Montague, LADY MARY WORTLEY, née PIERRE-POINT (*London c. V 1689; †1712 Edward Wortley Montagu; †ibid. 21 VIII 1762), English writer and traveller. Lady Mary was first taught by William Feilding, her uncle, and by Bishop Burnet*, and after her marriage her wit and brilliance brought her social successes which she left behind in order to travel in Europe and the East, at first with her husband, later alone. Her unconventional, not to say eccentric, conduct and personality attracted spite and scandal. Her literary reputation depends mainly on her vivid and informative letters.

Letters of the Right Hon. Lady M——y W——y M——e (3 vols, 1763); Letters and Works of Lady M. W. M. (ed. Lord Wharncliffe, 3 vols, 1837; with memoir).—The Poetical Works of Lady M. W. M. (ed. I. Reed, 1768); Complete Letters of Lady M. W. M. (ed. R. Halsband, 3 vols, 1965–67).

R. Halsband, Life of Lady M. W. M. (1956).
B.H. (M.Bu.)

Montague, JOHN (*New York 1929), Irish poet, critic and short-story writer; he has lectured at Universities in Ireland and America and has worked as a journalist in Paris, where he now lives. Montague is a cosmopolitan writer and has been much influenced by American poetry. From Poisoned Lands (1961) through A Chosen Light (1967) to Tides (1970) his work shows a constant development. It is centred on the experience of love, which he evokes with delicacy and skill, and on the intricacies of his native Ulster. His style often presents a deceptive simplicity; it is highly sophisticated and is based on verse forms which are tautly controlled. He has also produced an excellent volume of stories, Death of a Chieftain (1964).
E.T.W.

Montaigne, MICHEL DE (*Château de Montaigne, Dordogne 28 II 1533; †1565 Françoise de la Chassaigne; †ibid. 13 IX 1592), French essayist. Born of a family of Gascon burghers who were rising into the aristocracy, Montaigne received a thorough classical education at home and at the Collège de Guyenne (Bordeaux), then studied law and purchased a judicial post at Bordeaux. Here he met La* Boétie, a young fellow-judge who greatly influenced his thinking and whose early death he felt deeply. Soon after inheriting his father's estate, he sold his judicial post and retired to Montaigne to study and meditate (1571). A translation which he had completed in 1569 of a Latin treatise by a Catalan theologian, Raimond Sebon, had already helped to crystallize his philosophical tendencies. In 1580 he published Books I and II of his own Essais, then turned to a more active life. Travels in Switzerland, Germany and Italy (see his Journal de voyage) were followed by political experience as mayor of Bordeaux (1581–85) and as a disinterested intermediary between the Catholic and Protestant factions which were disputing the mastery of France. This practical experience was reflected in Book III of the Essais (1588), which contains his maturest thought. Late in life he formed an attachment to the young Marie de Gournay, his filie d'alliance; after his death she published an edition of the Essais incorporating many of his latest corrections.

Montaigne is the first considerable writer of essays, and the word, as now understood, is his (see ESSAY). His early work suggests the deeply-read country gentleman interested in warfare, national and domestic government, individual conduct and the vagaries of human nature. Gradually he developed an introspective interest in his own personality—more exactly, in his personality as a touchstone for general truths—and a desire to find a viable philosophy. He moves from stoicism to epicureanism, but predominantly he is a sceptic, convinced only of the human incapacity to arrive at any certain truth (Que sais-je?). So, while sincerely respecting Catholic doctrine, he set a powerful example for sceptical materialists in the next two centuries and for inquiring minds until today.

L'Apologie de Raimond Sebon (crit. ed. P. Porteau, 1937); Journal de Voyage (ed. C. Dédéyan, 1946); Le livre de raison de M. (ed. A. Lefranc and J. Marchand, 1948); Essais (eds: F. Strowski et al., Bordeaux ed., 5 vols, 1906–33; P. Villey, 3 vols, 1922–23; A. Thibaudet, 1934; M. Rat, 1958; trs: J. Florio, 1603; C. Cotton, 1685; D. M. Frame, 1963).—Œuvres complètes (ed. A. Thibaudet and M. Rat, 1965).

Blaise Pascal, Entretien avec M. de Saci (c. 1655); P. Bonnefon, M., l'homme et l'œuvre (1893) and M. et ses amis (1898); A. Gide, Essai sur M. (1929); H. Janssen, M. fidéiste (Nimeguen, 1930); P. Villey, Les sources et l'évolution des Essais (new ed. 1933); A. M. Boase, The Fortune of M. in France, 1580–1669 (1935); P. Moreau, M., l'homme et l'œuvre (1939); C. Dédéyan, M. chez ses amis anglo-saxons (1946); D. M. Frame, M. a Biography (New York, 1965) and M.'s Essays, A Study; M. Dreano, La Religion de M. (rev. ed. 1969).

G.B.

Montalbán, JUAN PÉREZ DE: see Pérez de Montalbán, JUAN.

Montale, EUGENIO (*Genoa 12 X 1896), Italian poet and critic, a leading exponent of the HERMETIC school of Italian poetry. Montale was from 1929 to 1938 librarian of the Gabinetto Vieusseux in Florence, losing his post for political reasons. In 1948 he became music critic and editor of the 'terza pagina' of Corriere della sera. Although his choice of symbols is at times so personal as to lead to obscurity, Montale at his best impresses by virtue of his poetic technique, the range of his imagery and the uncompromising honesty with which he expresses his bleak vision of life. His most frequent themes are those of loneliness, of time and of memory. He was one of the earliest contributors to the review Solaria, and one of the first Italian critics to appreciate Svevo*.

VERSE: Ossi di seppia (1925); La casa dei doganieri (1932); Le occasioni (1939); La bufera e altro (1956); Satura (1971).—VARIOUS: La farfalla di Dinard (1956; enlarged rev. ed. 1969); Auto da fé (1966); Fuori di casa (1969).—Sel. tr. G. Kay (1964).

E. Bonora, La poesia di M. (2 vols, 1965); S. Ramat, M. (1965). B.M.

Montalvo, GARCÍ RODRÍGUEZ (or ORDÓÑEZ) DE (f. c. 1500), Spanish romance writer. He re-worked AMADÍS DE GAULA, and later composed a sequel. A.D.D.

Montalvo, JUAN (*Ambato 1832; †Paris 1889), Ecuadorean essayist, whose classical style has earned him fame in the Spanish-speaking world. Under the rule of García Moreno he was exiled for his aggressive opposition, expressed in his newspaper, El Cosmopolita. An extreme liberal, he is not an original thinker. His most lasting work is the Siete tratados (2 vols, Besançon, 1882) in which he tried to set out humanist moral standards.

Catilinarias (12 polemical essays; 1880–82); Mercurial eclesiástica (Paris, 1884); El Espectador (3 vols, ibid. 1886–88); Capítulos que se le olvidaron a Cervantes (pastiche of Don Quixote; Besançon, 1895); Geometría moral (Madrid, 1902); El Libro de las pasiones (plays; 1935).—M. (ed. M. Moreno Sánchez, 1942); M.: Páginas desconocidas (2 vols, 1936).

E. Anderson Imbert, El arte de la prosa en J. M. (Mexico, 1948). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Montchrestien, ANTOINE DE (*Falaise c. 1575; †Tourailles, nr Falaise 7 X 1621), French dramatist. His adventurous life included a duel after which he fled to England; a successful venture in the cutlery business led him to write a widely read economic treatise advocating protectionism. He was killed at an inn while trying to raise support for the Huguenots. His verse tragedies, all written before 1604, are elegiac rather than dramatic, in the humanist tradition of the 16th century. His subjects are either classical or Biblical, with the exception of his best play, L'Ecosaise, on the pathetic fate of Mary Queen of Scots. This was acted between 1601 and 1604 in Paris and the provinces.

Sophonisbe (1596, 1601); L'Ecosaise (1601; crit.

ed. École Normale, 1905); Les Lacènes (1601); David (1601; crit. ed. L. E. Dabney, Austin, Texas, 1963); Aman (1601; crit. ed. Philadelphia, 1939); Hector (1604).—Tragédies (ed. L. Petit de Julleville, 1901).—Traité de l'économie politique (1615; crit. ed. T. Funck-Brentano, 1889).

G. Lanson, 'A. de M.' in Rev. des Deux Mondes (1891) and 'Les sources historiques de La Reine d'Ecosse' in Rev. Universale (1905); R. Lebègue, La tragédie française de la Renaissance (1954); R. Griffiths, The Dramatic Technique of A. de M. (1970). G.B.

Monteiro Lobato, JOSÉ BENTO (*Taubaté, São Paulo 18 IV 1882; †São Paulo 4 VII 1948), Brazilian short-story writer. He created the fictitious character of Jeca Tatú, of the Brazilian hinterland but nationally representative, who squats in the sun and lets others do the thinking for him—revolutions cannot disturb his squalid passivity. A master of irony, Monteiro Lobato anticipated the critical nationalism of Modernismo, though alien to the movement.

Urupês (1918); Ideias de Jeca Tatú (1919); Cidades mortas (1919); Negrinha (1920).—Obras completas (13 vols, 1946–47).

A. Conte, M. L. o homem e a obra (1948); Timothy Brown Jr, M. L. (1954); Edgard Cavalheiro, M. L.: vida e obra (2 vols, 1955). J.T.B.

Montemayor, JORGE DE (*Montemor-o-Velho, Coimbra c. 1520; †Piedmont 1559), Spanish novelist and poet. He was son of a Portuguese silversmith and possibly had Jewish ancestors. He wrote chiefly in Spanish and Castilianized his surname. After holding various posts in the households of Castilian Infantas, he returned to Portugal in 1551; he went back later to Castile, took part in the wars in Flanders, returned to Spain and finally died in Italy as the result of a duel fought about a love affair. He translated the poems of Ausias March* into Castilian and published his poems (some religious) in 1554; his poems were included in the Index of 1559, but later editions without the religious works were reprinted in 1562 and later. His fame rests on his pastoral novel La Diana (1559), which went through 39 editions before 1670 and was translated into French (1578), English (1598), German (1624) and Dutch (1652). Sequels were published in Spain, and it influenced Sidney's* Arcadia and d'Urfé's* L'Astrée. His prose was mellifluous but monotonous; his verse often recalls themes and lines from the Cancioneros. The novel is still readable: there is interesting psychological analysis and occasional irony in it.

El cancionero del poeta George de M. (ed. González Palencia, 1932); M. de Riquer, Traducciones castellanas de Ausias March (1946; 3rd ed. 1962); Los siete libros de la Diana (ed. F. López Estrada, 1946); Diana (tr. B. Yong, 1598; tr. T. Wilson, 1596, repr. H. Thomas, 1920).

G. Schönherr, J. de M., sein Leben und sein Schäferroman (1886); H. A. Rennert, Spanish Pastoral Romances (1892); J. B. Avallé-Arce, La novela pastoril española (1959). E.M.W.

Montesino, AMBROSIO (*Huete; †1513), Spanish religious poet and translator. He was a Minim Friar in Toledo who became titular Bishop of Sardis. He translated the Vita Christi of Ludolf of Saxony (1501) and St Augustine's* Meditations. His poems are popular in style and very charming. The first edition appeared in 1485; more poems were added in later editions.

Coplas sobre diversas devociones (facs. repr. ed. Sir H. Thomas, London, 1936).

K. Whinnom, 'The supposed sources of inspiration of Spanish 15th-century narrative religious verse' in Symposium, XVII (1963) and 'El origen de las comparaciones religiosas del siglo de oro' in Revista de Filol. Esp., XLVI (1963); M. Darbord, La poésie religieuse espagnole des Rois Catholiques à Philippe II (Paris, 1965). E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Montesquieu, CHARLES-LOUIS DE SECONDAT, BARON DE LA BREDE ET DE (*La Brède nr Bordeaux 18 I 1689; ∞1715 Jeanne de Lartigues; †Paris 10 II 1755), French writer. A country gentleman and wealthy magistrate at Bordeaux, Montesquieu turned early to scientific and political studies, then won fame with his Lettres Persanes (1721). Ostensibly a light 'Oriental' novel, this is a penetrating and witty commentary on French manners seen through the eyes of 'Persian' visitors. A brilliant social period in Paris (1721–28), during which he wrote liberal political treatises, the hedonistic Temple de Gnide (1725) and (conceivably) Le Voyage à Paphos (1727), was followed for Montesquieu by observant travels in Europe and in England, where he stayed 18 months (1729–31). He divided the rest of his life between his native château of La Brède and intellectual Paris. His Considérations sur la cause de la grandeur des Romains et de leur décadence (Amsterdam, 1734) approached history rationally and ascribed the decline of ancient Rome to the loss of the early republican virtues and liberties. L'Esprit des lois (1748), the main work of his life, set out to show, with many examples, that laws and political institutions are products of environment and differ according to geographical, climatic and environmental conditions. As a social and political philosopher, Montesquieu leads to the French Revolution. As a writer, he is unpedantic, alert, concise.

Lettres Persanes (ed. P. Vernière, 1960); Considérations sur les Romains (crit. ed. H. Barckhausen, 1900); L'Esprit des lois (crit. ed. J. Brethe de La Gressaye, 4 vols, 1950–61; tr. T. Nugent, 2 vols, 1896–97).—Œuvres (eds: R. Caillois, 2 vols, 1949–51; A. Masson, 3 vols, 1950–55; D. Oster, 1964); Correspondance (ed. F. Gebelin and A. Morize, 2 vols, 1914).

F. T. H. Fletcher, M. and English Politics (1939); J. Dedieu, M. l'homme et l'œuvre (rev. ed. 1966); P. Barrière, M. (1946); J. Starobinski, M. par lui-même (1953); R. Shackleton, M. a Critical Biography (1961); J. R. Loy, M. (1968); M. H. Waddicor, M. and the Philosophy of Natural Law (1970).
G.B.

Montgomerie, ALEXANDER (*Beith ?c. 1556; †Edinburgh ?c. 1610), Scottish poet. He was in the service of the regent Morton and James VI and travelled in Europe. His poems are graceful love-lyrics, sonnets, religious and moral pieces; The Flying between Montgomerie and Polwart, a vituperative duel in the Dunbar* tradition (1621), and The Cherry and the Slae, an allegory in 114 intricate 14-line stanzas (1597).

Poems (ed. D. Laing, 1821; ed. J. Cranstoun, 1887, supp. ed. G. Stevenson, 1910); The Cherry and the Slae (ed. H. H. Wood, 1937).

I. Ross in Texas Stud. in Eng., XXXVII (1958); H. M. Shire in Stud. Scot. Lit., III (1966). J.K.

Montgomery, LESLIE, pseud. LYNN DOYLE (*Downpatrick, Co. Down 1873; †1961), Irish playwright, novelist and short-story writer; especially noted for his humorous tales of Irish life. R.McH.

STORIES: Ballygullion (1920); Dear Ducks (1925); The Ballygullion Bus (1957).—VARIOUS: An Ulster Childhood (1921).
E.T.W.

Montgomery, LUCY MAUD (*Prince Edward Island 30 XI 1874; †1911 E. MacDonald; †Toronto 1942), Canadian writer. As the author of fiction for girls she achieved a great reputation.

Anne of Green Gables (1908); Rilla of Ingleside (1921); Emily's Quest (1928); Anne of Ingleside (1939).

H. M. Ridley, The Story of L. M. (1956).

M.H.M.M. (R.Su.)

Montherlant, HENRY DE (*Neuilly 21 IV 1896; †[suicide] Paris 21 IX 1972), French novelist, from an aristocratic and Roman Catholic family. After serving in the First World War, he travelled in Spain, Africa and Italy and went in for violent sports of all kinds, but had to give them up after an accident in the bull-ring. As a writer, he has been influenced by Barrès*, D'Annunzio* and Gide*. Alike in his novels and plays he exalts the masculine qualities of virility and sensual enjoyment, preaches virtue of 'service' as an end in itself, rejects the facile consolations of sentiment, especially of feminine tenderness, and seeks to promote a modern variety of chivalry based on solitary pride and aristocratic disdain. His trenchant style admirably expresses his general outlook. Member of the Académie Française (1960).

NOVELS: La relève du Matin (1920); Le songe (1922); Les Olympiques (1924); Chant funèbre pour les morts de Verdun (1924); Les bestiaires (1926); The Bullfighters, tr. E. G. Rich, 1927; Les célibataires (1934); Lament for the Death of an Upper Class, tr. T. McGreevy, 1935; Les jeunes filles (1936; Eng. tr. idem, 1937); Pitié pour les femmes (1936; Eng. tr. J. Rodker, 1940); Le démon du bien (1937); Les lépreuses (1939; Eng. tr. idem, 1940); La rose de sable (1954; 1968); Le chaos et la nuit (1963; Eng. tr. T. Kilmartin, 1964); Un assassin est mon maître (1971).—PLAYS: La reine morte (1942; tr. J. Griffin in The Master of Santiago and Other Plays, 1951); Fils de personne (1943); Le Maître de Santiago (1947; Eng. tr. idem, 1951); Malatesta (1948; Eng. tr. idem, 1963); Celles qu'on prend dans ses bras (1950); Port-Royal (1954); Le Cardinal d'Espagne (1960); La guerre civile (1965); La ville dont le prince est un enfant (1967).—NOTES sur mon théâtre (1950).—ESSAYS: Service inutile (1935); L'équinoxe de Septembre (1938); Le solstice de Juin (1941); Carnets (1947–48); Va jouer avec cette poussière (1968).—SELECTED ESSAYS (tr. J. Weightman, ed. P. Quennell, 1960).

J. N. Faure-Biguet, Les enfances de M. (1941); M. Saint-Pierre, M. bourreau de soi-même (1949); P. Sipriot, M. par lui-même (1953); H. Perruchot, M. (1959); J. W. Batchelor, Existence and Imagination: The Theatre of H. de M. (1967).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Monti, VINCENZO (*Alfonsine, Ravenna 19 II 1754; †1791 Teresa Pikler; †Milan 13 X 1828), Italian poet and prose writer. 'Autonide Saturnino' in Arcadia; secretary to Duke Braschi, Rome (1781–97); he later held various offices under the French in Milan and became an enthusiastic supporter of Napoleon until 1815 when he declared in favour of the Austrian régime. An opportunist of considerable literary talent, Monti wrote lucid, harmonious verse of topical interest characterized by a significant assimilation of the classical literary tradition and Dantesque metre. The Bassvilliana (1793)—a conservative poem in terza rima belonging to Monti's Roman period—presents Louis XVI as an innocent victim of the French Revolution; in the Mascheroniana (1800), however, he heralds Napoleon as the saviour of Europe. Other works include encomiastic Odi, the Feroniade, a much-prized version of the Iliad (1810), the Sermone sulla Mitologia (1825), condemning Romantic aesthetics, three tragedies, a revealing Epistolario and the Proposta di alcune correzioni ed aggiunte al Vocabolario della Crusca (1817–26).

Opere (sel. ed. M. Valgimigli and C. Muscetta, 1953).—Versione dell' Iliade (ed. G. F. Chiodaroli, 1958; rev. ed. G. Barberisi, 1967); Poesie (ed. G. Bezzola, 1969); Epistolario (ed. A. Bertoldi, 6 vols, 1928–31).—Opere (6 vols, 1839–42).

A. Pompeati, V. M. (1928); G. Bustico, La vita e l'opera di V. M. (1928); F. Allevi, V. M. (1954);

C. Angelini, Carriera poetica di V. M. (1960); G. Colicchia, Il Saggio di Poesie del 1779 e la prima poetica montiana (1961); L. Fontana, 'V. M.' in I classici italiani nella storia della critica, II (rev. ed. W. Binni, 1962); D. Chiomenti Vassalli, V. M. nel dramma dei suoi tempi (1968). M.W.

Montiano y Luyando, Agustín (*Valladolid 1 III 1697; †Madrid 1 XI 1764), Spanish dramatist and critic, the first director of the Academy of History. He began writing in the late 17th-century manner (El robo de Dina, 1727). Virginia (1750) and Ataulfo (1753) are fastidious plays based on French neo-classic models. Discurso sobre las tragedias españolas (1750), with a continuation printed in 1753, is his contribution to the polemics round the Spanish theatre.

Poesías (ed. L. A. de Cueto in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LXVII).

N. Alonso Cortés, Miscelánea Vallisoletana (1912); F. Uhagón y Guardamino, Marqués de Laurencín, Don A. de M. y L. (1926); J. A. Cook, Neo-Classic Drama in Spain: Theory and Practice (Dallas, 1959). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Montoro, ANTÓN DE, called 'EL ROPERO' (*Montoro, Córdoba 1404; †c. 1480), Spanish poet; a converted Jew, who enjoyed the patronage of the Aguilar family. His serious verses are unreadable, but he had talent for lampoons and jocular verse.

Cancionero (ed. E. Cotarelo y Mori, 1900).

R. O. Jones, 'Isabel la Católica y el amor cortés' in Rev. de Literatura, XXI (1962); C. V. Aubrun, 'Conversos del siglo XVI (a propósito de A. de M.)' in Filología, XIII (1968-69).

E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Montreuil (or Monstereuil), JEAN DE (*?1354; †Paris 1418), French humanist; secretary to Charles VI. He possessed a deep knowledge of classical literature and was prominent in the literary controversies at the beginning of the 15th century.

A. Thomas, De Joannis de Monsterialo vita et operibus (1883); A. Combes, J. de M. et le chancelier Gerson (1942). A.H.D.

Montrose, JAMES GRAHAM, 1ST MARQUESS OF (*1612; ∞1629 Magdalene Carnegie; †Edinburgh 21 V 1650), Scottish statesman, soldier and poet. A Presbyterian and originally a Covenanter, Montrose joined the Royalist cause in 1644 and fought a brilliant series of campaigns; he was executed by his enemies in the Grassmarket, Edinburgh. A man of heroic courage, a soldier of genius, Montrose had a gentleman's skill in poetry, and his few extant poems are graceful lyrics, passionate and beautifully clear in expression.

Poems in James Watson's Choice Collection of ... Scots Poems (1711) and ed. J. L. Weir (1938). G. Wishart, James, First Marquis of M. (1903);

John Buchan, M. (1928); C. V. Wedgwood, M. (1952) and in Essays and Stud., XIII (1960). J.K.

Moody, WILLIAM VAUGHN (*Spencer, Ind. 8 VII 1869; ∞1909 Mrs Harriet Brainerd; †Colorado Springs, Col. 17 X 1910), American poet and playwright. He won wide popularity with his prose plays. His three poetic dramas treat the problem of sin and point to the modern symbolic drama of spiritual struggle.

The Masque of Judgment (1900); The Fire-Bringer (1904); The Great Divide: A Play (1909); The Faith Healer: A Play (1909).—The Poems and Plays of W. V. M. (ed. J. M. Manly, 2 vols, 1912). D. D. Henry, W. V. M.: A Study (1934).

H.L.C.

Moonen, ARNOLD (*Zwolle 1644; †Deventer 17 XII 1711), Dutch parson and poet, philologist and historian. He continued the tradition of the 17th century. J.W.W.

VERSE: Poëzy (1700); Dauids trapzangen (1700); Vervolg op de poëzij (ed. H. Poot Czn., 1720).—Nederduytsche spraackkunst (1706).

J. Lindeboom, A. M. (1958).

J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Moore, BRIAN (*Belfast 1921), Irish novelist and short-story writer, after much travelling now a Canadian citizen. His first novel The Lonely Passion of Miss Judith Hearne (1958) is set in Belfast and presents a compassionate picture of sexual frustration against a background of Irish Catholicism. The Feast of Lupercal (1958) and The Emperor of Ice-Cream (1965) also investigate the possibilities of loneliness and failure in a Belfast setting. His other novels are set in Canada, The Luck of Ginger Coffey (1960), I Am Mary Dunne (1968), or America, An Answer From Limbo (1962), but deal with characters of Irish origin whose restlessness and uncertainty reflect an inability to abandon the old world for the new. Mary Dunne is a bravura impersonation of a woman's consciousness and his most complex and technically satisfying novel.

Fergus (1971); The Revolution Script (1971).

E.T.W.

Moore, EDWARD (*Abingdon 22 III 1712; ∞1749 Jenny Hamilton; †London 1 III 1757), English writer of poems, fables and plays, including the successful The Gamester (1753) with prologue by Garrick*. He edited The World (1753-57).

Fables for the Female Sex (1744); Poems, Fables and Plays (1756); Dramatic Works (1788).

J. H. Caskey, Life and Works of E. M. (with biblio.; 1927); A. Sherbo, English Sentimental Drama (1957). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Moore, GEORGE (*Moore Hall, Co. Mayo 24 II 1852; †London 20 I 1933), Irish novelist, essayist and autobiographer; educated Oscott, Birmingham; dabbled in art in London and Paris; worked as a journalist and art-critic in London; gained a reputation with his novel Esther Waters (1894), a naturalistic but thin enough work. From 1899 he was associated with the Irish literary revival, writing fiction with an Irish setting and collaborating with Edward Martyn* in the theatre. His spiteful but amusing autobiographical trilogy (Ave, 1911; Salve, 1912; Vale, 1914) is an indispensable record of the revival's chief figures and is the best of his early work. His later prose works had much subtlety and power.

NOVELS AND STORIES: A Drama in Muslin (1886); Evelyn Innes (1898); The Untilled Field (1903); The Lake (1905); The Brook Kerith (1916); Héloïse and Abélard (1921); Aphrodite in Aulis (1923); Celibate Lives (1927).—AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL: Confessions of a Young Man (1888); Impressions and Opinions (1891); Memoirs of My Dead Life (1906); Conversations in Ebury Street (1924).—PLAYS: The Strike at Arlingford (1892); The Bending of the Bough (1900).—WORKS (Ebury ed., 1936–37).—Letters to Lady Cunard (1957).

Walter D. Ferguson, The Influence of Flaubert on G. M. (1934); J. M. Hone, Life of G. M. (1936); M. J. Brown, G. M. (1955); Nancy Cunard, G. M. (1956); G. P. Collet, G. M. et la France (Paris, 1957); Jean C. Noel, G. M. (Paris, 1966); G. M.'s Mind and Art (ed. Graham Owens, 1968).—H. E. Gerber, G. M.: A Bibliography of Writings About Him (1959). E.T.W.

Moore, JOHN (*Stirling X 1729; ∞1769 Jean Simson; †Richmond 21 I 1802), Scottish physician, traveller and novelist; father of General Sir John Moore. Accompanied the Duke of Hamilton abroad (1773–78) and went with Lord Lauderdale to France in 1792. Zeluco: Various Views of Human Nature (1786), a rake's progress, is the best of his novels; Byron* declared that his intention in Childe Harold had been to portray 'a poetical Zeluco'.

A View of Society and Manners in France, Switzerland and Germany (1779); A View . . . Italy (1781); Journal during a Residence in France (1792–93); Edward (1796); Mordaunt: Sketches of Life, Character, and Manners (1800; ed. W. L. Renwick, 1965).—WORKS (7 vols, 1820); letters in Intimate Society Letters of the 18th Century (ed. the Duke of Argyll, 1910) and Records of the Carrick M. Family (ed. G. Heath, 1912).

Carola Oman, Life of Sir John M. (1953); J. M. S. Tompkins, The Popular Novel in England 1700–1800 (1932). J.K.

Moore, MARIANNE CRAIG (*St Louis, Mo. 15 XI 1887; †New York 5 II 1972), American poet. Her poetry is characterized by its disciplined, unconventional use of metrics, its detached impersonality and its witty, ironic attitude. William Carlos Williams* described her poetry as 'a brittle, highly set-off porcelain garden' suggesting that mixture of a sophisticated surface and naiveté which produces effects of startling insight.

Poems (1921); Observations (1924); Selected Poems (1935; intro. T. S. Eliot); The Pangolin and Other Verse (1936); What Are Years (1941); Nevertheless (1944); Collected Poems (1951); The Fables of La Fontaine (tr.; 1954); Like to a Bulwark (1956); O To Be a Dragon (1959); Complete Poems (1968).—PROSE: Predilections (1955); Three Classic Tales (1963).

Y. Winters, In Defense of Reason (1947); R. P. Blackmur, Language as Gesture (1952); R. Jarrell, Poetry and the Age (1953); A. Tate, Sixty American Poets, 1896–1944 (1954); J. Garrigue, M. M. (1965); G. W. Nitchie, M. M.: An Introduction to the Poetry (1969). H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

Moore, THOMAS (*Dublin 27 V 1779; ∞25 III 1811 Elizabeth Dyke; †Devizes, Wilts 26 II 1852), Irish song-writer. Educated at Trinity College, Dublin. He studied law in London, where his poetry won him popularity in polite society; and held a government post in Bermuda before settling in England. He was known in his own day as a biographer and satirist; today he is chiefly remembered for his Irish Melodies (1807–34), based on traditional Irish airs. Divorced from their music, his poems are conventional and sentimental; several were notably influenced by Irish rhythms and cadences. R.McH.

VERSE: Odes of Anacreon (tr.; 1800); Lallah Rookh (1817); The Fudge Family in Paris (1818).—Poetical Works (ed. A. D. Godley, 1910).—VARIOUS: Life of Sheridan (1825); Byron's Works (ed. 1835); The Journal of T. M. 1818–41 (ed. P. Quennell, 1964); Letters of T. M. (ed. W. S. Dowden, 2 vols, 1964).

W. Trench, T. M. (1934); H. O. Mackey, The Life of T. M. (1951). E.T.W.

Móra, FERENC (*Kiskunfélegyháza 19 VII 1879; ∞1902 Ilona Wallerhausen; †Szeged 8 II 1934), Hungarian author. Móra spent his whole life in the Szeged region, and his works reveal his intimate knowledge of that area. A gifted story-teller rather than a mere stylist, he gained great popularity throughout Hungary.

NOVELS: Ének a búzamezőkről (1927; Song of the Wheatfields, tr. G. Halász, 1930); Aranykoporsó (1933); The Gold Coffin, tr. E. Rácz, 1964); Hannibál feltámasztása (1949).—VERSE: Könyves könyv (1920).

J. Gaál, M. F. (1938); A. Földes, M. F. (1958). G.F.C.

Mora, JOSÉ JOAQUÍN DE (*Cádiz 1783; †Madrid 1864), Spanish poet and critic. He lived mainly in America. Though he claimed to be neither a classicist nor a Romantic, his Poestas (1836; 2nd ed. 1853) are in fact neo-classic in form. His Memorias históricas sobre Fernando VII (1824) is an interesting and valuable document. His Leyendas españolas (London, 1840) are good examples of narrative poetry, though lacking in atmosphere.

M. L. Amunátegui, Don J. J. de M.: Apunte biográfico (1897); C. Pitoulet, La querelle calderonienne (1909); L. Monguié, Don J. J. de M. y el Perú del ochocientos (1967). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Morais, FRANCISCO DE (*c. 1500; †Evora 1572), Portuguese novelist. Courtier, and for a time treasurer, to John III, in 1540 he went to Paris as secretary to the Portuguese ambassador. He became infatuated with a lady of the French court but only succeeded in drawing ridicule on himself. The affair seems to have inspired certain anti-feminist passages in his novel, Palmeirim de Inglaterra. Morais was murdered for reasons still obscure.

Palmeirim de Inglaterra, a romance of chivalry, achieved immense popularity, second only to that of the AMADÍS DE GAULA (1508), the Spanish novel that renewed the taste for this type of literature in 16th-century Europe. Highly praised by Cervantes* in his general condemnation of the genre, Morais' work owes much to the Amadís, both directly and through the other Spanish romances—Palmerín de Oliva (1511), Primalción (1512) and Platir (1533)—of which the Palmeirim de Inglaterra is a continuation. Notable for its clear, attractive style and for the interest of certain episodes (particularly that of Miraguarda, the insensitive beauty who seems to symbolize Morais' concept of female indifference), the first edition of this novel was in a Spanish translation, the Portuguese original only appearing some 20 years later. Morais also left three moral dialogues.

Primeira e segunda parte do Palmeirim de Inglaterra (1567; ed. G. de Ulhoa Cintra, Crônica de Palmeirim de Inglaterra, São Paulo, 1946; Span. tr. 1547-48, ed. A. Bonilla de San Martín in Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XI; The history of Prince Palmerin of England, tr. A. Munday, 1602-09; tr. R. Southey, 4 vols, 1807); Diálogos (1624). —Obras (3 vols, 1852).

W. E. Purser, Palmerin of England (Dublin, 1904); Jordão de Freitas, F. de M., O Palmeirim (1910); Sir H. Thomas, The Palmerin Romances (1916) and Spanish and Portuguese Romances of Chivalry (1920). T.P.W.

Morais, VENCESLAU JOSÉ DE SOUSA (*Lisbon 30 V 1854; †Tokushima 1 VII 1929), Portuguese writer who began his career in the navy; he later settled in Japan and became an enthusiastic exponent of Japanese life.

Traços do extremo oriente (1895); Dai-Nippon

(1897); Cartas do Japão (1904); O culto do chá (1905); Paisagens da China e do Japão (1906); Bon-Odori em Tokushima (1918); O-Yoné e Ko-Haru (1923); Serões do Japão (1926); Relance da alma japonesa (1926).

Castelo Branco Chaves, 'W. de M.' in Estudos críticos (1932). T.P.W.

Morales, AMBROSIO DE (*Cordoba 1513; †ibid. 1591), Spanish humanist and antiquarian. He was nephew to Pérez* de Oliva, whose works he edited (1586). He was a Professor at Alcalá and a priest. Besides continuing Ocampo's chronicle, he wrote an excellent antiquarian work on Spanish cities, in which he made full use of documents, inscriptions and medals.

Discursos sobre las antigüedades de Castilla (1577); Crónica general de España que continuaba A. de M. (6 vols, 1791-92).

E. Redel, A. de M. Estudio biográfico (1908). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Morales, TOMÁS (*Moya de la Gran Canaria 1885; †Las Palmas 1921), Spanish poet; studied medicine at Cádiz and Madrid. The Canary Islands provide the main themes for his virile, sonorous poetry; sea, ports, maritime life. Sometimes, as in Oda al Atlántico, he creates a poetical-mythological vision of the sea in which ancient and modern elements intermingle. He created a poetical school in the Islands.

Poemas de la gloria, del amor y del mar (1908); Las rosas de Hércules (1919; enlarged ed., with pref. E. Díez-Canedo, 1922). R.M.N.

Morand, PAUL (*Paris 13 III 1888), French writer. Morand began to travel—in particular to England—at an early age and became a professional diplomat. He won international literary fame as the brilliant and impertinent commentator of post-war Europe in the 'crazy '20s', the legend of which he helped to swell (Ouvert la nuit, 1922; Fermé la nuit, 1923). His talent took a more serious turn in Bouddha vivant (1927), in which he set himself to grapple with moral problems. His travel books (Rien que la terre, 1926) show the same condensed brilliance of style and observation as his novels and short stories. He loved cities, and wrote evocative books on Londres (1933) and on Paris.

VERSE: Lampes à arc (1919); Feuilles de température (1920); Tendres Stocks (1921).—NOVELS, STORIES, ETC.: L'Europe galante (1925); Magie noire (1928); Paris Tombouctou (1928); Hiver carathe (1929); Papiers d'identité (1931); Air Indien (1932); Milady (1937); Vie de Maupassant (1943); Journal d'un attaché d'ambassade (1948); Giraudoux (Geneva, 1948); Tais-toi (1965).

B. Delvaille, P. M. (1966). M.G.; J.P.R.

Moratin: see Fernández de Moratin.

Moravia, ALBERTO (PINCHERLE) (*Rome 28 XI 1907), Italian novelist and short-story writer. Moravia's first novel, Gli indifferenti (1929; Time of Indifference, tr. A. Davidson, 1953), was outstandingly successful and is thought to have influenced Sartre*. Its characters were drawn from the Roman middle class which has provided the background to most of his works, with the main exceptions of the 'proletarian' novels, La romana (1947; The Woman of Rome, tr. L. Holland, 1949) and La ciociara (1957; Two Women, tr. A. Davidson, 1958) and some of the tales in the Racconti romani (1954; Roman Tales, tr. idem, 1956). Moravia's themes are those of alienation (although only in recent novels has he used the terminology of EXISTENTIALISM), of sexual relations and the relationship between the corruption of the individual and that of the social system of which he is seen to be a product. Moravia has always limited his range, excluding from consideration whole areas of experience, but he has been remarkably consistent within his chosen limits. In technique, he is highly professional and is a master of the short story and the 'romanzo breve'. At times over-preoccupied with sex, and with a weakness for the melodramatic, his work is uneven in quality, but he is rightly regarded as one of the most important Italian novelists of his century.

I sogni del pigro (1940); La mascherata (1940; The Fancy Dress Party, tr. A. Davidson, 1947); Agostino (1944; tr. B. de Zoete, 1947); La disubbidienza (1948; Disobedience, tr. A. Davidson, 1950); L'amore coniugale e altri racconti (1949; Conjugal Love, tr. idem, 1950); La noia (1960; The Empty Canvas, tr. idem, 1961); L'attenzione (1965; The Lie, tr. idem, 1966).

A. Limentani, A. M. tra esistenza e realtà (1962); F. Longobardi, M. (1970). B.M.

Moravský, GUSTAV PFLEGER: see Pfleger Moravský, GUSTAV.

Morax, RENÉ (*Morges 11 V 1873; †ibid. 1963), Swiss playwright, author of La Nuit des Quatre-Temps (1901), Aliénor (1910) and others to whom Switzerland's dramatic revival owes much. La Dîme (1903) was the first play he produced at Mézières (Vaud) where he founded the Théâtre du Jorat in 1908. This people's theatre was an original enterprise and a remarkable example of co-operation between writer, actors, musicians, artists and audience. Besides Guillaume Tell (1914) and Charles le Téméraire (1944) Morax produced Old Testament plays, full of pageantry and grandeur; for Le Roi David (1921) Honegger wrote the music.

G. Bridel, Le théâtre en Suisse romande (1937); P. Kohler, Le théâtre et la Suisse romande (1943); Le théâtre du Jorat et R. M. (sel. recollections ed. Stéphane Audel, 1963); Pierre Meylan, R. M. et Arthur Honegger au théâtre du Jorat (1966).

J.P.I. (G.G.)

Mordovtsev, DANIL LUKICH (*Don territory 1830; †1905), Russian radical novelist and pamphleteer. His principal novel, Znamiya vremeni (1896), written in a populist spirit, was one of the outstanding successes of the period. He also wrote historical novels one of which, Derzhavny plotnik (1899), idealizes Peter* the Great.

Polnoye sobranie istoricheskikh romanov, povestey i rasskazov (25 vols, 1914); Znamiya vremeni (1923); Zhelyezom i krovyn (1954).

I. V. Vladislavlev, Russkie pisateli, IV (1924). J.L.

More, CHARLES C. (*Allentown, Pa. 1851; †ibid. II 1940), leading Pennsylvania-German narrator.

Sel. in The Pennsylvania-German, VIII–XI (1907–10).

H. H. Reichard, Pennsylvania-German Dialect Writings and Their Writers (1918) and Pennsylvania German Verse (1940). E.R.

More, HANNAH (*Stapledon 2 II 1745; †Clifton 7 IX 1833), English writer and humanitarian. After considerable theatrical success as dramatist and social success as wit—she was a friend of Johnson* and Reynolds—Miss More applied her gifts to the writing of sacred plays and poems and tracts, and to energetic work amongst the poor of Gloucestershire. B.H.

The inflexible captive: a tragedy (1774); Percy (1777); Sacred dramas (1782); Coelebs in Search of a Wife (2 vols, 1809); The Shepherd of Salisbury Plain (1810); Practical Piety (2 vols, 1811); Christian Morals (2 vols, 1813).—The Letters of H. M. (ed. R. B. Johnson, 1925).

W. Roberts, Memoirs of the Life and Correspondence of H. M. (4 vols, 1835); H. Thompson, Life of H. M. with Notices of Her Sisters (1838); M. A. Hopkins, H. M. and Her Circle (1947); M. G. Jones, The Life of H. M. (1952). B.H. (M.Bu.)

More, HENRY (*Grantham 12 X 1614; †Cambridge 1 IX 1681), English philosopher and poet, one of the Cambridge Platonists. From Eton he went to Christ's College, Cambridge (1631), where he indulged his love of poetry and religious argument, tutored by Robert Gell and influenced by Whichcote. In 1639 More was elected to a fellowship; much influenced by Plato*, Plotinus*, Ficino* and Luther*, he was not involved in political controversy, taking orders but refusing preferment, combining pleasant sociability with his mystical faith and temporary asceticism. His allegorical Psycho-zoia shows Spenserian and other Elizabethan influence.

Psychodia Platonica (1642); Democritus Platonis-sans (1646; ed. P. G. Stanwood, 1968); both with other works in Philosophical Poems (1647; sel. ed. G. Bullough, 1931); Complete Poems (ed. A. B.

Grosart, 1878).—Philosophical Writings (1662); Opera (3 vols, 1675–79); Theological Works (1708); Philosophical Writings of H. M. (ed. F. I. MacKinnon, 1925).

R. Ward, Life of H. M. (1710; ed. M. H. Howard, 1911); F. J. Powicke, The Cambridge Platonists (1926); R. L. Colie, Light and Enlightenment: A Study of Cambridge Platonists and the Dutch Arminians (1957); A. Lichtenstein, H. M.: The Rational Theology of a Cambridge Platonist (1962); M. S. Røstvig, The Hidden Sense (1964); S. Hutin, H. M.: essai sur les doctrines théosophiques chez les platoniciens de Cambridge (1966).—Biblio. in G. R. Guffey, Traherne and the 17th-Century English Platonists 1900–1966 (1969).

B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

More, PAUL ELMER (*St Louis, Mo. 12 XII 1864; †Princeton, N.J. 9 III 1937), American critic. He taught Sanskrit at Harvard and Bryn Mawr, held editorial positions in New York, retired to Princeton to teach philosophy. With Irving Babbitt* he led the new humanist movement of the 1920s which advocated classical standards. In the Shelburne Essays (11 vols, 1904–21) More criticized literature on humanistic principles, strongly attacked the naturalism of modern American and French works.

Benjamin Franklin (1900); The Drift of Romanticism (1912); Aristocracy and Justice (1915); Platonism (1917); Hellenistic Philosophies (1923); The Christ of the New Testament (1924); The Demon of the Absolute (1928); The Sceptical Approach to Religion (1934); On Being Human (1936); Pages From an Oxford Diary (1937).

R. Shafter, P. E. M. and American Criticism (1935).
H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

More, SIR THOMAS (*1478; †Tyburn 6 VII 1535), English humanist. Friend of Erasmus*, Colet* and Holbein, More was a distinguished translator, biographer and controversialist, and also an eminent lawyer who became Chancellor (1529), but was executed for denying the King's headship of the Church. In his Utopia he censures luxury, enclosures and war, associating the good life with equal work and leisure, education for all and hygienic town-planning.

Utopia (Latin text, Louvain, 1516; R. Robinson's tr., 1551, ed. G. Sampson and A. Guthkelch, 1910; mod. tr. G. C. Richards, 1923; mod. tr. ed. E. Surtz, 1964); Omnia Opera (coll. Latin works; Louvain, 1565); The lyfe of Johan Picus Erle of Myrandula (?1510; ed. J. M. Rigg, 1890); A dialoge of Syr Thomas More (1529); The confutation of Tyndales answere (2 pts, 1532, 1533); The apologye of Syr T. M. Kryght (1533; ed. A. I. Taft, 1929); A dialoge of comfort against tribulacion (1533); The Workes of Sir T. M. wrytten by him in the Englyshe tonge (1557; facs. ed. with mod. version W. E. Campbell, intro. R. W. Chambers, notes A. W. Reed, 2 vols, 1931); Correspondence of Sir T. M. (ed. E. F. Rogers, 1948); Complete Works of Sir T. M. (exec. ed. R. S. Sylvester, 1963).

N. Harpsfield, The Life and Death of Sir T. M. (ed. from MS E. V. Hitchcock, 1932, repr. 1963); W. Roper, The Life of Sir T. M. (Paris, 1625; ed. E. V. Hitchcock, 1935; ed. E. E. Reynolds, 1963); F. Seebohm, The Oxford Reformers of 1498 (1867); G. E. Dermenghem, Thomas Morus et les Utopistes de la Renaissance (1927); W. E. Campbell, M.'s Utopia and His Social Teaching (1930); R. W. Chambers, Sir T. M. (1935) and The Place of Sir T. M. in English Literature and History (1937); J. H. Hexter, M.'s Utopia: The Biography of an Idea (1952); E. Surtz, The Praise of Pleasure (1958); P. Holhře, The Sir T. M. Circle (1959); Moreana (ed. G. Marc'hadour, 1962–); G. Marc'hadour, L'Univers de T. M. (1963); E. E. Reynolds, The Trial of Sir T. M. (1964) and T. M. and Erasmus (1965).
W.A.A.

Moréas, JEAN, pseud. of JANNIS PAPADIAMANTOPOULOS (*Athens 15 IV 1856; †Paris 31 III 1910), French poet of Greek birth. Moréas had a French education, travelled in Europe, and settled finally in Paris in 1880. His first poems, somewhat artificial, show a full acceptance of SYMBOLISM (Les Syrtes, 1884). In 1891, however, he joined with Maurras*, M. Du Plessys, R. de La Tailhède and others in founding the École Romane, which advocated a return to a more strictly classical technique and looked to Rome and Greece for its general inspiration. His subsequent writing was direct and vigorous. In Les stances (probably his masterpiece) he details the stages in his intellectual journey towards self-discipline. His novels and essays are now sadly dated.

VERSE: Premières poésies (1907); Le pèlerin passionné (1891); Enone au clair visage (1893); Ériphile (1894); Sylves and Sylves Nouvelles (1894–95; coll. as Poèmes et Sylves, 1907); Les stances (1899–1901; 6 vols, 1905).—Iphigénie (play; 1904).—NOVELS: Le thé chez Miranda (1886); Les demoiselles Gaubet (1887).—Les premières armes du Symbolisme (essays; 1889).

E. Raynaud, J. M. et les stances (1929); R. Niklaus, J. M., poète lyrique (1936); A. Embiricos, Les étapes de J. M. (1955).
M.G.; J.P.R.

Moreno Villa, José (*Málaga 1887; ∞ Consuelo Estrada; †Mexico 1955), Spanish poet, critic and artist. He lived in Mexico from the Civil War. Thoughtful but humorous, his poetry lies somehow outside the general trend of the period. The series of Carambas (1931) are representative of his work. He has written an interesting autobiography—Vida en claro (1944)—and a valuable study on Spanish court dwarfs.

El pasajero (1914); Evoluciones (1918); Jacinta la

Pelirroja (1929); Locos, enanos, negros y niños palaciegos (1939).

J. F. Cirre, La poesía de J. M. V. (1963).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Moreto y Cavana, AGUSTÍN (*Madrid 9 IV 1618; †Toledo 28 X 1669), Spanish dramatist. His parents were Italians. He studied at Alcalá and became a priest. Probably most of his plays were written before 1656 when he became chaplain to the Archbishop of Toledo. He then took charge of a hospital in Toledo. His plays are generally elegant in style and relatively simple in plot. He frequently refurbished plays by his predecessors. His brilliant comedy El lindo don Diego owes many of its details to Guillén de Castro* y Bellvis' El Narciso en su opinión. El desdén con el desdén is recognized as his masterpiece; it resembles vaguely several earlier plays by Lope de Vega* and Tirso* de Molina, but no precise source has been discovered. This play was the source of Molière's* La Princesse d'Élide. Thomas Corneille* and John Crowne* owed something to his works.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXXIX, LVIII; Teatro (El lindo don Diego and El desdén con el desdén), ed. N. Alonso Cortés, 1916, 2nd ed. 1937; El poder de la amistad (ed. D. E. Dedrick, Valencia, 1968).

R. L. Kennedy, The Dramatic Art of M. (Northampton, Mass. 1932); E. Caldera, Il teatro di M. (Pisa, 1960); F. P. Casa, The Dramatic Craftsmanship of M. (1966). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Moretti, MARINO (*Cesenatico 18 VII 1885), Italian poet, novelist and short-story writer. As a poet, Moretti began by writing in the 'crepuscular' manner (Gozzano*). His early prose works are also crepuscular in tone, but subsequently describe with freshness and sympathy scenes from provincial life. Moretti has great compassion for the oppressed and admires their moral courage.

POETRY: Poesie scritte col lapis (1910); Tutte le poesie (1966).—SHORT STORIES: I lestofanti (1910); Uomini soli (1954); 1945 (1956); Tutte le novelle (1959).—NOVELS: Il sole del sabato (1916); La voce di Dio (1920); Il romanzo della mamma (1924); La vedova Fioravanti (1941); Romanzi della mia terra (1961); I romanzi dell'amorino (1968).—Tutti i ricordi (memoirs; 1962). B.M.

Morgan, CHARLES LANGBRIDGE (*Kent 22 I 1894; †1923 Hilda Vaughan; †London 6 II 1958), English novelist, for many years dramatic critic of The Times. In his novels his elaborate, rather mannered, literary style gives a cachet to his romantic presentation of sensational events and emotions. The Fountain (1932) made his reputation in America. He is much admired in France.

NOVELS: Portrait in a Mirror (1929); Sparken-broke (1936); The Voyage (1940); The Judge's Story (1947); The River Line (1949; play, 1952);

A Breeze of Morning (1951); Challenge to Venus (1957).—PLAYS: The Flashing Stream (1938); The Burning Glass (1953).—GENERAL: Reflections in a Mirror (2 ser., 1944–46); Liberties of the Mind (1951); The Writer and His World (1960).—Selected Letters (ed. E. Lewis, 1967).

H. C. Duffin, The Novels and Plays of C. M. (1959). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Morgan, EDWIN (*Glasgow 27 IV 1920), one of the most versatile of contemporary Scottish poets, and a considerable writer of Concrete Poetry. He is also a translator of ability and ingenuity.

The Second Life: Selected Poems (1968); in Penguin Modern Poets, XV (1969); The Whittrick (1970). W.R.A.

Morgan, WILLIAM (*Wybrnant, Caernarvonshire c. 1545; †Catherine Lloyd; †10 IX 1604), translator of the Bible into Welsh. Educated at Cambridge, he was vicar of Llanbadarn, Welshpool and Llanrhaeadr-ym-Mochnant, before becoming Bishop of Llandaff and later of St Asaph. At Llanrhaeadr he completed his translation of the Bible (Y Beibl Cyssegrlan, 1588). A classic of Welsh literature, it has had an immeasurable influence upon the language and the literature as well as upon the religious life of the nation. Its style is founded mainly upon the scholarly language of bardic poetry.

C. Ashton, Bywyd a Gwaith yr Esgob Morgan (1891); J. Ballinger and J. I. Jones, The Bible in Wales (1906); W. J. Gruffydd, 'Y Cyfieithiadau Cymraeg' in Geiriadur Beiblaidd (1926); J. Lloyd-Jones, Y Beibl Cymraeg (1938). B.Re.

Morgann, MAURICE (*London 1726; †ibid. 1802), English literary critic. His essay on Falstaff initiated the psychological study of Shakespeare's* characters.

Shakespearean Criticism (ed. D. A. Fineman, 1972; incl., with variant MS readings, An Essay on the Dramatic Character of Sir John Falstaff, 1777).

S. M. Tave, 'Notes on the influence of M.'s essay' in Rev. Eng. Stud. (1952). B.H. (M.Bu.)

Morgenstern, CHRISTIAN (*Munich 6 V 1871; †Merano 30 III 1914), German poet. A would-be painter, he suffered prolonged illness and died prematurely. He is best remembered for his nonsense verse. Initially influenced by Ibsen* and Nietzsche* (whose dithyrambic style and vitalistic affirmation of life and suffering he followed), he turned after 1906 to mysticism and, under the impact of Rudolf Steiner, anthroposophism. His nature and love lyrics tend toward the sentimental, and it is chiefly in his now naïve, now grotesque, ironic comic verse that he reveals his mastery of rhythm and capacity to play imaginatively with language. His games with conventional language anticipate the Surrealists, his use of distortion the Expressionists. The comic in his poetry not only satirizes convention, but also serves to communicate his mystical vision of reality.

Galgenlieder (1905; with Palmström, 1910); Palma Kunkel (1916); Der Gingsanz (1919); all 3 coll. in Alle Galgenlieder (1951; sel. tr. 1963).—Melancholie (1906); Einkehr (1910); Ich und Du (1911); Wir fanden einen Pfad (1914); Stufen (aphorisms; 1918); Mensch Wanderer (1927).—Werke (2 vols, 1959–60); Gesammelte Briefe (1962).

L. Spitzer, 'Die groteske Gestaltungs- und Sprachkunst M.s.' in Motiv und Wort (1918); W. Griffel, M. als Mystiker (1931); W. Witte, 'Humour and mysticism in C. M.'s poetry' in Ger. Life and Letters, I (1936); M. Bauer, M.s. Leben und Werk (5th ed. 1954); F. Hiebel, C. M. (1957); J. Walter, Sprache und Spiel in C. M.s. 'Galgenliedern' (1966); M. Beheim-Schwarzbach, C. M. (3rd ed. 1967). K.P.

Mori ŌGAI, pseud. of MORI RINTARŌ (*Tsuwano, Shimane 17 II 1862; †Tokyo 9 VII 1922), Japanese writer. After becoming an army doctor, he was sent in 1884 to Germany for four years to study German army hygiene. He remained an army surgeon until 1916, but his German visit had stimulated an inherent literary talent and his first novel, Maihime (1890), was based upon his experiences there. Over 60 novels and short stories followed. In 1902 he began to write successful plays. From 1909 he translated numerous German classics into Japanese (doing what Tsubouchi* Shōyō, Horiguchi Daigaku and Futabatei* Shimei did for English, French and Russian classics respectively). Writing in a lucid classical style, he exercised a great influence on modern Japanese literature. E.B.C.

NOVELS: Maihime (1890; The Dancing Girl, tr. F. W. Eastlake, 1907; 'The Girl Who Danced', tr. L. Zolbrod in The Language of Love, 1964); Vita sexualis (1909); Asobi (1910; summary of this and prec. in T. Kunitomo, Japanese Literature Since 1868, 1938); Fushinchū (1910; 'Under Reconstruction', tr. I. I. Morris in Modern Japanese Stories, 1961); Seinen (1910–11; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, I, 1939); Gan (1911–13; 'The Wild Goose', extr. tr. B. Watson in Modern Japanese Literature, ed. D. L. Keene, 1956; The Wild Geese, tr. K. Ochiai and S. Goldstein, 1959; Die Wildgans, tr. F. Vogelsang, 1962); Abe Ichizoku (1913; 'Der Untergang des Hauses Abe', tr. W. Donat in Die fünfstockige Pagode, 1960); Sanshō dayū (1915; tr. T. Fukuda, 1952; tr. S. Masaki in Asia Scene, I, 4–6, 1956); Takasebune (1916; tr. E. W. Paschall in The Heart is Alone, ed. R. N. McKinnon, 1957).—G. M. Sinclair and K. Suita, Tokyo People (1925).—PLAYS: Kamen (1909; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, op. cit.); Ikutagawa (1910). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Móricz, ZSIGMOND (*Tiszacsécse 30 VI 1879; ∞1905 Eugenia Holics, ∞1926 Mária Simonyi; †Budapest 4 IX 1942), Hungarian novelist, short-story writer and playwright. One of the Nyugat circle, Móricz shattered the idyllic pictures of peasant life described by Mikszáth* and Gárdonyi*. Being himself of peasant stock, he wrote of the stark reality of village life in an eruptive style that dispelled fantasy and compelled thought.

NOVELS: Sárány (1910; Gold im Kote, tr. A. Schwartz, 1921); A fákllya (1917; The Torch, tr. E. Lengyel, 1931); Légy jó mindhalálig (1920; Be Faithful Unto Death, tr. S. Körösi László, 1963); Erdély (1935; Siebenbürgen, tr. G. Kaethe, 1936).—SHORT STORIES: Hét krajcár (1909); Barbárok (1933).—M. Z. regényei és elbeszélései (12 vols, 1962–65).

G. Feja, M. Z. (1939); J. Reményi, 'Z. M., Hungarian realist' in Amer. Slavic Rev., IV (1945); K. Vargha, M. Z. (1967); M. Czine, M. Z. (1968). G.F.C.

Mörike, EDUARD (*Ludwigsburg 8 IX 1804; ∞1851 Margarethe von Speeth; †Stuttgart 4 VI 1875), German poet. The son of a doctor, Mörike entered the Tübinger Stift (1822), where he and his friends lived in a private world of poetic fantasy. His student love-affair with the problematic Maria Meyer affected him deeply. Reluctantly he entered upon a round of curacies, amongst others at Plattenhardt, where he became engaged—though never married—to Luise Rau, and in 1834 became vicar of Cleversulzbach. His hypochondriacal disinclination for his duties growing increasingly marked, he retired in 1843 on a small pension, and from 1851 taught literature at a Stuttgart girls' school. His closest relationship had always been with his sister Klara: his marriage ended in separation in 1872. He had the gift of friendship—and of letter-writing—and his many friends, among them Justinus Kerner*, Hermann Kurz*, Theodor Storm*, F. T. Vischer* and M. von Schwind, fully recognized his quality. His earlier poetry has much in common with the Romantics, but also anticipates by its form-consciousness his later classical metres. In masterpieces like 'Auf eine Lampe' and 'Erinna an Sappho' immediacy and reflection are perfectly blended. Through the Idylle vom Bodensee (1846) runs impish country humour, seen in its perfection in the prose fairy-tale Das Stuttgarter Hutmännlein (1853). Maler Nolten (2 vols, 1832) and the Novelle Mozart auf der Reise nach Prag (1856; Eng. tr. W. and C. A. Phillips, 1934) reach greater depths.

His Gedichte were first published in 1838; in 1888 Hugo Wolf set a large number to music; these Mörike Lieder mark the beginning of a new understanding of the poet. But it has been left to the 20th century to rediscover the full significance of his genius.

Anakreon (1864).—Sämtliche Werke (ed. G.

Baumann, 2 vols, 1954, new ed., 3 vols, 1961; ed. H. G. Göpfert, 1954, 1958, 1964); Historisch-kritische Gesamtausgabe (ed. H. H. Krummacker, H. Meyer and B. Zeller, 1967 ff.).—Briefe (ed. F. Seebass, 1939); Unveröffentlichte Briefe (ed. idem, 1941, 1945); Briefe (ed. W. Zemp, 1949).—Poems by E. M. (tr. N. K. Cruickshank and G. F. Cunningham, 1959).

H. Maync, E. M. (1902; 5th ed. 1944); A. Goes, M. (1938, 1954); B. von Wiese, E. M. (1950); M. Mare, E. M., the Man and the Poet (1957); H. Meyer, E. M. (1961, 1964); V. G. Doerksen, M.'s Elegien und Epigramme—eine Interpretation (1964); G. Storz, E. M. (1967).—H. Unger, M.—Kommentar zu sämtlichen Werken (incl. biblio.; 1970).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Morisseau-Leroy, FÉLIX: see HAITIAN LITERATURE.

Moritake: see Arakida MORITAKE.

Moritz, KARL PHILIPP (*Hamelin 15 IX 1756; †Berlin 26 VI 1793), German novelist. Of humble origin, Moritz, after an unhappy childhood, became an actor, then a schoolmaster at Dessau. He visited England in 1782 and then became editor of the Vossische Zeitung in Berlin. In 1786 he met Goethe* in Italy. He was appointed Professor at the Academy of Arts in Berlin in 1789. Moritz's largely autobiographical novel Anton Reiser (1785–90; tr. P. E. Mathieson, 1926) records the inner stresses of its hero with remarkable depth and penetration.

Blunt, oder der Gast (novel; 1781).—AESTHETIC: Versuch einer deutschen Prosodie (1787); Über die bildende Nachahmung des Schönen (1788); Vorlesungen über den Stil (1791).—VARIOUS: Reisen eines Deutschen in England (1792); Reisen eines Deutschen in Italien (1792–93).

M. Dessoir, K. P. M. als Ästhetiker (1889); H. Eybisch, Anton Reiser (1909); C. Ziegler, M. und sein psychologischer Roman Anton Reiser (1913); W. Rose, From Goethe to Byron (1924). H.B.G.

Mörk, JACOB (*Stockholm 12 I 1714; †Bro 26 VI 1763), Swedish cleric and virtually the first Swedish novelist. Adalriks och Giöthildas äfventyr (1742–44), written with a boyhood friend, had an early-Norse setting and urged democratic patriotism. Thecla (1749–58) showed considerable advance in composition and characterization, and its attacks on the clergy illustrated Mörk's opposition to rationalism.

F. Bökk, Romanens och prosaberättelsens historia i Sverige intill 1809 (1907). C.H.K.

Morley, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON (*Haverford, Pa. 5 V 1890; ∞1914 Helen Fairchild; †28 III 1957), American poet, novelist and essayist. His novels range from straightforward narrative to the fanciful and satiric. His novel The Man Who Made

Friends With Himself (1949) unites these elements in his work, being a serious fantasy of the conflict between reality and imagination.

NOVELS: The Eighth Sin (1912); The Haunted Book Shop (1919); Swiss Family Manhattan (1932); Kitty Foyle (1939); The Ironing Board (1949).—Spirit Level (verse; 1946). H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

Morley, JOHN, VISCOUNT MORLEY (*Blackburn 24 XII 1838; ∞1870 Mary Ayling; †Wimbledon 23 IX 1923), English man of letters, journalist and politician. Morley's vigorous editorship of The Fortnightly Review (1867–82) was distinguished for its progressive radical approach to a wide range of contemporary issues.

Voltaire (1872); Life of Cobden (1881); Life of W. E. Gladstone (1903); Literary Essays (1906); Recollections (1917).

F. W. Hirst, Early Life and Letters of M. (2 vols, 1927); W. Staebler, Liberal Mind of J. M. (1943); D. A. Hamer, J. M. (1968); J. Gross, Rise and Fall of the Man of Letters (1969). M.A.

Mormon, BOOK OF: see SACRED BOOKS.

Mörne, ARVID (*Kuopio 6 V 1876; †15 VI 1946), Finnish-Swedish author. He became head of a folk high-school at Finns in 1899, and, inspired by radical sympathy, worked for the independence of Finland. His early poetry is fired by radical sentiments (Ny tid, 1903); after 1910 his verse betrays his increasing disillusionment and he turns to the skerries and sea for consolation (Skärgårdens vår, 1913). After 1924, under the influence of Modernism, Mörne experienced a new period of creativeness, publishing numerous collections of pessimistically subjective lyrics and some weighty prose works.

VERSE: Rytm och rim (1899); Nya sånger (1901); Döda år (1910); Sommarnatten (1916); Höstlig dikt (1919); Vandringen och vägen (1924); Mörkret och lågan (1926); Den förborgade källan (1930); Under vintergatan (1934); Vandringsdagen (sel. poems; 1936); Atlantisk bränning (1937); Sånger i världsskymning (1941).—PLAYS: Den helige Henrik (1914); Fädernearvet (1918); Solens återkomst (1920).—NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: Den svenska jorden (1915); Lotsarnas kamp (1917); Inför havets anlete (1921); Kristina Bjur (1922; historical novel); Ett liv (1925; semi-autobiog. novel); Det förlorade landet (1945).—Samlade Dikter (6 vols, 1919).

H. Ruin, A. M. (1946); P. O. Barck, A. M. och sekelskiftets Finland (1953). B.M.E.M. (I.S.)

Morpurgo, RAHEL (*Trieste 6 IV 1790; †ibid. 22 VIII 1871), Hebrew poet. She wrote mostly songs for special occasions, like her famous poems dedicated to the revolutionary year 1848. She was hailed in her time as the first modern Hebrew poetess.

Ugab Rahel (coll. poems and letters; ed. V. Castiglione, Cracow, 1890; new ed., Tel Aviv, S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.) 1943).

Morriën, ADRIAAN (*Velsen 5 VI 1912), Dutch poet, critic and prose writer. A sensitive critic of poetry, his own work shows a preference for carefully phrased anecdotes, typical of his generation. At first he used conventional forms and static imagery, later more unexpected images and associations. His central themes, however (woman, love, children, pregnancy), varied little.

Verzamelde gedichten (coll. verse; 1961); Het gebruik van een wandspiegel (verse; 1968).—Een slordig mens (prose; 1951). J.J.O.

Morris, WILLIAM (*Walthamstow 24 III 1834; ∞1859 Jane Burden; †Hammersmith 3 X 1896), English craftsman and writer. Morris was educated at Marlborough and at Exeter College, Oxford. His interest in art—greatly influenced by Ruskin*—found fresh stimulus in the architecture of northern France and in his association with Burne-Jones and Rossetti*. Under Rossetti's influence he gave up architecture (he had been articled to Street) for painting and soon became interested in domestic design. Morris was a maker as well as a designer and his insistence on the inseparability of design and craft was shown most productively in the firm of Morris, Marshall, Faulkner and Webb, which engaged to supply anything from a drinking-glass to a fire-place, and in the Kelmscott Press, founded by Morris in 1890. He was perhaps tempted to regard poetry as merely another form of decoration, but his dramatic power and simple language saves the best of his verse from triviality. His interest in fantasy is seen at its best in the socialist idyll, News From Nowhere (1891), which is negligible if inspected for political solutions, but profoundly moving when recognized as a bright and childlike dream. But Morris did more than dream. He founded The Socialist League (1884) and edited The Commonweal, its journal; he made translations from Norse and Anglo-Saxon as well as imitating their literatures; and in both precept and practice his varied energies provided new instances of Ruskin's belief that the artist (and the craftsman) have an essential part to play in the making of the good society.

VERSE: The Defence of Guenevere and other Poems (1858); The Life and Death of Jason (1867); The Earthly Paradise (1868–70); The Story of Sigurd the Volsung (1876); Chants for Socialists (1884–85).—PROSE: A Dream of John Ball (1888).—The Collected Works of W. M. (intro. M. Morris, 24 vols, 1910–15); W. M. (Nonesuch Ed., 1934); The Letters of M. (ed. with intro. P. Henderson, 1950).

A. Vallance, W. M., His Art, His Writings, and His Public Life (1897); J. W. Mackail, W. M. (1899); L. F. Day, 'The art of W. M.' in Art

Journal, extra no. (1899); J. B. Glasier, W. M. and the Early Days of the Socialist Movement (1921); H. H. Sparling, The Kelmscott Press and W. M. (1924); B. I. Evans, W. M. and His Poetry (1925); F. L. Lucas, Eight Victorian Poets (1930); P. Bloomfield, W. M. (1934); R. P. Arnot, M. (1964); P. Thompson, The Work of W. M. (1967); P. Henderson, W. M. (1967).

B.H. (M.A.)

Morris, WRIGHT (*Central City, Nebraska 6 I 1910; ∞1934 Mary Finfrock [o/o1961], ∞1961 Josephine Kantor), American novelist. Mostly set in his native Nebraska, his work avoids provincialism. His style has wit, ingenuity and tact, contrasting sharply with his sardonic analysis of the absurdity of life and keeping a delicate balance between horror and comedy.

The Man Who Was There (1945); My Uncle Dudley (1952); The Huge Season (1954); The Field of Vision (1956); Love Among the Cannibals (1957); Ceremony in Lone Tree (1960); The Mississippi River Reader (1961); God's Country and My People (1968).—The Territory Ahead (criticism; 1968).

G.A.K.

Morris-Jones, SIR JOHN (*Trefor, Anglesey 17 X 1864; ∞1897 Mary Hughes; †Llanfair Pwllgwyn-gyll, Anglesey 16 IV 1929), Welsh scholar and poet; the first Professor of Welsh at the University College of North Wales. His Welsh grammar and his authoritative book on the Welsh poetic art of the Middle Ages are his chief claim to fame as a scholar. He was the only editor of the quarterly review Y Beirniad (1911–20), and through his eisteddfod adjudications, his teaching and his writings he did more than any one else to restore to Welsh poetry the standards which had been lost sight of during the 19th century. His own verse includes two long odes in the bardic metres, several fine lyrics, and translations from Heine* and from Omar* Khayyām.

Gwledigaethu y Bardd Cwsc (ed.; 1898); Caniadau (1907); A Welsh Grammar (1913); 'Taliesin' in Y Cymmrodor, XXVIII (1918); Cerdd Dafod (1925); Welsh Syntax (1931).

J. Lloyd-Jones, 'The late Sir J. M.-J.' in Y Cymmrodor, XL (1929); T. Parry, J. M.-J. (1958); J. E. C. Williams, 'Sir J. M.-J.' in Trans. Hon. Soc. Cymmrodorion (1965–66). B.Re.

Morsztyn, JAN ANDRZEJ, COUNT (*c. 1613; †Châteauvilain 8 I 1693), Polish poet. A courtier and diplomat, charged with high treason he escaped to France (1683). He is the best Polish baroque poet and the most gifted 17th-century lyricist. The Italian Marino* was his great model. He translated some works of Corneille* and Tasso* into Polish.

VERSE: Lutnia... (1661; ed. W. Serebyński, 1875); Kanikula albo psia gwiazda (1844); Psyche z Lucjana, Apulejusza, Marina (1696).—Poezja oryginalna i tłumaczona (1883); Wybór poezji (ed. J. Dürer Durski, 1949); Wybór poezji (1963).

E. Porębowicz, A. M. przedstawiciel baroku w poezji polskiej (1893); A. Mansuy, 'A. M.' in Le monde slave et les classiques français aux XVI-XVIIe siècles (1912); J. Sobolowska, J. A. M. (1965). S.S. (P.H.)

Morsztyn, ZBIGNIEW (*1628; †Königsberg 13 XII 1689), Polish poet. Attached to the army of the Protestant Radziwiłł family in Lithuania, he fought (1646–57) in the wars against the Cossacks, Russians and Swedes. After the expulsion of the Unitarians from Poland he settled in 1661 in East Prussia. His collection of poetry Muza domowa contains a cycle of poems for a book of emblems which establishes him as a leading Polish baroque writer of religious poetry. His other work is strongly influenced by J. Kochanowski*.

Pieśń w ucisku (1671).—Muza domowa (ed. J. Dürer-Durski, 2 vols, 1954).

Z. Mianowska, Z. M., Życie i twórczość poetycka (1930); J. Pelc, Z. M., Arianin i poeta (1966).

P.H.

Morys, HUW (*1622; □Llansilin, Denbighshire 31 VIII 1709), Welsh poet. He spent most of his life on the farm of Pontymeibion, Llansilin. A staunch churchman and Royalist, he was a prolific writer of poems in a variety of song metres. He also wrote cywyddau and scores of englynion. His songs, which include Christmas carols, love-songs, solicitations for gifts and poems on contemporary events, are remarkable for their intricate interplay of rhyme and consonance and their musical quality.

Eos Ceiriog (ed. W. Davies, 2 vols, 1823); Gwath H. M. (ed. O. M. Edwards, 1902).

D. Jenkins, 'Rhai o Lawysgrifau H. M.' in The National Lib. of Wales Jour., VII (1951).

B.Re.

Moryson, or Morison, FYNES (*?Cadeby 1566; †1630), English traveller whose Itinerary, a sober, unimaginative, but detailed account of places visited, is a valuable record of contemporary conditions.

An Itinerary... Containing His Ten Yeares Travell Through... Germany, Bohmerland, Switzerland, Netherland, Denmarke, Poland, Italy, Turkey, France, Scotland, and Ireland (1617; repr. 4 vols, 1907–08; sel. ed. C. Hughes, Shakespeare's Europe, 1903).

B. Penrose, Urbane Travellers (1942); T. J. B. Spencer, Fair Greece Sad Relic (1954).

B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Moscherosch, JOHANN MICHAEL (*Willstädt, nr Strasbourg 7 III 1601; †Worms 4 IV 1669), German satirist and moralist. As a student at Strasbourg Moscherosch met M. Bernegger, Zinzendorf* and others who desired a German literary renaissance. His later life was unhappy. He suffered personal hardship and found no security in the various administrative posts which he occupied from 1630 until his death. But his Gesichte established his literary reputation and he was elected a member of the Fruchtbringende Gesellschaft in 1645. The first series of Gesichte is adapted from Quevedo's* Sueños; the second is largely original and contains two patriotic satires, outstanding for their time: Alamode Kehraus attacks extravagant fashions in dress, speech and manners; Soldatenleben, an indictment of the freebooting soldiers of the time, foreshadows Grimmelshausen's* Simplicissimus by its subject and picaresque treatment. Moscherosch's religious work, Insomnis Cura Parentum, reflects his strict Lutheranism.

Gesichte Philanders von Sittewald (1643; sel. ed. F. Bobertag, 1883); Insomnis Cura Parentum (1643; ed. L. Pariser, 1893); Patientia (MS ed. idem, 1897); Sex Centuriae Epigrammatum (1665).

L. Pariser, Beiträge zu einer Biographie von H. M. M. (diss. Munich, 1891); A. Bechtold, Kritisches Verzeichnis der Schriften J. M. M.s (1922); J. Cellarius, Die politischen Anschauungen J. M. M.s (diss. Frankfurt, 1925); E. Vogt, Die gegenhöfische Strömung in der deutschen Barockliteratur (1932); J. Koltermann, 'Neue Nachrichten über Vorfahren des Dichters M. und sein Leben' in Zschr. f. d. Gesch. d. Oberrheins, XLVI (1932); K. G. Knight, 'J. M. M.' in Mod. Lang. Rev. (1954); C. von Faber du Faur, 'J. M. M., der Geängstigte' in Euphorion, LI (1957).

K.G.K.

Moschion, Greek tragic poet (late 4th and early 3rd century B.C.). Titles include Themistocles and Men of Pherae, i.e. dramas on historical subjects (like the Gyges fragment discovered in 1949 which also has the strict and somewhat archaic versification found in the fragments of Moschion).

B. Snell, Fragmenta tragicorum Graecorum, I (1971).—T. B. L. Webster, Art and Literature in Fourth Century Athens (1956).

M.L.C. (S.A.B.)

Moschopulos: see Manuel Moschopulos.

Moschus (2nd century B.C.), Greek bucolic poet from Syracuse. His longest and best surviving poem is Europa; Runaway Eros is a neat little piece, and Megara may be his. Four further poems are also preserved.

A. S. F. Gow, Bucolici Graeci (1952) and The Greek Bucolic Poets (tr.; 1953); W. Bühler, Die Europa des M. (with comm.; 1960); T. Breitenstein, Recherches sur le poème Mégara (with comm.; 1966).

A.H.G.

Moschus, JOHN: see John Moschus.

Moser, HANS ALBRECHT (*Gorizia 7 IX 1882), Swiss novelist. Moser studied music at the Conservatories of Basle, Cologne and Berlin and then moved to Berne as a piano teacher. Deeply concerned for the future of civilization, he is a most insistent critic of the superficiality of modern life, describing and extolling the dignity of the 'infidel', of the man who refuses to accept the dictates of conventional thought and behaviour but instead adheres to a rigid standard of truthfulness and Christian love. A profusion of aphoristic comments gives his works insight and wisdom.

Geschichten einer eingeschnittenen Tafelrunde (1935); Alleingänger (1943); Vineta (1955); Regenbogen der Liebe (1959); Thomas Zweifel (1968).

J. Steiner, H. A. M. Zur Struktur seines dichterischen Werks (1966). H.B.

Möser, JUSTUS (*Osnabrück 14 XII 1720; †ibid. 8 I 1794), German historian, prominent in the administration of Osnabrück. His writings on local history are set against the broad German background. His national outlook commended him to STURM UND DRANG.

HISTORICAL: Osnabrückische Geschichte (1768); Patriotische Phantasien (1774-78).—Arminius (tragedy); 1749).—CRITICAL: Harlekin oder Verteidigung des Grotesk-Komischen (1761); Über die deutsche Sprache und Literatur (1787).—Sämtliche Werke (10 vols, 1842-44; sel. ed. K. Brandi, 1921).

F. Kreyssig, J. M. (1857); L. Rupprecht, J. M.s soziale und wirtschaftliche Anschauungen (1892); H. Schierbaum, M.s Stellung zur Literatur des 18. Jh. (1908); K. Brandi, M. (1944); L. Bäte, J. M. Advocatus patriae (1961). H.B.G.

Moses ben Maimon: see Maimonides.

Moses ben Nachman Gerondi: see Nachmanides.

Moses de León (*León c. 1250; †Arevalo 1305), Spanish Hebrew mystic. He wrote a number of works on CABALLAH under his own name (Ha-Nefesh ha-Hakhamah, 1608; Shegel ha-Qodesh, ed. A. W. Greenup, 1911), but his main contribution is the Zohar (1st ed., Mantua, 1560), purporting to have been written c. A.D. 100, but which is now believed by most scholars to have been written by Moses de León. This work, written in an artificial Aramaic based on that of the Targums (the ancient Bible translation), consists of over 19 distinct treatises, which add up to a commentary on the Pentateuch, Song of Songs and Ruth. It advances in a highly unsystematic but effective way a theosophic doctrine, which has exercised a profound influence on Jews, and also on Christians, until modern times.

Zohar (1st ed. Mantua, 1560).—Selections: Midreshe ha-Zohar (ed. N. S. Libowitz, 1933); Mishnat ha-Zohar (the whole book rearranged by subjects; ed. P. Lachover and I. Tishbi, 2 vols, 1949-61); The Zohar (tr. H. Sperling and M. Simon, 5 vols, 1949; about half of the entire book); Der Sohar (sel. and tr. E. Müller, 1932).

A. Franck, La Kabbale, ou la philosophie religieuse des Hébreux (Paris, 1843); A. E. Waiter, The Secret Doctrine in Israel (1913); The Kabbalah (rev. and enlarged tr. J. L. Sossnitz, New York, 1926; new ed., ibid., 1967); A. Bension, The Zohar in Moslem and Christian Spain (1932); G. G. Scholem, Major Trends in Jewish Mysticism (2nd ed. 1946). C.R.

Moses di Rieti: see Rieti, MOSES DI.

Moses of Chorene: see Movsēs Khorenatzi.

Mostacci, JACOPO (*Messina ?c. 1210; †?after 1262), Italian poet of the SICILIAN SCHOOL. Probably an official at the court of Frederick* II, he has been perhaps plausibly identified with an ambassador whom Frederick's son Manfred sent to Aragon in 1262. Five or six canzoni are ascribed to him and some correspondence sonnets on the nature of love.

Antologia dei primi secoli della letteratura italiana, II (ed. G. Lazzari, 1942); Crestomazia italiana dei primi secoli (ed. E. Monaci; 2nd ed. rev. F. Arese, 1955).—S. Santangelo, Le tenzoni poetiche nella letteratura italiana delle origini (1928); B. Nardi, Dante e la cultura medievale (2nd ed. 1949). K.F.

Mostaert, DANIEL (*Amsterdam 1590 or 1591; ∞1616 Maria Jansd.; †ibid. 1646), Dutch poet, writer and playwright; from 1622 secretary of Amsterdam. He frequented the MUIDERKRING and was friendly with the great poets of the Golden Age. Vondel* collaborated with him on the translation of Horace*.

Van't Saligh leven en tegens 't valsche beklagh over 't kort leven . . . (tr. of Seneca; 1631); Nederduytsche Secretaris ofte Zendbriefschrijver met een Tytel-boexken (1635); De moord der Onnoozelen (1639) and Marianne (1640; classicist plays).

J. Prinsen Jln. in Nieuw Nederl. Biographisch Woordenboek, X (1937). J.J.M.

Mota, ANRIQUE DA (fl. 1500), Portuguese satirist and poet. His poems were published in the Cancioneiro Geral (1516; see CANCIONEIROs). Written in dialogue form and full of witty characterization, they are in fact comic sketches and foreshadow the popular farces of Gil Vicente*, founder of the Portuguese theatre.

Cancioneiro Geral, IV (ed. A. J. Gonçalves Guimarães, 1917); Farsa do alfaiate (ed. J. Leite de Vasconcelos, 1924).

A. Crabbé Rocha, Esboços dramáticos no Cancioneiro Geral (1951). T.P.W.

Motoori NORINAGA (*Matsuzaka, Ise 21 VI 1730; ∞Tamiko 10 II 1762; †Kyoto 5 XI 1801), Japanese scholar, poet and writer. In 1752 he went to Kyoto to study medicine, returning to Matsuzaka in 1757 as a doctor. Soon after, attracted by the writings of Kamo Mabuchi, he started scholarly research and in 1763 produced his first work. For the rest of his life he wrote prolifically, publishing in all 55 books. Most famous of these was the Kojikiden (1764–96), an extensive commentary on the Kojiki*, and his commentaries on Japanese classical works are the basis of most later editions. His scholarly contributions cover all fields of learning. The influence of his writings was immense; he restored the prestige of classical Japanese literature; he attacked all forms of Chinese influence and defended traditional Japanese ways and beliefs; and he brought about a revival of Shintoism and of confidence in the imperial family that paved the way for the 1868 restoration. E.B.C.

Naobi no mitama (1771; Ger. tr. H. Stolte in Monumenta Nipponica, II, 1939); Mojigoe no kanazukai (1776); Kanji san on kō (1785; summary by J. R. McEwan, 'M.'s view of phonetics and linguistics' in Asia Major, new ser., I, 1949); Tamakatsuma (1794–1801; extracts tr. B. H. Chamberlain in Trans. Asiat. Soc. Japan, XII, 1885; other extracts tr. in Selections from Japanese Literature, ed. F. J. Daniels, 1959); Tamakushige (1790); Genji monogatari tama no ogushi (1796); Kuzubana (1803); Isonokami sasamegato (1816; extracts from this and prec. 3 tr. in R. Tsunoda et al., Sources of the Japanese Tradition, 1958).

E. M. Satow, 'The revival of pure Shintō' in Trans. Asiat. Soc. Japan, III (1874); O. Katō, 'The Shintō studies of Jiun and M.' in Monumenta Nipponica, I (1938); T. Muraoka, Studies in Shinto Thought (1964). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Motteux, PETER ANTHONY (*Rouen 18 II 1659/60; ∞Priscilla; †London 18 II 1717/18), English editor and translator who emigrated in 1685 from France. He edited The Gentleman's Journal (1692–94), wrote occasional verse and became prominent in the theatre as a dramatist and writer of masques and opera libretti. He revised and completed Urquhart's* translation of Rabelais (1694), translated Don Quixote (4 vols, 1700–03) and published a collection of short novels, A Banquet for Gentlemen and Ladies (1701).

R. N. Cunningham, 'Nine tales by M.' in Mod. Lang. Notes, XLVI (1931), P. A. M. (1933) and 'A bibliography of the writings of P. A. M.' in Proc. Oxford Biblio. Soc., III (1933); R. Wieder, P. M. et les débuts du journalisme . . . (1944).

B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Mo-tzū, 'MASTER MO', title of Mo Tī (*?c. 465;

†?c. 390 B.C.), Chinese philosopher. Mo-tzū's birth and death cannot be dated with certainty. He was a generation younger than Confucius* younger disciples. His doctrine of 'universal love' (i.e. without regard to relationships) was derived from the Confucian supreme virtue, 'love', but justified by the argument of its expediency. This rationalism dominated his theism (he believed in a personal moral deity) and his social thinking (he advocated the care of the governed by the governing within a rigid system and the abolition of aggressive war). It was at once the weakness of his ethics and, historically, his most important contribution, for the Mohist school introduced logic into Chinese philosophy.

The book Mo-tzū contains the work of the whole school (5th–3rd century B.C.), not of Mo-tzū alone, as well as some alien material. The present version lacks 18 chapters of that extant in the 1st century B.C. Much more would have been lost but for the book's inclusion in the Taoist canon.

Mê-ti: des Sozialethikers und seiner Schüler philosophische Werke (tr. A. Forke, 1922); The Ethical and Political Works of Motse (part. tr. Y. P. Mei, 1929).

Y. P. Mei, Motse, the Neglected Rival of Confucius (1934); further biblio. in W.-T. Chan, An Outline and an Annotated Bibliography of Chinese Philosophy (1969). A.R.D.

Mounier, EMMANUEL (*Grenoble 1 IV 1905; †Paris 22 III 1950), French philosopher and essayist. Mounier was trained as a philosopher but abandoned University teaching in order to devote himself, like his master Péguy*, to the defence of spiritual values and human individuality. He founded and edited the periodical Esprit (1932) and was the prime exponent of personalism—a doctrine based on a form of Christian socialism. He behaved with great courage during the Resistance and after the war continued to conduct a triple campaign against abstract idealism, Marxist materialism and atheistic existentialism. In this work he wore himself out and died prematurely.

Révolution personaliste et communautaire (1935); De la propriété capitaliste à la propriété humaine (1936); Manifeste au service du personalisme (1936); A Personalist Manifesto, tr. monks of St John's Abbey, 1938); L'affrontement chrétien (1944); Traité du caractère (1946); Introduction aux existentialismes (1947); La petite peur du XXe siècle (1948); Be Not Afraid, tr. C. Rowland, 1951); Le personalisme (1949).

Special no. of Esprit (1950); Éditions du Seuil, M. et sa génération (1956); C. Moix, La pensée d'E. M. (1960); L. Guissard, M. (1962); J. Conilh, E. M. (1966). M.G.; J.P.R.

Movsēs Khorenatzi (MOSES OF KHOREN), Armenian historian, traditionally called the Father of Armenian literature (Qerthoghahayr) and assigned to the 5th century, though modern research, basing itself mainly on anachronisms in the text of the History of Armenia bearing his name, suggests he belongs to the 8th century. The History states that he was sent by SS Sahak and Mesrop to study at Edessa, Alexandria, Constantinople, Athens etc., and that he wrote it at the request of the governor Sahak Bagratuni (481–482). He traces the history of the Armenians from their supposed ancestor Hayk among the close descendants of Japhet to the death of Sahak and Mesrop (c. 439), drawing on minor Greek and Syriac sources, Iranian legends and pagan Armenian ballads. He has a lively, if loose, style, and treats history as a branch of imaginative prose. Other works dubiously attributed to him are a Geography, the Book of Chreia, a Homily on the Transfiguration etc.

Patmuthium Hayotz (crit. ed., Tiflis, 1913; ed. with Lat. tr. W. and G. Whiston, London, 1736; Ital. tr. N. Tommaseo, 1850; Ger. tr. M. Lauer, 1869).—On dating: A. O. Sarkissian in Jour. Amer. Orient. Soc. (1940). C.J.F.D.

Mowat, FARLEY (*Belleville, Ontario 12 V 1921; ∞1947 Frances Elizabeth Thornhill), Canadian writer and popularizer whose books cover a wide range of material, including wild life, the problems of North American aborigines and the activities of explorers.

People of the Deer (1952); Lost in the Barrens (1956); Desperate People (1959); Serpent's Coil (1961); Never Cry Wolf (1963); Westvikings (1965). R.Su.

Mowatt, ANNA CORA (*Bordeaux, France 5 III 1819; ∞1834 James Mowatt, ∞1854 William Ritchie; †Twickenham, England 21 VII 1870), American actress, playwright and novelist. Her best play, Fashion; or Life in New York (1850), is an American comedy of manners. She wrote romantic novels of stage life.

NOVELS: The Fortune Hunter (1844); Mimic Life (1856); Twin Roses (1857).—Autobiography of an Actress (1854).

R. S. Hammer, A Daughter of Firenze (1924). H.L.C.

Mphahlele, EZEKIEL (*Pretoria 17 XII 1919), South African critic, novelist and short-story writer. Starting life as a cattle boy, he obtained a good education, becoming first a teacher, then a journalist. His post-graduate thesis, The African Image (1962), was the first critical work published by a black South African. He left South Africa in 1957, worked in various parts of Africa and now lives in the U.S.A.

SHORT STORIES: Man Must Live (1946); The Living and the Dead (1960); In Corner B (1967).—Down Second Avenue (autobiog.; 1959); The Wanderers (novel; 1971). U.La.

Mrożek, SŁAWOMIR (*Boręcina 21 VI 1930), Polish prose writer and playwright. His elegant and witty satirical short stories gained him wide popularity for their attacks on the bureaucratic provincialism of Polish life in the 1950s. He has become very well known internationally for his short plays which are deeply influenced by the drama of the absurd and the Polish tradition of the grotesque. His most ambitious play Tango (1965) seems dependent on the work of W. Gombrowicz*.

PROSE: Słoń (1957; The Elephant, tr. K. Syrop, New York, 1952); Deszcz (1962); Opowiadania (1964).—PLAYS: Utwory sceniczne (1963); Six Plays (tr. N. Bethell, New York, 1967). P.H.

Mrštk Brothers, ALOIS (*Jimramov 14 X 1861; †Brno 24 II 1925), and VILÉM (*Jimramov 14 V 1863; †Diváky 2 III 1912), Czech novelists. Two of Vilém's novels have gained a lasting place in Czech literature: a passionate and carefree evocation of spring-time and young love, Pohádka máje, and a sombre tragedy of Prague, Santa Lucia. The brothers collaborated in a number of works, notably Rok na vsi (1903–04), a chronicle of Moravian Slovak peasant life.

Spisy bratří Mrštků (coll. works of A. and V. M.; 14 vols, 1914–26).—F. X. Šalda, Duše a dílo (1913); V. Justl, Bratři M.ové (with biblio.; 1963).

R.A.

Mu'allagāt ('suspended odes'); by this title are known seven celebrated pre-Islamic Arabian poems by seven different poets. The choice was made by Hammad al-Rawiya, a famous rhapsodist who flourished in the latter half of the 8th century. The poems are by Imru' al-Qais, Tarafa, Zuhair*, Labid*, 'Amr ibn Kulthoum, 'Antar*, Hārith ibn Hillizah. The collection is sometimes enlarged by the inclusion of poems by A'sha*, Nābighah* and 'Abid ibn al-Abras. The original reason for the title is not quite certain; perhaps it means 'hung up' in a place of honour, in a metaphorical sense, i.e. distinguished. According to a legend (quite untrustworthy) they were so called from having been hung up in the Ka'ba on account of their merit and that this distinction was awarded by the judges at the fair of 'Ukāz.

The Seven Golden Odes of Pagan Arabia (tr. Lady A. Blunt, Eng. verses by W. S. Blunt, 1903).—A. J. Arberry, The Seven Odes (1957).

S.M.S. (R.O.)

Much, HANS (*Zechlin, Brandenburg 24 III 1880; †Hamburg 28 XI 1932), German writer and poet (partly in Low German), art historian, traveller and Professor of medicine.

Zwei Tage vor Damaskus (1912); Jerusalem. Reisebriefe (1913); Norddeutsche Backsteingotik (1917); Vom Sinn der Gotik (1923).—Denken und Schauen. Gedichte (1913); To Hus (1917); En

nedderdüitschen Doodendanz (1919); Der Vogel Phönix (1925).

F. Guggenheim, H. M. (1923).

G.C.

Mucha, Jiří (*Prague 12 III 1915), Czech novelist. The son of the painter Alphonse Mucha, about whom he wrote a study (A. M., tr. S. Jolly, 1966), Mucha has spent a good deal of his life abroad. He spent the period 1940–45 partly in England and partly with the Czechoslovak and British forces in various theatres of war. These experiences are reflected in his work, most effectively in his stories Problémy nadporučíka Knapa (1946; The Problems of Lieutenant Knap, tr. E. Osers, 1945) and Spálená setba (1948; Scorched Crop, tr. idem, 1950). His experiences in a forced labour camp in the 1950s gave rise to the moving and sensitive memoir Studené slunce (1968; Living and Partly Living, tr. E. Osers, 1967).

R.A.

Mudarrisi, Tāqī (*Tehran 1934), Persian novelist. He studied medicine in Tehran and practises in the U.S.A. He owes his fame to his first novel Yakuliya va Tanhā'i-i u (1956), set in Biblical times and discussing the question of good and evil in searching and lyrical terms. His Sharifian Sharifian (1965), a novel of social change and family crisis, shows a diversification of style and content.

H. Kamshad, Modern Persian Prose Literature (1966).

E.Y.

Múgica, RAFAEL (*Hernani, Guipúzcoa, 1911), prolific Spanish poet writing under the name of GABRIEL CELAYA. Múgica believes that poetry is an instrument, not an end in itself, and that it should argue and seek to convince.

Poesías completas (ed. V. Aleixandre, 1969).—Los espejos transparentes (1968).

P.-O. Seora, G. C. (1970).

J.E.V.

Muḥammad 'Abduh (*nr Tanṭā 1849; †Alexandria 11 VII 1905), Egyptian Arab modernist and religious reformer. First attracted to mysticism, he became a partisan of the reform of Islam through contact with the pan-Islamic modernist Jamāl al-Dīn al-Afghānī. He was banished 1881–84 because of his partisanship of 'Urābī Pasha, but in 1899 he became Mufti of Egypt, which gave him full scope for putting his reforms into practice. He exercised an immense influence on all subsequent literature owing to his rationalist interpretation of the Muslim religion and scriptures, which made it possible to adopt Western standards without abandoning Islam.

C.R.

Risālat al-Wārīdāt (1874); Risālat al-Tauḥīd (1897; Exposé de la religion Musulmane, tr. B. Michel and M. Abdel Razik, 1925; The Theology of Unity, tr. K. Cragg, 1966); Tafsīr al-Qur'ān (begun by M. 'A.; 10 vols, 1931).—Tārīkh al-ustādh al-imām (coll. works with biog.; ed. Muḥammad Ridā, 3 vols, 1908–31).

C. C. Adams, Islam and Modernism in Egypt (1933); M. U. Amin, Muhammad 'Abduh (Cairo, 1946); A. H. Hourani, Arabic Thought in the Liberal Age: 1798–1939 (1962); E. Kedourie, Afghani and Abduh (1966).

C.R. (M.M.B.)

Muḥammad-i Munavvar, 11th- and 12th-century Persian author. His Asrār al-Tauḥīd is the biography of the eminent mystic Abū Sa'id-i Abī'l-Khair, written in a simple and moving style.

Asrār al-Tauḥīd (intro. V. A. Zhukovsky, St Petersburg, 1899).

E.Y.

Muhammadu Na Birnin Gwari (*Birnin Gwari, Nigeria 1880), a prolific Hausa poet whose extant works are entirely religious homily. His best-known work is a Hausa versification, with the Gbari title Dunbulu (meaning unknown), a version of which is given in C. H. Robinson, Specimens of Hausa Literature (Cambridge, 1896). He is often regarded as the champion of the Hausa against Fulani misrule.

M.H.

Muhammadu Tukur (fi. Zamfara, Nigeria c. 1800), a scholar, holy man and companion of Usman* dan Fodio; he composed prose in Arabic, also two important Hausa religious homilies, Baḳin mari ('The Black Leg-Irons') and Sharifiya ('The Noble').

Wakokin wa'azi, III (Zaria, 1959).

M.H.

Muḥāsibī, Ḥārith (*Basra c. 781; †Baghdad 857), Arab mystic theologian. Born of a wealthy Magian father, he chose to live in poverty. He studied jurisprudence and theology at Baghdad, where he became a famous lecturer and preacher. Exiled by the orthodox to Kufa, he later returned to a secluded life in Baghdad.

His most important mystical works are written in the form of counsels given to a disciple in reply to questions. One such collection is prefaced by an autobiographical note. He also wrote a very graphic eschatological work depicting the Last Judgement and the horrors of hell. He laid great emphasis on self-examination and purification of the soul, and he combined a rigorously dialectical intellect with a fervid, almost naïve simplicity of faith.

Kitāb al-Ri'ayah lihuquq Allah wal qiyam biha ('Book of Observance of What Is Due to God and Abiding Therein'; crit. ed. M. Smith, 1940); Kitāb al-Sabr ('Book of Patience'; ed. O. Spies in Islamica, VI, 1934); Kitāb al-Tawahhum ('Book of Supposition'; crit. ed. A. J. Arberry, 1937).

M. Smith, An Early Mystic of Baghdad (best work, 1935); L. Massignon, Essai sur les origines du Lexique Technique de la Mystique Musulmane (1922) and La Passion d'al Hallaj (1922); A. H. Mahmoud, al-Muḥāsibī (1940).

W.A. el K. (R.W.J.A.)

Muhtashim of Kāshān (†1588), Persian poet of the Safavid period, best known for his religious odes and his elegies on Shi'ite martyrs.

Divān (Bombay, 1887).

E.Y.

Muir, EDWIN (*Deerness, Orkney 15 V 1887; ∞1919 Willa Anderson; †Cambridge 3 I 1959), Scottish poet and critic. He began as a clerk in Glasgow, became a journalist in London and then lived for several years on the Continent. He was director of the British Institute, Rome, 1949 and Warden of Newbattle Abbey College, Midlothian, 1950. With his wife, he translated the works of Feuchtwanger* and Kafka*. His poetry is subdued in tone but gravely metaphysical.

Collected Poems, 1921-58 (1960; 2nd ed. 1964).—PROSE: The Structure of the Novel (1928); John Knox (1929); Scottish Journey (1935); Scott and Scotland (1936); The Present Age, From 1914 (1939); Essays on Literature and Society (1949; rev. ed. 1965).—An Autobiography (1954).

P. H. Butter, E. M.: Man and Poet (1966); W. Muir, Belonging: A Memoir (1968).—Biblio. by E. Mellown (1964; 2nd ed. 1966).

G.W.C. (W.R.A.)

Mu'izzī, MUHAMMAD, AMĪR (*1048; †Marv 1147), Persian poet. He was attached to the court of the Seljuks, and became poet laureate to Sanjar (1118-57). In his poems, mainly panegyrics, he follows the rigorous style of the Ghaznavid poets rather than the more elaborate style of his own time.

Divān-i M. (intro. A. Eqbal, Tehran, 1939).

J. Rypka, History of Iranian Literature (1968).
E.Y.

Mukai KYORAI: see Kyorai.

Mulder, LODEWIJK, pseud. LODEWYK (*The Hague 9 IV 1822; ∞1851 Johanna A. de Villeneuve; †ibid. 14 V 1907), Dutch novelist, playwright and poet, until 1867 an army officer, then an inspector of primary schools. He belonged to the circle of De Nederlandsche Spectator, wrote an excellent historical novel, Jan Faassen (1856), a play, De kiesvereniging van Stellendijk (1880), and a witty extension to Vosmaer's* Londinias (1878).

Afdrukken van indrukken (with M. P. Lindo; 1854).—J. Gram in Levensber. Maatschappij Nederl. Letterk. (1907).
J.W.W.

Mulgrave, EARL OF: see Sheffield, JOHN.

Mulisch, HARRY KURT VICTOR (*Haarlem 29 VII 1927), Dutch novelist, story writer and playwright. Until recent years, when he became engaged in political writing in defence of the Cuban and other revolutionary movements, he did not belong to any special group. His prose is a vivid, now lyrical, now realistic, evocation of unreal situations; rich in symbolism, it sometimes amounts to a kind of modern mythology. The background to his abundant fantasies is extremely varied (India, Rome, China and Paris in one symbolical novel). He also wrote an interesting report of the Eichmann trial, a book on the Amsterdam Provo movement, autobiographical sketches and a play about a medieval heretic.

Tussen hamen en aambeeld (1952); Archibald Strohalm (1952); Chantage op het leven (1953); De diamant (1954); Het mirakel (1955); Het zwarte licht (1956); De versierde mens (1957); Het stenen bruidsbed (1959; Eng. tr. Adrienne Dixon, 1962); Voer voor psychologen (1961).—PLAYS: Tanchelijn (1960); De knop (1960).—ESSAYS AND REPORTAGE: De zaak 40/61 (1961); Bericht aan de rattenkoning (1966); Wenken voor de Jongste Dag (1967); Het woord bij de daad (1968).

J. H. Donner, 'Het stenen bruidsbed' in Podium (1960-61); Hella Haasse, Leestekens (1965); R. A. Cornets de Groot, De zevensprong (1967); Dr. J. van Ham, H. M. (1969).—Nol Gregoor, In gesprek met H. M. (interview; 1965).
J.J.O.

Müller, FOOKE HOISSEN (*Aurich 15 VII 1798; †Berlin 8 X 1856), East Frisian poet. Occasionally successful in melodious small poems, especially those spiced with irony and humour.

Dönjes un Vertellsels in Brookmerlander Taal (1857); Tjark Allena (ed. O. Bremer, 1933).

C. Borchling in Niederdt. Jahrb., XXVIII (1902); O. Bremer, ibid. (1935); O. Terzieff, F. H. M. und seine Dichtung (diss. Hamburg, 1937).
G.C.

Müller, FRIEDRICH, 'MALER MÜLLER' (*Kreuznach 13 I 1749; †Rome 23 IV 1825), German poet and dramatist. A poor country boy, Müller was discovered to have a gift for drawing and was trained at Zweibrücken. In 1775, while a successful painter at Mannheim, he met Goethe*. He went to Rome in 1778 and never returned. He acted as a guide to visitors. In his last years he received a Bavarian pension.

Müller wrote chiefly in the years 1774-78. His best works are his last two prose idylls, slightly sentimental yet convincing pictures of rural life.

IDYLLS: Der Faun (1775); Der erschlagene Abel (1775); Der Satyr Mopsus (1775); Die Schafschur (1776); Das Nusskern (1774; pub. 1811).—TRAGEDIES: Die Pfalzgräfin Genoveva (1775-78; pub. 1811); Fausts Leben dramatisiert (1778).—Maler Müllers Werke (3 vols, 1811); sel. ed. M. Oeser (2 vols, 1916); ed. K. Freye, Sturm und Drang (1911).

B. Seuffert, Maler Müller (1871); W. Oeser, Maler Müller (1925).
H.B.G.

Müller, NICLAS (*Langenau nr Ulm 15 XI 1809; †New York 15 VIII 1875), German-American poet.

Involved in the Baden revolution of 1848–49, he went to America in 1853.

Lieder (1837); Neuere Lieder und Gedichte (1867); Das Thränenparadies ('The Paradise of Tears') tr. in W. C. Bryant, Collected Poems (1883); Zehn gepanzerte Sonnete ('Ten Sonnets in Armor') tr. C. T. Brooks in P. A. Shelley, 'N. M., German American poet and patriot' in Studies in Honor of John Albrecht Walz (1941). E.R.

Müller, WILHELM (*Dessau 7 X 1794; †ibid. 30 IX 1827), German lyric poet. He moved in Berlin literary circles, earned the title 'Griechen-Müller' for his philhellenic verse, whilst numbers of his simpler lyrics survive as songs by Schubert (Müllerlieder, Winterreise), Brahms, and others.

Rom, Römer und Römerinnen (2 vols, 1820); Siebenundsiebzig Gedichte aus den hinterlassenen Papieren eines reisenden Waldhornisten (2 vols, 1821–24); Lieder der Griechen (5 vols, 1821–24).—Vermischte Schriften (ed. G. Schwab, 5 vols, 1830); Gedichte (ed. J. T. Hatfield, 1906); Tagebuch und Briefe (ed. P. S. Allen and J. T. Hatfield, 1903).

P. S. Allen, W. M. and the German Volkslied (diss., 1901); H. Lohre, W. M. als Kritiker und Erzähler (1927); A. Wirth, Studien zu W. M. (1928). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Müller, WILHELM, pseud. FRATER JOCUNDUS (*Heppenheim, Hessen 9 IV 1845; †1869 Flora Kuntz; †ibid. 1931), German-American author, teacher and journalist.

NOVELS: Der Arbeiterdirektor (1876); Dichter und Kavalier (1887).—VERSE: Schabade, Leben und Taten des Fritz Schabig (1871); Lustige Emigranten (1882); Am Wege gepflückt (1888).—DRAMA: Im gelobten Lande (1882); Roger Williams (1883); Kenilworth (opera; 1893); Hagar (opera; tr. 1894).—VARIOUS: Amerikanisches Volksbildungswesen (1909); Das religiöse Leben in Amerika (1911); Benjamin Franklin (1915).

H. H. Fick, 'W. M.' in Monatshefte für dt. Unterricht, XXIII (Wisc., 1931); W. Guyot, 'W. M. writer' in Amer.-Ger. Rev., XXVIII (1962). E.R.

Müllner, GOTTFRIED ADOLF (*Langendorf nr Weissenfels 18 X 1774; †Weissenfels 11 VI 1829), German playwright. A nephew of G. A. Bürger*, Müllner was a lawyer in Weissenfels, where he founded a private theatre. After a number of comedies he wrote a fate-tragedy, Der 29. Februar (1812), modelled upon Werner's* Der 24. Februar. Die Schuld (1815; Eng. tr. J. Cockle, 1888) was even more successful. These three plays set a fashion which swamped the theatres for many years with worthless imitations.

Vermischte Schriften (2 vols, 1824–26); Dramatische Werke (7 vols, 1828; supp. 1830).

J. Minor, Die Schicksalstragödie (1883); G. Koch, A. M. als Theaterkritiker, Journalist und literarischer Organisator (1939).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Multatuli, pseud. of EDUARD DOUWES DEKKER (*Amsterdam 2 III 1820; †1846 Everdine van Wijnbergen, †1875 Mimi Hamminck Schepel; †Nieder-Ingelheim 19 II 1887), Dutch novelist and essayist, the most brilliant prose writer in Holland in the 19th century. In 1838 he went to Indonesia where he held various posts in the colonial service. In 1856 he was appointed Assistant Resident of Lebak in West Java. After four weeks in office he brought a charge of corruption against the Regent, one of the native princes under his jurisdiction. When the Government did not support his charge he resigned angrily. He returned to Europe, travelled through France and Germany, and finally settled in Brussels where in 1859 he wrote his masterpiece Max Havelaar. The book sharply attacks Dutch colonial policy, makes an impassioned plea for better treatment for the Javanese and also offers an explanation of Dekker's actions in Lebak. There is a great variety of styles ranging from the serious to the comic, from matter-of-fact narration to lyricism and satire. Its composition seems chaotic, yet beneath the surface lies a very firm construction which is designed to persuade the reader to accept Max Havelaar and all he stands for. The book had a profound influence, not only on literature, but also on colonial policy. It made Dekker famous overnight but never brought him rehabilitation as an administrator. Problems of power and authority became the central themes of his later work. In Minnebrieven, a sequel to Max Havelaar, he included nine Geschiedenissen van gezag in which he questioned the traditional views on authority. In 1865 he began to publish his Ideën, eventually collected in seven volumes. They contain essays, sketches, aphorisms, a full-length novel (Woutertje Pieterse) and a play (Vorstenschool). In the Ideën Dekker put on record his opinions on a wide range of subjects (politics, religion, education, government, literature), and they show him as a completely independent, undogmatic, iconoclastic and highly intelligent critic of the constituted order of things. Though always a controversial writer, he acquired a large following and exercised a lasting influence on the thought and style of the next generation.

Max Havelaar of de Koffij-veilingen der Nederlandsche Handelmaatschappij (2 vols, 1860; Eng. tr. A. Nahuys, 1868; tr. W. Siebenhaar with intro. D. H. Lawrence, 1927; tr. R. Edwards with repr. of intro. by Lawrence, 1967; new ed. from the MS, G. Stuiveling, 1949); Indrukken van den dag (2 vols, 1860); Minnebrieven (1861); Wijs mij de plaats waar ik gezaaid heb (1861); Over vrijen arbeid in Nederlandsch Indie (1862); Ideën (7 vols, 1862–77); De Bruid Daarboven. Toneelspel in vijf bedrijven (1864); Nog eens: Vrije arbeid in Nederlandsch Indie (1870; tr. N. Steelink, 1948); Duizenden-eenige hoofdstukken over specialiteiten (1871); Millioenen-studiën (2 vols, 1872-73); Vorstenschool (in Ideën, IV, 1872); De geschiedenis van Woutertje Pieterse (Eng. tr. H. Evans, 1904; ed. M. Hamminck Schepel, 1890; ed. N. A. Donkersloot, 1938; ed. G. Stuiveling, 1950; ed. H. A. Ett, 1958).

Verzamelde Werken van M. (10 vols, 1888-89), Brieven van M. (10 vols, 1890-96) and Briefwisseling tusschen M. en S. E. W. Roorda van Eysinga (1907; all ed. M. Hamminck Schepel); Volledige Werken (ed. G. Stuiveling, 1950-; I-X pub.); M. en zijn zoon. Brieven van M. aan J. van der Hoeven (ed. M. ter Braak, 1937); Reisbrieven aan Mimi (1942) and Brieven van M. aan Mr. C. Vosmaer e. a. (1942; both ed. J. Pée); Briefwisseling tusschen M. en G. L. Funke (ed. G. L. Funke, 1947); Brieven aan J. Waltman (1947) and Twee brieven uit Menado (1948; both ed. H. A. Ett).

C. Busken Huet, 'M.' in Litterarische Fantasiën en Kritieken, II, XV, XVI, XXII (1881-88); A. J. [Lodewijk van Deyssel], M. (1891; 2nd rev. ed. 1922); A. S. Kok, Multatuliana (incl. L. D. Petit, 'Bibliografisch overzicht der geschriften van M.' 1903); J. Prinsen, M. en de Romantiek (1909); J. B. Meerkerk, M. (2nd rev. ed. 1912); J. de Gruyter, Het leven en de werken van E. D. D. (2 vols, 1920); J. Saks, E. D. D., zijn jeugd en Indische jaren (1937); J. and A. Romein, 'M.' in Erflaters van onze beschaving (1940); G. Stuiveling, 'Van Douwes Dekker tot Max Havelaar' in Rekenschap (1941) and M. en de welsprekendheid (1952); H. A. Ett, De betekenis van M. voor onzen tijd (1947); A. J. de Mare, M.-literatuur. Lijst der geschriften van en over M. (1948); H. H. J. de Leeuwe, M., het drama en het toneel (1949); E. du Perron, De Man van Lebak (rev. ed. 1949); P. Spigt, De ballingschap van M., 1865-1868 (1955); G. Brom, M. (1958); P. King, 'M.'s psyche' in Mod. Lang. Rev., LIII (1958); H. A. Gomperts, 'M.' in De Schok der Herkenning (1959); R. Nieuwenhuys, 'De Zaak van Lebak' in Tussen Twee vaderlanden (1959); R. P. Meijer, Max Havelaar 1860-1960 (1960; in Eng.); F. W. Driessen, M., aanklager, strijder, realist; zijn leven, werk en betekenis (1960); 'Max Havelaar—Batavus Droogstoppel' in De Nieuwe Stem, XV.6-7 (1960); P. H. Dubois, G. Stuiveling, D. de Vries et al., 100 jaar Max Havelaar; essays over M. (1962); J. J. Oversteegen, 'De organisatie van Max Havelaar' in Merlyn, I (1963); A. L. Sötemann, De structuur van Max Havelaar (2 vols, 1966). R.P.M.

Mumford, LEWIS (*Flushing, Long Is., N.Y. 19 X 1895; ∞1921 Sophia Wittenberg), American critic. In Sticks and Stones (1924) he interpreted American culture in terms of its architecture and in The Golden Day (1926) in relation to its literature. His later works analyse the culture of cities and make a plea for moral regeneration through closer family ties and relation to the soil.

The Story of Utopias (1922); Herman Melville (1929); The Brown Decades, a Study of the Arts in America, 1865-1895 (1931); Technics and Civilization (1934); The Culture of Cities (1938); The Conduct of Life (1951); From the Ground Up (1956); The Transformation of Man (1956); The City in History (1961); The Myth of the Machine (1967); The Urban Prospect (1968).

H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

Munday, ANTHONY (*London 1553; ∞?1583; ibid. 10 VIII 1633), English poet and playwright. The son of a draper, Munday began his writing career with anti-Catholic pamphlets. He became an actor and began writing for the stage about 1584. He is best known for his 'Robin Hood' plays (the Downfall and Death of Robert Earl of Huntingdon). These represent a transition from the 'folk play' to more professional and sophisticated drama; they were very popular. Munday wrote or collaborated in a number of other plays, and also wrote pageants for the City. (He was regarded as 'the City dramatist'.) His ballads, for which he was famous, are now lost. He also translated popular romances, and was in general one of the best known of the earlier Elizabethan 'hack' writers. Jonson* satirized him as 'Antonio Balladino' in The Case is Altered.

PLAYS: John a Kent and John a Cumber (acted c. 1594); The Downfall of Robert Earl of Huntingdon (1601); The Death of Robert Earl of Huntingdon (1601; with Chettle).—TRANSLATIONS: Palladine of England (1588); Amadis de Gaule (?1590); Palmerin of England (1596-1602).

C. Turner, A. M.: an Elizabethan Man of Letters (1928). J.B.B.

Mundt, THEODOR (*Potsdam 19 IX 1808; ∞1839 Luise Mühlbach; †Berlin 30 XI 1861), German critic and novelist, with Wienbarg* a theorist of Young Germany. An insignificant writer, he shared with other Young Germans a veneration for the suicidal Charlotte Stieglitz.

NOVELS: Madonna (1835); Thomas Münzer (3 vols, 1841); Graf Mirabeau (4 vols, 1858); Robespierre (3 vols, 1859).—MISCELLANEOUS: Moderne Lebenswirren (1834); Charlotte Stieglitz (1835); Die Kunst der deutschen Prosa (1837; facs. ed. 1969); Spaziergänge und Weltfahrten (3 vols, 1838 ff.); Aesthetik (1845; facs. ed. 1966).

O. Draeger, T. M. und seine Beziehungen zum Jungen Deutschland (1909); E. C. Cumings, Women in the Life and Work of M. (1936).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Munk, KAJ HARALD LEININGER (*Maribo 13 I 1898; ∞1929 Elise Marie Jørgensen; †Hørbylunde, nr Silkeborg 4 I 1944), Danish playwright, poet and essayist. A parson on the western coast of Jutland, he had his first play produced in 1928, and a few years later he was regarded as Denmark's leading dramatist. An early sympathy with Fascist dictatorship vanished completely, and he became a daring and violent spokesman for the Resistance. Several of his books were banned, he was officially silenced, and in 1944 was murdered (by the Germans) in a ditch not far from his vicarage. He is a dramatist of unusual qualities, and some of his plays, such as En Idealist (1928)—about Herod the Great; Ordet (1932)—about the reality of miracles; Han sidder ved Smeltediglen (1938)—inspired by the persecution of the Jews; and the small one-act play, Før Cannae (1943)—about power versus humanism—are landmarks in the history of Danish drama.

PLAYS: I Brændingen (1929); Cant (1931); De Udvalgte (1933); Sejren (1936); Pilatus (1937); Fugl Fønix (1939); Egelykke (1940); Niels Ebbesen (1942); Ewalds Død (1943); Døden (1946); Alverdens-Urostifterne (1947).—VERSE: Os bærer den himmelske Glæde (1934); Knaldperler (1936); Tempelvers (1939); Navigare Necesse (1941); Sværg det, Dreng (1941); Det unge Nord (1942); Vers (1943); Den blaa Anemone (1943); 8 nye Digte (1944); Den Skæbne ej til os. Sidste Digt (1945); Saml dig, Norden (1945); Et norsk Digt om Norge (1946).—ESSAYS, TRAVEL BOOKS AND VARIOUS: Vedersø-Jerusalem retur (1934); 10 Oxford-Snapshots (1936); Liv og glade Dage (1936); Himmel og Jord (1938); Dette Dødsens Legeme (1938); Ved Babylons Floder (1941); By the Waters of Babylon, tr. J. M. Jensen, (1945); Med Ordets Sværd (1942); Med Sol og megen Glæde (1942); Tre Prædikener (1943); I Guds Bismær (1946); Saa fast en Borg (1946); Ansigtet (1947).—MEMOIRS: Foraaret saa sagte kommer (1942).—Mindeudgave (9 vols, 1948-49).—K. M., Playwright, Priest and Patriot (tr. and ed. R. P. Keigwin, 1944).—PLAYS IN ENGLISH: Scandinavian Plays of the 20th Century (1945); The Norseman, Nos 1 and 5 (1949); Five Plays (tr. R. P. Keigwin, 1953); Contemporary Danish Plays (1955).

Bo Bojesen Rud, K. M. (1938); O. Palsbo, K. M. (1940); H. H. Siegmundfeldt, K. M., en Mindetale (1944); M. Neiiendam, Præsten K. M. (1945) and K. M. som Forfatter (1945); Alf Henriques, K. M. (1945); E. Neergaard, Vildt afsted over himmel og jord (1945); O. Marcussen, K. M. Bibliografi (1945); Finn H. Blædel, K. M. En Bibliografi (1945); N. Nøjgaard, K. M. Digter og Præst (1945) and K. M. Papirer (1948); O. Geismar, Om Mennesket K. M. (1945); G. Albeck, K. M. (1946); Bogen om K. M., skrevet af hans Venner (1946); H. Brix, —hurtig svandt den lyse Sommer (1946); A. Drewsen Christensen, K. M. paa Tomandshaand (1947); H. Mogensen, K. M. på Teatret (1953); S. Holm, K. M. (1961).—R. P. Keigwin, 'K. M. and his plays' in Drama (1949) and intro. to Five Plays by K. M. (1953).

E.B.

Muñoz Seca, PEDRO (*Puerto de Santa María, Cádiz 20 II 1881; †Madrid 28 XI 1936), Spanish playwright. With him the género chico degenerates into astracán: plays of absurd, comic situations, loaded with repartee. However, La venganza de Don Mendo (1918) is a superb verse parody of classic tragedy, and Los extremeños se tocan (1926) a most original satire of musical comedy. He was assassinated in the Civil War.

El contrabando (1904); Usted es Ortiz (1927); La oca (1931).—Obras completas (7 vols, repr. 1969).

J. Montero Alonso, P. M. S. (1940).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Munro, HECTOR HUGH: see Saki.

Munro, NEIL (*Inverary 3 VI 1864; †Helensburgh 22 XII 1930), Scottish novelist and poet. He became a law clerk, then took up newspaper work and was editor of the Glasgow Evening News 1918-27. He wrote romantic novels where absorbing interest of theme is mated with the ancient dignity of the Highlander and his speech. His poetry at its best has an impressively melancholy lilt. As 'Hugh Foulis' he created 'Para Handy', a classic figure of shrewd Highland humour.

NOVELS: John Splendid (1898); Gilian the Dreamer (1899); Doom Castle (1901); Children of Tempest (1903); The New Road (1914).—HUMOROUS: Erchie (1904); The Vital Spark (1906); The Daft Days (1907).—The Poetry of N. M. (1931).—The Brave Days (papers; with biog. intro. G. Blake, 1931).

G.W.C. (W.R.A.)

Munster, DIRC COELDE VAN (*Münster, Westphalia c. 1435; †after 1502), Dutch poet and writer. Erasmus*, among others, praised him as a scholarly, industrious and holy Franciscan. He was active as a reformer of monasteries and a preacher, especially in the southern Netherlands. In 1492 the Archbishop of Cologne appointed him predicator generalis in his diocese. Most famous among his contemporaries was his Kerstenspiegel (1470), the first catechism in Dutch. His Sermoenen are outstanding. He is also the author of at least one excellent spiritual love poem Och edel stiele wilt mercken; he may have been the anthologist of the oldest printed book of spiritual songs in the Dutch language, Suwerlijc Boecxken (1508). J.J.M.

Christenspiegel (ed. Cl. Drees, 1954); Suwerlijc Boecxken (ed. J. J. Mak, 1957).

W. Schmitz, Het aandeel der minderbroeders in onze middeleeuwse literatuur (1936); St. Axters in Geschiedenis van de vroomheid in de Nederlanden, III (1956).

A.v.E.

Muntaner, RAMON (*Peralada 1265; †Ibiza 1336), author of one of the four main Catalan chronicles. He was a soldier for most of his life, taking part in the Catalan expedition of the almogàvers to Greece and the conquest of Sicily. Later he settled in Valencia, and at 60 wrote the chronicle based on his memories. It covers half a century and the reigns of six Catalan sovereigns personally known to him. The outstanding quality of Muntaner as a chronicler is his loyalty to his King and country. His narrative is vivid and enthusiastic, the style approaching that of the novel of adventure.

Expedició dels Catalans a Orient (abbr. ed. with notes L. N. d'Olwer, 1926); Crònica (9 vols, 1927–52; The Chronicle of M., tr. Lady Goodenough, 1920). J.M.B.i R. (G.W.R.)

Munthe, AXEL (PUCK) (*Oskarshamn 31 X 1857; †Stockholm 11 II 1949), Swedish physician and author. Munthe's best-known book is his autobiographical Story of San Michele (1929; Swed. version, 1930), originally written in English and subsequently translated into 44 languages. He also wrote a number of travel sketches and essays dealing with his varied and cosmopolitan life.

Red Cross and Iron Cross (1917); En gammal bok om människor och djur (1931); Memories and vagaries (1908; 3rd enlarged ed. 1930).

Boken om A. M., Capri och San Michele (ed. A. Andrén, 1957). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Muoth, GIACHEN CASPAR (*Breil 29 IX 1844; †Chur 6 VII 1906), Ræto-Romansch poet. His publications include historical studies and a considerable number of lyrics and particularly epic poems, which reveal a personality of scarcely restrained vigour and power; he abandons himself completely to his own surging rhythms and the images which arise from them. The chief source of his inspiration is the struggle of the free peasantry to defend its liberties against internal oppressors and foreign intruders—which he praises in the romantic grandiloquence of his historical ballads; then the idyllic, but hard, life of the peasant, which he describes with evident relish with the full detail of epic treatment.

Poesias in Annalas da la Soc. Retorum., XXII (1908); Ovras (ed. L. Cagianut, 1931); La poesia de G. C. M. (centenary ed.; 1945).

C. Decurtins, 'G. C. M.' in Igl Ischi, I (1901); F. Camathias, 'La poesia de G. C. M.', ibid., XIV (1912); G. B. Derungs, 'Vita de G. C. M.' in Annalas da la Soc. Retorum., XXII (1908); A. Cahannes, 'G. C. M.', ibid., LIX (1946); F. D. Vieli, 'G. C. M.' in Archivum Romanicum, III (1919); P. Tuor, 'Prof G. C. M.' in Ischi, XXXII (1947); R. R. Bezzola in The Curly-Horned Cow (1971; with text and tr. of a poem). R.R.B.

Murasaki SHIKIBU, pseud. (*c. 978; ∞998 Fujiwara no Nobutaka [†1001]; †?1031), Japanese novelist, diarist and poet. Her real name is unknown, except that she belonged to the powerful Fujiwara clan. She lived most of her life in close contact with the Emperor's court at Kyoto. After a happy but short married life, in 1005 she entered the service of the Empress Akiko, in which she appears to have remained until her death.

Her main work, Genji monogatari (The Tale of Genji), in 54 books or sections, is probably the greatest Japanese novel. It is a long story of court life, told in a polished style, which at the same time is poetic and full of sensitivity, reflecting every gradation of emotion in all the characters depicted. Its plot is complex, and its treatment realistic. But in keeping with the tradition of the court, reflected in contemporary poetry, the tempo is quiet and reflective; dramatic scenes, vigorous action and startling or terrifying events are few. The novel describes the life and loves of Prince Genji, an elegant and talented noble. It is not certain when it was written: some authorities ascribe it to 1001–04, others to 1005–08; but its composition may have been spread over up to fifteen years starting in 1001. The translation by Arthur Waley* (6 vols, 1925–33; new 1-vol. ed. 1952) has become an English classic.

Her diary, Murasaki Shikibu nikki, covering the years 1007–10, throws an intimate light on her character: although a series of disconnected jottings, it has much literary merit. Murasaki was also well known as a poet: her poems are to be found in the above works, in Murasaki Shikibu kashū, and in later anthologies. E.B.C.

GENJI MONOGATARI: Le G. M.: introduction et traduction du livre I (tr. C. Haguenauer, 1959); Die schönsten Liebesgeschichten des Prinzen G. (tr. H. E. Herlitschka, 1963); Die Geschichte vom Prinzen G. (tr. O. Benl, 2 vols, 1966).—'The Diary of M. S.' (tr. A. E. Omori and Kochi Doi in Diaries of Court Ladies of Old Japan, 1920, repr. 1961; extract in Anthology of Japanese Literature, ed. D. L. Keene, 1955).

J. M. Maki, 'Lady M. and the G. M.' in Monumenta Nipponica, III (1940); O. Benl, 'Der Schicksalsbegriff im G.-m.' in Nachrichten der Gesellschaft für Natur- und Völkerkunde Ostasiens, LXXVII (1955); A. Oyama, 'How was the G. M. written?' in Acta Asiatica, II (1961); I. I. Morris, The World of the Shining Prince (1964); E. R. Miner, 'Some thematic and structural features of the G. M.' in Monumenta Nipponica, XXIV.1–2 (1969). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Muratori, LUDOVICO ANTONIO (*Vignola 21 X 1672; †Modena 23 I 1750), Italian scholar; priest; a doctor of law; librarian of the Biblioteca Ambrosiana, Milan (1695) and archivist at the Estense court, Modena (1700); the founder of modern Italian historiography and a central figure in the intellectual ferment of pre-Illuminist Italy. Muratori published the Rerum Italicarum scriptores (I–XXVII, 1723–38; XXVIII, 1751)—a vast collection of medieval chronicles, poems, laws, letters and inscriptions—and the Antiquitates

Italice medii aevi (6 vols, 1738–43), 75 dissertations elucidating the customs and institutions of the same period. Other works include Antichità Estensi (2 vols, 1717; 1740), Della carità cristiana (1723), the Annali d'Italia (12 vols, 1744–49)—a popular history from the beginning of the Christian era, Dei difetti della giurisprudenza (1742), Della pubblica felicità (1749), the Epistolario and various important treatises on aesthetics: Della perfetta poesia italiana (1706), Riflessioni sopra il buon gusto (1708) and Della forza della fantasia umana (1745).

Opere di L. A. M. (ed. G. Falco and F. Forti, 2 vols, 1964; bio-biblio. note).—Scritti inediti (ed. C. Ricci, 1880); Scritti autobiografici (ed. T. Sorbelli, 1950); Scritti politici postumi (ed. D. Donati, 1950); Epistolario (ed. M. Campori, 14 vols, 1901–22).—Opere varie (36 vols, 1767–80).

G. F. Soli Muratori, Vita del proposto L. A. M. (1756).—G. Bertoni, L. A. M. (1926); Miscellanea di studi muratoriani (3 vols, 1933, 1951, 1963); G. Cavazzuti, L. A. M. (1950); F. Forti, L. A. M. fra antichi e moderni (1953); M. Fubini, Dal M. al Baretti (1954); S. Bertelli, Erudizione e storia in L. A. M. (1960); G. F. Falco, 'L. A. M. e il preilluminismo' in La cultura illuministica in Italia (rev. ed. M. Fubini, 1964).—T. Sorbelli, Bibliografia Muratoriana (2 vols, 1943–44).

M.W.

Muraton, PAVEL PAVLOVICH (*1881; †1950), Russian short-story writer and essayist writing principally about art. He was one of the brilliant team of men responsible for the aesthetic education and reorientation of the Russian intelligentsia between 1890 and 1914.

Fra Angelico (tr. E. Law-Gisico, 1929); Fr. trs: L'ancienne peinture russe (1925); Les Icones russes (1927); Trente-cinq primitifs russes (1931).

J.L.

Murdoch, IRIS (*Dublin 15 VII 1919; ∞1956 John Oliver Bayley), English philosopher turned novelist, whose work is notable for its wit, intricacy, imagination and narrative power, seen at their best in The Bell (1958) and A Severed Head (1961). The Red and the Green (1965) is a more realistic story of an Anglo-Irish family on the fringe of the Easter Rising of 1916.

Under the Net (1954); The Flight From the Enchanter (1956); The Unicorn (1963); The Time of the Angels (1966); The Nice and the Good (1968); A Fairly Honourable Defeat (1970).—Sartre, Romantic Rationalist (1953); The Sovereignty of Good (1970).

A. S. Byatt, Degrees of Freedom (1965); R. Rabinovitz, I. M. (1968).

W.R.A.

Murdoch, WALTER LOGIE FORBES (*Pitsligo, Scotland 17 IX 1874; †Perth 30 VII 1970), Australian essayist. He arrived in Australia in 1884, and was Professor of English at the University of Western Australia (1912–39). He combines unpedantic scholarship with a comprehension of the contemporary scene, and humour is balanced with a moralistic seriousness.

Collected Essays (1938). F.T.M. (A.M.G.)

Mure, SIR WILLIAM (*Rowallan, Ayrshire 1594; ∞c. 1615 Anna Dundas; †?1657), Scottish poet. He translated Boyd's Hecatombe Christiana in verse (1628) and wrote a fine version of the Psalms, The True Crucifixe for True Catholickes (1629).

The History of the House of Rowallan (pub. 1825).—Works (ed. W. Tough, 1898). J.K.

Muret (MURETUS), MARC-ANTOINE (*Muret, Limoges 12 IV 1526; †Rome 4 VI 1585), French scholar, resident in Italy after 1555. Intimate with the poets of the PLÉIADE, he was celebrated for his Latin style.

Variae lectiones (Venice, 1559); Opera (ed. D. Ruhnken, 4 vols, 1789).

C. Dejob, M.-A. M. (1881); M. Pattison, Essays, I (1889). D.H.

Murger, HENRY (*Paris 22 III 1822; †ibid. 28 I 1861), French novelist, whose realistic accounts of the hand-to-mouth existence of artists and writers in the Paris Latin Quarter created a legend. His Scènes de la vie de Bohême (The Bohemians of the Latin Quarter, tr. E. Marriage and J. Selwyn, 1901) first appeared serially (1847–49). Successfully dramatized as La vie de Bohême (1849), they provided the libretto for Puccini's and Leoncavallo's operas (1896–97).

Le pays latin (1852); Les buveurs d'eau (1855); Le sabot rouge (1858).

G. Montorgueil, H. M., romancier de la Bohême (1929); A. Cabanès, Autour de la vie de bohême (1938); A. Warnod, La vraie Bohême de H. M. (1947); R. Baldick, The First Bohemian, The Life of H. M. (1961). T.W.

Murn, JOSIP (pseud. ALEKSANDROV) (*Ljubljana 4 III 1879; †ibid. 18 VI 1901), Slovene poet whose instantaneous lyrical pictures reflect in contrasting lights the pride of creation and the inextricable deadlock of life from which only resignation or despair will bring release. Of all poets of the Slovene modern period he has had the strongest influence on succeeding generations up to the present day.

Aleksandrov, Pesmi in romance (ed. with biog. I. Prijatelj, 1903); J. M.-A.-A. izbrani spisi (sel. works; 1933); Zbrano delo (coll. works; 2 vols, 1954). A.S. (tr. H.Lc.)

Murner, THOMAS (*Oberehnheim, Alsace 1475; †ibid. 1537), German satirist. The greatest 16th-century Catholic satirist, Murner became a Franciscan Friar (1490), wandered restlessly through the Universities of Europe, was turned out of Strasbourg and Lucerne by the Lutheran Reformers, and died a priest in his home village. In his early satires (Narrenbeschwörung, 1512; Schelmenzunft, 1512; Geuchmatt, 1519; Mühle zu Schwindelsheim, 1515) he attacks social and Church abuses in the style of Brant's* Narrenschiff, but surpassing Brant in his inventiveness, power, coarseness and use of homely phrases. He attacked Wimpfeling's* Germania, defended Henry* VIII, by whom he was well regarded, against Luther*, and in Von dem grossen Lutherischen Narren (1522) wrote the best Catholic satire against Luther and his supporters. Vain and quarrelsome, universally hated, but having a passionate, often reckless respect for truth, Murner is a brilliant satirist, witty, vigorous, deadly, whose superficial coarseness conceals a passionately sincere and almost tragic genius.

Germania nova (1502; ed. K. Schmidt, 1875); Ein andechtig geistliche Badenfahrt (1514; ed. E. Martin, 1887); Ob der König aus England ein Lügner sei oder Luther (1522); Narrenbeschwörung (ed. K. Goedeke, 1879; ed. M. Spanier, 2nd ed. 1912); Die Mühle zu Schwindelsheim (ed. P. Albrecht, 1883); Die Schelmenzunft (ed. E. Matthias, 1890; facs. ed. H. Rupé, 1926); Die Geuchmatt (ed. W. Uhl, 1896; ed. E. Fuchs, 1931); Von dem grossen lutherischen Narren (ed. P. Merker, 1918; ed. A. E. Berger in Dt. Lit. in Entw.-Reihen, III, 1933).—Ausgewählte Werke (ed. G. Balke in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., XVII, 1890).

Th. von Liebenau, Der Franziskaner T. M. (1913); G. Schumann, M. und seine Dichtungen (1917); R. Newald, 'Wandlungen des M.-Bilds' in Schultz-Festschrift (1938) and Elsässische Charakterköpfe (1941); R. Gruenter, 'T. M.s satirischer Wortschatz' in Euphoriion, LXXIII (1959); B. Könniker, Wesen und Wandlung der Narrenidee im Zeitalter des Humanismus. Brant-M.-Erasmus (1966). D.G.D.

Murphy, ARTHUR (*Clooniquin, Co. Roscommon 1727; †Knightsbridge VI 1805), Irish dramatist and biographer. After some years as actor and barrister, he wrote for the London stage such plays as The Way to Keep Him (1760) and Three Weeks after Marriage (1764). He also adapted Molière* and translated Sallust* and Tacitus* with some skill.

Works (7 vols, 1786).—J. P. Emery, A. M. (1946). E.T.W.

Murphy, RICHARD (*Co. Mayo, Ireland 1927), Irish poet; educated at Oxford and the Sorbonne; lives in the West of Ireland. His considerable personal knowledge of the sea is reflected in some of his best work, notably 'The Last Galway Hooker' and 'The Cleggan Disaster', both included in Sailing to an Island (1963). His interest in tradition and his talent as a narrative poet are both evident in the long poem The Battle of Aughrim (1968).

The Archaeology of Love (1955). E.T.W.

Murray, CHARLES (*Alford, Aberdeenshire 28 IX 1864; ∞1895 Edith Rogers; †Banchory, Kincardineshire 12 IV 1941), Scottish poet. He spent many years in public employment in South Africa. Written in the dialect of his native district, his poetry is homely, vigorous and natural, unambitious in its aim and scope.

Hamewith (1900); A Sough o' War (1917); In the Country Places (1920); The Last Poems (1969).

C. Christie, Some Memories of C. M. (Pretoria, 1943). G.W.C. (W.R.A.)

Murray, (GEORGE) GILBERT (AIMÉ) (*Sydney, New South Wales 2 I 1866; ∞1889 Lady Mary Henrietta Howard; †Oxford 20 V 1957), British man of letters, scholar and humanist; Regius Professor of Greek, Oxford (1908–36). His life-work has been to interpret the spirit of ancient Greece to the modern world. This he has done through verse renderings of the Greek dramatists, through beautifully written books on Greek thought and literature, and by translating the nobler Greek views of just citizenship into an active public life on behalf of the League of Nations and other liberal movements.

CLASSICAL STUDIES: A History of Ancient Greek Literature (1897); The Rise of the Greek Epic (1907; 4th ed. 1934); Five Stages of Greek Religion (1925); The Classical Tradition in Poetry (1927); Aristophanes (1933); Aeschylus (1940); Euripides and His Age (2nd ed. 1946); Greek Studies (1946).—TRANSLATIONS: Euripides (1905–54); Aristophanes (1908–56); Sophocles (1911–48); Aeschylus (1920–39); Menander (1942–45).—An Unfinished Autobiography (1960); Humanist Essays (1964).

J. A. K. Thomson, G. M. (1958). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Murray, THOMAS C. (*Cork 1873; †1959), Irish dramatist. A teacher by profession, Murray wrote for the Abbey Theatre some of the best realistic plays of its early years, focusing the types and conflicts of rural Irish society in simply drawn but powerful situations. He and Lennox Robinson* were known as 'the Cork realists' but their art was more selective than the term implies. R.McH.

Birthright (1910); Maurice Harte (1912); The Briary Gap (1917); Aftermath (1922); Autumn Fire (1924); Michaelmas Eve (1932). E.T.W.

Murry, JOHN MIDDLETON (*Peckham 6 VIII 1889; ∞1918 Kathleen Beauchamp, 'Katherine Mansfield'* [†1923], ∞1924 Violet le Maistre [†1931], ∞Elizabeth Cockbayne, ∞Mary Gamble; †Bury St Edmunds 13 III 1957), English essayist, editor of The Athenaeum (1919–21) and The Adelphi

(1923–48). A sensitive, romantic critic of literature, with a penchant for the esoteric and mystical, he has written much on religious themes; is often unconventional, challenging.

Fyodor Dostoevsky (1916); To the Unknown God (1924); Keats and Shakespeare (1925); Life of Jesus (1926); Studies in Keats (1930; 1955); The Life of Katherine Mansfield (with R. E. Mantz; 1933); Shakespeare (1936); The Mystery of Keats (1949); Katherine Mansfield and Other Literary Portraits (1949); Jonathan Swift (1954); Selected Criticism (ed. R. Rees, 1960).—Between Two Worlds (autobiog.; 1935).

F. A. Lea, The Life of J. M. M. (1959); Mary M. Murry, To Keep Faith (1959).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Musaeus (fl. late 5th century A.D.), Greek poet, of the school of Nonnus*. Author of the miniature epic Hero and Leander in 343 hexameters. Though rhetorical in places, the poem is one of the most charming productions of late antiquity, and has inspired many later poets (HERO AND LEANDER).

M.: Hero und Leandros (ed. A. Ludwich, 1912); Museo: Ero e Leandro (ed. E. Malcovati, 1948).—Trs: J. M. Edmonds, The Greek Bucolic Poets (1912); E. H. Blakeney, M.: Hero and Leander (1935); F. L. Lucas, M.: Hero and Leander (1949); H. Faerber, Hero und Leander (1961); P. Orsini, M.: Hero et Léandre (1968).

M. H. Jellinek, Die Sage von Hero und Leander in der Dichtung (1890).

R.B.

Musäus, JOHANN KARL AUGUST (*Jena 29 III 1735; †Weimar 28 X 1787), German novelist and fairy-tale writer. A clergyman, Musäus became a schoolmaster in Weimar, after being rejected as a parish pastor because he had danced. His novels satirize literary fashions. His graceful, delicately ironical fairy-tales enjoyed an enormous vogue.

Grandison der Zweite (1760–62); Physiognomische Reisen (1778–79); Die Volksmärchen der Deutschen (1782–86).

A. Ohlmer, M. als satirischer Romanschriftsteller (diss. Munich, 1912); E. Jahn, Die Volksmärchen der Deutschen (1914); A. Richli, M. (1957).

H.B.G.

Muschg, ADOLF (*Zollikon 13 V 1934), Swiss novelist. He taught at Universities in Germany, U.S.A. and Japan and is now Professor of German at the Federal Institute of Technology in Zürich. With his bold forays into the complexities of modern life and the problems of youth, and with his highly imaginative and idiomatic use of language he imparts great vigour to Swiss prose.

Im Sommer des Hasen (1965); Gegenzauber (1968); Mitgespielt (1969).

H.B.

Mushanokōji SANEATSU (*Tokyo 12 V 1885; †1912 Takeo Fusako), Japanese author. After leaving Tokyo Imperial University in 1907 before graduating, he immediately embarked on a long and illustrious career of writing. His work expresses strong idealism, a spiritual outlook, individualism and humanity, and was unconventional in method and treatment. His plots, however, sometimes tended to uniformity as a result of his prolific output.

E.B.C.

NOVELS: Yūjō (1919; Friendship, tr. R. Matsu-moto, 1958; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, I, 1939); Kōfukumono (1919); Yaso (1920; summary of this and prec. in T. Kunitomo, Japanese Literature Since 1868, 1938); Ai to shi (1939; Love and Death, tr. S. Yamamura, 1967); Shinri sensei ('Professor Truth'; 1949–50; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, op. cit., II, 1959).—PLAYS: Aru katei (1909; 'A Family Affair', tr. Y. T. Iwasaki and G. Hughes in New Plays From Japan, 1930); Sono imōto (1915; The Sister, tr. K. Nishi, 1935); Ningen banzai (1923; 'Three Cheers for Man', tr. K. Strong in Japan Quart., X.1, 1963); Aiyoku ('Passion'; 1926; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, op. cit., 1939).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Mušicki, LUKJAN (*Temein 27 I 1777; †Karlovac 15 III 1837), Serbian poet and erudite churchman. His verse is in the pseudo-classical style, and he was one of the last prominent Serbian writers to employ Old Slavonic.

Stihotvorenija (4 vols, 1838–47).

V.J.

Musil, ROBERT (*Klagenfurt 6 XI 1880; †Geneva 15 IV 1942), Austrian novelist, playwright and essayist. His first novel, Die Verwirrungen des Zöglings Törless (1906; Young Törless, tr. E. Wilkins and E. Kaiser, 1955), examines the psychology of an adolescent and uncannily anticipates some of the more dangerous aspects of later irrationalism. His reputation rests mainly on his one great novel, rewritten several times, Der Mann ohne Eigenschaften (3 vols, 1930–33; The Man Without Qualities, tr. idem, I–II, 1953–54; III, 1965), a huge encyclopaedia about pre-war Austria, and the spiritual biography and utopian vision of a unique individual, Ulrich, the 'man without qualities' and modern anti-hero. It is a radical attempt to combine fiction and reality.

STORIES: Vereinigungen (1911); Drei Frauen (1923).—PLAYS: Die Schwärmer (1921); Vinzenz oder Die Freundin bedeutender Männer (1923).—Gesammelte Werke (coll. works; ed. A. Frisé, 3 vols, 1952–57).

R. M. Leben, Werk, Wirkung (ed. K. Dinklage, 1960); B. Pike, R. M. An Introduction to His Work (1961); E. Kaiser and E. Wilkins, R. M. Eine Einführung in das Werk (1962) and M.-Bibliographie (1962); W. Berghahn, R. M. in Selbstzeugnissen und Bilddokumenten (1963); W. Bausinger, Studien zu einer historisch-kritischen Ausgabe von R. M.'s 'Der Mann ohne Eigenschaften' (1964); G. Baumann, R. M. (1965); S. Bauer and J. Drevermann, Studien zu R. M. (1966); W. Rasch, Über M.'s Roman 'Der Mann ohne Eigenschaften' (1967); U. Schramm, Fiktion und Reflexion: Überlegungen zu M. und Beckett (1967). F.M.K.

Musin-Pushkin, A. I.: see Slovo o Polku Igoreve.

Muspilli, 9th-century Bavarian poem in alliterating lines of which 103 (all, except beginning and end) are preserved in a 10th-century MS (St Emmeram, Regensburg). It tells, with great rhetorical power, the fate of the soul immediately after death, and on the Day of Judgement. Some maintain that lines 37–62 were originally independent; they describe the fight of Antichrist with Elijah which brings about muspilli (the destruction of the world by fire—the word, but not the idea, is heathen). It may be treated as the counterpart to Wessobrunn* Prayer and compared with passages in the Old English poem Christ III.

Ed. W. Braune and K. Helm, Althochdeutsches Lesebuch (1962); C. C. Barber, Old High German Reader (1951).

H. Schneider, 'M.' in Zschr. f. dt. Alt., LXXIII (1936); J. Knight Bostock, Handbook of Old High German Literature (1955); H. Kolb, 'vora demo muspille' in Zschr. f. dt. Philol., LXXXIII (1964); Cola Minis, Handschrift, Form und Sprache des M. (1966). F.P.P.

Mussato, ALBERTINO (*Padua 1261; †c. 1296 Mabilla Dente; †Chioggia 31 V 1329), Italian poet and historiographer esteemed as an early humanist. Notary; soldier; diplomat; the Paduan ambassador to the Emperor Henry VII (1311, 1312); he participated zealously in the wars against Cangrande della Scala (1312–28). Mussato wrote three Latin histories, after the manner of Livy*, narrating the Italian expedition of Henry VII (1310–13) and Italian affairs up to 1329 (printed by Muratori* in Rerum Italicarum scriptores, X, 1730), and a Latin verse tragedy in the Senecan style, Ecerinis (c. 1311/12–15; rev. ed. L. Padrin, 1969), on the tyrant Ezzelino da Romano. Other works include 17 Epistolae, five Soliloquia and an epic poem.

A Zardo, A. M. (1884); E. R. Curtius, European Literature and the Latin Middle Ages (tr. W. R. Trask, 1953); M. Dazzi, Il M. preumanista (1964; with apps of Ital. trs from Lat. works). M.W.

Mussem, JAN VAN, 16th-century priest in Wormhout (Flanders). He advocated the humanistic conception of poetics.

Rhetorica, dye edele const van welsegghene, Genomen wt die oude vermaerdste Rhetorisiene ende Orateuren, als Cicero, Quintilianus, enz. overgheselt wt den latijne in gemeender vlaemscher spraken (1553; 2nd ed. 1607).

J. Vanderheyden in Versl. en Med. Koninkl. Vlaamse Acad. (1952); L. van den Branden, Het streven naar verheerlijking, zuivering en opbouw van het Nederlands in 16de eeuw (1956).

J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Musset, LOUIS-CHARLES-ALFRED DE (*Paris 11 XII 1810; †ibid. 2 V 1857), French poet and dramatist. The brilliant second son of cultivated parents, Musset at 18 was a favourite in Charles Nodier's* circle of young Romantics and his early poems reflect the prevailing Hugo-worship of 1830. He quickly liberated himself, preferred Byron* as a model (Mardoche, Namouna) and, aided by a certain aristocratic preference for the 18th century which was to mark much of his work, tempered the Romantic frenzy with his own lighter fantasy. His emotionally disastrous liaison with George Sand* (1834–35) inspired one of the greatest sequences of Romantic poems, Les Nuits (1835–37), as well as his autobiographical Confession d'un enfant du siècle (1836) and his plays Lorenzaccio (1834), Fantasio (1834) and On ne badine pas avec l'amour (1834). At 30 Musset, his naturally fragile health undermined by sexual excess and alcoholism and a prey to hallucinations conceivably of epileptic origin, was prematurely old. New disappointments in love (as with Aimée d'Alton) completed his demoralization. He was partly consoled by the success of his plays which, after the early failure at the Odéon of La Nuit vénitienne (1830), he had written only for publication in the Revue des Deux Mondes. The actress Mme Allan-Despréaux having discovered their dramatic qualities, they were produced at the Comédie Française (1847 ff.), and their success encouraged Musset to write a few more.

Lightness of touch and an impish wit distinguish much of his dramatic and poetic production and some of his prose tales. In his more serious work he typifies the unreflecting Romantic pursuit of ideal happiness and the equally unreflecting dejection when disappointed: the two combined constituting the mal du siècle. These features, foreign to modern sensibility, are the cause of his present low reputation.

VERSE: Contes d'Espagne et d'Italie (1830); Un Spectacle dans un fauteuil (1832; incl. Namouna, Le Saule); Rolla (1833); Poésies nouvelles (1835–52; incl. Les Nuits; Lettre à Lamartine, 1836; L'Espoir en Dieu, 1838).—PLAYS: La Nuit vénitienne (1830); André del Sarto (1833); Comédies et proverbes (1840); Nouvelles comédies et proverbes (1845–55).—VARIOUS: L'Anglais mangeur d'opium (1828; after De Quincey; repr. 1920); Lettres de Dupuis et Cotonet in Rev. des Deux Mondes (1836–37); Contes et nouvelles (1837–53).—Œuvres complètes (ed. M. Allem: Poésies, 1933; Théâtre, 1934; Prose, 1938).

George Sand, Elle et lui (1859); P. de Musset, Biographie d'A. de M. (1877); A. Adam, La

vériatle aventure vénitienne (1938); L. Lafoscade, Le théâtre d'A. de M. (1904); P. Gastinel, Le romantisme d'A. de M. (1933); P. van Tieghem, M., l'homme et l'œuvre (1945). G.B.

Mussolini, BENITO (*Dovia di Predappio 27 VII 1883; ∞ Rachele Guidi; †Giulino di Mezzegra 28 IV 1945), Italian journalist and politician, founder of the Fascist party and head of the Italian government from X 1922 until VII 1943; killed by Partisans. Mussolini had a certain journalistic flair and was a successful propagandist and orator, but he had no real literary talent, and his attempts at creative writing were disastrous.

Opera omnia di B. M. (25 vols, 1951–59).

L. Fermi, M. (1961); F. W. Deakin, The Brutal Friendship (1962); R. De Felice, M. il rivoluzionario, 1883–1920 (1965) and M. il fascista (2 vols, 1966–68). B.M.

AL-Mu'tamid (*1040; †Aghmat, Morocco 1095), Arabic poet. Of the 'Abbasid dynasty, he succeeded to the principality of Seville, during the period of the division of Muslim Spain into petty dynasties. At the coming of the Almoravids he was deprived of his kingdom and exiled to Morocco. He is of considerable importance as a poet.

A. R. Nykl, Hispano-Arabic Poetry (1946).

S.M.S.

AL-Mutanabbi (*Kufa 915; †955), Arabic poet. He started his career as panegyrist of various persons in Iraq and Syria. A curious intermezzo is his unsuccessful attempt to become the leader of rebellious Bedouin. (Hence his nickname 'al-Mutanabbi', i.e. 'one who pretends to be a prophet'.) He found a patron in Saif al-Daula, Prince of Aleppo. Later he went to Egypt, to the court of the negro majordomo, Kāfūr. He quarrelled, however, with Kāfūr, fled to Persia and composed venomous satires on his former patron. On the way to his native Iraq he was killed by Bedouin.

Al-Mutanabbi is reckoned as the greatest of Arabic poets. He stands for the ancient Arabian virtues. Characteristic is his immense personal pride. His style is in agreement with his personality: its nobility is not without a tendency towards rhetoric. Many of his verses are among the most often quoted in Arabic literature.

J. von Hammer-Purgstall, Motenebbi, der grösste arabische Dichter (1824); R. Blachère, Un poète arabe du IV<sup>e</sup> siècle de l'Hégire: Abou t-Tayyib al-Mutanabbi (1935); A. J. Arberry, Poems of al-Mutanabbi (1967). S.M.S. (R.O.)

Mutianus Rufus, CONRADUS (*Homburg 15 X 1471; †Gotha 30 III 1526), German humanist. He presided over the growth of humanism at Erfurt University through his circle, to which many leading German humanists belonged. He wrote little himself, but inspired others to write. His correspondence is wide and significant.

Briefwechsel (ed. C. Krause, 1885; ed. K. Gillert, 1890).

F. Halbauer, M. R. und seine geistesgeschichtliche Stellung (1929); L. W. Spitz, 'The conflict of ideas in M. R.' in Warburg Inst. Jour., XVI (1953). D.G.D.

Muṭrān, KHALIL (*Baalbek, Lebanon 1872; †Cairo 1949), Syro-Egyptian Arab poet, journalist and translator of Shakespeare*. His poetry, which represents a transition from neo-classicism to Romanticism, greatly influenced the following generation of Romantic poets. His translations include The Merchant of Venice, Hamlet, Macbeth and Othello.

Diwān al-Khalil (verse; 4 vols, 1908–49).—A. Z. Abushady, 'Shawqi, Hafiz and M., the three leading neo-classical poets of contemporary Egypt' in Middle Eastern Affairs, III (1952); Muhammad Mandur, K. M. (Cairo, 1954); A. J. Arberry, Arabic Poetry (1965). M.M.B.

AL-Muwallihī, MUḤAMMAD IBRĀHĪM (*Cairo 1868; †1930), Egyptian Arab novelist and essayist. Having been banished from Egypt after the 'Urābi Pasha revolt in 1882, he later returned to Cairo and helped his father edit the literary review, Misbāh al-Sharq. His main work, Ḥadīth 'Isā ibn Hishām (1907), is 'a spiritual satire of modern Egyptian society' written in the form of the medieval maqāmah (short episodes in rhymed prose interspersed with poetry).

R. Allen, 'Ḥadīth 'Isa: a reconsideration' in Jour. Arabic Lit., I (1970). C.R. (M.M.B.)

Muyaka BIN HAJJI AL-GHASSANY (*Mombasa 1776; †ibid. 1837), Swahili poet. He was the first well-known secular Swahili poet, i.e. the first poet whose verse was memorized by his townsmen long enough to be recorded by Muḥammad Sikujua, who was encouraged to do so by the British missionary William E. Taylor. Muyaka was also the first known poet to employ the shairi metre of stanzas of 4 × 16 syllables. His verses were often succinct and witty, the first Swahili epigrams. A friend of the powerful Mazrui family (Abdallah bin Hamidi, 1814–23, and Salim bin Ahmad, †1835, the Medicis of Mombasa), many of his poems refer to the political situation which ended in the occupation of the once free city by the Sultan of Oman.

Diwani ya M. (Johannesburg, 1940). J.Kn.

Muzio, GIROLAMO (*Padua 1496; †La Paneretta, nr Siena 1576), Italian poet and prose-writer, champion of orthodoxy against the Reformation.

In the controversy on the Italian language he was an opponent of Varchi*.

Il Duello (1550); Rime diverse (1550); Mentite ochiniane (1551); Arte poetica (1551); Il Gentiluomo (1571); Lettere cattoliche (1572); Sopra il concilio che si ha da fare, e sopra l'unione d'Italia (1572); Battaglie per difesa dell'italica lingua, and La Varchina (1582); Lettere (1590).

E. Carrara, La poesia pastorale (1904-08); V. Di Tocco, 'Un progetto di confederazione italiana' in Archivio storico ital., VII (1924) and Ideali d'indipendenza in Italia durante la preponderanza spagnuola (1926). B.R.

Muzzarelli, GIOVANNI (*Gazzuolo ?1490; †Rocca di Mondaino 1518), Italian humanist and poet, author of Dialogo in lode di donne, an imitation of Bembo's* Asolani.

Canzoni e Sestine amorose di M. Giovanni Muzzarelli (1562); Fabula di Narciso in Stantie nove di messer Antonio Thibaldeo (1518).

V. Cian in Giornale storico della lett. ital., XXI (1893), XXXVIII (1901); for the Dialogo, Dhesa Sandri in Archivio Romano, XXI (1937). B.R.

Mwengo, two 18th-century Swahili poets of Pate on the northern Kenya coast. The father, BWANA MWENGO, wrote the famous Chuo cha Tambuka or Utenzi wa Herekali, the first epic poem in Swahili, 1,150 stanzas long, describing the battle of the Arabs against the Byzantines; the oldest manuscript, which is now in Hamburg, is dated 1728. ABU BAKARI BIN MWENGO wrote an imitation, the Utenzi wa Katirifu or Ghazwa ya Sesebani, around the middle of the 18th century; it is 450 stanzas long.

J. Knappert, Het Epos van Heraklios (Leiden, 1958) and 'The "Utenzi wa Katirifu" or "Ghazwa ya Sesebani"' in Afrika und Uebersee, LII (Hamburg, 1969). J.Kn.

Myers, LEO HAMILTON (*Cambridge 1881; ∞1908 Elsie Palmer; †Marlow 8 IV 1944), English novelist. He sought to extend the frontiers of fiction and show human beings in relation to that side of reality which is the subject of philosophy, speculation and wonder. Thus the common life of his characters has a dream-like quality, and their speculative and moral selves provide his theme.

The Orissers (1922); The Clio (1925); Strange Glory (1936); The Near and the Far (1943; 4 novels: The Near and the Far, 1929; Prince Jalt, 1931; Rajah Amar, 1935; The Pool of Vishnu, 1940; 1st 3 orig. coll. as The Root and the Flower, 1935).

G. H. Bantock, L. H. M. (1956); Irène Simon, The Novels of L. H. M. (Brussels, 1956).

R.A.S.J. (W.R.A.)

Mykle, AGNAR (*Trondheim 1915), Norwegian novelist. He made an impressive debut with the collection of short stories Taustigen (1948), where imaginative dynamism combines with mastery of form. A recurring theme is the frustration of youthful expectation, which in Tyven, tyven skal du hete (1951; The Hotel Room, tr. M. Michael, 1963) becomes a highly polemical attack on restrictive puritanical attitudes. In the two novels centred on Ask Burlefot, Lasso rundt fru Luna (1954; Lasso Round the Moon, tr. idem, 1960), and Sangen om den røde rubin (1956; The Song of the Red Ruby, tr. idem, 1961), his hero seeks personal and social liberation principally through an almost unending series of sexual escapades, the prevalence and detailed description of which in the second novel led to a charge of pornography. Mykle's writing talent, which is at its best in the first of these two novels, includes a vitality (which matches his subject-matter), brilliant narrative skill shot through with humour, and poetic feeling.

NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: 'Jeg er like glad', sa gutten (1952); Kors på halsen (1958); Rubicon (1965; Eng. tr. M. Michael, 1966); Largo (1967).

P. Houm, Ask Burlefot og vi (1957). R.G.P.

Mykolaitis, VINCAS: see Putinas.

Myl, ABRAHAM VAN DER (*'s-Heerenberg 13 II 1563; †27 III 1637), Dutch theologian, poet and philologist. He translated a poem of James* VI of Scotland on the Battle of Lepanto as De slach van Lepanten (1593); he also made the first Dutch translation of Horace's* Beatus ille in Den loffeens landt-mans levens. He contributed to the Nederduytschen Helicon and the Zeeuwsche Nachtegael. Of his learned Latin publications, Lingua Belgica (1612) is an uncritical plea for the excellence of the Dutch language.

P. J. Meertens, 'A. van der M. als taalgeleerde' in Bundel . . . C. G. N. de Vooy's (1940) and Letterkundig leven in Zeeland (1943). J.J.M.

Myles na Gopaleen: see Ó Nualláin, BRIAN.

Mynshul or Minshull, GEFFRAY (*?1594; †Nantwich 1 XI 1668), English prose writer, admitted to Gray's Inn 1611/12. Imprisoned for debt (1617) in the King's Bench prison, he wrote there Certain Characters and Essayes of Prison and Prisoners (1618).

G. Murphy, A Cabinet of Characters (1925); H. Osborne, A Mirror of Character (1933).

M. L. Hunt, Thomas Dekker (1911).

R.M.W.

Mystère des Actes des Apôtres. This most spectacular of the French Mysteries, containing nearly 62,000 lines and dated between 1452 and 1478, is attributed either to Jean du Prier or to Simon Gréban*, aided perhaps by his brother Arnoul. Against a background of Jewish and Roman history, it dramatized stories, taken in part from the Golden Legend (Jacobus* de Voragine), of most of the apostles with the addition of Stephen, Paul and Barnabas. The saints' journeys and miracles and their atrocious martyrdoms were represented with all the realism of contemporary scenic art. A famous performance at Bourges in 1536 is said to have lasted 40 days, a Paris performance in 1541, 35 days.

[213] MYSTÈRE DU VIEUX TESTAMENT

Ed. A.-T. de Girardot (1854).—R. Lebègue, Le M. des A. des A. (1929). G.B.

Mystère du Vieux Testament (first pr. c. 1500), spectacular French Mystery Play; a compilation of Old Testament episodes, beginning with the Creation, put together by early printers and no doubt composed by different authors. Its 49,000 lines could have occupied 25 days to perform, but it is probable that favourite episodes, such as Abraham's sacrifice of Isaac, the Queen of Sheba's visit to Solomon, the story of Esther, were often extracted and produced separately. Recorded performances of a play of this name range from 1458 (Abbeville) to 1542 (Paris).

Le Mystère du Vieil Testament (ed. J. de Rothschild, 6 vols, 1878–91). G.B.

N

Nabbes, THOMAS (*?Worce 1605; ∞Bridgett —; [London 6 IV 1641), English poet, dramatist and writer of MASQUES. A member of Exeter College, Oxford (1621), he took no degree. About 1630 Nabbes entered the London circle of Chamberlain, Marmion* and Tatham*, his first comedy Covent Garden being performed about 1 1632/33. Some of his plays are in well-written blank verse and he had a medium talent for comedy. His masques were well thought-of.

Plays, Masques, Epigrams, Elegies, and Epithalamiums (1639).—Works (ed. A. H. Bullen, 2 vols, 1887).

C. Moore, The Dramatic Works of T. N. (1918); A. C. Swinburne in Contemporaries of Shakespeare (1919); A. Nicoll, Stuart Masques and the Renaissance Stage (1938); G. E. Bentley, Jacobean and Caroline Stage, IV (1956). B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

AL-Nābighah (c. 600), pre-Islamic Arabic poet of the tribe Dhubyān. He was a court poet of al-Nu'mān, prince of Hira, a vassal of the Persian empire. His patron, however—so the story goes—took exception to a poem describing the beauty of his queen. The poet fell into disgrace and had to seek refuge with the Ghassanid prince, vassal of Byzantium.

C. Lyall, Translations of Ancient Arabian Poetry (1885; repr. 1930); H. Derenbourg, Le Diwan de N. (with Fr. tr.; 1869). S.M.S.

Nabokov, VLADIMIR VLADIMIROVICH, pseud. VLADIMIR SRIN (*1899), Russian emigré author. Combining Western and American influences with those of Gogol* and Dostoyevsky*, he was the author of several provocative novels. Later, however, he has written only in English. He also wrote poetry and translated from Pushkin*, Lermontov* and Tyutchev*.

Grozd' (1923); Gorny put' (1923); Korol'-dama-valet (1928); King, Queen, Knave, tr. D. and V. V. Nabokov, 1968); Zashchita Luzhina (1929); Camera Obscura (1923–33); Laughter in the Dark, tr. W. Roz, 1938); Podvig (1932; tr. Glory, 1972); Otchayanie (1934); Izobretenie val'sa (1938); Priglasenie na kazn' (Invitation to a Beheading, tr. D. and V. V. Nabokov, 1959); Nikolai Gogol (1944); Bend Sinister (1947); Conclusive Evidence (1951); Lolita (Paris, 1955); Pnin (1957); N's Dozen (short stories; 1959); Pale Fire (1962); The Gift (1966); Ada (1969); Speak, Memory: an Autobiography Revisited (1969). J.L.

Naborowski (NABOROVIVS), DANIEL (*Cracow 1573; †Vilna 1640), Polish poet. As court doctor and poet to the Protestant Radziwiłł family in Lithuania, he travelled widely in Europe. His poetry has only recently been examined in detail; it is strongly influenced by contemporary European currents and he must be considered the first true Baroque poet in Poland.

Poezje (ed. J. Dürr-Durski, 1961).

J. Dürr-Durski, D. N. Monografia z dziejów manieryzmu i baroku w Polsce (1966). P.H.

Nabulusi, 'ABD-AL-GHANĪ (*Damascus 19 III 1641; †ibid. 5 III 1731), Arab mystic scholar. As a youth he received a good grounding in jurisprudence and theology. At an early age also he became a Sufi and studied the work of Ibn* al-'Arabī. He travelled throughout the Middle East in search of like-minded scholars. He gained, as a lecturer, a position of intellectual eminence, profoundly influencing successive generations of Syrian scholars and mystics.

A prolific writer on subjects ranging from dreams to agriculture (including travels and poetry), his real contribution was to mysticism. Through original works and commentaries (particularly on Ibn al-'Arabī) he endeavoured to demonstrate the validity of Sufism as an essential expression of Islamic orthodoxy.

Jawāhir al-Nusūs fī Kalimāt al-Fuṣūṣ (1886); Diwān al-Haqā'iq wa Majmū' al-Raqā'iq (1888); Ta'tīr al-anām fī ta'bīr al-manām (1889).

R. A. Nicholson, Studies in Islamic Mysticism (1921); H. A. R. Gibb, Mohammedanism (1949). W.A.el K. (R.W.J.A.)

Nachmanides, (Heb.) MOSES BEN NACHMAN GERONDI; (Span.) BONASTRUC DA PORTA; known as RAMBAN (*Gerona 1194; †Palestine c. 1270), Spanish Hebrew religious writer and poet. Rabbi and physician at Gerona, he took a prominent part in the religious disputation of Barcelona in 1263 and composed a large number of legal works. He wrote a few liturgical poems, in which Cabbalistic influence is visible. In 1267 he emigrated to Palestine, where he wrote a commentary on the Pentateuch (1st ed. Italy, before 1480), a popular work with a mystical overtone.

The Commentary of N. on Genesis, Chapters 1–6 (tr. J. Newman, 1960).

S. Schechter, Studies in Judaism, I (1896); J. M. Millás Vallicrosa, La poesía sagrada hebreo-catalana (1940). C.R.

Nachman of Bratzlav, known as MAHARAN (*Miedzybozh 9 X 1770; †Uman 1811), Russian Hebrew writer. A grandson of the Ba'al* Shem Tov, he visited Palestine in 1798, then established himself at Bratzlav (properly Braslawl). He developed the popular, messianic, non-mystical elements in Hasidism and stressed the importance of the inspired spiritual leader (Zaddik) as mediator between God and the world. His stories, parables and aphorisms, published by his disciples, have a fine poetic quality. His own, more esoteric writings are unpublished.

Liqqet Maharan (2 vols, 1808–11); Sippurei Ma'asiyyoth (1815).—ANTHOLOGIES: Torat R. Nachman mi-Bratzlav (ed. S. A. Horodezky, 1923); Geschichten des Rabbi Nachman (tr. M. Buber, 1908; Eng. tr. M. Friedman, 1956).—For further biblio. see Ba'al Shem Tov. C.R.

Nádaši, LADISLAV (*Dolný Kubín 12 II 1866; †ibid. 2 VII 1940), Slovak novelist. Nádaši, who after 1918 used the pseudonym JÉGÉ, turned away from the social novel cultivated by other Slovak writers of his generation to apply realistic technique to the historical novel. To this genre belong his two best-known works Adam Šangala (1923; on 17th-century Slovakia) and Svätopluk (1928; on the 9th-century Moravian empire).

J. Gregorec, Dielo L. N. J. (1957). R.A.

Nadezhdin, NIKOLAY IVANOVICH (*Ryazan' province 1804; †1856), Russian editor and critic who scathingly attacked Russian Romanticism. In 1831 he founded his monthly periodical Telescop which, five years later, was suppressed for printing Chaadayev's* famous Philosophic Letter. Nadezhdin was exiled and devoted himself to archaeological pursuits.

N. K. Kozmin, N. I. N. (1912). J.L.

Nādirpūr, NĀDIR (*Tehran 6 VI 1929), Persian poet and critic. He studied in Iran and France and after several short-lived jobs entered the Civil Service and is now attached to the Ministry of Arts and Culture. His poems are characterized by a sensitive and polished language, a melancholy lyricism and a vivid and fertile imagination, introducing fresh imagery, without renouncing the formal elements of traditional Persian poetry. His more recent poetry employs freer forms, emphasizing the content. Nādirpūr is also a perceptive critic.

Chashmhā va Dasthā (1954); Dukhtar-i Jām (1955); Shi'r-i Angūr (1958); Surmi-yi Khurshid (1960).

R. Barahini, Tala dar Mes (2nd ed. 1968). E.Y.

Nadson, SEMĖN YAKOVLEVICH (*St Petersburg 14 XII 1862; †Yalta 19 I 1887), Russian poet. He continued Nekrasov's* 'populist' tradition in poetry, but he became increasingly pessimistic, especially during his last period. Most of his verses are sincere and poignant but his technique is not entirely successful.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (2 vols, 1917); Stikhotvoreniya (1937); Polnoye sobranie stikhotvoreniy (1962); Literaturnye ocherki (1965).

L. Mel'shin, S. Y. N. (1906); I. V. Vladislavlev, Russkie pisateli (1924). J.L.

Naevius, GNAEUS (*?Capua c. 265; †Utica c. 201 B.C.), fought in the Roman army during the First Punic War, translated Attic comedies and tragedies for Roman festivals between 235 and 204. Fragments of 30 comic and six tragic versions survive, as well as of three tragedies on Roman historical themes. The writing of scurrilous verses about certain leading politicians got him imprisoned, according to ancient story, and finally expelled from Rome. His poem on the First Punic War in Saturnian verses still had many admirers during the late Republic.

E. H. Warmington, Remains of Old Latin, II (with tr.; 1936); E. V. Marmorale, Nevio poeta (text, intro. and comm.; 2nd ed. 1950).

E. Fraenkel, 'Cn. N.' in A. Pauly, G. Wissowa et al., Real-Encyclopädie der classischen Altertumswissenschaft, supp. VI, 622 ff. (1936); S. Mariotti, Il Bellum Poenicum e l'arte di Nevio (1955); Wł. Strzelecki, Cn. Naevii Belli Punici Carminis quae supersunt (1959); M. Barchiesi, Nevio epico (1962). H.D.J.

Nagai KAFŪ, pseud. of NAGAI SŌKICHI (*Tokyo 3 II 1879; †Ichikawa, Chiba pref. 30 IV 1959), Japanese writer. His first work appeared in 1899, and he soon became well known as a novelist and short-story writer, gaining prominence in 1902 with Jigoku no hana, in which his indebtedness to Émile Zola* was obvious. In 1903 he went to America, taking various temporary posts, and in 1907 crossed to France. Returning to Japan in 1908, he became famous for his accounts of his life abroad, and two years later became Professor of French in Keiō University, Tokyo. His writings contain much of the spirit of Japanese literature of the Tokugawa period (1603–1868); though influenced by Naturalism, their most characteristic feature is their lyricism. Tokyo born and bred, Nagai lovingly evokes the atmosphere of the city in bygone days (at first that of Edo, in his later years that of the Meiji period). Also characteristic is his preoccupation with the demi-monde, from the world of the geisha to the more modern scene, with its bar-girls and streetwalkers.

NOVELS: Jigoku no hana (1902); Reishō (1909; summary of this and prec. in T. Kunitomo, Japanese Literature Since 1868, 1938); Kitsune (1909; 'The Fox', tr. A. Miyamori in Representative Tales of Japan, 2 vols, 1914; Fr. tr. S. Éliassév in Neuf nouvelles japonaises, 1924); Botan no kyaku (tr. E. G. Seidensticker in Kafū the Scribbler, 1965; Fr. tr. S. Éliassév in Le jardin des pivoinés, 1927); Sumidagawa (1909; partial tr. D. L. Keene in Modern Japanese Literature, 1956; complete tr. Seidensticker, op. cit.); Udekurabe (1916–17; 'Rivalry', partial tr. Seidensticker, op. cit.; Geisha in Rivalry, complete tr. K. Meissner and R. Friederich, 1963); Ajisai (1931; 'Hydrangea', tr. Seidensticker in Modern Japanese Stories, ed. I. I. Morris, 1961); Enoki monogatari (1931); Tsuyu no atosaki (1931; summaries of this and prec. in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, I, 1939); Bokutō kidan (1936–37; part tr. Seidensticker in Japan Quart., V.2, 1958, complete tr. in Kafū the Scribbler; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, op. cit., II, 1959).—ESSAYS: Amerika monogatari (1908); Furansu monogatari (1909).

E. G. Seidensticker, Kafū the Scribbler (1965; outstanding stud.; also incl. a few stories not cited above).
E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Na Gopaleen, MYLES: see Ó Nualláin, BRIAIN.

Naidu SAROJINI (*1879; †1949), Indian poet of Bengali parentage. She married an Andhra doctor and became involved with the National Movement. Her verse, which she stopped writing early, shows a preoccupation with the dream-world, occasionally making use of image and symbol, creatively.

The Golden Threshold (1905); The Bird of Time (1912); The Broken Wing (1917); The Feather of Dawn (1961).—The Sceptred Flute (coll. of first 3 vols; 1946).

P. E. Dustoor, S. N. (1961); Padmini Sengupta, S. N. (1966).
C.D.N.

Naimy, (NU'AIMAH), MIKHĀ'IL (*Biskintā, Lebanon 22 XI 1889), Syrian-American Arabic literary critic and essayist. Born of a Greek Orthodox family, he studied at the theological seminary in Poltava, Russia, then in Washington and New York. Having gained prominence among the Syrian emigrant community in the U.S.A., he nevertheless returned in 1932 to the Lebanon. In his essays he deals with the problems of the American Syrian and the remigrant and stresses the necessity for Westernization and for modern standards in Arabic literature.
C.R.

Hams al-jufūn (verse; 1943; El Rumor de los Párpados, tr. L. Martínez, 1956).—ESSAYS: Al-Ghirbāl (1923); Al-Marāḥil (1932); Zād al-Ma'ād (1936); Al-Authān (1946); The Book of Mirdad (1948); Al-Nūr wa'l-daijūr (1950).—DRAMAS: Al-Abā' wa'l-banūn (1917); Ayyūb (1967).—STORIES: Kān mā kān (1937); Akābir (1956); Abū baḥḥa (1959); Hawāmish (1965).—Liqā (novel; 1946; Till We Meet, tr. the author, 1957).—BIOGRAPHY AND MEMOIRS: Kahlil Gibran (1950); Memoirs of a Vagrant Soul (1952); Sab'ūn (1959–60).

N. N. Naimy, M. N., an Introduction (1967).
C.R. (M.M.B.)

Naipaul, V(IDIADHAR) S(URAJPRASAD) (*Trinidad 17 VIII 1932; ∞1955 Patricia Ann Hale), perhaps the best-known West Indian novelist; lives in England. His characteristic Trinidad humour and irony have endeared him to West Indian readers even while making them uneasy. His satirical portraiture of Trinidad, exposing a debased ethic in the personal, social and political life, was seminal at a time when West Indians badly needed to see themselves objectively. He provides an authentic, intimate view of the vanishing cultural world of the East Indian in Trinidad. Though his satire has begun to be dated through its continuing concern with a phase of Trinidad society which Trinidad has largely outgrown, there is a classic relevance about his work, for Trinidad has provided him with a paradigm of such 20th-century ailments as rootlessness, alienation and the threat to individuality; and above all his work emphasizes the supreme importance of the imagination for survival. He was first a short-story writer and his novels show an economy of characterization well suited to his satiric humour.

The Mystic Masseur (1957); The Suffrage of Elvira (1958); Miguel Street (1959); A House for Mr Biswas (1961); The Mimic Men (1967); A Flag on the Island (1967); In a Free State (1971).—TRAVEL BOOKS: The Middle Passage (1962); An Area of Darkness (1964).

Wilfred Cartey, 'The knights' companions—Ganesh, Biswas and Stone' in New World, II.1 (1965); David Ormerod, 'Theme and image in V. S. N.'s A House for Mr Biswas' in Texas Stud. in Lit. and Lang., III.4 (Winter 1967); Gordon Rohlehr, 'The ironic approach' in The Islands In-Between (ed. Louis James, 1968); A. C. Derrick, 'N.'s technique as a novelist' in Jour. Commonwealth Lit., VII (July 1969); William Walsh, A Manifold Voice (1970); Kenneth Ramchand, The West Indian Novel and Its Background (1970).

A.D.Dr.

Nairne, CAROLINA OLIPHANT, BARONESS (*Gask 16 VIII 1766; ∞1806 Major Nairne; †ibid. 27 X 1845), Scottish poet. She wrote numerous poems in the vernacular and many Jacobite songs, under the pseudonym of 'B. B.', 'Mrs Bogan of Bogan'. She is a lively, melodious, pathetic lyrist, and the best poet of the Jacobite cause.

87 songs in The Scottish Minstrel (1821–44); Works (ed. C. Rogers, with memoir, 1869).

K. Oliphant, Jacobite Lairds of Gask (1870); Life and Songs (ed. C. Rogers, 1872).
J.K.

Najara, ISRAEL (*Damascus c. 1542; †Gaza 1619), Palestinian Hebrew poet; rabbi at Gaza. He composed religious poems in Hebrew and Aramaic, set to Turkish, Greek, Arabic etc. popular airs. These poems are suffused with mystic-erotic imagery, representing the relation of God to Israel as lover and beloved. They were very popular, specially after the approbation by Isaac Luria*; the Sabbath hymn Yah Ribbon forms part of all Jewish prayer rites. He also wrote a long didactic poem, Mesacheket ha-Tevel (Safed, 1587).

Zemirot Yisrael (Safed, 1587; ed. J. Fries-Horeb, 1946); Pizmonim (ed. with biog. M. H. Friedlander, 1858).

M. Wiener, Die Lyrik der Kabbalah (1920).
C.R.

Nāji, IBRAHĪM (*Cairo 1898; †ibid. 1953), Egyptian Arab poet and physician, closely associated with the Apollo group of poets and their central figure Abushady*; was a leading Romantic who wrote chiefly love lyrics of great emotional intensity.

VERSE: Warā' al-ghamām (1934); Lāyālī al-Qāhira (1944); al-Ṭā'ir al-jarīh (1953).—Baudelaire wa qaṣā'id min dīwānīhi azhār al-sharr ('Baudelaire and Some Poems From Fleurs du Mal'); tr.; 1954).

A. J. Arberry, Modern Arabic Poetry (1950);
Ṣāliḥ Jaudat, N. ḥayātuh wa shī'ruh (1960).
M.M.B.

Na-lan HSING-TĒ [Chinese form of NARA SINGDE] (*Peking 19 I 1655; †ibid. 7 I 1685), poet. A Manchu noble, but educated in Chinese (he gained the doctoral degree at 21), he became an imperial guardsman. His passionate tz'ü-poetry has had a continuing appeal in the 20th century, like that of Li* Yü (937–978), with whom he is compared.

Yin-shui tz'ü (sel. trs in: The White Pony, ed. R. Payne, 1947; Anthologie de la poésie chinoise classique, ed. P. Demiéville, 1962).
A.R.D.

Naldo, NALDI (*Florence c. 1435; †in the pontificate of Leo X), Florentine poet and humanist. A member of the Platonic Academy and a court poet of the Medici*, he wrote an epic poem (Volaterrais) on Lorenzo's capture of Volterra, elegies in praise of Cosimo and Giovanni, four cantos on Mathias Corvinus' library, and love poems on the Ovidian pattern.

V. Rossi, Il Quattrocento (1938).
P.T.

Nalješković, NIKOLA (*Ragusa [Dubrovnik] c. 1510; †ibid. 1587), Ragusan playwright. His pastoral dramas treat conventional themes, with nymphs and shepherds, but in his comedies—an innovation in Ragusa—he introduced events from contemporary town life. The moralizing in his serious verse lacks conviction.

Djela (1873, 1876).
V.J.

Nałkowska, known also as RYGIER-NAŁKOWSKA, ZOFIA (*Warsaw 10 XI 1884; †ibid. 17 XII 1954), Polish writer. Her writings are full of psychological analysis and realism but they also contain scepticism. Her style is logical, quiet and concise, with classical simplicity and great delicacy of touch.

NOVELS: Kobiety (1906; Women, tr. M. H. Dziewicki, 1920); Książę (1907; Der Prinz, tr. L. Goldscheider, 1908); Hrabia Emil (1920); Romans Teresy Hennert (1923); Chaucas (1927; Fr. tr. F.

Wyleżyńska and J. de France de Tersant, 1936); Niedobra miłość (1928); Granica (1935); Niecierpliw (1939); Węzły życia (1948).—PLAYS: Dom kobiet (1930); Dzień jego powrotu (1931).—SHORT STORIES: Lustra (1914); Tajemnica krwi (1917).—VARIOUS: Ściany świata (1931); Medalliony (1945).—Pisma wybrane (1954).

O. Forst de Battaglia, 'S. N.' in Pologne Littéraire, VIII (1927); Wspomnienia o Z. N. (1965); I. Z. Brudnicki, Z. N. 1884–1954. Poradnik bibliograficzny (1965).
S.S. (P.H.)

Namatianus, CLAUDIUS RUTILIUS (fl. 5th century A.D.), Latin poet. Though a pagan, Namatian rose to office under Honorius. De reditu suo describes, in graceful and correct elegiac couplets, his journey in 416 from Rome to his ravaged Gallic estates.

Eds: C. H. Keene (1907; with verse tr. G. F. Savage-Armstrong); R. Helm (1933); tr. J. W. and A. M. Duff in Minor Latin Poets (1934).

I. Lana, Rutilio Namaziano (1961).
A.J.D.

Namboku: see Tsuruya NAMBOKU.

Nāmdev (*1272; †1350), Marāṭhī poet-saint and friend of Jnāneśvar*. His work is inextricably confused with that of several other Nāmdevs of later date.

N. Macnicol, Psalms of the Marāṭhā Saints (1923).
H.G.R. (I.R.)

Namiki GOHEI (*Osaka 1747; †Edo [=Tokyo] 27 II 1808), Japanese author of over 110 plays. Gohei was a pseudonym; his real personal name is unknown. Some later playwrights also took the name Namiki Gohei; it was one of these who wrote the famous kabuki play Kanjinchō ('The Subscription List'; 1840; Eng. tr. A. C. Scott, 1953).
E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Namiki SENRYŪ, pseud. of NAMIKI SŌSUKE (*Osaka c. 1695; †XII 1751), Japanese puppet-play writer. One of the successors of Chikamatsu* Monzaemon as a writer of puppet-plays, he often worked in collaboration with others, as, for instance, Takeda* Izumo.
E.B.C.

Sugawara denju tenarai kagami (1746; wr. in collab. with Takeda Izumo and Miyoshi Shōraku); summaries in: Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Classic Japanese Literature (1948); F. Bowers, Japanese Theatre (1952); A. S. and G. M. Halford, The Kabuki Handbook (1956).
E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Nana bint Usuman: see Asma bint Usuman.

Nānak (*1469; †1539), first Sikh Guru or pontiff. His poems are in the Adi Granth, the Sikh bible.

W. H. McLeod, Gurū N. and the Sikh Religion (1968).
H.G.R. (C.S.)

Nansen, PETER (*Copenhagen 20 I 1861; ∞1887 Louise Brock, ∞1896 Betty Müller; †Mariager 31 VII 1918), Danish novelist and playwright. He began as a journalist, but soon went into publishing. His three novels published 1893-95 were widely discussed and have been translated into many languages.

Julies Dagbog (1893); Maria (1894); Guds Fred (1895; all three tr. in J. Le Gallienne, Love's Trilogy, 1906); Brødrene Menche (1915); Livets Lyst (1917); Hendes Elskede (1918).—Samlede Skrifter (3 vols, 1908-09). E.B.

Naogeorgus (KIRCHMAIR, KIRCHMEYER), THOMAS (*Hubelschmeiss, nr Straubing 1511; †Wiesloch 29 XII 1563), German dramatist. A keen follower of Luther*, despite doctrinal differences, he wrote two notable Latin plays supporting him. Pammachius (1538), the most impressive Protestant polemical drama, performed 1545 at Cambridge by members of Christ's College, violently attacks the Pope as the Antichrist; in Mercator (1540), a comic 'Everyman'* play, faith is extolled above good works. Both plays have a fine dramatic sense, brilliant use of satire and invective, and genuine feeling. The verse epic Regnum papisticum (1555) also attacks the Papacy.

Pammachius (ed. J. Bolte, 1891; Act I with good intro. A. E. Berger in Dt. Lit. in Entw.-Reihen, V, 1935); Regnum papisticum (Eng. tr. B. Googe, 1570); Mercator (ed. J. Bolte in Drei Schauspiele vom sterbenden Menschen, 1927).

L. Theobald, 'T. N., der Tendenzdramatiker der Reformationszeit' in Neue kirchliche Zschr., XVIII (1907); F. Wiener, N. im England der Reformationszeit (diss. Berlin, 1907); A. Hübner, 'Studien zu T. N.' in Zschr. für dt. Altertum, LIV, LVII (1913, 1920). D.G.D.

Napier, SIR WILLIAM FRANCIS PATRICK (*Celbridge, Kildare 17 XII 1785; ∞1812 Caroline Fox; †London 10 II 1860), English soldier and historian. R.M.H.

History of War in the Peninsula (6 vols, 1828-40); Conquest of Scinde (1845); Life and Opinions of Sir Charles Napier (4 vols, 1857).

H. A. Bruce, Life of General Sir W. F. P. N. (2 vols, 1864). R.M.H. (K.W.)

Napierski: see Lange, ANTONI.

Nara SINGDE: see Na-lan HSING-TÊ.

Narasimha Mahetā (*c. 1500; †1580), the greatest Gujarātī bhakti poet. His devotional verse is all addressed to Krishna as manifest in the temple at Dwarka. I.R.

Narayan, R. K. (*1906), Indian novelist, son of a headmaster. Educated solely in South India, himself a product of the middle class, he describes their beliefs, superstitions and perhaps some of their prejudices in a small town which he calls Malgudi, with irony but also sympathy. He has a keen eye for the comic and the oddity in man. He has written more than half a dozen novels and two hundred short stories, but established himself as an important contemporary novelist with The Guide (1959). As a story-teller, portraying life with detachment, he has hardly a rival, but his mode of treatment and linguistic resources are beginning to be questioned in India.

Swami and Friends (1935); The Bachelor of Arts (1937); The English Teacher (1945); The Financial Expert (1952); A Dateless Diary (1960); The Man-eater of Malgudi (1961); Gods, Demons and Others (1965); The Vendor of Sweets (1967). C.D.N.

Nardi, JACOPO (*Florence 1476; †Venice 1563), Italian historian, author of Delle istorie della città di Firenze (1582) and of Vita di Antonio Giacomini (1567), a work admired by Pietro Giordani*. His two comedies, L'Amicizia (between 1502 and 1512) and I due felici rivali (produced 1513), are based on stories from Boccaccio*.

Vita di Antonio Giacomini e altri scritti minori di J. N. (ed. C. Gargioli, 1867); I due felici rivali (ed. A. Ferraioli, 1901; with imp. pref.); Delle istorie della città di Firenze (5 vols, 1925).

A. Pieralli, La vita e le opere di J. N. (1901); M. Lupo-Gentile, 'Studi sulla storiografia fiorentina' in Annali Reale Scuola di Pisa, XIX (1905); I. Sanesi, La Commedia, I (1944). B.R.

Narezhnay, VASILY TROFIMOVICH (*Mirgorod 1780; †1826), Russian novelist of Ukrainian extraction. His picaresque and satirical novel Rossiyskiy Zhil' Blaz, the first three parts of which appeared in 1814, abounds, in spite of its artistic flaws, in good realistic descriptions of Russian life. Two of his novels, Bursak (1824) and especially Dva Ivana (1825), with its mixture of realism, humour and satire, influenced Gogol*. His other narratives are indictments of provincial gentry, of serfdom and of the Russian administration in the Caucasus.

Romany i povesti (10 vols, 1935-36); Rossiyskiy Zhil' Blaz (1938); Izbrannye sochineniya (2 vols, 1956).

N. Belozerskaya, V. T. N. (1896); V. F. Pereverzev, U istokov russkogo real'nogo romana (1937). J.L.

Narmadāsankar Lālsankar (*1833; †1896), poet and founder of Gujarātī literary and social criticism. H.G.R. (I.R.)

Narsai: see SYRIAC LITERATURE, text and biblio.

Naruszewicz, ADAM (*nr Pinsk 20 X 1733; †Janów 6 VII 1796), Polish author. After becoming a Jesuit he taught in Vilno Academy but later studied in France and settled for some years in Warsaw. In his fables and satires (the best of his verse) he aimed at the improvement of his readers and his pastorals are modelled on those of Gessner*. At the King's wish he wrote the first critical history of Poland (up to the end of the 14th century). He proved a successful translator of the ancient poets and of Tacitus*.

Dzieła (4 vols, 1778; 5th augm. ed. Wybór poezyi z dołączeniem kilku pism prozą oraz listów, 1882).—Historia narodu polskiego (II–VII, 1780–86; I, posth., 1824).

M. N. Rutkowska, Bishop A. N. and His History of the Polish Nation (1941); A. Aleksandrowicz, Twórczość satyryczna A. N. (1964). S.S. (P.H.)

Nasarre, BLAS ANTONIO (*Alquézar, Huesca 1689; †Madrid 1751), Spanish critic, Professor of law, librarian to the King and member of the Royal Academy. In life he enjoyed high reputation as a man of letters; took a prominent part in the polemics on Spanish drama; labelled Lope de Vega* and Calderón* corruptors of taste, and thought Avellaneda's* Don Quixote superior to Cervantes*.

Juicios sobre la obra in A. F. de Avellaneda, Segundo tomo del Ingenioso hidalgo Don Quijote (1732); Disertación sobre las comedias de España in Teatro de Cervantes (1749).

M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Historia de las ideas estéticas en España, V (1901); J. A. Cook, Neo-Classical Drama in Spain: Theory and Practice (Dallas, 1959). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Nascimento, FRANCISCO MANUEL DO (*Lisbon 23 XII 1734; †Paris 25 II 1819), Portuguese poet—frequently referred to by his Arcadian pseudonym FILINTO ELYSIO. He followed an ecclesiastical career. In 1778 he was denounced before the Inquisition for reading 'revolutionary' literature but succeeded in escaping to France where he spent the rest of his life. His writings include many translations from the Latin classics and from French.

Obras (11 vols, Paris, 1817–19; 22 vols, Lisbon, 1836–40); Filinto Elísio: Poesias (ed. J. Pereira Tavares, 1941; anthology).

J. M. Pereira da Silva, F. E. e a sua época (Rio de Janeiro, 1891); T. Braga, F. E. e os dissidentes da Arcadia (1901); C. Olavo, A vida amargurada de F. Elísio (1944). T.P.W.

Nash, OGDEN (*Rye, N.Y. 19 VIII 1902; ∞ 1931 Frances Leonard; †Baltimore, Md. 19 V 1971), American humorist. He pinpoints the foibles of modern society with shrewd and sympathetic satire. In 1943 he worked with Kurt Weill and S. J. Perelman on One Touch of Venus.

Hard Lines (1931); Free Wheeling (1931); The Bad Parent's Garden of Verse (1936); I'm a Stranger Here Myself (1938); The Face Is Familiar (1940); Versus (1949); Family Reunion (1951); The Private Dining Room (1953); Cruise of the Aardvaark (1967); There's Always Another Windmill (1968).

Modern American Poetry (ed. L. Untermeyer, 1942). H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

Nashe, THOMAS (*Lowestoft 1567; †?1601), English pamphleteer, novelist and playwright. Nashe was educated at Cambridge. His sarcastic genius lost him several patrons and led to his imprisonment (1597), but it rendered him the most formidable satirist of his day. In his pamphlets he assailed shoddy writing and excoriated the Puritan 'Martin Marprelate' and the pedantic Gabriel Harvey*. The Unfortunate Traveller (1594) is the earliest English picaresque novel and the most vigorous representation of criminal life before Defoe*. Rabelais* and Aretino* influenced Nashe's pungent prose style.

PROSE: The anatomie of absurditie (1589); Pierce Pennilesse his supplication to the divell (1592); Strange newes or The Apologie of Pierce Pennilesse (1592); Christs teares over Jerusalem (1593); The terrors of the night (1594); Have with you to Saffron-Walden (1596); Nashes lenten stuffe (1599); The choice of valentines (ed. J. S. Farmer, 1899).—PLAYS: Summers Last Will and Testament (1600); Dido, Queene of Carthage (with Marlowe; 1594).—The Works of T. N. (ed. R. B. McKerrow, 5 vols, 1904–10).

A. Piehler, T. N. und seine Streitschriften (1907); A. H. Upham, The French Influence in English Literature (1908); H. Brown, Rabelais in English Literature (1933); D. C. Allen, 'The Anatomie of Absurditie' in Stud. in Philol., XXXII (1935); A. K. Croston, 'The use of imagery in The Unfortunate Traveller' in Rev. Eng. Stud., XXIV (1946); G. R. Hibbard, T. N. (1962); M. Schlauch, Antecedents of the English Novel, 1400–1600 (1963); B. E. Teets, 'Two faces of style in Renaissance prose fiction' in Sweet Smoke of Rhetoric (ed. N. G. Lawrence and J. A. Reynolds, 1964); J. L. Livesay, The Elizabethan Image of Italy (1964). W.A.A.

Nāṣir-al-Dīn Ṭūsī, ABU JA'FAR MUḤAMMAD (*Tus 18 II 1201; †Baghdad 26 VI 1274), Persian philosopher and astronomer, lived during the Mongol invasion, and was made vizier by the Mongol ruler, Hülāgu. He is among the foremost scientists of the Islamic world and an outstanding Shi'ite philosopher, writing in Persian and Arabic. A number of quatrains are attributed to him.

Tajrid al-Ī'tiqād (Tehran, n.d.); Akhlaq-i Nāṣiri (Lahore, 1848; Nasirian Ethics, tr. G. M. Wickens, 1964); Auṣāf al-Ashrāf (Tehran, 1884); Asās al-Īqtibās (1947).—Complete list of his works in C. Brockelmann, Geschichte der arabischen Literatur, I (1897–98).

M. Horton, Die philosophischen Ansichten von Razi und Tusi (1910); R. Strothmann, Die Zwölfer Schi'a (1926). E.Y.

Nāsir-i Khusrāu, ABŪ MU'IN (*Qubadiyan of Balkh 1003; †Yumgan 1060), Persian poet, traveller and writer, was brought up in Khurasan, the scene of recurrent political and religious struggles. In 1045 he suddenly abandoned his dissolute life and set out on a pilgrimage to Mecca, visiting western Persia, Iraq, Syria and Palestine on the way. Continuing to Egypt (1047), he became an ardent convert to Ismailism, was blessed by the Fatimid Caliph and entrusted with a missionary task in Khurasan. Here, however, he encountered the opposition of the Seljuk régime and finally took refuge in Yumgan valley, where he spent the rest of his life.

Most of Nāsir's works are devoted to expounding his religious doctrine. Among his prose work, Safar-Nāma is especially valuable for its information about the countries he visited. His poems are written in a dignified and robust style and display many interesting archaisms in vocabulary and syntax. His Divān is distinguished by its sustained ethical aim and total absence of eulogies.

PROSE: Safar-Nāma (ed. and Fr. tr. C. Schefer, 1881; standard ed. Berlin, 1923; Diary of a Journey Through Syria and Palestine, tr. G. Le Strange, 1888); Zād al-Musāfirin (Berlin, 1923); Vajh-i Dīn (ibid., 1924).—VERSE: Raushanā'i-Nāma (ed. and Ger. tr. H. Ethé in Zeitschrift der deutschen morgenländischen Gesellschaft, XXXIII-XXXIV, 1879-80); Six Chapters or Shish Fasl (ed. and tr. V. Ivanov, Leiden, 1949); Sa'adat-Nāma (Le livre de félicité, ed. and Fr. tr. E. Fagnan in Zeitschrift der deutschen morgenländischen Gesellschaft, XXXIV, 1880; tr. G. M. Wickens in Islamic Quart., II, 1955); Divān (Tabriz, 1864; best ed. Tehran, 1928; sel. Ger. tr. H. Ethé in Nachrichten von der Königl. Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen, 1882, and Zeitschrift der deutschen morgenländischen Gesellschaft, XXXVI, 1882).

H. Ethé, Nāsir bin Khusrāu's Leben, Denken und Dichten (1884); E. G. Browne, Nasir-i Khusrāu, Poet, Traveller and Propagandist (1905; repr. from Jour. Roy. Asiat. Soc.); V. Ivanov, Nasir-i Khusrāu and Ismailism (Leiden, 1948); Problems in Nasir-i Khusrāu's Biography (1956); J. Rypka, History of Iranian Literature (1968). E.Y.

Naṣrallāh, NIZĀM AL-DĪN ABU'L-MA'ĀLĪ, 12th-century Persian writer, is the author of the best Persian version of Kalila va Dimna (rendered from the Arabic of Ibn* al-Muqaffa'; see BDPAT). Naṣrallāh dedicated his version to Bahrām Shāh of Ghazna (1118-50), to whose court he was attached.

Kalila va Dimna is one of the outstanding and widely admired specimens of Persian stylized prose. Written in a firm, balanced and mildly adorned style with an extremely apt choice of words, it has had considerable influence on Persian prose and vocabulary.

Kalila va Dimna (Tehran, 1864; ed. M. Minavi, ibid., 1964).—C. Rieu, Catalogue of the Persian MSS in the British Museum, II (1881). E.Y.

Nassington, WILLIAM (fl. ?1375), doubtful English author of pieces in the Richard Rolle* apocrypha.

J. E. Wells, A Manual of the Writings in Middle English (1916). R.W.B.

Nathansen, HENRI (*Hjørring 17 VII 1868; ∞ 1899 Johanne Henrika Kirstine Jørgensen; †Lund, Sweden 16 II 1944), Danish playwright, novelist and essayist. He was of Jewish descent and both his plays and his novels are concerned with Jewish members of the Danish community. He died as a refugee in Sweden during the Second World War.

PLAYS: Mor har Ret (1904); Den gode Borger (1907); Daniel Hertz (1908); Drømmen (1911); Indenfor Murene (1912); Affæren (1913); Dr. Wahl (1915).—NOVELS: Sommernat (1899); Den forbudne Frugt (1901); Floden (1902); Af Hugo Davids Liv (4 vols, 1917); Mendel Philipsen & Søn (1932).—ESSAYS: Georg Brandes (1929); Portrætsstudier (1930).—Memento (poems; 1951). E.B.

Natsume SŌSEKI, pseud. of NATSUME KINOSUKE (*Edo [=Tokyo] 9 II 1867; ∞VI 1896 Nakane Kyōko; †9 XII 1916), Japanese novelist, essayist, critic and poet. After graduating from Tokyo Imperial University in 1893, he became a schoolmaster, teaching English, and in 1900 was sent by the Japanese government to England for three years to study English literature. On his return in 1903 he was appointed by his old University as lecturer in English literature. Hitherto he had written nothing of importance except a few haiku poems, but almost immediately he started publishing novels, which met with such rapid success that in 1907 he resigned his lectureship and joined a Tokyo newspaper as its literary editor. His output of novels and essays remained large, even though after 1910 (when he had a serious illness) his health was very poor. His fame was made almost overnight by Waga hai wa neko de aru (1905-06; I Am a Cat, tr. K. Ando, 1906-09; tr. K. Shibata, 1961), a severe but humorous criticism of the ways of the world seen through the eyes of a cat. His next novel, Botchan (1906; Young Master, tr. Y. Morri, 1918; tr. U. Sasaki, 1922; one ch. tr. B. Watson in Modern Japanese Literature, ed. D. L. Keene, 1956), a masterpiece, was admired because, like most of his subsequent writings, it was free from the excessive melodrama of many contemporary novels, Kusamakura was probably his best work. Although his method later tended to be more 'psychological', his style retained the same qualities of wit and humour, and the same relaxation and freedom from emotional tension. His influence on modern Japanese novel-writing is immense, and the popularity of his writings has steadily increased.

Rondontō (1905); Kusamakura (1906; Pillow of Grass, tr. U. Sasaki, 1927; Unhuman Tour, tr. K. Takahashi, 1927; The Three-Cornered World, tr. A. Turney, 1965); Nihyakutōka (1906); Gubijinsō (1907); Sanshirō (1908; summary in T. Kunitomo, Japanese Literature Since 1868, 1938); Sore kara (1909; summary in Kunitomo, op. cit.); Mon (1910; La porte, tr. R. Martinie, 1927); Kōjin (1912-13; The Wayfarer, tr. Beongcheon Yu, 1967); Kokoro (1914; 'The Heart', summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, I, 1939; Eng. trs: I. Kondo, 1956; E. McClellan, 1957 [best tr.]; Le pauvre cœur des hommes, tr. D. Horiguchi and G. Bonneau, 1957); Michigusa (1915; summary in Kunitomo, op. cit.; Grass on the Wayside, tr. E. McClellan, 1969).—ESSAYS: Yume jūya (1908; Ten Nights' Dreams, tr. S. Hata and D. Shirai, 1934); Garasudo no naka (1915; Within My Glass Doors, tr. I. Matsuhara and E. T. Iglehart, 1928).—Bungakuron (criticism; 1907).—Sel. poems tr. A. Miyamori in An Anthology of Haiku (1932).

E. McClellan, 'The implications of S.'s Kokoro' in Monumenta Nipponica, XIV (1958-59), 'An introduction to S.' in Harvard Jour. Asiat. Stud., XXII (1959) and Two Japanese Novelists: S. and Tōson (1969); V. H. Viglielmo, 'An introduction to the later novels of N. S.' in Monumenta Nipponica, XIX.1-2 (1964). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Navagero, ANDREA (*Venice 1483; †Blois 1529), Italian humanist, renowned for his gardens at Treviso and Murano. He worked with Aldus Manutius on the editing of Latin texts. Through his contact with Juan Boscán* he introduced Italian 16th-century poetry into Spain.

Opera omnia (with Lat. biog. G. A. Volpi, 1718; 1754).

E. Cicogna, Della vita e delle opere di A. N. (1855); G. Zanella, 'Giovanni Boscan e A. N.' in Paralleli letterari (1885); F. Flamini, Studi di storia letteraria italiana e straniera (1895); E. Carrara, La poesia pastorale (1904-08). B.R.

Nay, GIACHEN MICHEL (*Trun 3 XII 1860; †ibid. 14 XI 1920), Ræto-Romansch writer of short stories and lyrics. Of humble peasant origin, he studied medicine in Basle and took up a rural practice in Thusis and Trun. His tales deal with Sursilvanian peasant life—humorously, sometimes with an undertone of satire, but always vividly. They culminate in Vacca pugniera, on the theme of brave endeavour and heroic defeat. His lyrics fall short of the better tales.

Ovras (2 vols, 1926-27).—G. Desax, 'G. M. N.' in Annalas da la Soc. Retorum., XXXVI (1922); R. R. Bezzola in Tiara grischuna (with tr. of two short stories; 1943); and in The Curly-Horned Cow (with tr. of Vacca pugniera; 1971). R.R.B.

Naydēnov, also Naidēnov, S., pseud. of SERGEY ALEXANDROVICH ALEXEYEV (*Moscow 1869; †1922), Russian playwright, regarded as Ostrovsky's* successor. He, too, deals with the world of patriarchal Russian merchants, but more with the conflict between fathers and the younger generation, as in his powerful realistic play Deti Varyushina (1901).

Bogaty chelovek (1903); Avdotyina zhizn' (1904); Pyesy (2 vols, 1904-11).

I. V. Vladislavlev, Russkie pisateli (1924).

J.L.

Nayler, B. S. (*Cherbourg 1780; †?), English man of letters and adventurous businessman. Active in Amsterdam from 1820 as a calligrapher, school-teacher, translator, printer, publisher, auctioneer and bookseller; his English Literary Society (1823) propagated the English language and literature. His remarkable career in Holland ended in bankruptcy and departure for Australia (c. 1850).

An appeal to the judgments of the Dutch and French inhabitants of . . . Amsterdam on the Eng. language (1822); Pillen voor recensende geleerden te slikken (1838); Nayler's Zak-kalender, nota en tekstboek voor 1842 (1842).

E. J. Potgieter, Leven van Bakhuijzen van den Brink (1870); A. C. Kruseman, Bouwstoffen voor een geschiedenis van den Nederl. Boekhandel, I (1886). J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Nazareth, BEATRIJS VAN (*Tienen c. 1206; †Nazareth, nr Lier 1268), Dutch mystic. As a girl of eight she was entered as oblata at the Cistercian nunnery at Bloemendaal where she took the veil at 15; between 1222 and 1236 she was at Maagdendaal and then at Nazareth, where she was chosen Prioress. She wrote an autobiography and a number of tracts, all but one (Seven Manieren van Minne) known only in the Latin adaptation of the Vita Beatricis.

Seven Manieren van Minne (ed. L. Reypens and J. van Mierlo, 1926; mod. versions: J. van der Kun, 1929; J. Caeymaex, 1929; Eng. tr. in E. Colledge, Mediaeval Netherlands Religious Literature, 1965); Vita Beatricis (ed. L. Reypens, 1964).

St. Axters in Nationaal Biografisch Woordenboek, II (1966); H. Vekeman in Ons Geestelijk Erf, XLVI (1972). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Nazim Hikmet Ran (*Salonica 1902; †Moscow 3 VI 1963), Turkish poet. Son of a doctor from an upper-class family, he was educated at Istanbul Naval College and Moscow University. He first attracted attention by his patriotic poems, but returned from Russia a convinced Marxist as reflected in his poems and plays. Released from prison by an amnesty, he went in 1951 to Soviet Russia. He abandoned traditional verse technique and introduced free verse into Turkish; he sometimes reaches the heights of great romantic poetry. His somewhat over-powering style later became less loud and more balanced and concentrated. But his art suffers sometimes from polemic and, in his early works, from an excessive use of familiar and slang terms. His plays, in lucid and forceful prose, also revolve round themes inspired by Marxism. Since 1964 his work has been widely revised and discussed in Turkey.

VERSE: 835 Satır (1929); Jokont ile Siyau (1929); Yaran 3 (1930); 1+1=1 (1930); Sesini kaybeden Şehir (1931); Gece Gelen Telgraf (1932); Benerci Kendini Niçin Öldürdü (1932); Portreler (1935); Taranta Babuya Mektuplar (1935); Simavne Kadısı Oğlu Şeyh Bedrettin Destam (1936); Kurtuluş savaşı destam (1965); Dört hapisneden (1966); Rubailer (1966); Yeni şiirler (1966); Memleketimden insan manzaraları (5 vols, 1966-67); Kuvayı Milliye (1968).—PLAYS: Bir Ölü Evi yahut Merhumun Hanesi (1932); Kafatası (1932); Unutulan Adam (1935); Ferhad ile Şirin (1965); Sabahat (1965); İnek (1965); Ocak başında (1966); Yolcu (1966); Yusuf ile Menofis (1967).—NOVELS: Kan konuşmaz (1965); Yaşamak güzel şey be kardeşim (autobiographical; 1967).—VARIOUS: Yeşil elmalar (1965); İt ürür, kervan yürür (1965).—CORRESPONDENCE: Kemal Tahir'e Mahpushaneden mektuplar (1968); Bursa cezaevinden Vâ-Nû'lara mektuplar (1970).

E. Saussey, Prosateurs turcs contemporains (1935); Vâ-Nû, Bu dünyadan N. geçti (1965); Orhan Kemal, N. H.'le üç buçuk yıl (1965); A. Kadir, 1938 Harp Okulu olayı ve N. H. (1966); Kemal Sülker, N. H. dosyası (1967); Hilmi Yücebaş, N. H. Türk basınında (1967). F.İ.

Nazir Ahmad (*1836; †1912), Islamic scholar, lecturer and translator, and one of the great masters of Urdu prose, best known for the series of didactic tales written between 1869 and 1892. The excellence of their characterization, dialogue, and descriptive prose helped lay the foundations of the novel.

The Bride's Mirror (tr. G. E. Ward, 1903).

R.R.

Nazrul Islam: see Kaji Nazrul Islam.

Neal, JOHN (*Portland, Me. 25 VIII 1793; ∞1828 Eleanor Hall; †ibid. 20 VI 1876), American editor, novelist, critic and poet. A tempestuous prophet for Americanism in literature, he dashed off one novel after another and introduced American writers to Britain in his contributions to Blackwood's Magazine.

Logan (1822); Errata (1823); Seventy-Six (1823); Brother Jonathan (1825); Rachel Dyer (1828); The Down-Easters (1833); Wandering Recollections of a Somewhat Busy Life (1869).

W. P. Daggett, A Down-East Yankee From the District of Maine (1920). H.L.C.

Neale, JOHN MASON (*London 24 I 1818; ∞1842 Sarah Webster; †East Grinstead 6 VIII 1866), English ecclesiastical historian and hymnologist. A High-Churchman of great erudition, he translated Greek and Latin hymns for Anglican use.

VERSE: Medieval Hymns and Sequences (1851); Hymns of the Eastern Church (1862); Collected Hymns (1914).—PROSE: Medieval Preachers and Medieval Preaching (1856); A History of the Holy Eastern Church (5 vols, 1847, 1851, 1878).

E. A. Towle, J. M. N., A Memoir (1906); A. G. Lough, The Influence of N. (1962). R.F. (M.A.)

Nebrija (or Lebrija), ELIO ANTONIO DE, otherwise A. MARTÍNEZ DE CALA (*Lebrija ?1444; †Alcalá 1522), Spanish humanist and grammarian. He studied at Salamanca and Bologna. After his return to Spain he taught rhetoric and grammar at Salamanca and later at Alcalá. He collaborated in the Complutensian Polyglot Bible. As an educationist he reformed the teaching of Latin in Spain and based his system on Valla's*. His Introductiones Latinae (1481) and his Spanish-Latin and Latin-Spanish dictionaries passed through many editions. He also wrote a number of treatises on law, theology, rhetoric, history and archaeology. He wrote commentaries on Persius* and Prudentius*. His Spanish grammar (1492) was the first serious grammar of a vernacular language to be produced in Europe; based on Latin grammars, it contains an interesting preface in which he extolled Spanish and justified his book for imperialistic reasons. His influence was felt in other European countries.

De liberis educandis in Rev. de Archivos, VIII, IX (1903); Gramática castellana (ed. E. Walberg, Halle, 1909; ed. I. González Llubera, Oxford, 1926; ed. P. Galindo Romeo and L. Ortiz Muñoz, 2 vols, 1946); Léxico de derecho civil (tr. and ed. C. H. Núñez, 1944).

P. Lemus y Rubio, 'El maestro Elio Antonio de Lebrija' in Rev. Hispanique, XXII, XXIX (1910, 1913). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Necatigil, BEHÇET (*Istanbul 1916), Turkish poet and teacher; trained in Turkish literature at Istanbul University. His poems express the difficulties of everyday life of the common people, their limitations and helplessness. His compelling style is concise and original. Of his many translations those of the works of Knut Hamsun*, Rainer Maria Rilke* and Miguel de Unamuno* (from German) are his most successful. He is also the author of many original plays for radio.

VERSE: Kapalı çarşı (1945); Çevre (1951); Evler (1953); Eski toprak (1956); Arada (1958); Dar çağ (1960); Yaz dönemi (1963); Divaçe (1965); İki

başına yürümek (1968).—RADIO PLAYS: Yıldızlara bakmak, Kadın ve kedi (1965); Gece aşevi (5 plays; 1967).

Hüseyin Cöntürk, B. N. ve Edip Cansever üstüne (1964); Mehmet Kaplan, Şiir tahlilleri, II (1965). F.İ.

Neckham, ALEXANDER: see Alexander Neckham.

Neculce, ION (*Moldavia 1672; †1745), Moldavian chronicler whose Letopiseşul Țării Moldovei covers the period 1661–1743. This chronicle is preceded by 42 historical legends, written in colourful, popular language. They reveal a gift of narration hitherto unmet among Moldavian chroniclers and were a source of inspiration for Alecsandri* and Sadoveanu*.

Letopiseşul Țării Moldovei (ed. I. Iordan, 1969). D. Velciu, I. N. (1968); G. Ivaşcu, Istoria literaturii române, I (1969). D.J.D.

Nedim, AHMED (*Istanbul 1681; †ibid. 1730), Turkish poet. Brought up as a scholar, he won the favour of the enlightened Grand Vizier, Ibrahim Pasha, who made him his librarian. He soon became one of the central figures of the Tulip Age, under Ahmed III. His Divan is the best echo of that period and vividly recreates the luxury and refinement of early 18th-century Istanbul. He is one of the very few poets of the old school who, despite the shackles of classical formalism, succeeded in achieving personal expression. Apart from his kasides and gazels marked by a colourful style, in which 'joie de vivre' predominates over depth of feeling, he also excelled in gay and vivacious şarkıs (songs) which are still sung.

Divan (ed. Halil Nihad, 1922; ed. A. Gölpınarlı, 1951).

Ahmed Refik, Lale Devri (1924); M. F. Köprülü, Divan Edebiyatı Antolojisi (1934); Hasibe Mazıoğlu, N.'in Divan şiirine getirdiği yenilik (1957); Fevziye Abdullah Tansel, 'N.' in İslam Ansiklopedisi, IX (1964); Fahir İz, Eski Türk edebiyatında nazım, I.1 (1966). F.İ.

Needham, or Nedham, MARCHAMONT (*Burford c. VIII 1620; ∞ Lucy, ∞ London 18 IV 1663 Elizabeth Thomson; †ibid. XI 1678), English journalist and pamphleteer of vast output who wrote cantankerously on religion, politics and medicine among other subjects, and provoked many satirical replies in verse and prose. Educated at Burford Grammar School and as a chorister at All Souls, he became an usher at Merchant Taylors' before taking to anti-Royalist writing in Mercurius Britanicus, which he edited 1644–46; he then wrote for the Royalist newsbook Mercurius Pragmaticus, 1647–50, but after the censorship and suppression of newsbooks, he edited the official Commonwealth Mercurius Politicus (1650–60) and The Publick Intelligencer.

The Case of the Commonwealth of England, Stated (1650); Of the Dominion, Or, Ownership of the Sea (1652; tr. of Selden, Mare Clausum); The Excellencie of a Free-State (1656); A Discourse Concerning Schools and School-Masters (1663; repr. W. H. Dunham and S. Pargellis, Complaint and Reform in England, 1938).

P. Zagorin, A History of Political Thought in the English Revolution (1954); C. V. Wedgwood, Poetry and Politics Under the Stuarts (1960); J. Frank, The Beginnings of the English Newspaper 1620–60 (1961). B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Nef'i, pseud. of ÖMER (*Hasankale; †Istanbul 27 I 1635), Turkish poet and satirist, one of the five great classics of the old school. As a youth he went to Istanbul where, after early failures, he succeeded in gaining the favour of Murad IV. But his vitriolic satires earned him many enemies and one of these, Vizier Bayram Pasha, had him executed. His satires, which spared no prominent personality, are, despite flashes of wit, often gross and obscene, but are interesting as historical and sociological material. His kasides (odes) written in a colourful and majestic style, reflect his forceful character and fiery imagination.

Divan (1837); Siham-i Kaza (MSS not ed.).—Sel. in: M. F. Köprülü, Divan Edebiyatı Antolojisi (1934); A. Karahan, N. (1954).

E. J. W. Gibb, A History of Ottoman Poetry (1900–09); İbrahim Necmi, Tarih-i edebiyat dersleri (1922); A. Karahan, 'N.' in İslam Ansiklopedisi, IX (1964); Fahir İz, Eski Türk edebiyatında nazım, I.1–2 (1966–67). F.İ.

Negri, ADA (*Lodi 3 II 1870; †Milan 11 I 1945), Italian poet and essayist. She came of working-class family and earned her living as a teacher. Her first volume of poems, Fatalità, published when she was 22, won her immediate fame, partly owing to their social content. Subsequently she poured out her passionate nature into poems celebrating love, nature and motherhood. Her work is exuberant and has poetic qualities, but is too often emphatic and undisciplined to achieve a satisfactory balance.

VERSE: Maternità (1904); Dal profondo (1910); Il libro di Mara (1919); I canti dell'isola (1924); Il dono (1936); Poesie (1948).—PROSE: Le solitarie (1917); Stella Mattutina (1921); Le strade (1926); Prose (1954).

A. Casartelli, A. N. nell'opera poetica (1956); M. Magni, L'opera di A. N. e la sua umanità (1961). J.F.C. (B.M.)

Negruzzi, COSTACHE (*Trifeşti 1808; †Iaşi 1868), Rumanian writer. Son of a petty boyar, he rose to become Minister of Finance in 1861. Among his early works were the short stories Zoe (1837) and O alergare de cai (1840), but he is chiefly remembered as the author of the first Rumanian historical novel, Alexandru Lăpuşneanul (1840), based on the reign of a 16th-century Prince of Moldavia who came into conflict with his boyars. In 1840 he was appointed one of the directors of the National Theatre in Iași, for which he adapted several French plays in his desire to foster Rumanian drama. He translated Pushkin* and Byron*, but his own poetry is rather artificial and subservient to French models.

Păcatele tinerețelor (1963); Alexandru Lăpușneanul (1969).

A. Piru, C. N. (1966); Istoria literaturii române, II (1968). D.J.D.

Nehru, JAWAHARLAL (*1889; †27 V 1964), India's first Prime Minister. Only son of a famous Allahabad lawyer, he was educated at Harrow and Cambridge, called to the Bar at the Inner Temple, and in his twenties joined the National Movement and soon became Gandhi's* trusted lieutenant.

His writings—An Autobiography (1936), The Discovery of India (1946) and Glimpses of World History (1934–35)—are animated by a personal urgency, respectively, to clarify himself to himself, to know India which he sought to serve, and inculcate in his young daughter, whose education was neglected because of his frequent imprisonments, an awareness of Nature and the family of man. If in the first we see his introspection and passionate integrity which refused to compromise even with Gandhi, in the second we notice his ability as of a 'friendly foreigner' to re-create the past of India by letting an intuitive apprehension transmute all the scholarly material into 'the elusive quality of a legend of long ago but also very real and reliable' as history, thus making it the most dependable book of Indian history; the Glimpses show insight into the history of the world and the gift to narrate it as a fairy tale. A Bunch of Old Letters (1958), Unity of India (occasional essays; 1941) and the five volumes of speeches have impressed the world with their human idiom.

Frank Moraes, J. N. (1956); Tibor Mende, Conversations With N. (1956); Michael Brecher, J. N., a Political Biography (1959); C. D. Narasimhaiah, A Study of His Writings and Speeches (1959) and The Human Idiom (lit. studs; 1967). C.D.N.

Neidhart von Reuenthal (fl. 1217–37), Bavarian poet, of knightly birth but dependent on patrons (hence the 'of sorrowvale') in Bavaria, then in Austria. He amused the court by burlesquing its Tanzlied, introducing wenches and crones, oafs and dandies, often himself as heart-breaker, at village dances on the green and in barns. Songs 'in the Neidhart manner' became the staple alternative to MINNESANG, 'Neidhart, the enemy of the peasantry', a stock theme in popular tales. (See Frankfurter*; Wittenweiler*; Wernher* der Gartenære.)

Ed. M. Haupt and E. Wiessner (1955; Kommen- tar, 1954).—A. T. Hatto and R. J. Taylor, The Songs of N. von R. (1958); M. F. Richey, Essays . . . Medieval German Love Lyric (1969).

F.P.P.

Nelson, JOHN SHAW (*Penola 22 II 1872; †Melbourne 12 V 1942), Australian poet. Of Scottish descent, he was born on a small farm in South Australia and worked in various poorly paid employments. His best lyrics display delicate perception of the nuances of human feeling and a reverent and subtle response to nature.

Poems of S. N. (1965).

J. Devaney, S. N. (1944); H. Anderson, S. N.: An Annotated Bibliography and Check-List 1893–1964 (1964); J. Wright, Preoccupations in Australian Poetry (1965); H. J. Oliver, S. N. (1968).

A.M.G.

Nekrasov, NIKOLAY ALEXEYEVICH (*Greshnevo 4 XII 1821; †St Petersburg 27 XII 1877), Russian poet. Son of a rough army officer, Nekrasov was sent to the military cadet school in St Petersburg but, on refusing to enter it, was left penniless by his father. After a period of extreme misery he started writing verse and prose, but his first book of poems, Mechty i zvuki (1840), had no success. Having met the critic Belinsky*, he embarked upon editorial activities and in 1847 acquired, with Panayev, the periodical Sovremennik which he soon turned into a mouthpiece of the radical intelligentsia. When in 1866 this periodical was forbidden, he bought Otechestvennye Zapiski from Krayevsky and imbued it with the same radical spirit. During all this time he continued to write poetry.

Nekrasov's 'depoetized' poetry is a complete contrast to the aesthetically refined Pushkinian tradition. The civic poetry of satire and indictment formed the bulk of his verses, which often were biting, but at their worst sank to the level of rhymed journalism. He struck an original note, though, in the poems modelled on the rhythmical pattern of the folk-song. Although a nobleman by birth, Nekrasov identified himself with the people's mind, life and work. This enabled him to assimilate the form and the spirit of the folk-song to perfection, as in his remarkable series Korobeyniki and the best portions of his unfinished epic Komu na Rusi zhit' khorosho (1873–76). Some of his poignant lyrics were addressed also to his mistress, with whom he had continuous rows. Full of puzzling contradictions as a man, Nekrasov the poet became a great favourite with the 'populists' and the radical intellectuals, many of whom put his poetry even above that of Pushkin*. There is a revived interest in Nekrasov in Soviet Russia where several new editions of his work and letters have been published.

Stikhotvoreniya (4 vols, 1879); Sobranie sochineniy (5 vols, 1930); Polnoye sobranie stikhotvo- reniy (1934); Zhizn' i pokhzhdeniya Tikhona Troshnikova (1931); Dramaticheskie proizvedeniya, I (1937); Sobranie sochineniy (8 vols, 1965-67).—Who Can Be Happy and Free in Russia (1917) and Poems (1929; both tr. J. M. Soskice).

Studs by: G. V. Plekhanov (1903); A. N. Pypin (1905); V. I. Pokrovsky (1906); V. Polyansky (1921); L. Mel'shin (1922); I. N. Rozanov (1924); K. I. Chukovsky (1926, 1949); V. M. Maximov (1938); A. M. Egorin (1941); N. L. Stepanov (1947); C. Corbet, N. l'homme et le poète (1948); Literaturnoye nasledstvo (of utmost importance for any student; 3 vols, 1946-49); B. O. Korman, Lirika Nekrasova (1964); M. M. Gin, O svoeyebrazii realizma Nekrasova (1966); N. Stepanov, N. i sovyetskaya poeziya (1966). J.L.

Nekrasov, VICTOR PLATONOVICH (*1911), Soviet writer whose novel of the defence of Stalingrad, V okopakh Stalingrada (1946), is still regarded as one of the best documentary war novels. His later novel, V rodnom gorode (1954), deals with the problems of demobilized soldiers after the Second World War, while his Kira Georgievna (1961) tackles the emotional and moral complexities of two one-time lovers who, after 20 years of compulsory separation, meet again (both of them married) and renew their love. J.L.

Neledinsky-Meletsky, YURY ALEXANDROVICH (*1752; †1828), Russian poet who wrote both sentimental light poetry and cleverly stylized imitations of folk-songs. Some of these enjoyed great popularity.

Stikhotvoreniya (1850, 1876). J.L.

Nelli, JACOPO ANGELO (*Siena 1673; †Castellina del Chianti 21 I 1767), Italian dramatist. Life obscure; an Arcadian in Rome; tutor to the Strozzi family, Florence. Often considered the true precursor of Goldoni* (La suocera e la nuora). Nelli wrote many comedies in a popular, satirical style, freely imitating both Molière* and the COMEDIA DELL'ARTE in his characters, rapidity of dialogue and plots (La serva padrona, 1709).

Commedie (ed. A. Moretti, 3 vols, 1883-89; 11 comedies).—Opere (5 vols, 1731-58; 15 comedies, many still unpub.).

F. Mandò, Il più prossimo precursore di C. Goldoni: J. A. N. (1904); P. Toldi, L'œuvre de Molière et sa fortune en Italie (Turin, 1910); W. Binni, 'Fagioli e N.' in L'Arcadia e il Metastasio (1963). M.W.

Nelli, PIETRO (*Siena ?1511; †ibid. ?), Italian poet, author of jocular, satirical works, which he published under the name of ANDREA DA BERGAMO. His Satire alla carlona (1546-47) include a denunciation of Spanish rule in Italy and a tirade on her misfortunes.

Sonetti ed epigrammi (1572).

R. Cai, Intorno alle satire alla carlona di M. A. da B. (1901); V. Cian, La satira, II (1939). B.R.

Nelligan, ÉMILE (*Montreal 1882; †ibid. 18 XI 1941), Canadian poet. Son of an Irish father and a French-Canadian mother, he was of a highly neurotic temperament which made the prospect of earning his living by work in a commercial establishment quite intolerable, and he eventually became insane in his 19th year and spent the rest of his life in an asylum. He developed an extraordinary precocious genius for poetry in his late teens, expressing his dreams, fears and frustrations in flowing rhythm and richly original symbolism and imagery.

Poésies complètes (ed. L. Lacourcière, 1952); Selected Poems of E. N. (tr. P. F. Widdows, 1960).

L. Dantin, E. N. et son œuvre (1903); J. N. Samson, E. N. (1968); P. Wyczynski, E. N. (1968). R.K.S. (R.Su.)

Němcová, BOŽENA, née BARBORA PANKLOVÁ (*Vienna 4 II 1820; ∞1837 Josef Němec; †Prague 21 I 1862), Czech novelist. The daughter of an Austrian father and a Czech mother, Božena was brought up in the feudal atmosphere of the ducal estate in north-east Bohemia on which her father was a coachman. A decisive influence on her education was that of her grandmother Magdalena Novotná. During her first stay in Prague (1838-42) Němcová entered eagerly into the intellectual ferment of the time. Her marriage was not happy, and in 1850 she parted company with her husband. In the last 12 years of her life illness and penury combined with unhappy love affairs to disappoint all her hopes. It was at this time that she wrote her masterpiece Babička ('The Grandmother'; 1855), an idyllic evocation of her youth on the ducal estate near Skalce. This work represents a landmark in the history of Czech prose literature; 312 Czech editions had appeared by 1962. It is not so much a novel as a series of sketches united by the figure of the kindly, simple but wise Czech peasant-woman in whose portrayal Němcová was paying tribute to her own grandmother. In Babička modern Czech prose style attained maturity. Many of Božena Němcová's other novels and stories deal with Czech country life; the position of woman in modern society is a recurring theme.

Spisy (ed. B. Havránek and R. Havel, 1950-61).

V. Tille and M. Novotný, B. N. (8th ed. 1947).—M. Laiske, Bibliografie B. N. (1962). R.A.

Nemerov, HOWARD (*New York 1 III 1920; ∞1944 Margaret Russell), American poet and novelist. Nemerov's verse is liberal and hypothetical in tone and shows certain similarities to the work of Richard Wilbur* and Elizabeth Bishop. Its apparent simplicity conceals an inner complexity and ambiguity, and there is a stark power in his dramatic investigation of 'the terror in each man's thought'.

VERSE: Image and the Law (1947); Guide to the Ruins (1950); Salt Garden (1955); Mirrors and Windows (1958); New and Selected Poems (1960); The Next Room of the Dream (1962); The Blue Swallows (1967).—NOVELS: The Melodramatists (1949); Federigo or the Power of Love (1954); The Homecoming Game (1957).—ESSAYS: Poetry and Fiction: Essays (1963); A Journal of the Fictive Life (1965).

Poets in Progress (ed. E. B. Hungerford, 1962); J. Dickey, Babel to Byzantium (1968); P. Meinke, H. N. (1968). G.A.K.

Nemesianus, MARCUS AURELIUS OLYMPIUS, of Carthage (fl. late 3rd century A.D.), Latin poet. His four short Eclogae, which carry on the tradition of pastoral poetry, show at times a truer poetic genius than do those of Calpurnius* Siculus, to whom he is manifestly indebted. In the didactic poem on hunting, the Cynegetica, good taste and technical skill do not retrieve the general effect from dullness. In the 9th century the work was used as a textbook.

Nemesian eclogae: ed. H. Schenkl in Corpus poetarum Latinorum (ed. J. P. Postgate, 1905); ed. C. Giarratano (3rd ed. 1943; with Calpurnius); ed. with comm. C. H. Keene (1887; repr. 1967; with Calpurnius); tr. in J. W. and A. M. Duff, Minor Latin Poets (1934).

P. Monceaux, Les Africains: étude sur la littérature latine d'Afrique (1894); J. Hubaux, Les thèmes bucoliques dans la poésie latine (1930). A.J.D.

Németh, LÁSZLÓ (*Nagybánya 18 IV 1901), Hungarian essayist, novelist and dramatist. An independent and erudite writer, Németh reveals a deep critical interest in problems of contemporary society. He often appears as a lone crusader in an alien world, a theorist and teacher removed from everyday life. His lengthy novels are remarkable for their polished style and detailed observation, but, like his plays, tend to be static.

NOVELS: Gyász (1935); Bűn (1936); Égető Eszter (2 vols, 1956); Izony (1957); Revulsion, tr. K. Szász, 1965).—PLAYS: Történeti drámák (2 vols, 1956); Társadalmi drámák (2 vols, 1958); Mai témák (1963).—STUDIES: A minőség forradalma (1940); Die Revolution der Qualität, Ger. tr. 1963); Kiadatlan tanulmányok (2 vols, 1968).—N. L. munkái (coll. works; 1969- ).

J. Reményi, 'L. N., writer and reformer' in The Personalist, XXXI (1950); L. Vekerdi, N. L. (1970). G.F.C.

Nemirov, DOBRI (*Russe 11 VIII 1882; †Sofia 8 IX 1945), Bulgarian novelist. He wrote mainly on provincial town life rather than the village, which had dominated Bulgarian literature.

Drugiyat (1918); Koshmar (1919); Delo No. 9 (1925); Bratya (1927); Tumni dushi (1930); Prez ogunya (1931). V.P.

Nemirovich-Danchenko, VASILY IVANOVICH (*Tiflis 1848; †1936), Russian author and journalist who wrote many narratives and novels, always with an eye on the 'general reader'. He is versatile and entertaining, although he is generally superficial.

Personal Reminiscences of General Skobelev (tr. A. B. Hodgetts, 1884); The Princes of the Stock Exchange (tr. A. S. Rappoport, 1914); Peasant Tales of Russia (tr. C. Field, 1917). J.L.

Nemirovich-Danchenko, VLADIMIR IVANOVICH (*Tiflis 1858; †Moscow 1943), brother of Vasily; author, dramatist, producer and a founder of the Moscow Arts Theatre. With Stanislavsky*, he turned Chekhov's* plays (beginning with The Seagull, 1898) into an outstanding success.

Iz proshlogo (1936); Moya Zhizn' v iskusstve (3rd ed. 1936); Povesti i pyesy (1958).—With a Diploma and the Whirlwind (tr. W. S. Pyper, 1915); My Life in the Russian Theatre (tr. J. Cournos, 1937).

Y. Sobolev, V. I. N.-D. (1929); P. A. Markov, V. I. N.-D. i muzykal'ny teatr ego imeni (1936); N. A. Abalkin, Khudozhnik i revolyutsiya (1962). J.L.

Nennius, 9th-century Welsh writer. He is associated with the Historia Britonum, a Latin compilation of several documents, including a description of Britain, the legend of Brutus, the wars of the Saxon kings, the life of St Patrick*, the ARTHURIAN LEGEND, the wonders of Britain, etc. Nennius worked this material over and provided it with a preface.

F. Lot, N. et l'Historia Britonum (2 vols, 1934-36; with text).

J. F. Kenney, The Sources for the Early History of Ireland, I (1929); F. Liebermann, 'N.' in Essays Presented to T. F. Tout (1925). F.J.E.R.

Nepos: see Cornelius Nepos.

Nepotianus: see Valerius Maximus, biblio.

Néricault-Destouches, PHILIPPE: see Destouches, PHILIPPE NÉRICAUT.

Nėris, SALOMĖJA, pseud. of SALOMĖJA BAČINSKAITĖ (*Kėšiai 17 XI 1904; ∞1937 Bernardas Bučas, sculptor; †Moscow 7 VII 1945), Lithuanian poet. Daughter of a well-to-do peasant, she began to write poetry at high school, attended Kaunas University and won recognition for the vivid and natural style of her first collection of poems, Ankstis rytą ('Early in the Morning'; 1927). Her early lyrics were either love or nature poems, often tinged with melancholy. After graduation she taught in grammar schools, devoting the vacations to European travel. Nėris lived in Paris 1936–37, settling in Kaunas with her husband in 1937. In 1938 she published Diemedžiū žydėsiu ('Like the Southernwood I Shall Blossom'), a collection of poems for which she was awarded a State prize. After the outbreak of war she became a deputy of the Sejm and an enthusiastic supporter of the Soviet regime, to which much of her poetry was henceforth devoted.

Pėdos smely (1931); Per lužtantį ledą (1935); Laukinės obelys, Eglė žalčių karalienė, Našlaitė and Laumės dovanos (1939–40); Lakštingala negali neįliubėti (1945); Mano kraštas (1947).—Poezija (2 vols, 1946–47); Raštai (works; 1957).

A. Venclova, S. N. (1946); K. Korsakas, Literatura ir kritika (1949); Literatūra ir kalba, IV (1959); V. Kubilius, S. N.ies lyrika (1968).

H.Lc.

Nerli, FILIPPO DE' (*Florence 1485; †ibid. 1556), Italian historian, a member of the Accademia degli Orti Oricellari. His history of Florence reflects his anti-republican and pro-Medicean views.

Commentari de' fatti civili occorsi dentro la città di Firenze dal 1215 al 1537 (wr. 1534–49; pub. 1728; 2nd ed. 1859).

M. Lupo-Gentile, 'Studi sulla storiografia fiorentina alla corte di Cosimo de' Medici' in Annali Reale Scuola normale di Pisa (1905); A. Niccolai, 'F. de' N.' in Miscellanea Cian (1909).

B.R.

Neruda, JAN (*Prague 9 VII 1834; †ibid. 22 VIII 1891), Czech author. The son of a poor family, Neruda studied in Prague and became a schoolmaster. Soon, however, he was to devote himself almost exclusively to literature and journalism. As a contributor to the almanach Máj (1858) and as the literary and theatrical critic of the newspaper Národní listy he was an influential figure in the Czech intellectual society of the 1860s and 1870s. His personal life was sad; he never married and lived alone in moderate circumstances, increasingly a prey to sickness.

His most lasting literary achievement is represented by his lyric poems and ballads. The personal lyrics of Knihy veršů (1867) and Prosté motivy (1883) alternate with the more abstract Kosmické písně (1878) and his admirable and popular Balady a romance (1883). In his final lyric collection, Zpěvy páteční (1896), he broods over the national destiny of the Czechs with an almost religious ardour that recalls the Polish messianic poets.

Among Neruda's prose works his sketches and stories of life in his native Prague, Malostranské povidky (1878 and 1885), were a brilliant example of early Czech realism. His numerous feuilletons and reviews had a considerable and beneficial effect on the style of Czech journalism.

Spisy (1950 ff.).—N. v dopisech (sel. letters; ed. A. Pražák, 2nd ed. 1950).

A. Novák, J. N. (3rd ed. 1921); S. E. Mann, 'J. N.: poet and essayist' in Slavon. Rev., XXVII (1949); M. Novotný, Život J. Nerudy (4 vols, 1951–56). R.A.

Neruda, PABLO, pseud. of NEFTALÍ RICARDO REYES (*Parral 1904), Chilean poet, awarded the Nobel prize for literature in 1971. Brought up on the frontier, he was already writing poetry when in his teens he left for Santiago; here he published La canción de la fiesta (1921), Crepusculario (1923) and the collection that made him famous, Veinte poemas de amor y una canción desesperada (1924), in which the poet seeks identity through love in the isolated conditions of the modern city. From 1927 he lived for many years in the East, where he wrote the desperate, death-obsessed poems of Residencia en la tierra (3 vols, 1931, 1935, 1947); his experience of Spain in the 1930s led him to a greater commitment and eventually to join the Communist Party, and this commitment is reflected in the Tercera Residencia (1947), in his poems on Spain, and at its most achieved in his Canto General (1950; begun 1938). This proceeds organically from the invocation of America before man, through the history and conflicts of its peoples, to Chile and finally to himself, and culminates with his homage to the Party which has endowed his life with purpose. At this period Neruda had begun to recite his poems, a practice he has continued, and his Odas elementales (1954, 1956, 1957) represent a deliberate attempt to break out of an elitist attitude to poetry. His output in the 1950s and 1960s has been Protean—the love poems Los versos del capitán (pub. anon. 1952), the humour of Estravagario (1958), and the ample flow of Navegaciones y regresos (1959) and Cien sonetos de amor (1959). The fantastic creative powers, which have never staled, are the chief distinction of Neruda's poetry.

Plenos poderes (1962); Memorial de Isla Negra (1964); Arte de pájaros (1966); La Barcarola (1967); Las manos de día (1968).—Obras completas (Buenos Aires, 1968).—Residence on Earth and Other Poems (tr. Angel Flores, 1946); The Elementary Odes of P. N. (sel. tr. Carlos Lozano, 1961); The Heights of Macchu Picchu (tr. N. Tarn, 1966); We Are Many (sel. tr. A. Reid, 1967); Twenty Love Poems (tr. W. S. Merwin, 1969); Selected Poems (1970).

A. Alonso, Poesía y estilo de P. N. (Buenos Aires, 1940); M. Aguirre, Genio y figura de P. N. (ibid., 1964); E. Rodríguez Monegal, El viajero inmóvil (ibid., 1967). J.F.

Nerval, GÉRARD DE, pseud. of GÉRARD LABRUNIE (*Paris 22 V 1808; †ibid. 26 I 1855), French poet and man of letters. The son of an army doctor who never understood him, he lost his mother as a child and was brought up in the Valois by an uncle. He travelled widely in Europe and the East which besides providing the material for his travel books was largely responsible for the colour and the exotic element in his work. He was mentally unbalanced and after escaping from a private asylum committed suicide by hanging himself from a lamp-post. His prose works are a mixture of fantasy and autobiography, and Aurélia in particular was deeply influenced by occult theories. Sylvie, a story of extraordinary delicacy and charm, is a masterpiece of French prose, and Les Chimères are among the loveliest and most mysterious poems in the French language.

VERSE: Napoléon et la France guerrière (1826); Les Chimères (1854).—Léo Burckart (play; 1839).—PROSE: Scènes de la vie orientale (2 vols, 1850); Voyage en orient (1852); Les Filles du feu (cont. Les Chimères; 1854); Aurélia (1855; tr. R. Aldington, 1932).—TRANSLATIONS: Faust, I (1828); Faust, II (1840).—Œuvres complètes (ed. H. Clouard, 10 vols, 1927–31); Œuvres complémentaires (ed. J. Richer, 8 vols, 1959–64).

A. Marie, G. de N. (1914); J. Richer, G. de N. et les doctrines ésotériques (1947); L. H. Sébillotte, Le secret de G. de N. (1948); A. Coléno, Les portes d'ivoire (1948); S. A. Rhodes, G. de N.: Poet, Traveller, Dreamer (1951); J. P. Richard, Poésie et profondeur (1955); L. Cellier, G. de N. (1956, 1965); J. Richer, N. expérience et création (1963); R. Jean, N. par lui-même (1964); E. Peyrouzet, G. de N. inconnu (1965); K. Schürer, Thématique de N. ou le monde recomposé (1968); R. Chambers, G. de N. et la poétique du voyage (1969). M.T.

Nervander, JOHAN JAKOB (*1805; †1848), Finnish-Swedish physicist and poet. Nervander joined Runeberg's* literary circle 'Lördagssällskapet' (1830), was at one time considered its most brilliant and versatile member, and together with Runeberg started the paper Helsingfors Morgonblad in 1832. His later life was devoted entirely to science; he was appointed Professor of physics at Helsingfors University in 1838.

Jephtas Bok (1832; 1840); Skrifter (1850).

A. Hultin, Minnesteckning av J. J. N. (Skrifter utgivna av Svenska Litteratursällskapet i Finland, LXXIII, 1906). B.M.E.M.

Nervo, AMADO (*Tepic 27 VIII 1870; †Montevideo V 1919), Mexican poet. Intended for the Church, he changed this career for diplomacy. But his religious training and his travels are reflected in his work. Coming early under the influence of Gutiérrez* Nájera and Darío*, he belongs to the history of MODERNISM, but, as he developed, turned the rich imagery and fluent rhythms he cultivated as a modernista more and more to religious and moral purposes. E.Sa. (J.F.)

Perlas negras (1898); Poemas (Paris, 1901); Lira heroica (1902); Perlas negras, místicas, Las voces (Paris, 1904); Los jardines interiores (1905); En voz baja (Paris, 1909); Serenidad (1914); Elevación

(1917); Plenitud (1918; Plenitude, tr. W. F. Rice, 1928); El estanque de los lotos (Buenos Aires, 1919); La amada inmóvil (1920); El arquero divino (1927).—Los cien mejores poemas de A. N. (with stud. E. González Martínez; 1919); N.: Selección breve de sus poesías (with stud. J. de Godoy; 1919); Obras completas (30 vols, 1938).

B. Ortiz de Montellano, Figura, amor y muerte de A. N. (1943). E.Sa.

Nesbit, EDITH (*London 19 VIII 1858; ∞1880 Hubert Bland; †New Romney 4 V 1924), English writer. She is remembered for her active work as a Socialist and her fantastic but human children's books.

NOVELS: The Red House: a Novel (1902); The Phoenix and the Carpet (1904); The Magic World (1912); The Complete History of the Bastable Family (1928).—VERSE: Lays and Legends (2 ser., 1886–92); Ballads and Lyrics of Socialism, 1883–1908 (1908).

D. L. Moore, E. N. (1933); N. Streatfield, Magic and Magician (1958). B.H. (M.A.)

Nescio, pseud. of JAN HENDRIK FREDERIK GRÖNLOH (*Amsterdam 22 VI 1882; ∞1906 Aagje Tike; †Hilversum 25 VII 1961), Dutch story writer. Though he published few stories, his position in Dutch literature is a very special one. From the first, his nostalgic stories on idealistic or disillusioned bohemians of long ago found admirers. In recent decades a fresh interest in his work can be discerned.

Dichtertje; de uitvreter; titaantjes (1918); Mene tekel (1946); Boven het dal (1961). J.J.O.

Nesson, PIERRE DE (*Aigueperse, Puy-de-Dôme 1383; †1439/43), French poet. He was in the service of Jean III, Duc de Berry (†15 VI 1416), and his daughter Marie, and later bailli of Aigueperse. He is celebrated for his powerful Leçons de Job (or Vigiles des morts). This poem, a commentary on passages from Job, displays the conventional gloating emphasis on the loathsome aspects of death and decomposition. Pierre de Nesson is notorious for the extremes to which he pushes this tendency, his churchyard imagery being particularly repulsive and his representation of the ordinary processes of physical existence extremely nauseating.

A. Piaget and E. Droz, P. de N. et ses œuvres (1925; incl. ed. of the Lay de guerre [1424–25] and the Oraison à Notre Dame [before 1434] and repr. of editio princeps of the Vigiles). F.W.

Nestor, 11th- and early 12th-century Kievan monk and author of lives of Theodosius (Abbot of the Kievan Crypt monastery) and the Princes Boris and Gleb—the first two Russians to be canonized. He was moreover the supposed compiler of Nachal'naya letopis, the most important document about early Slav and Russian history; but according to more recent research the chronicle was compiled by several monks. Written in a simple manner and full of anecdotic material, it brings the history of Russia up to 1110. The last portion of the chronicle, from 1040 onwards, may have been written by Nestor himself. In 1116 the chronicle was copied and perhaps partly rewritten by Sylvester, Abbot of the Vydobichy monastery. The Laurentian (1377) and the Hypatian (1420) MSS are its oldest transcripts extant.

Polnoye sobranie russkikh letopisey (1926); Povest' vremennykh let i ee istochniki (1940); Die altrussische Chronik (ed. R. Trautmann, 1948); Povest' vremennykh let (ed. D. S. Lichachev, 2 vols, 1950).—Chronique dite de Nestor (tr. L. Leger, 1884); The Russian Primary Chronicle (tr. S. H. Cross and O. P. Schlerowitz-Wetzel, 1953).

A. A. Shakhmatov, Razyskaniya o drevneyshikh russkikh letopisnykh svodakh (1908); N. K. Gudzy, History of Early Russian Literature (1949); M. D. Prisil'kov, N. letopisets (1967). J.L.

Nestroy, JOHANN NEPOMUK (*Vienna 7 XII 1801; †Graz 25 V 1862), Austrian playwright. A lawyer's son, Nestroy studied law but became a singer at the Viennese Opera House, then an actor, 1823–25 in Amsterdam, after 1827 in Graz, gradually abandoning serious for comic roles; after 1831 attached to the Theater an der Wien, becoming its director (1854–1861). Adored and detested, as a comic actor he was unsurpassed. Beginning like Raimund* with the Viennese fairy-tale play (Lumpazivagabundus, 1835, was his first great success) he soon branched off into realistic satirical plays, foreshadowing Anzenberger* in his treatment of differences of social class. Whilst, unlike Raimund, he aimed at racy theatre rather than universal values, his plays, witty, cynical and disabused, reproduced the pulse of Viennese life and contained brilliant characterization. As a parodist he could be devastating: Hebbel* and Wagner* were among his victims.

Historisch-kritische Gesamtausgabe (ed. F. Brukner and O. Rommel, 15 vols, 1924–30); Gesammelte Briefe (ed. F. Brukner, 1938).

F. H. Mautner, J. N. und seine Kunst (1937); O. Forst de Battaglia, J. N. (1962); S. Brill, Die Komödie der Sprache (1967); H. Weigel, J. N. (1967); R. Preisner, J. N. N. (1968).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Neufville, MARGARETHA JACOBA DE (*Amsterdam 6 II 1775; †Haarlem 15 VII 1856), Dutch novelist, who wrote charming novels and one of the first historical novels, De Schildknaap (1829).

J.W.W.

De kleine pligten (2 vols, 1824); Elisabeth Basmoeth (2 vols, 1836); Acht oorspronkelijke Nederduytsche verhalen voor de jeugd (1840).

P. A. A. Boeser, Leven en werken van M. J. de N.

(1889); G. Stuiveling in Nieuwe Taalgids, LVI (1963). J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Neukirch, BENJAMIN (*Reinke/Saale 27 III 1665; †Ansbach 15 VIII 1729), German poet, who began as an admirer of Hofmann* von Hofmannswaldau and edited a famous collection of poems by the Silesians, with an important introduction. Later Canitz* converted him to a sober style which earned him the approval of Gottsched*.

Galante Briefe und Gedichte (1695); Herrn von Hofmannswaldau und anderer Deutschen auserlesene und bisher ungedruckte Gedichte (7 vols, 1695–1727; crit. ed. A. G. de Capua and E. A. Philippson, 1960–); Unterricht von teutschen Briefen (1700); Geistliche Poesien (1725); sel. poems ed. L. Fulda in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat. Lit., XXXIX.

W. Dorn, N. (1897); A. Hübscher, 'Die Dichter der Neukirchschen Sammlung' in Euphoriion, XXVI (1925). L.W.F.

Neumann, ALFRED (*Lautenburg 15 X 1895; †Lugano 3 X 1952), German novelist, playwright, essayist, translator (from the French). He achieved astonishing success with his historical novels and plays, with their virtuosity of dialogue, skilfully built up suspense, and topical implications in their treatment of past events.

NOVELS: Der Teufel (1926; The Devil, tr. H. Paterson, 1928); Rebellen (1927; The Rebels, tr. idem, 1929); Der Held (1930; The Hero, tr. idem, 1931); Narrenspiegel (1933; Mirror of Fools, tr. T. and P. Blewitt, 1933); Neuer Cäsar (1934; New Caesar, tr. E. and C. Paul, 1934); Königin Christine (1936; Life of Christina of Sweden, tr. B. Balogh, 1935); Die Volksfreunde (1951).—Der Patriot (play; 1926; tr. A. Dukes, 1928).—König Haber (1926; King Haber, and Other Stories, tr. M. Busch, A. H. King and C. Brooks, 1930).

R. T. Taylor, 'A. N.' in Schweizer Rundschau, LVI (1956). R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Neumann, ROBERT (*Vienna 22 V 1897), German parodist, novelist and playwright; very widely translated. His early parodies, Mit fremden Federn (1927) and Unter falscher Flagge (1932), established his reputation overnight. In 1934 he emigrated to Great Britain. His first novel in English, The Inquest (1945), is a satirical account of the political and erotic adventures of a woman emigrant. Most of his other novels deal with problems of war-time and post-war Europe. Neumann is also active in the film industry.

Sintflut (1929; Flood, tr. W. A. Drake, 1930); Die Macht (1932; Mammon, tr. D. M. Richardson, 1933); Zaharoff (1934; Eng. tr. R. T. Clark, 1935); The Scene Is Passing (1942); The Children of Vienna (1946); Insurrection at Poshansk (1952); Olympia (1961); Der Tatbestand (1965).

Stimmen der Freunde (with biblio.; 1957).

F.M.K.

Neumann, STANISLAV KOSTKA (*Prague 5 VI 1875; †ibid. 28 VI 1947), Czech poet and essayist. Neumann's earliest work (in the 1890s) reflected the fashionable revolt against the established order in life and literature. Just before and during the First World War he produced two notable collections of verse: Kniha lesů, vod a strání (1914) and Nové zpěvy (1918). Neumann's political views, always left-wing, found their ultimate expression in his acceptance of Communism, which influenced all his later work (e.g. Rudé zpěvy, 1923). In a different field of experience his sensitive love-poetry (Láska, 1933) is memorable.

Sebrané spisy (22 vols, 1947–56).

B. Václavěk, S. K. N. (1935); Soupis díla S. K. N. (biblio.; 1959). R.A.

Neval: see Ali Şir Neval.

Neverov, ALEXANDER, otherwise ALEXANDER SERGEYEVICH SKOBELEV (*Novikovka 1886; †1923), Soviet author of peasant origin and a village teacher by profession. His narratives and novels, written in a racy language, deal with the revolutionary transformation of the village which he knew well. The book which brought him fame was Tashkent gorod khlebny (1921; Tashkent, tr. R. Merton and W. G. Walton, 1930). His ambitious novel Gusilebedi remained unfinished. He also wrote several plays.

Sochineniya (7 vols, 1928–30).

N. N. Fatov, A. S. N. (1926); N. I. Strakhov, A. N. (1961); V. P. Skovelev, A. N. (1964). J.L.

Neville, HENRY (*Billingbear, nr Waltham St Lawrence 1620; ∞Elizabeth Staverton; †?Wafeld, Berks 22 IX 1694), English writer and political thinker, educated at Merton and University Colleges, Oxford. M.P. for Reading in 1658. He translated Machiavelli's* works in 1675 and the influence of them and his life-long friend Harrington* (to whose Rota Club he belonged) can be seen in his political dialogue Plato Redivivus (1680) which advocated a great reduction in monarchical power. He is best known for his brief Isle of Pines (2 pts, 1668; repr. P. Henderson in Shorter Novels: 17th Century, 1930), a voyage imaginaire in which a shipwrecked community of one man and four women populate an uninhabited island and establish a Christian community.

Z. S. Fink, The Classical Republicans (1945; rev. 1962); C. Robbins, The 18th Century Commonwealthman (1959). R.M.W.

Newby, PERCY HOWARD (*25 VI 1918; ∞1945 Joan Thompson), a prolific English novelist who won a Somerset Maugham award with A Journey to the Interior (1945) and has published some 16 books since then, including a critical study of Maria Edgeworth* (1950).

Agents and Witnesses (1947); A Season in England (1951); The Picnic at Sakkara (1955); A Guest and His Going (1959); The Barbary Light (1962); Something to Answer For (1968).

W.R.A.

Newcastle, DUKE (DUCHESS) OF: see Cavendish.

Newman, FRANCIS WILLIAM (*London 27 VI 1805; ∞1836 Miss Kennaway; †Weston-super-Mare 4 X 1897), English writer of religious, historic and philological works; and translator, from and into Latin. Brother of John Henry Newman*.

History of Hebrew Monarchy (1847); The Soul, her Sorrows and her Aspirations (1849); Theism, Doctrinal and Practical (1858); Iliad of Homer (1856); Hiawatha: rendered into Latin (1862).

M. Arnold, On Translating Homer (1861); I. J. Sieveking, Memoirs and Letters of F. W. N. (1909); W. Robbins, The N. Brothers (1966).

R.M.H. (M.A.)

Newman, JOHN HENRY (*London 21 II 1801; †Edgbaston 11 VIII 1890), English religious writer who by his example and writings profoundly influenced the religious life of his century. In 1822 elected a Fellow of Oriel, then a centre of the new religious awareness, he became associated in friendship and work with Pusey* and Hurrell Froude and by 1828, when he was appointed vicar of St Mary's, had abandoned the evangelicism of his upbringing. On a Mediterranean cruise with Froude he wrote many of his hymns and poems, including 'Lead, Kindly Light', published as Lyra Apostolica (1836), which show, like his memorable sermons, that he used his supreme literary gifts only in the service of religion and his intellectual quest for truth. He was present at Keble's* assize sermon, which marked the launching of the Oxford Movement, and was the leading spirit in Tracts for the Times which, with his preaching at St Mary's and his study of the Church Fathers, were designed to reinforce the authority of the Anglican Church. The reception of his Tract 90, on the Thirty-Nine Articles, and his own study of early Church history, first induced him in 1841 to doubt the validity of his own position within the Anglican Church. In 1843, resigning his appointments, he withdrew to Littlemore and was received into the Roman Catholic Church in X 1845. After eighteen months in Rome he returned in 1847 to found the Oratory in Edgbaston, the main scene of his future labours, which included devoted work with the cholera sufferers of 1849. From 1854 to 1859 he was in Dublin as Rector of the Roman Catholic University, and delivered the lectures from which grew The Idea of a University. Created Cardinal in 1879, he preached once again at Oxford, but Edgbaston remained the centre of his work until his death. In 1864, in reply to Kingsley's* 'What, Then, Does Dr Newman

Mean?', he wrote Apologia pro Vita Sua, a vindication and history of his inner religious life which, with his poem The Dream of Gerontius (repub. with Verses on Various Occasions, 1874), won him an assured place in English literature.

Contrib. to Tracts for the Times (6 vols, 1834–41); Parochial and Plain Sermons (ed. W. J. Copeland, 8 vols, 1868); Lectures on the Prophetic Office of the Church (vol. I of Via Media of the Anglican Church, 1877).—The Arians of the Fourth Century (1833); Lectures on the Doctrine of Justification (1838); Select Treatises of St Athanasius (2 vols, 1842–44); Sermons preached before the University of Oxford (1843); An Essay on the Development of Christian Doctrine (1845); Loss and Gain (1848); Letters on certain Difficulties felt by Anglicans in submitting to the Catholic Church (1850); The Present Position of Catholics in England (1851); The Scope and Nature of a University Education (1852; pub. later as The Idea of a University); Verses on Religious Subjects (1853); Callista: a Sketch of the Third Century (1856); University Subjects discussed (1858); Apologia pro Vita Sua (1864); Dream of Gerontius (1866); Verses on Various Occasions (incl. N.'s contrib. to Lyra Apostolica; 1868); An Essay in Aid of a Grammar of Assent (1870); Two Essays on Miracles (1870); Discussions and Arguments on Various Subjects (1872); Essays Critical and Historical (1872); Historical Sketches (3 vols, 1872).—Letters and Correspondence . . . during his life in the English Church (with brief autobiog.; ed. A. Mozley, 2 vols, 1891); Letters and Diaries (ed. C. S. Dessain, 1961).

F. W. Newman, Contributions, Chiefly to Early History of Cardinal N. (1891); W. Ward, Life of Cardinal N. (1912); G. Faber, Oxford Apostles (1933); W. E. Houghton, The Art of N.'s Apologia (1945); M. Tierney, Tribute to N. Essays on Aspects of His Life and Thought (1945); R. Sencourt, Life of N. (1948); M. Trevor, N. (1962); C. S. Dessain, N. (1966). R.M.H. (M.A.)

Newton, SIR ISAAC (*Woolsthorpe, Lincs 25 XII 1642; †Kensington, London 20 III 1727), English scientist. Newton went to the village school at Grantham and to Trinity College, Cambridge, where he became Fellow. In 1669 he was made Lucasian Professor of mathematics, in 1699 Master of the Mint, and in 1703 President of the Royal Society. After energetically combining public service and scientific research he was knighted in 1705. His wide researches included work on gravitation, astronomy, on calculus and optics. In the last field his occasional hovering between a wave theory and a corpuscular theory of light has taken on new significance in the light of modern discoveries. Einstein* says of him, 'He combined the experimenter, the theorist, the mechanic and, not least, the artist in exposition'. Newton's literary importance depends partly on his superb prose (especially that of the Queries in his Opticks) but also on the varied and often violent literary reaction to his work. This includes borrowings by 'scientific' aestheticians like Burke*, poetic hyperbole like Pope's* 'Let Newton be', the less adulatory comments on the so-called scientific destruction of mystery and miracle, and even (it has been claimed) a new sense of light and colour which appears in 18th-century descriptive poetry (Thomson's* Seasons, for instance).

Philosophiae Naturalis Principia Mathematica (1687; The Mathematical Principles of Natural Philosophy, tr. A. Motte, 1729); Opticks or A Treatise of the Reflections, Refractions, Inflections and Colours of Light (1704; mod. ed. with foreword by Einstein, intro. E. T. Whittaker, 1931); Arithmetica Universalis (1707); Commercium Epistolicum (1712).—I. N.'s Papers and Letters on Natural Philosophy and Related Documents (ed. I. B. Cohen, 1958); Correspondence (ed. H. W. Turnbull, 1959– ); Mathematical Papers (ed. D. Whiteside, 1967– ).

Sir D. Brewster, Memoirs of the Life, Writings and Discoveries of Sir I. N. (2 vols, 1855); I. N., 1642–1727. A Memorial Volume. By Several Hands (1927; incl. biblio.); M. Nicholson, N. Demands the Muse. N.'s Opticks and the Eighteenth-Century Poets (1946); I. B. Cohen, Franklin and N. (1956); F. E. Manuel, I. N., Historian (1963) and A Portrait of I. N. (1968); J. Herivel, The Background to N.'s Principia (1966). B.H. (M.Bu.)

Newton, JOHN (*London 24 VII 1725; ∞1750 Mary Catlett; †ibid. 21 XII 1807), English clergyman of grimly adventurous early life among slavers. As curate of Olney he formed a deep friendship with Cowper*.

Authentic Narrative (1764); Olney Hymns (with Cowper; 1779); Thoughts upon the African Slave Trade (1788); Letters to a Wife (2 vols, 1793).—Works (12 vols, 1821; with Memoir by R. Cecil, 1827).

B. Martin, J. N. (1950). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Newton, THOMAS (*Park House, ?Prestbury ?1542; †?Little Ilford after 27 IV 1607), English poet, physician and clergyman, educated Trinity College, Oxford, and Queen's College, Cambridge. He dates books written before 1583 from Butley; about 1583 he received the rectory of Little Ilford. Newton was a skilled writer of Latin and English verse. He translated Seneca* and edited the Ten Tragedies (1581).

The Thebais (tr. with Seneca his Ten Tragedies, 1581; ed. T. S. Eliot, 1927). B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Nexø, MARTIN ANDERSEN (*Copenhagen 26 VI 1869; ∞1898 Margrethe Thomsen, ∞1913 Margrethe Frydenlund Hansen, ∞1925 Johanna May; †Dresden 1 VI 1954), Danish novelist and short-story writer. He was born in the slums of Copenhagen, but spent most of his childhood on the island of Bornholm. A shepherd's boy, a shoemaker's apprentice and a bricklayer, he came eventually in contact with Socialist ideas and with Danish trade unionism. From then on he devoted his life and literary talents to the cause of the working classes, first as a Social Democrat, but after the Russian Revolution as a convinced and uncompromising Communist.

Nexø's fame is based almost entirely on his two great novel cycles, Pelle Erobreren, a great epic of the proletariat, and Ditte, a novel cycle in which we follow the fate of a proletarian girl from the cradle to the grave. They are both inspired by an optimistic belief in the fundamental goodness and kindness of primitive man, and both books have been translated into many languages.

Nexø's memoirs rank among the finest in Danish literature; they are wholesome and virile, human and warm-hearted. Several of his short stories are of high literary quality, too, and like all his other works they are about poor people. His enthusiastic impressions of his many visits to the Soviet Union are recorded in several travel books.

NOVELS: En Moder (1900); Familien Frank (1901); Dryss (1902); Pelle Erobreren (4 vols, 1906–10; Pelle the Conqueror, 4 vols, 1913–16, 1 vol., 1930); Ditte Menneskebarn (5 vols, 1917–21; Ditte: Girl Alive!, 1920, Ditte: Daughter of Man, 1922, and Ditte: Towards the Stars, 1923); Midt i en Jærntid (2 vols, 1929; In God's Land, 1933); Morten hin Røde (1945); Den fortabte Generation (1948).—SHORT STORIES: Skygger (1898); Det bødes der for (1899); Muldsrud (3 vols, 1905–26); Af Dybets Lovsang (1908); Barndommens Kyst (1911); Lykken (1913); Bornholmer-Noveller (1913); Under Himlen blaa (1915); Dybhavsfisk (1918); Lotterisvensken (1919); Undervejs (1919); De tomme Pladers Passagerer (1921); De sorte Fugle (1930); Et Skriftemaal (1946).—ESSAYS AND TRAVEL BOOKS: Soldage (1903); Days in the Sun, 1929; Nytaarstanker (1919); Ringene sluttet (1919); Mod Dagningen (1923); Hænderne væk (1934); Finland (1934); Spanien (1937); Mod Lyset (1938); Breve til en Landsmand (1945); Lenin (1947); Taler og artikler (ed. B. Houmann, 3 vols, 1954–55).—Digte (verse; 1926).—MEMOIRS: Et lille Kræ (1932); Under aaben Himmel (1935); Under the Open Sky: My Early Years, 1938; For Lud og koldt Vand (1937); Vejs Ende (1939).—Breve (letters; ed. B. Houmann, 3 vols, 1969– ).

K. K. Nicolaisen, M. A. N. (1919); S. Erichsen, M. A. N. (1938); W. A. Berendsohn, M. A. N. (1948); S. Møller Kristensen, M. A. N.s Bøger. En bibliografi (1948); Bogen til M. A. N. (1949); B. Houmann, M. A. N. bibliografi (1961) and Talt og skrevet om M. A. N. (1967).—H. Slochover, Three Ways of Modern Man (1937). E.B.

Nezval, VÍTĚZSLAV (*Biskoupky 26 V 1900; †Prague 6 IV 1958), Czech author. The most prolific Czech poet since 1918, Nezval was also one of the most gifted; and the development of his talent illuminates the general climate of Czech life and poetry in his time. His literary beginnings coincided with the launching of the 'poetist' school, with its demand for 'poésie pure' (Pantomima, 1924). His next period, in which he described his poetry as Surrealist, brought forth a few poems of a quality he did not later surpass (Básně noci, 1930). Here Nezval showed his extraordinary verbal artistry at its best. Only the discipline of metrical form (stanzas, or free verses linked by a unifying rhythmical pattern) gave order to the stream of images that welled forth from an uncontrolled fantasy. Noteworthy among his other poems of that period is that recording the Czech tragedy of 1938–39 (Historický obraz, 1940; 2nd ed. 1945).

Nezval adopted Communism early in life and this cause was served by his propaganda verses (Stalin, 1949; Zpěv míru, 1950, Song of Peace, tr. S. B. Holly and J. Lindsay, 1951). The mechanical shallowness of these verses gave way in his final years to moving personal lyrics (Nedokončená, 1960).

Dílo (coll. works; 1950 ff.).—PLAYS: Milenci z kiosku (1932); Manon Lescaut (1940).—Z mého života (memoirs; 1959).

A. Jelinek, V. N. (1961).

R.A.

Ngugi, JAMES (*Limuru, Kenya 1938), Kenyan novelist, short-story writer and playwright. Ngugi studied at Makerere University College, Uganda, and Leeds University. He has been a journalist, literary editor, and University lecturer.

The first significant East African novelist, Ngugi deals with European seizing of Kenyan land and the Mau-Mau rebellion. The heroes of his first two books are romantic idealists who crack under political harshness. In the third novel, far more complex in structure, Ngugi reaches artistic maturity.

NOVELS: Weep Not, Child (1964); The River Between (1965); A Grain of Wheat (1967).—The Black Hermit (play; 1968). A.R.

Nguyễn-Du: see VIETNAMESE LITERATURE, text and biblio.

Nhật-Linh (pseud. of NGUYỄN TU'O'NG TAM): see VIETNAMESE LITERATURE, text and biblio.

Nicander (probably 2nd century B.C.), Greek didactic poet. His only two surviving poems, Alexipharmaca (on poisons and antidotes) and Theriaca (snakes, snake-bites and their remedies), are of a repellent obscurity. Possibly his lost works, including Georgica and Heteroeumena ('Metamorphoses'), were more attractive: he seems to have exercised some influence on Roman poets.

Ed. A. S. F. Gow and A. F. Scholfield (with tr. and comm.; 1953).
A.H.G.

Nicander, KARL AUGUST (*Strängnäs 20 III 1799; †Stockholm 7 II 1839), Swedish poet and dramatist. He began life as a civil servant, turned to literature, became a member of Götiska Förbundet, and, influenced by his Italian visit (1827–29), wrote Romantic lyrics. As a dramatist he did not fulfil expectations. He died in penury.

POEMS: Sånger av August (1819); Runor av Norna Gest (1824); Dikter (1825); Nya dikter (1827); Hesperider (1835).—Runasvärdet (play; 1820).—Minnen från Söder (memoirs; 2 vols, 1831–39).—Samlade dikter (1839–41).

C. D. af Wirsén, 'Minne av skalden K. A. N.' in Svenska Akad. Handl., VII (1892); G. Lokrantz, K. A. N. (1939).
B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Niccodemi, DARIO (*Leghorn 27 I 1874; †Rome 24 IX 1934), Italian playwright. After spending his youth in Buenos Aires, where he wrote his first plays in Spanish, Niccodemi went to Paris, where he came under the influence of the French dramatist Bernstein*. He returned to Italy in 1914 and formed his own company in 1921. His plays reflect, not without causticity, the pre- and post-war society in which he lived. His later plays are more ambitious but less successful.

L'ombra (1915); Scampolo (1916); La nemica (1917); La maestrina (1918); Teatrino (one-act plays; 3 vols, 1922); La Madonna (1927); Il principe (1929).

P. Baratti, D. N. (1936).
J.F.C. (B.M.)

Niccoli, NICCOLO (*Florence 1364; †ibid. 4 II 1437), Italian humanist, celebrated for his collection of classical MSS. Though he produced little original writing, he was a major influence on contemporary Florentine scholarship.

G. Zippel, N. N. (1890); R. Sabbadini, Le scoperte dei codici (1905).
D.H.

Niccolini, GIAMBATTISTA (*Bagni di San Giuliano, Lucca 29 X 1782; †nr Pistoia IX 1861), Italian dramatist. An ardent republican, he had no faith in the liberalism of Pope Pius IX, as is vividly shown in his most famous play, Arnaldo da Brescia (1837; 1st prod. 1838). Finally converted to the cause of the monarchy, he saluted Victor Emmanuel II as the liberator of Italy. His name is associated with that of Manzoni* whom he advised in the linguistic revision of I Promessi Sposi. His dramas were a potent force during the Risorgimento. Niccolini's masterpiece, Arnaldo da Brescia, is outstanding in its period for its realization of the dramatic and poetic potentialities of the theme which give the play the truth and vitality of art, independent of its immediate political and emotional significance.

Opere (ed. C. Gargioli, 8 vols, 1860–80).

A. Ponte, Arnaldo da Brescia nelle due tragedie di G. N. e Carlo Marengo (1880); A. Vannucci, Ricordi della vita e delle opere di G. B. N. (2 vols, 1886; with biblio.); E. Bertana, La tragedia (1904–05); R. Guastalla, La vita e le opere di G. B. N. (1917); T. Borgomaneri, Il romanticismo nel teatro di G. B. N. (1925); R. Formica, Il cantore d'Arnaldo (1931).
B.R.

Nicephorus (†829), Byzantine scholar and theologian, Patriarch of Constantinople 806–815. He was one of the chief opponents of the iconoclast policy and consequently died in exile. He wrote against heretics (Apologeticus minor), in particular the Emperor Constantine V (Antirhetici), and he supported the use of icons (Apologeticus major pro sacris imaginibus). He corresponded with his fellow iconodule Theodore* the Studite and also left a short history. His biography was written by Ignatius the Deacon.
J.M.H.

A. Mai, Nova Patrum bibliotheca, V (1849; with Lat. tr.); Migne, Patrologia Graeca, C (1860; with Lat. tr.); Historia syntomos (Breviarium) and Chronographicon syntomon (ed. C. de Boor, 1880). Vita S. Nicephori by Ignatius the Deacon (ed. C. de Boor, 1880).—P. J. Alexander, The Patriarch N. of Constantinople (1958); F. Dvornik, The Photian Schism (2nd ed. 1970).
J.M.H. (R.B.)

Nicephorus Blemmydes (*Constantinople c. 1197; †c. 1272), Byzantine scholar. He was tutor at the court of Nicaea to the future Emperor Theodore* II Lascaris. He refused election to the Patriarchate and in the negotiations between Latin and Greek Churches he stood between the extremists on either side. He was famous for his learning and left writings on philosophy, logic, theology, geography and rhetoric, as well as poems.
J.M.H.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXLII (1865; with Lat. tr.).—A. Heisenberg, N. B.: Curriculum vitae et carmina (1896).

M. A. Andreeva, Ocherki po kulture Vizantiiskago dvora v XIII veke (Prague, 1927).
J.M.H. (R.B.)

Nicephorus Bryennius (*Adrianople 1062; ∞1097 Anna* Comnena; †after 1137), Byzantine historian and general. His unfinished history covering the years 1070–79 sets out to glorify the Comnenian family and especially his father-in-law, Alexius I. He draws on the work of his earlier contemporaries such as Michael* Psellus and John* Scylitzes and also incorporates valuable information from the official circles in which he moved. To some extent he models himself on Xenophon*.

Commentarii (ed. A. Meineke, 1836; with Lat. tr.); Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXXVII (1864; with Lat. tr.).—G. Moravcsik, Byzantinoturcica (2nd ed. 1958).
J.M.H. (R.B.)

Nicephorus Gregoras (*Heracleia c. 1295; †c. 1359), Byzantine scholar and historian. As a young man he went to Constantinople. Here he joined a circle of humanists who combined a wide range of study with their activities as statesmen. Nicephorus' literary output was enormous, including philosophy, rhetoric, theology, astronomy, orations, poetry, letters, as well as a history of his own times. He was himself involved in the religious and political disputes of the mid-14th century, and in the Hesychast controversy he found himself in opposition to the Orthodox party and his old friend John* VI Cantacuzenus. It was to justify himself that he wrote his History. Much of his work still remains unprinted. J.M.H.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXLVIII–CXLIX (1865; with Lat. tr.); History (ed. L. Schopen and I. Bekker, 3 vols, 1829–30 and 1855; with Lat. tr.); letters (ed. with Fr. tr. R. Guiland, 1927).

R. Guiland, Essai sur N. G. (1926; with lists of pub. and unpub. writings); T. Hart, 'N. G.: historian of the Hesychast controversy' in Jour. Ecclesiastical Hist., II (1951); G. Moravcsik, Byzantinoturcica (2nd ed. 1958); I. Ševčenko, Études sur la polémique entre Théodore Métochite et Nicéphore Choumnos (1962). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Niceta of REMESIANA (fl. c. 400), Christian missionary, wrote various theological works, but is best remembered as the author of the Te Deum. The prose works now generally thought to be his were ascribed by Migne* partly to NICETAS, Bishop of Aquileia 454–485, and partly to NICETUS, Bishop of Trier in the 6th century.

Migne, Patrologia Latina, LII (1846) and LXVIII (1847).—Tr. G. G. Walsh (1949).

A. E. Burn, N. of R., His Life and Works (1905). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Nicetas Choniates, sometimes called in error NICETAS ACOMINATUS (*Chonai [the ancient Colossai]; †1210/20), Byzantine scholar, brother of Michael* Choniates. Imperial secretary, then governor of the theme of Philippopolis; after the capture of Constantinople by the Latins he played a prominent part at the court of the Emperor Theodore Lascaris in Nicaea. He left speeches, poetry, theological works and a history from 1118 to 1206. This last is a valuable source, strongly marked by the ecclesiastical interests of its highly educated author and giving a different point of view of Manuel I's reign from that of his contemporary John* Cinnamus. J.M.H.

Historia (ed. I. Bekker, 1835; with Lat. tr.); Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXXXIX–CXL (1865; with Lat. tr.); Thesaurus Orthodoxiae, ibid.; complete ed. H. von Dielen (in prep.).—Ger. tr. F. Grabler (3 vols, 1958).

G. Moravcsik, Byzantinoturcica (2nd ed. 1958). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Nicetas David (†c. 890), Bishop of Dadybra in Paphlagonia, Byzantine homilist. He wrote rhetorical sermons as well as a life of Ignatius, the Patriarch of Constantinople who abdicated and was succeeded by the scholar Photius*. He also paraphrased some of the poetry of Gregory* of Nazianzus. J.M.H.

Orationes and Vita Ignatii in Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CV (1862; with Lat. tr.); on Gregory of Nazianzus' poetry, ibid., XXXVIII (1859). Some of his work remains unprinted.

F. Lefherz, Studien zu Gregor von Nazianz: Mythologie, Überlieferung, Scholiasten (1958); F. Dvornik, The Photian Schism (2nd ed. 1970). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Nicetas Eugenianus (fl. second half of 12th century), author of a Byzantine verse romance, Drosilla and Charicles, largely based on Achilles* Tatius and Longus*, as well as of some occasional poetry.

Scriptores erotici (ed. G. A. Hirschig, 1856); Scriptores erotici Graeci, II (ed. R. Hercher, 1859). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Nicetas Stethatus, 11th-century Byzantine theologian. He wrote a life of his master, Symeon* the New Theologian, and ascetical works on the monastic life which were much used by later generations. He took an active part in polemic against the Latin Church at the time of the 1054 controversy. J.M.H.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXX (1864; with Lat. tr.); Life of Symeon the New Theologian (ed. I. Hausherr in Orientalia Christiana periodica, XII, 1928; with Fr. tr.); Le Paradis Spirituel (ed. M. Chalendar, 1943; with Fr. tr.); Opusculs et lettres (ed. J. Darrouzès, 1961; with Fr. tr.).

A. Michel, Humbert und Kerularius, II (1930). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Nicholas, Bishop of Methone in the Peloponnese (†?c. 1165), Byzantine theologian. His polemic and theological studies often have little independent value and do not appear to justify the reputation he long enjoyed. They are however evidence for the theological activity and ecclesiastical controversies of Manuel I's reign.

Orationes duae (ed. A. Demetracopulos, 1865); other orationes (ed. idem, Ekklesiastike Bibliothek, 1866); Refutation of Proclus (ed. J. Th. Vömel, 1825). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Nicholas V, POPE: see Parentucelli, TOMMASO.

Nicholas, HENRY: see Nicolaes, HENDRIK.

Nicholas Bozon, 14th-century Anglo-Norman writer. A Franciscan Friar, from a Norfolk county family and associated with a Nottingham monastery, he wrote, besides edifying Contes (?1335), many religious and didactic poems, among them a curious allegory, Lettre de l'empereur Orgueil (1300).

VERSE: Deux poèmes (ed. J. Vising, 1919); Three Saints' Lives (ed. A. Klenke, 1947).—PROSE: Contes Moralises (ed. L. T. Smith and P. Meyer, 1889).

A. Thomas in Histoire littéraire de la France, XXXVI (1927). M.F.L.

Nicholas Cabasilas, sometimes called CHAMEATUS (†1371), Metropolitan of Thessalonica, Byzantine theologian. In the Hesychast controversy he supported Gregory* Palamas and the Orthodox party. He wrote against the Latins and also left a number of sermons, letters and treatises on the ascetic and mystical life and on the liturgy.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CL (1865; with Lat. tr.); La vie en Jésus-Christ (tr. S. Brousseleux in Irenikon, 1932); Explication de la divine liturgie (tr. S. Salaville, 1943; with biblio.); Homélies Mariales (ed. M. Jugie, Patrologia Orientalis, XIX, 1925). J.M.H.

Nicholas Mysticus, Patriarch of Constantinople 901–907 and 912–925, played an important part in 10th-century politics and left a valuable collection of letters.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXI (1863; with Lat. tr.).

S. Runciman, The Emperor Romanus Lecapenus and His Reign (1929); J. Gay, 'Le patriarche Nicolas Mystique et son rôle politique' in Mélanges Ch. Diehl, I (1930); Les registres des actes du patriarchat de Constantinople, I (ed. V. Grumel, 1936; with biblio.). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Nicolaes, HENDRIK (*Münster 10 I 1502; †Cologne c. 1580), Dutch mystic and poet, lived c. 1530–40 in Amsterdam, where he associated with Baptists, from 1540 to 1560 in Emden, then, after a journey to England, in Kampen and finally at Cologne. In Low German 'overlands', as a kind of sacred language, he wrote a great number of tracts, refrains and rondels, which bear witness to his rigorous spirituality. With the triumph of the Holy Ghost, accomplished in his 'House of Love', perfection is attained. Doctrine and sacraments have lost their value, everything centres in direct experience in the heart of the elect, shedding all external things and retaining only love. Nicolaes' influence in England—by way of the Familist sect—was felt until c. 1700. In the Netherlands the last traces were extinguished in the course of the 17th century.

C. Fell Smith, 'Nicholas, Henry' in Dictionary of National Biography, XL (1894); L. Knappert in Nieuw Nederl. Biographisch Woordenboek, V (1921); H. de la Fontaine Verwey, 'De geschriften van H. N.' in Het Boek, XXVI (1940–42); J. A.

van Dorsten, Thomas Basson (1961); W. M. H. Hummelen in Jaarboek De Fontaine (1966). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Nicolai, CHRISTOPH FRIEDRICH (*Berlin 18 III 1733; †ibid. 8 I 1811), German critic and novelist. A Berlin bookseller, Nicolai, through his periodical Bibliothek der schönen Wissenschaften, was, with Lessing* and Mendelssohn*, a leader of literature, 1754–70. After 1770 he ceased to develop and became a noted literary reactionary. Goethe's* attacks have unjustly overshadowed Nicolai's merits as a supporter of good sense in literature and tolerance in life.

NOVELS: Sebaldus Nothanker (1773–76); Die Freuden des jungen Werthers (1777–78); Sempronius Gundibert (1798).—PERIODICALS (in which his criticisms appeared): Bibliothek der schönen Wissenschaften (1757–60); Literaturbriefe (1759–65); Allgemeine deutsche Bibliothek (1765–1800).—VARIOUS: Feiner kleiner Almanach (1777–78); Beschreibung einer Reise durch Deutschland und die Schweiz (1783–97).—WORKS: Sel. ed. J. Minor, Lessings Jugendfreunde in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., LXXII (1882).

K. Auer, Der Aufklärer F. N. (1912); M. Sommerfeld, F. N. und der Sturm und Drang (1921); W. Strauss, F. N. und die kritische Philosophie (1927). H.B.G.

Nicolas de Clamanges (*c. 1360; †between 1434 and 1440), French ecclesiastic and author. Rector of the University of Paris (1393) and secretary to Benedict XIII (1397), he was a pupil of Pierre d'Ailly*, a supporter of the conciliar movement, an opponent of scholasticism and a devout contemplative. He is the outstanding stylist among the group of French pre-humanists who revived pure and eloquent Latin in the service of theology. His devotional treatises, written 1408–12 in retirement at Valfonds and Fontaine-du-Bosc, are still of interest.

Opera (ed. J. Lydius, 1613; incl. De fructu eremi, De fructu rerum adversarum and a large number of Lat. epistles); De studio theologico in L. d'Archery, Spicilegium, I (new ed. 1723); A. Coville, Recherches sur quelques écrivains du XIVe et du XVe siècle (1935; 6 Lat. poems).

E. Gilson, La philosophie au moyen-âge (1944). F.W.

Nicolas de Lyra (*c. 1270; †1349), French Franciscan and theologian, best known for his Postillae perpetuae in universam S. Scripturam which had an enormous influence on later exegesis.

C. Spicq, Esquisse d'une histoire de l'exégèse latine au moyen-âge (1944). F.W.

Nicolas de Troyes (*Troyes; fl. Tours c. 1530–40), French story-writer. Of the 180 tales of his Grand

Parangon des nouvelles nouvelles, 132 were copied from such collections as the Decameron and Les Cent Nouvelles nouvelles. For the remainder both Italian and French oral sources have been claimed.

Le Grand Parangon (ed. E. Mabilie, 1866).

K. Kasprzyk, N. de T. et le genre narratif en France (1963). G.B.

Nicolaus Hermanni (*Skänninge 1326 (?1327); †Linköping 2 V 1391), Swedish Bishop and hymn-writer. A relative of St Bridget*, as a young man he tutored her children. After studying in France he became Archdeacon at Linköping in 1361, played an active part in politics and was made Bishop in 1375. He helped to found Vadstena monastery and to get Bridget canonized. The office he composed in her honour contains the hymn Rosa rorans bonitatem, a masterpiece among medieval Latin poems.

H. Schück, 'N. H.'s Birgittaofficium' in Lunds Universitets Årsskrift (1892-93); K. B. Westman, 'N. H.'s skrinläggning' in Kyrkohistorisk Årsskrift (1917); G. Karlsson, 'Anteckningar om ett par svenska helgon', ibid. (1919); Y. Brilioth, Svensk kyrka, kungadöme och påvenmakt 1363-1414 (1925); E. Liedgren, Svensk psalm och andlig visa (1925). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Nicolson, WILLIAM (*Plumbland 3 VI 1655; ∞3 VI 1686 Elizabeth Archer; †Derry 14 II 1726), Bishop of Carlisle (1702), Derry (1718). Antiquary and Old English scholar, his ecclesiastical duties restricted his published work, but he contributed to the researches of others.

The English Historical Library (3 pts, 1696-99); The Scottish Historical Library (1702); Leges marchiarum (1705); The Irish Historical Library (1724).—Letters (ed. J. Nichols, 2 vols, 1809).

F. G. James, North Country Bishop (1956).

J.B.-B.

Niebuhr, BARTHOLO GEORG (*Copenhagen 27 VIII 1776; †Bonn 2 I 1831), German historian, was from 1806 employed in Prussia (after 1810 as a historian). From 1823 he was Professor of ancient history at Bonn. His Römische Geschichte and other works inaugurated modern critical philology as an historical instrument.

Römische Geschichte (3 vols, 1811-32).

J. Classen, B. G. N. (1876); G. P. Gooch, History and Historians in the XIXth Century (1913). D.H.

Niebuhr, REINHOLD (*Wright City, Mo. 21 VI 1892; ∞1931 Ursula Keppel-Compton; †Stockbridge, Mass. 31 V 1971), American theologian. In opposition to the pragmatists, he takes a melancholy view of human achievement and centres on the problem of sin. His redemptive theology is marred by the vagueness with which he sees God intervening to transform human life.

Beyond Tragedy (1937); Christianity and Power Politics (1940); The Nature and Destiny of Man (2 vols, 1941-43); The Children of Light and the Children of Darkness (1944); Christian Realism and Political Problems (1953); The Self and the Dramas of History (1955); Pious and Secular America (1958).

G. Harland, The Thought of R. N. (1960).

H.L.C. (D.E.Mo.)

Nielsen, MORTEN (*Aalborg 3 I 1922; †Copenhagen 30 VIII 1944), Danish poet. He studied at Copenhagen, took an active part in the Resistance and died as a result of an accident at the age of 22 years. He was a poet of unusual intensity, a Danish Rupert Brooke*.

Krigere uden Vaaben (1943); Efterladte Digte (1945). E.B.

Nielsen, NIELS JØRGEN (*Paarup, nr Silkeborg 18 XI 1902; ∞1929 Catharina Marie Frost; †Copenhagen 27 III 1945), Danish novelist and short-story writer. He was a farm labourer, then became a journalist and eventually devoted his life to writing. Most of his novels and stories take place among Jutland peasants, and their recurrent themes are suppressed hatred, sin and fear. Appreciation of his psychological novels is increasing.

NOVELS: Offerbaal (1929); De Hovmodige (1930); En Kvinde ved Baalet (1933); En Gaard midt i Verden (1936); Dybet (1940); Et Hus splidagtigt med sig selv (1945).—SHORT STORIES: Lavt Land (1929); Vi umyndige (1934); Figurer i et Landskab (1944).—Samlede Noveller (1959).

N. Nilsson, J. N. en digterskabne (1951); M. A. Hansen and K. Elfelt, J. N. (1953). E.B.

Niemcewicz, JULIAN URSYN (*Skoki 16 II 1757 or 1758; †Paris 21 V 1841), Polish author. He took part in the 1794-95 rising and was afterwards imprisoned for two years. He then left for America, returning to Poland in 1807. After the 1831 rising he left on a diplomatic mission for England (where he stayed two years) and for France. Almost all his successful literary output was dictated by a sense of patriotism and social duty. His comedy Powrót posła played an important part in the discussions leading up to the constitution of 1791. His Śpiewy historyczne, put to music, were very popular. He wrote the first Polish historical novel and the first Polish novel on the Jewish problem. His translations and paraphrases from English poetry contributed to the development of Polish Romanticism.

VERSE: Śpiewy historyczne (1816; Chants historiques de la Pologne, tr. C. de Noire-Isle, 1880); Bajki i powieści (2 vols, 1817).—PLAYS: Powrót posła (perf. 1790; Ger. tr. S. G. Linde, 1792); Kazimierz Wielki (1792); Zbigniew (1819; Fr. tr.

B. Desmarests, 1835).—NOVELS: Dwaj panowie Sieciechowie (1815; ed. with intro. and comm. J. Dihm, 1950); Jan z Tęczyna (3 vols, 1825; Ger. tr., 3 vols, 1827); Lejbe i Siora (1821; Levy and Sarah, 1830).—Dzieje panowania Zygmunta III (history; 3 vols, 1819).—Pamiętniki czasów moich (memoirs; 1848).—Dzieła poetyczne wierszem i prozą (12 vols, Leipzig, 1838).—J. Bowring, Specimens of the Polish Poets (1827).

J. Chrzanswski, 'Pochwała N-a' in Rocznik Towarzystwa Nauk, Warsz. (1927); J. Dihm, N. jako polityk i publicysta . . . (1928); A. Knot, Dziele spiewów historycznych J. U. N-a (1948).

S.S. (P.H.)

Nieremberg, JUAN EUSEBIO (*Madrid 1595; †ibid. 17 IV 1658), Spanish religious writer. After studying at Alcalá and Salamanca he became a Jesuit. He lived a life of great austerity in Madrid. His many ascetic works began to appear in 1627. They include the standard Spanish translation of The Imitation of Christ. His prose is consistently good.

Obras (1686); Obras espirituales (6 vols, 1890–92).—Diferencia entre lo temporal y eterno (Paris, 1847); Vida divina y camino real (1894); Epistolario (ed. Alonso Cortés, 1915; 4th ed. 1957).—Two discourses (tr. H. Vaughan, 1654); A meditation of life and death (1682); A treatise on the difference betwixt the Temporal and Eternal (tr. Sir V. Mullineaux, 1672); Of Adoration in Spirit and in Truth (1871, 1885). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Nies, KONRAD, pseud. KONRAD VON ALZEY (*Alzey, Hesse 17 X 1861; †1887 Elisabeth Waldvogel; †San Francisco 10 VIII 1921), the most talented German-American poet; also a journalist and actor.

VERSE: Funken (1891); Aus westlichen Weiten (1905); Welt und Wildnis (1921).—DRAMA: Deutsche Gaben (1900); Rosen im Schnee (1900); Im Zeichen der Freiheit (1902); Die herrlichen Drei (1905).—Die Volkersfiedel (novel; 1887).

C. R. Walter Thomas in Dictionary of American Biography, XIII (1934). E.R.

Nietzsche, FRIEDRICH WILHELM (*Röcken 15 X 1844; †Weimar 25 VIII 1900), German philosopher and poet. Deprived at the age of five of his father, a Lutheran pastor, Nietzsche was brought up by devout female relatives, which partly explains his later development; he vigorously denounced worn-out, traditional Christian beliefs and ideals. At school at Pforta and at the Universities of Bonn and Leipzig he became known as a brilliant classical scholar and in 1869 became Professor of Greek at Basle University. Taking part as a non-combatant in the Franco-German war of 1870, he undermined his already poor health: illness compelled him to resign his Chair in 1879, and he lived thereafter as a solitary, impoverished invalid. Long before 1879, however, he had abandoned classical scholarship (though he remained permanently under the influence of the classics); he devoted himself to the critical and speculative investigation of past, present and future culture, first inspired by an intense though transient admiration for his friend Richard Wagner* and for Schopenhauer*. Die Geburt der Tragödie (1872), an extraordinary tour-de-force, discusses the psychology, origins and nature of poetry in general and of tragedy in particular. He continued with the four essays called Unzeitgemässe Betrachtungen (1873–76), in which he characteristically held up to ridicule the vaunted culture of the upstart Bismarckian Empire. He then rejected Wagner and Schopenhauer, and the second of the three periods into which his work is usually divided—consisting of the three books Menschliches, Allzumenschliches (2 vols, 1878–80), Morgenröte (1881), and Die fröhliche Wissenschaft (1882)—anticipates most strikingly the contemporary situation: 'The advancement of learning at the expense of man is the most pernicious thing in the world. The stunted man is a backward step for humanity; he casts his shadow over all time to come'. And again: 'The entire system of higher education has lost what matters most: the end as well as the means to the end. That education, that Bildung is itself an end—and not the state—this has been forgotten'. His third period begins with his most famous work, Also sprach Zarathustra (4 vols, 1883–85), in which Nietzsche proclaims his essential message, the necessity for a new, life-promoting outlook: 'All Gods are dead: now we will live that Beyondman'. This philosophy of the Übermensch is based on the rejection of existing cultural and moral values (and above all of Christian religion) and on the belief that the universe moves in a succession of identical cycles. Zarathustra expounds these ideas in brilliant, poetical, often highly charged style. Nietzsche's remaining works, save for his autobiography Ecce Homo (1908), are more reasoned expositions of various facets of his personal philosophy and testament: this he proposed to sum up in his magnum opus Der Wille zur Macht (pub. posth. 1901), which was unfinished when, in I 1889, he suffered an incurable mental breakdown. Nietzsche, influenced by an immense number of cultural streams from all ages and nearly all lands, and himself (after about 1890, till when he was disregarded) an influence of the very greatest importance on nearly every aspect of life and thought, is a most inspiring writer, an outstanding lyric poet, a brilliant, dangerous, infinitely misunderstood, brutally vulgarized thinker, self-critic, teacher, and prophet—a vital force which still haunts modern man and the world of today.

He was international in outlook; he strove for a united Europe, seeing only destruction in the rising national feeling of his own day and prophesied a chain of chaotic nationalistic wars in the 20th century. The aftermath of these wars would be so terrifying that an age of 'nihilism' was bound to follow and men would cease to believe in anything. There is also his view of the universe as beautiful, a view which he considered indispensable to human wellbeing, thus placing a decided emphasis on the deeper instincts as against the critical intellect. Finally, amor fati reflects Nietzsche's tragic view of human life and the acceptance of its ambiguous and contrary nature. A.H.J.K. (K.W.M.)

Werke und Briefe, historisch-kritische Gesamtausgabe (ed. N.-Archiv, 9 vols, 1933-42, incomplete; ed. G. Colli and M. Montinari, 1967 ff.); Kröner-Ausgabe (12 vols, 1930-43; 2nd ed. with N.-Register by R. Oehler, 1964-65).—Gesammelte Briefe (ed. E. Förster-Nietzsche et al., 5 vols in 6, 1902-09).—TRANSLATIONS: The Complete Works of F. N. (ed. O. Levy, 18 vols, 1909-11, 2nd ed. 1964); Selected Letters of F. N. (tr. A. M. Ludowici, 1921); The Portable N. (tr. W. Kaufmann, 1954, 1958).

E. Förster-Nietzsche, Das Leben F. N.s (2 vols, 1895-1904); G. Brandes, F. N. (tr. from Danish A. G. Chater, London, 1914); C. Andler, N. (6 vols, Paris, 1920-31; 2 vols, 1958); J. Hofmiller, F. N. (1933; 3rd ed. 1953); K. Jaspers, N. (1936; 3rd ed. 1950); C. Brinton, N. (Harvard, 1941, 1965); H. A. Reyburn, N. (New York, 1948; Ger. tr. 1946); F. G. Jünger, N. (1949); W. Kaufmann, N. (Princeton, 1950; 3rd ed. 1968); H. M. Wolff, Der Weg zum Nichts (1956); F. A. Lea, The Tragic Philosopher (1957); M. Heidegger, N. (2 vols, 1961); R. J. Hollingdale, N. (London, 1965, 1966); P. Pütz, F. N. (1967).—H. W. Reichert and K. Schlechta, International N.-Bibliography (rev. ed. 1968). K.W.M.

Nieuwelandt, GUILLIAM VAN (*Antwerp 1584; †Amsterdam 1635), Flemish painter, playwright and poet. His first play was not in classical form, but afterwards he was strongly influenced by Seneca*. His last two plays incline towards romanticism. He is the best Flemish playwright of the 17th century, sometimes a true poet.

Livia (1617); Saul (1617); Claudius Domitius Nero (1618); Aegyptica, ofte Aegyptische tragaedie van Marcus Anthonius en Cleopatra (1624); Salomon (1628); Jerusalem's verwoestingh door Nebucodonosar (1635); Sophonisba (1635).—Elegie op den dood van Albertus v. Oostenrijk (1621); Poema van den Mensch (1621).

Jos van den Branden, 'G. van N.' in Nederl. Mus. (1875); J. A. Worp, De invloed van Seneca's treurspelen op ons tooneel (1892); G. J. Hoogewerff, 'de beide Willem's van Nieuwlandt' in Oud-Holland, XXIX (1894); P. H. van Moerkerken and J. A. Worp, 'Over de navolging van Garnier' in Noord en Zuid, XVII-XVIII (1895); A. A. Keersmaekers, De dichter Guiliam van N. en de Senecaans-classteke tragedie in de Zuidelijke Nederlanden (1957); W. Asselbergs, 'G. van N.' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, LIV (1961).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Nieuwland, PIETER (*Diemermeer 5 XI 1764; †1791 Anna H. Pruyssenaar; †Leiden 14 XI 1794), Dutch scientist and versatile poet. In 1789 he was instructor in nautical science at Amsterdam; in 1793 Professor in mathematics, physics and astronomy at Leiden. He wrote homely verse and good nature lyrics.

Gedichten (1788; incl. 'Orion', Fr. tr. A. Clavareau, 1836); Nagelaten gedichten (ed. A. de Vries, 1797); Gedichten en redevoeringen (ed. Jer. de Vries, 1824).

S. J. Brugmans in Nieuwe Algemene Konst- en Letterbode, I (1794); J. H. van Swinden, Lijkrede op P. N. (1795); J. H. Kruizinga, 'De Nederlandse Newton' in Natuur en Techniek (1944); G. A. Steffens, P. N. en het evenwicht (1964).

J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Nievo, IPPOLITO (*Padua 30 XI 1831; †by drowning, Tyrrhenian Sea 4-5 III 1861), Italian patriot, poet and novelist. A volunteer under Garibaldi, Nievo served in the Sicilian campaign of 1860, the events of which he recorded in Amori garibaldini (1860). His masterpiece, Le confessioni di un italiano (1858), published after his death as Confessioni d'un ottuagenario (1867), is a historical novel, partly autobiographical, related in the first person by the protagonist, Carlo Altoviti, and embracing the history of the Risorgimento from Napoleon to Garibaldi. This novel was preceded by two others, Angelo di Bontà (1856) and Il Conte pecoraio (1857). He wrote also several plays and two volumes of poetry, Versi (1854) and Le Lucciole (1858).

Poesie (ed. R. Barbiera, 1889); Confessioni di un ottuagenario (ed. B. Chiurlo, 1941; with important intro. and notes); Le più belle pagine di I. N. (ed. R. Bacchelli, 1929; containing the Diario di Sicilia); Opere (ed. S. Romagnoli, 1952).—The Castle of Fratta (tr. L. F. Edwards, 1957).

M. Filograsso, 'L'umorismo di I. N.' in Annali della Scuola Normale di Pisa, XXIX (1927); D. Mantovani, I. N., il poeta soldato (1932); U. Gallo, N. (1932; with unpub. material and biblio.); G. Galati, N. (1940); A. Balduino, Aspetti e tendenze del N. poeta (1962). B.R.

Niffari, MUHAMMAD (*Niffar, Mesopotamia; †Egypt c. 965), Muslim ecstatic. Very little is known about him except that he used to wander aimlessly in the deserts, shunning human company and habitation. He is known by two collections made by his children under his direction of a series of 'revelations' which he claims were divinely dictated to him while in a state of ecstatic communion with God and which he wrote down on scraps of paper, probably by some kind of automatic script. These writings are mainly composed of short, often highly evocative, sentences. They abound in technical terms which, however, does not necessarily suggest their artificiality. Niffari taught the possibility of immediate, even visual, experience of God in this world.

Mawaqif and Mukhatabat of N. (crit. ed. and tr. A. J. Arberry, 1935).

D. S. Margoliouth, Early Development of Mohammedanism (1914); R. A. Nicholson, The Mystics of Islam (1914); A. J. Arberry, 'Al N.' in Encyclopaedia of Islam, III (1st ed. 1936).

W.A. el K. (R.W.J.A.)

Nigel de Longchamps (*c. 1130; †c. 1205), commonly known as WIREKER, monk of Christ Church, Canterbury, and possibly kinsman of William de Longchamps, Chancellor of England under Richard I. His chief works are the Speculum stultorum (1179–80), a verse satire mainly directed against the monastic Orders; and the Tractatus contra curiales et officiales clericos, a prose complaint against the abuses of the secular clergy. He also turned 17 Mary-legends into verse and wrote the lives of St Paul the Hermit and the Passion of St Lawrence. The surname Wireker, deriving solely from Bale*, is spurious.

Anglo-Latin Satirical Poets, I (ed. T. Wright, 1872); Speculum stultorum (ed. J. H. Mozley and R. R. Raymo, 1960; tr. J. H. Mozley, 1961); Tractatus contra curiales et officiales clericos (ed. A. Boutemy, 1960).

J. H. Mozley, 'On the text of the Speculum stultorum' in Speculum, V and VII (1930, 1932) and 'The unprinted poems of N. W.', ibid., VII (1932); A. Boutemy, 'Sur "le prologue en prose" et la date du Speculum stultorum' in Rev. de l'Univ. de Bruxelles, XL (1934).
R.R.R.

Niger, SHMUEL, pseud. of SHMUEL CHARNI (*Dukor, nr Minsk 1884; †New York 1955), foremost Yiddish critic and essayist. He studied in Berlin and Berne and began writing in 1906 in Vilno, which he had to leave on the Polish occupation of that city after the First World War. He emigrated to the U.S.A. (1920) where he became the leading Yiddish literary historian and critic.

Vegn Yiddishe shraiber (1912); Di Yiddishe literatur un di lezerin (1920); Shmuessn vegn bikher (1922); Lezer, dikhter, kritiker (1928); Mendelev Moicher Sforim (Chicago, 1936); In kamf far a nayer dertseung (New York, 1940); Di tzveishprakhikait in unzer literatur (1941); Dertseilers un romanisten (New York, 1946); H. Leitwick (Toronto, 1950); Y. L. Peretz (Buenos Aires, 1952); Yiddishe shraiber in Soviet Russland (1958); Bleter geshikhte fun der Yiddisher literatur (1959); Kritik un Kritiker (Buenos Aires, 1959; Heb. tr. Jerusalem, 1957).
J.S.

Nihongi ('The Chronicles of Japan'), Japanese historical work, covering Japanese history up to 697, although the part up to about 400 is mainly myth. Composed after an imperial order of 681 (which also led to the composition of Kojiki* by a committee, headed by Prince Toneri and containing Ō no Yasumaro and others, it was completed in 720. Written in Chinese, like Kojiki, its contents are similar but display more Chinese influence. It is the first of six histories (known as Rikkokushi), written between 720 and 901.

E.B.C.

Nihongi (tr. W. G. Aston, 2 vols, 1896; repr., 1 vol, 1956); Japanische Mythologie (1901) and Japanische Annalen (1903; both tr. K. Florenz).
E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Nijhoff, MARTINUS (*The Hague 20 IV. 1894; †Antoinetta Hendrika Wind; †ibid. 26 I 1953), Dutch poet, critic, playwright and translator of Shakespeare* (The Tempest) and André Gide* (Paludes). Though not free from 19th-century decadence, his poetry was at once recognized as a sign of renewal. His clear style, in later days even more simple and direct though never careless, and his spontaneous and unconventional imagery, made him the typical modern poet. He used many cleverly hidden devices, never relying upon an artificial poetic language. In his poetry, as in his criticism (which was instrumental in the development of Dutch formalistic critical concepts), he has often been compared to T. S. Eliot*.

De wandelaar (verse; 1916); De pen op papier (prose; 1927); Gedachten op dinsdag (essays; 1931); 'Verzen en vezels' in Maatstaf, V.8 (letters, with P. N. van Eyck; 1957); Awater (short epic; Eng. tr. J. S. Holmes, 1962).—PLAYS: De vliegende Hollander (1930); Het heilige hout (1950).—Verzameld werk (coll. works; 4 vols, 1954–61).

S. Vestdijk, De Poolsche ruiter (1946); Th. de Vries, M. N., wandelaar in de werkelijkheid (1946); J. Engelman et al., M. N. (1953); De Gids, memorial no. (Apr.–May 1953); F. Lulofs, Verkenning door varianten (1955); Karel Meeuwesse, 'Van Voorstraat tot Herenstraat' in De Gids (1955) and Muziek en taal (1961); P. N. van Eyck, Verzameld werk, IV (1961); J. de Poortere, M. N. (2nd ed. 1965); L. Wenseleers, Het wonderbaarlijk lichaam (1966); Kees Fens in Raster (1967); J. J. Oversteegen, Vorm of vent (1969).
J.J.O.

Nijlen, JAN VAN (*Antwerp 10 XI 1884; †Vorst 14 VIII 1965), Flemish poet. He is an amiable stoic, writing about youth, dreams, desire and acquiescence. He speaks in a minor key, and frequently ironically.

VERSE: Het aangezicht der aarde (1923); De vogel Phoenix (1928); Geheimschrift (1934); Het oude kind (1938); De dauwtrapper (1947); Te laat voor deze wereld (1957); Verzamelde gedichten (1964).—ESSAYS: Uren met Montaigne (1915); Francis Jammes (1918); Charles Péguy (1919).

C. Bittremieux, J. van N. (1956); P. H. Dubois, J. van N. (1959).
R.F.L. (tr. P.K.)

Nijō YOSHIMOTO (*1320; †1388), Japanese statesman and poet. A man of wide cultural interests, he was a good tanka poet, but his major contribution to Japanese literature was in linked verse (renga), which he may be said to have established as a serious art-form. He compiled (with one collaborator) the first anthology of it, Tsukubashū (1356), and wrote many works on renga composition and appreciation.

M. Ueda, 'Y. on the art of linked verse: verse-writing as a game' in Literary and Art Theories in Japan (1967); see also Sōgi*. D.E.M.

Nikitin, AFANASY, 15th-century Russian merchant from Tver, who in 1466-72 made a journey to India (via Derbent, Baku and Persia) and described his adventures in his Khozhdenie za tri morya. In simple and matter-of-fact language he thus gave one of the earliest accounts of India and Indians in any European literature.

Excellent Academy ed. (1948).—The Travels of Athanasius Nikitin (tr. Count Wielhorsky, 1857); Die Fahrt des Athanasius Nikitin über die drei Meere (tr. K. H. Meyer, 1920). J.L.

Nikitin, IVAN SAVVICH (*Voronezh 21 X 1824; †16 X 1861), Russian poet of lower middle-class origin. He wavered between poetry of folk-motifs and peasant life and that of social indictment. His best-known work is his realistic narrative poem, Kulak (1857). He wrote some fine nature lyrics, yet the general tone of his poetry is one of pessimism and resignation.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy i pisem (3 vols, 1913-15); Stikhotvoreniya (1936); Polnoye sobranie stikhotvoreniy (1965).

N. N. Fatov, I. S. N. (1929); V. A. Tonkov, I. S. N. (1964). J.L.

Nikitin, NIKOLAY NIKOLAYEVICH (*1897), Soviet author, writing in a 'dynamic' prose charged with emotion and lyrical asides, especially in his early narratives about the Civil War. Influenced by the prose of Bely*, Remizov* and Pilnyak*, he showed a fairly sceptical attitude—especially in his stories Noch and Kamni—towards the Revolution. His novel, Prestuplenie Kirika Rudenko (1928), depicts more soberly, but realistically, the negative side of the young Communists in a village factory.

Bunt (1923); Shpion (1929); Eto bylo v Kokande (1948); Izbrannoe (2 vols, 1959). J.L.

Nikolaus von Jeroschin (fl. c. 1335), German writer. The literary output of the Knights of the Teutonic Order in East Prussia is restricted to adaptations of the Old and New Testament, legends and the history of the Order. Nikolaus wrote a Kronike von Pruzinlant (c. 27,000 lines, for which a Latin source is known) and is generally held to be the most talented representative.

Ed. E. Strehlike (1861).—H. de Boor, Die dt. Lit. im späten MA., I (1962). F.P.P.

Nilsen, RUDOLF WILLIAM (*Kristiania 28 II 1901; ∞1924 Ella Kristoffersen; †Paris 23 IV 1929), Norwegian poet. In the two collections of poems which appeared before his early death Nilsen showed promise of developing into an outstanding lyric poet. He found inspiration in the east end of Oslo and is often called a 'proletarian poet'. In spite of Communist tendencies and the greyness of the scene he depicted, the spirit of the genuine lyricist is always present in his work.

På stengrunn (1925); På gjensyn (1926); Hverdagen (1929).—Samlede dikte (1935).

J. F. Bjørnsen, R. N. (1951). R.G.P.

Nil Sorsky (*1433; †1508), Russian monk, author of several religious and mystical writings. As head of the so-called trans-Volga hermits he opposed the more worldly monks (led by the Abbot Joseph* of Volok) and insisted that monasteries should own no wealth and no land. The controversy between the two factions gave rise to a number of polemics. J.L.

Nilsson Piraten, FRITTOF (*Vollsjö 4 XII 1895; ∞1939 Tora Månsson; †1 II 1972), Swedish author, a fine stylist and inimitable story-teller, specializing in bizarre and at the same time tragic anticlimax and ludicrous situations, which gives much of his work a startling, sometimes almost demonic flavour. His first book, Bombi Bitt och jag (1932; Bombi Bitt, tr. P. Wiking, 1933), is partly autobiographical, and his student life in Lund is described in Tre Terminer (1943). In a more grotesque mood, he is still a philosopher, illustrating life by mocking the individual.

Bock i örtagård (1933); Småländsk tragedi (1936); Bokhandlaren som slutade bada (1937); Bombi Bitt och Nick Carter (1946); Vänner emellan (1955); Flickan med bibelspråken och andra historier (1957); Millionären och andra historier (1965).

E. Noreen, Från Birgitta till Piraten (1942); E. Tykesson, Tolv essayer (1945); K. Elfeldt, Nis Petersen og Piraten (1952). C.H.K. (I.S.)

Nilus (fl. A.D. 430), Greek ascetic writer. Pupil of John* Chrysostom; monk or abbot in a monastery in Asia Minor. Author of 1,061 letters and of many ascetic and devotional works, whose authenticity is often doubtful, as well as of a commentary on the Song of Solomon, surviving in excerpts. His work provides an interesting picture of orthodox monastic life and thought in the 5th century.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, LXXXIX (1860; with Lat. tr.); P. van den Ven, 'Un opusculé inédit attribué à S. Nil' in Mélanges Godefroi Kurth (1908).

F. Degenhart, Der heilige N. Sinaita (1915); K. Heussi, Das Nilusproblem (1921); A. Savić, 'De Nili monachi commentario in Canticum Cantorum restituendo' in Biblica, II (1921); V. Fradinski, Nil, njegov život i njegova književna delatnost (1938). R.B.

Nilus Cabasilas (fl. second half 14th century), Metropolitan of Thessalonica; a prominent supporter of the Orthodox tradition, he wrote much polemic against the Latins. J.M.H.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXLIX and CLI (1865; with Lat. tr.).—G. Schirò, 'Il paradosso di Nilo Cabasila' in Studi bizantini, IX (1957). R.B.

Nimā Yūshij (ʿAlī Esfandiārī) (*Yush 1895; ∞1926; †6 I 1959), the most significant, and for long the most controversial, modern Persian poet. Nimā spent his early life in his native village in the Caspian province of Mazanderan, and its scenery, climate and mode of life are prominent in his imagery. In 1907 he moved to Tehran and studied at the French Catholic school. In 1930 he became a high-school teacher and served from 1939 to 1946 on the editorial committee of the Majalla-yi Mūsīqī, a progressive journal to which S. Hidāyat* also contributed.

A lone figure, he remained relatively obscure almost to the end of the Second World War, admired only by a limited circle of modernist poets. His influence began to spread in the late 1940s and soon he was acclaimed as the undisputed leader and guiding spirit of such avant-garde poets as Bāmdād*, Omīd* and Farrukhzād*.

Nimā is the first modern poet to break away almost completely from the traditional imagery and the formal mould of classical Persian poets. His innovations coincided with, or rather expressed, a deep change in Persian society.

A romantic poet of melancholy disposition, Nimā frequently expresses obliquely, often through description of evocative natural phenomena and rustic experiences, feelings of deprivation, futility, anger and hope. He endeavours to use metre and rhyme as elements of a total poetic effect, not subordinating expression of ideas to rigid formal rules. Not infrequently his effort to chisel out new expressions makes his language somewhat obscure. His effect on the development of Persian poetry, however, remains unique.

Qissa-yi Rang Parīda (1921); Afsāna (1922); Khānivādī-yi Sarbāz (1925); Du Nāma (1950); Arzish-i Ihsāsāt (1957); Maneli (1958); Afsāna va Rubāʿiyyāt (1960); Bargūzīdī-yi Ashʿār (1963); Mākh Ūlā (1965); Shīʿr-i mām (1966); Nāqūs (1967).

R. Barahini, Tala dar Mes (2nd ed. 1968); E. N. 'Ala', Suvār va Asbāb . . . (1969). E.Y.

Nishiyama Sōin: see Sōin.

Nistor, DER, pseud. of PINCHAS PINIE KAHANOVITZ (*Berdichev 1884; †Russian labour camp hospital 1950), Yiddish novelist. He ranks, with Bergelson*, as the greatest master of Yiddish narrative prose, but carried on the spiritual tradition of early Hassidism, returning to its poetical symbolism. Of his major cycle of novels, The Family Mashber, only the first volume was published in the Soviet Union during his lifetime. That he could publish there at all shows the force of his talent. After the Revolution he lived for some time abroad, returning to the U.S.S.R. in the early 1920s and earning his living by writing children's stories and reportages, and by translations from European literature. Most of his works have Hebrew translations.

Gedankn un motiven (poems in prose; 1907); Hekher fun der erd (1910); Gezang un gebet (1912); Gedakht (2 vols, Berlin, 1922); Maisslekh in fersen (ibid., 1923); Fun mayne geeter (1929); Di mishpokhe Mashber (I, Moscow, 1939, New York, 1943; II, New York, 1948); Der zayde mit'n einikl (1943); Heshl Anshels (1943); Dertseilungn un essayen (1957). J.S.

Nivard of Ghent (**fl.* 1150), of German birth, lived in Flanders. He is the author of De Isengrimo et Rainarde, a satirical beast-epic in seven books.

Ysengrimus (ed. E. Voigt, 1884; Ger. tr. A. Schönfelder, 1955).

L. Willems, Étude sur l'Ysengrimus (1895); M. Manitius, Geschichte der lateinischen Literatur des Mittelalters, III (1931); J. van Mierlo in Verslagen en Mededeelingen der Koninkl. Vlaamse Acad. voor Taal- en Letterkunde (1943); J. de Ghellinck, L'essor de la littérature latine au XIIe siècle, II (1946). R.R.R.

Niwa FUMIO (*Yokkaichi 22 XI 1904), Japanese novelist. The son of the hereditary priest of a Pure Land Buddhist temple, he was educated at Waseda University, where he graduated in Japanese literature in 1929. For a while he served in the priesthood, but in 1932 he abandoned this for writing, and went to live in Tokyo. He is a critical realist, with a particular interest in the sensual side of womankind that is undoubtedly influenced by his father's philandering, the fact that his mother went off with a lover, and his own experience living with and on the earnings of a bar hostess. He shows a compassionate awareness of human sin which springs from his inherited religious attitudes.

Iyagarase no nenrei (1947; 'The Hateful Age', tr. I. I. Morris in Japan Quart., III.1, 1956; repr. in Modern Japanese Stories, 1961; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, II, 1959); Shūchi (1951; 'A Touch of Shyness', tr. E. G. Seidensticker in Japan Quart., II.1, 1955); Bodaiju (1955–56; The Buddha Tree, tr. K. Strong, 1966). D.E.M.

Nizām-al-Mulk, ABU 'ALĪ AL-ḤASAN (*Radakan of Tus 10 IV 1018; †14 X 1092), Persian statesman and man of letters. The celebrated vizier of the Seljuks, he is the alleged author of Siyāsāt Nāma (1091-92), an important prose work intended to serve as a 'monarch's guide', and invaluable for the social history of Persia and the Islamic world in the 10th-11th centuries.

Siyāsāt Nāma (Paris, 1891; ed. H. Darke, Tehran, 1969; The Book of Good Government, tr. idem, 1960). E.Y.

Nizāmī 'Arūzī, AḤMAD IBN 'UMAR, 11th/12th-century Persian poet from Samarkand, court poet under Ghurid princes. His only important surviving work is Chahār Maqāla ('Four Discourses'; ?1156), of literary and historical merit.

Chahār Maqāla (Tehran, 1888; crit. ed. M. Muhammad Qazvini, London, 1910; tr. E. G. Browne, 1921; Fr. tr. I. de Gastine, 1968). E.Y.

Nizāmī Ganjavi, ILYĀS NIZĀM-AL-DĪN ABU YŪSUF (*Ganja or Qum 1140; ∞3 times; †Ganja 1203), Persian poet. In his youth he frequented the mystics, favoured asceticism and developed the piety which marks his Makhzan al-Asrār (1179), a meditative and didactic poem. A new development, however, is revealed in Khusrau u Shirin (1180), a romantic epic, where he tried to depict human character and emotions. Nizāmī dedicated his poems to various neighbouring rulers but always kept aloof from court life.

His main work is the Khamasa, a collection of five long poems in couplet form, two of which have already been mentioned. He also composed odes, lyrics and other genres.

Nizāmī is a keen observer with a vivid imagination and great skill in delineating subtle emotional situations; his poetry, however, suffers at times from over-elaboration.

Khamasa: Makhzan al-Asrār (London, 1844; tr. G. H. Darab, 1945); Khusrau u Shirin (Lahore, 1871; Schirin, ein persisches romantisches Gedicht, tr. J. von Hammer-Purgstall, 1809); Laila u Majnun (Lucknow, 1879; verse tr. J. Atkinson, 1836; tr. R. Gelpke, 1966); Haft Paikār (Istanbul, 1934; tr. C. E. Wilson, 3 vols, 1924; Ital. tr. A. Bausani, 1967); Iskandar-Nāma (Pt 1, 1812, tr. H. W. Clarke, 1881; Pt 2, Calcutta, 1852); Khamasa (1 vol., Bombay, 1834); Divān (Tehran, 1939).—Complete works (7 vols, Tehran, 1934-39).

W. Bacher, N.s. Leben und Werke (1871); H. Ritter, Über die Bildersprache N.s (1927); J. Rypka, History of Iranian Literature (1968). E.Y.

Nizan, PAUL (*Tours 7 II 1905; †Dunkirk 23 V 1940), French novelist and essayist. A brilliant student, friend of J. P. Sartre*, and explorer in Arabia, Nizan became a journalist and political activist on behalf of the Communist party, which he left at the beginning of the Second World War, in which he was killed. The sharp analysis and forceful style of his unfinished novel La Conspiration (1938) held great promise.

NOVELS: Antoine Bloyé (1933); Le cheval de Troie (1935; Eng. tr. C. Ashleigh, 1937).—ESSAYS: Aden, Arabie (1922; repr. with intro. J. P. Sartre, 1960; Eng. tr. J. Pinkham, 1968); Les chiens de garde (1932); Les matérialistes de l'antiquité (1936); Chroniques de Septembre (1939).

J. P. Sartre, Situations, I (1947); P. N. Intellectuel communiste, écrits et correspondance 1926-40 (documents; 1967); C. Connolly, Ideas and Places (1953); J. Leiner, Le destin de P. N. (1971).

M.G.

Njegoš, PETAR PETROVIĆ: see Petrović, PETAR NJEGOŠ.

Noailles, ANNA, COMTESSE DE, née PRINCESSE DE BRANCOVAN (*Paris 15 XI 1876; †ibid. 30 IV 1933), French poet and novelist. Madame de Noailles had a Greek mother and a Rumanian father. Her education was almost entirely French. Her sensuous poems, owing little to contemporary 'schools', render the fascination of the East and her own passionate response to her conceptions of love, nature and death. In 1921 she became a member of the Académie Royale de Belgique, and in 1924, as the result of a plebiscite of the intelligentsia, was acclaimed in France as 'Princesse des Lettres'.

VERSE: Le cœur innombrable (1901); L'ombre des jours (1902); Les éblouissements (1907); Les vivants et les morts (1913); Les forces éternelles (1920); Le poème de l'amour (1925); L'honneur de souffrir (1927); Derniers vers (1934).—NOVELS: La nouvelle espérance (1903); La domination (1905); Le livre de ma vie (1932).

C. C. Osborne, A. M. H., Countess de N. (1918, 1928); J. Larnac, La Comtesse de N., sa vie, son œuvre (1931); M. Borelly, L'émouvante destinée d'A. de N. (1938); L. Perche, A. de N. (1964).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Nobre, ANTÓNIO (*Oporto 16 VIII 1867; †ibid. 18 III 1900), Portuguese poet. He studied law at Coimbra and economic sciences in Paris. A morbid mind in a sick body, Nobre offers in his verses a strange mixture of narcissism, folk-lore, crude realism, whimsy and pessimism. This curious amalgam and the colloquial fluency of his verse, lend his work a certain originality; with his lachrymose, self-pitying temperament, however, what Nobre in effect achieved was a synthesis of many of the worst features of Portuguese Romanticism in a form that has helped maintain their popularity well into the 20th century. His Só (1892) in particular has enjoyed immense vogue in Portugal and has tended to have an unhealthy influence on many later poets.

Despedidas (1902); Primeiros Versos (1921).

C. Branco Chaves, 'A. N. e o nacionalismo literário' in Estudos Críticos (1932); J. Gaspar Simões, A. N., precursor da poesia moderna (1939); G. Castilho, A. N. (1950); A. N. (1966). T.P.W.

Nodier, JEAN CHARLES EMMANUEL (*Besançon 29 IV 1780; †Paris 27 I 1844), French writer. After a youth spent in revolutionary activities, Nodier fell foul of Napoleon, worked as a librarian at Laibach (mod. Ljubljana) and turned journalist after 1815—writing in Le Journal des Débats and La Quotidienne. He was appointed librarian at the Arsenal where, from 1824, he held evening gatherings for the young Romantic writers known as the Cénacle. He was a poet, critic, philologist and entomologist, but his best work is in his short stories, in which he gave free rein to his taste for the mysterious and fantastic. He was influenced by German Romanticism, and was in some ways one of the pioneers of Symbolism.

Jean Sbogar (1818); Smarra (1821); Trilby ou le lutin d'Argail (1822); La fée aux miettes (1832); Souvenirs de jeunesse (1832); Inès de las Sierras (1837); La Neuvaïne de la Chandeleur (1839); Le chien de Brisquet, Trésor des fêtes et fleurs des pois (1844).

M. Salomon, C. N. et le groupe romantique (1908) and Bibliographie critique (1925); W. Moench, C. N. und die deutsche und englische Literatur (1931); P. G. Castex, Le conte fantastique en France de N. à Maupassant (1951); J. Richer, C. N. (1962).—E. J. Bender, Bibliographie: C. N. (Lafayette, Ind., 1969; incl. sel. biblio. of crit. studs of C. N.). M.G.; J.P.R.

Nogarola, ISOTTA and GINEVRA (*Verona 1418 and 1419; †ibid. 1465 and 1466, respectively), sisters; Italian humanists, pupils of Martino Rizzoni, himself a pupil of Guarino da Verona (Guarini*).

Nogarolae epistolae et carminae (ed. E. Babel, 2 vols, Vienna, 1886; with biog.).—O. D'Uva, Un'erudita del secolo XV e la falsa leggenda dei suoi amori (1904). B.R.

Nolano, IL: see Bruno, GIORDANO.

Noma HIROSHI (*Kobe 23 II 1915), Japanese novelist. He had come under Marxist influence even before he graduated (in French literature) from Kyoto Imperial University in 1938, and during the war his Communist sympathies led to his dismissal from military service. Several of his novels, including his best-known, Shinkū chitai, are an indictment of the callousness and brutality of army life. Some of his work also shows the influence of Existentialism.

Shinkū chitai (1952; summary in Kokusai Bunka Shinkōkai, Introduction to Contemporary Japanese Literature, II, 1959; Zone de vide, tr. H. de Boissel, 1954; Zone of Emptiness, tr. [from Fr.] B. Frechtman, 1956).—Kao no naka no akai tsuki (1947; 'A Red Moon in Her Face', tr. K. Tsuruta in Literary Rev., VI.1, 1962). D.E.M.

No Me Mueve, Mi Dios, para Quererte, Spanish sonnet of the late (?)16th century. This famous poem has been translated into many languages because of its strong expression of the disinterested love of God. The thought is probably derived from Ávila's* Audi filia, chapter L. The sonnet, first printed in 1628, has been wrongly attributed to Saints Ignatius (Loyola*), Teresa* and Francis Xavier.

M. C. Huff, The Sonnet 'No me mueve, mi Dios'. Its Theme in Spanish Tradition (1948); M. Bataillon, 'El anónimo del soneto No me mueve, mi Dios' in Nueva Rev. de filol. Hisp., IV (1950). E.M.W.

Nonius Marcellus, 4th-century Latin grammarian. The value of his De compendiosa doctrina consists entirely in its numerous citations from authors since lost.

Ed. W. M. Lindsay (3 vols, 1903; repr. 1964).—F. della Corte, La poesia di Varrone ricostituita (1938). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Nonnus (*Panopolis, Egypt; fl. mid-5th century A.D.), Greek epic poet. Author of Dionysiaca in 48 books, recounting Dionysus' journey to India, and of a paraphrase in epic verse of St John's Gospel. Both poems are marked by fantastic exuberance of language and imagination and by metrical innovation. As tours de force they are admirable and had great influence, as poems they have little appeal to modern taste.

Dionysiaca (ed. R. Keydell, 2 vols, 1959; tr. W. H. D. Rouse, 3 vols, 1940); Paraphrasis Sancti Evangelii Joannei (ed. A. Scheindler, 1881).

P. Collart, Nonnos de Panopolis (Cairo, 1930); V. Stegemann, Astrologie und Universalgeschichte: Studien . . . zu den Dionysiaka des Nonnos (1930); J. Golega, Studien über die Evangelienendichtung des Nonnos (1930); A. Wifstrand, Von Kallimachos zu N. (Lund, 1933); J. Braune, N. und Ovid (1935); G. D'Ippolito, Studi nonniani: L'epillio nelle Dionisiache (1964).—W. Peek, Lexikon zu den Dionysiaka des Nonnos (in progr.; 1968–). R.B.

Noot, JONKER JAN VAN DER (*Brecht 1539/40; †Antwerp c. 1595), Dutch poet and writer. Noot was Sheriff of Antwerp when in 1567 he had to flee to London because of his participation in an insurrection of the geuzen. Later he lived in Germany and France. A pro-Spanish Catholic, he returned to Antwerp in 1578 where he led a miserable life as a hack poet. Noot is the first true Renaissance poet in the Netherlands. He followed the FLÉIADE poets (especially Ronsard*) and Petrarch*. Het Bosken was written before 1568 but printed in London only in 1570 or the beginning of 1571; of his Het Theatre oft Toon-neel (London, 1568), a Calvinistic tract in prose with an introductory cycle of poems, a French translation appeared in 1568, an English one in 1569 (in which Edmund Spenser* collaborated) and a German one in 1572. Cort Begryp der XII Boeken Olympiados (1579) is only a fragment of the original text which, according to the German translation, Das Buch Extasis (1576), had twice its bulk. Between 1580 and 1595 numerous editions of the Poetische Werken appeared in which in addition to the ever-returning older poems new works of unequal value were incorporated.

A. Verwey, Gedichten van J. J. van der N. (1895); a few later discovered poems ed. F. Kossmann in De Gulden Passer, new ser., VIII (1930); Bosken, Theatre and Epithalameon (ed. W. A. P. Smit, 1953); The Olympia Epics (Dutch and Fr. text of Cort Begryp; ed. C. A. Zaalberg, 1956); Lofsang van Braband/Hymne de Braband (ed. idem, 1958).—A Theatre for Worldlings (ed. L. S. Friedland and W. A. Jackson, 1939).—Biblio of the Poetische Werken by W. Waterschoot in Versl. en Med. Vlaamse Acad. (1967).

A. Vermeylen, Leven en Werken van J. J. van der N. (1899); W. J. B. Pienaar, 'Edmund Spenser and J. J. van der N.' in English Stud., VIII (1926); F. Prims in Versl. en Med. Koninkl. Vlaamse Acad. (1929 and 1937); C. Ypes, Petrarca in de Nederl. Letterkunde (1934); W. A. P. Smit, Dichters der Reformatie (1939); C. A. Zaalberg, Das Buch Extasis van J. van der N. (1954); P. Brachin in Archives des lettres modernes (1959); J. Wille, Literair-historische Opstellen (1963); S. F. Witstein, De Verzen-commentaar in 'Het Theatre' van J. van der N. (1965); K.-L. Selig in Homenaje al Prof. Rodriguez-Moñino (1966); L. Forster, Die Niederlande und die Anfänge der Barocklyrik in Deutschland (1967) and 'J. van der N. und die deutsche Renaissancelyrik' in Festgabe H. O. Bürger (1968); F. de Schutter, Het vers van J. J. van der N. (1967); F. van Vinckenroye, 'J. van der N. en J.-B. Houwaert' in Liber Alumnorum Rombauts (1968). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Nordal, SIGURÐUR JÓHANNESSON (*Eyjólfsstaðir, Vatnsdalur 14 IX 1886; ∞1922 Óláf Jónsdóttir), Icelandic scholar, philosopher and critic. He has made contributions of fundamental importance to the interpretation of old and modern Icelandic literature and of early Icelandic civilization. He has written many philosophical and critical essays and engaged in debate with E. H. Kvaran* in opposition to his spiritualist views. He has a powerful imagination but writes with controlled precision and elegance.

Fornar ástir (1919); Snorri Sturluson (1920); Völuspá (1923; 2nd ed. 1952); Íslensk menning (1942); Áfangar (2 vols, 1943–44); Uppstigning

(1946); Skottið á skugganum (1950); Á Þingvelli 984 (1961). P.G.F.

Nordenflycht, HEDVIG CHARLOTTA (*Stockholm 28 XI 1718; ∞1741 Johan Fabricius [†1742]; †ibid. 29 VI 1763), Swedish poet. The emotions provoked by her husband's death called forth her first important poems, Den sörjande Turturdufwan (1743), in which she expresses her melancholy thoughts on life. After 1743 she wrote a great deal of verse of the most diverse sorts. She obtained a pension from the Riksdag in 1752, was elected a member of Tankebyggårorden in 1753, and became its leader, holding a literary salon frequented among others by Creutz* and Gyllenborg*, who put her in touch with recent French literature. In 1761 she fell in love with a man 17 years her junior and under the influence of this passion and of Rousseau* she produced a new, and final, outburst of lyric poetry. The affair ended unhappily.

Contributions to Våra Försök (1753–55) and Witterhetsarbeten (1759–62), publications of Tankebyggårorden; Samlade skrifter (ed. H. Borelius, 3 vols, 1924–38).

J. Kruse, H. C. N. (1895); O. Levertin, Svenska gestalter (1903); M. Lamm, Upplysningstidens romantik, I (1918); H. Borelius, H. C. N. (1921). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Nordström, LUDVIG ANSHELM (*Härnösand 25 II 1882; ∞1909 Marika Stiernstedt; †Stockholm 15 IV 1942), Swedish writer. He began his literary career with a collection of poems, Kains Land (1906), and a book of short stories, Fiskare (1907), which are notable for their local colour and realism, based on his own experiences among the fishermen. In 1909 he published another collection of short stories, Borgare, inspired by his native Härnösand, which he calls Öbacka. His broad humour, and his gusto for life and people, are found at their best in his short stories about life in Norrland. He visited England during the First World War, and about 1915, partly under Wells* influence, began to write in a new style, preaching what he called 'totalism', i.e. the co-operation and unification of all men. His writing suffered under this, but fortunately he later reverted to his more simple, realistic, narrative style. He was an extremely prolific writer.

SHORT STORIES AND NOVELS: Herrar (1910); Landsortsbohème (1911); Öbackabor (1921); Historier (1926); Svenskar (1929); På hemväg till Öbacka (1934); Planeten Markattan (1937).—Valda noveller (6 vols, 1923).—VARIOUS: Fyrskuppet (1922); Världssnaden (1923); Stor-Norrland (1927); Bonde-nöden (1933); Lort-Sverige (1938).

F. Böök in Resa kring svenska Parnassen (1926); G. Lindeberg, Ludvig Nordströms utvecklingshistoria (1933); T. Jonsson, Stor-Norrland och litteraturen (1938); T. Hallén, Planeten Markattan (Skrifter utg. . . Stockholms Högskola, II, 1948); G. Qvarnström, Från Öbacka till Urbs (1954).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Norinaga: see Motoori NORINAGA.

Noroiña, GASPAR MARÍA DE NAVA ÁLVAREZ, CONDE DE (*Castellón de la Plana 6 V 1760; †Madrid 1815), Spanish poet, officer and diplomat. He commanded against the French at the victory of San Payo (1808). He is best known for his good translations of Sir William Jones* English rendering of Oriental poetry. Noroiña's translations helped to halt French influence and paved the way for the Romantic use of Oriental themes.

Poesías (2 vols, 1799); Poesías and Poesías asiáticas in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LXIII.

J. Fitzmaurice-Kelly, 'N.'s Poesías asiáticas in Rev. Hispanique, XVIII (1908).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Norris, FRANK, orig. BENJAMIN FRANKLIN NORRIS (*Chicago, Ill. 5 III 1870; ∞1900 Jeannette Black; †San Francisco, Calif. 25 X 1902), American novelist. One of the pioneers of American naturalism, he wrote his most important novel, McTeague (1899), while a student, under the impact of Zola*. He reported for the San Francisco Chronicle, and became involved in the Boer War while on assignment in Africa. His most ambitious project was to write the 'epic of the wheat' in three novels. Only the first two, The Octopus (1901) and The Pit (1903), were completed.

Blix (1899); The Responsibilities of the Novelist (1903); A Deal in Wheat (1903); The Third Circle (1909); Vandover and the Brute (1914).—The Complete Works of F. N. (10 vols, 1928); The Literary Criticism of F. N. (ed. D. Pizer, 1964).

F. Walker, F. N.: A Biography (1932); E. Marchand, F. N.: A Study (1942); W. French, F. N. (1962); D. Pizer, The Novels of F. N. (1966); W. B. Dillingham, F. N.: Instinct and Art (1969).

H.L.C. (I.W.)

Norris, JOHN (*1657; ∞1689; †Bemerton 1711), English clergyman, poet and philosopher. Educated at Winchester and Exeter College, Oxford, he became Fellow of All Souls 1680, ordained 1684, rector of Bemerton 1692. A strong churchman who attacked Whigs and Nonconformists, he was an early critic of Locke* in his Cursory Reflections upon . . . An Essay Concerning Human Understanding (1690; ed. G. D. McEwen, 1961) and of Toland's Christianity not Mysterious in An Account of Reason and Faith (1697). His Miscellanies (1687) containing brief essays, letters and poems were followed by Poems and Discourses (1684). His poetry celebrates the values of meditation and retirement, and he informs his religious themes of death and the afterlife with an individuality of thought and expression that in part harks back to the Metaphysicals and to the Christian Platonists earlier in the century.

The Poems of J. N. (ed. A. B. Grosart, 1871).

F. J. Powicke, A Dissertation on J. N. (1894); F. I. Mackinnon, The Philosophy of J. N. of Bemerton (1910); M.-S. Røstvig, The Happy Man (1954); G. Walton, Metaphysical to Augustan (1955).—Biblio. in G. R. Guffey, Traherne and the 17th Century English Platonists 1900–1966 (1969).

R.M.W.

North, CHRISTOPHER, pseud. of JOHN WILSON (*Paisley 18 V 1785; ∞1811 Jane Penny; †Edinburgh 3 IV 1854), Scottish journalist. After living in Westmorland (1807–15) and becoming acquainted with the Lake Poets, Wilson removed to Edinburgh and was called to the Bar. He was Professor of moral philosophy at Edinburgh from 1820. Under the pseudonym 'Christopher North' he contributed largely to the Blackwood's Magazine series 'Noctes Ambrosianae' (1822–35; ed. R. S. Mackenzie, 5 vols, rev. 1863; 4 vols, 1864), imaginary conversations in convivial style on a wide range of topics. Although he is sometimes a tasteless and vicious satirist, Wilson has solid virtues as a critic and shows great dexterity in writing boisterous dialogue.

Isle of Palms (1812); The City of the Plague (1816); Lights and Shadows of Scottish Life (1822); The Trials of Margaret Lyndsay (1823); The Foresters (1825); Poems (2 vols, 1825); Recreations of C. N. (1842).—Works (12 vols, 1855–58).—Biblio. in I. Jack, English Literature 1815–1832 (1963).

G. Saintsbury, Essays in English Literature, I (1890); M. Oliphant, William Blackwood and Sons (1897); E. Swann, C. N. (1934).

J.K.

North, SIR THOMAS (*London 28 V 1523; ∞Elizabeth Rich, ∞Judith Bridgwater; †?1601), English translator. Of good family, North appears to have suffered all his life from financial embarrassment. He is chiefly known for his version of Plutarch's* Lives (1579; from the Fr. of Jacques Amyot*) which exercised great influence on Elizabethan literature and was one of the chief sources of Shakespeare's* classical knowledge.

The Diall of Princes (from Guevara; 1557); The Morall Philosophy of Doni (1570).

J.B.B.

Norton, MARY (*Leighton Buzzard), English writer of children's books. The Borrowers (1952) and its sequels, recounting the adventures of a miniature race, are established favourites with readers of many ages, primarily through their persuasive attention to detail and their sympathetic character drawing.

The Magic Bed-Knob (1945) and Bonfires and Broomsticks (1947; both rev. as Bedknob and Broomstick, 1957); The Borrowers Afield (1955);

The Borrowers Afloat (1959); The Borrowers Aloft (1961).
W.R.A.

Norton, THOMAS (*London 1532; ∞?1555 Margery Cranmer, ∞ before 1568 Alice Cranmer; †Sharpenhoe 10 III 1583/84), English lawyer and poet who entered the service of Somerset as a boy amanuensis. A member of the Inner Temple, Norton wrote with Sackville [Dorset*] a large part of Gorboduc (1561). He was an M.P. and involved as an extreme Reformer in politics.

The Tragedie of Gorboduc (ed. I. B. Cauthen, 1970).

B. H. Carneiro de Mendonca, 'The influence of Gorboduc on King Lear' in Shakespeare Survey, XIII (1960).
B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Norwid, CYPRIAN KAMIL (*Łaskowo-Głuchy 24 IX 1821; †Paris 23 V 1883), Polish author and painter. He was brought up and studied painting in Warsaw where he published his first poetry with some success. From 1842 he travelled in Europe, studying painting and sculpture in Italy. Having decided not to return to Poland he settled first in Rome and later in Paris where he made contact with Polish emigré circles. Discouraged by political and literary attacks he went to New York (1852–54) but returned to Europe and lived in Paris from 1855 until his death. His last years were dominated by failing health, very strained material circumstances, little literary success, and no official recognition at all of his art. From 1877 he stayed in a home for destitute Polish veterans, and his bones were transferred to a communal grave in 1888.

Norwid was almost completely forgotten during his last years and immediately after his death. His revival as a poet did not begin till 1901; but he has since gradually gained recognition and has exerted a profound influence on 20th-century Polish poetry. His literary work is only partly preserved as little was published during his life time. His most important achievement is his lyrical poetry, which is in strong opposition to the Romantics and clearly anticipates the 20th century. His dry intellectualism and deliberate demands on the reader's co-operation emphasize the consciously 'anti-poetic' qualities of his poetry, as shown in his avoidance of pictorial effects and his introduction of everyday vocabulary. His experiments with colloquial diction led him to further experiments with metre: he introduced free verse into Polish poetry and daringly anticipated similar trends in French Symbolist poetry. In his greatest work, the cycle Vade-mecum, he successfully integrates his philosophical thoughts and deeply religious beliefs with his formal poetic innovations thus reaching his aim of creating an ars poetica for the poetry of the future. As a playwright Norwid developed his own kind of poetic 'serious comedy'. The plays have a decidedly scenic conception but are difficult to stage. Little of his prose has been preserved. Most important are some semi-philosophical essays and some short stories which all have a very colloquial digressive construction.

P.H.

VERSE: Promethidion (1851; Fr. tr. J. Pérard, 1939; crit. ed. R. Zrębowski, 1911); Poezye (1863); Rzecz o wolności słowa (Paris, 1869); Assunta (ed. J. Kaltenbach, 1908); Vade-mecum (facs. ed. W. Borowy, 1947).—PLAYS: Krakus (in Poezye, 1863; K. and the Dragon, adapt. V. Gorynska, 1929); Wanda (ibid., 1863); Kleopatra (in Chimera, VIII, 1904); Pierścień wielkiej damy (1933).—SHORT STORIES: Garstka piasku (1859); Ad Leones (in Chimera, I, 1901); Stygmat (ibid., VIII, 1904); Tajemnica lorda Singelworth (ibid., X, 1907).—VARIOUS: Czarne kwiaty (1856); Białe kwiaty (1857); O sztuce dla Polaków (1859); Milczenie (in Chimera, V, 1902); Bogarodzica (ibid., VII, 1903).—CORRESPONDENCE: Listy do B. Zaleskiego 1868–79 (ed. with comm. S. Pigoń, 1937).—Pisma zebrane (ed. with comm. Z. Przesmycki-Miriam, 5 vols, 1911–45); Wszystkie pisma . . . do dziś w całości lub fragmentarycznie drukowane (ed. idem, 6 vols, 1937).—Auswahl aus N.s Werken (tr. J. P. D'Ardeschah, 1907); Le Stygmate (tr. P. Casin, 1932); Le piano de Chopin (tr. J. Pérard, 1937).

A. Krechowicki, O C. N. Próba charakterystyki (2 vols, 1909); J. Fik, Uwagi nad językiem N. (1930); J. Krzyżanowski, 'C. N.' in Polish Romantic Literature (1930); S. Kołaczkowski, Dwa studia Fredro-N. (1934); Z. Wasilewski, N. (1935); E. Krakowski, La société parisienne cosmopolite au XIXe siècle et C. N. peintre et poète précurseur de symbolisme (1939); Pamięci C. N. Muzeum Narodowe (1946); K. Wyka, C. N. Poeta i sztukmistrz (1948); K. Górski et al., C. N. Pięć studiów (1949); J. Pietrkiewicz, 'Introducing N.' in Slavon. and East Eur. Rev., XXVII (1949); J. Sławińska, O Komediach N. (1953); W. Borowy, O N. (1960); Nowe studia o N. (1961); Z. Dokurno, Kompozycja utworów lirycznych C. K. N. (1965).
S.S. (P.H.)

Nossack, HANS ERICH (*Hamburg 30 I 1901), German novelist, writer of poems, essays and stories. After the loss of his early manuscripts—his work was proscribed by the Nazis—he began writing again at the end of the War. He is preoccupied with existential themes—he was discovered for France by Sartre*—and employs a distinctive style, the result of a fusion of mythic-archaic elements and a type of modern realism.

NOVELS: Spätestens im November (1955); Spirale (1956); Der Fall d'Arthez (1968); Dem unbekannten Sieger (1969).—SHORT STORIES: Der Neugierige (1955); Die Begnadigung (1955); Der Untergang (1962); Begegnung im Vorraum (1963); Das kennt man (1964).—OTHER PROSE ('Berichte'): Interview mit dem Tode (1948); Nach dem letzten Aufstand (1961).

'H. E. N., Autobiographie' in Das Einhorn (1957); H. W. Puppe, 'H. E. N. und der Nihilismus' in Ger. Quart., XXXVII (1964); B. Keith-Smith, 'H. E. N.' in Essays on Contemporary German Literature (ed. idem, 1966). F.M.K.

Notker, called BALBULUS, THE STAMMERER (*c. 840; †6 IV 912), monk of St Gall, where he became a famous teacher. His reputation rests on his many fine sequences, on his Gesta Karoli (full of anecdote and legend about Charlemagne) and on the account of him in Ekkehart* IV's Casus St Galli where he appears as an almost legendary figure.

W. von den Steinen, N. der Dichter und seine geistige Welt (2 vols, 1948; with text of sequences); Gesta Karoli (ed. H. F. Haefele in Monumenta Germaniae historica, Scriptores rerum Germanicarum, new ser., XII, 1959); Vita Sancti Galli (ed. K. Strecker, ibid., Poeti Latini aevi Carolini, IV.3, 1923).

J. M. Clark, The Abbey of St Gall (1926); B. Stäblein, 'Notkeriana' in Archiv für Musikwissenschaft, XIX-XX (1962-63); J. Duft, 'Wie N. zu den Sequenzen kam' in Zeitschrift für schweizerische Kirchengeschichte, LVI (1962); see also SEQUENCE. F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Notker, called LABEO or TEUTONICUS (950-1022), monk of St Gall, famed in his day as a teacher and nowadays held to have furthered the German language significantly by his careful renderings (with running commentary) of the principal works of the trivium and quadrivium (Boethius*, Cato*, Martianus* Capella, Aristotle's* Categories, etc.), and of the Psalms and Job. His retention of technical terms in their Latin form results in a donnish jargon. His orthographical system is a work of scholarship in itself.

H. Naumann, N.s Boethius, Quellen und Stil (1913); J. M. Clark, The Abbey of St Gall (1926); E. H. Sehr and Taylor Starck, N. des Deutschen Werke (1933 ff.); Ingeborg Schröbler, N. als Übersetzer von De Consolatione (1953); E. H. Sehr, N.-Glossar (1962). F.P.P.

Novak, SLOBODAN (*Split 3 XI 1924), Croatian poet, dramatist, novelist and prose writer. After taking part in the Partisan movement from 1943 Novak studied at Zagreb, and was influential in several Zagreb journals, notably Krugovi and Izvor. Certainly one of the most outstanding prose writers of the post-war generation, his prose alternates between the poetically lyrical and nostalgic, and crisp satire directed at the falsity of modern everyday values. His character sketches give evidence of keen psychological analysis and his description of a child's mind influenced and deformed by the grown-ups around it in Izgnubljeni zavičaj (1955) is a fine example of this, as is the portrait of a dying woman in the later Mirisi, zlato i pamjan (1957).

STORIES: Tvrđi grad (1961); Novele (1963).—PLAYS: Trofej (1960); Doludali metak (1964). B.J.

Nováková, TERÉZA, née LANHAUSOVÁ (*Prague 31 VII 1853; †ibid. 13 XI 1912), Czech novelist. Her most successful work portrays the life of the eastern Bohemian countryside in novels whose realistic descriptions do not conceal her romantic idealization of the peasantry.

Sebrané spisy (ed. A. Novák, 17 vols, 1914-30). A. Novák, O T. Novákové (1930). R.A.

Novalis, pseud. of FRIEDRICH LEOPOLD VON HARDENBERG (*Oberwiederstedt nr Halle 2 V 1772; †Weissenfels 25 III 1801), German poet. Hardenberg studied at Jena, Leipzig—where he met Friedrich Schlegel*—and Wittenberg, and became an inspector of salt-mines. In 1795 he became engaged to the 13-year-old Sophie von Kühn (†1797). In 1798 he became engaged to Julie von Charpentier. He died of tuberculosis.

Before the death of Sophie, Hardenberg was a cheerful, normal young man. This crisis evoked latent melancholy which expressed itself in a deep desire for death (Hymnen an die Nacht, 1800). Novalis is the one genuine poet among the early Romantics, the creator of the 'blue flower' as the symbol of Romantic yearning, and the cherisher of mystical aspirations. Although a Protestant of pietistic upbringing, he uses a Catholic mythology in a medieval setting.

Geistliche Lieder (1802).—NOVELS: Heinrich von Ofterdingen (1802); Die Lehrlinge zu Sais (1802; both unfinished).—VARIOUS: Blütenstaub (1798); Die Christenheit oder Europa (1799).—Novalis Schriften (2 vols, 1802); Werke (ed. P. Kluckhohn and R. Samuel, 4 vols, 1929; 1960-62).

A. Schubart, N. Leben, Dichtung und Denken (1887); K. Busse, N. Lyrik (1898); E. Heilborn, N. der Romantiker (1901); W. Dilthey, 'N.' in Das Erlebnis und die Dichtung (1906); R. Samuel, Die poetische Staats- und Geschichtsauffassung N. (1925); H. Pixberg, N. als Naturphilosoph (1928); E. Hederer, Novalis (1949); F. Hiebel, N. (1951); M. Beheim-Schwarzbuch, N. (1953); T. Haering, N. als Philosoph (1954). H.B.G.

Novikov, IVAN ALEXEYEVICH (*1879), Russian author whose narratives bear the stamp of the Turgenev* school. He achieved fame under the Soviets with his two biographical novels about Pushkin*: Pushkin v Mikhaylovskom (1937) and Pushkin na yuge (1944).

Povesti (1923); Sovremennyye povesti (1926); Mezhdú dvukh zor' (1927); Poslednie usad'by (1929); Pod rodnym nebom (1956).—Sobranie sochineniy (4 vols, 1966-67). J.L.

Novikov, NIKOLAY IVANOVICH (*Moscow province 26 IV 1744; †ibid. 31 VII 1818), Russian writer and publisher. He edited (1769–74), one after the other, four satirical periodicals in an intensely liberal spirit: Truten', Pustomelya, Zhivopisets and Koshel'ek. Between 1772 and 1775 he printed a historical dictionary of Russian writers, a series of old Russian chronicles and other important documents of the past. In 1778 he took over the Moscow University Press and published, among other things, the first Russian magazine for children, Detskoe chtenie (1785–89). Frightened of the French Revolution, Catherine* II closed his printing press in 1791. A year later he was imprisoned. When, after the death of the Empress, he was freed by Paul I, he was a broken man.

Izbrannye sochineniya (1951).

V. Bogolyubov, N. I. N. i ego vremya (1916); G. V. Vernadsky, N. I. N. (1918); V. A. Rozenberg, N. I. N. (1923); L. B. Svetlov, Izdatel'skaya deyatelnost' N. I. Novikova (1946). J.L.

Novikov-Priboy, ALEXEY SILYCH (*Tambov province 1877; †1944), Russian ex-sailor and author of narratives about the sea. His book Morskije rasskazy (1914) was confiscated on account of its revolutionary tendency. His documentary Tsu-shima (2 vols, 1932–35; Eng. tr. E. and C. Paul, 1936) is a spirited account of the Russian naval debacle in 1905. His other documentary novel, Kapitan I-go ranga (1943; 1960; The Captain, tr. C. Paul, 1946), is about the Tsarist fleet.

Sobranie sochineniy (6 vols, 1929–30); Sol'naya kupel' (1936); The Sea Beckons (short novels and stories; n.d.).

V. A. Krasil'nikov, A. S. N.-P. (1966). J.L.

Novo, SALVADOR (*1904), Mexican poet who wrote for the avant-garde magazines La Falange (1922), Ulises (1927–28) and Contemporáneos (1928–31). His first important collection of poems was XX poemas (1925) in which he wrote in a light-hearted ironic idiom. This was followed by Espejo (1933) and Poemas proletarios (1934). His collection of essays include Ensayos (1935), En defensa de lo usado (1938), El joven (1928) and Nueva grandeza mexicana (1946). From 1947, Novo became director of the theatre of the Fine Arts Institute and dedicated himself to the production and creation of plays.

Poesía (Fondo de Cultura Economica, Mexico, 1961).—PLAYS: La culta dama (1951); El joven II (1951); A ocho columnas (1956); Yocasta, o cast (1961); Ha vuelto Ulises (1962); La guerra de las gordas (1963).—Antología de S. N. (plays; with prologue Antonio Castro Leal, Mexico, 1966).

J.F.

Novodvorsky, ANDREY OSIPOVICH, also wrote under the pseud. A. OSIPOVICH (*Kiev province 1853; †Nice 1882), Russian author with a 'populist' outlook whose work deals mainly with the failure of the intellectuals of the 1870s to come to terms with the people. Most of his heroes are typical 'superfluous men'.

Sobranie sochineniy (8 vols, 1897); Suvenir i drugie rasskazy (1960).

V. L. L'vov-Rogachevsky, A. O. N. i epokha pereloma (1929). J.L.

Novomeský, LACO (*Budapest 1904), Slovak poet. A member of the Dav group (Clementis*), his early work showed the influence of the Czech 'poetist' school. His mature work (Svätý za dedinou, 1939) combines concern for political issues with personal lyrics in melodious and subtle language. Vilified as a 'bourgeois nationalist' and imprisoned in the 1950s, he was rehabilitated in 1962. Most memorable among his recent work is Vila Tereza (1963), a nostalgic evocation of the left-wing intellectual society of inter-war Prague.

Otvorené okná (coll. works to 1948; 1964).

V. Reisel, Poésia L. N. (1946). R.A.

Nowakowski, ZYGMUNT, pseud. of ZYGMUNT TEMPKA (*Cracow 22 I 1891; †London 4 X 1963), Polish writer. A soldier, dramatic artist and theatrical manager, he obtained great popularity by his lively feuilletons. In his novels there is often emotional tension and good psychological insight; his plays are characterized by a moderate realism, lively dialogue, good humour and simple language. He took a lively part in the cultural activities of the Polish emigrés in London after the Second World War.

NOVELS: Przyládek Dobrej Nadziei (1931; The Cape of the Good Hope, tr. K. Zuk-Skarszewska, 1940); Rubikon (1935).—Galazka rozmarynu (plays; 1937).—SHORT STORIES AND FEUILLETONS: Geografia serdeczna (1931); Dzwonek niedzielny (1934); Pędziwiatr (London, 1945).

K. Czachowski, 'Z. N.' in Obraz współczesnej literatury polskiej, III (1934). S.S. (P.H.)

Nu'aimah, MIKHĀ'IL: see Naimy, MIKHĀ'IL.

Nunes, AIRAS, 13th-century Galician poet, one of the most gifted and versatile troubadours of the early Galician-Portuguese CANCIONEÍROS. A cleric from Santiago de Compostela, he seems to have lived and composed at the court of Castile. He cultivated the courtly type of lyric but also made subtle use of the popular themes of the cantiga de amigo.

Le poesie di A. N. (ed. G. Tavani, 1964).

T.P.W.

Núñez Cabeza de Vaca, ALVAR (*Extremadura ?1490; †Seville ?1564), Spanish explorer. He left Spain in 1527, was shipwrecked in Florida and made his way overland to Mexico. Later he had other adventures in Paraguay. The accounts of these exploits make very interesting reading.

La relación ("Naufragios") (1542; ed. R. Ferrando Pérez, 1958; Narrative, tr. B. Smith, Washington, 1851; Adventures in the Unknown Interior of America, tr. C. Covay, 1961); Comentarios (1555).

F. Bandolier, Journey of N. C. de V. (New York, 1905); J. U. Terrell, Journey Into Darkness (1962).
E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Núñez de Arce, GASPARD (*Valladolid 4 VIII 1834; †Madrid 9 VI 1903), Spanish poet. Studied in Madrid and held political posts. He spoils his lyrical qualities and mastery of form by treating his serious themes oratorically, for example the problem of doubt in Gritos del combate (1875). This theme is however better presented in the semi-psychological poem, 'La última lamentación de lord Byron' (1879; Byron's Last Lament, tr. H. W. Pullman, Melbourne, 1895).

Obras escogidas (1911).—Eng. trs: I. Farnell in Spanish Prose and Poetry (1920); 'Miserere' in T. Walsh, Hispanic Anthology (New York, 1920).

J. del Castillo y Soriano, N. de A.; apuntes para su biografía (1904); J. Romano, N. de A. (1944); J. Romo Arregui, Vida, poesía y estilo de don G. N. de A. (1946).
R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Núñez de Guzmán, HERNÁN, called 'EL COMENDADOR GRIEGO' (*Valladolid ?1475; †Salamanca 1553), Spanish humanist. He was Professor of Greek at Salamanca, edited many classical texts, prepared the Latin version of the Septuagint for the Complutensian Polyglot, edited the Laberinto of Juan de Mena*, translated Aeneas Silvius' [Piccolomini*] history of Bohemia and published an important collection of Spanish proverbs.

Glosa de las trezientas (1499); Refranes o proverbios en romance (1555; 1804).

P. Groussac, 'Le commentateur du Laberinto' in Rev. Hispanique, XI (1904).
E.M.W.

Nušić, BRANISLAV (*Belgrade 8 X 1864; †ibid. 19 I 1938), Serbian playwright. He studied law and entered the consular service, but his principal work was in the theatre, as director and writer. His works include short stories, ethnographical studies and serious plays, but he excelled as a prolific, inventive and witty writer of comedies, presenting pictures of contemporary Serbian life.

Narodni poslanik (1883); Sumnjivo lice (1887); Običan čovek (1900); Put oko sveta (1910); Autobiografija (1924); Beograd nekad i sad (1933); Pokajnik (1937).—Sabrana dela (coll. works; 10 vols, 1965).

B. N. (ed. S. Z. Marković, 1965).
V.J.

Nyembezi, CYRIL LINCOLN SIBUSISO: see AFRICA (SUBSAHARAN): Southern African Languages.

O

Oberammergau Passion Play. After a visitation of the plague in 1633 the inhabitants of the village of Oberammergau, Upper Bavaria, made a vow to perform a Passion Play every ten years and the vow has been maintained, with some interruptions, until the present day. The play performed was based on a mid-15th-century Augsburg play. The earliest preserved text of the Oberammergau version is dated 1662 (ed. G. Queri, 1910); there have been refashionings by F. Rosner (1715), Ottmar Weis (1815; prose) and Joseph Alois Daisenberger (1890). The play became fashionable during the Romantic movement and is now a European artistic event. In 1970 Daisenberger's text was felt to be no longer suitable, but an adaptation by Dr Stephan Schaller, O.S.B., was rejected.

Crit. eds A. Hartmann (1880) and O. Mausser (1910); F. Rosner's text of 1715 (ed. O. Mausser, 1934); there is an official text published for each performance.

H. Diemer-von Hillern, O. and Its Passion-Play (1900); F. X. Bogenrieder, O. und sein Passionspiel (1930) and Jubilee of Passionplay O. (1934); W. Flemming, 'Das oberammergauer Passionspiel in seiner literatur- und theatergeschichtlichen Bedeutung' in Zschr. für Deutschkunde, XXXII (1922); Official Guide to O. (1950; cont. valuable essays); S. P. Jenkins, 'The O. Passion Play: a literary study' in Ger. Life and Letters (1951-52); W. Flemming, 'Das O. P.' in Maske und Kothurn, V (1960); Gisela Schwarzbeck in Enciclopedia dello spettacolo, VII (ed. Silvio d'Amico, 1960).

L.W.F.

Obey, ANDRÉ (*Douai 8 V 1892), French dramatist, director of the Comédie Française (1945). After successful collaboration with Denys Amiel in the 'intimate' comedy, La souriante Mme Beudet (1921), Obey developed a more stylized form of drama in Le viol de Lucrece (1931; Eng. tr. T. N. Wilder, 1933) and Noé (1931; Eng. ver. A. Wil-murt, 1967), both played with great success by Michel Saint-Denis' Compagnie des Quinze at the Vieux Colombier and later, with even more success, in England.

La bataille de la Marne (1932); Loire (1932); Richard III (adapt. from Shakespeare; 1933); Le trompeur de Séville (1937); Maria (1946); L'homme de cendres (1950); Lazare (1951); Une fille pour du vent (1953); Les trois coups de minuit (1958; Frost at Midnight, tr. W. Tute, 1960).

G. Pillement, Anthologie du théâtre français contemporain, I (1945); R. Lalou, Le théâtre en France depuis 1900 (1951). T.W.G. (M.G.)

Obligado, RAFAEL (*Buenos Aires 1851; †ibid.

25 IV 1920), Argentinian poet of the Romantic school who specialized in patriotic and national themes. He contributed some specimens to the GAUCHESQUE branch of Argentinian literature.

Versos infantiles (1882); Poesías (1885; defin. ed. C. Obligado, 1923); Poesías escogidas (ed. F. E. Gutiérrez, 1953). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Obradović, DOSITEJ (*Čakovo, Banat ?1742; †Belgrade 28 III 1811), Serbian writer and educationist, recognized as the founder of modern Serbian literature. Born of poor parents and soon left an orphan, he became a monk but renounced monastic life to satisfy his craving for knowledge and travel. He lived and studied in many parts of the Levant and Europe; his visit to London (1783-84), of which he has left a lively account, aroused his interest in the works of Addison* and his contemporaries, from which he frequently borrowed in his collections of essays. His works, based mainly on free translations from English, French, German and Italian, aimed at arousing the Serbs to a realization of their need for education and at acquainting them with trends in West European thought and culture. His most original work is his autobiography. He wrote in the vernacular, with as few Old Slavonic borrowings as the rudimentary state of the Serbian literary language permitted, in a vivid style and with sincerity and integrity, enlightened common sense, sane patriotism, keen intellectual curiosity and wide erudition. In his last years, spent in the newly liberated Serbian state, he became Minister of Education and established the first Serbian high school.

Život i priključenija (1783; The Life and Adventures of Dimitrije Obradović, tr. G. R. Noyes, 1953); Sovjeti zdravago razuma (1784); Basne (1788); Sobranje raznih naravoučiteljnih vešćej (1793); Etika (1803); Izabrani spisi (sel. writings; 1962).—Sabrana dela (coll. works; 3 vols, 1961).

L. Léger, 'La renaissance intellectuelle de la nation serbe: Jean Raitch et Dosithée Obradovich' in Jour. des Savants, IX-X (1911); P. Popović, 'A Serbian Anglophil, Dositheus O.' in Quart. Rev., CCXXXII (1919); H. Wendel, Aus dem südslawischen Risorgimento (1921); V. Javarek, 'D. O. and the English rationalists' in Slavon. and E. Eur. Rev., XXV (1947), 'Essays from English in the Sobranije of D. O.', ibid., XXXIII (1955), 'Material from English writers in the Mezimac of D. O.', ibid., XXXIV (1956) and 'D. O.'s English models, 1785-1788', ibid., XL (1961); D. O. (ed. M. Leskovic, 1962). V.J.

Obradovich, SERGEY ALEXANDROVICH (*1892), Soviet poet of proletarian origin. After 1917 he became a member of the PROLET-CULT and of the proletarian group of authors, Kuznitsa ('The Smithy').

Gorod—Stikhi i poetry (1929); Izbrannyye stikhi (1935; with biblio.). J.L.

O'Brien, EDNA (*Co. Clare 1932), Irish novelist and short-story writer. Both her first novel, The Country Girls (1960), and A Pagan Place (1970) evoke the delights and restrictions of an Irish country childhood. The spontaneity and charm of the first has been darkened by a bitterness in A Pagan Place, but here as elsewhere her work exhibits a natural grace. Her other books trace the development of her central character through a series of adventures sexual and otherwise. Her work gives uninhibited expression to a temperament both humorous and passionate.

NOVELS: The Lonely Girl (1962); Girls in Their Married Bliss (1964); August is a Wicked Month (1965).—STORIES: Casualties of Peace (1966); The Love Object (1968); Zee and Co. (1971).

E.T.W.

O'Brien, FLANN: see Ó Nualláin, BRIAIN.

O'Brien, KATE (*Limerick 1898), Irish novelist. Educated at University College, Dublin, she worked as a journalist in London and lived for some years in Spain. A careful and distinguished writer, interested in the emotional tensions caused by Catholic puritanism.

Without My Cloak (1931); Mary Lavelle (1936); The Land of Spices (1941); That Lady (1946).

E.T.W.

Obstfelder, SIGBJØRN (*Stavanger 21 XI 1866; ∞1898 Helga Weeke; †Copenhagen 29 VII 1900), Norwegian poet, novelist and dramatist. He trained as an engineer, spent a year in the United States, returned to Norway to study music but, in the event, led a roving existence, and eventually died at an early age of tuberculosis. His literary work reflects his restlessness and incapacity to adjust himself to the world around him. As one of his best known poems suggests, he felt himself a stranger to existence. However, in his capacity to evoke the inner life of the lonely and questing soul in all its shifting moods, its 'Angst', sublimated eroticism and religious longings, he made a distinctive contribution to Norwegian literature.

Digte (1893; Poems, tr. P. Selver, 1920).—De røde dråber (play; 1897).—NOVELS AND VARIOUS: To novelleter (1895); Korset. En Kjærlighetshistorie (1896); En præsts dagbog (1900); Efterladte arbejder (ed. V. Stuckenberg, 1903); Breve til hans bror (ed. S. Tunold, 1949); Brev fra S. O. (ed. A. Hannevik, 1966).—Samlede dikt (3 vols, 1950); Samlede dikt (1967).

J. A. Mortensen, S. O. Hans Forhold til Kvinden og Erotiken (1940); T. Greiff, S. O. (1945); G. S. Schoolfield, 'A study in idealism' in Edda (1957); J. F. Bjørnsen, S. O. (1959); A. Hannevik, O. og mystikken (1960).

R.G.P.

O'Casey, SEAN (*Dublin 31 III 1884; ∞1926

Eileen Reynolds, actress; †Torquay 18 IX 1964), Irish dramatist. Born in a Dublin slum, O'Casey was mainly self-educated, for the brief period of his schooling was broken by continual eye-trouble. He worked as a shop-hand and as a navvy, became interested in the Irish labour and revolutionary movements, in which he worked as an organizer, and began to write for the Abbey Theatre. His early plays, which made him the greatest playwright since J. M. Synge*, were tragi-comedies of Dublin slum life, marked by an enormous verbal vitality and rich characterization. The Silver Tassie (1928) which caused a break with Yeats* and the Abbey, initiated a series of experimental plays in which O'Casey tried to catch many facets of life by a varied style which combines fantasy, poetry, realism and slapstick. His last plays are satirical fantasies of Irish life, impelled like all his work by strong social convictions. His prose autobiographies, though often self-pitying or strident, are on the whole a remarkable achievement.

PLAYS: Two Plays: Juno and the Paycock and The Shadow of a Gunman (1925); The Plough and the Stars (1926); Within the Gates (1933); The Star Turns Red (1940); Purple Dust (1940); Red Roses for Me (1942); Oak Leaves and Lavender (1946); Cock-a-Doodle Dandy (1949); The Bishop's Bonfire (1955); The Drums of Father Ned (1960).—Collected Plays (4 vols, 1949–51).—AUTOBIOGRAPHIES: I Knock at the Door (1939); Pictures in the Hallway (1942); Drums Under the Window (1945); Inishfallen Fare Thee Well (1949); Rose and Crown (1952); Sunset and Evening Star (1954).—VARIOUS: The Story of the Irish Citizen Army (1919); Feathers From the Green Crow 1905–25 (ed. R. Hogan, 1963); Under a Colored Cap (1963); Blasts and Benedictions (ed. R. Ayling, 1967).

R. G. Hogan, The Experiments of S. O'C. (1960); D. Krause, S. O'C.: The Man and His Work (1960) and A Self Portrait of the Artist as a Man (1968); S. O'C. (ed. R. Ayling, 1969; incl. biblio.); E. O'Casey, Sean (1971).

E.T.W.

Occam, or Ockham, WILLIAM OF (*Ockham, Surrey c. 1290; †Munich c. 1349), English nominalist philosopher and Franciscan; opponent of Scotism, champion of the temporal authority of the state; involved in the Franciscan quarrel with Pope John XXII on evangelical poverty; famous for the dictum known as 'Occam's razor' (entities are not to be unnecessarily multiplied). R.W.B.

Many works are available in mod. facs. eds: Opera plurima (Lyons, 1494–96; repr. 1962); Philosophia naturalis (1637; repr. 1963); Quodlibeta septem, Tractatus de sacramento altaris (1491; repr. 1962); Epitome et collectorium . . . circa quatuor Sententiarum libros (1501; repr. 1965).—Dialogus de potestate Papae et Imperatoris (Turin, 1959–66); Expositionis in libros artis logicae proemium, etc. (ed. E. A. Moody, 1965); Opera politica (ed. J. G. Sikes et al., 1940–; ed. R. F. Bennett and H. S.

Offier, 1956); Expositio in . . . Perithermenias (ed. A. Gambatese, 1965); Scriptum in librum primum sententiarum (ed. G. Gál, 1967); Philosophical Writings (ed. and tr. Ph. Boehner, 1957–67); Summa totius logicae (ed. idem, 1957).

E. A. Moody, The Logic of W. of O. (1935); Ph. Boehner, Collected Articles on O. (ed. E. M. Buytaert, 1958); L. Baudry, Lexique philosophique de Guillaume d'O. (1958); W. Kölmel, W. O. und seine kirchenpolitischen Schriften (1962). Tor.

Occleve, THOMAS: see Hoccleve, THOMAS.

Ochikubo Monogatari, Japanese novel, written by an unknown author, at an unknown date (probably between 950 and 999). The story deals with the trials of a persecuted step-daughter, but has a happy ending; though it has moments of comic realism, the atmosphere is still rather that of a fairy-tale.

O. M. or The Tale of the Lady O. (tr. W. Whitehouse, 1934; repr. 1965). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Ochino, BERNARDINO [TOMASSINI] (*Siena 1487; ∞c. 1545 unnamed lady from Lucca; †Schlickau 1564), Italian preacher and writer who when Vicar-General of the Capuchins was summoned to Rome for heresy in 1542, but fled to Geneva and championed opinions which were increasingly distasteful to the Protestant Establishment. From 1547 to 1553 he lived in England, where he wrote his Tragoedie which became a source for Milton's* Paradise Lost. In 1563 he was banished from Zürich for publishing Dialogi XXX which contained his seeming defence of polygamy. The following year he was expelled from Poland and died a fugitive from rival orthodoxies in Moravia.

'Prediche' in Opuscoli e lettere di riformatori italiani, I (ed. G. Paladino, 1913); A Tragoedie or Dialogue of the vniust vsurped primacie of the Bishop of Rome (tr. J. Ponet, 1549; original not extant); Laberintii (1561); Dialogi XXX (1563).—Eng. tr. of Dialogus de Polygamia (1657 and 1732).

K. Benrath, B. O. von Siena (1875; 2nd ed. 1892; Eng. tr. H. Zimmern, 1876); R. H. Bainton, B. O., esule e riformatore senese (1940). P.McN.

Ochoa, EUGENIO DE (*Lezo, Guipúzcoa 1815; ∞Carlota Madrazo; †Madrid 1872), Spanish man of letters; studied under Lista*; became councillor of state and academician. He participated in the Romantic movement; translated Hugo* and Virgil*; wrote a historical novel, El auto de fe (1837), and interesting memoirs. While exiled in France (1837–44) he published a catalogue of Spanish MSS in Paris and excellent editions of Spanish classics. R.M.N.

Apuntes para una biblioteca de escritores españoles contemporáneos, en prosa y verso (2 vols, 1840); Catálogo razonado de los manuscritos españoles existentes en las bibliotecas de París (1844); Miscelánea de literatura, viajes y novelas (1867).

A. M. Segovia, 'E. O.' in Ilustración Esp. y Amer. (1872); D. A. Randolph, E. de O. y el romanticismo español (Berkeley, 1966).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Ockerse, WILLEM ANTONY (*Vianen 16 IV 1760; ∞Alida B. T. Bruyn; †The Hague 19 I 1826), Dutch parson, politician, prose writer and poet, wrote most of the Proeven voor het verstand, de smaak en het hart (3 vols, 1784–94), which Bellamy* published in collaboration with him. A true patriot and for a short time chairman of the National Convention (1797), he was a philosopher as well (Ontwerp tot eene algemeene characterkunde, 3 vols, 1788–97). In collaboration with his sister A. Kleyn-Ockerse he wrote Gedenksuil van Bellamy (1822). His Vruchten en resultaten van een zestigjarig leven (3 vols; incl. short life and a biblio.) appeared in 1826.

J. P. Hasebroek, Een Dichter-album (1890).

J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Ockham, WILLIAM OF: see Occam, WILLIAM OF.

O'Connor, FRANK: see O'Donovan, MICHAEL.

O'Connor, (MARY) FLANNERY (*Savannah, Ga. 25 III 1925; †3 VIII 1964), American short-story writer and novelist. During a life handicapped and eventually cut short by disease, Flannery O'Connor broke new ground by combining the Southern novel's tradition of violence with her own sceptical brand of Catholicism. Her first novel, Wise Blood (1952), is a tragi-comic account of the making of an anchorite in our own time. Her second, The Violent Bear It Away (1960), her masterpiece, tells of the terrible initiation of a reluctant prophet.

A Good Man Is Hard to Find (1955); Everything That Rises Must Converge (1965).

J. Hendin, The World of F. O'C. (1970).

D.E.Mo.

O'Curry, EUGENE (*Dunaha, Co. Clare 1796; †Dublin 30 VII 1862), Irish scholar and translator; Professor of Irish history and antiquities in the Catholic University of Ireland, a pioneer in the recovering of materials of Irish history and legend. Lectures on the Manuscript Materials of Ancient Irish History (1861) was his most important work. This influenced Lady Gregory* and other Irish writers in English and was one of the main examples of the fertilizing effects of scholarship on the Irish literary revival.

On the Manners and Customs of the Ancient Irish (1873).—P. MacSweeney, A Group of Nation Builders (1913). E.T.W.

Odets, CLIFFORD (*Philadelphia 18 VII 1906;

∞1937 Luise Rainer [o/o1941], ∞1943 Betty Grayson; †Hollywood 14 VIII 1963), American playwright. Odets worked from the beginning with the Group Theatre and was first acclaimed for his agitprop drama Waiting for Lefty (1935). The energy of Odets' commitment to radical causes and his general analysis of social ills caused him to ignore the finer points of character development and his imagination could never free itself from the influence of his social and theatrical experiences in the 1930s.

Awake and Sing (1935); Till the Day I Die (1935); Paradise Lost (1936); Golden Boy (1937); Rocket to the Moon (1938); Night Music (1940); Clash by Night (1941); The Country Girl (1950). G.A.K.

Odian, ERVANT (*Istanbul 1869; †Cairo 1926), Armenian novelist and satirist, son of Khatchig Odian (1842–1908) and nephew of Krikor Odian (1834–87), a progressive official in the Ottoman Ministry of Foreign Affairs, in whose house in Istanbul he spent much of his childhood. In 1891 he began to write for A. Arpharian's important political, economic and literary daily newspaper, Hayreniq ('The Fatherland'). The Turkish repressions in 1896 forced him to leave Turkey, and he wandered from Athens to Alexandria, Vienna, London and Paris where, in 1900, he founded his own independent journal, Azat Khôsq ('Free Speech'), transferring it to Alexandria in 1902. In 1904 he visited India, returning from Alexandria to Istanbul in 1909. He was deported with other Armenian victims to Deir-ez-Zor (1915), but survived to return to Istanbul in 1918; in 1922 fresh Turkish repression forced him into exile in Rumania. In 1924 he moved to Tripolis in the Lebanon until 1926. He thus lived through, and was personally much affected by, a very difficult time in the history of the Armenian nation. He turned this first-hand experience to good account in his numerous writings, which include 30-odd novels and novelettes, several plays, and many satirical articles on political personalities and current events, mainly devoted to the Armenian society of Istanbul. His most popular works are Family, Honour, Morals (1910), War and Peace (1912), A Mission to Dzabelvar (1913), Comrade Pantchuni ['Have-Not'] in Vaspurakan (1914). Political extremisms to both right and left, harmful enthusiasms, weird jargons, all excited his keen sense of the ridiculous. Patriarch, politician, and profiteer, capitalist and revolutionary—none was safe from his skilful caricatures; there is much irony but little spite in his writings. Among Western authors he translated into Armenian were Mark* Twain and Zola*.

A. Makarian, E. O. (in Armenian; Erevan, 1965). C.J.F.D.

Odobescu, ALEXANDRU (*Bucharest 1834; †ibid. 1895), Rumanian author and archaeologist. In 1850 he went to study in Paris where he associated with the Rumanians in exile after the 1848 revolution. He returned to Wallachia in 1855 and published two colourful historical novels Mihnea-Vodă cel Rău (1857) and Doamna Chiajna (1860), both based on Rumanian history. In 1861 he founded the review Revista română, but he is chiefly remembered for his Pseudokinegetikos (1874), a history of hunting through the ages, traced through music, art and literature and revealing the author as a fine portraitist of both men and nature.

Opere (2 vols, 1965–67); Pagini regăsite (ed. G. Șerban, 1965).—D. Păcurariu, A. O. (1966). D.J.D.

O'Donovan, MICHAEL, pseud. FRANK O'CONNOR (*Cork 1903; †Dublin 10 III 1966), Irish story-writer and translator; worked in the Irish republican movement 1921–22 and was interned during the civil war; director of the Abbey Theatre (1935–39). His stories deal mostly with the subject of innocence and experience. He observes tolerantly the foibles of Irish Catholicism and the intricacies of small-town life. His work is richly humorous and shows a dramatist's ability with dialogue. He also produced many vigorous translations from the Irish.

STORIES: Stories (1953); More Stories (1957); Collection Two (1964); Collection Three (1969).—VERSE TRANSLATIONS: The Midnight Court (1945); Kings, Lords and Commons (1961); The Little Monasteries (1963); A Golden Treasury of Irish Poetry, A.D. 600–1200 (with David Greene; 1967).—CRITICISM: The Lonely Voice (1963); The Backward Look (1967).—AUTOBIOGRAPHIES: An Only Child (1961); My Father's Son (1969).

Michael/Frank (ed. M. Sheehy, 1969; incl. biblio.). E.T.W.

Odo of Cluny (*879; †942), Latin writer of Frankish origin, was educated at Tours, became Abbot of Cluny c. 924. His Collationes consists of extracts from the Fathers. He also wrote hymns and a long philosophical and moral poem, the Occupatio.

Migne, Patrologia Latina, CXXXIII (1853); Analecta hymnica medii aevi, L (1907); Occupatio (ed. A. Swoboda, 1900).

John of Salerno, St O. of C. (tr. and ed. G. Sitwell, 1958).—Dom du Bourg, S. Odon (1905). F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

O'Dowd, BERNARD PATRICK (*Beaufort, Victoria 1866; †Melbourne 1 IX 1953), Australian poet. In 'Poetry Militant' (in Collected Poems, 1941), he expounds, in prose, the doctrine that poetry should deal with questions of the age. 'The Bush', a long poem which relaxes the terse economy of form and phrase of his earlier poetry, imaginatively surveys the origins and prospects of Australia with less didacticism than his other work. He frequently uses mythological and historical symbols to challenge modern and even scientific conceptions.

V. Kennedy and N. Palmer, B. O'D. (1954).
F.T.M. (A.M.G.)

Odoevsky, PRINCE ALEXANDER IVANOVICH (*1802; †1839), Russian poet. He took part in the December rising in 1825 and spent ten years in Siberian exile before he was sent (in 1837) as a private soldier to the Caucasus, where he was befriended by Lermontov* and where he perished. Influenced by the idealistic currents of the period, his poetry expresses a strong but enlightened patriotism and an equally strong love of freedom.

Polnoye sobranie stikhotvoreniy i pisem (1934); Stikhotvoreniya (1937, 1954).

N. A. Kotlyarevsky, Dekabristy (1907); N. Gudziy, 'Poety-dekabristy' in Katorga i ssylka, VIII (1925); V. G. Bazanov, Poety-Dekabristy (1950). J.L.

Odoevsky, PRINCE VLADIMIR FÉDOROVICH (*Moscow 30 VII 1803; †ibid. 1869), Russian author of philosophic-romantic fancies, sketches and stories influenced by E. T. A. Hoffmann* and the philosopher Schelling*. In 1824–25 he edited, with the poet Küchelbecker*, four issues of the important miscellany Mnemosyne. The discrepancy between ideal and reality is his usual subject. His best-known work, *Russkie noch*i (1844), is a series of conversations about the incompetence of philosophy devoid of religious intuitions.

Sochineniya (3 vols, 1944); Devyat' povestey (New York, 1954); Povesti i rasskazy (1959); *Russkie noch*i (1967); Muzykal'no-literaturnoe nasledie (1956).

P. N. Sakulin, Knyaz V. F. O. (1913); Literaturnoye nasledstvo, XXII (1935). J.L.

Ōe KENZABURŌ (*Ehime 31 I 1935), Japanese novelist. He had already won a notable literary prize before graduating in French literature from Tokyo University in 1959. His work is predominantly concerned with sex and politics, and reveals much of the disillusion and struggle for freedom from conventional restraints of the post-war generation in Japan.

Shisha no ogori (1957; 'Lavish Are the Dead', tr. J. Nathan in Japan Quart., XII.2, 1965); Shiiku (1958; 'The Catch', tr. J. Bester, ibid., VI.1, 1959, repr. in The Shadow of Sunrise, ed. S. Saeki, 1966); Kojinteki na taiken (1964; A Personal Matter, tr. J. Nathan, 1968). D.E.M.

Oehlenschläger, ADAM GOTTLÖB (*Copenhagen 14 XI 1779; ∞1810 Christiane Elisabeth Georgine Heger; †ibid. 20 I 1850), Danish poet and playwright. Henrik Steffens* converted him to the Romantic school, which he inaugurated in Denmark and whose leading poet he became. His first Romantic poem was Guldhornene (1802). The fundamentals of Danish Romanticism are embodied in his dramatic poem St Hans Aftenspil ('Midsummer Night's Play').

Oehlenschläger's youthful inspiration lasted for five years. There are many beautiful poems, and a wealth of ballads with medieval and modern themes; dramatic works include the poetic drama Aladdin, Hakon Jarl, the first and best of his Northern tragedies, and Balder hin Gode, a mythological tragedy in Greek style. There are great poetic cycles, long epic poems and prose tales based on Old Norse motifs. The richness of subject-matter is extraordinary and the technical skill in handling a variety of metres impressive. During these early years, which he never surpassed, Oehlenschläger's creative powers appeared to be limitless. However, the youthful rebel became a sedate, respectable citizen. Only in the cycle of dramatic poems entitled Helge (1814) did he reach the standard of his early work. His later Northern tragedies, of considerable poetic quality, are interesting because they represent the creation of Danish historical tragedy, but their naïveté has made it difficult for later generations to appreciate them.

VERSE: Guldhornene (1802; The Gold Horns, tr. G. Borrow, 1913); Digte (1803 [1802]); Poetiske Skrifter (2 vols, 1805); Nordiske Digte (1807); Digtinger (1811); Vaulundurs Saga (1812; tr. E. Kluneas, 1847); Nordens Guder (1819; Gods of the North, tr. W. E. Frye, 1845); Hrolf Krake (1828). —PLAYS: Aladdin eller den forunderlige Lampe (1802; Aladdin or the Wonderful Lamp, trs T. Martin, 1857, H. Meyer, 1969); Hakon Jarl (1807; tr. J. Chapman, 1857); Palnatoke (1809; Eng. tr. idem, 1855); Axel og Valborg (1810; Aksel and Valborg, tr. idem, 1851); Correggio (1811; Eng. tr. E. B. Lee, 1846); Stærkodder (1812); Hugo von Rheinberg (1813); Hagbarth og Signe (1814); Fiskeren (1816); Fostbrødrene (1817); Erik og Abel (1820); Væringerne i Miklagård (1827); Karl den Store (1833); Dronning Margareta (1834); Sokrates (1836); Olaf den Hellige (1838); Knud den Store (1839); Dina (1842); Erik Glipping (1844); Landet fundet og forsvundet (1846); Amleth (1847).

—STORIES: Aly og Gulhyndy (1811); Den lille Hyrde-dreng (1818; The Little Shepherd-Boy, tr. J. Heath, 1827); Hroars Saga (1817); Øen i Sydhavet (4 vols, 1824–25); Ørvarodds Saga (1840). —Poetiske Skrifter (ed. F. L. Liebenberg, 32 vols, 1857–62); Poetiske Skrifter i Udvalg (ed. H. Topsøe-Jensen, 5 vols, 1926–30). —MEMOIRS: Levnet (2 vols, 1830–31); Erindringer (4 vols, 1850–51); Ungdomserindringer (ed. L. Bobé, 1915).

F. L. Liebenberg, Bidrag til den Oehlenschlägerske Litteraturs Historie (2 vols, 1868); K. Arentzen, Baggelsen og O. (8 vols, 1870–78) and A. O. (1879); V. Andersen, Guldhornene (1896) and A. O. (3 vols, 1899–1900); Ida Falbe-Hansen,

O.'s nordiske Digtning (1921); Breve til og fra O. (5 vols, 1945-50).—A. Jørgensen, O.-Litteraturen 1850-1966 (1966). E.B.

Oever, KAREL VAN DEN (*Antwerp 19 XI 1879; †6 X 1926), Flemish poet, short-story writer and essayist. A rebellious Roman Catholic à la Léon Bloy*, a touchy and fanatical controversialist, he began with simple stories and sentimental poetry, after which he turned to historical evocations in over-ornate imitation-Renaissance style. In the 1920s he joined in the Expressionist movement with evocative poetry and meditations in prose, both inspired by religion.

VERSE: In schemergloed der morgenverte (1901); Van stille dingen (1904); Het drieluudig beeld (1907); Godvruchtighe maen-ryme. (1911); Lof van Antwerpen (1912); De zilveren flambouw (1919); Het open luik (1922); Paviljoen (1927).—STORIES: Kempische vertelsels (1905); De Geuzenstad (1911); Oud-Antwerpsche vertellingen (1920); Het inwendig leven van Paul (1923).—ESSAYS: De Vlaamsche beweging (1918); Het rood paard (1923); Geestelijke peilingen (1924); De Hollandsche natie voor een Vlaamschen spiegel (1925).

F. Verachttert, K. van den O. (1940). R.F.L.

O'Faolain, SEAN (*Cork 22 II 1900), Irish novelist, story-writer and biographer; educated at Cork and Harvard, he has held fellowships in the U.S.A. One of the major Irish short-story writers, he exhibits an impressionistic touch and a fine sense of atmosphere. His questioning and satirical intelligence has sometimes made him unpopular with the authorities. He is a lively biographer.

NOVELS: A Nest of Simple Folk (1933); Bird Alone (1936); Come Back to Erin (1940).—STORIES: Stories (1958); I Remember! I Remember! (1962); The Heat of the Sun (1966); Stories of S. O'F. (1970); The Talking Trees (1971).—BIOGRAPHIES: King of the Beggars (1938); The Great O'Neill (1942).—Vive moi! (autobiog.; 1965).—The Short Story (criticism; 1948).—The Irish (1948; 2nd ed. 1969).

M. Harmon, S. O'F. (1967); P. A. Doyle, S. O'F. (1968). E.T.W.

O'Flaherty, LIAM (*Aran Island, Co. Galway 1897), Irish novelist and short-story writer. Fought in the British army, and in the Irish civil war. He has written quiet, naturalistic stories of Irish life which display a forceful simplicity. His novels are of uneven quality: they are a curious blend of melodrama and mysticism, of realism and demonic power.

STORIES: Spring Sowing (1926); Short Stories (1937); Two Lovely Beasts (1948); Short Stories (1961).—NOVELS: The Black Soul (1925); The Informer (1926); The Assassin (1928); Skerret (1932); Famine (1937); Land (1946); Insurrection

(1950).—AUTOBIOGRAPHIES: Two Years (1930); Shame on the Devil (1934). E.T.W.

Ōgai: see Mori ŌGAI.

Ogarëv, NIKOLAY PLATONOVICH (*Moscow 1813; †Greenwich 1877), Russian poet. As an incurable idealist of the 1840s he became a voluntary exile and collaborator of his friend Alexander Herzen* in London. His lyrics, both emotional and reflective in the good Moscow tradition, express nostalgia and romantic frustration, typical of the 'superfluous men' of the period. Influenced by Saint-Simon*, Owen* and Fourier*, he wrote a number of civic poems, but even in these there is a note of resignation.

Stikhotvoreniya (1856; London ed. 1858; 1937; 1948); Stikhotvoreniya i poemy (1956).

P. V. Annenkov, Literaturnye vospominaniya (1909); M. O. Gershenzon, Arkhiv Ogarëvykh (1930); L. E. Barsukova, Herzen, O. i ikh okruzhenie (1940); W. A. Putintsev, N. O. (1959). J.L.

Ogier, GUILLIAM (*Antwerp 1618; †ibid. 22 II 1689), the best Flemish writer of comedies in the 17th century, comparable to Brederode*. He was factor of the Chamber De Olyftack, combined with De Violieren after 1661. He wrote a comedy about each of the seven deadly sins.

De Gulsigheydt (1639; ed. W. van Eeghem, 1921); De Hooverdigheid (1644; ed. idem, 1934); De Gramschap (1645; ed. A. A. Keersmaekers, 1955); De Onkuyshedyt (1646); Den Haet en Nydt (1647); De Gierigheydt (1677); De Traagheydt (1677); Belachlyck misverstant of Boere-Geck (1680).

M. Rooses, Nieuw Schetsenboek (1882); J. van den Branden, W. O. (1913).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Ogier le Danols: see CHANSONS DE GESTE, text and biblio.

Ogilby, JOHN (*Edinburgh XI 1600; ∞Christian Knight; †London 4 IX 1676), Scottish poet. A man of great energy and versatility, he tried his skill as dancing-master, printer and translator, and saw to 'the poetical part' of Charles II's coronation festivities. Despite Dryden's* strictures his Iliad (1660) has the merit of learning and his Virgil (1649-54) is prosaic but readable. His Road Books of England and Wales (1675) mark an important stage in the development of the guide-map.

The Fables of Æsop paraphrased (1651, 1669); Homer's Odysses (1665). J.K.

Ognëv, N., pseud. of MIKHAIL GRIGORYEVICH ROZANOV (*1888; †1938), Soviet author. His principal claim to fame is his Dnevnik Kost

Ryabtseva (1927; The Diary of a Communist Schoolboy, tr. A. Werth, 1928)—a unique and authentic document of a Soviet grammar schoolboy during the days of educational anarchy. His Iskhod Nikpetozha (1928; The Diary of a Communist Undergraduate, tr. A. Werth, 1929) describes the undergraduate days of the same period. Ognëv's other works are less important.

Sobranie sochineniy (4 vols, 1929); Nachalo zhizni (1933); Tri izmereniya (1933); Rasskazy (1938). J.L.

O'Grady, STANDISH JAMES (*Castletown Berehaven 1846; †Isle of Wight 1928), Irish mythologist and novelist. Educated Trinity College, Dublin, he edited The Kilkenny Moderator and founded the All Ireland Review. He is best remembered for his History of Ireland; Heroic Period (1878) which gradually quickened the interest of Irish writers in legendary material and helped towards the Irish literary revival; he also wrote prose romances based on Irish legend and history, and vigorous social and political tracts. R.McH.

HISTORY: History of Ireland; the Heroic Period (2 vols, 1878–80); Early Bardic Literature (1879). —The Flight of the Eagle (novel; 1897). —STORIES, ESSAYS: The Bog of Stars (1893); 'The Court Enchantment' in Ideals in Ireland (ed. Lady Gregory, 1907); Selected Essays and Passages (1918).

P. S. O'Hegarty, Bibliography (1930).

E.T.W.

Oguz Kagan, THE LEGEND OF. This is the surviving form of the old Turkish epic, Oğuzname, which has not itself come down to us. It relates the conquests and exploits of the Turkish King Oguz (Mete) and his sons, during the 3rd century B.C. It exists in two shortened versions, both written down in the 13th century. The only MS of one of them, that in the Uigur alphabet, is in the Bibliothèque Nationale and contains no Islamic element. The second version is found in Jami al-Tavārikh of Rashid* al-Din and in Ebtūlgazi Bahadır Han's Şecere-i Terakime, in which minor Islamic elements have been added.

W. Radloff, Das Kudatku Bilik des Jusuf Chass-Hadschib aus Balasagun (1891–1900); Riza Nour, Oghuz-namé, épopée turque (1928); W. Bang and G. R. Rachmati, Die Legende von Oghuz Qaghan (1932); K. Jahn, 'Zu Rašid al-Din's Geschichte der Ogusen und Türken' in Jour. Asian Hist., I (1967). F.Ī.

O'Hara, JOHN HENRY (*Pottsville, Pa. 31 I 1905; ∞1931 Helen Petit [o/o1933], ∞1937 Belle Wylie, ∞1955 Katharine Bryan; †Princeton, N.J. 11 IV 1970), American novelist and short-story writer. The hard-boiled cynicism of his Pal Joey stories (1940) owes a great deal to Ring Lardner*. His novels document the manners and morals of big-business or show-business society. Aimlessness and insecurity are the main states of his characters, and the abrasiveness of the relationships is amplified with a welter of details on social style.

NOVELS: Appointment in Samarra (1934); Butterfield 8 (1935); A Rage to Live (1949); Ten North Frederick (1955); From the Terrace (1958); Ourselves to Know (1960); Sermons and Soda Water (1960); Elizabeth Appleton (1963); The Lockwood Concern (1965); The Instrument (1967). —SHORT STORIES: The Doctor's Son and Other Stories (1935); Pipe Night (1945); Hellbox (1947); The Cape Cod Lighter (1962); The Horse Knows the Way (1964); And Other Stories (1968).

E. R. Carson, The Fiction of J. O'H. (1961); A. Kazin, Contemporaries (1962); C. C. Walcutt, J. O'H. (1969). G.A.K.

Ojeda, DIEGO DE: see Hojeda, DIEGO DE.

Ojetti, UGO (*Rome 15 VII 1871; †Florence 1 I 1946), Italian novelist and critic. After the First World War Ojetti abandoned narrative prose in favour of literary and art criticism. His literary personality is fully realized in these later writings, of which the best are to be found in his collected newspaper articles published under the title Cose viste. Ojetti was a well-informed critic and an elegant stylist.

NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: Il cavallo di Troia (1904); L'amore e suo figlio (1913); Mio figlio ferroviere (1922). —CRITICISM: Cose viste (7 vols, 1923–39; As They Seemed to Me, sel. tr. H. Furst, 1928); Bello e brutto (1930).

P. Pancrazi in Scrittori d'oggi, I, II, V (1949–50). J.F.C. (B.M.)

Ōkagami ('The Great Mirror'), a Japanese historical story, covering Japanese history from 850 to 1025. Its authorship is uncertain and the common ascription to Fujiwara no Tamenari is incorrect. The date of composition is also uncertain and has been ascribed to various dates from 1025 to about 1115 (a more likely date). Although the main facts of the history described are accurate, the presentation is dramatic and concentrates on certain selected characters, giving a not always flattering picture of the political manoeuvrings of the Fujiwara family. Apart from its literary value it often supplements the bare official chronicles.

The Ō. (tr. J. K. Yamagiwa, 1967); extract tr. in E. O. Reischauer and J. K. Yamagiwa, Translations From Early Japanese Literature (1951).

E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Okara, GABRIEL IMOMOTIME OBAINBAING (*Niger delta 1921), Nigerian poet and novelist. Okara was educated at Government College, Umuahia. While working as a book-binder, he began to write plays and features for broadcasting, and translated Ijaw poetry. An information officer before the civil war, he is now in broadcasting.

Okara is a very fine, craftsmanlike poet and the least literary of his contemporaries. His poetry, much influenced by oral verse, is extensively anthologized; a selection appears in Poetry From Africa (ed. H. Sergeant, 1968). His novel The Voice (1964), a parable of politics and the artist's role, is a highly original and powerful work. A.R.

Okigbo, CHRISTOPHER (*Ojoto, Nigeria 1932; †Nsukka, Nigeria IX 1967), Nigerian poet. Okigbo graduated in classics from University College, Ibadan, in 1956. Of volatile temperament, he was civil servant, teacher, and librarian before appointment as Cambridge University Press representative in Nigeria. A major in the Biafran army, he was killed in action near Nsukka.

A very widely-read and sophisticated poet, who saw himself fulfilling in poetry his hereditary Ibo office of priest, he used European literature, Christianity, and Ibo folk-lore to create a religious-mythological world through which to understand man's quest for wisdom and fulfilment.

Heavensgate (1962); The Limits and Other Poems (1964); Labyrinths (1971). A.R.

Okoński, WŁADYSŁAW: see Świątchowski, ALEKSANDER.

Okura: see Yamanoe NO OKURA.

Ólafsson, STEFÁN (*Kirkjubær, Norður-Múlasýsla c. 1620; ∞1651 Guðrún Þorvaldsdóttir; †Vallanes 29 VIII 1688), Icelandic poet. A clergyman noted for his light, musical verse, depicting scenes from everyday life, particularly of the lower classes. He also wrote much occasional poetry and, in a more serious vein, love poems, children's poems and hymns.

Kvæði (ed. J. Þorkelsson, 2 vols, 1885-86); Ljóðmæli (ed. A. Björnsson, 1948).—J. C. Poestion, Isländische Dichter der Neuzeit (1897). R.G.P. (P.G.F.)

Olbracht, IVAN, pseud. of KAMIL ZEMAN (*Semily 6 I 1882; †Prague 30 XII 1952), Czech novelist and essayist. The son of the author Antal Stašek*, Olbracht began his career as a journalist before the First World War. His first major novel, Podivné přátelství herce Jesenia (1919), was followed by stories and sketches, and in 1928 by Anna proletářka, a Communist protest against the old order. His finest work, Nikola Šuhaj loupežník (1933), tells the story of a Ruthenian Robin Hood where the local colour and the tragedy of a poor and neglected people combine with Olbracht's masterly prose to produce a novel that has few equals in 20th-century Czech literature. In the best of his later work Olbracht returned more than once to the description and interpretation of Ruthenia, though without ever repeating the achievement of Nikola Šuhaj.

Spisy (15 vols, 1947-61).—Hory a staletí (1935; sketches); Golet v údolí (1937; short stories). A. M. Piša, I. O. (1949). R.A.

Oldham, JOHN (*Shipton-Moyne, nr Tetbury 9 VIII 1653; †Holmes-Pierpont, nr Nottingham 9 XII 1683), English didactic and satirical poet, who made his living as schoolteacher and tutor. An exponent of classical lyric forms, his heroic couplets are forceful but lack polish. Dryden's* fine elegy to his memory offers a just assessment.

Poetical Works (ed. R. Bell, 1854; repr. 1960 with intro. B. Dobrée).—Compositions in Prose and Verse (ed. E. Thompson, 1770).—Biblio. by H. F. Brooks in Proc. Oxford Biblio. Soc. (1936). C. R. Macklin, 'The satiric technique of J. O.'s "Satyrs upon the Jesuits"' in Stud. in Philol., LXII (1965). B.L.J. (H.N.D.)

Oldmixon, JOHN (*Bridgwater 1673; ∞1703 Elizabeth Parry; †London 9 VII 1742), English author of partisan histories, and a hardworking journalist, dramatist, poet and critic: the butt of Pope* in the Dunciad.

Governor of Cyprus (play; 1703); Secret History of Europe (4 pts, 1712-15); Arcana Gallica: or, the Secret History of France for the last Century (1714); Critical History of England, Ecclesiastical and Civil (2 vols, 1724-26); Memoirs of the Press (1742). R.M.H.

Oldys, WILLIAM (*?London 14 VII 1696; †ibid. 15 IV 1761), English antiquarian who, with Johnson*, compiled the Catalogue of the Harley Library (5 vols, 1743-45), and issued the Harleian Miscellany (1744-46). He left invaluable annotations to Langbaine* and Thomas Fuller*. R.M.H.

Dissertation upon Pamphlets (1731); Life of Raleigh (2 vols, 1736); British Librarian (6 nos, 1737-38).

G. Langbaine [the younger], An Account of the English Dramatic Poets (with transcriptions by J. Haslewood of MS notes of W. O.; 1791); A. Chalmers, Biographical Dictionary, XXIII (1815); J. Yeowell, A Literary Antiquary. Memoir of W. O. (repr. from Notes and Queries; 1862); L. Lipkins, 'The curiosity of W. O.' in Philol. Quart., XLVI (1967). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Olearius, ADAM (*Aschersleben c. 1599; †Schleswig 22 II 1671), German writer, councillor of Duke Friedrich of Holstein-Gottorp, for whose court he wrote several commemorative works and undertook three embassies to Russia, one of which included Paul Fleming* and extended as far as Persia. Olearius' translation of Sa'di* is the first German translation from the Persian and his account of the journey is an important monument of German prose.

Beschreibung der Newen Orientalischen Reise (1647; expanded 1656, facs. ed. with biog. and biblio. D. Lohmeier, 1971; extracts ed. H. Oesterley in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., XXVII; abr. ed. E. Meissner, 1962); Rosenthal von Scheich Saadi (1654); Relation aus dem Gottorpischen Parnass (1668); Holsteinische Chronic (1674); Gottorfische Kustkammer (1674).

P. Habermann, Lebensbilder grosser Stephaner (1930); F. Gundolf, Anfänge deutscher Geschichtsschreibung (Amsterdam, 1938); H. H. Weil, 'A 17th century German looks at Russia' in Ger. Life and Letters (1954). L.W.F.

Olesha, YURY KARLOVICH (*Elizavetgrad 1899), Soviet author whose short novel Zavist' (1926; Envy, tr. A. Wolfe, 1936), depicting the inner conflict between 'fathers' and 'children' during the Soviet régime—with a definite aversion from a new mechanized age—provoked much controversy.

Tri Tolstyaka (1928; The Three Fat Men, tr. F. Flagoleva, 1964); Lyubov' (1929); Vishnevaya kostochka (1930).—PLAYS: Spisok blagodeyanyy (1931); Chërny chelovek (1932); Strogiy yunosha (1934); Walter (1937).—Izbrannye sochineniya (1956); The Wayward Comrade and the Commissars ... (tr. A. R. MacAndrew, 1960); Pyesy (1968).

A. Gurvich, Tri dramaturga (1936); G. Struve, Soviet Russian Literature (1951). J.L.

Olimpo, BALDASSARE (*?1486; †?1540), Italian poet, author of popular and bucolic verse. His frottola beginning 'La pastorella mia/ con l'acqua della fonte...' was attributed to Poliziano*.

S. Venezian, O. da Sassoferrato (1921; with biblio.). B.R.

Oliphant, LAURENCE (*Cape Town 1829; ∞1872 Alice Lestranger, ∞1888 Rosamund Owen; †Twickenham 23 XII 1888), English novelist and miscellaneous writer whose works reflect his wide travels and adventurous life. R.M.H.

Journey to Khatmandu (1852); Russian Shores of the Black Sea (1853); Piccadilly: a Fragment of a contemporary biography (1870; with foreword M. Sadleir, 1928); Altiora Peto (2 vols, 1883); Sympneumata (with wife; 1885); Episodes in a Life of Adventure (1887).

L. F. Liesching, Personal Reminiscences of L. O. (1891); Margaret Oliphant, Memoirs of Life of L. O. and Alice O. his Wife (2 vols, 1891); H. W. Schneider and G. Lawton, A Prophet and a Pilgrim. Being the Incredible History of T. L. Harris and L. O. (1942); P. Henderson, Life of O. (1956).

R.M.H. (M.A.)

Oliphant, MARGARET, née WILSON (*Wallyford

4 IV 1828; ∞1852 Francis Wilson Oliphant; †Wimbledon 25 VI 1897), Scottish novelist. Her success in Merkland (1850) brought her to London in 1852; she contributed prolifically to Blackwood's Magazine and wrote nearly 100 novels and miscellaneous histories and biographies. Her best work is in social commentary and the supernatural, and in tales with a Scots setting.

Passages in the life of Mrs Margaret Maitland (1849); Caleb Field (1850); Adam Graeme (1852); Katie Stewart (1852); Harry Muir (1853); Magdalen Hepburn (1854); The Quiet Heart (1854); Lilliesleaf (1855); Chronicles of Carlingford (first pub. in Blackwood's Mag., 1861–64).

A. L. Coghill, The Autobiography and Letters of Mrs O. (1899). J.K.

Oliveira, FRANCISCO XAVIER DE (*Lisbon 21 V 1702; †Hackney 18 X 1783), Portuguese writer. Having abandoned a diplomatic career, he lived for a time in Holland and later settled in England (1744), where he embraced Protestantism. For his attacks on the Inquisition and the influence of the Church in Portugal he was burnt in effigy in Lisbon in 1761. His writings, particularly the Cartas familiares, are a commentary, coloured with anecdotes and much pungent criticism, on the backward state of Portugal in the 18th century.

Memórias de viagens (Amsterdam, 1741); Cartas familiares, históricas, políticas e críticas (3 vols, Amsterdam, 1741–42; 3 vols, Lisbon, 1855); Cartas familiares (sel. letters; ed. A. Ribeiro, 1942); Viagem à ilha do amor (The Hague, 1744); Cartas inéditas and Opúsculos contra o Santo-Ofício (both ed. A. Gonçalves Rodrigues, 1942).

A. Gonçalves Rodrigues, O Protestante Lusitano. Estudo biográfico e crítico sobre ... O. (1951). T.P.W.

Oliver, JOAN (*Sabadell 1899), Catalan writer. As a poet, he uses the pseudonym PERE QUART. His early writing (poems, plays, short stories) concealed beneath a frivolous exterior an extremely bitter satire of bourgeois society and its moral values. In 1936 he welcomed the revolution and adopted a new style of 'social realism', but the defeat of 1939 was reflected in the embittered and elegiac tone of his later works. However, he overcame this depression to produce more aggressively critical poetry, in direct, colloquial language.

PLAYS: Allò que tal vegada s'esdevingué (1936); La fam (1938).—Biografia de Lot i altres proses (short stories; 1963).—POETRY: Obra poètica (1963); Circumstàncies (1968). J.L.M.

Olivier, JUSTE (*Eysins, Vaud 18 X 1807; †Geneva 7 I 1876), Swiss poet, the son of cultured peasants. He taught literature at Neuchâtel and history at the Académie de Lausanne and from 1845 to 1870 established his home in Paris. He dreamed of creating a national romand poetry, and some of his poems and songs, inspired by a deep love of his country, its legends and traditions, have remained popular. Though not a great poet, he is a pure source of poetical inspiration.

VERSE: Poèmes suisses (1830); Les deux voix (1835); Les chansons lointaines (1847).—Le canton de Vaud (1837–41; ed. with pref. C. F. Ramuz, 1938).—Œuvres choisies (ed. E. Rambert, 2 vols, 1879).

C. Delhorbe, J. et Caroline O. (1935); L. Wellisz, Une amitié polono-suisse: Adam Mickiewicz, J. et C. O. (1942). J.P.I. (G.G.)

Oljača, MLADEN (*Devetaci 10 X 1926), Serbian novelist and prose writer. A Partisan during the war and a journalist after it, Oljača has been an editor of a number of literary journals, including Mladost. His writing is concerned almost exclusively with the war and his native Bosnia described in competent realist terms. Kozara (1967) is an attempt at a lengthy Partisan epic novel in heroic style.

NOVELS: Tri života i dve smrti (1953); Posle ponoći (1954); Molitva za moju braću (1957); A Prayer for My Brethren, tr. A. Brown, London, 1963; Crne sekire (1958); Razvalina (1962); Nadja (1963).—STORIES: Šapat borova (1953).

B.J.

Oller, NARCÍS (*1846; †1930), Catalan novelist. Author of several works of high literary quality, Oller brought urban themes to the resurgent Catalan novel. He was influenced by French naturalistic theory; Émile Zola* wrote a foreword to his first novel La Papallona (1882). He also translated Tolstoy*, Pawlowsky and Turgenev* into Catalan. His work and especially his ambitious trilogy La febre d'or (1890) show the emergence from the peasantry and the craftsmen of Barcelona of the new Catalan bourgeoisie. Unsympathetic towards more modern movements, he wrote little in the last 20 years of his life.

Obres completes (1928–30); Memòries literàries (1962). J.M.B. i R. (G.W.R.)

Olmedo, JOSÉ JOAQUÍN DE (*Guayaquil 20 V 1780; †ibid. 19 II 1847), Ecuadorean poet, famous for his ode to Bolívar*, La victoria de Junín: Canto a Bolívar (1825), in which, as so often at this date, classical form and Romantic feeling are joined. Olmedo also translated Pope's* Essay on Man, and was the author of some minor poetry.

Ensayo sobre el hombre (tr. of Pope's Essay on Man, first epistle only; 1823); Obras poéticas (cont. the remainder of Pope's Essay; 1848); The Odes of Bello, O. and Heredia (ed. E. C. Hills, 1920).—Poesías completas (Mexico, 1947).

See also M. A. Caro, Obras, III (1918–32). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Olrik, AXEL (*Frederiksberg 3 VII 1864; ∞1893 Margrete Sofie Eleonore Hasselquist; †Øverød 17 II 1917), Danish literary scholar and folk-loreist. He studied Scandinavian philology at Copenhagen, becoming Professor there in 1913. He was the founder and leader of the Danish folk-lore society (Dansk Folkemindesamling). His works on the Danish medieval ballads gained him a great international reputation.

Kilderne til Saksens oldhistorie (1892); Norrøne sagaer og danske sagn (1894); Danske Oldkvad i Sakse (1898); Danmarks Heltedigtning (2 vols, 1903–10; The Heroic Legends of Denmark, tr. L. M. Hollander, 1919); Nordisk Aandsliv i Vikingetid (1907); Viking Civilization, tr. J. W. Hartmann, rev. H. Ellekilde, 1930); Folkelige Afhandlinger (1919); Nogle Grundsætninger for Sagnforskning (1921); Nordens Trylleviser (1934).

I. Olrik, A. O. Barndom og første Ungdom (1923); A. O. Breve til Holger Begtrup (1924); S. B. Hustvedt, Ballad Books and Ballad Men (1930). E.B.

Olsen, ERNST BRUUN (*Nakskov 12 II 1923; ∞1952 Else Nielsen), Danish playwright. Originally an actor and stage producer, he wrote some radio plays and dialogues. His first stage play, Teenagerlove (1962), a satire on the pop industry, was highly successful in Scandinavia. All his plays give a Socialist, humorous view of topical problems.

Men Boghandleren kan ikke sove (1963); Et Fjernsynsmareridt (1964); Bal i den borgerlige (1966); Hvor gik Nora hen da hun gik ud? (1968); Brudens Bror og andre Radiospil (1969); De fredssommelige (1969). E.B.

Olson, CHARLES (*Worcester, Mass. 27 XII 1910; †10 I 1970), American poet and critic. With Robert Creeley* at Black Mountain College and influenced by William Carlos Williams*, he led the projective-verse movement against the closed nature of 'academic' poetry. Concentration on impressionistic and auditory effects produces a rather loose and fragmentary poetry which is given some cohesion by Olson's humanism and his energetic devotion to the significance and reach of the poetic imagination.

VERSE: Y and X (1948); Letter for Melville (1951); The Maximus Poems I–10 (1953); Anecdotes of the Late War (1955); O'Ryan 12345678910 (1958); The Distances (1960); Maximus From Dogtown—I, etc. (1961); Maximus Poems IV, V, VI (1966); Letters for Origin (1969).—CRITICISM: Call Me Ishmael (1947).

The New American Poetry (ed. D. M. Allen, 1960); S. Stepanchev, American Poetry Since 1945 (1965). G.A.K.

Olsson, HAGAR (*Helsingfors 16 IX 1893), Finnish-Swedish dramatist, novelist, essayist and critic.

The leading spirit on the editorial board of the modernistic Ultra in 1922, she was one of the first to champion Edith Södergran*, and both in theory and practice set about working for the principles of Expressionism (essays Ny generation, 1925; plays Hjärtats Pantomim, 1927, and S.O.S., 1928; and the novel På Kanaansexpressen, 1929). Chitambo (1933), a partly autobiographical novel, shows much greater mastery over her material, and her deepening poetic strain and mystic belief in the value of simplicity shape the legend Träsnidaren och döden (1940).

NOVELS AND STORIES: Lars Thorman och döden (1916); Kvinnan och nöden (1919); Mr Jeremias söker en illusion (1926); Hemkomst (1961).—PLAYS: Det blå undret (1932); Rövaren och jungfrun (1944).—ESSAYS, ETC.: Arbetare i natten (1935); Jag lever (1948); Kinesisk utflykt (1949); Möte med kära gestalter (1963).

O. Enckell, Den unga H. O. (1949).

B.M.E.M. (I.S.)

Oltmans, JAN FREDERIK, pseud. J. VAN DEN HAGE (*The Hague 1 IX 1806; †Steenderen 29 I 1854), Dutch writer of historical novels and short stories. After a spell in his father's office he lived as a man of leisure. Despite poor health he wrote two visionary novels, undisciplined in style but excellent in atmosphere and showing a vast historical and topographical knowledge. Later sketches, influenced by De Gids, of which for a short time he was co-editor, are insignificant, but the novels are a remarkably pure but late expression of Western European Romanticism.

Het slot Loevestein in 1570 (2 vols, 1834); De Schaapherder (4 vols, 1838); Het huis van het Zeewijf, benevens verspreide verhalen (2 vols, 1854). J. ten Brink, Geschiedenis van de Noord-Nederl. Letteren (with biblio.; 1904); H. J. Busé, 'Het verloren geraakt manuscript van J. F. O.' in Amstelodamum (1938). J.W.W.

Olufsen, OLUF CHRISTIAN (*Viborg 20 I 1763; ∞1801 Mette Christine Rottbøll; †Copenhagen 19 V 1827), Danish playwright; Professor of economics at Copenhagen. His fame rests exclusively on one of his two plays, Gulddaasen ('The Gold Box'; 1793), written anonymously, which has survived thanks to its remarkably witty dialogue. The other play is Rosenkjæderne (1803). E.B.

Olyesha, YURY KARLOVICH: see Olesha, YURY KARLOVICH.

Olympiodorus (*Thebes, Egypt; fl. first half 5th century A.D.), Greek historian. Author of a historical work recounting events from 407 to 425 and surviving only in meagre excerpts.

L. Dindorf, Historici Graeci minores (1870).

E. A. Thompson, 'O. of Thebes' in Class. Quart., XXXVIII (1944); J. F. Matthews, 'O. of Thebes and the history of the West (A.D. 407-425)' in Jour. Roman Stud., LX (1970). R.B.

Omar ('UMAR) Khayyām, ABU'L-FATH (*Nishapur 1050; †ibid. 1132), Persian scientist and poet. Khayyām lived in Khurasan as a renowned mathematician, astronomer and philosopher. He was among the scientists who were asked, in 1074, by the Seljuk Malik Shāh to reform the calendar. His standard work on algebra places him among the foremost mathematicians of the Middle Ages. His scientific fame, however, is eclipsed by his renown as a composer of rubā'iyāt (quatrains). The authentic number of these, however, does not seem to exceed a few score.

Written in a clear, concise and epigrammatic style and a meditative vein, they reveal Khayyām's mind as concerned with the perennial questions of life and the universe. He reflects on the frailty of human existence, the cruelty of fate and the ignorance of man. Finding no solution, he turns to a vivid appreciation of earthly, sensuous beauties and preaches carpe diem as a remedy; but the minor key in which his epicurean hedonism is tuned reveals a brooding mind, which neither mystifies his problems nor idealizes his solutions. Khayyām owes much of his popularity in the West to FitzGerald's* ingenious metrical paraphrase of the rubā'iyāt.

L'Algèbre d'Omar Alkhayyāmī (text and tr. F. Woepecke, Paris, 1851); Nowrūz-Nāma (ascribed to K., but very doubtfully; Tehran, 1933); Rubā'iyāt (1st crit. ed. E. H. Whinfield, London, 1883; ed. Furughi and Ghani, Tehran, 1942); Rubā'iyāt of O. K. (metrical paraphrase E. FitzGerald, 1859); The Quatrains of O. K. (tr. F. Rosen, 1930); A. J. Arberry, The Rubā'iyāt of O. K. (text and trs; 1949).

W. E. Story, O. as Mathematician (Boston, 1917); G. Sarton, Introduction to the History of Science (Washington, 1927).—J. R. Tutin, A Concordance to FitzGerald's Translation... (1900); R. A. Nicholson, intro. to FitzGerald's tr. (1909); A. Christensen, Critical Studies in the Rubā'iyāt of 'Umar K. (Copenhagen, 1927); L. P. Elwell-Sutton, 'The Rubaiyat revisited' in Delos, III (1969); A. Dashti, Dama ba K. (2nd ed. 1970; In Search of O. K., tr. L. P. Elwell-Sutton, 1971).

E.Y.

Ömer Seyfeddin (*Gönen, western Anatolia 28 II 1884; †Istanbul 6 III 1920), Turkish short-story writer. Son of a Caucasian Turk, an army officer like his father, he resigned in 1910 and joined, in Salonica, Genç Kalemler, the organ of the language reformers. After the Balkan War, he came to Istanbul to continue the movement for simplification of the written language, and its freeing from the domination of Arabo-Persian grammar. His short stories, based on observations in the Balkans or episodes of Turkish history, often lack balance and depth, but are written in a light, entertaining style.

SHORT STORIES: Eshabı Kehfimiz (1918); Harem (1918); Efruz Bey (1919); Gizli Mabeyn (1923); Yüksek Ökçeler (1923); Bahar ve Kelebekler (1927); İlk Düşen Ak (1938); Bomba (1938); Asilzadeler (1938); Beyaz Lâle (1938); Tarih Ezeli Bir Tekerrürdür (1938).—Mahcupluk İmtihani (play; 1938).—COMPLETE WORKS: Ö. S. Külliyyatı (2 vols, 1945–52); Bütün eserleri (ed. Tahir Alangu, 10 vols, 1962–64).—Tr. in O. Spies, Türkische Erzähler der Gegenwart (1927) and Das Blutgeld und andere türkische Novellen (1942).

E. Saussey, Prosateurs turcs contemporains (1935); Ali Canip Yöntem, Ö. S. Hayatı ve Eserleri (1935); O. Spies, Die türkische Prosaliteratur der Gegenwart (1943); Yaşar Nabi Nayır, Ö. Seyfettin, hayatı, sanatı, eserleri (1952); Hilmi Yücebaş, Ö. S., hayatı, hatıraları, şiirleri (1960); Tahir Alangu, Ö. S. (biog. novel; 1968). F.I.

Omid, MEHDI AKHAVÂN THÄLETH (*Mashhad 1928), Persian poet and critic. Although trained in the Persian classical tradition, Omid soon joined the modern movement and emerged as a leading figure among the modernist poets. He is at his best in his 'narrative' odes, where he combines nostalgic moods with heroic tones. His rich language borrows from both the classical poets and common speech.

Arghanûn (1951); Zamistân (1956); Akhâr-i Shâh-nâma (1959); Âz in Avesta (1965); Shikar (1966); Âshiqânâhâ va Kabûd (1969).

R. Barahini, Tala dar Mes (2nd ed. 1968); E. N. 'Ala', Suvâr va Asbâb ... (1969). E.Y.

Ofia, PEDRO DE (*Angol 1570; †Spain ?1643), epic poet. Though born in Chile, in writing about the Spanish campaign against the Araucanian Indians (Arauco domado, 1596) he throws the rôle of García de Mendoza (later viceroy at Lima) into much greater relief than does Ercilla*.

E.Sa. (J.F.)

El Arauco domado (Lima, 1596, extremely rare, facs. Madrid, 1944; ibid., 1605; Santiago de Chile, 1849; Madrid, 1854; Santiago de Chile, 1917); El temblor de Lima (Lima, 1609; Santiago de Chile, 1909); Ignacio de Cantabria (Seville, 1639); La Vasaura (unpub. MS in the Nat. Lib. of Madrid). E.Sa.

Ondrejov, L'UDO, pseud. of L'UDO MISTRÍK (*Slanje, Croatia 1901; †18 III 1962), Slovak author. He is remembered for his trilogy Slnko vystúpilo nad hory (1956), of which the first part Zbojnícka mladosť (1937), a delightful portrayal of the life of children in a Slovak village, is his best achievement. R.A.

O'Neill, EUGENE GLADSTONE (*New York 16 X 1888; ∞1909 Kathleen Jenkins [o/o1912], ∞1918 Agnes Boulton [o/o1929], ∞1929 Carlotta Monterey; †Boston 27 XI 1953), American playwright and winner in 1936 of the Nobel prize. The son of a famous actor-manager, O'Neill began writing whilst recovering from tuberculosis. O'Neill disseminated the influence of Strindberg* and other European dramatists in the American theatre. After the tough realism seen at its best in Desire Under the Elms (1924) he experimented with expressionistic and epic techniques to create 'a new language for the theatre' in America. His late plays return to a more realistic setting which provide a centrality and coherence lacking in Mourning Becomes Electra (1931) or Strange Interlude (1928). The Iceman Cometh (1946) and Long Day's Journey Into Night (1955) manifest the agony and exorcism inherent in O'Neill's drama and remain two of the greatest American plays. O'Neill's output was massive and in attempting to instil a historical sense of grandeur and mystery into realistic material he often lapsed into tentatiousness and bathos. His major work, however, has a significant tautness and intensity, and his merging of naturalistic and symbolic technique established the pattern for later American drama.

Thirst and Other One Act Plays (1914); Bound East for Cardiff (1916); The Moon of the Caribbees and Six Other Plays of the Sea (1919); The Emperor Jones (1920); Anna Christie (1921); The Hairy Ape (1922); All God's Chillun Got Wings (1924); The Great God Brown (1926); Marco Millions (1928); Lazarus Laughed (1928); Ah, Wilderness (1933); A Moon for the Misbegotten (1947); A Touch of the Poet (1958); More Stately Mansions (1962).

B. Clark, E. O'N.: The Man and His Plays (1947); E. A. Engel, The Haunted Heroes of E. O'N. (1953); J. W. Krutch, Modernism in the Modern Drama (1953); W. D. Sievers, Freud on Broadway (1955); D. Falk, E. O'N. and the Tragic Tension (1958); A. and B. Gelb, E. O'N. (1960); R. Brustein, The Theatre of Revolt (1964); E. O'N.: A Collection of Critical Essays (ed. J. Gassner, 1964); J. H. Raleigh, The Plays of E. O'N. (1965). G.A.K.

Oneiropolis: see Johnstone, CHARLES.

Onetti, JUAN CARLOS (*1909), important Uruguayan contemporary novelist. El pozo (1939) broke completely with the novelistic conventions of the time and presented an isolated protagonist and his desperate and frustrated attempts at communication. Tierra de nadie (1941), set in Buenos Aires, presented the corrupting forces of the city. La vida breve (1950) is the first of his great novels, the story of a mediocre man who leads a dream life in which he realizes the violence and aggression which in actuality he must suppress. Two major novels, El astillero (1961; tr. The Ship- yard, 1968) and Juntacadáveres (1965), are both set in the fictional town of Santa María, the projection of an Onetti hell in which hopes turn into meaningless routine and youth into corrupt old age. His novels and short stories explore loss of innocence or describe man in his last throes as a human being, like the Larsen of El astillero struggling to keep the tattered remnants of life in some kind of order.

NOVELS: Los adioses (1954); Una tumba sin nombre (1959); La cara de la desgracia (1960).—SHORT STORIES: Un sueño realizado y otros cuentos (1951); Un infierno tan temido (1962).

J. C. O. (crit. essays by various authors on C. O.; in ser. Valoración múltiple; Havana, 1969).

J.F.

Ongaro, FRANCESCO DALL': see Dall'Ongaro, FRANCESCO.

Onitsura: see Kawajima ONITSURA.

Ono NO KOMACHI (*?c. 810; †?c. 880), Japanese poet. The effect of some of her poems depends on witty word-plays, but the best have an extremely moving emotional intensity. A legendary beauty, she is said in old age to have become ugly and poverty-stricken.

Good crit. assessments in: R. H. Brower and E. R. Miner, Japanese Court Poetry (1961); sel. poems tr. in: A. Miyamori, Masterpieces of Japanese Poetry (1936); G. Bownas and A. Thwaite, Penguin Book of Japanese Verse (1964); H. C. McCullough, Tales of Ise (1968).—P. Weber-Schäfer, O. no K.: Gestalt und Legenden im Nō-Spiel (1960).
E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Onofri, ARTURO (*Rome 15 IX 1885; †ibid. 25 XII 1928), Italian poet. In 1912 he founded the review Lirica, which published some of the early poems of Cardarelli* and Bacchelli*. Onofri's prolific output falls roughly into two periods. Until about 1921, he is an advocate of 'pure poetry' in the Crocean sense; later he develops mystical tendencies, expressing in less successful poems a kind of Christian pantheism.

Liriche (1907); Orchestra (1917); Arioso (1921); Trombe d'argento (1924); Vincere il drago (1928).
B.M.

Ó Nualláin, BRIAIN, pseud. FLANN O'BRIEN (*Dublin 1910; †ibid. 1966), Irish novelist and columnist. His experimental novel At Swim-Two-Birds (1939) is a work of comic genius, influenced by James Joyce* and James Stephens*. A highly original blend of satire, fantasy and farce, it combines scholarship, verbal dexterity and irreverence (much of it aimed at Gaelic tradition). It is in a sense the apotheosis of good drinking-talk. His later novels are thinner but are also remarkable for their fantasy and wit. For many years his best work went into the column he wrote for the Irish Times as MYLES NA GOPALEEN (The Best of Myles, 1968).

The Hard Life (1961); The Dalkey Archive (1964); The Third Policeman (1967).
E.T.W.

Ōoka SHŌHEI (*Tokyo 6 III 1909), Japanese novelist; educated at Aoyama Academy, where he was influenced by Christianity, and Kyoto Imperial University, where he graduated in 1932 in French literature, being particularly interested in Stendhal*. He became a prisoner of war in the Philippines in 1945, and this experience has dominated much of his work. His best-known novel Nobi is the story of the wanderings of a dying soldier on Leyte Island (one of a group rejected both by a military hospital and by their units) who gradually comes to suffer from hallucinations and to be tormented by a sense of increasing degradation and isolation not only from God but also from human society.

Nobi (1951; Fires on the Plain, tr. I. I. Morris, 1957).
D.E.M.

Oosterwyck, VOLKERUS VAN (*1603; †31 XII 1675), Dutch poet, parson at Delft between 1640 and 1670, a friend of Huygens*, wrote short edifying and didactic poems.

Rijmen en Sangen over 't Hooglied (1655); De Christelijcke Seneca (versification of Joseph Hall's Occasional Meditations; 1657); Hofbloemen (1659); Heydelbergschen Catechismus in sangrym (1660).
A.M.B.W.

Opalinski, KRZYSZTOF (*Sieraków c. 1609; †Włoszakowice 7 XII 1655), Polish satirist. A palatine of Poznań, he had strong Unitarian connections. His satires, mostly modelled on those of Juvenal*, courageously attacked injustice and abuses, depicting contemporary Poland vividly and realistically. They were reprinted eight times in the 17th century.

Satyry albo Przestrogi do naprawy rządu i obyczajów w Polsce należące (1650).

T. Mandybur, K. O. jako pisarz satyryczny (1890); W. Rabski, Über die Satiren des Christopher O. (1893); S. Rygiel, Rzymskie wzory i źródła satyr K. O. (1912); A. Sajkowski, K. O. Wojewoda poznański (1960); S. Greszczuk, O 'Satyrach' K. O. (1961).
S.S. (P.H.)

Opalinski, ŁUKASZ (*1612; †15 VI 1662), Polish poet, a younger brother of Krzysztof. An erudite man, in his poetry he advocated the strengthening of the royal power and was against 'liberum veto'; his Poeta nowy (1661) was the first Polish poetics. In a Latin work he defended Poland against John Barclay's* unfavourable remarks in Icon animorum (1614).

Rozmowa plebano z ziemianinem (1641); Coś nowego... (1652; pub. 1946); Polonia defensa contra Joannen Barclaium (1648); Wybór pism (1959).

S. Zawadzki, O pismach Ł. O. (1914).

S.S. (P.H.)

Opatoshu, JOSEF, adopted name of JOSEF OPATOF-SKI (*Mława, Poland 1887; †New York 1954), Yiddish novelist. He studied in France and settled in America in 1907. He introduced into Yiddish literature the historical novel on the grand scale with his trilogy on Polish-Jewish life over the previous 100 years. Another of his novels, A tog in Regensburg (New York, 1933; A Day in Regensburg, tr. Jacob Sloan, 1968), deals with Jewish life in Germany in the 16th century.

In Poilische velder (1922; 1921; tr. into several langs incl. Eng., Heb., Russ., Ger. and Span.); Lyncher (New York, 1920); Der letster Oifshand (ibid., 1948).—Gezamelte verk (14 vols, 1928–36).

J.S.

Opitz von Boberfeld, MARTIN (*Bunzlau 23 XII 1597; †Danzig 20 VIII 1639), German poet, initiator of the 17th-century literary reform with his works Aristarchus (1617; pr. 1624) and Buch von der deutschen Poeterey (1624) which owe much to Scaliger* and the PLÉIADE. He was greatly encouraged by the group round Janus Gruter and J. W. Zinzgref* in Heidelberg and, during his sojourn in Holland in 1620, by Daniel Heinsius* whose Dutch verses he translated and whose technique he imitated. He visited Denmark and Transylvania and in 1626, though a Protestant, became secretary to Count Dohna, the protagonist of the Counter-Reformation in Silesia, for whom he translated Catholic works and undertook an embassy to Paris where he met Hugo Grotius [Groot*]. In 1635 he became historiographer to the King of Poland and resided at Danzig until his death.

By nature a sober, orderly and stoical person, Opitz was a technician and impresario rather than a great poet. He found a simple formula to reconcile verse stress with word stress—insistence on iambic and trochaic metres—and illustrated it in his Teutsche Poemata (1624) for others to follow. His versatility enabled him to provide examples of all the fashionable Baroque genres by translation and adaptation—drama, opera, novel, besides lyrical forms. The enormous respect in which he was held indicates that his strong point—supreme competence and clearheadedness—met the need of the time. He represents one type of German Baroque poet, the humanistic and learned public official.

POETIC THEORY: Buch von der deutschen Poeterey (ed. W. Braune, 1876; ed. R. Alewyn, 1966); Aristarchus (ed. G. Witkowski, 1888).—NOVELS: Johann Barclayens Argenis (1626); Arcadia der Gräfin von Pembrock (after Sidney; 1629).—OPERAS: Dafne (after Rinuccini; 1627); Judith (after Salvadori; 1635).—Schäfferey von der Nimfen Hercynie (pastoral; 1630); Sophoclis Antigone (drama; 1636).—Sel. works ed. J. Tittmann (1869) and H. Oesterley in J. Kürschner, Dr. Nat.-Lit., XXVII (1889); L. Forster, 'Dichterbrieue aus dem Barock' in Euphorion, XLVII (1953); Gesammelte Werke (crit. ed. G. Schulz-Behrend, 1968–; in progr.); Jugendgedichte (ed. J. U. Fechner, 1970).

H. Oesterley, 'Bibliographie der Einzeldrucke von Opitzens Gedichten und sonstigen Schriften' in Zentralblatt für Bibliothekswesen, II (1885); C. W. Berghöffer, O.' Buch von der deutschen Poeterey (stud. of sources; diss. Göttingen, 1888); M. Rubensohn, 'Der junge O.' in Euphorion, II (1895) and VI (1899); K. H. Wels, 'O. und die stoische Philosophie', ibid., XXI (1914); R. Alewyn, 'Vorbarocker Klassizismus' in Neue Heidelberger Jahrb. (analysis of Antigone; 1926); P. Hankamer, Die Sprache, ihr Begriff und ihre Deutung im 16. und 17. Jh. (1927); A. Heusler, Deutsche Vergeschichte, III (1929); H. Max, O. als geistlicher Dichter (1931); B. Marckwardt, Geschichte der deutschen Poetik, I (1937); T. Weevers, 'Daniel Heinsius' influence on the style of O.' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XXXIV (1939); J. B. Birrer, Die Beurteilung von O. in der deutschen Literaturgeschichte (with biblio.; diss. Fribourg, 1940); C. von Faber du Faur, 'Der Aristarchus: eine Neuwertung' in Pub. Mod. Lang. Soc. Amer., LXIX (1954); G. Schulz-Behrend, 'O.' Übersetzung von Barclays Argenis', ibid., LXX (1955); M. Szyrocki, M. O. (standard monograph, with biblio.; 1956); U. Maché, 'O.'s Schäfferey in 17th century German literature' in Essays on German Literature for Joyce Hallamore (1969); B. Ulmer, M. O. (1972); J. Gellinek, M. O. (1973).

L.W.F.

Oppenheim, JAMES (*St Paul, Minn. 24 V 1882; ∞1905 Lucy Seckel [o/o1914], ∞Linda Gray; †New York 4 VIII 1932), American poet and novelist. His rhetorical loose-flowing poetry derives from Whitman*, Freud* and the Bible. He wrote essays for the layman on psychoanalysis.

NOVELS: Dr Rast (1909); The Olympian (1912); The Beloved (1915).—VERSE: Songs for the New Age (1914); The Sea (1924).

H.L.C.

Opperman, DIEDERIK JOHANNES (*Dundee, Natal 29 IX 1914; ∞1942 Marie van Reenen), Afrikaans poet, dramatist and critic, leading poet of the 1940s. His inspiration is metaphysical, of the creative evolutionist school, with a strong sense of ethical and religious values. He makes striking use of matter-of-fact images of modern life, which in each book derive from a specific atmosphere, startled by their primitive swiftness and directness and are rich in suggestion. As a playwright he leans towards historical themes handled either in classical form or as 'chronicles'.

VERSE: Heilige Beeste (1945); Negester oor Ninevé (1947); Joernaal van Jorik (1949); Engel uit die Klip (1950); Blom en Baierd (1956); Dolosse (1963); Kuns-mis (1964).—PROSE: Digters van Dertig (1953); Wiggelstok (1959).—PLAYS: Periandros van Korinthe (1954); Vergelegen (1956); Voëlvy (1968). G.D. (N.D.C.)

Oppian. Two Greek poems survive under this name, Halieutica (on fish and fishing), which seems to have been published between A.D. 177 and 180, and Cynegetica (on game and hunting), dedicated to Caracalla (after A.D. 211). It is probable that we should recognize two Oppians.

Ed. A. W. Mair (with tr.; 1928).

T.B.L.W. (A.H.G.)

Orchella, R. L.: see Scheffauer, HERMAN GEORGE.

Ordericus Vitalis (*Shrewsbury 16 II 1075; †c. 1142), monk of St Évrour, Normandy; his Historia ecclesiastica deals with monastic, social and political events to 1141. R.W.B.

Ed. A. le Prévost (5 vols, 1838–55); tr. T. Forester (4 pts, 1853–56); Migne, Patrologia Latina, CLXXXVIII (1855); ed. and tr. M. Chibnall (1969).

J. S. P. Tatlock, The Legendary History of Britain (1950); H. Wolter, Ein Beitrag zur kluniazensischen Geschichtsschreibung (1955).

R.W.B. (Tor.)

Ordóñez de Montalvo, GARCÍ: see Montalvo, GARCÍ RODRÍGUEZ (or ORDÓÑEZ) DE.

Oresme, NICOLE (*?1320; †?1378), French author, Master of the College of Navarre, Dean of Rouen and Bishop of Lisieux. His best-known works are his translation of Aristotle* into French and his Traictié de la premiere invention des monnoies.

Traictié (ed. M. L. Wolowski, 1864); Livre du Ciel et du Monde (ed. A. D. Menut and A. J. Denomy, 1940); Livre de Ethique d'Aristote (ed. A. D. Menut, 1940); Livre de Yconomique d'Aristote (ed. idem, 1957).

F. Meunier, Essai sur la vie et les ouvrages de N. O. (1867). A.H.D.

Orhan Kemal, pseud. of MEHMET REŞİT ÖZÜTÇÜ (*Ceyhan 14 IX 1914; †Sofia 3 VI 1970), Turkish novelist and short-story writer. Forced to abandon his formal education at the age of 16 and accompany his father into political exile in Syria, he later took various jobs in small factories in Anatolia. His works relate the sufferings of the poor, oppressed and defenceless; almost an epic of the Turkish 'little man'. His early novels are more strictly autobiographical. Despite the immense pressure of writing to support his family, which left him no time to polish his works, he had a very human, warm and convincing style.

NOVELS: Baba evi (1949); Avâre yıllar (1950); Murtaza (1952); Cemile (1952); Bereketli topraklar üzerinde (1954); Suçlu (1957); Devlet kuşu (1958); Vukuat var (1959); Gâvurun kızı (1959); Küçük (1960); Dünya evi (1960); El kızı (1960); Hamının çiftliği (1961); Eskici ve Oğulları (1962); Gurbet kuşları (1962); Sokakların çocuğu (1963); Mahalle kavgası (1963); Kanlı topraklar (1963); Bir Filiz vardı (1965); Müfettişler müfettişi (1966); Yalancı dünya (1966); Eylerden biri (1966); Arkadas ıslıkları (1968); Üç kağıtçı (1969); Körü yol (1970).

—SHORT STORIES: Ekmek kavgası (1949); Sarhoşlar (1951; enlarged ed. 1968); Çamaşırcının kızı (1952); 72. Koşuş (1954); Grev (1954; enlarged ed. 1968); Arka sokak (1956); Kardeş payı (1957); Babil kulesi (1957); Dünyada harp vardı (1963); İşsiz (1966); Önce ekmek (1968).—PLAYS: Ispinozlar (1965); 72. Koşuş (based on short story; 1967); Murtaza (based on novel; 1969).—Senaryo tekniği (1963).

Tahir Alangu, Cumhuriyetten sonra hikâye ve roman (3 vols, 1959–65). F.İ.

Orhan Veli Kanık (*Istanbul 1914; †ibid. 14 XI 1950), Turkish poet, educated in Ankara. In his poems, written in free verse and in a polished style, he made a complete break, in subject matter and vocabulary, with the conventions and clichés of orthodox poetry, and pioneered a new revolutionary school. He made successful verse translations from French, and also rendered Nesreddin Hoca stories in verse.

Garip (1945); Vazgeçemediğim (1945); Destan Gibi (1946); Yenisi (1947); La Fontaine'in Masalları (2 vols, 1948); Karşı (1949); Nasreddin Hoca Hikâyeleri (1949).—Bütün Siirleri (complete ed.; 1966).—Nesir Yazıları (coll. prose; posth. publ., 1953).

Adnan Veli Kanık, O. V. için (1953); E. Heister, O. V. (in Ger., 1957); Muzaffer Uyguner, O. V. (1967); Asım Bezirci, O. V. K. (1967). F.İ.

Oriani, ALFREDO (*Faenza 27 VII 1852; †Il Cardello 18 X 1909), Italian novelist, playwright, philosopher and poet. His first novels, Memorie inutili (1876), Al di là (1877), Gramigne (2nd ed. 1879), No (1881) and Quartetto (1883), are an erotic expression of a phase of violence and cynicism through which Oriani passed. A more romantic and sentimental treatment of human relations is found in the later novels, Il nemico (1892), Gelosia (1894), Disfatta (1896) and Vortice (1899). Olocausto (1902), a violent attack upon society, is in part a representation of the author's life. In philosophy, Oriani was Hegelian, particularly in his conception of history, the state and the family. In Matrimonio o divorzio (1886) he replied to Dumas* fils on the subject of monogamy. La rivolta ideale (1908) is his political and philosophical testament, in which he exhorts future generations of Italians to 'diminuire la nostra servitù alla materia per dilatare i confini del nostro impero ideale'. His works were much in favour during the Fascist era.

Opera omnia (ed. B. Mussolini, 30 vols, 1923-33).

C. Calcaterra in Giornale storico della lett. ital., LXXVII (1921); F. Cardelli, O., la vita, le opere (1939). B.R.

Orichovius: see Orzechowski, STANISŁAW.

Origen (ORIGENĒS) (*Alexandria c. 184; †254), Greek Christian writer. Author of some 6,000 works, now mostly lost, on textual criticism and exegesis of the Bible, dogmatic and practical theology, apologetics etc. Following his master, Clement* of Alexandria, Origen systematically tried to reconcile Christianity with Platonizing philosophy. Though condemned by the Church in the 6th century, his doctrines and methods were of great influence.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, XI-XVII (1857-60; with Lat. tr.); A. Robinson, The Philocalia of O. (1893); E. Klostermann et al., Origenes' Werke (12 vols, 1899-1941); R. Cadiou, Origène, commentaires inédits sur les Psaumes (1936).

O.'s Commentary on the Gospel of St Matthew (ed. J. Patrick, 1897); O.'s Epistle to Gregory and Commentary on the Gospel of St John (ed. A. Menzies, 1897); The Philocalia of O. (ed. G. Lewis, 1911); Selections From the Commentaries and Homilies of O. (ed. R. B. Tollinton, 1939).

W. Fairweather, O. and Greek Patristic Theology (1901); E. de Faye, Origène: sa vie, son œuvre, sa pensée (3 vols, 1923-28); R. Cadiou, Introduction au système d'Origène (1932) and La jeunesse d'Origène (1936); W. R. Inge, O. (1946); J. Daniélou, Origène (1948); H. Crouzel, Origène et la connaissance mystique (1961). R.B.

Ørjasæter, TORE (*Skjåk 8 III 1886; ∞1921 Åslaug Skåe; †29 II 1968), Norwegian poet, dramatist and prose writer. Ørjasæter is a poet of great power whose long, monumentally conceived 'Gudbrand Langleite' verse cycle (Gudbrand Langleite, 1913; Bru-millom, 1920; Skuggen, 1927, rev. ed. 1941) depicts the development of a peasant lad of artistic temperament but in terms which involve such universals as Will contra Fate, conflict between the demands of family, race and tradition and the needs of personal development and autonomy, and the resolution of these conflicts in religious belief. These themes recur in his other work, which is also marked, at its best, by a rich lyricism, a discreet use of symbols, and a finely controlled mysticism. The difficult New Norwegian (nynorsk) in which he writes has hindered a wider appreciation of his work.

VERSE: Ættar-arv (1908); I dalom (1910); Manns

kvæde (1915); Skiringsgangen (1925); Elvesong (1932); Livet skal vinne (1939); Livsens tre (1945); Ettersommar (1953); Kldrhaust (1963); Den lange leid (Dikt i utval) (ed. L. Mæhle, 1966).—PLAYS: Jo Gjende (1917); Anne på Torp (1930); Christophorus (1948); Den lange bryllupsreise (1949).—PROSE: Fararen (1922); Uppheimen på Sandnes (1933); Jonsokbrev (1936).

R. Thesen, T. Ø. (1935).

R.G.P.

Orkan, WŁADYSŁAW, pseud. of FRANCISZEK SMRECYŃSKI (*Poręba Wielka 27 XI 1876; †Cracow 14 V 1930), Polish author. Born of poor highlanders, he was educated through the exertions of his mother. His verses, irreproachable in form, are tinted by melancholy. In his novels there are authentic pictures of nature, and in his language, some admixture of the highlanders' dialect.

S.S.

Z tej smutnej ziemi (verse; 1903).—NOVELS: W roztokach (2 vols, 1903); Pomór (1910); Komornicy (1910); Drzewiej (1912).—Nowele (short stories; 1898).—Franek Rakoczy (play; 1908).—Listy ze wsi (2 vols, 1925-27).—Dziela (ed. S. Pigoń, 1949 ff.); Dziela (1960 ff.).

J. Krzyżanowski, Piesniarz krajiny kęp i wiecznej nędzy (1927) and 'W. O.' in Slavon. and East Europ. Rev. (1930); Z. Folejewski, La fonction des éléments dialectaux dans les œuvres littéraires. Recherches stylistiques fondées sur la prose de W. O. (Uppsala, 1949); M. Puchalska, W. O. (1957); S. Pigoń, W. O. (1958). S.S. (P.H.)

Orléans, CHARLES D' (*Paris 24 XI 1394; †Amboise 5 I 1465), French poet. He was the fourth son of Louis, Duke of Orléans (brother of Charles VI), and Valentine Visconti, daughter of the Duke of Milan. He became one of the leaders of the Armagnac faction and his life was constantly being threatened by his father's murderer, the Duke of Burgundy. Taken prisoner at Agincourt (1415), he spent 25 years in captivity in England. On his return to France he worked unsuccessfully to re-establish peace between the two countries. In 1450 he gave up all political activity and retired to Blois.

Apart from the Retenue d'Amours and the Songe en Complainte, his poems are all short. Though written according to the outworn courtly conventions and in an allegorical style, they are free from pedantry and are characterized by sincerity, penetrating psychology and freshness of poetic fancy. Charles's earlier works have love as their main theme but in those written in later years there lies a strong undercurrent of bitterness caused by the disappointments of his public life. To the modern reader their weakness lies in Charles's failure to express any real intensity of emotion. His language is simple, his imagery striking and his use of metre and sound harmonious. Few poets have married form and content more successfully.

He wrote a few poems in English during his captivity.

Poésies (ed. P. Champion, 2 vols, 1923–27); The English Poems of C. of O. (ed. R. Steele, 1941).

P. Champion, Vie de C. d'O. (1911) and Histoire poétique du XVe siècle, II (1923); J. Fox, The Lyric Poetry of C. d'O. (1969). A.H.D.

Orm, or Ormin (fl. c. 1200), English Augustinian Canon who, in an individual spelling system, compiled a vast set of metrical homilies on the Gospels.

The Ormulum (ed. R. M. White and R. Holt, 2 vols, 1878); K. Sisam, 'MSS Bodley 340 and 342' in Rev. Eng. Stud., VII–IX (1931–33); H. C. Matthes, Die Einheitlichkeit des Ormulum (1933). R.W.B.

Orosius, PAULUS (fl. c. 400), Christian polemist. His chief work, Historiarum adversus paganos libri VII, is an inept compilation from third-rate authorities describing the miseries of pagan world-orders and is inspired by Augustine's Civitas Dei. The work was greatly esteemed in the Middle Ages.

Eds: Migne, Patrologia Latina, XXXI (1846; Historiae only); C. Zangemeister in Corpus scriptorum ecclesiastic. Latin., V (1882) and ed. minor (1889).—Trs: I. W. Raymond (1936); R. J. Deferrari (1964; Historiae only).

B. Lacroix, Orose et ses idées (1965).

J.A.W. (J.D.)

Orpaz, YITZHAK (*Russia 1923), Hebrew writer; settled in Palestine in 1938. An experimental novelist, he makes frequent use of allegory. In his novel, The Death of Lysanda (in Eng.: 1970), the hero creates a dream-image in order to destroy it. A chapter of his novel Massa Daniel (1969) appeared in Israeli Writing (Autumn 1970). This work is a fictionalized account with allegorical overtones of a soldier's return from the battle-front in the Six-Day War. L.Y.

Ortery, EARL OF: see Boyle, ROGER.

Orsini, GIULIO: see Gnoli, COUNT DOMENICO.

Ors y Rovira, EUGENIO D' (*Barcelona 28 IX 1882; †Madrid 1954), Spanish writer. A member of the Royal Academy, he studied law in Barcelona and philosophy at the Sorbonne. He wrote in Catalan, Spanish and French and exercised considerable influence. For him the philosophy resides not in the imagination or reason, but in intelligence (el seny). His own brand of 20th-century idealism, novecentismo, illuminated his art-criticism. His short essays—glosas, started in 1916—are acute running commentaries on events and ideas. La ben plantada is an intellectual novel with excellent narrative; Guillermo Tell (1926), a good drama on the clash between passion and restraint. Amongst his philosophical works stand out El secreto de la filosofía (1947). He used the pseudonym XENTUS.

La ben plantada (1911; La bien plantada de Xenius, Span. tr. R. Marquina, Madrid, 1913; sel. tr. S. Putnam in The European Caravan, 1931); Poussin y el Greco (1922); Tres horas en el Museo del Prado (1923); Cézanne (1924); Las ideas y las formas (1928); La vie de Goya (1929); Coupole et monarchie (1929); Pablo Picasso (1930; Eng. tr. W. B. Wells, 1930); Science et histoire de la culture (1932); Nuevo glosario (10 vols, 1921–30; 2 vols, 1947); Novísimo glosario 1934–35 (1946).

A. R. Schneeberg, E. d'O., le philosophe et l'artiste (Barcelona, 1920); J. L. Aranguren, La filosofía de E. d'O. (1944); N. Barquet, E. d'O. en su ermita de San Cristóbal (1956); J. M. Capdevila, E. d'O.: etapa barcelonina (1906–1920) (1965).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Ortega Munilla, José (*Cárdenas, Cuba 26 X 1856; ∞. . . Gasset; †Madrid 1922), Spanish writer. Member of the Spanish Academy. As a novelist he belongs to the realist school with a leaning towards social problems. He is best remembered as editor and commentator of Los Lunes del Imparcial, the influential weekly literary supplement through which many writers of the '98 GENERATION became known.

La cigarra (1879); Sor Lucila (1882); La calandria (1917).

A. Espina, 'Libros de otro tiempo' in Rev. de Occidente, I (1923). R.M.N.

Ortega y Gasset, José (*Madrid 9 V 1883; ∞ Rosa Spottorno; †ibid. 18 X 1955), Spanish philosopher and writer, son of Ortega* Munilla. Educated at a Jesuit school in Málaga, at Madrid University and in Germany, he became Professor of metaphysics at Madrid. From 1910 he displayed relentless activity as lecturer, writer and journalist. He founded (1923) the influential Revista de Occidente, and intervened in politics. The Civil War exiled him from Spain but he returned in 1945.

España invertebrada (1921) is a controversial historico-psychological analysis of the causes of Spanish decadence. In his world-famous book La rebelión de las masas (1930)—originally printed as articles in a Madrid newspaper—he sees the cause of Western decadence in the appearance of a 'mass-man' in revolt against the select minority who created our civilization. In El tema de nuestro tiempo (1923) he opposes to the rationalist exclusivism of the 19th century the ideal of a 'vital reason'.

Ortega possessed a great gift for exposition and an excellent style, perhaps overburdened with metaphors. The subjects of his essays range widely from historical philosophy to big-game hunting. He is mainly concerned with the present: his present. He sees modern art as in a process of dehumanization, and the novel genre exhausted, with the modern novelist as an 'inspired wood-cutter in the Sahara desert'. His major works were published before 1932.

Obras completas (11 vols, 1946-69).—España invertebrada (1921; Invertebrate Spain, tr. M. Adams, 1937); El tema de nuestro tiempo (1923; The Modern Theme, tr. J. Cleugh, 1931); La deshumanización del arte e ideas sobre la novela (1925; The Dehumanization of Art and Notes on the Novel, tr. H. Weyl, 1948); La rebelión de las masas (1930; The Revolt of the Masses, tr. J. R. Carey, 1932); Misión de la Universidad (1930; Mission of the University, tr. H. L. Nostrand, 1946); Toward a Philosophy of History (tr. H. Weyl, 1941).

J. Marias, O. y la idea de la razón vital (1949) and O. Vocación y circunstancia (1960; Eng. tr. F. M. López-Morillas, 1970); J. Ferrater Mora, O. y G. An Outline of His Philosophy (1956); G. Cascales, L'humanisme d'O. (1957); J. L. Aranguren, La ética de O. (1958); J. P. Borel, Raison et vie chez O. (1959); M. Granel, O. y su filosofía (1960); H. Larrán, La génesis del pensamiento de O. (1962); A. Gaité, El sistema maduro de O. (1962); R. Senabre Sempere, Lengua y estilo de O. y G. (1964); P. Cepeda Calzado, Las ideas políticas de O. y G. (1968). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Ortigão, José DUARTE RAMALHO (*Oporto 24 XI 1837; †27 IX 1915), Portuguese short-story writer, journalist and critic. Author of two excellent travel books—on England and Holland, but with critical reflections on Portugal—he is chiefly noted for As Farpas, a satirical review of contemporary life written with a serious didactic purpose in the form of pamphlets on popular culture. The earlier numbers (like his serial novel O mistério da estrada de Sintra, 1870) were written in collaboration with Eça de Queirós*.

Histórias cor de rosa (novel; 1870).—A Holanda (1883); John Bull (1887).—As farpas (1871-87; ed. with stud. A. de Castro, 15 vols, 1944-49).—Works (pub. Livraria Clássica Editora, 39 vols, 1944-49).

R. Jorge, R. O. (1915); Rodrigues Cavalheiro, A evolução espiritual de R. (1963). T.P.W.

Ortmüt: see HUON DE BORDEAUX.

Orwell, GEORGE, pseud. of ERIC BLAIR (*Motihari, Bengal 23 I 1903; ∞1933 Eileen O'Shaughnessy, ∞1949 Sonia Mary Brownell; †London 21 I 1950), English essayist and novelist. The sardonic strength and the integrity of the essays and criticism he contributed frequently to the New Statesman made them a powerful influence at the time and keep them provocatively alive. Animal Farm (1945) is an ingenious allegorical fantasy. His novel 1984 (1949), though poor in characterization, is an exposure of the totalitarian state, developed in its most extreme and sinister form.

Down and Out in Paris and London (1933);

Burmese Days (1934); The Road to Wigan Pier (1937); Homage to Catalonia (1938).—Collected Essays (4 vols, 1968).

L. Brander, G. O. (1954); C. Hollis, A Study of G. O. (1956); R. J. Voorhees, The Paradox of G. O. (1960); R. Rees, G. O.: Fugitive From the Camp of Victory (1961); K. Alldritt, The Making of G. O. (1969). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Orzechowski (ORICHOVIUS), STANISŁAW (*Przemyśl 11 XI 1513; †1566), Polish and Latin polemist and historian. A Roman Catholic priest and a master of style, he opposed celibacy, propagated war against the Turks, upheld theocracy in politics and was a bitter fighter of his personal enemies, though not always constant in deeds and recorded thoughts.

De bello adversus Turcas suscipiendo (1543); De lege coelibatus (1551); Rozmowa albo dialog około egzekucyj Polskiej Korony (1563); Quincunx, to jest wzór Korony Polskiej . . . (1564; crit. ed. [with prec.] J. Łos, 1919); Annales Polonici ab excessu divi Sigismundi I (1611).—Dzieła w niektórych przedmiotach pisane (2 vols, 1826); Orichoviana. Opera inedita (ed. J. Korzeniowski, 1891).

L. Kubala, S. O. i wpływ jego na rozwój i upadek Reformacji w Polsce (1870; 2nd ed. 1907); L. Kossowski, Trybun ludu szlacheckiego (1907). S.S. (P.H.)

Orzeszkowa, ELIZA, née PAWŁOWSKA (*Milkow-szczyzna 25 V 1841; †Grodno 18 V 1910), Polish writer. Educated in Warsaw, after her husband's political exile she lived mostly in Grodno, where she started writing novels (1866) in the spirit of positivistic realism. However, her impressionable nature pushed her in the direction of idealism coloured with patriotic feeling. In her novels she stood for the proper education of women and justice for the Jews; depicted the life of peasants, of aristocrats and their attitude towards the poor gentry; and fought materialism. The patriotic element, well concealed under the symbols provided for the censor's eye, is to be found in her novels and short stories. A good stylist, with a sympathetic understanding of the injured, she influenced S. Żeromski* and M. Dąbrowska*.

NOVELS: Marta (1873); Eli Makower (1874-75; Histoire d'un Juif, tr. L. Mickiewicz, 1888); Meir Ezołowicz (1878; Eng. tr. J. Young, 1898); Dziurdziowie (1885); Nad Niemnem (3 vols, 1887); Cham (1889); Bene nati (1891); Dwa bieguny (1893); Argonauci (1899; Modern Argonauts, tr. Count S. C. de Soissons, 1901); Gloria victis (1910).—SHORT STORIES: Przędze (1903; sel. short stories tr. in Idylles brisées, V. de Zabiello, 1903); Nowele i szkice (1921).—CORRESPONDENCE: Listy (ed. A. Drogozewski et al., 2 vols, 1937-38); Listy zebrane (5 vols, 1954-61).—Pisma (ed. A. Drogozewski and L. B. Swiderski, 22 vols, 1937-39); Pisma zebrane (52 vols, 1947-53).

T. Grabowski, E. O. (1907); A. Drogoszewski, E. O. (1912); Z. L. Zaleski, E. O. (1914); E. Jankowski, E. O. (1964); J. Detko, O. wobec tradycji marodowyzwoleńczych (1965); M. Żmigrodzka, O. (1965). S.S. (P.H.)

Osborne, DOROTHY (*Chicksands 1627; ∞1655 Sir William Temple*; †Moor Park I 1694/95), English letter-writer. She married after a long and difficult courtship. Her love-letters are charming, of a delicate humour and in good prose.

Letters From D. O. to Sir William Temple (ed. G. C. Moore Smith, 1928).—Lord David Cecil, Two Quiet Lives (1948). B.L.J.

Osborne, FRANCIS (*?Chicksands 26 IX 1593; ∞Anna Draper; †Nether Worton, nr Deddington 11 II 1658/59), English miscellaneous writer who obtained minor office at court but sympathized with Parliament. A friend of Hobbes*, Osborne is known for his Advice to a Son (2 parts, 1656, 1658; ed. L. B. Wright, 1962) and Historical Memoires on the Reigns of Queen Elizabeth, and King James (1658).

Collected Works (11th ed., 2 vols, 1722).

J. E. Mason, Gentlefolk in the Making (1935); S. A. E. Betz in 17th Century Studies, 2nd ser. (ed. R. Shafer, 1937); P. Zagorin, A History of Political Thought in the English Revolution (1954).

B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Osborne, JOHN (*London 12 XII 1929; ∞1951 Pamela Elizabeth Lane, ∞1957 Mary Ure, ∞1963 Penelope Gilliatt, ∞1968 Jill Bennett), the English dramatist whose first performed play, Look Back in Anger (1957), gave its name to the group of 'angry young men'; their main pre-occupation was to denounce the Establishment. The Entertainer (1957) was written for Laurence Olivier.

The World of Paul Slickey (1959); Luther (1961); Inadmissible Evidence (1965); The Hotel in Amsterdam (1968).

M. Banham, O. (1969); A. Carter, J. O. (1969); S. Trussler, The Plays of J. O. (1969). W.R.A.

O'Shaughnessy, ARTHUR (*London 14 III 1844; ∞1873 Eleanor Marston; †ibid. 30 I 1881), Irish poet and herpetologist; assistant in the British Museum from 1863; a friend of the leading French poets of his day; a writer of delicate, musical lyrics. R.McH.

An Epic of Women (1870); Lays of France (1872); Music and Moonlight (1874); Poems (sel.: 1923).

W. D. Padden, A. O'S. (1964). E.T.W.

Osipovich, A.: see Novodvorsky, ANDREY OSIPOVICH.

Osorgin, MIKHAIL ANDREYEVICH, pseud. of M. A. ILYN (*1878; †Paris 1942), Russian émigré author whose realistic narratives and novels (published abroad) were mainly about the Revolution of 1917.

Iz malen'kogo domika (1921); Sivtsev Vrazhek (1928); Svidetel' istorii (1932); Povest' o sestre (1936).—A Quiet Street (tr. N. Hellstein, 1930); My Sister's Story (tr. idem and G. Harris, 1932). J.L.

Osório, JERÓNIMO (*Lisbon 1506; †Tavira 20 VII 1580), Portuguese historian. A humanist, he studied at Salamanca, Paris and Bologna; after holding the Chair of scripture at Coimbra he became Bishop of Silves. His Latin history of the reign of King Manuel enjoyed a considerable European reputation and was instrumental in spreading knowledge of Portugal's discoveries and conquests in the East.

De rebus Emmanuelis regis Lusitaniae invictissimi virtute et auspicio gestis libri duodecim (1571); The History of the Portuguese during the reign of Emmanuel, containing all their discoveries, from the coast of Africk to the farthest parts of China, etc., tr. J. Gibbs, 2 vols, 1752).

A. F. G. Bell, 'The humanist J. de O.' in Rev. Hispanique, LXXIII (1928); L. Bourdon, J. O. et Stanislas Hisius d'après leur correspondance (1956). T.P.W.

Ossian: see Macpherson, JAMES; OSSIAN.

Ossiannilsson, KARL GUSTAV (*Lund 30 VII 1875; †Linköping 14 III 1970), Swedish poet, novelist and dramatist; best known for his early poetry and for his autobiographical novel Barbarskogen (1908), in which he criticized Social Democracy, of which he had formerly been an adherent. He became a supporter of Fascism, but opposed Nazism.

VERSE: Masker (1900); Hedningar (1901); Orkester (1907); Flygskuppet (1910); Kärleksdikter (1918); Frihetssången (1943).—Samlade Dikter (4 vols, 1920); Valda Dikter (1934).—NOVELS: Slätten (1909); Havet (1910); Fädernas Arv (1925); En gång skall förbannelsen vika (1942).—Donatorn (play; 1948).

F. Böök in Resa kring svenska Parnassen (1926); E. Hedén in Valda skrifter, IV (1927).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Ostaijen, PAUL VAN (*Antwerp 22 II 1896; †Miavoye-Anthée 17 III 1928), Flemish poet and essayist, the strongest personality of the Flemish Expressionist movement. He introduced modern town life into Dutch poetry. In the First World War he developed a belief in human solidarity (Het Sienjaal, 1918) and gave the impulse to Expressionist poetry; then he switched to Dadaism and published nihilist poetry in a quite elaborate typographical composition. Finally he produced a poetics of his own, an 'organic expressionism' in which he sought a pure lyricism—a conception and a term used by him several years before H. Bremond*—realized in verse of considerable sensibility and musicality. He wrote grotesque stories and was a sharp and partial critic.

VERSE: Music-Hall (1916); Bezette stad (1921); Gedichten (1928).—Poèmes (Fr. tr. E. Schoonhoven, 1951); Poesie (Ger. tr. K. Reichert, 1966).—STORIES: De trust der vaderlandsliefde (1925); Het bordeel van Ika Loch (1926); Vogelvrij (1927); De bende van de stronk (1932); Diergaarde voor kinderen van nu (1932).—Grotesken (Ger. tr. G. Dyserinck-Sieke, 1967).—ESSAYS: Krities proza (2 vols, 1929); Self-Defense (1933).—Verzameld werk (4 vols, 1952–53; 2nd ed. 1963–).

G. Burssens, P. van O. zoals hij was en is (1933); A. T. W. Bellemans, Poëtië van P. van O. (1939); E. Schoonhoven, P. van O., introduction à sa poétique (1951); M. Gilliams, Een bezoek aan het Prinsengraf (1952); A. de Roover, P. van O. (1958); H. Uyttersprot, P. van O. en zijn proza's (1959); P. Hadernann, De kringen naar binnen (1965); P. de Vree and H. Fl. Jaspers, P. van O. (1967); E. H. Beekman, Homeopathy of the Absurd. The Grotesque in P. van O.'s Creative Prose (1970).

R.F.L.

Österling, ANDERS JOHAN (*Hälsingborg 13 IV 1884), Swedish poet and journalist. Member of the Swedish Academy since 1919, secretary 1941 to 1964. After beginning as a Symbolist (Preludier, 1904), he gradually created his own genre of idyllic nature-poetry, based on a sober and solid appreciation of everyday life, especially in Skåne.

VERSE: Offerkransar (1905); Årets visor (1907); Facklor i stormen (1913); Idyllernas bok (1917); Samlade dikter (4 vols, 1925); Tonen från havet (1933); Nya valda dikter (1934); Livets värde (1940); Samlade dikter (2 vols, 1945–46).—PROSE: Människor och landskap (1910); Carl August Hagberg (1922); Skånska utflykter (1934); J. J. Björnsthål (1947); Dikten och livet (1961).

S. Colliander, Bibliografi (1939–44); T. Tottie, Bibliografi (1944–63).—S. Engdahl, A. Österlingdomslyrik (1942); B. Christofferson, Svenska kritiker och deras metoder (1962).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Ostrovsky, ALEXANDER NIKOLAYEVICH (*Moscow 12 IV 1823; †nr Moscow 28 V 1886), Russian playwright. Starting to write in 1847, he was at first under Gogol's* influence but found a voice and a genre of his own in his plays about the patriarchal merchants' quarter in Moscow. He reached particular intensity towards the end of the 1850s in Dokhodnoe mesto, Vospitannitsa and Groza, the latter being a tragedy from the merchant life in the Volga district. The tragic element began to intrude from now on into his work. So did indictment and satire: in Les (1871), for example, with its amusing mixture of effete gentry, strolling actors and provincial merchants; or in Volki i ovtsy (1875), with its co-operation between corruption and tyranny. In the comedy Talanty i poklonniki (1882) Ostrovsky reproduced the provincial actors' milieu as he knew it. His historical plays (in blank verse) are boring, though not his dramatized fairy tale Snegurochka, which Rimsky-Korsakov turned into an opera. Ostrovsky has been responsible for important changes in the evolution of the Russian theatre, and his plays, of which he wrote over 50, still remain very popular. He is regarded as the greatest Russian dramatist of the realistic period.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (12 vols, 1885–86); Sochineniya (11 vols, 1919–26); Sochineniya (1935); Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (16 vols, 1949–53); Sobranie sochineniy (10 vols, 1959–60); Dnevnik i pis'ma (1937).—The Storm (tr. Constance Garnett, 1898; tr. G. F. Holland and M. Morley, 1930; tr. D. Magarshak, 1960); Plays (A Protégée of the Mistress, Poverty Is no Crime, Sin and Sorrow Are Common to All, It's a Family Affair; ed. G. R. Noyes, 1917); The Forest (tr. C. V. Winlow and G. R. Noyes, 1926); Easy Money and Two Other Plays (tr. D. Magarshak, 1944); The Diary of a Scoundrel (adapt. R. Ackland, 1948).

N. Denisov, Kriticheskaya literatura o proizvedeniyakh Ostrovskogo (1906–07); I. Patouillet, O. et son théâtre de mœurs russes (1912; with biblio.); N. Kashin, Etyudy ob Ostrovskom (1912–13); N. Dolgov, A. N. O. (1923); A. Revyakin, A. N. O. (1949); G. P. Pirogov, A. N. O. (1962); L. Lotman, A. N. O. i russkaya dramaturgiya ego vremeni (1961); E. G. Kholodov, Masterstvo Ostrovskogo (1967).

J.L.

Ostrovsky, NIKOLAY ALEXEYEVICH (*1904; †1936), Soviet author of working-class origin. As a result of his wounds during the Civil War and of intensive Party work under difficult conditions he became paralysed and lost his sight. But undaunted, he began to write and his intensely optimistic autobiography in the form of a novel, Kak zakalyalas' stal', brought him the Lenin Order in 1935, and by 1950 the sale of the book reached six million copies. Death prevented the completion of a second novel, Rozhdennye burey (1937), with a background of the Civil War and the struggle against the Polish landowners in the Ukraine.

Kak zakalyalas' stal' (1932–34; The Making of a Hero, tr. A. Brown, 1937; How the Steel Was Tempered, tr. R. Prokofyeva, 1967; Et l'acier fut trempé, tr. V. Feldman, 1937).—Sochineniya (3 vols, 1967–68).

E. Balabanovich, N. O. (1946); K. P. Kiparisova, N. A. O. (1946); S. Tregub, N. O. (1948, 1957, 1964); V. I. Timofeyev and M. V. Shiryayeva, N. O. (1957).

J.L.

O'Sullivan, SEUMAS: see Starkey, JAMES SULLIVAN.

Osuna, FRAY FRANCISCO DE (*Osuna †1497; †before 1542), Spanish religious writer. He was a Franciscan who wrote, besides other religious works, a long work in six parts entitled Abecedario espiritual; each part is subdivided into chapters headed by a maxim, arranged in alphabetical order. The third alphabet deals with mysticism and influenced St Teresa*.

Tercera parte del libro llamado Abecedario espiritual (in Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XVI; tr. The Third Spiritual Alphabet, 1931); Norte de los estados (Burgos, 1550).

R. F. de Ros, Le père F. de O. (1937).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Oswald von Wolkenstein (*1377; †1445), Tirolese poet of noble birth. His career included escape from home at the age of ten, extensive travels, the service of Emperor Sigismund and a 'minnedienst' the reality of which included a spell in his lady's dungeon. All this is reflected in his 125 poems, the most exhilarating collection of the waning Middle Ages in Germany; they show affinities with all the passing and emerging genres: MINNESANG, Tanzlied, Goliardic poetry, drinking-song, MEISTERGESANG, hymn and folk-song. In his language there is more zest than discrimination; neologisms and foreign words abound.

Ed. J. Schatz (2nd ed. 1904); with melodies, idem and O. Koller (1902); ed. K. K. Klein (with musical supp. W. Salmen; 1962).—Modernized L. Passarge (1891).

J. Schatz, Sprache und Wortschatz der Gedichte O.s (1930); E. J. Morrell, 'O. von W. and Mandeville's travels' in London Medieval Studies [for] F. Norman (1965); S. Beyschlag, 'Zu den mehrstimmigen Liedern O.s von W.' in Festgabe . . . H. O. Burger (1968). F.P.P.

Otčenášek, JAN (*Prague 19 XI 1924), Czech novelist. Občan Brych (1955), the portrayal of the dilemma of an intellectual who comes to accept the Communist new order in Czechoslovakia, tries with only limited success to escape from the shallow schematism of the approach to literature current in the 1950s. His best achievement is the short novel Romeo, Julie a tma (1958; Romeo and Juliet and the Darkness, tr. I. Unwin, 1960), the story of the love of a Czech youth for a Jewish girl in German-occupied Prague. R.A.

Otero, BLAS DE (*Bilbao 1916), Spanish poet concerned with the problems of contemporary Spain and directing his message to 'the immense majority'.

Angel fieramente humano (1950); Redoble de conciencia (1951); Pido la paz y la palabra (1955); Ancia (1958); Esto no es un libro (1963); Que trata de España (1964); Hacia la inmensa mayoría (1962); Expresión y reunión, 1941–1969 (1969).

E. Alarcos Llorach, La poesía de B. de O. (1966). J.E.V.

Otfrid (fl. c. 868), German poet, monk at the Alsatian monastery of Weissenburg. He had probably studied under Rabanus* Maurus at Fulda (c. 820–30). His elaboration in five books of (roughly pericopal) readings from the Gospels (with the standard commentaries) is the earliest German monument in rhyming verse. In its insistence on the allegorical (beside the literal) sense of Scripture and in its asceticism it is the work of a cleric and monk. 'Popular' treatment (as in the Old Saxon Heliand*) is rarely found; the Annunciation scene is of considerable iconographical interest. One preface, an apologia of the Franks and the Frankish tongue ('hitherto not disciplined, as were Greek and Latin, in metrical composition'), is noteworthy, but remained, like the rest of the work, without influence.

Eds: P. Piper (2 vols, 2nd ed. 1882–87); O. Erdmann (1882); E. Schröder and L. Wolff (with glossary but no comm.; 1957).—Modernized: Joh. Kelle (1870); R. Fromme (1928).

G. Ehrismann, Geschichte der deutschen Literatur . . . des M.A.s, I (2nd ed., 1932); D. A. McKenzie, O. von W., Narrator or Commentator (1946); F. P. Pickering, Literature and Art in the Middle Ages (1970). F.P.P.

Othón, MANUEL JOSÉ (*San Luis de Potosí 1858; †1906), Mexican poet on the fringe of MODERNISM. While his poetic form is more delicately contrived than that of Romanticism or post-Romanticism, his matter is all his own and is largely concerned with the relations between man and nature as represented in the mountainous territory of northern Mexico. E.Sa.

Poemas (1880); Poemas rústicos (1890–1902) (1902); Noche triste de las Walpurgis (1907); El himno de los bosques (1908).—Poemas y cuentos (ed. A. Castro Leal, 1963). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Otloh of St Emmeram *c. 1010; †23 XI 1072 or 1073), German cleric, brought up in Tegernsee and Hersfeld, teacher at St Emmeram in Regensburg. Among his writings are a Liber visionum, a Vita Bonifatii, a Liber de temptationibus (autobiographical) and hymns.

Migne, Patrologia Latina, CXLVI (1853); Monumenta Germaniae historica, Scriptores, XI (1854); Analecta hymnica medii aevi, L (1907). F.J.E.R.

Ōtomo no Yakamochi (*?718; †IX 785), Japanese poet. Although as a court official and statesman he had a prominent (if chequered) career, he is famous as one of the best poets of the anthology Manyōshū*, in the editing of which he played a large part. Of numerous surviving poems, none apparently belong to after 759. It is not known whether he ceased writing then or whether later poems were lost.

Die Langegedichte Y.s aus der Manyōshū (tr. E. E. Florenz, 1933); sel. poems tr. in: Nippon Gakujutsu Shinkōkai, The Manyōshū (1940; repr. 1965); R. H. Brower and E. R. Miner, Japanese Court Poetry (1961; with excellent crit. assessment); G. Bownas and A. Thwaite, Penguin Book of Japanese Verse (1964). E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Otte: see Gautier d'Arras.

Ottendorfer, OSWALD (*Zwittau, Moravia 26 II 1826; ∞VII 1859 Anna Uhl, née Behr; †New York 15 XII 1900), German-American journalist. He married the owner of the New Yorker Staatszeitung and through his championship of truly representative government made it the leading German-American newspaper.

H. Zeydel in Dictionary of American Biography, XIV (1934). E.R.

Otto of Freising (*1114/15; †1158), German chronicler, uncle of Frederick Barbarossa. He studied in Paris, became a Cistercian and (1135) Bishop of Freising. He made the school there a centre of Aristotelian studies. He wrote two great histories, the Chronica (a world-history of the 'two cities' from the Creation to 1146) and the Gesta Friderici I imperatoris. F.J.E.R.

Chronica, ed. A. Hofmeister, and Gesta, ed. B. von Simson, in Monumenta Germaniae historica, Scriptores rerum Germanicarum, XLV-XLVI (1912).—The Two Cities and The Deeds of Frederic Barbarossa (tr. C. Mierow, Records of Civilization: Sources, X, 1928, and XLIX, 1953).

J. A. Fischer, O. von F.: Gedenkgabe zu seinem 800. Todesjahr (Freising, 1958). F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Otway, THOMAS (*Trotton, nr Midhurst 3 III 1652; †London ?14 IV 1685), English dramatist. He was educated at Winchester College and Christ Church, Oxford (1669), but he left without taking a degree, going to London in 1671. Otway persuaded Aphra Behn* to give him the part of the King in The Forc'd Marriage but was a useless actor. His Alcibiades (1675) caught the notice of Rochester* who interested the Duke of York in him. After the success of Don Carlos (15 VI 1676) Betterton* was prepared to accept Otway as a dramatist and he was patronized by the Earls of Plymouth and Middlesex in addition. With his passion for Mrs Barry unreturned Otway joined the army (1678), going to Holland and returning in 1679 with his health impaired. After 1681, despite the success of Venice Preserved (II 1682) Otway was in bad straits, borrowing from Betterton and Tonson. He also suffered for his support of the Duke of York. Otway's comedy was poor. His Orphan and Venice Preserved are well constructed, his blank verse is supple, often tremendously moving, and he provided the stage with some of its most popular rôles for nearly two centuries.

PLAYS: Caius Marius (from Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet; 1680, facs. 1969); Venice Preserved (1682; ed. M. Kelsall, 1969); The Works of Mr T. O. (1692).—PROSE WORKS: The History of the Triumvirates (1686); 'Love-letters, Written by the Late Most Ingenious Mr T. O.' in Familiar Letters by the Earl of Rochester (1697).—The Works... Plays, Poems and Love-letters (ed. J. C. Ghosh, 2 vols, 1932; repr. 1968).

Samuel Johnson, Lives, I (ed. G. B. Hill, 1905); R. G. Ham, O. and Lee (1931); A. M. Taylor, Next to Shakespeare (1950); R. E. Hughes, "'Comic relief'" in O.'s Venice Preserved in Notes and Queries, new ser., V (1958); W. H. McBurney, 'O.'s tragic muse debauched' in Jour. Eng. and Germanic Philol., LVIII (1959); E. Rothstein, Restoration Tragedy (1967). B.L.J. (H.N.D.)

Oudaen, JOACHIM (*Rijnsburg 1628; †Rotterdam 1692), Dutch poet, pupil of Petrus Scriverius* with whom he boarded; after his marriage, tilemaker at Rotterdam, which through him acquired prominence as a literary centre. Although not primarily interested in temporal things, he was generally inspired in his poetry by occurrences in domestic and foreign politics. Sometimes his poems have a Vondelian ring. An anti-Catholic, he yet appreciated Vondel*; despite Trijntje Cornelis he admired Huygens*. He was interested also in music, painting and engraving on glass.

PLAYS: Joanne Gray (1648: counterpart of Vondel's Maria Stuart); Koning Conrاديjn (1649); Servetius (1655); Haagsche Broedermoord (1672).—VERSE: Britannische vernedering (1667); De neergeplofte Lucifer (1659; on Cromwell's death); God en 't Goddelijke gekent en doorzien uit de Schepselen (1675; versification of Psalms).

D. van Hoogstraten, J. O.'s Poezij (3 vols, 1712); H. K. Poot, Gedichten van J. van O. (1724); G. Penon, 'Brieven van en aan O.' in Bijdragen, II and III (1881); A. van Duinkerken, 'J. O. in de Vasten' in De Gemeenschap, VI (1930); J. Karsemeijer, 'J. O. als chiliast' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, XXXVII (1943) and 'O.'s Aandachtige Treurigheid' in Levende Talen (1944); J. D. P. Warners, 'O.'s gedicht bij Vondels overlijden' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, XLVI (1953); C. C. de Bruin, J. O. in de lijst van zijn tijd (1955); L. Brummel, 'J. O.'s "Haagsche Broeder-moord"' in Opstellen F. K. H. Kossmann (1958); J. Melles, J. O., heraut der verdraagzaamheid (1958). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Oudshoorn, J. VAN, pseud. of JAN KOOS FEYLBRIEF (*The Hague 20 XII 1877; ∞1914 Marie Elise Gertrud Teichner; †ibid. 31 VII 1951), Dutch prose writer. Van Oudshoorn, who lived a lonely life quite outside Dutch literary movements, wrote pessimistic novels and stories on isolated, even alienated, people, reminiscent of Strindberg*. A tendency towards a private brand of mysticism adds a very personal touch to his psychology and graphic style.

Willem Merten's levenspiegel (1914; Alienation, tr. Neline C. Clegg, 1965); Tobias en de dood (1925); Pinksteren (1929); In memoriam (1930); De fantast (1948); Doolhof der zinnen (anthol.; 1950); Bezwaarlijk verblijf (ed. W. A. M. de Moor, 1965); Het onuitsprekelijke (letters; 1968).—Verzamelde werken, I (coll. stories; ed. W. A. M. de Moor, 1968).

M. Nijhoff, 'De geestkracht der kunst' in De Gids (1922); K. A. Mayer in Jaarboek Maatschappij der Nederl. Lett. (1950–51); K. Fens, De gevestigde chaos (1966). J.J.O.

Ouida, pseud. of MARIE LOUISE DE LA RAMÉE (*Bury St Edmunds 1 I 1839; †Viareggio, Italy 25 I 1908), English novelist who, challenging Victorian conventions, enriched contemporary fiction with the superbly blasé guardsman. Her 44 novels of a world of operatic passion show narrative vigour and, when dogs are described, great fidelity.

Under Two Flags (3 vols, 1867); Tricotrin (1869); A Dog of Flanders (1872); Two Little Wooden Shoes (1874); Moths (3 vols, 1880); Bimbi: stories for children (1882); In Maremma (1882).

E. Lee, O.: A Memoir (1914); Y. French, Life of O. (1938); E. Bigland, O. (1950). R.M.H.

Outremeuse, JEAN D' (*Liège 1338; †ibid. 1399), French chronicler and poet; a lawyer at the episcopal court of Liège. He wrote a universal history in prose entitled Le Myreur des histoires, a historical poem, La Geste de Liège, and a version in alexandrines of the epic legend of Ogier le Danois (CHANSONS DE GESTE).

Œuvres (ed. A. Borgnet and S. Bonnans, 7 vols, 1864–87).—G. Kurth, Étude critique sur J. d'O. (1910). A.H.D.

Ou-yang Hsü (*Mien-chou 6 VIII 1007; †Ying-chou 8 IX 1072), Chinese essayist and poet. Ou-yang was at once a leading statesman and the greatest literary figure of his generation. His official career, begun in 1031, lasted virtually up to his death, although his progress was several times interrupted by provincial banishments. Between 1049 and 1069 he was vice-president or president of various departments of state and held important academic appointments. In his last years he opposed the reform proposals of Wang* An-shih.

Ou-yang, as was typical of the Northern Sung period, was greatly concerned with the practical application of the Confucian classics to contemporary politics. This same outlook made him the most influential author in a revived and now successful movement for the adoption of the simpler prose style of the classics (ku-wên). His best prose writing includes prefaces, epitaphs and descriptive essays. In all forms of verse, including the tz'ü, he wrote with fluency, directness and simplicity, displaying a reflective spirit and a love of natural beauty. He also wrote a book of poetry criticism, the earliest notebook on inscriptions, of which he had collected many rubbings, and compiled a 'New History of the Five Dynasties'. The officially-compiled 'New History of the Tang Dynasty' also bears his name with that of Sung* Ch'ü. His political and literary principles affected his historical writing, which encountered considerable criticism.

COLLECTED LITERARY WORKS: Chü-shih chi (1072; sel. tr. in G. Margouliès, Anthologie raisonnée de la littérature chinoise, 1948).—Liu-i tz'ü (tz'ü poetry; sel. tr. in A. Ayling and D. Mackintosh, A Collection of Chinese Lyrics, 1965).—Liu-i shih-hua (1071).—Hsin Wu-tai shih (history; completed 1072).—Wên-chung chi (coll. works; c. 1195).

J. T. C. Liu, Ou-yang Hsiu (1967). A.R.D.

Ovechkin, VALENTINE (*1904; †1968), Soviet author writing mainly about the new Soviet village and the collective farms. His novel Trudnaya vesna (1956) tackles the problems of both in an outspoken manner. J.L.

Overbury, SIR THOMAS (*Compton Scorpion, Warwickshire; ∞Barton on the Heath 18 VI 1581; †London 15 IX 1613), English prose writer of characters (ESSAY) on a Theophrastan model, educated at Queen's College, Oxford (B.A. 1598) and a member of the Middle Temple (1597). As a result of his opposition to the marriage of his friend and patron Robert Carr, Earl of Somerset, to the divorced Countess of Essex, he was imprisoned in the Tower of London in IV 1613 on a trumped-up charge of disobedience to the King, and slowly poisoned by agents of the Countess. She and Somerset were found guilty and kept under house-arrest; four accomplices were hanged.

Miscellaneous Works in Verse and Prose (ed. E. F. Rimbault, 1856); The Overburian Characters (ed. W. J. Paylor, 1936).

Sir T. O.'s Vision (1616) By Richard Niccols, and Other English Sources of Nathaniel Hawthorne's 'The Scarlet Letter' (ed. A. S. Reid, 1957); W. McElwee, The Murder of Sir T. O. (1952); M. A. deFord, The O. Affair (1960). R.M.W.

Øverland, ARNULF (*Kristiansund 27 IV 1889; ∞[3rd] 1945 Margrete Aamot; †25 III 1968), Norwegian poet and short-story writer. Intensity but soberness of language, and melancholy longing tinged with bitterness characterize Øverland's earliest poems. Soon, however, his ideals changed, and he came to regard poetry as a weapon; first to protest, in Brød og vin (1919), against the blockade of Germany during the First World War and against the Treaty of Versailles; later in the service of Socialism in Berget det blå (1937), then in violent attacks on Fascism in Den røde front (1937); and finally with his poems (collected in Vi overlever alt, 1945) clandestinely circulated during the occupation of Norway during the Second World War, which led to his incarceration in Sachsenhausen in 1942. However, Øverland is no mere propagandist. His themes are wide-ranging and marked by a passionate integrity of purpose, and expressed with taut, monumental simplicity. In Hustavler (1929) his private and public concerns coalesce in poems which are among the most memorable written by him. His more recent collections of verse have tended to be more personal in character or more symbolic. His plays are comparatively unimportant; some of his short stories are noteworthy (especially the collection Gud plantet en have, 1931); and his articles show him to have been a passionate and talented contributor to public debate, especially on the language question. But it is as one of the leading poets of his generation that he will be remembered.

VERSE: Den ensomme fest (1911); De hundrede violiner (1912); Advent (1915); Brød og vin (1919; ext. ed. 1924); Jeg besværges dig (1934); Ord i alvor til det norske folk (1940; ext. ed. 1959); Tilbage til livet (1946); Fiskeren og hans sjæl (1950); Sverdet bak døren (1956); Den rykende tande (1960); På Nebo bjerg (1962); Livets minutter (1965).—PLAYS: Venner (1917); Gi mig ditt hjerte (1930).—NOVELS AND VARIOUS: Den haarde fred (1916); Deilig er jorden (1923); Møllerupgåsens liv og himmelfart og andre troverdige beretninger (1964).—ARTICLES: Det har ringt for annen gang (1946); Norden mellem øst og vest (1947); Neutralitet eller vestblokk (1948); Bokmålet—et avstumpet landsmål (1949); I beundring og forargelse (1954); Riksmål, landsmål og slagsmål (1956); I tjeneste hos ordene (1963); Hvor gammelt er Norge? (1964); Sprog og usprog (1967).—NOVELS: De hundrede violiner (Dikt i udvalg) (1968).
O. Gelsted, A. Ø. (Copenhagen, 1946); E. E. Johnsen, Livets spiral—A. Ø. i sin diktning (1956); D. Haakonsen, A. Ø. (1966). R.G.P.

Overton, RICHARD (fl. 1642–63), English pamphleteer and satirist; with Lilburne* and Walwyn, one of the Leveller leaders. His writings include an attack on the Bishops, New Lambeth Fayre (1642), an argument that the body and soul are inseparable, Man's Mortallitie (1644), the six pamphlets signed Martin Marpriest attacking the Westminster Assembly of Divines (1645–46) and A Remonstrance of Many Thousand Citizens (1646) in defence of the imprisoned Lilburne, for which he was gaoled (1646–47); he was gaoled again for his share in the second part of England's New Chains Discovered (1649) and again in 1659 and 1663. He obtained a commission under Charles II in Flanders.

W. Haller (ed.), Tracts on Liberty in the Puritan Revolution, III (1934), The Rise of Puritanism (1938) and Liberty and Reformation in the Puritan Revolution (1948); W. Schenk, The Concern for Social Justice in the Puritan Revolution (1948).

R.M.W.

Ovid (PUBLIUS OVIDIUS NASO) (*Sulmo 43 B.C.; †c. A.D. 17), Latin poet. Born of an equestrian family, Ovid received an extensive rhetorical training at Rome and, after completing his education at Athens, travelled in Asia Minor and Sicily. In Rome, devoid of ambition for the official career for which his father had destined him, he soon devoted himself to fashionable society and to poetry.

He won early acclaim for his Amores (c. 16 B.C.), love-elegies as artificial as their central figure, 'Corinna'; the lament for Tibullus* alone shows genuine feeling. The Heroides, mainly fictitious love-letters of heroines, are similarly shallow. His Medicamina faciei femineae, a treatise on cosmetics, was followed by the notorious Ars amatoria (c. 1 B.C.) and Remedia amoris; in these the technique of love is treated in mock-didactic style, flippantly and cynically. The disapproval evoked by their wantonness was doubtless the underlying cause of his banishment by Augustus in A.D. 8 to Tomis on the Black Sea: the immediate cause is never precisely revealed.

In disgust at his sentence, Ovid destroyed the 15 books, in hexameters, of the Metamorphoses; happily this work, in which old stories of mythological transformations, both Greek and Roman, are given fresh life in colourful and easy-flowing verse, was preserved in copies owned by his friends.

Only the first six books of the Fasti, originally planned to treat aetiologically the months of the Roman calendar in 12 books, were completed: these were published, partly revised, posthumously. The last works of his exile are the Tristia and Epistulae ex Ponto, for the most part tedious, if heartfelt, complaints of his lot, and the Ibis, an abusive piece. The Halieutica, a didactic poem on fish, and the allegorical Nux are probably spurious.

Ovid is a masterful versifier, and a vivid imagination combined with an easy grace of diction makes him an admirable story-teller. But he is too prone to rhetorical ingenuity and lacks true poetical greatness.

Amores (ed. F. Munari, 4th ed. 1964; ed. with comm. P. Brandt, 1911, repr. 1963; tr. G. Lee, 1968); Heroides (eds with comm.: A. Palmer, 1898, repr. 1967; R. Giomini, 1963–65; tr. G. Showerman, 1914); Ars amatoria (ed. with comm. P. Brandt, 1902, repr. 1963; tr. [with Medicamina faciei, Remedia amoris, Nux, Ibis, Halieutica] J. H. Mozley, 1929); Remedia amoris (ed. with comm. G. Némethy, 1921); Metamorphoses (ed. with comm. H. Magnus, 1914; trs: F. J. Miller, 2 vols, 1931; Mary Innes, 1955); Fasti (ed. with comm. Sir J. G.

Frazer, 5 vols, 1929; tr. idem, 1931); Tristia and Epistulae ex Ponto (ed. S. G. Owen, 1915; ed. with comm. 1967–, in progr.; tr. A. L. Wheeler, 1924); Ibis (ed. with comm. A. la Penna, 1957); Nux (ed. with comm. S. Wartena, 1928).

H. de la Ville de Mirmont, La jeunesse d'Ovide (1905); E. K. Rand, O. and His Influence (1926); F. A. Wright, Three Roman Poets (1938); H. Fränkel, O., a Poet Between Two Worlds (1945); L. P. Wilkinson, O. Recalled (1955; abr. as O. Surveyed, 1962); Brooks Otis, O. as an Epic Poet (1966); G. Luck, The Latin Love Elegy (2nd ed. 1969).
A.J.D.

Owen, DANIEL (*Mold 20 X 1836; †ibid. 22 X 1895), Welsh novelist. A tailor by trade, his training for the Methodist ministry was cut short by poverty. When in 1876 his health broke down and he began to write novels, he had to win over a public which hardly approved of fiction. If his four novels, all of which first appeared in serial form, are defective in structure, the author clearly had a genius for social comedy. His wide range of memorable characters presented largely through their own words, his humour and his irony and his sympathetic yet critical portrayal of 19th-century Welsh life soon made him the most widely read of Welsh authors.

Offrymau Neillduaeth (1879); Y Dreflan: ei phobl a'i phethau (1881); Hunangofiant Rhys Lewis (1885); Rhys Lewis, Minister of Bethel, tr. J. Harries, 1888; Y Siswrn (1886); Profedigaethau Enoc Huws (1891; tr. C. Vivian in Wales, I–III, 1894–96); Gwen Tomos (1894; tr. T. C. Williams and E. R. Harries, 1963); Straeon y Pentan (1895).

I. Foulkes, D. O. y Nofelydd (1903); T. Gwynn Jones, D. O. (1936); Saunders Lewis, D. O. (1936); D. Gwenallt Jones, 'Nofelau Cylchgronol D. O.' in Llên Cymru, IV (1956–57); J. Gwilym Jones, D. O. (1970) and 'Enoc Huws...' in Ysgrifau Beirniadol, II (ed. J. E. C. Williams, 1966); D. Glyn Jones, 'Enoc Huws...', ibid., III (1967); W. Beynon Davies, 'Gwen Tomos...', ibid., V (1970).
B.Re.

Owen, GORONWY (*Llanfair Mathafarn Eithaf, Anglesey 1 I 1723; ∞1747 Elin Hughes, ∞1758 Anne Clayton, ∞1763 Jean Simmons; †Virginia VII 1769), Welsh poet. He received a sound classical education and for 11 years, during which he wrote most of his poetry, held curacies in England—at Oswestry, Uppington, Walton and Northolt. He then took up a scholastic appointment in Williamsburg, Virginia, and in 1760 became rector of St Andrew's, Brunswick County. He suffered many disappointments during his restless life. His poems, written in the bardic metres, are sometimes on general themes, such as the Last Judgement; sometimes they are more personal and occasional in character, a magnificent apostrophe to his native Anglesey and a Horatian epistle inviting a friend being among his best work. His letters are models of vigorous idiomatic prose.

Diddanwch Teuluaid (1763); The Poetical Works of the Rev G. O. . . . with his life and correspondence (ed. Robert Jones, 2 vols, 1876); Barddoniaeth G. O. (ed. J. Morris Jones, 1895); Gwaith G. O. (ed. O. M. Edwards, 2 vols, 1901–02); The Letters of G. O. (ed. J. H. Davies, 1924).

T. Shankland, 'G. O.' in Y Beirniad, IV–VI (1914–16) and Y Geninen, XLI (1923); Saunders Lewis, 'G. O.' in Trans. Hon. Soc. Cymmrodorion, supp. vol. (1922–23) and A School of Welsh Augustans (1924); B. B. Thomas, 'G. O. . . . [in America]' in Y Cymmrodor, XLIII, XLIV (1932–35); W. D. Williams, G. O. (1951; bilingual).
B.Re.

Owen, JOHN (*Llanarmon, Caerns c. 1560; †London 1622), Welsh neo-Latin epigrammatist. His epigrams were widely admired, particularly on the continent, where they continued to be reprinted in the 18th century. But Jonson* thought them only 'bare narrations'.

Epigrammatum . . . Libri Tres [ad D. Mariam Neville] (1606, only copy at Harvard; 1607; 1612); Epigrammatum . . . Liber Singularis [ad D. Arabellam Stuart] (1607; 1612); Epigrammatum . . . Libri Tres [ad Henricum Principem] (1612); Epigrammatum . . . Libri Tres [ad Tres Maecenates] (1612); Epigrams of that most wittie and worthie Epigrammatist, Mr John Owen, Gentleman (tr. J. Vicars, 1619).

E. Urban, O. und die deutschen Epigrammatiker des XVII. Jahrhunderts (Berlin, 1900); E. Bensly, 'J. O. the epigrammatist' in Notes and Queries (1909); J. J. Enck, 'J. O.'s Epigrammata' in Harvard Libr. Bull., III (1949).
C.P.

Owen, ROBERT (*Newtown, Mont. 14 V 1771; ∞1799 Anne Dale; †Newtown 17 XI 1858), Anglo-Welsh sociologist. He bought the New Lanark Mills and aimed at making it a model industrial community. His educational ideas and practices were widely studied. A pioneer of co-operation, communal living, trades unionism and spiritualism, most of his writings are now only of specialist interest, but his delightful autobiography and very thoughtful and perceptive New View of Society (1813–14) make a general appeal.

Lectures on an Entire New State of Society (1830); Outline of the Rational System of Society (1830); The Life of R. O., written by himself (I only, 1857; another ed. 1920).

J. Barker, The Gospel Triumphant; or, A Defence of Christianity against the attacks of the Socialists . . . (1839); G. J. Holyoake, Sixty Years of An Agitator's Life (2 vols, 1892; new ed. 1906); Beatrice Webb, The Co-operative Movement in Great Britain (1891); George B. Lockwood, The New Harmony Communities (1902); Max Beer, A History of British Socialism (2 vols, 1919); G. D. H. Cole, R. O. (1925); A Bibliography of R. O. (ed. Nat. Libr. of Wales, rev. ed. 1925); Margaret Cole, R. O. (1953); W. H. Chaloner, 'R. O., Pater Drinkwater and the early factory system in Manchester' in Bull. John Rylands Libr., XXXVII (1954); Asa Briggs, 'R. O. in retrospect' in Co-op. Coll. Papers, VI (1959); A. L. Morton, The Life and Ideas of R. O. (1962); J. F. C. Harrison, R. O. and the Owenites in Britain and America (1969).

C.P. (M.W.T.)

Owen, WILFRID (*Oswestry, Shropshire 18 III 1893; †killed in action, France 4 XI 1918), English poet. His reputation rests on the poignant poems in which he exposes the pitiless realities of war and the conflict these set up in the spirit of an idealist. He had a profound influence on the young poets of the 1930s.

Poems (intro. S. Sassoon, 1920; with memoir E. Blunden, 1931); Collected Poems (ed. C. Day Lewis, 1963).—Collected Letters (1967).

D. S. R. Welland, W. O. (1960); H. Owen, Journey from Obscurity (3 vols, 1963–65).
R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Oxenstierna, JOHAN GABRIEL (*Skenäs 19 VII 1750; †Stockholm 29 VII 1818), Swedish civil servant, courtier, politician and poet. His career was on the whole unsuccessful and he suffered from continual financial difficulties. Much of his most valuable poetry (Skördarne, 1796) was written before 1774: it is tender, mystical, and elegiac in tone, set in the landscapes of his native Sörmland, and shows the influence of Rousseau*. Unfortunately he revised his early poems, not for the better, before publishing them. After 1775 he wrote mainly occasional poetry and opera libretti for Gustav* III and spent much effort on translating, and on re-shaping his own and other men's works. His talent developed little during his career.

VERSE: contrib. to Vitterhetsnöjen [organ of the lit. soc. Utile Dulci], II, III (1770–72); tr. of Paradise Lost (1815).—Samlade Arbeten (5 vols, 1805–26).—PROSE: Dagboksanteckningar (ed. G. Stjernström, 1881); Mitt minne (pub. in Svenska Memoarer och Brev, I, 1900).

M. Lamm, J. G. O., en gustaviansk natursvärmars liv och dikt (1911); H. Frykenstedt, J. G. O:s Skördarne (1961). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Oxford, EDWARD DE VERE, 17TH EARL OF (*2 IV 1550; ∞Anne Burghley; †Newington 24 VI 1604), a favourite of Queen Elizabeth*, although his unruly temperament made his court career a stormy one. He wrote poetry and was said to have written plays, but none have survived. Some believe him to be the 'real Shakespeare', but this view has received little general support.

Poems (ed. J. T. Looney, 1921).

B. M. Ward, The 17th Earl of O. (1928); P. Allen, The Case for E. de V., 17th Earl of O., as 'William Shakespeare' (1930) and The O. Shakespeare Case Corroborated (1931); W. Kittle, E. de V. (1935).
J.B.B.

Oyono, FERDINAND (*Ngoulemakong, nr Ebolowa, Cameroons 14 IX 1929), Francophone African novelist. Educated at the lycée of Ebolowa and in France, Oyono studied law and administration in Paris. Since 1960, he has served in the Cameroons diplomatic corps.

Through the medium of satire and an earthy comedy not uncommon among Francophone African novelists, Oyono bitterly attacks the colonial presence in Africa. His novels make their impact by their simplicity and economy of means, although a certain diffuseness is evident in his third novel, Chemin d'Europe. An actor of talent, Oyono's novels reveal a striking ability to evoke situations dramatically.

Une vie de boy (1956; Houseboy, tr. J. Reed, 1966); Le vieux nègre et la médaille (1956; The Old Man and the Medal, tr. idem, 1967); Chemin d'Europe (1960).

J. I. Gleason, This Africa (Evanston, Ill., 1965); A. C. Brench, The Novelists' Inheritance in French Africa (1967).
C.W.

Oz, AMOS (*Jerusalem 1939); Hebrew novelist and short-story writer; member of Kibbutz Hulda. His main theme is the irrational motivation behind everyday domestic situations.

Michael Sheli (novel; 1967; My Michael, tr. N. de Lange, 1972).

L. I. Yudkin, 'New directions in Israeli fiction' in Israeli Writing (Autumn 1970).
L.Y.

Ozaki Kōyō, pseud. of OZAKI TOKUTARŌ (*Edo [=Tokyo] 10 I 1868; ∞X 1891 Kabashima Kikuko; †ibid. 30 X 1903), Japanese novelist. His first novel was published when he was only 18, and his writings were at first based upon the humorous and ironical style current in the Tokugawa period (1603–1868). Later, under the influence of European novels, he wrote in a more colloquial style, stressing 'psychological' factors in his plots. Some of his stories are in consequence rather melancholy, with melodramatic dénouements. His masterpiece is Konjiki yasha, his last work (unfinished), in which he returned to the literary style of composition. It is a moving novel which had a clear moral in contemporary social conditions in Japan. He was in his time one of the most popular of Japanese novelists and had a large school of young writers as his followers.

Nise Murasaki ikari no hachimaki (1886); Tajō takon (1896); Konjiki yasha (1897–1903; The Gold Demon, tr. A. and M. Lloyd, 1905).

Ito Sei, 'O. K. and his circle' in Japan Quart., II.3 (1955).
E.B.C. (D.E.M.)

Ozerov, VLADISLAV ALEXANDROVICH (*1769; †1816), Russian playwright. He continued the pseudo-classic tradition of Sumarokov* and Knyazhnin*, but at the same time introduced a number of sentimental-Romantic and 'Ossianic' elements, especially in his tragedy Fingal. He had considerable success on the stage, and his Polixena is still regarded as the best pseudo-classic tragedy in Russian.

Sochineniya (1816); Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (1851); Tragedii, Stikhotvoreniya (1960).

P. O. Potapov, Istoriya russkogo teatra (1915).
J.L.

P

Paap, WILLEM ANTHONY (*Winschoten 21 XI 1856; †Zeist 6 I 1923), Dutch novelist and playwright. Among his satirical novels, Vincent Haman (1898; 3rd ed. with intro. Menno ter Braak*, 1936), in which he followed his master Multatuli* in deriding his aestheticist contemporaries, has proved of lasting value.

NOVELS: Jeanne Collette (1896); De doodsklok van het Damrak (1908).—PLAYS: Koningsrecht (1901); Een grachtidylle (1908).

Menno ter Braak, Het tweede gezicht (1935) and Verzameld werk, III (1949); B. de Goede, W. P., het paar van Troje (1946); J. Meijer, Het levensverhaal van een vergetene, W. A. P. (1959).
J.J.O.

Pacey, WILLIAM CYRIL DESMOND (*Dunedin, New Zealand 1 V 1917; ∞ 1939 Mary Elizabeth Carson), Canadian scholar, story writer and English Professor at the University of New Brunswick. He is known for his pioneering survey of Canadian literature, Creative Writing in Canada (1952).

Frederick Philip Grove (1945); Ten Canadian Poets (1958); The Picnic and Other Stories (1958); Ethel Wilson (1968); Essays in Canadian Criticism (1969).—EDITED: A Book of Canadian Stories (1947); Our Literary Heritage (1966).
R.Su.

Pacheco, FRANCISCO DE (*Sanlúcar de Barrameda ?1564; †?Seville ?1654), Spanish painter, poet, aesthetician and writer. He was Velasquez' father-in-law and a canon of Seville cathedral. He wrote brief descriptions and drew portraits of many famous Spanish men of letters, including Luis de León* and Herrera*. He also wrote on painting and edited the posthumous poems of Herrera.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXXII; Libro de descripción de verdaderos retratos de ilustres y memorables varones (ed. J. M<sup>a</sup> Asensio, 1886); Arte de la pintura (ed. F. J. Sánchez Cantón, 2 vols, 1956).

M. Barbadillo, P., su tierra y su tiempo (1963).
E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Pa Chin, pseud. of LI FEI-KAN (*Ch'êng-tu 1904), Chinese novelist, short-story writer and essayist. Born into a wealthy family, Pa Chin became an anarchist in 1920 ('Pa Chin' was formed from Bakunin and Kropotkin). He spent 1927–28 in Paris where he wrote his first novel, Mieh-wang (1929), which achieved an immediate success. During the 1930s and 1940s he was among the most prolific and popular writers of fiction. He favoured the trilogy, although the connection of the volumes might be tenuous. Apart from some war novels, his especial topic was intra-family relations. After 1949 he renounced his anarchism and removed references to it from the re-editions of his works.

NOVELS: Chi-liu san-pu-ch'ü (Chia, 1931, The Family, tr. S. Shapiro, Peking, 1958; Ch'un, 1938; Ch'iu, 1940); Hai-ti mêng (1932); Ai-ch'ing san-pu-ch'ü (Wu, Yü, Tien; 1936); Huo (3 vols, 1941–45); Ch'i-yüan (1944); Garten der Ruhe, tr. J. J. Kalmer, 1954); Han-yeh (1947).—SHORT STORIES: Fu-ch'ou (1931); Kuang-ming (1931; one story, Kou, 'Dog', tr. in E. Snow, Living China, 1936); Fa ti ku-shih (1936; one story, Hsing, 'Star', tr. R. L. Jen in T'ien-hsia Monthly, V, 1937).

O. Lang, Pa Chin and His Writings (1967; incl. extensive biblio.).
A.R.D.

Pachymeres: see George Pachymeres.

Pacuvius, MARCUS (*Brundisium 220; †Tarentum c. 130 B.C.), nephew of Ennius*, practised painting and poetry at Rome. Fragments of 12 tragedies based on Greek originals and a historical play Paulus survive. Some of these were still read and even produced during the late Republic. Ancient critics generally regarded him as the best of the old Latin tragedians but some found fault with his Latin.

E. H. Warmington, Remains of Old Latin, II (with tr.; 1936); J. D'Anna, M. Pacuvi fragmenta (1967).—M. Valsa, M. P. poète tragique (1957); I. Mariotti, Introduzione a Pacuvio (1960).

H.D.J.

Padilla, JUAN DE, 'EL CARTUJANO' (*Seville 1468; †?1522), Spanish religious poet. He was a Carmelite who wrote two long poems in ARTE MAYOR: Retablo de la vida de Cristo and Los doce triunfos de los doce apóstoles. He drew on Ludolf of Saxony, and imitated the style of Juan de Mena*. His descriptions are sometimes vigorous.

R. Foulché-Delbosc, Cancionero castellano del siglo XV (Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XIX).

M. R. Lida de Malkiel, Juan de Mena poeta del prerrenacimiento español (Mexico, 1950); J. Gimeno, 'Sobre el Cartujano y sus críticos' in Hispanic Rev., XXIX (1961); see also Montesino*.
E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Padilla, PEDRO DE (*Linares; †after 1599), Spanish poet. He became a Carthusian in 1585. Lope de Vega* and Cervantes* admired his poems, many of which were religious. His manner is representative of second-class Spanish poetry of the late 16th century.

Tesoro de varias poesías (1580); Romancero (1583; ed. Marqués de la Fuensanta del Valle, 1880); Jardín espiritual (1585); Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXXV.
E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Padrón, JUAN RODRÍGUEZ DEL: see Rodríguez del Padrón, JUAN.

Páez de Ribera, RUY (fl. early 15th century), Spanish poet, included in the Cancionero de Baena. A nobleman from Seville, who wrote a moving poem on poverty, with other social criticism.

For biblio. see Baena*. E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Paffenrode, JOAN VAN (*Gorcum 1618; †Maastricht 1673), Dutch poet and military expert; was commander of Gorcum, wrote a drama after A. Kemp's* life of the Arkels, De Ondergang van Willem van Arkel (1662), a couple of farces, Vernieuwt uyt Liefde (1657) and Hopman Ulrich, of de bedroge gierigheid (1659), a competent book on military science, posthumously edited by his son, Der Grieken en Romeynen Krijgs-Handel (1675), and some poetry. A.M.B.W.

J. A. Worp, 'J. van P.' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Lett., I (1881); W. Peletier, Jacoba van Beieren in het Nederl. treurspel (1912).

A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Page, PATRICIA KATHLEEN (*England 23 XI 1916; ∞1950 William A. Irwin), Canadian poet, artist and writer; brought to Canada as an infant, she has travelled widely and worked several years as a script writer for the National Film Board.

As Ten As Twenty (1946); The Metal and the Flower (1954); Cry Ararat (1968).—The Sun and the Moon (novel, under pseud. Judith Cape; 1964).

W. Meredith, 'A good modern poet and a modern tradition' in Poetry, LXX (Chicago, 1947). R.Su.

Page, THOMAS NELSON (*Oakland, Hanover Co., Va. 23 IV 1853; ∞1886 Anne Bruce, ∞1893 Mrs Florence Field; †ibid. 1 XI 1922), American novelist and short-story writer. He wrote of the Old South, many of his local-colour stories in the negro vernacular.

In Ole Virginia (1887); The Old South (1892); The Negro: The Southerner's Problem (1904); Robert E. Lee: Man and Soldier (1911).—The Novels, Stories, Sketches and Poems of T. N. P. (18 vols, 1906–18).

R. Page, T. N. P.: A Memoir of a Virginia Gentleman (1923); T. L. Gross, T. N. P. (1967).

H.L.C. (I.W.)

Pagnol, MARCEL (*Aubagne 28 II 1895), French dramatist and film director, elected to the French Academy in 1946. Pagnol's first great success, Topaze (1928; Eng. tr. A. Rossi, 1963), a farcical satire on corruption in municipal politics, was quickly followed by Marius (1929), a brilliant portrait-gallery of Marseilles types. A sequel, Fanny, and César, a film script adapted for the stage, both produced 1931, completed the trilogy.

Les marchands de gloire (with P. Nivoix; 1924); Jazz (1926); Merlusse (1935); Judas (1955); Fabien

(1955).—NOVELS: Pirouettes (1932); L'eau des collines, I: Jean de Florette, II: Manon des Sources (1964).—ESSAYS: Notes sur le rire (1947); Critique des critiques (1949).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: La gloire de mon père (1957); Le château de ma mère (1957); Le temps des secrets (1960).

P. Brisson, Le théâtre des années folles (1943); G. Pillement, Anthologie du théâtre français contemporain, II (1946); R. Lalou, Le théâtre en France depuis 1900 (1951); Rev. de Biblio., III (1964). T.W.

Pailleron, ÉDOUARD (*Paris 17 IX 1834; †ibid. 20 IV 1899), French dramatist, elected to the French Academy in 1882. Pailleron was trained as a lawyer. He married a daughter of François Buloz, owner of La Revue des Deux Mondes. His first one-act comedy, in verse, Le parasite (1860), was followed by a number of full-length plays in verse in the manner of the school of Ponsard*. He was more successful in his prose plays—witty, though often superficial, studies of contemporary society—and particularly in his satire of the academic world, Le monde où l'on s'ennuie (1881).

Le mur mitoyen (1861); Le dernier quartier (1863); Second mouvement (1865); Le monde où l'on s'amuse (1868); Les faux ménages (1869); Hélène (1872); L'âge ingrat (1878); L'étincelle (1879); Pendant le bal (1881).

A. Lelia-Paternostro, E. P. (1931). T.W.

Paine, THOMAS (*Thetford 29 I 1737; ∞1759 Mary Lambert; †New York 8 VI 1809), English radical writer, champion of American independence and sometime deputy of the French National Convention, whose trenchant polemical works include The Rights of Man (pt I, 1791; pt II, 1792; pt III, 1811), a reply to Burke's* Reflections.

Common Sense (1776); The Crisis (1776–83); The Age of Reason (1794–95); Dissertation on the First Principles of Government (1795).—Works (ed. M. D. Conway, 4 vols, 1814–16).

'Francis Oldys' [G. Chalmers], Life of T. P. (1791); J. Cheetham, Life (1809); M. D. Conway, The Life of T. P., with a history of his . . . career (2 vols, 1892); L. Stephen, History of English Thought in the 18th Century (2 vols, 1902); F. Gould, T. P. (1925); H. Pearson, T. P. Friend of Mankind (1937); A. O. Aldridge, Man of Reason: the Life of T. P. (1959); R. R. Fennessy, Burke, P. and the Rights of Man (1963); J. T. Boulton, The Language of Politics in the Age of Wilkes and Burke (1963). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Painter, WILLIAM (*?London ?1540; ∞Dorothy Boham; †ibid. II 1594), English translator. Painter's fame rests entirely on his collection of stories translated from Greek, Latin, French and Italian. These were the sources of Shakespeare's* Rape of Lucrece, All's Well and Romeo and Juliet and of many other Elizabethan plays.

The Palace of Pleasure (2 vols, 1566-67; ed. H. Miles, 4 vols, 1930). J.B.B.

Paissy Hilendarski (PAISSY OF CHILANDARI) (*?Bansko c. 1722; †1793), Bulgarian pioneer historian. Entering Chilandari Monastery (Mt Athos) in 1745, he defended his people's origins in dispute with other monks there. He made researches into this in monastery libraries in Austria and Mt Athos and completed in 1762 his Istoria slovenobolgarska, commonly considered the start of the Vuzrajdanje (Bulgaria's national revival). He made it his mission to tour Bulgarian lands, publicizing and getting his MS copied wherever possible. As academic history or belles-lettres it hardly bears scrutiny; its significance lies in its purpose, which was something quite new in a long tradition of other-worldly ecclesiastical writing, namely its unequivocal and impassioned call to nationhood, to 'know thyself and thy tongue, Bulgarian' and desist, 'simple ploughman or shepherd though thou be', from aping the sophisticated ways of Greek merchant and scholar. Rarely, if ever, can a single book—a slight enough one at that—have so decisively aided the rebirth of a whole modern nation.

Tsarstvenik ili istoria bolgarskaya (ed. H. Pavlović, Budapest, 1844); Y. Ivanov, Istoria slavyanobolgarskaya (1914); S. Romanski, Nov Sofroniev prepis na P. istoria ot 1781 (1938); P. Dinekov, Slavyanobolgarska istoria (1938; 1960).

M. Drinov, Otets P. i negovoto vreme (1871); V. Zlatarski, Istoriata na P. (1914); I. Shishmanov, P. i negovata epoha (1914); B. Penev, P. H. (1928; 1936); N. Derzhavin, P. H. i ego istoria (Moscow, 1941). V.P.

Pak Illo (*1561; †1642), Korean poet and military official. His most famous poem, Peace, was written after the defeat of the Japanese invasion of Korea in 1592.

Pak Söngüi, Nogye Kasa T'onghae (1957). W.E.S.

Palacio, MANUEL DEL (*Lérida 1832; †Madrid 1906), Spanish poet and journalist. His witty satires on political and social life caused him to be exiled to Puerto Rico (1867). Examples of his peculiar humour are his 'philosophical' sonnets; each one, starting in a beautiful classical form and serious mood, ends in wild burlesque. He also wrote legends of considerable beauty, Veladas de otoño (1884).

De Tetuán a Valencia haciendo noche en Miraflores (1865; political articles); Poesías escogidas (ed. J. O. Picón, 1916).—'Secret Love' (tr. J. I. C. Clarke in T. Walsh, Hispanic Anthology, New York, 1920).

N. A. Cortés, Jornadas (1920) and Homenaje a M. del P. (1932). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Palacio Valdés, ARMANDO (*Ensalgo, Asturias 4 X 1853; †Madrid 3 II 1938), Spanish novelist and academician. He studied law at Oviedo and Madrid. He was a talented writer gifted with a neat style and gay humour. With him the short-lived, naturalist-realistic school melts away in a pleasant, undramatic portrayal of characters, customs and manners. His is bourgeois literature at its best, hence his success in and outside Spain. From a production of great variety La hermana San Sulpicio (1889) deserves special mention. This deals with a poet's courtship of a nun who took only temporary vows; the plot almost becomes a pretext for description of types and atmospheres and for a colourful, though superficial, presentation of Seville. Also well known are La aldea perdida (1903), on the theme of rural life destroyed by town civilization, Tristán o el pesimismo, El cuarto poder, and the autobiographical Novela de un novelista.

Obras completas (2 vols, 1945).—Marquis of Peñalta (tr. N. H. Dole, 1886); Maximina (tr. idem, New York, 1888); Sister Saint Sulpice (tr. idem, 1890; new ed. 1925); Froth (tr. C. Bell, 1891); Faith (tr. I. F. Hapgood, New York, 1892); The Grandee (tr. R. Challice, 1894); Joy of Captain Ribot (tr. M. C. Smith, 1900); The Fourth Estate (tr. R. Challice, 1901); José (tr. idem, 1901; new ed. 1922); Tristán (tr. J. B. Reid, 1925).

L. Bordes, 'A. P. V.' in Bull. Hispanique, I (1899); H. Peseux-Richard, 'A. P. V.' in Rev. Hispanique, XLVIII (1918); A. Cruz Rueda, A. P. V., estudio biográfico (1925; 2nd ed. 1949); C. C. Glascock, Two Modern Spanish Novelists: Emilia Pardo Bazán and A. P. V. (Texas, 1926); R. Narbona, P. V. o la armonía (1941); J. M. Roca Franquesa, P. V. técnica novelística y credo estético (1951); M. R. Colangeli, A. P. V. romanziere (Milella, 1962). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Palacký, FRANTIŠEK (*Hodslavice 14 VI 1798; †Prague 26 V 1876), Czech historian. Born in Moravia, Palacký received the greater part of his education in Slovakia, notably at the Protestant lyceum in Bratislava, where he met Jungmann* and Šafařík* and espoused the Czech national cause. His early writings were concerned with literature and aesthetics; but after meeting Dobrovský* in Vienna in 1820 his interest was directed to the study of history, which occupied him for the rest of his life.

From the late 1820s Palacký played a leading role in the organization of Czech cultural life: he founded the important 'Journal of the Czech Museum' (Časopis českého museum) in 1827 and was active in promoting the work of learned and patriotic societies. In 1848 he entered the political stage as the spokesman of Czech aspirations, notably as chairman of the Slavonic congress at Prague. The collapse of the revolution caused him to retire from active political life until 1861, when he became a member of the upper house of the Viennese Parliament.

His greatest work is his 'History of Bohemia' which, although extending only to 1526, expresses a clear and coherent conception of Czech history, the essence of which Palacký held to consist in the unending 'contact and conflict' between Czechs and Germans. In the Hussite movement he saw, in addition to the national factor, a revolt of freedom of thought and conscience against authoritarianism. These views exercised a powerful influence on the development of Czech thought and historiography and particularly on T. G. Masaryk*.

HISTORY: Geschichte von Böhmen (5 pts, 1836-67; Dějiny národu českého v Čechách a v Moravě, 5 pts, 1848-76; all but vol. I orig. wr. in Czech).—PROSE: Počátkové českého básnictví, obzvláště prozodie (with P. J. Šafařík, 1818; ed. R. Havel et al., 1961).—POLITICAL: Drobné spisy (ed. B. Rieger, 1898).

J. Pekař, P. (1912); J. Fischer, Myšlenka a dílo Fr. Palackého (2 vols, 1926-27); F. Kutnar et al., Tři studie o F. P. (1949). R.A.

Palafox y Mendoza, THE VENERABLE JUAN DE (*Fitero, Navarre 1600; †Osma 1659), Spanish religious writer. He held some official posts for Philip IV. He then took orders, became a Bishop in Mexico (1639) and finally at Osma (1653). He attacked the Jesuits with some bitterness. His works include a spiritual autobiography, Vida interior, and many religious treatises.

Obras (9 vols, 1659-71; 15 vols, 1762).

E.M.W.

Palamas: see Gregory Palamas.

Palamas, KOSTIS (*Patras 1859; †1888 Maria Valvi; †Athens II 1943), Greek poet and prose writer. Palamas combined ardent patriotism and a desire to serve his country with a poetical, scholarly and retiring disposition. His literary output, both prose and poetry, was enormous; but his life was dedicated to poetry. A supporter of the demotic movement of the late 19th century, he regarded the living language not only as a literary instrument, but as a vital factor in the Greek revival for which he and other pioneers strove after the disastrous war of 1897; and his best poetry was written in the unhappy but inspiring decade which followed that event. But he was also a scholar and a polymath; and his approach to his country's cause was historical and philosophical, with the result that in some of his longer pieces the thinker tends to overwhelm the poet. Much of his thought was governed by the Orphic doctrine of the Time Cycle, by which he interpreted the history and predicted the eventual resurgence of Greece. But he also owed much to folk-poetry, which influenced his symbolism and inspired many of his best lyric passages.

VERSE: Tragoudia tis patrídos mou (1886); Ymnos eis tin Athenan (1889); Ta matia tis psychis mou (1892); Iamvoi kai anapaistoi (1897); O tafos (1898); Chairetismoi tis Iliogenetis (1900); Asalefit zoi (1904); Life Immovable and A Hundred Voices, tr. A. E. Phoutrides, 1919-21); Dodekalogos tou gyfiou (1907); The Twelve Lays of the Gypsy, tr. G. Thomson, 1969); Flogera tou Vasilia (1910); Politeia kai monaxia (1912); Katmoi tis limnothalassas (1912); Vomoi (1915); Parakaira (1919); Pentasyllavoi (1925); Deiloi kai skliroi stichoi (1928); Kyklos ton tetrastichon (1929); Perasmata kai chairetismoi (1931); Vradini fotia (1946).—Thanatos Pallikariou (stories; 1901; A Man's Death, tr. A. E. Phoutrides, 1934); Trisevgeni (play; 1903); Royal Blossom, tr. idem, 1923).—CRITICISM: Ta prota kritika (1913); Pezoi dromoi (3 vols, 1929-32).—Apanta (16 vols, 1960-70).

G. K. Katsimbalis, Vivliografia K. P. (3 vols, 1942-43); K. Th. Dimaras, K. P. (1947); R. J. H. Jenkins, P. (1947); K. Tsatsos, P. (1949); P. Sherrard, The Marble Threshing-Floor (1956).

R.J.H.J. (P.O.A.S.)

Palárik, JÁN (*Raková 27 IV 1822; †Majcichov 7 XII 1870), Slovak dramatist. A follower of Štúr*, Palárik worked for the improvement of cultural standards among the Slovaks and for collaboration with progressive elements among the Hungarian bourgeoisie. His plays are important in the development of the Slovak theatre and give a lively picture of the nationally mixed society of the small towns of mid-19th-century Hungary.

Inkognito (1858); Drotár (1860); Zmierenie (1862).—Dielo (2 vols, 1955). R.A.

Palatine Passion (so named from the 14th-century MS in the Vatican Library), the earliest surviving French Passion Play, based on still earlier material (including particularly the Passion des Jongleurs, c. 1300, a narrative poem much utilized by the dramatists). It opens with Christ's entry to Jerusalem and contains a number of episodic scenes leading to the Crucifixion and finally the Resurrection. In outline it follows the New Testament account while expanding certain scenes and introducing others, such as a Harrowing of Hell and the forging of the nails for the cross. The versification (eight-syllable and 12-syllable lines in various rhyme-patterns) is skilfully suited to its themes. This vigorously realistic drama, most probably the work of a single author, conjectured to be a Burgundian, was no doubt intended for performance, but no records of this survive.

La Passion du Palatinus (ed. G. Frank, 1922). G.B.

Palau, BARTOLOMÉ (*Burbáguena, nr Teruel; fl. mid-16th century), Spanish dramatist. He wrote five plays, four of them religious. His play about St Orosia was the first play about Roderick the Goth to be acted in Spain. His style is old-fashioned, homely, effective at times, but diffuse.

A. Fernández Guerra, Caida y ruina del imperio visigótico español. Primer drama que las representó en nuestro teatro (1883); Farsa Salmantina (ed. A. Morel-Fatio in Bull. Hispanique, II, 1900); L. Rouanet, Colección de autos, farsas y coloquios del siglo XVI, III (1901) and ed., Farsa llamada Custodia del hombre (Paris, 1911).

J. P. W. Crawford, Spanish Drama Before Lope de Vega (1937). E.M.W.

Palazzeschi, ALDO (*Florence 2 II 1885), Italian poet and novelist. At first a 'crepuscular' poet (Gozzano*), then from 1909 to 1914 a Futurist—to which period belong some of his best poems—and subsequently a contributor to La Voce, Palazzeschi has belonged to a series of literary groups, but only in so far as they allow him scope for expressing his anti-traditionalism and following his own inclinations. Except perhaps in Le sorelle Materasse (1934), usually considered his best novel, and in the essays in Stampe dell'ottocento (1932), Palazzeschi, ironical and versatile, is primarily a satirist and a highly successful literary entertainer.

Tutte le novelle (1957); Opere giovanili (1958); Romanzi della maturità (1960); Il piacere della memoria (1965); Stefanino (1969).

G. Pullini, A. P. (1965).

B.M.

Palenario, AONIO, otherwise ANTONIO DELLA PAGLIA (*Veroli c. 1503; †Rome 3 VII 1570), Italian humanist, famous for his Latin poem De immortalitate animorum, for his 'Protestant' martyrdom, and for a book he never wrote—the Trattato utilissimo del beneficio di Gesù Cristo crocifisso verso i cristiani, long attributed to him, but in fact written by BENEDETTO OF MANTUA (fl. 1535–42).

De immortalitate animorum (3 books, 1536); Actio in pontifices romanos et eorum asseclas (1606); Opera (1696).

M. Young, The Life and Times of A. P. (2 vols, 1860); J. Bonnet, A. P. (1863); G. Morpurgo, Un umanista martire: A. P. e la riforma teorica italiana nel secolo XVI (1912). P.McN.

Palés Matos, LUIS (*Guayama, Puerto Rico 1898; †1959), lyrical poet who successfully exploited the African element in the Caribbean scene and folklore. He turned to the expression of African themes partly because of his disgust at the over-cerebralization of European culture.

Azaleas (1915); Tuntún de pasa y grifería (1937); Poesía 1915–56 (intro. F. de Onís, 1964).

E.Sa. (J.F.)

Paley, WILLIAM (*Peterborough VII 1743; ∞1776 Jane Hewitt, ∞1795 Miss Dobinson; †Lincoln 25 V 1805), English divine who won a brilliant success with his four works marshalling the arguments in defence of the evidence of Christianity against deists and expounding 18th-century utilitarian morality. R.M.H.

Principles of Moral and Political Philosophy (1785); Horae Paulinae (1790); View of the Evidence of Christianity (1794); Natural Theology, or Evidence of the Existence and Attributes of Deity (1802).—Complete Works (ed. with corresp. and life by R. Lynam, 4 vols, 1825).

G. W. Meadley, Life (1810); L. Stephen, History of English Thought in the 18th Century (2 vols, 1876). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Palgrave (originally COHEN), SIR FRANCIS (*London VII 1788; ∞1823 Elizabeth Turner; †ibid. 6 VII 1861), English historian, editor of a series of early records and writer of histories showing imaginative use of such records.

EDITED: Parliamentary Writs (1827–34); Wace: Le Romant des Ducs de Normandie (1828); Ancient Kalenders and Inventories of the Treasury (1836).—HISTORY: Truths and Fictions of the Middle Ages: the Merchant and the Friar (1837); History of Anglo-Saxons (1831); Rise and Progress of English Commonwealth (1832).—Collected Works (ed. R. H. I. Palgrave, 1919–22). R.M.H.

Palgrave, FRANCIS TURNER (*Great Yarmouth 28 IX 1824; ∞1862 Cecil Gaskell; †24 X 1897), English poet and critic, son of Sir Francis, Professor of poetry at Oxford and compiler of the Golden Treasury and other anthologies.

The Passionate Pilgrim (1858); Lyrical Poems (1871).—Golden Treasury (anthol.; 1861– ); Visions of England (1881); Landscape in Poetry (1897; Oxford lectures).

G. F. Palgrave, F. T. P. Memoir by his daughter (1899).—C. J. Palmer and S. J. Tucker, P. Family Memorials (with MS. notes by F. T. P.; 1878).

R.M.H.

Palingenio: see Manzoli, PIER ANGELO DE LA STELLATA.

Palitsyn, AVRAAMY (†1626), bursar of the Trinity monastery near Moscow and author of a remarkable description (written in 1620) of the 'troubled times' preceding the election of the first Romanov to the throne. His narrative is an effective blend of rhetoric and dramatic power.

S. Kedrov, A. P. (1880); S. Platonov, Drevne-russkie skazaniya i povesti o smutnom vremeni (2nd ed. 1913). J.L.

Palkovič, JURAJ (*Rimavská Baňa 27 IX 1769; †Bratislava 13 VI 1850), Slovak scholar and poet. He wrote in an archaizing Czech which made few concessions to the linguistic reformers in Bohemia or in Slovakia; but his influence on Slovak intellectual life was considerable.

Böhmisch-deutsch-lateinisches . . . Wörterbuch, I (Prague, 1820), II (Bratislava, 1821).—Múza ze slovenských hor (Vacov, 1801).

M. Vyvčjalová, J. P. (1968).

R.A.

Palladius (*Galatia 364; †before 431), Greek ecclesiastical writer; became monk in Egypt c. 388, Bishop of Helenopolis c. 400, exiled to Upper Egypt c. 404, later Bishop of Aspsina. He wrote the Lausiaca History, a collection of edifying stories of monks, a Dialogue on the Life of John Chrysostom, and perhaps a work On the Peoples of India and the Brahmins.

C. Butler, The Lausiaca History of P. (2 vols, 1898–1904; tr. W. K. L. Clarke, 1918); P. R. Coleman-Norton, Palladii Dialogus de vita S. Joannis Chrysostomi (1928; tr. H. Moore, 1921); C. Müller, 'Pseudo-Callisthenes' in F. Dübner, Arriani Anabasis et Indica (1846).

F. Aengenvoort, Der Dialog des P. (1913); R. Reitzenstein, Historia Monachorum und Historia Lausiaca (1916); C. Butler, 'Palladiana' in Jour. Theol. Stud., XXII (1921); P. R. Coleman-Norton, 'The authorship of the Epistola de Indicis gentibus et de bragmanibus' in Class. Philol., XXI (1926); R. Draguet, 'L'Histoire Lausiaque, une œuvre écrite dans l'esprit d'Évagre' in Rev. d'Hist. Ecclésiastique (1946–47); J. D. M. Derrett, 'The History of P. on the Races of India and the Brahmins' in Classica et Mediaevalia, XXI (Copenhagen, 1960).

R.B.

Palladius, PEDER (*Ribe 1503; ∞Kirstine Pedersdatter; †Copenhagen 3 I 1560), Danish divine and author. He became headmaster of Odense grammar school (1530), went to Wittenberg (1531) and after the Reformation became the first Lutheran Bishop of Zealand. His literary fame rests on his charming Visitatsbog, his private notebook containing his many speeches, the MS of which was found in 1866. Its vivid, unrestrained style has won its author fame as a master of the Danish language.

P. P.'s danske Skrifter (ed. L. Jacobsen, 5 vols, 1911–25); P. P.'s Visitatsbog (ed. H. Brix, 1927).—An Introduction into the Bookes of the Prophets and Apostles (tr. E. Vaughan, 1598).

A. C. L. Heiberg, P. P. (1840); G. Jørgensen, P. P. (1922).

E.B.

Palladius, RUTILIUS TAURUS AEMILIANUS (fl. ?A.D. 350), wrote an Opus agriculturae based upon Columella*, Gargilius Martialis, Vitruvius* and personal experience. He has no gift for prose style, but shows metrical skill in the 14th, the last book (in elegiacs).

J.A.W.

Ed. J. C. Schmitt (1898); Bk 14 in C. Wernsdorf, Poetae Latini minores, VI (1804).—J. Svennung, Untersuchungen zu P. (1935).

J.A.W. (J.D.)

Pallavicino, SFORZA PIETRO, CARDINAL (*Rome 18 XI 1607; †ibid. 5 VI 1667), Italian historian. His history of the Council of Trent, written by order of the Society of Jesus, tried to confute Sarpi's* history chapter by chapter. Its style lacks vigour.

Istoria del Concilio di Trento (1656–57; rev. ed. 1664; ed. F. A. Zaccaria, with imposing apparatus, 6 vols, 1792–97; mod. ed. G. Gambarin, 1935); Considerazioni sopra l'arte dello stile e del dialogo (1647); Della vita di Alessandro VII (1839–40).—Opere edite ed inedite (1844–48); sel. ed. M. Scotti (1962).

J. Le Noir, The New Politick Lights of modern Romes Church-Government (1678); I. Affò, Memorie della Vita e degli Studi del Card. S. P. (1794); L. Pallavicino-Mossi, S. P. (1933); H. Jedin, Der Quellenapparat der Konzils-geschichte P.s... (1940); F. Croce, 'I critici moderato-barocchi, III: S. P.' in Rassegna della lett. ital., LX (1956).

U.L.

Pallioppi, ZACCARIA (*Schlarigna 2 V 1820; †ibid. 3 V 1873), Ræto-Romansch poet and lexicographer. After legal studies he devoted himself to the study of his native language, the written form of which was decisively influenced by his dictionary and grammatical works. Orderliness and lucidity are the characteristics of his lyrics.

Poesias (1864–68).—Ortografia et ortoepia del idiom romauntsch d'Engiadin'ota (1857); Dizionario dels idioms romauntschs (ed. E. Pallioppi and F. Grand, 2 vols, 1895–1902).

A. Vital, 'Z. P.' in Annalas da la Soc. Rétorum., XV (1900); M. E. Maxfield, Studies in Modern Romansch Poetry in the Engadine (thesis, Radcliffe Coll. and Harvard Univ., 1938).

R.R.B.

Palm, JOHANNES HENRICUS VAN DER (*Rotterdam 17 VII 1763; ∞1786 Alida Bussingh; †Leiden 8 IX 1840), Dutch politician and scholar; Secretary of State for education. Was admired in his later life despite the opportunism in his character and style.

Het oorlog (verse; 1782).—Bijbel voor de jeugd (1811–34); Geschied en redekunstig gedenkschrift van Nederlands herstelling in den jare 1813 (1816); Bijbelvertaling (1818–30).

N. Beets, Leven en karakter van J. H. van der P. geschetst (1842; Life and Character, tr. J. P. Westervelt, 1865).

J.W.W.

Palma, RICARDO (*Lima 7 II 1833; †ibid. 6 X 1919), Peruvian author who evolved an original form of imaginative writing, a cross between cuadro de costumbres and realist historical reconstruction. Palma called this new genre the tradición. The first series were published in 1872 and thereafter he continued publishing them at intervals until 1910. Much of the material came from documents to which Palma had access in the National Library where he was made Director after the Chilean-Peruvian war. He also wrote historical books but in the Tradiciones he is interested in human behaviour which is basically similar in all periods of Peruvian history. The stories are ironic and humorous, written in a racy language, and show

Palma's life-long fascination with people's flaunting of moral codes and social conventions.

S. E. Leavitt, A Tentative Bibliography of Peruvian Literature (1932); Biblioteca de Cultura Peruana, XI (Cambridge, Mass., 1932); Tradiciones peruanas completas (Madrid, 1957).

J. M. Oviedo, Genio y figura de R. P. (Buenos Aires, 1968). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Palmblad, Vilhelm Fredrik (*Skönberga 16 XII 1788; †Uppsala 2 IX 1852), Swedish scholar, novelist, publisher and critic. He was lame from the age of 14, which turned him into an insatiable reader. He became Professor of Greek at Uppsala in 1835 and was a friend and collaborator of Atterbom*. From 1810 to 1836 he owned a printing press and book-shop at Uppsala and published many Romantic works and especially periodicals. He was a skilful conservative literary and political polemist, who attacked Almqvist's* Det går an. He translated and edited Aeschylus* and Sophocles*, wrote on Greek antiquities, on geography, ethnography and history, and composed a great part of a biographical lexicon.

CRITICISM: contributions to Fosforus (1810–13) and Poetisk Kalender (1811–21); Dialog över romanen (1812); Törnrosens bok, nämligen den äkta och veritabla (1840).—NOVELS: Vädelden (1812; contin. under other titles till 1818); Familjen Falkensvärd (1844–45); Aurora Königsmark (1846–49).—SHORT STORIES: Amala (1817); Holmen i sjön Dall (1819).

Autobiography in Svensk biografiskt lexicon, II (1845); P. A. Atterbom, 'V. F. P.' in Minnesanteckning och tal, II (1869); C. D. Marcus, V. F. P:s romantiska berättelser, 1812–19 (1908).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Palmer, Edward Vance (*Bundaberg, Queensland 28 VIII 1885; †Melbourne 1959), Australian novelist. His earlier works move in the settled circumstances that followed pioneer pastoral conditions. Later books have the regional colour of Queensland coastal township life. A cool approach which deprives some situations in the novels of their full effect, clarifies the descriptiveness of his short stories.

NOVELS: Men Are Human (1930); The Passage (1930); Daybreak (1932).—SHORT STORIES: Separate Lives (1931); Sea and Spinifex (1934); Let the Birds Fly (1957). F.T.M. (A.M.G.)

Palmieri, Matteo (*Florence 13 I 1406; †ibid. 13 V 1475), Italian politician and writer. His modest reputation derives from a moralizing dialogue and a didactic poem. The first, Della vita civile, is a treatise on good citizenship; the second, La città di vita, is a terza rima excursion into Elysium in imitation of Dante*.

Libro della vita civile (1529; ed. F. Battaglia, 1944); Libro del poema chiamato 'Città di vita' (ed. M. Rooke, 1927; Bk 1 and Bk 2 to ch. 15).

A. Messeri, 'M. P.' in Archivio storico ital, 5th ser., XIII (1894); V. Rossi, Il Quattrocento (1957). P.McN.

Palmotić, Junije (*Ragusa [Dubrovnik] 1607; †ibid. 1675), Ragusan poet and dramatist, member of a patrician family; studied classics, law and philosophy. His dramas in verse, with themes borrowed from classical and Italian literature transposed to Ragusan settings and embellished with music, are moralizing or patriotic in intention.

Kristiada (epic; 1670).—Djela (ed. R. Bogišić, 1965). V.J.

Palquiera, Shemto: see Falaguera, Shemto.

Pálsson, Gestur (*Miðhús, Reykhólasveit 25 IX 1852; †Winnipeg 19 VIII 1891), Icelandic short-story writer. A farmer's son, Pálsson spent some years in Copenhagen after leaving school. On his return to Iceland in 1882 he became a journalist, but his restless spirit soon tired of the restricted milieu of contemporary Reykjavík and in 1890 he left for Winnipeg where he became editor of the Icelandic weekly Heimskringla. As a writer he was a pioneer realist in Icelandic literature, motivated by a hatred of social injustice and sympathy for the oppressed; he can in many respects be compared with the Norwegian Alexander Kielland*. His early death deprived Icelandic letters of one of the most promising talents of the century.

SHORT STORIES: Kærlíksheimilið (1882); Hans Vöggur (1883); Uppreistin á Brekku (1883); Skjóni (1884); Sveitasæla (1885); Náttuglur (1885); Sagan af Sigurði formanni (1887); 'The Tale of Sigurdur the Fisherman' in Icelandic Poems and Stories, tr. M. Perkins, 1943; Þrjár sögur (1888).—Skáldrit sem til eru eftir G. P. (ed. J. Ólafsson, 1902); G. P., Rit hans í bundnu og óbundnu máli (1902); Ritsafn (1927; 2nd ed. 1952).

G. Brandes in Samlede Skrifter, III (1900); S. S. Höskuldsson, G. P. (2 vols, 1965).

R.G.P. (P.G.F.)

Paludan, Stig Henning Jacob Puggaard (*Copenhagen 7 II 1896; ∞1943 Vibeke Holck), Danish novelist and essayist. After a period as pharmacist in Danish provincial towns he went to Ecuador, and later to New York. His first books were meant as a warning against materialistic 'Americanism'. His chief novel cycle, Jørgen Stein (2 vols, 1932–33; Eng. tr. C. Malmberg, 1966), depicts Denmark at the outbreak of the First World War, a deeply pessimistic novel, in which he scourges his countrymen for their materialism and lack of morals. In most of his novels—of which several are suggestive of Aldous Huxley*—he has analysed the unhealthy post-war period; he is a keen observer with a sense for precise psychological detail. His psychological, poetical and philosophical essays are artistically among the best in contemporary Danish letters.

NOVELS: Søgelys (1923); En Vinter lang (1924); Fugle omkring Fyret (1925; Birds Around the Light, tr. G. I. Colbron, 1928); Markerne modnes (1927).—ESSAYS: De vestlige Veje (1922); Feodor Jansens Jeremiader (1927); Aaret rundt (1929); Tanker og Bagtanker (1927); Som om intet var hændt (1938); Søgende Aander (1943); Mit Kaktusvindue (1944); Landluft (1944); Prosa (1946); Facetter (1947); Bøger paa min Vej (1947); Skribenter paa Yderposter (1949); Retur til Barndommen (1951); Fremad til Nutiden (1953); Landeveje og Tankeveje (3 vols, 1963).—VERSE: Urolige Sange (1923).

S. Hallar, J. P. (1927); Orla Lundbo, J. P. (1943); T. Hansen, Minder svøbt i Vejr (1947); E. Frederiksen, J. P. (1966). E.B.

Paludan-Müller, FREDERIK (*Kerteminde 7 II 1809; ∞1838 Charité Louise Philippa Borch; †Copenhagen 28 XII 1876), Danish poet. He took a law degree at Copenhagen in 1835, but had already made his literary début. His early poetry was in the style of Heine* and Byron*, but he turned his back on his youthful idols, eventually becoming a hermit and an uncompromising moralist whose philosophy was that of renunciation, condemning the lack of discipline and will-power and the superficiality of the Danish character.

Paludan-Müller's greatest contribution to Danish literature is his verse novel Adam Homo, an epic in 12 cantos, which includes the Alma Sonnets, the only sonnet cycle of any importance in Danish literature. Several of his long epic poems have subjects taken from Greek mythology; in these poems he condemns the world and the flesh. A constantly recurring theme in his poetry is death, for death in blind obedience to God meant for him the liberation of the soul from the vanity and sin of the world.

Raab til Polen (1831); Fire Romanzer (1832); Dandserinden (1833); Amor og Psyche (1834); Poesier (2 vols, 1836–38); Trochæer og Jamber (1837); Venus (1841); Adam Homo (3 vols, 1841–48); Tithon (1844); Dryadens Bryllup (1844); Abels Død (1844); Luftskipperen og Aitheisten (1852); Tre Digte (1854); Nye Digte (1861); Paradiset (1862); Adonis (1874).—PROSE: Ungdomskilden (1865; The Fountain of Youth, tr. H. W. Freeland, 1867); Ivar Lykkes Historie (3 vols, 1866–73).—Poetiske Skrifter (8 vols, 1878–79); Poetiske Skrifter (ed. C. Petersen, 3 vols, 1909).

E. Gosse, Studies in the Literature of Northern Europe (1879); G. Brandes, Eminent Authors of the 19th Century (1880); F. Lange, F. P.-M. (1899); V. Andersen, P.-M. (2 vols, 1910); H. Martensen-Larsen, P.-M. og Martensen (1923) and Den virkelige P.-M. (1924); Breve (ed. idem, 1928); M. Haugsted, F. P.-M.'s prosaiske Arbejder (1934);

J. G. Robertson, Essays and Addresses on Literature (1935); S. Kühle, F. P.-M. (2 vols, 1941–42). E.B.

Pan CHAO (□An-ling c. 50; †c. 120), Chinese writer. Pan, sister of Pan* Ku, was commanded by Emperor Ho (89–105) to complete her brother's Han shu after his death in 92. The extent of her work therein is not clear. A short moralistic work, Nü-chieh ('Lessons for Women') and a number of poems are extant under her own name.

N. L. Swann, Pan Chao: Foremost Woman Scholar of China (1932; incl. tr. of all extant works). A.R.D.

Pan Ku (□An-ling 32; †Lo-yang 92), Chinese historian and poet. Pan's father, Pan Piao, left unfinished at his death (54) a continuation of Ssü-ma* Ch'ien's Shih-chi. Pan undertook the completion of this work, which became his famous Ch'ien-Han shu, the first history of a separate dynasty. During Emperor Ming's reign (58–75) he was accused of 'as a private person, rewriting the national history' and imprisoned. However, when the emperor was shown his writings he gave him an official historical post. Later he was ordered to continue his own history which he is said to have completed c. 80 after 20 years' work, though further revision and addition was made by his sister, Chao. He was also commanded to compile a report of the Po-hu kuan discussion of the classics (79) but it is doubted whether the present Po-hu t'ung-i is his original work. Of his extant fu-poems, Liang-tu fu, while owing much in thought and language to Ssü-ma* Hsiang-ju, displays great formal perfection and was itself a model for imitation.

HISTORY: Ch'ien-Han shu (Chs 1–12 and 99, The History of the Former Han Dynasty, tr. H. H. Dubs, 3 vols, 1938–55).—FU-POETRY: Liang-tu fu ('Le "Fou" des Deux Capitales', tr. G. Margouliès in Le "Fou" dans le Wen-Süan, 1925); Yu-t'ung fu (tr. E. von Zach in Die chinesische Anthologie, I, Harvard, 1958); Ta-pin hsi.—MISCELLANEOUS: Po-hu t'ung-i (Po Hu Tung: The Comprehensive Discussions in the White Tiger Hall, tr. Tjan Tjoe Som, 2 vols, 1949–52); T'ien-yin (tr. E. von Zach, op. cit., II).

N. L. Swann, Pan Chao: Foremost Woman Scholar of China (1932); E. R. Hughes, Two Chinese Poets: Vignettes of Han Life and Thought (1960). A.R.D.

P'an YÜEH or P'AN YO (□Chung-mou 247; †300), Chinese poet. P'an rose to be a Grand Counsellor but was executed on a false charge of rebellion. As a poet, he is best known for his moving poems of grief for his wife. He often appears as a character in later fiction and plays because of his unusually handsome appearance.

Tr. of poems preserved in the anthology Wên-hsüan in E. von Zach, Die chinesische Anthologie (2 vols, Harvard, 1958). A.R.D.

Panaetius (*c. 185; †109 B.C.), Greek philosopher. He was a pupil at the Stoic school at Athens, visited Rome and became a friend of P. Scipio Aemilianus, and spent the last 20 years of his life as head of the Stoa. The hard core of Stoicism was considerably modified by him to include some elements of Aristotelianism and a stronger emphasis on the duties of a man towards others. His work was used by Cicero* in his philosophical writings: only a few fragments now remain.

M. van Straaten, Panétius, sa vie, ses écrits et sa doctrine avec une édition des fragments (1946).—M. Pohlenz, Die Stoa (2 vols, 1948). D.J.F.

Panduro, LEIF (*Frederiksberg 18 IV 1923; ∞1948 Esther Larsen), Danish novelist and playwright, a disillusioned iconoclast, but a great humorist.

NOVELS: Av, min Guldland (1957); Rend mig i Traditionerne (1958); De uanstændige (1960); Øgledage (1961); Fern fra Danmark (1963); Fejltagelsen (1964); Den gale Mand (1965); Vejen til Jylland (1966); One of Our Millionaires Is Missing, tr. C. Malmberg, 1967).—PLAYS: Lollipop og andre Spil (1966); Farvel, Thomas og andre TV-Spil (1968); Daniels anden Verden (1970); Vinduerne (1971).

Th. Bredsdorff, Sære Fortællere (1967). E.B.

Pandurović, SIMA (*Belgrade 15 IV 1883; †ibid. 27 VIII 1960), Serbian critic, translator and poet. The subjects of his poems are sombre, but treated with calm objectivity.

Dani i noći (poems; 1912); Stihovi (1921); Razgovori o književnosti (1927); Pesme (sel. poems; 1959); Stihovi i proza (1965).

Miodrag Protić, S. P. (1964). V.J.

Pané, ARMIJUN: see INDONESIAN AND MALAYSIAN LITERATURES.

Panegyrici Latini, a collection of writers of encomia upon Emperors, all dating from 289–389, except Pliny* the younger, whose panegyric on Trajan comes first. The most important are Drepanius on Theodosius, Mamertinus on Julian, and Nazarius on Constantine. The speeches are well-written and historically valuable, but repel by their grotesque adulation.

Eds: W. Baehrens (1911); R. A. B. Mynors (1964).

R. Pichon, Les derniers écrivains profanes (1906); W. S. Maguiness, 'Some methods of the Latin Panegyricists' in Hermathena, XLVII (1932) and 'Locutions and formulae of the Latin Panegyricists', ibid., XLVIII (1933). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Panero, LEOPOLDO (*Astorga 1909; †ibid. 27 VIII 1962), Spanish poet whose first book, Escrito a cada instante, appeared in 1949, and who in 1953 published Canto personal, a reply to Neruda's* Canto general.

Poesía (1963).—L. P. Connolly, L. P.: la poesía de la esperanza (1969). J.E.V.

Panfërov, FËDOR IVANOVICH (*1896), Soviet author whose long novel, Bruski (4 vols, 1931–37), was one of the most discussed Five-Year-Plan novels at the time. Later it was attacked, notably by Gorky* himself, for its bad craftsmanship. Panfërov's two war novels, Bor'ba za mir (1945–47) and its sequel V strane pobezhdënnnykh (1948), abound in too many artificial contrivances to be quite convincing.

Bol'shoe iskusstvo (1954); Volga-Matushka reka (1958).—Bruski (partial tr. Z. Mitrov and J. Tabrisky, 1930; 4th part tr. S. Garry as And Then the Harvest, 1939); Svoimi glazmi (1942); With Their Own Eyes, tr. anon., 1942).

B. Y. Brainina and A. M. Drozdov, F. P. (1964); A. Stognut, F. P. (1969). J.L.

Panigarola, FRANCESCO (*Milan 6 I 1548; †Asti 31 V 1594), Italian orator and writer. Celebrated as a preacher, he also wrote various theological works and a manual of sacred rhetoric. His oratorical style foreshadowed secentismo.

Modo di comporre una predica (1584); Cento ragionamenti sopra la passione di Nostro Signore (1585); Il Predicatore (1609).—L. Amato, 'P. F. P.' in Frate Francesco, VII (1934). P.McN.

Pāṇini (fl. c. 5th century B.C.), Sanskrit grammarian whose Aṣṭādhyāyī is assumed, through its excellence, to have superseded all previous works in the field of vyākaraṇa (grammar), none of these having survived. The Aṣṭādhyāyī contains about 4,000 aphorisms describing the entire Sanskrit language together with sections on the older Vedic language. J.E.B.G.

Panizzi, ANTONIO [SIR ANTHONY] (*Brescello, Modena 16 IX 1797; †London 8 IX 1879), Italian patriot and scholar. Exiled in 1821, Panizzi arrived in England in 1823, and, after some years of lecturing, embarked on a career as librarian at the British Museum, where he was head librarian from 1856 to 1866, increasing the number of books held from 260,000 to 1,500,000 and providing a complete catalogue of books (LIBRARY). He also edited the Orlando Innamorato and Orlando Furioso (with an English introduction to the Italian romantic epic, following up Foscolo's* ideas) in 1830, as well as Boiardo's* lyric poetry (1835).

Cenni intorno alla mia vita ufficiale in Inghilterra (1875); Le prime vittime di Francesco IV, Duca di Modena (1897).—C. Brooks, A. P., Scholar and Patriot (1931); M. Wicks, The Italian Exiles in London 1816-48 (1937). J.G.-R.

Pann, ANTON (*Sliven, Bulgaria c. 1794; †Bucharest 1854), Rumanian folk-lorist and musician. His family moved to Rumania and settled in 1812 in Bucharest, where Anton studied Church music, becoming one of its finest exponents. He published a number of service books with the Greek musical notation adapted to the Rumanian text. He is chiefly remembered for his collection of folk-songs and tales, among them Povestea vorbii (1847), a large collection of proverbs ingeniously linked to one another and culminating in a tale exemplifying the proverb. Fabule și istorioare (1839-41) is a collection of short popular stories in rhyme, while Cîntece de lume (1831) contains a number of Christmas carols, set to music by Pann himself. In Spitalul amorului (1850-53) he presents the first collection of popular songs in Rumanian.

Povestea vorbit (1967).—P. Cornea, A. P. (1964); G. Călinescu, Istoria literaturii române, compendiu (3rd ed., 1968); Istoria literaturii române, II (1968). D.J.D.

Panneton, PHILIPPE, pseud. RINGUET (*Trois Rivières, Quebec 30 IV 1895; †Portugal 1960), Canadian novelist and story writer. After practising as a doctor and teaching medicine at l'Université de Montréal, he was appointed Canadian ambassador to Portugal in 1956. He is renowned for his first novel, Trente arpents (1938; Thirty Acres, tr. F. and D. Walter, 1940), dealing with the disintegration of the rural tradition of life in Quebec with the coming of industrialization and urbanization. This prize-winning novel marked the climax of the literary school of the 'roman de terroir'—novel of the soil—in Canada.

Fausse monnaie (1947); Le poids du jour (1949).—L'héritage et autres contes (stories; 1946).—NON-FICTION: Un monde était leur empire (1943); L'amiral et le facteur (1954); Confidences (1965).

F. Magnan, Bio-bibliographie du docteur P. (1942); J. P. Pinsonneault, 'L'œuvre de R.' in Lectures, IX (1953); W. M. Miller, 'R. French-Canadian novelist' in Books Abroad, XXVI (1952). R.Su.

Panormita: see Beccadelli, ANTONIO.

Panova, VERA FĖDOROVNA (*1905; †1973), Soviet author, each of whose three novels, Sputniki (1946; The Train, tr. E. Manning and M. Budberg, 1948), Kruzhilikh (1947; The Factory, tr. M. Budberg, 1949; Looking Ahead, tr. D. Skvirsky, 1964) and Yasny bereg (1949) was awarded a Stalin prize.

Vremena goda (1953; Span of the Year, tr. V. Traill, 1957); Time Walked (tr. of Serēzha; 1957); Yevdokia (tr. F. Katzov, 1964); Serēzha. Valya (New York, 1964); Pogovorim o strannos- tyakh lyubvi, pyesy (1968); Sentimental'ny roman (1968).

L. Ploshkin, Tvorchestvo Very Panovoy (1962); Z. Boguslavskaya, V. P. (1963); A. A. Ninov, V. P. (1964). J.L.

Panuccio dal Bagno (*c. 1230; †c. 1275), Italian poet. He used mostly the canzone form, with a strong ethical content; following in this respect, and also in his knotty muscular style, the example of his master Guittone* d'Arezzo. He is the most notable Pisan rimatore of his century.

Rimatori siculo-toscani del Duecento (ed. A. Parducci and G. Zaccagnini, 1915); Poeti del Duecento, I (ed. G. Contini, 1961).—E. Cristiani, 'I dati biografici... dei rimatori pisani del Duecento' in Studi mediolatini e volgari, III (1955). K.F.

Panziera, UGO (*Prato c. 1260; †Tartary c. 1330), Italian religious writer. Life obscure; a Franciscan lay brother, he spent many years in the Orient. Panziera wrote Laudi, Lettere spirituali and numerous Trattati in the vernacular.

Laudi (ed. V. Di Benedetto, 1962); Mistici del Duecento e del Trecento (ed. A. Levasti, 1935); Prosatori minori del Trecento (ed. G. De Luca, 1954).

G. Petrocchi, 'Poesia di U. da Prato' in Ascesi e mistica trecentesca (1957); M. Petrocchi, 'Scrittori di pietà... del Trecento' in Archivio storico ital., CCCCLIII (1967). M.W.

Panzini, ALFREDO (*Senigallia 31 XII 1863; †Rome 10 IV 1939), Italian novelist and scholar. Panzini's exceptionally large literary output (more than 40 volumes) can be classified under three main headings: narrative prose, philological and historical studies, and children's books. His shrewdness and wit, sometimes ironical, make him an amusing and popular satirist, although he avoids major issues.

NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: La lanterna di Diogene (1907); Il mondo è rotondo (1921); Il padrone sono me (1922); La pulcella senza pulcellaggio (1925); La sventurata Irminda (1932); Il bacio di Lesbia (1937);

G. De Rienzo, A. P. (1968). J.F.C. (B.M.)

Pao CHAO (□Tung-hai c. 420; †466), Chinese poet. Pao had an active political and military career; he was killed by rebellious troops. The outstanding poet of his generation, he possessed simplicity and imagination. About 200 of his poems have survived, of which nearly half are song-words, and, of these, an unusual number are in the seven-word metre.

Pao Ts'an-chün chi (coll. works; sel. trs in: G. Margouliès, Anthologie raisonnée de la littérature chinoise, 1948; E. von Zach, Die chinesische Anthologie, 2 vols, Harvard, 1958; J. D. Frodsham and Ch'eng Hsi, An Anthology of Chinese Verse, 1967).

J. D. Frodsham, 'The nature poetry of Pao Chao' in Orient/West, VIII.6 (1963). A.R.D.

Paolieri, FERDINANDO (*Florence 2 V 1878; †ibid. 10 V 1928), Italian novelist and playwright. Paolieri's staunch Roman Catholicism is the main-spring of his work. He is an interesting regional writer, albeit of limited range. His popular comedy, I pateracchio (1910), is written in Tuscan dialect.

NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: Novelle toscane (1914); Natio Borgo Selvaggio (1922); I fuggiaschi (1924); Amor senz'ali (1928).—La mistica fiamma (play; 1926). J.F.C. (B.M.)

Papadat-Bengescu, HORTENSIA (*Ivești 1876; †1955), Rumanian authoress. Her novels and stories marked a new departure in Rumanian literature by portraying a cosmopolitan society of prosperous middle-class people, many of them parvenus, living in an urban setting. Although sometimes gushing in tone and slipshod in expression, they show considerable powers of observation and analysis—especially of pathological states.

Ape adinci (1919); Sfinxul (1920); Bătrînul (comedy; 1920); Femeia în fața oglinzii (1921); Balaurul (1923); Romanță provincială (1925); Fecioarele despletite (1926); Desenuri tragice (1927); Concert din muzică de Bach (1927); Drumul ascuns (1933); Logodnicul (1935); Rădăcini (1938).

G. Ibrăileanu, Profiluri (1920); E. Lovinescu, Critice, VII (1922); M. Ralea, Perspective (1928); G. Călinescu, Istoria literaturii române (1941); Valeriu Ciobanu, H. P.-B. (1965). F.J.B.

Papadiamantis, ALEXANDROS (*Skiathos 4 III 1851; †ibid. 3 I 1911), Greek short-story writer. Son of a priest and himself deeply religious, Papadiamantis wrote his stories out of his intimate experience of his island world, expressing through them his sense of the spiritual inheritance of the Greek people so threatened by modern civilization and 'progress'. His depiction of this world in all its aspects combined with his powerful lyric gift make him the outstanding Greek prose-writer of his time.

Ta apanta (ed. G. Valetas, 6 vols and suppl., 1954–62).—G. Katsimbalis, Vivliografia A. P. (1934; suppl. 1938). P.O.A.S.

Pape, JOSEPH (*Eslohe 4 IV 1831; †Büren, nr Paderborn 16 V 1898), Westphalian epic poet and short-story writer. He tried, like W. Hertz and W. Jordan, to retell medieval subjects in modernized form, but, because of his fanciful romanticism, with less success. His homely short stories, written with good psychological insight, were locally popular.

VERSE: Der getreue Eckart (1854); Schneewittchen vom Gral (1856); Das Lied von der Welt Zeiten (1885).—Gedichte (1857).—In'm Siuerlanne (short stories; 1878). G.C.

Paperna, ABRAHAM YAAKOV (*Kopil 30 VIII 1840; †Odessa 18 II 1919), Hebrew essayist and poet. His pamphlet on literary criticism, Kankan Yashan Male Chadash (Vilna, 1867), attracted great attention from all contemporary progressive Hebrew writers, and in 1867 his second book of criticism on drama appeared. He adopted the realistic aesthetic approach to poetry of the Russian critic Belinsky*. Paperna was also the first to recognize Tchernichowsky* as a great poet on the appearance of his first book, although his poems were somewhat strange to the Hebrew spirit.

Kol Kitvei A. Y. P. (1952).

S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Papini, GIOVANNI (*Florence 9 I 1881; ∞1907 Giacinta Giovagnoli; †ibid. 8 VII 1956), Italian novelist, poet and critic. He founded the review Leonardo, published from 1903 to 1907, and in 1908 joined the staff of La Voce, founded by Prezzolini*. In 1913 he joined the Futurist movement and with Soffici* founded Lacerba, published until 1915. In 1920 he was converted to Catholicism, which then became, with patriotism, the main-spring of his work. At this time he wrote his famous Storia di Cristo (1921; The Story of Christ, tr. M. Prichard Agnetti, 1923), and became co-editor of Il Frontespizio in 1929. A widely-read autodidact with a keen sense of curiosity and discovery, Papini was intolerant, inclined to be polemical, and became famous for his devastating reviews, published in book form in Stroncature (1916). His love of controversy limited the value of many of his critical writings but made him an influential figure in the eyes of young writers in the early decades of this century.

POETRY: Opera prima (1917); Pane e vino (1926).

—NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: Il tragico quotidiano (1903); Un uomo finito (1912; A Man—Finished, tr. M. Prichard Agnetti, 1924); Gog (1931).—ESSAYS AND CRITICISM: Storia della letteratura italiana (1937); Il diavolo (1953); Giudizio universale (1957).—CORRESPONDENCE: G. P., G. Prezzolini. Storia di un'amicizia (2 vols, 1966–68).—Tutte le opere (10 vols, 1958–66).

R. Ridolfi, Vita di G. P. (1957); V. Vettori, G. P. (1967). B.M.

Pappenheim, SOLOMON (*Zülz 2 II 1740; †Breslau 4 III 1814), Hebrew poet and philologist. He wrote many controversial works in German against the reforms in the Jewish divine service. His small Hebrew pamphlet Agadat Arbah Kossot (Berlin, 1790) is a sentimental elegy on the futility of all human life, obviously influenced by Edward Young's* Night Thoughts.

Yaeriot Shlomo (3 vols, 1790-96).

S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Paracelsus, PHILIPPUS AUREOLUS THEOPHRASTUS, originally THEOPHRAST BOMBAST VON HOHENHEIM (*nr Einsiedeln 10 II 1493; †Salzburg 24 IX 1541), Swiss physician. He studied in Ferrara, became town physician in Basle (1526), where he was the first to lecture in German, and wandered throughout Germany and south-eastern Europe until his death. Doctor, alchemist and mystic, the founder of modern pharmacology and psychiatry, Paracelsus rejected the old Galeno-Arabic system and sought in nature remedies for each individual illness. In his theological works he expressed non-sectarian ideas of Christian communism based on the ideal of poverty and his mystical ideas influenced such thinkers as Kepler and Jakob Böhme*. His voluminous, complicated, often barely intelligible writings were, with the exception of Die grosse Wundarznei (1537), published posthumously.

Das Buch Paragranum (ed. F. Strunz, 1903); Opus Paramirum (ed. idem, 1904; ed. J. Achelis, 1928); Über die unsichtbaren Krankheiten (ed. R. Koch and E. Rosenstock, 1923); Sieben Defensionen (ed. H. Sigerist, 1928).—The secrets of physick and philosophy (tr. J. Hester, 1633).—Sämtliche Werke (ed. K. Sudhoff and W. Matthiessen, 14 vols, 1922-23); Sämtliche Werke (abr. ed. J. Strebel, 3 vols, 1946); Selected Writings (ed. J. Jacobi, tr. N. Gutermann, 1951); Sämtliche Werke (ed. K. Goldammer, 1952 ff.).

Biogs by: A. M. Stoddart (1915); J. M. Stillmann (1922); F. Gundolf (2nd ed. 1928); F. Strunz (2nd ed. 1937); W. E. Peuckert (1941); J. Hargrave (1951).—K. Sudhoff, Bibliographia Paracelsica (1894); Acta Paracelsica (1930 ff.); E. H. Reclam, Die Gestalt des P. in der Dichtung (1939); C. G. Jung, Paracelsica (1942); Nova Acta Paracelsica (4 vols, 1944-47); R.-H. Blaser, Paracelse et sa conception de la nature (1950); K. Goldammer, P.-Studien (1954); K. H. Wiemann, 'Die P.-Lit. seit Kriegsende' in Dt. Vierteljahrschrift, XXXIV (1960).—LITERARY TREATMENT: Robert Browning, P. (1835); E. G. Kolbenheyer, P.—Roman (3 vols, 1917-26). D.G.D.

Paradijs, CORNELIS: see Eeden, FREDERIK WILLEM VAN.

Parañcōti, 16th-century author of Tiruvilāyāṭar-purāṇam, which gives the purāṇa, or legendary history, of the famous temple of Shiva and Miṇākṣi at Madurai. It recounts the divine amusements of the god, which range from assuaging the hunger of an excessively greedy dwarf who, as one of his attendants, was present at the god's marriage to Miṇākṣi, to humbling the pride of a Tamil poet who had condemned a poem given by Shiva to a fervent devotee as being in bad taste.

J.R.M.

Parandowski, JAN (*Lwów 11 V 1893), Polish author. He has written several charming essays on the ancient world and on European literature; in his novels he displays deep knowledge and great psychological insight. His style is clear and brilliant.

ESSAYS: Antinous w aksamitnym berecie (1921; as Król życia, 1930); Dwie wiosny (1927); Try znaki zodiaku (1938).—NOVELS: Eros na Olimpie (short stories; 1924); Król życia (1930); Niebo w płomieniach (1936); Dysk olimpijski (1933); The Olympic Discus, tr. A. M. Malecka and S. A. Walewski, 1939).—VARIOUS: Odwiedziny i spotkania (1934); Alchemia słowa (1950); Wspomnienia i sylwety (1960); Luźne kartki (1965).—Pisma wybrane (1955); Dzieła wybrane (1957).

S.S. (P.H.)

Pārati (BHĀRATI) (*1882; †1921), the principal Tamil poet of the nationalist period. In addition to his patriotic verse, he wrote a cycle of very beautiful poems about Krishna, Kaṇṇaṇ pāṭṭu.

J.R.M.

Paravicino y Arteaga, FRAY HORTENSIO FÉLIX DE (*Madrid 1580; †ibid. 1633), Spanish poet and dramatist. He was a Trinitarian Friar and a very famous preacher. He used an elaborate, Gongoristic style with obvious rhythms, antithesis and hyperbaton. He was a friend of many famous writers; El Greco painted his portrait. He publicly attacked Calderón* for a youthful escapade. His poems were published posthumously under the name FÉLIX DE ARTEAGA; with them is a court play, Gridonia o cielo de amor vengado.

Oraciones evangélicas y panegíricos funerales (1641); F. de Arteaga, Obras póstumas divinas y humanas (1641).

E. Alarcos in Rev. de Filol. Esp. (1937).

E.M.W.

Pardo Bazán, EMILIA, COUNTESS OF (*Corunna 16 IX 1851; ∞ José Quiroga; †Madrid 12 V 1921), Spanish novelist and critic, only child of the Count of Pardo Bazán. Her true master was the fine library of the family manor house where she spent her youth. She travelled extensively throughout Europe, was councillor for public education and Professor of Romance literature. She is generally credited with the introduction of French Naturalism into Spain. She certainly propagated its theories in La cuestión palpitante (1883) and other writings, but, as so often in Spanish literature, in practice French Naturalism blends in her novels with traditional Spanish realism, with costumbrismo, and realismo with the last traces of Romanticism. The results are excellent books on Galician rural life and customs (Los Pazos de Ulloa, 1886, and La madre naturaleza, 1887). Later she evolved towards neo-spiritualist novels: La quimera (1905) and La sirena negra (1908). With an excellent brain, witty and well-informed, she left good miscellaneous works (e.g. San Francisco de Asís) and drew attention to the importance of Russian novels (La revolución y la novela en Rusia, 1887). Her short stories (Cuentos de Marinada, 1892) are very fine.

Obras completas (43 vols, 1891–1926; 2 vols, 1947–48).—The Swan of Vilamorte (tr. M. J. Serrano, New York, n.d.); Russia, Its People and Its Literature (tr. F. H. Gardiner, Chicago, 1890); A Christian Woman (tr. M. A. Springer, New York, 1891); Homesickness (tr. M. J. Serrano, ibid., 1891); A Wedding Trip (tr. idem, ibid., 1891, Chicago, 1910); The Angular Stone (tr. idem, New York, 1892); Galician Girl's Romance (tr. idem, ibid., 1900); Mystery of the Lost Dauphin Louis XVII (tr. A. H. Seeger, ibid., 1906); Midsummer Madness (tr. A. Loring, ibid., 1907); Son of the Bondswoman (tr. Ethel H. Hearn, ibid. and London, 1908).

G. Brown, La vida y las novelas de Da. E. P. B. (1940); E. González López, E. P. B., novelista de Galicia (New York, 1944); L. Raño de Petracchi, La condesa P. B., su vida, su obra (1946); D. F. Brown, The Catholic Naturalism of P. B. (1957); C. Bravo-Villasante, P. B., vida y obra (1962); R. E. Osborne, E. P. B., su vida y sus obras (1964). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Parentucelli, TOMMASO (*Sarzana 15 XI 1397; †Rome 25 III 1455), Italian humanist. As NICHOLAS V, the first Renaissance Pope, he orientated the Papacy towards HUMANISM, patronized scholars, promoted architecture and virtually founded the Vatican library.

M. Creighton, A History of the Papacy, II (1882); L. Pastor, Geschichte der Päpste, I (7th ed. 1925); P. Paschini, Roma nel rinascimento (1940); E. Garin, L'umanesimo italiano (1958). P.McN.

Parini, GIUSEPPE (*Bosisio, Brianza 22/23 V 1729; †Milan 15 VIII 1799), Italian poet and prose writer. Priest; of country stock; a student in the Barnabite schools, Milan (1740–52). After the publication of Alcune poesie di Ripano Eupilino (1752), a collection of Arcadian verse, Parini entered the Milanese Accademia dei Trasformati (1753) and then lived as a tutor (1754–62) in the aristocratic household of Duke Gabrio Serbelloni. Later, enjoying the patronage of Count Firmian, the Austrian minister in Milan, he edited the Gazzetta di Milano (1768–69) and was then appointed Professor of eloquence in the Palatine schools (1769–99). Under the Cisalpine Republic Parini took part in the civil administration of the capital (1796), but he was soon dismissed by the French for his austerity and patriotism.

A moralist of outstanding artistic sensibility with an original appreciation of both classical literature and the Italian linguistic tradition, Parini wrote a notable series of sage and measured Odi (1757–95)—often Horatian in their studied felicity of expression—and Il Giorno, a long poem in versi sciolti in four parts: Mattino (1763), Mezzogiorno (1765), Vespro and Notte (posthumous; 1801). Many of the odes have social or civil themes (La salubrità dell'aria, L'educazione), others strike a more fervent, personal note (La caduta, Alla Musa). In the Giorno—a true social satire of the rights of blood springing from Parini's humane awareness of a scale of values inherent in the natural equality of men, the dignity of labour and of family life—Parini describes with minute particularity a day in the life of an effete Milanese nobleman and under the pretext of instructing him how to behave unmasks with masterly irony the vanity, profligacy and general futility of a whole social caste.

Other works include sonnets, epigrams and occasional verse, Ascanio in Alba (1771)—a fiesta teatrale in two acts, set by Mozart at the age of 15—and various prose discourses, including the Dialogo sopra la nobiltà (1757), a linguistic polemic Contro il Padre Branda (1760) and Dei principi delle belle lettere, lessons defining in classical terms the principles of art and literature.

Le Odi (ed. F. Salveraglio, 1882; ed. A. Bertoldi, 1911, rev. ed. R. Spongano, 1964); Il Giorno (ed. G. Albinì, 1907, rev. ed. M. Fubini, 1964; ed. A. Momigliano, 1925; tr. H. M. Bower, 1927).—Poesie (ed. E. Bellorini, 2 vols, 1929).—Prose (ed. E. Bellorini, 2 vols, 1913–15).—Poesie e prose (ed. L. Caretti, 1951) and Il Giorno. Poesie e prose (1969); Opere (ed. G. Petronio, 1957); Opere, I: Il Giorno e le Odi, II: Poesie minori e prose (ed. G. M. Zuradelli, 2 vols, 1965).—Opere (ed. F. Reina, 6 vols, 1801–04); Tutte le opere (ed. G. Mazzoni, 1925).

E. Bellorini, La vita e le opere di G. P. (1918); G. Natali, G. P. uomo e poeta (1953); P. Giannantonio, G. P. (1963); A. Piromalli, G. P. (1966).—F. de Sanctis, 'G. P.' in Nuovi saggi critici (1879); G. Carducci, Il P. minore (1904) and Il P. maggiore (1907); D. Petrini, La poesia e l'arte di G. P. (1930); A. Momigliano, 'Il P. discusso' in Studi di poesia (1938); W. Binni, 'La sintesi pariniana' in Preromanticismo italiano (1948) and Classicismo e neoclassicismo (1963); R. Braccesi, Il problema del P. (1950; rev. ed. 1959); G. Bonalumi, P. e la satira (1958); G. Petronio, P. e l'illuminismo lombardo (1961); A. Vicinelli, Il P. e Brera (1963); G. Colicchi, Il 'Dialogo sopra la nobiltà' e la polemica sociale di G. P. (1965); N. Bonifazi, P. e 'Il Giorno' (1966); L. Poma, Stile e società nella formazione del P. (1967); G. Moncalero, L'insegnamento del P. (1968).—L. Caretti, P. e la critica (1953) and 'G. P.' in I classici italiani nella storia della critica, II (ed. W. Binni, 1955); G. Petronio, P., storia della critica (1957);

W. Binni and R. Scrivano, 'G. P.' in Introduzione ai problemi critici della letteratura italiana (1967).—G. Bustico, Bibliografia di G. P. (1929). M.W.

Paris: see Valerius Maximus, biblio.

Paris, GEOFFROI DE (?1317), French poet. He wrote a few political poems on the reigns of Philip IV and Louis X. An unfinished verse chronicle on the same period has been attributed to him.

Débat (ed. W. P. Shepard in Mélanges M. A. Jeanroy, 1928); Chronique métrique attribuée à G. de P. (ed. A. Diverres, 1956).

C. V. Langlois, 'Geoffroi des Nés ou de Paris' in Histoire littéraire de France, XXXV (1921). A.H.D.

Paris, MATTHEW (?1259), English chronicler and artist, monk at St Albans (1217), probably assisted Roger of Wendover with the St Albans' chronicle to 1235; afterwards expanded it. R.W.B.

English History . . . 1235 to 1273 (tr. J. A. Giles, 1852, repr. 1968); Historia Anglorum 1066–1253 (ed. F. Madden, 3 vols, 1866–69, repr. 1964); Gesta abbatum (of St Albans; ed. H. T. Riley, 3 vols, 1867–69); Chronica majora (incl. and continuing Wendover; ed. H. R. Luard, 7 vols, 1872–83, repr. 1964) and Flores historiarum (3 vols, 1890, repr. 1964; tr. J. A. Giles, 1894, repr. 1968).

F. M. Powicke, 'Notes on the . . . Chronica majora' in Mod. Philol., XXXVIII (1940–41); V. H. Galbraith, Roger Wendover and M. P. (1944); R. Vaughan, M. P. (1958).

R.W.B. (Tor.)

Parker, DOROTHY ROTHSCHILD (*West End, N.J. 22 VIII 1893; ∞1917 Edwin Parker II [o/o1928], ∞1933 Alan Campbell; †Manhattan, N.Y. 7 VI 1967), American humorist and short-story writer. One of the New York wits, she wrote satiric verses on the war of the sexes. Her stories show an ironic, corrosive touch.

VERSE: Enough Rope (1927); Death and Taxes (1931); Not So Deep As a Well (1936).—SHORT STORIES: Laments for the Living (1930); Here Lies (1939).—The Best of D. P. (1952); Ladies of the Corridor (1953).

J. Keats, You Might As Well Live (biog.; 1971). H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

Parker, MARTIN (*c. 1600; †1652), English balladist, foremost author of popular humorous ballads who c. 1638 became a fervent supporter of the monarchy, writing such ballads as 'When the King Enjoys His Own Again' (1643); in 1647 he turned to prose journalism.

Sel. in V. de S. Pinto and A. E. Rodway, The Common Muse (1957).

H. E. Rollins in Mod. Philol., XVI (1918–19), XIX (1921–22). R.M.W.

Parker, MATTHEW, Archbishop of Canterbury (*Norwich 6 VIII 1504; ∞24 VI 1547 Margaret Harlestone; †Lambeth 17 V 1575), English divine, Chancellor of the University of Cambridge who revived and stimulated Anglo-Saxon studies, preserved early chronicles, some of which he edited, and organized the translation of the Bible, undertaking much himself. B.L.J.

The Whole Psalter translated into English Metre (?1567); De Antiquitate Britannicae Ecclesiae Cantuariensis (1572; ed. S. Drake, 1729).—Correspondence (ed. J. Bruce and T. T. Perowne, 1853).

J. Strype, The Life and Acts of M. P. (1711); W. M. Kennedy, Life of M. P. (1908); V. J. K. Brook, A Life of Archbishop P. (1962; repr. 1965). B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Parker, THEODORE (*Lexington, Mass. 24 VIII 1810; ∞1837 Lydia Cabot; †Florence, Italy 10 V 1860), American clergyman. He was a scholar and a fiery practical reformer, especially in abolishing slavery. A Transcendentalist, he was considered by Emerson* one of the four great men of the age.

A Letter to the People of the United States Touching the Matter of Slavery (1848).—The Works of T. P. (ed. G. W. Cooke et al., 15 vols, 1907–13); T. P., an Anthology (ed. H. S. Commager, 1960).

J. Weiss, Life and Correspondence of T. P. (2 vols, 1864); D. B. Frothingham, T. P., a Biography (1874); H. S. Commager, T. P. (1936).

H.L.C. (I.W.)

Parkman, FRANCIS (*Boston 16 IX 1823; ∞1850 Catherine Bigelow; †Jamaica Plain, Mass. 8 XI 1893), American historian. The California and Oregon Trail (1849) tells of his adventures on a 1,700-mile horseback journey and of primitive Indian life.

Pioneers of France in the New World (1865); The Discovery of the Great West (1869); Montcalm and Wolfe (1884); A Half Century of Conflict (1892).—The Works of F. P. (12 vols, 1922).

C. H. Farnham, A Life of F. P. (1900); M. Wade, F. P., Heroic Historian (1942); H. N. Doughty, F. P. (1962). H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Parmenides (*c. 515 B.C.), Greek philosopher, founder of the Eleatic school. He wrote a poem in hexameter verse, of which fragments survive. The Milesian philosophers (Thales*, Anaximander*, Anaximenes*) had explained the world as a development out of a single 'stuff'. Parmenides shows that this is impossible: starting from the proposition 'the Real is', he shows that nothing can be said about the Real except that it is one, whole and changeless. So the changing world is 'unreal', illusory. This analysis of the verb 'to be' (in many ways the most important feature of pre-Socratic philosophy) forced later philosophers either to admit a plurality of original 'real' things (Empedocles*, Anaxagoras*, Democritus*) or to conceive a new, non-material, kind of 'being' (Plato* and Aristotle*).

H. Diels, Die Fragmente der Vorsokratiker, I (6th ed., 1951).

G. S. Kirk and J. E. Raven, The Presocratic Philosophers (1957); G. E. L. Owen, 'Eleatic questions' in Class. Quart., X (1960); L. Tarán, P. (1965); W. K. C. Guthrie, A History of Greek Philosophy, II (1965); A. P. D. Mourelatos, The Route of P. (1970). D.J.F.

Parmentier, JEAN (*Dieppe 1494; †1529), French explorer and poet. His first voyage was to Brazil (1520) and his last to Sumatra (1529) where he and his brother Raoul died of fever. He wrote rhetorical poems for competitions at Dieppe and Rouen (1511), a morality (1527), and a translation of Sallust's* Catiline (1528). His last poem—Traicté en forme d'exhortation—shows a brave thirst for exploration and a firm faith in God. His verses, inadequate in execution, are fresh with his sea-experiences.

Le discours de la navigation de J. et Raoul P. (ed. C. Schefer, 1883).

K. von Posadowsky-Wehner, J. P., Leben und Werk (1937); J. Lapp, 'An explorer poet: J. P.' in Mod. Lang. Quart., VI (1945). M.Y.

Parnell, THOMAS (*Dublin 1679; †Chester VII 1717), Irish poet; Archdeacon of Clogher 1705, member of the Scriblerus Club and friend of Swift* and Pope*, whom he helped translate Homer*. His poetry is of a very limited range, but fluent and marked by a feeling for nature.

Poems (ed. Pope, 1721); Works (1767).—O. Goldsmith, Life of T. P. (1770). E.T.W.

Parnicki, TEODOR (*Berlin 5 III 1908), Polish novelist. The leading Polish writer of historical fiction, he has renewed this genre by introducing entirely modern novelistic techniques and modern psychological and philosophical ideas. His ambitious and erudite work is highly complex and difficult to appreciate, which explains his lack of deserved international reputation. The novels are generally set in Hellenistic times or the Middle Ages, with special emphasis on cultures and people of mixed ethnical and religious background.

Aeczysz ostatni Rzymianin (1937); Srebrne orły (Jerusalem, 1943); Koniec Zgody Narodów (Paris, 1955); Twarz księżycy (3 vols, 1961–67); Tylko Beatrycze (1962); Nowa baśń (5 vols, 1962–68); Inne życie Kleopatry (1969).

T. Cieślakowska, Pisarstwo T. P. (1965).

P.H.

Parry, ÉVARISTE-DÉSIRÉ DE FORGES, VICOMTE DE

(*Réunion Island 6 II 1753; †Paris 5 XII 1814), French poet. With A. de Bertin and N. G. Léonard, Parry is numbered among the 'little poets' of the 18th century. His light love poetry has a conventional grace, a delicate sensuality and some wit, and though he owes much to the Greek elegiac poets and to the Swiss poet Gessner*, he has fallen into undeserved neglect. The young Lamartine* was his disciple. He also wrote burlesque anti-religious poems, as La Guerre des Dieux (1799).

Poésies érotiques (1778–84); Chansons madécasses (1787); Le Portefeuille volé (1805).—Œuvres complètes (5 vols, 1808); Œuvres (ed. A. J. Pons, 1862); A. Dumas, Anthologie des poètes français du 18e siècle (1934).

R. Barquissau, Les poètes créoles du 18e siècle (1949). G.B.

Parr, SAMUEL (*Harrow 26 I 1747; ∞1771 Jane Morsingale, ∞1816 Mary Eyre; †Hatton 6 III 1825), English educationist, clergyman and political writer, famous for vast erudition and forceful personality, whose learned writings have proved of no lasting interest.

Works (ed. J. Johnstone, 8 vols, 1828).

W. Field, Memoirs of S. P. (2 vols, 1828); E. H. Barker, Parriana (1828); T. De Quincey, 'Whiggism in its relation to literature' in Selections Grave and Gay, VI (1853–60); P. Colson, Their Ruling Passion... A Study in Egoism. Dr S. P. (1949); W. Derry, Dr P.; Portrait of the Whig Dr Johnson (1966). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Parra, TERESA DE LA, pen-name of ANA TERESA PARRA SANOJO (*1895; †1936), Venezuelan novelist who achieved remarkable success with two books of fictionalized memoirs. Ifigenia, subtitled Diario de una señorita que escribió porque se fastidiaba (Paris, 1924), was an account of a rather uncouth and rustic Caracas seen through the eyes of a Paris-educated young lady, and Las memorias de Mamá Blanca (Paris, 1929; Mama Blanca's Souvenirs, tr. H. de Onís, Washington, D.C., 1959) were nostalgic recollections of childhood spent in the Venezuelan countryside. E.Sa. (J.F.)

Parry, ROBERT WILLIAMS (*Tal-y-sarn, Caernarvon 1884; ∞1923 Myfanwy Davies; †Bethesda, Caernarvonshire 4 I 1956), Welsh poet; lecturer in Welsh, Bangor. His long poem in a bardic metre, 'Yr Haf' (1910), is one of the most memorable of all eisteddfod poems. His first published volume also contains sonnets, lyrics and a number of matchless englynion—memorial stanzas, most of them lamenting the loss of friends in the First World War. A haunting sadness pervades many of his sonnets and lyrics, but in his later poems, though there is the same poignant awareness of man's mortality, more vigorous rhythms appear, and while repudiating current ideas concerning the poet's function in society, he wrote with fierce indignation of certain contemporary happenings. The poet's vocation, as imaged in some of his finest poems, is to voice man's 'primal grief'.

Yr Haf a Cherddi Eraill (1924); Cerddi'r Gaeaf (1952).

D. Gwenallt Jones, 'Barddoniaeth Gynnar R. W. P.' in Llên Cymru, IV (1956-57); T. E. Parry, 'R. W. P.: Twf Cerddi...' in Ysgrifau Beirniadol, II (ed. J. E. C. Williams, 1966); B. L. Jones, R. W. P. (1972). B.Re.

Parry-Williams, SIR THOMAS HERBERT (*Rhyd-ddu, Caernarvon 21 IX 1887; †1942 Amy Thomas), Welsh poet and essayist; formerly Professor of Welsh at Aberystwyth. Apart from notable early works, his verse consists of sonnets and short unpretentious poems mostly in rhyming couplets. Both the unadorned rhythms of the couplets and the harmonious measure of the sonnets serve to give form to the poet's meditative comments on his experiences and on life in general. The integrity of his art is no less evident in his essays. His work shows a disposition to counter conventional attitudes with disparagement and irony; an interest in objects and experiences which are of an unearthly nature or which yield an unsuspected significance in retrospect; and a keen appreciation of the literary qualities latent in the spoken language.

Ysgrifau (1928); Cerddi (1931); Olion (1935); Synfyfyrion (1937); Lloffion (1942); O'r Pedwar Gwynt (1944); Ugain o Gerddi (1949); Myfyrdodau (1957); Pensynnu (1966).

T. J. Morgan, 'T. H. P.-W.' in Gwŷr Llên (ed. A. T. Davies, 1948); Cyfrol Deyrnged Syr T. P.-W. (ed. I. Foster, 1967); Dyfnallt Morgan, Rhyw Hanner Ieuencid (1971). B.Re.

Parun, VESNA (*Zlari, nr Šibenik 10 IV 1922), Croatian poetess. She studied at Zagreb and began publishing immediately after the war. Like Kaštelan*, her early poems were moving, patriotic dirges for her country and fallen comrades, but her poetry has developed enormously since this early post-war period. Heavily influenced by Tin Ujević*, she has nevertheless forged her own style of lyrical poetry of melancholy and nostalgia blending with a women's sensual imagery and personal symbolism in a highly original manner. Her most recent verse shows a more mature, intellectual but colder style.

VERSE: Zore i vihore (1947); Pjesme (1948); Crna Maslina (1955); Ropstvo (1957); Vidrama vjerna (1957); Pusti da otpočinem (1958); Koralj Vraćen moru (1959); Ti i nekad (1959); Kornjačin oklop (1959); Konjanik (1962); Jao jutro (1963); Bila sam dječak (1962); Vjetar Trakije (1964). B.J.

Paruta, PAOLO (*Venice 14 V 1540; †ibid. 6 XII 1598), Italian writer, sometime governor of Brescia, ambassador to Rome and procurator of St Mark. Of Guicciardini's* school, he continued Bembo's* Historiae in the Historia Vinetiana, and chronicled the war of Cyprus. Historian by appointment, politician by predilection, his histories reveal the Venetian statesman of the Discorsi politici. His dialogues are political, his Soliloquio autobiographical, and Machiavelli's* influence is apparent in all he wrote.

Historia Vinetiana (1605; sel. ed. G. Paladino, 1913); Opere politiche (ed. C. Monzani, 2 vols, 1852); Lettere inedite (ed. G. Biadego, 1885); La legazione di Roma (ed. G. de Leva, 3 vols, 1887); Discorsi politici (ed. G. Candeloro, 1943); 'Della perfezione' etc. in Scrittori politici del Cinquecento e del Seicento (ed. B. Widmer, 1964).

E. Zanoni, P. P. nella vita e nelle opere (1904); G. Candeloro, 'P. P.' in Rivista storica ital., 5th ser., I (1936); L. Tria, P. P.: l'uomo, lo scrittore, il pensatore (1941). P.McN.

Parvin I'tisāmi (*Tabriz 1906; †Tehran 17 IV 1941), Persian poet. Her Divān contains two main groups of poems: Qasā'id (odes), long contemplative and didactic poems, and Qata'āt, short poems, narrative in form, lyrical in tone and humane in outlook. These show Parvin at her best, in her sincere, unabating concern for the poor and downtrodden. In Qata'āt she frequently uses her favourite device of dramatizing her ideas in conversations between inanimate objects or animals. Parvin is one of the most outstanding and original modern Persian poets.

Divān (2nd ed. 1945).

E. Yarshater, 'Persian letters in the past fifty years' in Jour. Middle East. Affairs (Nov. 1960); J. Rypka, History of Iranian Literature (1968). E.Y.

Pascal, BLAISE (*Clermont-Ferrand 19 VI 1623; †Paris 19 VIII 1662), French writer. Pascal was the son of an erudite Auvergnat magistrate who, after losing his wife, moved to Paris (1631) and devoted himself to the education of Blaise and his two sisters Gilberte (later Mme Périer) and Jacqueline. Delicate and highly sensitive, the young Blaise showed a precocious genius for mathematics, invented and perfected a calculating machine (1642-52) and excelled as a geometer and physicist. In 1646 the whole family espoused Jansenism and began their connection with Port-Royal. After his father's death Pascal traversed a short period of 'worldly dissipation' (1652-54) which gave him, through the young Duc de Roannez and the Chevalier de Méré, an experience of aristocratic society and of the scepticism of the well-bred. After his 'night of ecstasy' (23 XI 1654) Pascal was finally converted and attached himself as a layman to Port-Royal, where Jacqueline had become a nun in 1652. To justify Antoine Arnauld*, accused in the Sorbonne of heretical tendencies, he wrote his 18 Lettres écrites par Louis de Montalte à un provincial de ses amis—the Provinciales or Provincial Letters (I 1656–III 1657). These defended, in easy and often witty prose, the Jansenist view of grace and attacked the Jesuits for an over-indulgent conception of morality. His second great work, Les Pensées, consists of notes for a justification of Christianity, planned at least by 1658 and unfinished at his death. His initial purpose was to convert the worldly unbeliever, but his jotted reflections are inexhaustibly rich in theological, philosophical and psychological suggestions. Numerous editors have tried to arrange the embryonic manuscript according to the conjectured tenor of Pascal's master-plan.

A mathematician, a mystic, an ascetic tortured by illness, Pascal combines in his writing an ever-present sense of eternity with a Cartesian thirst for order and an artist's feeling for the concrete detail.

Provinciales (ed. Z. Tourneur, 2 vols, 1944; ed. J. Steinmann, 2 vols, 1962); Pensées et opuscules (ed. L. Brunschvicg, 1904); Pensées (ed. F. Strowski, 1930; ed. Z. Tourneur, 1942; ed. L. Lafuma, 1948; ed. H. F. Stewart, with Eng. tr., 1950).—Œuvres (ed. L. Brunschvicg, P. Boutroux and F. Gazier, 14 vols, 1904–14; ed. J. Chevalier, 1936).

A. Maire, Bibliographie générale des œuvres de P. (5 vols, 1925–27).—J. Chevalier, P. (1922); L. Brunschvicg, P. (1932); H. F. Stewart, P.'s Apology for Religion (1942); J. Mesnard, P. L'homme et l'œuvre (1951); A. Antoine, Histoire de la littérature française au XVII<sup>e</sup> siècle (vol. 2, 1951); L. Goldmann, Le Dieu caché (1955; Eng. tr. P. Thody, 1964); A. J. Krailsheimer, Studies in Self Interest (1962); G. Brereton, Principles of Tragedy (1969).
G.B.

Pascal Chronicle (first half 7th century), a popular, unsophisticated Byzantine world chronicle stretching originally from Adam to 629 (it goes only to 627 in the MSS). The last part draws on contemporary evidence and is full of individuality.

Eds: W. L. Dindorf (1832); Migne, Patrologia Graeca, XCII (1860; both with Lat. tr.). J.M.H.

Pascarella, CESARE (*Rome 28 IV 1858; †ibid. 8 V 1940), Italian poet. Pascarella trained as a painter and often used the pseudonym of 'Pictor'. In 1881 he began to contribute to the reviews Cronaca Bizantina and Capitan Fracassa, publishing in the latter the first of the Roman dialect sonnets which made him famous. Protagonist of his scenes is the naïve man of the people, comic and tragic in turn.

VERSE: Villa Gloria (1886); La scoperta de l'America (1894); Storia nostra (1941; posth.).—PROSE: Prose (1880–1890) (1920); Taccuini (1961).

E. Bizzarri, C. P. (1941); F. Sarazani, Vita di C. P. (1957).
B.M.

Paschier de Fijne (*Leiden 1588; †Haarlem 1667), Dutch poet and pamphleteer, Remonstrant parson, removed and persecuted between 1619 and 1633, then parson at Haarlem. Although some of his poetry was included in Apollo's Harp (1658), he is best known for his pamphlets: Winterturf, Camper Steurtgen, Wittebrood voor de predikanten tot Campen.

J. van Vloten, P. de F. naar zijn Leven en Schriften (1853).
A.M.B.W.

Pascoais, TEIXEIRA DE, pseud. of JOAQUIM PEREIRA TEIXEIRA DE VASCONCELOS (*S. Gonçalo de Amarante 2 XI 1878; †14 XII 1952), Portuguese poet. From 1912 onwards, as director of the review A águia, he formulated his poetic and vaguely metaphysical doctrine of saudosismo, a blend of pantheism and the cult of the Portuguese sentiment of saudade ('yearning'). The movement, which has disturbing ideological and political overtones, was a form of mystical nationalism which has analogues in other countries at this period but also had roots deep in Portuguese tradition.

VERSE: Sempre (1897); Terra proibida (1899); Jesus e Pan (1903); Vida etérea (1906); Sombra (1907); Maranos (1911); Regresso ao paraíso (1912).—Obras completas (7 vols, 1965).—PROSE: O espírito lusitano e o saudosismo (1912); O génio português na sua expressão filosófica, poética e religiosa (1913); Verbo escuro (1914).

J. do Prado Coelho in A poesia de T. de P.—ensaio e antologia (1945); F. da Cunha Leão and A. O'Neill, Antologia poética de T. de P.; G. Batelli, T. de P. (1953); A. Margarido, T. de P. (1961).
T.P.W.

Pascoli, GIOVANNI (*San Mauro di Romagna 31 XII 1855; †Castelveccchio di Barga 6 IV 1912), Italian poet and scholar. Before Giovanni was 12, his father, a manorial bailiff, was assassinated. Giovanni's mother and several brothers and sisters died soon after. Giovanni studied under Carducci* at Bologna and was imprisoned after taking part in a socialist demonstration. Thereafter he had a respectable and uneventful academic career and finally succeeded Carducci.

Pascoli's interpretation of Dante* never won favour, but his poetry marks a turning-point in Italian literature. He abandons the public voice of Italian poetry for an inner voice which combines 'unrehearsed' speech, or even the unspoken word, with refined preciousness. The nature lyrics of Myricae (1891–1903), the rustic scenes and the quasi-Symbolist parables of the two books of Poemetti (1897–1909), the Canti di Castelveccchio (1903–12), and the highly original interpretations, in narrative form, of the Hellenic world of Poemi conviviali (1904–05) all show an acute nature-sensibility and a morbid fascination with death and mystery and man's sense of helplessness. His poetry of the irrational is poised between reality and dream, the tiny and the immense, concrete and abstract, existence and non-existence. In his essay 'Il Fanciullino' (1897) Pascoli developed Plato's* image of the poet as a child, and indeed his poetry often suffers from a childish emotionalism and false naivety.

His later poetry is more ambitious and less successful. The patriotic and humanitarian message predominates. His excellent Latin Carmina won him 13 gold medals of the Dutch Royal Academy.

Pensieri e discorsi (1907); Poesie (1948); Carmina (1951); Scritti danteschi (1952).

Maria Pascoli, Lungo la vita di G. P. (1961); P. Mazzamuto, P. (1966); Società di Studi Romagnoli, Studi pascoliani (1958); D. Petrini, 'La poesia di G. P.' in Dal Barocco al Decadentismo (1957); C. Salinari, Miti e coscienza del decadentismo italiano (1960); F. Felcini, Bibliografia della critica pascoliana, I—1887–1954 (1957), II—1954 onwards. J.G.-R.

Pasek, JAN CHRZYSTOM (*Rawa c. 1636; †1701), Polish diarist. An average Polish squire, farmer and warrior, often in opposition to the public law, he gives in his diaries (pub. 1836), written in a simple and vivid style, a true, though incomplete, picture of some aspects of Polish life, revealing at the same time his own character; they have also great linguistic importance.

Pamiętniki (1836; Les mémoires de . . . gentil-homme polonais, tr. with comm. P. Cazin, 1922; crit. ed. J. Czubek, 1929).

J. Czubek, J. Ch. P. w oświeceniu archiwalnem, 1667–1701 (1900); J. K. Heck, J. Ch. P. (1902); J. Rytel, 'Pamiętniki' P. na tle pamiętnikarstwa staropolskiego (1962). S.S. (P.H.)

Pasolini, PIER PAOLO (*Bologna 1922), Friulian writer and film director. Founder of the Academiuta di lenga Furlana at Casarsa (active 1945–50), his poetry has strongly influenced the literary development of Friulian. He also writes in Italian.

Poesie a Casarsa (Bologna, 1943); Dov'è la mia patria (Casarsa, 1949); Tal cour di un frut (Tricesimo, 1953); La meglio gioventù (Florence, 1954); Poesie dimenticate (Udine, 1965). L.C.

Pasquier, ÉTIENNE (*Paris 7 VI 1529; †ibid. 30 VIII 1615), French scholar and historian. An enlightened barrister whose learning brought him the friendship of poets and humanists, from Ronsard* to Turnèbe. His chief work, Recherches de la France, (1560–1621), reflects his scholarly interest in France's national past and literature and makes him her first literary historian (Fauchet*).

Lettres (3 vols, 1619); La Jeunesse d'Estienne Pasquier (1610; early lit. work, verse and prose).—Œuvres (2 vols, Amsterdam [Trévoux], 1723); Œuvres choisies (ed. L. Feugère, with substantial intro., 2 vols, 1849); Lettres historiques pour les années 1556–94 (ed. D. Thickett, 1966).

M. J. Moore, E. P. historien de la poésie et de la langue française (1934); D. Thickett, Bibliographie des œuvres d'E. P. (1956). G.B.

Passavanti, JACOPO (*Florence c. 1302; †ibid. 15 VI 1357), Italian ascetic writer. A Dominican Friar; educated in Florence and Paris, he taught theology at Pisa, Siena and Rome. He was appointed Prior of the convent of Santa Maria Novella (1345) and Vicar General of the Florentine diocese (1350). Fra Jacopo was a renowned preacher, 'facundus et fervidus', and from his Lent sermons (1354) he composed a popular guide to repentance in five parts, Lo Specchio della vera penitenza. To compel observance of his precepts Fra Jacopo enlivened his treatise with exempla, drawn from the medieval repertory, depicting miracles and the pains of Hell.

Specchio (ed. F. L. Polidori, 1863; ed. M. Lenardon, 1925); Mistici del Duecento e del Trecento (ed. A. Levasti, 1935); Prosatori minori del Trecento (ed. G. De Luca, 1954).

G. Getto, Umanità e stile di J. P. (1943); A. Monteverdi, 'Gli "esempi" di J. P.' in Studi e saggi sulla letteratura italiani dei primi secoli (1954); M. Aurigemma, Saggio sul P. (1957). M.W.

Passerat, JEAN (*Troyes 18 X 1534; †Paris 14 IX 1602), French humanist and poet. He taught at the Collège de Boncourt, Paris, and from 1572 professed litterae humaniores at the Collège Royal. His French poems (he also wrote in Latin) have a playful tone in the tradition of Marot*. (See also VILLANELLE; *Satire* Ménippée*.)

Recueil des œuvres poétiques (1606; ed. P. Blanchemain, 2 vols, 1880); M. Raymond, L'influence de Ronsard, II (1927). G.B.

Passeroni, GIAN CARLO (*Condamine di Lantosca [Nice] 8 III 1713; †Milan 26 XII 1803), Italian poet. Priest; academician of the Trasformati, Milan; a friend of Giuseppe Parini*. By nature a moralist, he wrote Il Cicerone (6 vols, 1755–74), a vast discursive poem in ottava rima on the life of Cicero*, characterized by interminable digressions deriding the corruption and follies of 18th-century life. Other works include verse fables, Rime giocose and epigrams translated from the Greek.

Il Cicerone (best ed. 1845); Rime giocose, satiriche e morali (1776); Favole Esopiane (7 vols, 1779–88); Epigrammi greci (1786).—Sel. in G. Parini, Poesie e Prose (ed. L. Caretti, 1951) and in Lirici del Settecento (ed. M. Fubini and B. Maier, 1959).

S. Paggi, Il Cicerone di G. C. P. (1912) and G. C. P. (1914). M.W.

Passo Honroso, LIBRO DEL (1434), Spanish chronicle. Suero de Quifiones, a young knight, challenged all comers for a month, with the King's permission, as a tribute to his lady. One of his companions was Lope de Estúñiga*. The notary Pero Rodríguez de Lena was present and recorded the events in the Libro.

Facs. ed. (New York, 1902); ed. M. de Riquer (1970).

P. G. Evans, 'A Spanish knight in flesh and blood' in Hispania (U.S.A.), XV (1932); M. de Riquer, Caballeros andantes españoles (1967).

A.D.D.

Pasternak, BORIS LEONDOVICH (*Moscow 1890; †1960), Russian poet. Influenced by the Symbolists (especially I. Annensky*) and then by the Futurists, he gradually worked out his own elliptic technique capable of expressing his emotions in simple language arranged in an unusual verbal and rhythmical pattern. His real strength is in his lyrics, the dominant mood of which is courage towards life. He began writing in 1912 but achieved his first great success with the collection, Sestra moyá zhizn' (wr. 1917; pub. 1922). This was followed by Temy i variatsii (1923); God 1905 (1926); Lieutenant Schmidt (1927); Spectorsky (an autobiography in verse); and Vtoroye rozhdenie (1932). His small collection Na rannikh poyezdakh (1941) was partly, and his Zemnoy Prostor (1945) almost entirely, inspired by the war.

Pasternak's prose works include a book of short stories (pub. 1925; repr. 1933 as Vozdushnye puti), the autobiographical Okhramaya Gramota (1931), and his masterpiece in prose, Detstvo Luvers (wr. 1918; Childhood, tr. R. Payne, Singapore, 1941), the method of which has been compared with that of Proust*. His novel Doctor Zhivago was banned in the Soviet Union but appeared (in Russian) in Milan in 1957 and earned him the Nobel prize. It was translated into many languages and also filmed. Accused of excessive individualism, Pasternak afterwards spent his time mostly on translations from English, French, German, Hungarian and Georgian. His translations of Hamlet, Anthony and Cleopatra, Othello and Romeo and Juliet are among the best in the Russian language.

Poverkh Baryerov (1931); Stikhotvoreniya v odnom tome (1933; 2nd ed. 1936).— The Collected Prose Works of B. P. (tr. R. Payne and B. Scott, intro. S. Schimanski, 1945); Selected Poems (tr. J. M. Cohen, 1947); A Second Book of Russian Verse (with 17 of P.'s poems; tr. C. M. Bowra, 1948); Selected Writings (incl. The Safe Conduct, 4 stories and several poems; 1949); Sochineniya (ed. G. P. Struve and B. A. Filippov, 3 vols, Univ. of Michigan, 1961); Doctor Zhivago (tr. M. Hayward and M. Harari, 1958, 1961); Poesie (tr. A. Ripellino, 1959); Poetry of B. P. (tr. G. Reavey, 1959); The Last Summer (tr. idem, 1960); In the Interlude (tr. H. Kamen, 1962); Fifty Poems (tr. L. Pasternak Slater, 1963); Letters to Georgian Friends (tr. D. Magarshak, 1967).—The Blind

Beauty (play; tr. M. Hayward and M. Harari, 1969).

C. L. Wrenn, 'B. P.' in Oxford Slavon. Papers, II (1951); Y. Berger, B. P. (1958; in Fr.); G. Ruge, P. (1959; in Ger.); An Essay in Autobiography (tr. M. Harari, 1959); H. Muchnic, From Gorky to P. (1961); P. S. R. Payne, The Three Worlds of B. P. (1961, 1962); R. Conquest, Courage of Genius (1961); Sbornik statey (Munich, 1962); Guy de Maillac, B. P. (1963); J. de Troyat, P. (1964).

J.L.

Pastor Díaz, NICOMEDES (*Vivero, Lugo 15 IX 1811; †Madrid 22 III 1863), Spanish poet, studied law and intervened in politics. With his Poesías (1840) he brings to Spanish Romanticism the intimate, delicate melancholy of his Gaelic origin. His own personal experience can be detected in his Romantic themes. He also wrote a novel and an interesting series of portraits.

Obras (ed. A. Ferrer del Río, 6 vols, 1866–68).

J. Valle Moré, N. P. D.: su vida y su obra (1911); F. Leal Insúa, P. D., príncipe del romanticismo (1943); E. Chao Espina, P. D. dentro del romanticismo (1949).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Pastorius, FRANCIS DANIEL (*Sommerhausen, Franconia 26 IX 1651; ∞6 XI 1688 Ennecke Klostermanns; †Germantown, Pa. 27 II 1719), German-American author. He led the first organized body of German pietists to America (1683) and founded Germantown near Philadelphia. He instigated the first formal protest against slavery. He wrote the first English primer ever published in Pennsylvania. His Bee-Hive (1696 ff.), mostly written in English, is the curious work of a polymath.

Henry Bernhard Koster, William Davis, Thomas Ruther and Thomas Bowyer, Four Boasting Disputers of This World Briefly Rebuked (1697); Umständliche geographische Beschreibung der zu allerletzt erfundenen Provinz Pensylvaniae (1700; tr. in Narratives of Early Pennsylvania, Western New Jersey and Delaware, ed. A. C. Myers, 1912); F. D. Pastorius, His Hive, Beestock, Melliotrophium, Alvear or Rusca Apum (MS in possession of his descendants; excerpts in Americana Germanica, I–II, 1897–98).

M. D. Learned, Life of F. D. P. (1908). E.R.

Pastrengo (PASTREGICUS), GUGLIELMO DA (*Pastrengo 1305; †c. 1366), Italian lawyer and scholar, notable for his friendship with Petrarch* and for his posthumously published biographical dictionary De originibus rerum (Venice, 1547).

R. Sabbadini, Le scoperte dei codici . . . (1905); R. Weiss, Dawn of Humanism in Italy (1947).

D.H.

Patanjali (fl. 2nd century B.C.), the author of the Mahābhāṣya, the 'great commentary' on Pāṇini's*

Sanskrit grammar and Kātyāyana's emendations to Pāṇini's rules.
H.G.R. (J.E.B.G.)

Patchen, KENNETH (*Niles, Ohio 13 XII 1911; ∞1934 Miriam Oikemus; †Palo Alto, Cal. 8 I 1972), American poet. Patchen's first book of poems, Before the Brave (1936), signalled the arrival of a poet of strikingly original language. His poems are mainly short observations or narratives, often illustrated by his own abstract paintings. His tendency to semi-automatic writing sometimes led him into sentimentality.

First Will and Testament (1939); The Dark Kingdom (1942); Hurrah for Anything (1957); Because It Is (1960).
D.E.Mo.

Pateg, or Patecchio, GIRARDO (*Cremona; fl. early 13th century), Lombard poet, famous in his day, of whom two works remain: the Splanamento, a free adaptation of Proverbs, modelled on the Disticha [Dicta*] Catonis, in rhymed couplets of 14-syllable lines; and the Noie, a poem on 'Vexations', derived from the Provençal enuég, in eight stanzas of ten lines each (probably intended as decasyllables) with a six-line congedo. This was a favourite book of the chronicler Salimbene*, who calls it Liber tediorum.

Crestomazia italiana dei primi secoli (ed. E. Monaci; 2nd ed. rev. F. Arese, 1955); Poeti del Duecento, I (ed. G. Contini, 1961); Early Italian Texts (ed. C. Dionisotti and C. Grayson, 2nd ed. 1965).
K.F.

Pater, WALTER HORATIO (*Shadwell 4 VIII 1839; †Oxford 30 VII 1894), English critic. Pater went to Queen's College, Oxford, was taught by Jowett* and in 1864 was elected Fellow of Brasenose. He abandoned his intention of taking Orders and devoted his energies to teaching, slow and exquisite writing and some travelling in Europe. Pater spoke of 'art for art's sake' but for him art included much of life. Although he insisted on the cultivation of experience 'as an end in itself' he meant by this cultivation a harmonious development of human potentialities and dismissed the demoralized sensation-seeking of Wilde's* heroes as a lowering of personality. As a critic he has his blindnesses: he respects historical criticism but sometimes forgets it; he recreates art in the image of his own vision; he writes oddly about Wordsworth* and Coleridge*. But his sensitive introspection and dual interest in form and matter (especially in literature) make him an influence as well as an eccentric.

Studies in the History of the Renaissance (1873); Marius the Epicurean: his sensations and ideas (2 vols, 1885); Imaginary Portraits (1887); Appreciations; with an Essay on Style (1889); Plato and Platonism: a series of lectures (1893); Essays from 'The Guardian' (1896).

A. C. Benson, W. P. (1906); A. Symons, A Study of W. P. (1932); G. Tillotson, Criticism and the 19th Century (1951); A. Ward, W. P.: The Idea in Nature (1966); G. C. Monsman, P.'s Portraits (1967).
B.H. (M.A.)

Paterno, PEDRO ALEJANDRO (*Manila 27 II 1857; †ibid. 1911), Philippine poet and belletrist; his works reflect a conflict between the wealthy amateur who wishes to please, and a deeply convinced patriot. His novel Ninay (1885) could be called the first piece of modern Philippine fiction, but Paterno was outshone by his friend and colleague José Rizal*. He negotiated the Hispano-Filipino peace settlement of 1897, and held political office in the First Philippine Republic (1898–1901) and the American regime that followed.

Sampaguitas (Madrid, 1881).

A.C.

Paterson, ANDREW BARTON (*Narrambla, New South Wales 17 XI 1864; †Sydney 5 II 1941), Australian poet, the most comprehensively representative of the numerous balladists of his time who wrote in popular verse of the distinctive life of the bush.

Collected Verse (latest repr., with intro.; 1969).
C. Semmler, The Banjo of the Bush (1966) and The World of Banjo P. (1967).
F.T.M. (A.M.G.)

Pathelin, Maistre Pierre (?1465), anonymous French farce which deals with the theme of the unscrupulous lawyer who is eventually tricked by his client, a simple shepherd. A master of plot and characterization, the author, conceivably Guillaume Alecis*, treats his subject with imagination and realism, while avoiding the scatology which mars similar works of the age. It is the masterpiece of the medieval comic theatre in France.

Maistre P. Pathelin, farce du XVe siècle (crit. ed. R. T. Holbrook, 2nd ed. 1937).—R. T. Holbrook, Étude sur Pathelin, essai de bibliographie et d'interprétation (Princeton, 1917); Grace Frank, The Medieval French Drama (1954).
A.H.D.

Patmore, COVENTRY KERSEY DIGHTON (*Woodford 23 VII 1823; ∞1847 Emily Andrews, ∞1864 Marianne Byles, ∞1881 Harriet Robson; †Ly-mington 26 XI 1896), English poet and critic, assistant in the printed books department of the British Museum. His Tamerton Church Tower (1853) was followed by The Betrothed (1854), The Espousals (1856), Faithful for Ever (1860) and The Victories of Love (1862), the four poems together forming The Angel in the House (1862), a celebration of domestic love. These early poems, in rather ambling verse, blend deliberate banality and unpoetic diction with pleasing descriptions of scenery and domestic life. His Unknown Eros (1877) and other poems written after his conversion to Roman Catholicism show a deepening of his poetic vision and a complete change of poetic technique, including the use of irregular metres and an infinitely richer diction.

Amelia (1878); Poems of C. P. (ed. F. Page, 1949); Principle in Art (1889).

B. Champneys, Memoirs and Corres. of C. P. (2 vols, 1900; incl. autobiog.); O. Burdett, The Idea of C. P. (1921); D. Patmore, Portrait of My Family (with special ref. to C. P.; 1935); M. Stobie, P.'s Theory and Hopkins's Practice (1949); G. M. Hopkins, Further Letters, Including Correspondence With C. P. (1938); J. C. Reid, The Mind and Art of C. P. (1957).
R.M.H. (M.A.)

Paton, ALAN STEWART (*Pietermaritzburg 11 I 1903; ∞1928 Doris Francis), South African novelist, short-story writer, biographer and political analyst. Paton's interest in race relations, reflected in his fiction, grew out of his 13 years as principal of a reform school for African boys. Despite the immediate success of Cry the Beloved Country (1948), he has not done much creative writing, being actively involved in the affairs of the now defunct South African Liberal Party, and serving various Christian and social welfare organizations. He is a forceful critic of the racial policies of the Nationalist government, and was deprived of his passport from 1960 until 1970.

Too Late the Phalarope (novel; 1953); South Africa Today (1953); The Land and People of South Africa (1955); Debbie Go Home (short stories; 1961); The Long View (political comment; 1967).—BIOGRAPHY: Hofmeyr (1964); Kontakion for You Departed (1969).

E. Callan, A. P. (1968).

U.La.

Pătrășcanu, D. D. (*1872; †1937), Rumanian (Moldavian) writer, author of short stories which turn upon the human propensity to become involved in ridiculous and embarrassing situations through a lapse of memory, the desire to avoid giving offence, or some such foible.

Un prînz de gală, etc. (ed. A. Săndulescu, 1958).
F.J.B.

Patrick, St (*?South Wales 385; †461), the apostle of Ireland, was the son of a decurio, Calpurnius. Captured by raiders, he spent six years as a slave in Ireland and eventually escaped to Gaul. He returned to Ireland in 432 as a missionary. His chief works are his autobiography (the Confessio), the Epistola ad milites Corotici and Dicta.

J. B. Bury, Life of St P. (1905); J. F. Kenney, Sources for the Early History of Ireland (1929); K. Müller, 'Der Heilige P.' in Göttinger Nachrichten, XXIII (1931); L. Bieler, Codices Patriciani Latini (1942) and The Life and Legend of St P. (1949); J. Carney, The Problem of St P. (1961); C. Mohrmann, The Latin of St P. (1961); R. E. McNally, 'Saint P.: 461–1961' in Catholic Hist.

Rev., XLVII (1961); D. A. Binchy, 'P. and his biographers' in Studia Hibernica, II (1962); E. MacNeill, St P. . . (2nd ed. 1964).
R.R.R.

Pattison, MARK (*Hornby 10 X 1813; ∞1861 Emilia Strong; †Harrogate 30 VII 1884), English scholar, author of biographical and critical works and of Memoirs (1885), ranking high in literature of self-confession. He was Rector of Lincoln College, Oxford.

Isaac Casaubon (1875); Milton (1879); Essays (ed. H. Nettleship, 2 vols, 1889).

L. Tollemache, Recollections of P. (1885); F. C. Montague, Some Early Letters of M. P. (1934); J. Sparrow, P. and the Idea of a University (1967).
R.M.H. (M.A.)

Paulding, JAMES KIRKE (*Putnam Co., N.Y. 22 VIII 1778; ∞1818 Gertrude Kemble; †Hyde Park, N.Y. 6 IV 1860), American poet, novelist and playwright. He collaborated with Irving* on the Salmagundi series. A voluminous and versatile writer, he excelled in his Dutch stories.

John Bull in America . . . (1825); The Dutchman's Fireside (1831); Westward Ho! (1832).—The Letters of J. K. P. (ed. R. M. Adelman, 1962).

A. L. Herold, J. K. P.: Versatile American (1926).
H.L.C. (I.W.)

Paulhan, JEAN (*Nice 2 XII 1884; †Paris 9 X 1968), French critic. He edited the Nouvelle Revue Française (1925–40 and 1953–68), and during the Occupation founded Les Lettres Françaises with Jacques Decour. He loved paradox and mystification, and claimed the anarchist, Fénéon, as his master. He set himself up as the champion of a new form of rhetoric (in Les fleurs de Tarbes, 1945) and played a leading part in French contemporary writing. Member of the Académie Française 1963.

Le guerrier appliqué (1915); Clé de la poésie (1944); Félix Fénéon ou le critique (1945); Entretiens sur les faits-divers (1945); De la paille et du grain (1948); Petite préface à toute critique (1951).—Œuvres complètes (1966 ff.).

M. Toesca, J. P., l'écrivain appliqué (1948); M. J. Lefebvre, J. P. (1949); special no. of Nouvelle Rev. Fr. (1969).
M.G.; J.P.R.

Pauli, JOHANNES (*c. 1453; †Thann c. 1530), German writer. A Franciscan Friar, Pauli published a collection of anecdotes, Schimpf und Ernst (1519), moralizing tales often humorous and coarse, enormously popular and reprinted over 30 times.

Schimpf und Ernst (ed. H. Oesterley, 1866; ed. J. Bolte, 2 vols, 1923–24).

R. Newald, 'J. P.' in Dr. Lit. des Mittelalters, III.
D.G.D.

Paulinus of Aquileia (*before 750; †802), grammarian at the court of Charlemagne, made Patriarch of Aquileia in 787. Besides theological works he wrote some remarkable rhythmical Latin poems, including a lament for Duke Erich of Friuli, who fell in battle in 799.

Migne, Patrologia Latina, XCIX (1851); letters ed. E. Dümmler in Monumenta Germaniae historica, Epistolae, IV (1895); poems ed. idem, ibid., Poeti Latini aevi Carolini, I (1881); Analecta hymnica medii aevi, L (1907). F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Paulinus of Nola, MEROPUS PONTIUS (*Bordeaux c. 353; †22 VI 431), Christian Latin writer. Pupil of Ausonius*, he was, after a brilliant official career, converted to Christianity (c. 390) and became Bishop of Nola (409). Fifty letters, some addressed to Augustine*, Jerome* and Ausonius*, are extant, together with 36 poems, in epic and lyric metres, which are on Christian subjects but show conspicuously the influence of classical poets, especially Virgil* and Horace*.

Opera omnia (ed. W. Hartel in Corpus scriptorum ecclesiastic. Latin., XXIX–XXX, 1894).—F. J. E. Raby, Christian Latin Poetry (1927; corr. ed. 1953). A.J.D.

Pauliny-Tóth, VILIAM (*Senica 3 VI 1826; †Turčiansky Sv. Martin 6 V 1877), Slovak author and leader of the Slovak national movement in the mid-19th century who, following the lead of L'. Štúr*, composed his Romantic poetry and historical novels in Slovak.

VERSE: Staré a nové piesne (under pseud. VILÉM PODOLSKÝ; 1866); Básne (1877).—NOVELS: Kráľova žena (1865); Trenčiansky Matúš (1868).—Škola a život (sel. prose with stud. O. Čepan, 1963). R.A.

Paul the Deacon (PAULUS DIACONUS) (*Friuli 720/730; †Montecassino 13 IV 799), grammarian, historian and poet, born of a noble Longobard family and educated at Pavia under Flavianus. In 763 he wrote his earliest extant poem on the six ages of the world. Before 774, at the request of Adelperga, wife of Arichis, Duke of Benevento, he composed the Historia Romana, a continuation of the work of Eutropius* down to the fall of the Goths in Italy. He became a monk of Montecassino about 780 and about 787 began his major work, The History of the Longobards, which occupied the rest of his life. He also wrote riddles, epigrams, an acrostic poem, a short biography of Gregory* the Great and two lexicographical studies.

Migne, Patrologia Latina, XCV (1850); History of the Langobards (tr. W. D. Foulke, 1907); K. Neff, Die Gedichte des Paulus Diaconus (1908); De verborum significatu quae supersunt cum Pauli epitome (ed. W. W. Lindsay, 1913).

R. Jacobi, Paulus Diaconus und die übrigen

Geschichtschreiber der Langobarden (1881); L. J. Engels, Observations sur le vocabulaire de Paul Diacre (1961). R.R.R.

Paul the Silentiary (†575), Byzantine court official and poet. He wrote poems in classical metre. Two are renowned for their brilliant descriptions of Justinian's newly built cathedral of S. Sophia in Constantinople; a third, which gives a gay and lively account in dimeter iambs of the pleasures of the baths at the Pythian hot springs in Bithynia is often attributed to Paul, but is probably by an early 10th-century poet. Paul's shorter love poems can hold their own with those of any age. They were included in the collection made by his contemporary Agathias* and are in the Palatine Anthology.

P. Friedländer, Johannes von Gaza und Paulus Silentiarius (1912); The Church of Sancta Sophia, Constantinople (tr. W. R. Lethaby and H. Swainson, 1894); G. Viansino, Paolo Silenziario, epigrammi (1963); W. R. Paton, Greek Anthology (5 vols, 1916–18; with tr.).

C. Diehl, Justinien (1901); E. Stein, Histoire du bas-empire, II (1949); P. N. Ure, Justinian and His Age (1951). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Pausanias (*Magnesia 110/115 A.D.), Greek writer. His Periegesis describes, with numberless mythological and historical digressions, the monuments of antiquity in Attica, Central Greece and the Peloponnese. Its interest lies in the rich material which it preserves from the earlier periegetic literature.

F. Spiro, Pausaniae Graeciae descriptio (3 vols, 1903); W. H. S. Jones and R. E. Wycherley, P.: Description of Greece (with tr.; 5 vols, 1918–35); J. G. Frazer, P.'s Description of Greece (2nd ed., 6 vols, 1913; atlas, Graecia Antiqua, 1930). R.B.

Paustovsky, KONSTANTIN (*1892; †1967), a broad-minded Soviet writer whose sympathies were with the constructive attitude to life and the efforts to build up a new Russia. His Rozhdenie morya (1952) is about the great Volga-Don canal. Among his works there are excellent narratives, short stories and two plays—one about Lermontov* and the other about Pushkin*. Of particular interest is his serene autobiography Povest' o zhizni (1955).

Kara-Burgaz (1932); Kolkhida (1934); Chërnoe more (1936); Severnaya povest' (1939); Povesti i rasskazy (1950); Izbrannoe (1953); Sobranie sochineniy (8 vols, 1967–69). J.L.

Pavese, CESARE (*S. Stefano Belbo 9 IX 1908; †Turin 27 VIII 1950), Italian poet, novelist and essayist. After becoming known as a poet with Lavorare stanca (1936), and as a translator of contemporary English and American literature, Pavese turned mainly to prose, although the later love lyrics of Verrà la morte e avrà i tuoi occhi (1951) are often much admired. Pavese's themes are those of rootlessness, solitude, and the nature of maturity. He often works out in fiction his own problems (which led to his suicide when his reputation was at its height) but at his best he succeeds in giving to his tales a wider, symbolic value and in commenting on post-war Italian society. His usual settings are Turin and Le Langhe. His style is lyrical and impressionistic, and he is at his best in the 'racconto lungo'. His finest works are usually thought to be La bella estate (1949), containing three tales—La bella estate (The Beautiful Summer, tr. W. J. Strachan, 1948), Il diavolo sulle colline (The Devil in the Hills, tr. D. M. Paige, 1959) and Tra donne sole (Among Women Alone, tr. idem, 1953)—and La luna e i falò (1950; The Moon and the Bonfire, tr. L. Sinclair, 1952).

POETRY: Poesie edite e inedite (1963).—FICTION: Paesi tuoi (1941; The Harvesters, tr. A. E. Murch, 1961); Il compagno (1947; The Comrade, tr. W. J. Strachan, 1959); Prima che il gallo canti (1949; incl. Il carcere, The Political Prisoner, tr. idem, 1949, and La casa in collina, The House on the Hill, tr. idem, 1961); Racconti (1960); Romanzi (2 vols, 1961).—VARIOUS: Dialoghi con Leucò (1947; Dialogues With Leucò, tr. W. Arrowsmith and D. S. Carne-Ross, 1965); La letteratura americana e altri saggi (1951); Il mestiere di vivere (1952; This Business of Living, tr. A. E. Murch, 1961); Lettere (2 vols, 1966).

G. P. Biasin, The Smile of the Gods (1968); D. Lajolo, Il vizio assurdo (1960); A. Guiducci, Il mito P. (1967). B.M.

Pavlenko, PETER ANDREYEVICH (*1899; †1951), Soviet author. He won his reputation by his Barricady (1932), a novel about the Paris Commune of 1871, and strengthened it by his novel Na Vostoke (1936; Red Planes Fly East, tr. S. Garry, 1938), dealing with the defence preparations against Japan in eastern Siberia. His Schastie (1947) tackled the Yalta Conference and reconstruction problems in a spirit which is hardly fair to Russia's allies.

Sobranie sochineniy (6 vols, 1953–55).—The Forest Guerillas (tr. 1943); Happiness (tr. J. Fineberg, 1950).

L. Levin, P. A. P. (1953); G. A. Pelisov, Tvorcheskiy put' P. A. P. (1954). J.L.

Pavlov, NIKOLAY FILIPPOVICH (*Moscow 1805; †1864), Russian author. His Tri povesti (1835), with its social protest, and Novye povesti (1839) marked him out as a very promising author of the period, but this initial success was not followed up.

Povesti (1931). J.L.

Pavlova, KAROLINA KARLOVNA, née JANISCH

(*Moscow 1807; †1837 Nikolay Pavlov*; †Dresden 1893), Russian poet of German extraction, with Slavophil sympathies. Her lyrics are often excessively pessimistic, perhaps because of her frustrated love for the great Polish poet Adam Mickiewicz*. The excellence of her verse was recognized only at the beginning of the 20th century, notably by V. Bryusov*.

Das Nordlicht (tr. of Russian poets; 1833); Les Préludes (1839); Dvoynaya Zhizn' (1848).—Sobranie sochineniy (ed. V. Bryusov, 2 vols, 1915); Polnoye sobranie stikhotvoreniy (1964). J.L.

Pavlović, MIODRAG (*Novi Sad 28 XI 1928), Serbian poet and critic. Pavlović studied medicine in Belgrade and practised for a time as a doctor before turning to literature. He and Vasko Popa* were the first poets to publish modernist, non-conformist poetry in the early 1950s, and like Popa, Pavlović has consistently added to his reputation with each new book of verse since that date. Influenced by French Symbolism and Surrealism and by the Anglo-Saxon Post-Symbolists (Yeats*, Eliot*, Auden*), Pavlović's poetry has gone through several stages but it remains precise, logical and highly intellectual, although often betraying its early, formative models in the startling brilliance of its imagery. Pavlović is obsessed with the philosophical problems of life, death and eternity and more recently has sought lessons for the present in his people's Byzantine roots and early Slav history. Like Popa, he is a poet of European stature. He has also written several books of criticism and two anthologies, one of European Romanticism and the other of Serbian poetry.

VERSE: 87 pesama (1952); Stub sećanja (1953); Oktave (1957); Mleko iskoni (1963); Velika Skitija (1969); Svetli i tamni praznici (1970).—Suhrkamp Gedichte (tr. P. Urbano, 1968); La voix sous la pierre (tr. R. Matreau, Paris, 1970). B.J.

Pavšič, VLADIMIR: see Bor, MATEJ.

Pawlikowska, MARIA: see Jasnorzewska-Pawlikowska, MARIA.

Payne, JOHN HOWARD (*New York 9 VI 1791; †Tunis 9 IV 1852), American actor, playwright, editor and diplomat. His plays are a mixture of achievement and failure; he wrote the lyric, 'Home, Sweet Home'.

The Maid of Milan (1823); Charles the Second; or, The Merry Monarch (with Irving; 1824); Richelieu: A Domestic Tragedy (with idem; 1826).—America's Lost Plays, V and VI (ed. C. Hislop and W. R. Richardson, 1940).

G. Harrison, J. H. P., Dramatist, Poet, Actor (1884); G. Overmeyer, America's First Hamlet: A Biography of J. H. P. (1957).

H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Payró, ROBERTO J. (*Mercedes 19 IV 1867; †Buenos Aires 8 IV 1928), Argentinian novelist. He left many lively narratives of rural life in the Argentine including some on the gaucho; his talent for the comical introduces a fresh note but his humour disguised his criticism of the Argentine political situation. Paco chico (1908) for instance, consists of humorous sketches of an Argentine provincial life and the rigged elections. In the Divertidas aventuras del nieto de Juan Moreira (1910), he exposes the corruption which, though more sophisticated, is still as bad as in earlier and more barbarous times. He was also a prolific playwright.

Un hombre feliz (1883); Ensayos poéticos (1884); Antígona (1885); Novelas y fantasías (1888); El casamiento de Laucha (1906); El capitán Vergara (1925); Tres comedias (1925); El mar dulce (1927); Alegria (1928).

Germán García, R. P., Testimonio de una vida y realidad de una literatura (Buenos Aires, 1961). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Paz, OCTAVIO (*1914), Mexican poet. He collaborated in a number of little reviews in the 1930s and 1940s, notably Taller. From the first his work showed a remarkable consistency, being predominantly concerned with love and poetry. His meeting with André Breton* and the influence of Surrealism was absorbed into his poetry without changing its direction. He was in sympathy with the Surrealist emphasis on love and poetry as methods of subverting the day-to-day organized and rational world, and their celebration of the marvellous against the conventional, dream against reality. The theme of self and other, the problem of fragmentation and rootlessness, the quest for timeless experience all converge in one of his finest poems, Piedra de Sol (Sun-Stone, tr. M. Rukeyser*, 1963), which has a circular construction. There followed Salamandra (1962) and Ladera este (1969) which included the 'open' poem 'Blanco', in which there are many possible orders of reading, and the poems written during his period in Delhi as Mexican ambassador, a post from which he resigned in 1968. In these later poems there is an increasing tendency towards a concrete poetry with words acting visually and taking on new relationships according to their position on the page. Paz's desire to break with an evolutionary development and to try to attain simultaneity and immediacy are accentuated in the poems of Ladera este. A provocative essayist, Paz published an important analysis of the Mexican in his Laberinto de la soledad (1950; The Labyrinth of Solitude, tr. L. Kemp, 1962) and again in Postdata (1970). His literary essays in Las peras del olmo (1957), El arco y la lira (1956), Cuadrivio, Los signos en rotación (1965), Puertas al campo (1966) are outstanding. He has also published a study of eroticism in art in Conyunciones y disyunciones (1969) as well as studies of the painter Marcel Duchamp and the anthropologist Levi-Strauss*.

Libertad bajo palabra (coll. poems; 1960).—Selected Poems (tr. M. Rukeyser, Bloomington, 1963). J.F.

Pázmány, PÉTER, CARDINAL (*Nagyvárad 4 X 1570; †Pozsony 19 III 1637), Hungarian polemic author, leader of the Counter-Reformation in Hungary. Pázmány in his numerous polemic writings raised Hungarian prose to a standard it never regained until the 19th century. He was also a careful and brilliant translator of religious works.

Isteni igazságra vezérlő Kalauz (1613); Prédikációk (1636).—P. P. összes munkái (coll. works; 7 vols [Hung.], 6 vols [Lat.], 1894–1905).

V. Fraknói, P. P. és kora (3 vols, 1868–72); T. Klaniczay, 'P. P.' in Reneszánsz és barokk (1961). G.F.C.

Pea, ENRICO (*Serravezza 29 X 1881; †Forte dei Marmi 11 VIII 1958), Italian novelist, poet and playwright. Pea is best known for his narrative works. The early novels in the 1920s describe a provincial way of life. After a short period in which he attempted less successfully to deal with wider scenes, he returned to the theme of the province in his best works, Il servitore del diavolo (1931), Il forestiero (1937) and Il romanzo di Moscardino (1943; short stories). His work as poet and playwright is less satisfactory.

Arie bifolchine (verse; 1943).—PLAYS: Giuda (1918); Prime piogge d'ottobre (1919).—NOVELS AND SHORT STORIES: Il volto santo (1925); La maremmana (1938).

E. Travi, Umanità di E. P. (1965). B.M.

Peacham, HENRY, THE ELDER (fl. 1577–1605), English clergyman and author of an interesting English manual of rhetoric. He was curate at North Mimms, then rector of the north mediety of Leverton (1597).

The Garden of Eloquence (1577; enlarged 1593; ed. W. G. Crane, 1954). B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Peacham, HENRY, THE YOUNGER (*North Mimms c. 1578; †c. 1642), English writer, Archdeacon at Lincoln (1606) who served Prince Henry (1606–12) and was a master at Wymondham grammar school (c. 1618). He is best known for his treatise on the gentleman, but is also a lively, mature essayist and epigrammatist.

The More the Merrier (1608); Minerva Britannia (1612; facs. repr. 1966); Thalias Banquet (1620); Coach and Sedan (1636; repr. 1925); The Compleat Gentleman (1622; enlarged 1634; ed. G. S. Gordon, 1906); The Truth of Our Times (1638; ed. R. R. Cawley, 1942); The Art of Living in London (1642; ed. V. B. Heltzel, 1963).

A. W. Fox, Book of Bachelors (1899); M. C. Pitman in Bull. Inst. Hist. Res., XI (1934); J. E. Mason, Gentlefolk in the Making (1935).

B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Peacock, THOMAS LOVE (*Weymouth 18 X 1785; ∞1820 Jane Gryffydd; †Halliford 23 I 1866), English novelist, poet and critic. Peacock was for many years an employee of the East India Company. A close friend of Shelley* and other Romantics, he stands apart from his contemporaries in his wit and detachment, and his fame rests on his satirical novels. The targets of his satire include his contemporaries, their art, their theories and their conduct. He can be said to have created a new literary form—the novel of conversation—and his favourite device is to collect real and fictitious characters at a house-party and show them engaged in characteristic pursuits and conversations. His books have a considerable interest for the literary historian but their wit, humour and poetry give them a wider appeal. The Four Ages of Poetry (1820) provoked Shelley's Defence.

Headlong Hall (1816); Melincourt (3 vols, 1817); Nightmare Abbey (1818; dramatized 1952); Maid Marian (1822); The Misfortunes of Elphin (1829); Crochet Castle (1831); Gryll Grange (1861).—The Work of T. L. P. (ed. H. F. B. Brett-Smith and C. E. Jones, 10 vols, 1924–34); The Novels of T. L. P. (ed. D. Garnett, 1948; 2 vols, 1963, corrected).

A. M. Freeman, T. L. P. (1911); M. van Doren, T. L. P. (1911); J. B. Priestley, T. L. P. (1927); H. Mills, P. (1969); C. Dawson, His Fine Wit (1970).
B.H. (M.A.)

Pearce, ANN PHILIPPA (*Great Shelford, Cambridgeshire 1920), English children's writer with a small but distinguished output of work. Her themes are reflective, and explore with sensitivity the mind and attitudes of the individual child. Tom's Midnight Garden (1958) was awarded the Carnegie Medal.

Minnow on the Say (1955); Mrs Cockle's Cat (1961); A Dog So Small (1962); The Children of the House (with Brian Fairfax-Lucy; 1968).

W.R.A.

Pearse, PATRICK (*Dublin 10 XI 1879; †ibid. 3 V 1916), Irish poet and orator, executed after proclaiming Irish independence and commanding Irish republican forces in the 1916 rising. Pearse's political ideals were largely derived from his admiration for the heroic figures of Irish mythology. His own best poems and stories were written in the Irish language, to which he was devoted. His best work in English was contained in his speeches (satirized by Sean O'Casey* in The Plough and the Stars) and in his incisive essays on politics and education.

Collected Works (1917); The 1916 Poets (ed. D. Ryan, 1963); The Best of P. (ed. P. Mac Aonghusa and L. Ó Réagáin, 1967).—P. S. O'Hegarty, Bibliography of P. (1931).

W. I. Thompson, The Imagination of an Insurrection (1967).
E.T.W.

Pecchio, GIUSEPPE (*Milan 15 XI 1785; †Brighton 10 III 1835), Italian patriot and writer, exiled for his political activities. In 1828 he married an Englishwoman and settled at Brighton, where he continued to write and work for Italy. His Osservazioni semiserie d'un esule in Inghilterra (ed. Lancini, 1913) shows remarkable insight, while in another work he studies the economics of literature.

Saggio storico sull'amministrazione finanziaria dell'ex-regno d'Italia (1830); Storia dell'economia pubblica in Italia (1849); Vita di Ugo Foscolo (1915).

P. Orano, Il precursore di Carl Marx (1899); L. Derla, 'La critica romantica in Italia: G. P.' in Nuova Antologia, CIII (1968).

N.K.W. (J.G.-R.)

Pecham, JOHN: see John Pecham.

Pecock, REGINALD (*traditionally at Laugharne, Carmarthen c. 1390/95; †prob. at Thorney Abbey, Cambs c. 1460/61), English theologian. Rector of St Michael Royal and Master of Whittington College, London, in 1431, he was consecrated Bishop of St Asaph (14 VI 1444). His sermon at Paul's Cross in 1447, justifying non-residence and non-preaching of Bishops, brought forth much opposition. Made Bishop of Chichester (23 III 1450). On 11 XI 1457 he was ordered to bring his books for examination at Lambeth. He was accused of scepticism, of setting natural law above the Scriptures, and of challenging the authority of the Fathers. He made a public abjuration on 4 XII 1457, and his books were burned at Paul's Cross. The Papal attempt to reinstate him met with bitter English opposition, and he was banished to Thorney Abbey, Cambridgeshire, c. 1459. His works are important in the early history of English literature because he set himself the task of presenting theological argument in an unformed language. He used the East Midland dialect and his prose is always clear and logical, if a little heavy.

The Repressor of Overmuch Blaming of the Clergy (ed. C. Babington, 2 vols, 1860); A Treatise Proving Scripture to be the Rule of Faith (ed. H. Wharton, 1688; ed. J. L. Morison, 1909); The Donet (ed. E. V. Hitchcock, Early Eng. Text Soc., old ser., CLVI, 1921); The Folewer to the Donet (ed. idem, ibid., CLXIV, 1924); The Reule of Crysten Religioun (described by James Gairdner, 1911; ed. W. C. Greet, Early Eng. Text Soc., old ser., CLXXI, 1927).—For works by P. that are not extant see Green, below, pp. 238–245.

F. Schmidt, Studies in the Language of P.

(Uppsala, 1900); E. A. Hannick, R. P. (Washington, 1922); V. H. H. Green, Bishop R. P. . . . (Cambridge, 1945); E. F. Jacob, R. P. (1951).

C.P. (M.W.T.)

Peddanna (fl. early 16th century), principal Telugu poet at Kṛṣṇadevarāya's* court and author of Svarociṣamanuṣaṃbhavam, an epic based on an episode in the Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇa. It tells of the love of Varudhini, a nymph, for Pravara, a strict brahman youth who, by means of a charm, had gone to the snowy Himalayas to see the god Śiva there. Rejected by Pravara, Varudhini falls in love with a celestial youth who impersonates Pravara, and to them Svarociṣamanu is born. J.R.M.

Pedersen, CHRISTIERN (*?Elsinore c. 1480; ∞ c. 1533 Else Jacobsdatter; †Helsingør 16 I 1554), Danish ecclesiastical and historical author. While in Paris (1510–15), he edited a Danish–Latin dictionary and Saxo's* Gesta Danorum (1514), which he translated into Danish; but his translation is lost, and so is his continuation of Saxo's work. He stayed with the exiled Christian II in the Netherlands, became a Lutheran and in 1529 published a translation of the New Testament, followed in 1531 by a translation of the Psalms. Later he settled as a printer at Malmö. His various editions of old stories and legends show his genuinely humanistic spirit. Most important is his participation in the translation of the Bible, published in 1550 as 'Christian III's Bible'.

The Richt Vay to the Kingdome of heuine (1533; new ed. 1888); Danske Skrifter (ed. C. J. Brandt and R. T. Fenger, 5 vols, 1850–56).

C. J. Brandt, Om Lunde-Kanniken C. P. og hans Skrifter (1882). E.B.

Pedro, CONSTABLE OF PORTUGAL (*1429; †Granollers 29 VI 1466), Portuguese writer. Son of Pedro*, Duke of Coimbra, he spent much of his life as an exile in Spain. He was King of Aragon from 1464 to 1466. Greatly esteemed by the Marqués de Santillana*, Pedro left a long dignified poem on the contemptus mundi theme, an interesting antecedent of Jorge Manrique's* famous elegy. All his extant works, both prose and verse, are in Spanish, a language which many Portuguese writers were to use, along with Portuguese, for the following two centuries.

De contempto del mundo pub. in Cancioneiro Geral (1516; see vol. II in ed. of A. J. Gonçalves Guimarães); Sátira de felice e infelice vida (ed. A. Paz y Melia in Opúsculos literarios de los siglos XIV a XVI, 1892); Tragedia de la insigne reina doña Isabel (ed. C. Michaëlis de Vasconcelos, 1922).

A. Balaguer y Merino, Don P. el Condestable de Portugal, considerado como escritor, erudito y anticuario (Gerona, 1881); M. Menéndez y Pelayo, 'La poesía castellana en Portugal' in Antología de los poetas líricos castellanos, VII (1898). T.P.W.

Pedro, COUNT OF BARCELOS (*c. 1280; †1354), Portuguese poet and prose writer. A natural son of King Denis* of Portugal, he was more collector than poet; he seems to have compiled a large cancioneiro from which most of our texts of the early Galician-Portuguese lyric probably derive (CANCIONEIROS). He also edited and partly wrote a Livro de Linhagens—genealogies of the nobility interspersed with anecdotes and legends—which contains some of the first examples of Portuguese artistic prose.

Livro das linhagens do conde D. Pedro (ed. A. Herculano in Portugaliae Monumenta Historica, Scriptores, 1856–61).—A. Soares Amora, O nobiliário do conde D. P. (1948). T.P.W.

Pedro, DUKE OF COIMBRA (*Lisbon 9 XII 1392; †Alfarrobeira 20 V 1449), Portuguese moralist. An almost legendary figure on account of his extensive travels, Pedro acted as regent during the minority of his nephew, Alfonso V of Portugal. He died at the battle of Alfarrobeira. Responsible for the first Portuguese translations from the Latin classics—among them Cicero's* Offices—his Livro da Virtuosa Bemfeitoria is a free adaptation of Seneca's* De Beneficiis, written in collaboration with Frei João Verba, Pedro's confessor.

Livro dos Ofícios de Marco Tullio Ciceram (ed. J. M. Piel, 1948); Livro da Virtuosa Bemfeitoria (ed. J. Costa, 1946).

Martins de Carvalho, O livro da Virtuosa Bemfeitoria (1925); F. E. de Tejada, 'Ideologia e Utopia no "Livro da Virtuosa Bemfeitoria"' in Rev. Port. de Filos., III (1947). T.P.W.

Peele, GEORGE (*?London ?1558; ∞ by VI 1583; †?1596), English poet, dramatist and writer of pageants. A free scholar at Christ's Hospital (1565–70), he went to Broadgates Hall, Oxford (1571) and Christ Church (1574). Here he won the appreciation of William Gager*. Returning to London, Peele lived a life of such dissipation that his father was ordered to turn him out of Christ's Hospital (19 IX 1579). But he worked hard, and he was summoned to help Gager entertain the Polish Prince Palatine at Christ Church (VI 1583). His plays are talented and of variety but show no great ability to plot nor great interest in character and situation. His David and Bethsabe (1599) has been described as something near a revival of the Miracle play; he also wrote the chronicle Edward I (1593), the successful satire The Old Wives Tale (1595), pageants, addresses to private patrons and, in V 1591, the speeches to Queen Elizabeth* at Theobalds. His lyrics have an unusually successful combination of poetic sensibility and verbal and musical technique. In his dramatic verse, too, he shows himself a more than competent poet, of maturity and insight, who seems not to be exerting himself to the full, probably because he was fundamentally no dramatist. B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

The Life and Works of G. P. (gen. ed. C. T. Prouty), I: Life and Minor Works (ed. D. H. Horne, 1952), II: Edward I (ed. F. S. Hook) and The Battle of Alcazar (ed. J. Yoklavich, 1961), III: The Araynement of Paris (ed. R. M. Benbow), David and Bathsheba (ed. E. Blistein) and The Old Wives Tale (ed. F. S. Hook, 1970).

P. H. Cheffaud, G. P. (1913).

J.R.B. (T.P.M.)

Peer, ANDRI (*Sent 10 XII 1921), Ræto-Romansch poet. Since 1952 teacher of French and Italian at the cantonal college in Winterthur, he has successfully introduced the wider influences of modern European poetry to the localized atmosphere of the Romansch lyric. The richness of his language appears in his stories, essays, radio scripts and translations from German, French and Spanish. He has also published in German numerous articles and radio scripts, as well as translations from Romansch.

VERSE: Trais-cha dal temp (1946); Poesias (1948); Sömmis (1951); Batrüdas d'ala (1956); Sgrafits (with Ger. tr.; 1959); Clerais (with Ger. tr.; 1963); Da bel cler di (1969).—SHORT STORIES: La punt peidra, etc. (1947); Da nossas varts (1961).—ESSAYS AND APHORISMS: Tizzuns e sbrinzlas (1951); L'ura da sulai (1957); Viadi in Lucania (1961). R.R.B.

Péguy, CHARLES (*Orleans 7 VIII 1873; ∞1897 Charlotte Baudouin; †battle of Marne 5 IX 1914), French poet, essayist and pamphleteer. Péguy, the self-educated Orleans peasant, became one of Bergson's* most famous pupils. At the age of 25 he founded the Cahiers de la Quinzaine in which many now famous writers, including himself, first became known to the public. An ardent defender of Dreyfus (Notre Jeunesse), his Dreyfusism was as much his religion as the Roman Catholicism which made him write the dramatic poems on Joan of Arc. These are not historical dramas but the picture of a soul tormented by doubt. They contain passages of sublime poetry for which he forged his own vers libre. In his poems and in Ève (the story of grace superimposed upon the world of nature) he uses the old alexandrine with telling effect. His style with its repetitions, recurrent leitmotiv, and even the endearing familiarity with which he makes God speak, are repellent to some readers. His influence is still widely felt. He reconciled the young men of his day to the idea of patrie, teaching (Clio) that history must be studied as the narrative of the divine on earth (Gesta Dei per Francos) and that classical culture must be allowed to reign supreme in the cause of liberty.

Cahiers de la Quinzaine (229 vols, 1900–14); Le mystère de la charité de Jeanne d'Arc (1897; tr. J. Green, 1950); Le porche du mystère de la deuxième vertu (1911); Le mystère des Saints-Innocents (1912; tr. P. Pakenham, 1956); Victor Marie, Comte Hugo (1934).—Œuvres complètes (20 vols, 1917–55); Œuvres poétiques complètes (ed. F. Porché, 1941).

J. and J. Tharaud, Notre cher P. (2 vols, 1926); D. Halévy, P. et les Cahiers de la Quinzaine (1918, 1941 and 1946); J. Delaporte, Connaissance de P. (2 vols, 1944); R. Rolland, P. (2 vols, 1944); M. Villiers, C. P. a Study in Integrity (1965).

G.M.T. (M.T.)

Peire Cardenal (c. 1225–72), Provençal troubadour. Son of a knight of Puy-en-Velay, he practised the art of poetry at the courts of the nobles of southern France. His principal claim to distinction is his 65 sirventes in which he castigates with great vehemence the love poetry of the courts, the morals of upstarts, the corruption of the clergy and the cruelty of the Albigensian Crusaders.

'Un poème inédit de P. C.', in Romanic Rev., XX (1920); J. Boutière, 'Les poésies religieuses de P. C.' in Mélanges Le Gentil (1949); G. Contini, 'Quelques sirventes de P. C.' in Recueil de travaux offert à M. Cl. Brunel (1955); R. Lavaud, Poésies complètes du troubadour P. C. (1957).

C. Fabre, 'Études sur P. C., Estève de Belmont' in Annales du Midi, XXI (1909); C. Campros, 'P. C. e li nòrmas de la civilizacion occitana' in Oc, CCVII (1958); K. Lewent, 'Remarks on the texts of P. C.'s poems' in Neophilol. Mitteilungen, LXII (1961); Ch. Camproux, 'Vocabulaire courtois chez P. C.' in Ann. Inst. Études occitanes (1962–63), 'Amour chez P. C.' in Mélanges G. Straka (1970) and 'C. et Rutebeuf poètes satiriques' in Rev. des langues romanes, LXXIX (1971).

R.R.B. (K.R.)

Peire d'Alvernha, i.e. AUVERGNE (fl. c. 1158–80), Provençal troubadour of burgher descent. He was most successful as poet at the courts of Spain, Languedoc and Provence. He imitated Marcabru* in the trobar clus (obscure style) and made what had been a mannerism the vehicle of truly noble poetry.

R. Zenker, 'Die Lieder P.s von A.' in Romanische Forschungen, XII (1900); G. Bertoni, 'Restitution d'une chanson de P. d'A.' in Rev. de langues romanes, XLIV (1901); J. Coulet, 'Spécimen d'une édition des poésies de P. d'A.' in Mélanges Chabaneau (1907); A. Del Monte, P. d'A.: Liriche (1955).

A. P. Monahan, 'The subject of metaphysics for P. of A.' in Medieval Stud., XVI (1954); R. Lejeune, 'La "Galerie littéraire" du troubadour P. d'A.' in Rev. Langue et Litt. d'Oc, XII–XIII (1962–63).

R.R.B. (K.R.)

Peire d'Ussel: see Eble, Gui, Peire and Elias d'Ussel.

Peire Rogier (fl. c. 1160–80), Provençal troubadour of noble birth; at first a canon at Clermont (Auvergne). He celebrated in his songs the Viscountess Ermengarde of Narbonne and was later at the court of Raimbaut* d'Aurenga. The Middle Ages acclaimed him a classic amongst the troubadours, together with Bernart* de Ventadorn and Guiraut* Bornelh; with the latter he shares a lucid style and the use of the monologue in dialogue form, but he does not equal the flowing rhythm of Guiraut's stanza.

C. Appel, Leben und Lieder des Trobadors P. R. (1882). R.R.B.

Peire Vidal (c. 1180–1206), Provençal troubadour; son of a Toulouse farrier. He quickly achieved fame as a poet, leading an unsettled life wandering from court to court in southern France, Spain, Hungary, Italy, Malta and the Middle East. His life was a series of adventures in keeping with his own fantastic and engagingly flamboyant character. He combined canço d'amor and sirventes; this innovation, coupled with his great formal skill, makes a highly novel and individual impression. Real life and adventure, love and the natural settings of his own region are combined in unfamiliar and characteristic groupings; his work is unmistakable and inimitable.

Les poésies de P. V. (ed. J. Anglade, 1913, 1933); S. d'Arco Avals, P. V.: Poesie (1960).

K. Bartsch, P. V.'s Lieder (1857); S. Schopf, Beiträge zur Biographie und zur Chronologie der Lieder des Troubadours P. V. (1887); F. Novati, 'Un'avventura di P. V.' in Romania, XXI (1892); G. Bertoni, 'Come fu che P. V. divenne imperatore' in Giornale storico della lett. ital., LXV (1915); F. Torracca, 'P. V. in Italia' in Studi di storia letteraria (1923); A. Smirnov, 'Contribution à l'étude de la Vie provençale de P. V.' in Romania, LIV (1928); N. Zingarelli, 'P. V. e le cose d'Italia' in Studi medievali, new ser., I (1928); V. Crescini, 'Canzone-Sirventese di P. V.', ibid. (1928); E. Hoepffner, 'Le baiser volé de P. V.' in Mélanges Krepinski (1946); 'Les poésies de P. V. d'attribution douteuse' in Mélanges Halphen (1951) and Le troubadour P. V., sa vie et son œuvre (1961); C. Brunel, 'La "Loba" célébrée par les troubadours P. V. et Raimon de Mireval' in Mélanges Hoepffner (1949). R.R.B. (K.R.)

Pekkanen, Torvo (*Kotka 10 X 1902; ∞1933 Aino Halonen; †Copenhagen 29 V 1957), Finnish novelist, short-story writer, poet and playwright. The son of a working-class family, he left school when only 13 and for many years worked as a blacksmith. From 1932 he devoted himself to writing and in 1955 became a member of the Finnish Academy. The first important Finnish proletarian writer, his works depict the life of the urban poor and their attempts to improve their social position. Although traces of symbolism appear in his plays and short stories, it is as the author of deeply sensitive realist novels concerned with social justice that he will be remembered.

NOVELS AND STORIES: Rautaiset kädet (1927); Satama ja meri (1929); Kuolematon (1931); Tehtaan varjossa (1932); À l'ombre de l'usine, tr. I. Spira, 1943; Kauppiain lapset (1934); Ihmisten kevät (1935); Menschen im Frühling, tr. C. and F. Ege, 1949; Isänmaan ranta (1937); Aux rives de ma Finlande, tr. S. and J. Anglade, 1946; Levottomuus (1938); Musta hurmio (1939); Ne menneet vuodet (1940); Hämärtyvä horisontti (1944); Nuorin veli (1946); Aamuhämärä (1948); Toverukset (1948); Mies ja punapartaiset herrat (1950); Voittajat ja voitettut (1952).—PLAYS: Rakkaus ja raha (1937); Demoni (1939); Raja merellä (1942); Täytyneiden toiveiden maa (1956).—VERSE: Lähti matkalle (1955).—MEMOIRS: Ajan kasvot (1942); Lapsuuteni (1953); My Childhood, tr. Alan Blair, 1966).—Teokset (works; 7 vols, 1957–58).

K. Kare, T. P. (1952); M. Haavio, 'T. P.' in T. P. Teokset, I (1957); A. Laurila, 'T. P.: sen näytelmät' in Parnasso (1959); K. Ahti, T. P.: sen kirjailijantie (1967). M.A.B.

Peletier du Mans, JACQUES (*Le Mans 25 VII 1517; †Paris VII 1582), French poet, scientist and mathematician. He long counted as a member of the PLÉIADE and his Art Poétique (1555) formulated, after Du* Bellay, the theories of the group. His chief verse collection, the Amour des Amours, contains both lyrical sonnets and scientific poems. A teacher, he was interested in reformed spelling.

Œuvres poétiques (1547; ed. L. Séché, 1904); Dialogue de l'Orthographe e Prononciacion Française (1550; repro. photographically L. C. Porter, 1966); L'Amour des Amours (1555; ed. A. Van Bever, 1926); L'Art Poétique (1555; ed. A. Boulanger, 1930); La Savoie (1572; ed. C. Pagès, 1897).

C. Jugé, J. P. du M. (1907); A. M. Schmidt, La Poésie scientifique en France au 16e siècle (1939); D. B. Wilson, The Discovery of Nature in the Work of J. P. du M. (1954). G.B.

Pellevé de la Motte-Ange, MARIE JOSEPH LOUIS CAMILLE ROBERT: see Flers, ROBERT DE.

Pellicer, CARLOS (*Villa Hermosa 1899), Mexican poet. His poetry is deservedly famous for its plasticity and the poet's celebration of tropical nature, especially in the collections Colores en el mar (1921) and Hora de Junio (1937). In Práctica de vuelo (1956) he published poems on religious themes. J.F.

Piedra de sacrificios (1924); Seis, siete poemas (1924); Hora y veinte (Paris, 1927); Camino (ibid., 1929); 5 poemas (1931); Recinto (1941).—Primera antología poética (1969). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Pellico, SILVIO (*Saluzzo 25 VI 1789; †Turin 31 I 1854), Italian patriot and writer, best known as the editor of the periodical Il Conciliatore and for Le mie Prigioni (1832). Educated in France as well as Italy, Pellico early became the friend of Monti*, Foscolo*, Berchet*, Manzoni* and others. After Il Conciliatore was suppressed by the Austrians in 1819, Pellico joined the conspiratorial society of the Carbonari and was arrested and imprisoned for 15 years at Spielberg. Le mie Prigioni is a simple, moving account of his imprisonment and became very popular in spite of adverse criticism by some who thought it preached undue pacifism and obedience to authority; C. Balbo* said it had done more harm to Austria than the loss of a battle. It is still considered a classic.

Before his imprisonment he completed eight romantic tragedies, of which the most popular was Francesca da Rimini (1814). A didactic treatise, I doveri degli uomini (1834), and most of his lyrics and Epistolario were written afterwards and lack his earlier warmth and energy. His plays fail because of an excessive delicacy of feeling.

Opere di S. P. (1856-60); Epistolario (1856); Opere scelte (ed. C. Curto, 1954); Lettere milanesi (1815-21) (ed. M. Scotti, 1963).

I. Rinieri in Della vita e delle opere di S. P. (1898-1901); F. Montanari, S. P. della mediocrità (1935); M. Parenti, Bibliografia delle opere di S. P. (1952). C.Dr. (J.G.-R.)

Pels, ANDRIES (*1631; †Amsterdam 3 VII 1681), Dutch playwright and art critic, founded NIL VOLENTIBUS ARDUUM with Meyer* and others and from then was a disciple of French classicism. He wrote an adaptation of the Ars Poetica, Q. Horatius Flaccus' dichtkunst op onze tijden en zeden gepast (1677), and a manual on the stage, Gebruik en Misbruik des Tooneels (1681). In addition to his own drama Dido's Doot (1668) he wrote (in collaboration with Blaeu) Het Eiland van Vrije Keus, included in his play Tieranny van Eigenbaat (1679).

W. Bilderdijk, Bijdragen tot de Tooneelpoëzij (1823); C. N. Wynands, Het Amsterdamsch Tooneel 1617-1772 (1873); A. J. Kronenberg, Eenige opmerkingen aangaande twee politieke zinspelen (1876); J. Bauwens, L'influence de Corneille en Hollande (1921). A.M.B.W.

Pemán, JOSÉ MARÍA (*Cádiz 8 V 1898), Spanish poet, playwright and orator. The strong, combative Roman Catholicism which inspires all his works made him the poet of Franco's Spain. He often uses Andalusian folk-lore for his political-religious message. In the advancement of his ideals his greatest successes have been in the theatre.

Obras completas (5 vols, 1948).—VERSE: A la rueda, rueda (1929); El barrio de Santa Cruz (1931); Elegía de la tradición española (1931); Poema de la bestia y el ángel (1938).—PLAYS: El divino impaciente (1933); A Saint in a Hurry, tr. H. De Blacam, 1935; La Santa Virreina (1939); Metternich (1943). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Pembroke, COUNTESS OF: see Herbert, MARY.

Penev, BOYAN (*Shumen 27 IV 1882; ∞Dora Gabe*; †Sofia 25 VI 1927), Bulgarian literary scholar. His extensive and original studies in Bulgarian literary history have influenced writers and critics of his time and since. His four-volume survey of it is likely to remain a standard work.

Nachalo na bulgarskoto vuzrajdanie (1916); Hristo Botev (1920); Paissy Hilendarski (1928; 1936); Purvata bulgarska povest (1929); Istoria na novata bulgarska literatura (posth. ed. B. Yotsov, 4 vols, 1930-36); Aleko Konstantinov (1937); Zapadnoevropeyska romantika (1938). V.P.

Penev, PENYO (*Dobromirka 7 V 1930; †[suicide] Dimitrovgrad 27 IV 1959), Bulgarian poet. A sensitive militant, he spent himself from 1949 onwards in building the new industrial town of Dimitrovgrad. He recorded his feelings in poems which are few but forceful, especially Dni na proverkata. Activist though he was, he got 'out of rhythm' with his time, succumbing to drink and, like Yavorov*, to his sense of tragic destiny.

Dobro utro, hora (1956); Nie ot dvadesetiya vek (posth. ed. M. Ivanov, 1959).—Sel. works (1960). V.P.

Penn, WILLIAM (*London 14 X 1644; ∞1672 Gulielma Springett, ∞1695 Hannah Callowhill; †Ruscombe, Berks 30 VII 1718), American statesman. Central figure of American Quakers, he organized the colonies of New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware on the basis of religious toleration, political democracy and pacifism. He wrote on theological and political subjects but is best in his moral aphorisms.

Quakerism: A New Nick-Name for Old Christianity (1672); A Brief Account of the Province of Pennsylvania (1682); Some Fruits of Solitude (1693).—A Collection of the Works of W. P. (2 vols, 1726).

W. Hull, W. P. (1937); E. C. O. Beatty, W. P. as a Social Philosopher (1939); C. O. Peare, W. P.: a Biography (1957). H.L.C. (D.S.R.W.)

Pennant, THOMAS (*Downing 14 VI 1726; ∞1759 Elizabeth Falconer, ∞1777 Anne Mostyn; †ibid. 16 XII 1798), Anglo-Welsh antiquary, naturalist and traveller. He corresponded with Linnaeus* and in 1766 published the first part of British Zoology. His Tour in Scotland (1769) and Tour in Wales (1st pt, 1778) prompted Johnson's* remark, 'He's the best traveller I ever read'.

History of Quadrupeds (1781); London (1790); Indian Zoology (2nd ed. 1790); The Literary Life of T. P. (1793); Tour on the Continent, 1765 (ed. G. R. de Beer, 1948).

Sir W. Jardine, Memoir (1843).

C.P.

Pepoli, COUNT CARLO (*Bologna 22 VII 1796; †ibid. 7 XII 1881), Italian patriot and poet, a friend of Leopardi* and vice-president of the Felsinei academy of Bologna. Exiled for his political activities in 1831, he succeeded Panizzi* at University College, London, in 1838, returning to Italy in 1862. He was a friend of Carlyle* and Thomas. His works are undistinguished.

Discorsi Academici (1881); Prose e Poesie (1880).

C. Albicini, C. P., saggio storico (1888); M. C. Wicks, The Italian Exiles in London 1816-48 (1937). N.K.W.

Pepys, SAMUEL (*London 23 II 1633; ∞10 X 1655 Elizabeth le Marchant de St Michel [†10 XI 1669]; †Clapham 26 V 1703), English diarist. Pepys was an energetic and successful naval administrator; his private diary, kept from 1660 to 1669, is unrivalled in its candour and piquancy, for Pepys had an irrepressible appetite for every aspect of life—music, drink, science, drama, politics, adultery and self-examination. G.K.H. (C.B.)

Memoirs . . . comprising his Diary from 1659 to 1699 (ed. R. Braybrooke, 2 vols, 1825; 5 vols, 1848-49; ed. M. Bright, with corresp., 6 vols, 1875-79; ed. H. B. Wheatley, 10 vols, 1893-99; ed. R. Latham and W. Matthews, 1970- ); Everybody's P. (abr. ed. C. F. Morshead, 1926); Private Correspondence (2 vols, 1926) and Further Correspondence (1929; both ed. J. R. Tanner).

H. B. Wheatley, S. P. (1880); A. Bryant, S. P. (3 vols, 1933-38). J.R.B.

Peralta Barnuevo, PEDRO DE (*Lima 26 XI 1663; †ibid. 30 IV 1743), Peruvian scholar and poet. He wrote many works on scientific and historical subjects. As a poet, his major work is Lima fundada (1732), on the life of Pizarro.

Lima fundada in Colección de documentos literarios del Perú, I (ed. M. de Odrizola, 1863-77).—For other works, see S. E. Leavitt, A Tentative Bibliography of Peruvian Literature (1932).

E.Sa. (J.F.)

Percoto, CATERINA (*S. Lorenzo di Soleschiano, Friuli 19 II 1812; †ibid. 14 VIII 1887), Italian writer of rustic stories in Italian and Friulian. Influenced by George Sand* and later by Balzac*, her sober pictures of country life, including the impoverished peasantry, show great insight and sympathy, and her writing contributed towards the development of a Friulian literary language.

Scritti friuliani (1929); L'Anno della fame ed altri racconti (1945).

G. D'Aronco, 'Contributo a una bibliografia ragionata di C. P.' in Vita e pensiero, XXI (1947); V. Branca, 'Per C. P.' in Lettere italiane, XI (1959). J.G.-R.

Percy, THOMAS, Bishop of Dromore (*Bridgnorth 13 IV 1729; ∞1759 Anne Gutteridge; †Dromore 30 IX 1811), English literary historian who published Reliques of Ancient English Poetry (3 vols) in 1765, thus making available to the age of Ossian and Otranto the genuine treasures of medieval romance and BALLAD poetry and profoundly influencing literary development in England and Germany. Educated at Oxford and living for 29 years in the country parish of Easton Maudit, Northamptonshire, Percy garnered his Reliques from an old folio, found by chance, and from correspondents throughout Britain, and added discriminating critical essays.

Han Kiou Choan, or the Pleasing History . . . with a Collection of Chinese Proverbs and Fragments of Chinese Poetry (4 vols, 1761); Five Pieces of Runic Poetry, translated from the Islandic Language (1763); Northern Antiquities (1770); Hermit of Warkworth (1771); Bishop Percy's Folio Manuscript (ed. J. W. Hales and F. J. Furnivall, with life by J. Pickford, 3 vols, 1867-68); Ancient Songs, chiefly on Moorish subjects, translated from the Spanish (ed. D. Nichol Smith, 1932); The Percy Letters (ed. idem and Cleanth Brooks, 1944 ff.).

A. C. C. Gaussen, P., Prelate and Poet (1908). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Perdigon (c. 1190-1212), Provençal troubadour from the Gévaudan. Born the son of a fisherman he became a minstrel and was knighted by Dalfin* d'Alvernha. After a successful career as poet he ended his life as a Cistercian. His songs are melancholy in mood; he makes skilful use of metaphors, similes and the personification of abstract ideas. He claims that his style (by contrast with the easy manner of certain contemporaries) is the conscious expression of his own temperament. He was often imitated, particularly in Italy.

Les chansons de P. (ed. H. J. Chaytor, 1909, 1926).—C. Fabre, Le troubadour P. (1917); E. Hoepffner, 'La biographie de P.' in Romania, LIII (1927); G. de Beaufort, 'Le troubadour P. fut-il moine cistercien à Aiguebelle?' in Bull. Soc. Drôme, LXXI (1951). R.R.B. (K.R.)

Pereda y Sánchez de Porrúa, JOSÉ MARÍA DE (*Polanco, Santander 6 II 1833; ∞Diodora de la Revilla; †Santander 1 III 1906), Spanish novelist. He was the last of 22 children in a wealthy hidalgo family. He left his studies of artillery unfinished to return to his manor home where he spent all his life looking after his estate, reading, writing and enjoying open-air life. Though a friend of Pérez* Galdós, he was ultra-conservative in politics, religion and life, and wrote several novels in defence of his ideals (El buey suelto, 1877; Don Gonzalo González de la Gonzalera, 1878) which are loaded with sentimentality, one-sidedness and moral preaching. But when he abandons these 'thesis' novels and concentrates on what he knew well and felt intensely, he becomes a master of the regional novel. Examples of this are his Escenas montañosas (1864), vivid sketches of country life, and the two masterpieces of the genre: Sotileza (1884) which deals with the coastal life of Santander, and Peñas arriba (1894) which depicts the mountainous region. In both these novels the plot is thin and the ideas unimportant but the portrayal of local types, their way of living in relation to sea and mountain (the real protagonists) is superb. Pereda is a great landscape painter with a precise style in both narrative and dialogue.

Obras completas (1945).—Extracts from Sotileza, La Leva, Hombres de pro, Don Gonzalo (tr. W. H. Bishop in Library of the World's Best Literature, New York, 1942); The Last of the Breed and Other Stories (tr. D. Freeman, London, 1914).

J. M. Cossío, La obra literaria de P. (1934); J. Camp, J. M. P. Sa vie, son œuvre et son temps (1937); R. Gullón, Vida de P. (1944); J. F. Montesinos, P. o la novela idilio (Mexico, 1961; 2nd ed. Madrid, 1969); A. H. Clarke, P. paisajista: el sentimiento de la naturaleza en la novela española del siglo XIX (1969). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Pereira, NUNO MARQUES (*Caitu, Bahia 1652; †Lisbon 1728), Brazilian author of an allegorical novel, religious and moralizing in the baroque taste, which sends the author on a lone journey to reveal 'the abuses introduced by the malice of the Devil into the State of Brazil'. His critical observations, which have great interest, are only alleviated by his delight in the exceptional beauty and abundance of nature, including the birds to whom he dedicated a page of verse. The prose is rich and expressive.

Compêndio Narrativo do Peregrino da América (Lisbon, 1728; 2 vols, 1939). J.T.B.

Pere Quart: see Oliver, JOAN.

Peretz, YITZHOK LEIBUSH (*Zamoszcz, Poland 18 V 1852; †Warsaw 3 IV 1915), Yiddish author, 'the father' of modern Yiddish literature. He started writing in Polish and Hebrew (1876), but after his first Yiddish story was published (1888), he became the central figure in Yiddish literature. Himself influenced by modern European literature, in particular German and Russian, he established a new trend in his own field—deeply social in outlook and pronouncedly national in form and content—drawing on the best traditions of Jewish writing and philosophy of the past. He attacked 'assimilationism' as a betrayal of the people's longing for culture in their own language. He preached a modern Messianism which had a special appeal to the post-First-World-War generation, and gave rise to what was termed 'Peretzism' in literature, the theatre and the newly emergent Jewish visual arts of graphics and painting (Lissitzky, Chagall and others). A lawyer by profession, he was barred from practice by the Tsarist authorities because of his association with the Jewish Workers' Movement, and spent the last 25 years of his life as an official of the Warsaw Jewish community, engaged in social welfare work, besides his cultural activities in many fields as lecturer and writer. Peretz' stories have been translated into many other languages, either singly or in collections, and are included in many anthologies.

Poezie (1892); Bilder fun a provintz raize (1894); Dos shtreimel (1896); Shriftn (7 vols, 1901); One Act Plays (1 vol, 1906; New York, 1907); Ale verk (18 vols, 1908; 12 vols, New York, 1920); Dramen (1910); Geklibene verk (1925); Oisgevelte verk (2 vols, 1951); Dertseilungn (London, 1952); Oisgevelte shriftn (1959); In keyler-shtub (1959).—ENGLISH TRANSLATIONS: Stories and Pictures (tr. H. Frank, Philadelphia, 1906); As Once We Were (tr. E. T. Margolis, Los Angeles, 1951); The Golden Chain (extract from the play Di goldene Keyt; tr. J. Sonntag, London, 1953); The Book of Fire (stories; tr. J. Leftwich, London-New York, 1960); In This World and the Next (sel. writing; tr. M. Spiegel, New York, 1958); My Memoirs (tr. F. Goldberg, ibid., 1965); Stories From P. (tr. S. Liptzin, ibid., 1964); Three Gifts and Other Stories (tr. H. Goodman, ibid., 1947); The Three Canopies (tr. T. Feinman, ibid., 1968).

Leksikon fun der moderner Yiddisher Literatur, VII (1968; biblio. only).—A. A. Roback, I. L. P., Psychologist of Literature (Boston, 1935); M. Samuel, Prince of the Ghetto (Philadelphia, 1949). J.S.

Pereverzev, VALERIAN FÉDOROVICH (*1882), Soviet critic; orthodox Marxist editor, and author of studies on Gogol*, Dostoyevsky* etc. He took a prominent part in Soviet literary controversy but subsequently fell into disgrace.

Tvorchestvo Dostoyevskogo (1912); F. M. Dostoyevsky (1925); U istokov real'nogo romana (1937). J.L.

Pérez, ANTONIO (*Madrid; †Paris 1611), Spanish political and letter writer. He studied in Italy and at Alcalá and became secretary to Philip II. His imprisonment and escape brought about the loss of the special liberties of Aragón. His Relaciones (Paris, 1598) consist of a defence of his conduct. His letters are renowned for their epigrammatic style and for the self-revelations they contain. Certain other treatises are more doubtfully attributed to him.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XIII; Las obras y relaciones (Geneva, 1631); 'Cartas a su mujer' (ed. M. Serrano y Sanz in Rev. de Archivos, VII-VIII, 1902-03); Colección de documentos inéditos, I, XII, XIII, XV, LVI (1842-70).

J. Fitzmaurice-Kelly, A. P. (1922); G. Marañón, A. P. (Buenos Aires, 1947; 3rd ed. 1951); A. Pérez Gómez, A. P., escritor y hombre de estado (1959). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Peréz de Ayala, RAMÓN (*Oviedo 9 VIII 1881; †Madrid 5 VIII 1962), Spanish novelist, poet and essayist. He was educated in a Jesuit school, studied law at Oviedo under Clarín (Alas* y Ureña), travelled extensively in Europe and America, was war correspondent during the First World War and was ambassador in London under the Republic and cultural attaché in Buenos Aires under Franco.

His dictum 'there is no other poetry than the poetry of the intellect (entendimiento)' reveals the dominant character of all his production. This intellectualism, combined with a sceptical, almost cynical nature, an acute power of observation and a dry humour, is softened by a genuine interest in life and people. Hence the originality of his works. His mastery of the language makes his literary style one of the best of the period, though at times too elaborate. From Tinieblas en las cumbres (1907) to Troteras y danzaderas (1913) the autobiographical element dominates his work. Though ideas are discussed, the subtle mockery of contemporary Spanish life dominates his novels (e.g. in A.M.D.G., 1910, on life in a Jesuit school). From Belarmino y Apolonio (1921) to El curandero de su honra (1926)—his most interesting group of novels—the characters become symbols of human problems in a world of stylized reality. His Novelas poemáticas stand as a bridge between the two groups. A similar evolution is perceived in his three volumes of poetry, part of an unfinished tetralogy of the elements, whose importance has yet to be fully assessed. His books of criticism are marred by excessive partisanship.

Obras completas (19 vols, 1923–28); Obras completas (ed. J. García Mercader, 4 vols, 1963); Poesías completas (Buenos Aires, 1942).—Prometheus, The Fall of the House of Limon, Sunday Sunlight (tr. A. P. Hubbard and T. H. Conklin, 1920); The Fox's Paw (tr. T. Walsh, 1924); Tiger John (tr. W. Starkie, 1933); 'The Assistant Professor' (tr. W. B. Wells in Great Spanish Short Stories, 1932).

F. Agustín, R. P. de A., su vida y obras (1927); J. A. Balseiro, 'R. P. de A., novelista' in El Vigía, II (1928); C. Barja, Libros y autores contemporáneos (1935); C. Clavería, Cinco estudios (1945); K. W. Reinink, Algunos aspectos literarios y lingüísticos de la obra de don R. P. de A. (The Hague, 1959); N. Urrutia, De 'Troteras' a 'Tigre Juan' (1960).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Peréz de Guzmán, FERNÁN (*c. 1378; ∞Marquesa de Avellaneda; †?Batres ?1460), Spanish poet and biographer. He was related to López* de Ayala, Santillana* and Garcilaso*. He took an active part in the civil wars of John II's reign but after imprisonment in 1432 retired to his estates to cultivate letters. He wrote some pleasing love poems but his moral verses are more typical of him. His Mar de historias is largely a compilation from John of Columna and others. In the Generaciones y semlanzas, short brilliantly written character-sketches of the great men of his time are drawn with honesty and candour, though some political bias may be seen.

R. Foulché-Delbosc, Cancionero castellano del siglo XV in Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XIX; Mar de historias repr. in Rev. Hispanique, XXVIII (1913); Generaciones y semlanzas (ed. J. Domínguez Bordona, 1924; ed. R. B. Tate, London, 1965).

F. López de Estrada, 'La retórica en las Generaciones y semlanzas de F. P. de G.' in Revista de Filol. Esp., XXX (1946); A. Soria, 'La Confesión rimada de F. P. de G.' in Boletín de la Real Acad. Esp., XL (1960). E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Pérez de Hita, GINÉS (*?Mula, Murcia c. 1544; †?1619), Spanish novelist. He served as a soldier during the suppression of the revolt of the Moriscos in the Alpujarras (1568–71). He wrote an epic about the history of the town of Lorca. His best-known work is usually entitled Guerras civiles de Granada (2 parts, Saragossa, 1595, and Cuenca, 1619). The first part is a highly coloured novel about Moorish life in Granada before the conquest of 1492; it abounds in vivid but fictional descriptions of Moorish customs, tournaments etc., and contains good texts of genuine frontier ballads. The second contains a history of the rebellion of 1568, which is less vivid, more realistic and has some documentary value. It provided the source of Calderón's* Amar después de la muerte. The first part was often reprinted and influenced Scudéry*, Chateaubriand* and Washington Irving*.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., III; Guerras civiles de Granada (ed. P. Blanchard-Demouge, 2 vols, 1913–15; best ed.).

N. Acero y Abad, G. P. de H. Estudios biográfico y bibliográfico (1888); P. Festugière, 'G. P. de H., sa personne, son œuvre' in Bull. Hispanique, XLVI (1944). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Pérez de Montalbán, JUAN (*Madrid 1602; †ibid. 25 VI 1638), Spanish dramatist and novelist. He was the son of a book-seller and an admirer of Lope de Vega*, of whom he was the first biographer. His plays followed Lope's model; the best, El segundo Séneca de España, is about Philip II. His miscellany Para todos was violently attacked by Quevedo* in La perinola. Lope may have written the poem Orfeo, published as Montalbán's. Calderón* used his account of St Patrick's Purgatory.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XIV, XVI, XXIV, XXXIII, XLII, XLV, LII; J. Fitzmaurice-Kelly, The Nun Ensign (1908); Orfeo en lengua castellana (ed. P. Cabañas, 1948); Novelas ejemplares (ed. F. Gutiérrez, 1957); Sucesos y prodigios de amor (ed. A. G. de Amezuá, 1969).

G. W. Bacon, 'The life and works of Dr J. P. de M.' in Rev. Hispanique, XXVI (1912).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Pérez de Oliva, HERNÁN (*Córdoba ?1494; †ibid. 1533), Spanish humanist. He studied at Salamanca, Alcalá, Paris and Rome. Later he was Rector of Salamanca (1524). He wrote prose adaptations of Plautus*, Sophocles** Electra and Euripides** Hecuba. His dialogue on the dignity of man is a fine piece of prose. His nephew Ambrosio de Morales* edited his works in 1586.

Diálogo de la dignidad del hombre in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., LXV; 'Teatro' (ed. W. C. Atkinson in Rev. Hispanique, LXIX, 1927).

W. C. Atkinson, 'H. P. de O. A biographical and critical study' in Rev. Hispanique, LXXI (1927).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Pérez Galdós, BENITO (*Las Palmas, Canary Islands 10 V 1843; †Madrid 4 I 1920), the greatest Spanish novelist of the 19th century. Galdós was sent to Madrid to study law at the age of 19, took to journalism, tried his hand at drama, and in 1873 published the first of what was to become a series of 46 historical novels, the Episodios nacionales (1873-1912), dealing with the history of Spain from Trafalgar (1805) to the Restoration (1875). With these novels Galdós captured—and to some extent created—the middle-class reading public. Simultaneously he began to publish novels on contemporary topics. One of his earliest successes, Doña Perfecta (1876), presents a powerful and melodramatic view of the clashes which lay behind the civil struggles of the 19th century. The 'contemporary novels' (1881-97) deal largely with life in Madrid, and the direct confrontations of the early polemical novels are replaced by the fusion of polarities. His greatest novels are Fortunata y Jacinta (1886-87), with its wide canvas, Angel Guerra (1890-91), and the four novels dealing with the vividly portrayed Torquemada (1889-95). Galdós' great strength lies in his use of realistic descriptions and accounts which have at the same time symbolic overtones when considered in the perspective of the entire work. He was keenly interested in psychological abnormalities and in what came to be known as the unconscious; his characterization is vivid, his dialogue reveals an excellent ear and his humour is Cervantine in its irony. His last four novels (1897-1915) reveal how far he travelled along the road from realism and naturalism towards the non-realistic novel which was to characterize the early years of the 20th century, a development foreshadowed in the later Episodios. Galdós also wrote for the theatre, dramatizing some of his own novels, and producing polemical works in a somewhat old-fashioned style. In the 1920s and 1930s his reputation was in eclipse, but in recent years his work has been evaluated anew although, despite a handful of modern translations, his novels are as yet little known in the English-speaking world. J.E.V.

Obras completas (ed. F. C. Sáinz de Robles, 6 vols, 1941-42; often repr.).—Lady Perfecta (tr. M. Wharton, 1894); Marianela (tr. idem, 1893); Trafalgar: A Tale (tr. C. Bell, New York, 1884 and 1888); Family of Leon Roch (tr. idem, ibid. and London, 1888); The Court of Charles IV (tr. idem, New York, 1888); Gloria (tr. idem, ibid., 1890, London, 1897); 'The Mule and the Ox' and 'Princess and the Ragamuffin' (tr. in A. Ogden, Christmas Stories from French and Spanish Writers, 1893); 'Battle of Salamanca' in Lippincott's Mag. (1895); Saragossa (tr. M. C. Smith, Boston, 1900); Electra (tr. idem, 1901); 'In Praise of June' (tr. J. R. Bidwell in Living Age, 1900); Torment (tr. J. M. Cohen, 1952); Miau (tr. idem, 1963); The Spendthrifts (tr. G. Woolsey, 1952); Compassion (tr. J. Maclean, 1966).

L. B. Walton, P. G. and the Spanish Novel of the 19th Century (1927); H. C. Berkowitz, P. G. Spanish Liberal Crusader (1948); J. Casaldueiro, Vida y obra de G. (1951); W. T. Pattison, B. P. G. and the Creative Process (1954); S. Eoff, The Novels of P. G. The Concept of Life as Dynamic Process (1954); R. Gullón, G., novelista moderno (1960); J. Schraibman, Dreams in the Novels of G. (1960); H. Hinterhäuser, Die 'Episodios Nacionales' von B. P. G. (1961; Span. tr. 1963); G. Correa, El simbolismo religioso en las novelas de P. G. (1962), and Realidad, ficción y símbolo en las novelas de P. G. (1967); R. J. Weber, The 'Miau' Manuscript of B. P. G. (1964); F. Ruiz Ramón, Tres personajes galdosianos (1964); A. Regalado García, B. P. G. y la novela histórica española (1966); M. Nimetz, Humor in G. (1968); T. A. Sackett, P. G. An Annotated Bibliography (1968); J. F. Montesinos, G. (3 vols, 1968-71); G. Studies (ed. J. E. Varey, 1970). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Périer, ODILON-JEAN (*Brussels 9 III 1901; ∞1926 Laure Féron; †ibid. 22 II 1928), Belgian poet and dramatist. Founder with Franz Hellens* of Le Disque vert (1922), a wilfully hermetical writer, he later developed a more classical manner, fraught with brilliant imagery, simple yet effective.

VERSE: Le citadin et l'éloge de Bruxelles (1924); Le passage des anges (1926); Le promeneur (1927); Poèmes (1938).—Les indifférents (play; 1925).

A. Marin, O.-J. P. (1939). B.M.W. (J.C.D.)

Perk, CHRISTINA ELIZABETH, known as BETSY (*Delft 26 III 1835; †Nijmegen 30 III 1906), Dutch editor and writer of historical novels and books on the emancipation of women.

Tesselschade in den huiselijken kring (1873); Jacques Perk geschetst (1902). J.W.W.

Perk, JACQUES FABRICE HERMAN (*Dordrecht 10 VI 1859; †Amsterdam 1 XI 1881), Dutch poet, generally considered the most important forerunner of the movement of the 1880s. Willem Kloos* used his posthumous edition of Perk's poems (1882) to publish an introductory manifesto. Perk's poetry (many sonnets) on Nature and love is one long glorification of Beauty.

VERSE: Mathilde-krans (ed. G. Stuiveling, 3 vols, 1941); Verzamelde gedichten (ed. idem, 1957); Proeven in dicht en onacht (ed. idem, 1958).—Brieven en documenten (letters and documents; ed. G. Stuiveling, 1959).

W. Kloos, Veertien jaar literatuurgeschiedenis, I (1896); A. Verwey, Proza, I (1921) and Van J. P. tot nu (1925); P. H. Muller, 'P.-bibliografie' in Opwaartsche Wegen (1927–28); De Nieuwe Gids (memorial no., 1931); G. Stuiveling, De briefwisseling Vosmaer-Kloos (1938), Een dichter verliefd (1939) and Het korte leven van J. P. (1957). J.J.O.

Perl, YOSEF (*Tarnopol, Galicia 7 XI 1773; †ibid. 1 X 1839), Hebrew satirist and educationist. Brought up to become a rabbi, he later became acquainted with the men of the Haskalah ('enlightenment') in Berlin and was encouraged by them to study secular subjects. He devoted himself to the cause of Jewish emancipation and education, and founded the first modern school for the Jews in his home town, which served as a model for others. He was patronized in his educational work by the Emperor of Austria and even by the Tsar of Russia.

Megale Temirin (Vienna, 1819); Bochen Zaddik (Prague, 1838).—Maasiyot Weigrot (1969). S.A. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Perotto, NICCOLÒ (*Fano 1429; †Sassoferato 14 XII 1480), humanist churchman. Product of the schools of Vittorino (Rambaldoni*) and Guarino*, Perotto entered Papal service for which he was finally rewarded with the archbishopric of Siponto. He was associated with many literary controversies. In his own writing the remarkable Cornucopia (Venice, 1489), a massive commentary on Martial*, stands out. D.H.

Perovsky, ALEXEY ALEKSEYEVICH, pseud. ANTON POGOREL'SKY (*1787; †1836), Russian author whose Romantic stories and novels showed the influence of Hoffmann* and of German Romanticism. His novel Monastyrka (1830–33), about the life of the Ukrainian gentry, suggests the influence of Fielding*.

Sochineniya (2 vols, 1853); Dvoynik, Monastyrka (1960). J.L.

Perpessicius, pseud. of DIMITRIE S. PANAITESCU (*Brăila 1891; †Bucharest 29 III 1970), Rumanian critic, literary historian and poet. Successive volumes of his monumental edition of Eminescu* have been appearing since 1939. He was the author of pleasing elegiac verse and translations and imitations of the Latin poets.

CRITICISM: Mențiuni critice, I–V (1928–46); Alte mențiuni de istoriografie literară și folclor, I (1957–1960) (1961), II (1958–1962) (1964), III (1963–1967) (1967).—VERSE: Scut și targă (1926); Itinerar sentimental (1932).—Opere (1966– ). F.J.B.

Perponcher Sedlnitsky, WILLEM EMMERY DE (*The Hague 16 IV 1741; †1773 Agnes C. Voet van Winssen; †Utrecht 25 VI 1819), Dutch poet, aesthete, theologian and pedagogue, jurist and man of letters. He wrote an important ROBINSONNADE, Rhapsodien of 't leeven van Altamont (1775), and opposed van Alphen* and Feith*.

Zedekundige brieven over het geluk (1769–72); Brieven aan Van Alphen (1780); Mengelwerk (under motto 'Tendimus ad caelestem patriam'; 9 vols, 1775–88); Gedichten (3 vols, 1800–02); Spreeken ... (5 vols, 1809–14).

J. Reijers, W. E. de P. (1942).

J.W.W.

Perrault, CHARLES (*Paris 12 I 1628; †ibid. 16 V 1703), French writer. The youngest of four brothers (CLAUDE, physician and architect, 1613–88; NICOLAS, Jansenist and burlesque poet, 1611–61; PIERRE, receveur général des finances, translator and critic, 1608–80), he was influential as controller of the King's buildings under Colbert and in the French Academy where he introduced the secret ballot for the election of members. His poem, Le Siècle de Louis le Grand (1687), opened the Quarrel of the ANCIENTS AND THE MODERNS and opposed him to Boileau*, the champion of antiquity, until their reconciliation in 1694 (see also Houdar* de la Motte). He is particularly remembered for his fairy tales (Contes du temps passé), which made popular, in the form which has now become traditional, such tales as The Sleeping Beauty and Cinderella, and contained the first known written versions of Bluebeard and Little Red Riding Hood.

VERSE: Les Murs de Troie ou L'Origine du burlesque (1653; in collab. with N. and P. Perrault); Saint Paulin (1686).—PROSE: Parallèle des anciens et des modernes (1688–97); Apologie des femmes (1694); Les Hommes illustres qui ont paru en France pendant le 17e siècle (1697–1701); Histoires ou contes du temps passé (1697; ed. F. Henriot, 1928; ed. G. Rouger, 1967; tr. G. Brereton, 1957); Mémoires de ma vie (ed. P. Bonnefon, 1909); Œuvres complètes (ed. J. J. Pauvert and M. Soriano, 3 vols, 1968–69).

P. Bonnefon, 'C. P.' in Rev. d'Hist. Litt. (1904–06); H. Gillot, La Querelle des anciens et des modernes (1914); A. Hallays, Les P. (1926); P. Saintyres, Les contes de P. et les récits parallèles (1923); S. Thompson, The Folktale (New York, 1946) and Motif-Index of Folk Literature (6 vols, Copenhagen); P. Delarue and M. L. Tenèze, Le conte populaire français, catalogue raisonné (2 vols, 1957-65); Dr Lauzier-Desfrez, 'Essai de compréhension psychopathologique des contes de P.' in Entretiens psychiatriques (Toulouse, 1965); M. Soriano, Les contes de P. (1968). G.B.

Perron, E. DU [CHARLES EDGAR], pseud. DUO PERKENS (*Djakarta 2 XI 1899; ∞ Elisabeth de Roos; †Bergen 14 V 1940), Dutch poet, novelist and critic. He lived in Belgium, Paris, where he was friendly with André Malraux*, Java and finally Holland. For some time he was considered an outsider, who launched his fierce attacks on Dutch parochialism from this unexposed position. Later, however, he founded the review, Forum, with his friend Menno ter Braak*. In this magazine he broke completely with his experimental past, emphasizing the value of literature as a means of confirming the possibilities and the limitations of the individual. He admired Multatuli*, Stendhal* and French 18th-century writers. He attacked inflated values and artificial literature just as much as totalitarian political movements. He stressed not the beauty of form but the man behind it. His novel, Het land van herkomst (1935), is still generally considered the most complete Dutch statement of the position of a European intellectual in the 1930s. His poems form an interesting mixture of colloquialism, 'parlando' poetry, and 'pure' poetry. His criticism concerns itself mainly with what a writer 'has to say', De man van Labak. Du Perron wrote the best, unfortunately incomplete, biography of Multatuli.

Manuscrit trouvé dans une poche (verse; 1923); Het roerend bezit (stories; 1924); Briefwisseling (letters, with Menno ter Braak; 4 vols, 1962-67).—NOVELS: Een voorbereiding (1927, 1931); Schandaal in Holland (1939).—CRITICISM AND ESSAYS: Cahiers van een lezer (5 vols, 1928-29); De smalle mens (1934); De man van Lebak (1937).—Parlando (coll. verse; 1941); Verzameld werk (coll. works; 7 vols, 1955-60).

G. H.'s-Gravesande, E. du P. (1947); W. L. M. E. van Leeuwen, Drie vrienden (1947); F. Batten and A. A. M. Stols, Bibliografie (1948); H. A. Gomperts, Jagen om te leven (1949) and De schok der herkenning (1959); André Malraux, Fr. essay in Botteghe Oscure, XII (1953); Jan van Nijlen, Herinneringen aan E. du P. (1955); Ada Deprez, E. du P. (1960); S. Vestdijk, Gestalten tegenover mij (1962); J. H. W. Veenstra, D'Artagnan tegen Jan Fuselier (1962); Bok (special no., 1964); J. J. Oversteegen, Vorm of vent (1969); Schrijvers prentenboek, XIII (1969). J.J.O.

Pers, DIRCK PIETERSZ (*Emden 1579; †Amsterdam 12 IV 1662), Dutch poet and publisher, member of the EGELANTIER, published Vondel's* collections of emblems, De Gulden Winckel and Vorstelijke Warande der Dieren. He himself wrote devotional (Lucretia, ofte het Beeldt der Eerbaerheydt, 1624) and didactic poetry (Jonas de Strafprediker; Tranen Jezu Christi gestort over den ondergang van Hierusalem, 1625), excellent prose (d'Ontstelde Leeuw, 1641, a history of the insurrection up to 1581), a collection of emblems (Bellerophon, 1614), and Bacchus Wonder-Wercken (1628) with a satire, Suypstad of Dronckaerts Leven. A.M.B.W.

A. G. C. de Vries, Nederl. Emblemata (1899); J. Landwehr, 'De Gentse liefdesembleemdichters en D. P. P.' in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal-en Letterk., LXXXV (1969). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Persius (AULUS P. FLACCUS) (*Volaterrae 4 XII 34; †24 XI 62), Latin satirist. Born of a well-connected equestrian family, Persius came early to Rome and became the pupil and friend of the Stoic philosopher Cornutus, and a friend of Lucan* and other Stoics opposed to Nero. Delicate, reserved and of a gentle manner, he died young, and his six books of Saturae were published posthumously by Cornutus and Caesius Bassus.

Inspired by Lucilius* and deeply influenced by Horace*, the Satires have an earnest moral tone, but reflect a keen observation and experience of the world not of real life but of books. His style though vigorous is involved and obscure, but indicates the greatness which Persius might have achieved had he lived to maturity.

Ed. W. V. Clausen (1956; with Juvenal); ed. with comm. N. Scivoletto (1961); ed. with comm. and tr. J. Conington and H. Nettleship (3rd ed. 1893; repr. 1967).—Tr. G. G. Ramsay (1918).

H. E. Butler, Post-Augustan Poetry (1909); F. Villeneuve, Essai sur Persius (1918); J. Wight Duff, Roman Satire (1937); O. Weinreich, Römische Satiren (1949); E. V. Marmorale, Persio (2nd ed. 1956); C. S. Dessen, Iunctura Callidus Acri: A Study of P.'s Satires (1969). A.J.D.

Pertcheval, alias Steemaer, JAN (*c. 1455; †1523), Dutch poet in the REDERIJER tradition, probably a surgeon at Brussels, prince of the Chamber of Rhetoric De Leliebroeders. His Den Camp van der Doot (ed. G. Degroote, 1948) is an adaptation of Le chevalier délibéré by Olivier de La* Marche; in collaboration with Jan Smeken* he wrote seven plays, now lost, on the Seven Sorrows of Mary. J.J.M.

Perticari, COUNT GIULIO (*Savignano, Romagna 15 VIII 1779; †Pesaro 26 VI 1822), Italian philologist and writer, the son-in-law of Monti*. In Degli scrittori del trecento e dei loro imitatori (1818) and Dell'amor patrio di Dante e del suo libro intorno il Volgare eloquio (1820) Perticari upheld the ideal of a common Italian language as opposed to a narrow Tuscan idiom.

Opere di G. P. (1852).—Proposta di alcune correzioni ed aggiunte al vocabolario della Crusca (1817-26).

I. Panella, 'L'opinione del conte G. P. intorno alle origini della lingua italiana' in La Romagna (1905). N.K.W.

Perventsev, ARKADY ALEXEYEVICH (*1905), Soviet author whose Kochubey (1937; Cossack Commander, tr. S. Garry, 1939) brought him great popularity. This was enhanced during the Second World War by his patriotic fiction, especially by his novel Chest' smolodu (1948), describing the reaction of the Soviets to the retreat of the Red Army during the early period of the war.

Nad Kubanyu (1952); Matrosy (1961); Surovaya pesnya (1966). J.L.

Pervigilium Veneris, a Latin poem of remarkable warmth and beauty, but of uncertain date and authorship (2nd–5th century A.D.). The scene is Sicily, the occasion a spring festival of Venus; the form combines praises of Venus Genetrix with a romantic description of spring. The metre is trochaic, with a refrain, and the use of assonance and occasionally of rhyme foreshadows the later, accentual Latin poetry.

Ed. C. Clementi (3rd ed. 1936; with Eng. tr., comm. and biblio.). A.J.D.

Perzyński, WŁODZIMIERZ (*Opoczno 6 VIII 1878; †Warsaw 21 X 1930), Polish playwright, novelist, short-story writer and feuilletonist. He knew the life in Warsaw thoroughly and tapped it freely for his literary work. In his comedies he invents interesting situations for his well-delineated characters and with a light, ironical touch gives them life; they were universally liked. Similarly in his novels, short stories and feuilletons he immortalizes contemporary life with rare truth and pointedness, but without exaggeration.

PLAYS: Lekkomyślna siostra (1907); Aszantka (1907); Szczęście Frania (1914); Polityka (1920); Lekarz miłości (1928); Rozum czy głupstwo (1929). —NOVELS: Łut szczęścia (1913); Uczniaki (1919); Raz w życiu (1925); Mechanizm życia (1929); Klejnoty (1930). —SHORT STORIES AND FEUILLETONS: Pamiętnik wisielca (1907); Bomba (1919); Kłopoty ministrów (1921); Pralnia surmienia (1930).

O. Forst de Battaglia, 'W. P. als Chronicist der vie varsoviennne' in Pologne littéraire, V (1927); Z. Dębicki, 'W. P.' in Portrety, II (1928). S.S.

Pessanha, CAMILO (*Coimbra 7 IX 1867; †Macao 1926), Portuguese poet. He lived many years in Macao. One of the most sensitive exponents of Symbolism in Portuguese poetry, his poems, few in number, precise, condensed, yet mysteriously suggestive, were collected in the volume Clepsydra (1920).

China. Estudos e traduções (1944).

E. de Lemos, A Clépsidra de C. P. (1956); A. Dias Miguel, C. P. (1956). T.P.W.

Pessoa, FERNANDO ANTÓNIO NOGUEIRA (*Lisbon 13 VI 1888; †ibid. 30 XI 1935), Portuguese poet. He spent his childhood in South Africa (his stepfather was Portuguese consul at Durban) and English was a language in which he also wrote with great accomplishment. He returned to Portugal in 1905 and after abandoning University studies earned his living by typing and translating business letters for commercial firms. He was associated with the saudosismo movement (see Pascoais*) and later edited and collaborated on various avant-garde reviews. He was an admirer of Portugal's first dictator Sidónio Pais, defended the military take-over of 1926, and published a collection of poems (Mensagem) which exude a kind of mystical nationalism which earned him a national prize (albeit second-class) in 1934. He died an alcoholic the following year.

There are many sides to Pessoa—initially he appears the most complicated man that ever lived. His poetry not only reflects this complexity but seeks to exploit it, and eventually he elevated it to the level of a general theory. He projected or divided himself into four different 'poetic personalities'—and embryonically into several others—to which he gave individual names: his own and the 'heteronyms' Caeiro, Reis, Campos.

Pessoa first became notorious in 1912 as the author of three articles which reflect the ideas of the lunatic fringe of the saudosista movement and foretell in lucid prose the advent of a new world order under the leadership of Portugal, and involving the appearance of a new super-poet (who can only be Pessoa himself). Far from being a juvenile aberration this pattern of thought reflects Pessoa's constant preoccupation with occultism and a messianic streak which recurs throughout Mensagem and derives from the national mythology associated with King Sebastian, killed in Morocco in 1578 but 'destined' like King Arthur to return to lead his country to greatness.

As a reaction to all this Pessoa created the imaginary poet ALBERTO CAEIRO, a rationalist who makes fun of mysticism and occultism, accepts the world as it is and does not ask metaphysical questions about the conditions of its possibility. Alongside Caeiro, Pessoa produced another imaginary poet RICARDO REIS, who broods stoically on mortality; and a third, ÁLVARO DE CAMPOS, who combines elements from Whitman* and Nietzsche* with the ethos of Marinetti's* Futurism. Having got this far Pessoa moves to the level of theory. In his manifesto 'Ultimatum' (1917)—a jumble of psychological and political claptrap with odd glints of lucidity—he declares that the concept of a unified personality is a theological fiction and that the most complete man is the most incoherent. It is clear that much of the time Pessoa has his tongue in his cheek, but it is equally clear that his frustrated megalomania and occultism are often in deadly earnest. Nevertheless he is the most original figure in modern Portuguese literature. Everything he wrote shows the flair of a born poet. He is at his most convincing when expressing (after his bursts of euphoria) the tedium and futility of life, or when exploring the psychological subtleties of a mind never very far from the edge.

VERSE: Antinous (Lisbon, 1918); Sonnets (ibid., 1918); English Poems (3 vols, 1922); Mensagem (1934); Obras completas (9 vols, 1942–65); Obra poética (Rio de Janeiro, 1960).—PROSE: Páginas de doutrina estética (1946); Páginas íntimas e de auto-interpretação (1966); Páginas de estética e de teoria e crítica literária (1966); Textos filosóficos (1968).

A. Casais Monteiro, F. P. (stud. and anthol.; 2nd ed. 1945) and Estudos sobre a poesia de F. P. (1958); J. Gaspar Simões, Vida e obra de F. P. (2 vols, 1950); J. Nemésio, A obra poética de F. P. (1958); A. Quadros, F. P. (1960); J. do Prado Coelho, Diversidade e unidade em F. P. (2nd ed. 1963). T.P.W.

Pestalozzi, JOHANN HEINRICH (*Zürich 12 I 1746; ∞ Anna Schulthess; †Brugg, Aargau 17 II 1827), Swiss philanthropist, educational reformer and writer. Influenced by Rousseau's ideas, Pestalozzi launched several ventures which failed financially, till in 1799 he founded a school at Yverdon (1805–25) which was a model for educationists from all over Europe. His system—the prototype of modern education—aimed at the development of the entire personality. In his didactic novels, notable for their warmth and depth of understanding, he was the forerunner of Jeremias Gotthelf*.

Lienhard und Gertrud (4 vols, 1781–87; Eng. tr. E. Shepherd, 1824); Wie Gertrud ihre Kinder lehrt (1801; Eng. tr. L. E. Holland and F. C. Turner, 1894).—Kritische Gesamtausgabe (ed. A. Buchenau, E. Spranger and H. Stettbacher, 17 vols, 1927–60); P.'s Main Writings (ed. J. A. Green, 1912); Sämtliche Briefe (ed. E. Dejung and H. Stettbacher, 6 vols, 1946–62).

P. Natorp, P. (1909; 5th ed. 1927); J. A. Green, Life and Work of P. (1913); H. Schönebaum, P. (4 vols, 1927–42); J. Reinhart, P. (1927; 5th ed. 1945); T. Litt, Der lebendige P. (1952); K. Silber, P. der Mensch und sein Werk (1957) and P. the Man and His Work (1960, 1965); M. Heafford, P. His Thought and Its Relevance Today (1967). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Peter III of CATALONIA, IV of ARAGON (*1319; crowned King 1336; †1387), joint author of a chronicle of his reign, in Catalan. It purports to be an autobiography, but documents show that a large part was written by one of the chancery secretaries, BERNAT DEZ-COLL, under instructions laid down by the King himself (1375). The King prescribed the plan, selected the basic documents and carefully revised the draft. The introduction at least was his own work, the style and ideas being closely similar to those of his speeches in the Courts.

The King was a crafty politician and diplomat, and the chronicle was intended to justify his policy.

Crònica (ed. A. Pagès, 1942); Epistolari (ed. R. Gubern, 1955– ). J.M.B. i R. (G.W.R.)

Peter Damian (*Ravenna 1007; †Faenza 22 II 1072), the youngest child of a large family, was provided with an education in the liberal arts by his brother Damian whose name he took in gratitude. After lecturing at Ravenna, he entered the hermitage of Fonte Avellana in 1035 and became Prior in 1043. Between 1049 and 1054 he produced two polemical treatises, the Liber Gomorrhianus and the Liber beatissimus, on the vices of the secular and regular clergy and on the validity of simoniacal ordinations. Appointed Bishop of Ostia and Cardinal in 1057, he spent most of his remaining years on missions of reform for the Papacy throughout Italy, France and Germany.

Migne, Patrologia Latina, CXLIV–CXLV (1853).—Selected Writings on the Spiritual Life (tr. P. McNulty, 1960).

R. Biron, Saint Pierre Damien (1908); A. Wilmart, 'Le recueil des poèmes et des prières de saint Pierre Damien' in Rev. Bénédictine, XLI (1929); J. P. Whitney, Hildebrandine Essays (1932); O. J. Blum, St P. D., His Teaching on the Spiritual Life (1947); F. Dressler, Petrus Damiani Leben und Werk (1954); J. Leclercq, 'Saint Pierre Damien écrivain' in Convivium, XXV (1957) and Saint Pierre Damien: Ermite et homme d'église (1960); M. Lokrantz, L'opera poetica di S. Pier Damiani (1964). R.R.R.

Peter Martyr: see Vermigli, PIETRO MARTIRE.

Peter of Eboli (*Eboli c. 1160; †1219 or 1220), Latin poet and physician, dedicated his poems to the Emperor Henry VI. He probably taught at Salerno. One poem is a panegyric on the Emperor, of considerable historical value; another is on the baths at Puteoli; a third, on Frederick I, has perished.

E. Rota, Petri Anselini de Ebulo de rebus Siculis carmen (Rerum Italicarum scriptores, XXXI, 1904).

R. Ries, 'Zu den Werken des P. von E.' in Mitteilungen des Instituts für oesterreichische Geschichtsforschung, XXXII (1911); C. M. Kauffmann, The Baths of Pozzuoli (on illus.; 1959). F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Peter Pindar, pseud. of JOHN WOLCOT (~Dodgebrooke, Devon 9 V 1738; †London 14 I 1819), English verse satirist whose caricatures of George III, Pitt, Boswell* etc. show a droll appreciation of the victim's foibles but are often marred by vulgarity. R.M.H.

Works (with memoir; 5 vols, 1812); The Lousiad. An heroi-comic poem (5 cantos, 1785); Bozzy and Piozzi: or the British Biographers (1786); Ode upon Ode, or a Peep at St James's (1787).

W. J. Courthope, 'On P. P.' in History of English Poetry, V (1905); T. Girtton, Doctor with Two Aunts: A Biography of P. P. (1959).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Peter Riga, or la Rigge (†c. 1209), French poet and rhetorician, canon of Notre-Dame, Rheims, and later canon-regular of St Denis. His Aurora, known to Chaucer*, is a series of verses on the Old Testament. The Floridus aspectus is a collection of his verses made by himself.

Aurora (ed. P. E. Beichner, Notre Dame, 1965).

K. Young, 'Chaucer and P. R.' in Speculum, XII (1937); A. Boutemy, 'Recherches sur le Floridus aspectus de P. la R.' in Le Moyen Âge (1948) and in Latomus (1949). F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Peters, FRIEDRICH ERNST (*Luhnstedt, Holstein 13 VIII 1890; †Schleswig 19 II 1962), German novelist and poet. His novels (latterly in Low German) grew out of Peters' deep roots in his native Holstein; his lyrics are largely determined by his artistic interests. He is also remarkable for his philosophical essays and as translator of Pascal*.

Der heilsame Umweg (novel; 1938).—SHORT STORIES: Kleine Erzählungen (1941); Zwiegesang seliger Geister (1944); Die dröge Trina (1948).—VERSE: Totenmasken (1934); Licht zwischen zwei Dunkeln (1938); Zweierlei Gnaden (1941).—ESSAYS: Preis der guten Mächte. Besinnung und Erinnerung (1941); Im Dienst der Form (1948).

F. Pauly, 'F. E. P.' in Nordelbingen, XV (1939). G.C.

Peters, GERLACH (Latinized GERLACUS PETRI) (*Deventer 1378; †Windesheim 18 XI 1411), Dutch mystic. Prompted by Florens Radewijns*, he entered the monastery of Windesheim, where he was ordained priest in 1403. Earlier he had written his Breviloquium, the second part of which constituted a guide to his daily spiritual exercises. The contents are almost identical with the so-called First Letter to his sister Lubbe. The Second Letter, mystical in character, is related to his main work Soliloquium, the most original and pure piece of mystical writing to emerge from the circle of DEVOTIO MODERNA, written between 1403 and 1411. The central theme is the freedom of the spirit through the intuition of truth. In the 15th century it was repeatedly translated into Dutch, later also into French, German, English, Spanish and Italian. It continued to be much appreciated among the French and German mystics and pietists (Port-Royal, Tersteegen*). J.J.M.

Ed. J. Strange (1849); Breviloquium and letters to Lubbe P. (ed. W. Moll in Kerkhistorisch Archief, II, 1959).—Eng. trs: The Fiery Soliloquy With God (1872); The Divine Soliloquies (1920).

J. J. Mak, De Dietse vertaling van G. P.'s Soliloquium (1936); St. Axters, Geschiedenis van de Vroomheid in de Nederlanden, III (1956); A. Deblaere in Liber alumnorum Prof. Dr. E. Rombauts (1968). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Peters, LENRIE (LEOPOLD) (*Bathurst, Gambia 1 IX 1932), Gambian poet and novelist. Peters went to school in Freetown, Sierra Leone, and in 1952 entered Trinity College, Cambridge. He specialized in and now practises surgery.

His poetry is intellectual and conveys profound reverence for life and a desire for order and understanding. His novel The Second Round (1965) is marred by melodrama.

VERSE: Poems (1964); Satellites (1967); Katchikali (1971). A.R.

Petersen, NIS (*Vamdrup 22 I 1897; ∞Ellen Malberg, ∞Anna Elisabeth Staggemeier; †Laven 9 III 1943), Danish poet, novelist and short-story writer. For some years he was a journalist, but from 1920 he lived the unsettled life of a penniless tramp, although his own stories about these years made them appear much more romantic and fantastic than they were. His début in 1926 proved him to be a lyric poet of unusual qualities, but his financial profit was negligible, and the instability of his temperament prevented him from settling down. His first novel, set in ancient Rome, became a best-seller in many countries, as did his second about the civil war in Ireland. His stories—comic or pathetic—are mostly amusing and harmless caricatures of contemporary life, but he is much more important as a poet, for in his poetry he reveals his desperate self.

VERSE: Nattens Fibere (1926); En Drift Vers (1933); Til en Dronning (1935); Styk gods (1940); Digte (1942); Brændende Europa (1947); Da Seeren tav (1947); For Tromme og Kastagnet (1951).—Samlede Digte (1949).—NOVELS: Sandalmagerens Gade (1931); The Street of the Sandalmakers, tr. E. Sprigge and C. Napier, 1933; Spildt Mælk (1934); Spildt Milk. A Story of Ireland, tr. C. Napier, 1935).—SHORT STORIES: Engle blæser paa Trompet (1937); Dagtyve (1941); Muleposen (1942); Stynede Popler (1943); Aftenbønnen (1947).—Lad os leve i Nuet (memoirs; 1948).—Mindeudgave (8 vols, 1962).

M. Knudsen, N. P. (1942); R. Bryde, Vagabonden, der blev Digter (1943); K. F. Plesner, N. P. (1945) and N. P.'s bøger. En bibliografi (1947); R. Bryde, En Digter bliver til (1945); H. Brix, N. P. Liv og Digt (1947); Annalise Nis Petersen, Mod Hæd. N. P.'s sidste Aar (1948); G. Albeck, N. P. (1949); N. Møgelvang Nielsen, Den regnunge Sky (1951); F. Johansen, N. P. Bibliografi (1953); J. Andersen, N. P. (1957). E.B.

Peter the Great (*Moscow 30 V 1672; †St Petersburg 28 I 1725), TSAR (1682), the initiator of the 'Petersburg period' of Russian history and culture (1702–1917). His sweeping reforms also affected literature. He published and actually edited the first Russian newspaper, Peterburgskie Vedomosti, and relegated the traditional Church Slavonic language to ecclesiastic books. He simplified the Russian alphabet and encouraged translations of foreign works, especially those on science and technology. Anxious to foster progress in his country, he founded all sorts of educational institutions, sent talented students abroad and imported a number of foreign savants and specialists. He annexed Russia to Europe not only politically but also culturally. It was on such a basis that the 'Petersburg period' gradually bore those fruits in Russian literature which, in the second half of the 19th century, turned Russia into one of the literary world powers.

P. Pekarsky, Nauka i literatura v Rossii pri Petre Velikom (1862); E. Shmurlo, 'Pëtr Velikiy v russkoy literatury' in Zhurnal ministerstva narodnago prosveshcheniya (1887); V. V. Sipovsky, Znachenie Petra Velikogo v istorii russkoy literatury (1903); F. S. Platonov, Pëtr Velikiy (1926); V. O. Klyuchevsky, Pierre le Grand et son œuvre (1930); H. Brinkmann, Peter I in der russischen Literatur (1963). J.L.

Peter the Iberian: see PSEUDO-Dionysius the Areopagite, biblio.

Peter the Patrician, 6th-century Byzantine diplomat. Fragments of his History of the Roman Empire From Augustus to Julian have survived. His Katastasis on ceremonial is in part preserved in the 10th-century De ceremoniis of Constantine* VII.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXIII (1864; with Lat. tr.); ed. B. G. Niebuhr (1829; with Lat. tr.); L. Dindorf, Historici Graeci minores, I (1870). J.M.H.

Peter the Venerable (*1092 or 1094; †1155), Abbot of Cluny (1122), restored the monastery to its old fame and splendour. He gave Abelard* a refuge there in his last years. He wrote against the Jews and against Islam and had a translation of the Koran made. He wrote much in Latin prose and in verse, both metrical and rhythmical.

Migne, Patrologia Latina, CLXXXIX (1854); Analecta hymnica medii aevi, XLVIII (1905); A. Wilmart, 'Le poème apologétique de Pierre le Vénérable' in Rev. Bénédictine (1939); Letters of P. the V. (ed. G. Constable, 1967).

W. Williams, 'P. the V.' in Downside Rev. (1936); G. Constable and J. Kritzeck, Petrus Venerabilis 1156–1956 (Rome, 1956).

F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Pethachiah of Regensburg, also called PETHACHIAH or PETACHYA BEN JACOB HA-LAVAN (*Prague; fl. 1175–90), German Hebrew traveller. He lived at Regensburg and Prague, and travelled to Russia, Persia, Palestine. His notes (apart from a portion lost on the way) were edited by Judah* ben Samuel the Pious of Regensburg.

Sibbuv (1st ed. Prague, 1595; Travels of R. Petachia, ed. and tr. A. Benisch, 2nd ed. 1861). C.R.

Petkanov, KONSTANTIN (*Kavakli, Turkey 29 XI 1891; †Sofia 12 II 1952), Bulgarian novelist. His works reflect his interest in Bulgarian Thrace, the 17th- and 18th-century Balkan uprisings against the Turks, and the patriarchal village life of his own upbringing. Morava zvezda-kurvava (1934) was confiscated as a pacifist novel. He was Director of National Culture 1944–47.

Bez detsa (1927); Beglets (1929); Staroto vreme (1930); Vyatur echi (1933); Indje voyvoda (1935); Ilindenski dni (1938); Angelina (1940); Belite izvori (1946). V.P.

Petković-Dis, VLADISLAV ('Dis') (*Cacak 12 III 1880; †at sea 16 V 1917), Serbian poet, a victim of the First World War. His poems, expressing deeply felt sentiments, are musical and spontaneous. An instinctive poet, he anticipated the 'avant-garde' verse of the period between the wars.

Utopljene duše (1911); Mi čekamo cara (1913).—Skupljene pesme (coll. poems; 1921); Izabrane pesme (sel. poems; 1959). V.J.

Petőfi, SÁNDOR (*Kiskőrös 1 I 1823; ∞1847 Julia Szendrey; †Fehéregyháza 31 VII 1849), Hungarian poet. During his brief, hard life, Petőfi rapidly became the greatest and most widely known Hungarian lyric poet. His verse consists largely of brief lyrics, some based on folk themes and peasant life; others concern his own love, and many display his fiery patriotism, which led him to take an active part in the 1848 revolution. He stood apart from literary groups; though his imitators were many, none could capture his sheer brilliance and fire.

Versek 1842–44 (1844); Cipruslombok Etele sirjdról (1845); Szerelem gyöngyei (1845); Versek 1844–45 (1845); Felhők (1846).—P. S. Összes művei (ed. A. Havas, 6 vols, 1892–96); sel. in Gems From P. and Other Hungarian Poets (tr. W. N. Loew, 1881) and Sixty Poems by Alexander P. (tr. E. B. Pierce and E. Delmár, 1948).

A. B. Yolland, Alexander P. (1906); J. Horváth, P. S. (1922); F. Riedl, P. S. (1923); L. Hatvany, Így élt P. (5 vols, 1955–57); Gy. Illyés, S. P. (in Fr.; 1962); D. Mervyn Jones, 'P. S.' in Five Hungarian Writers (1966). G.F.C.

Petrarch (PETRARCA), FRANCESCO (*Arezzo 20 VII 1304; †Arquà 19 VII 1374), Italian poet and humanist. Son of an exiled Florentine lawyer, Petrarch grew up at Avignon; he studied at Montpellier and Bologna and in 1326 took minor Orders. In 1327, at Avignon, he fell in love with Laura (?de Noves), whom he immortalized in his Rime. Accepting the patronage of Popes and princes, he travelled extensively in Europe (1330-53). A moral crisis, precipitated by reading St Augustine's Confessions during an ascent of Mont Ventoux (1336), induced him to seek seclusion in Vaucluse, where he began the epic poem Africa. A keen desire for glory was satisfied when this poem earned him the poet laureate's crown in Rome (1341). Shortly afterwards he felt the vanity of earthly fame, when meditating on his brother's conversion, and more particularly when experiencing great sorrow on the death of Laura in the plague (1348). An artist rather than a man of action, he sought to influence events by eloquent patriotic epistles in Latin, as when he urged the Pope's return to Rome, supported the political reforms of Cola di Rienzi (1347), appealed to Genoa and Venice to make peace (1351-54) and reproached the Emperor Charles IV for neglect of duty (1355). Boccaccio*, who revered him as his master, was his life-long friend.

In Italian Petrarch wrote: Le Rime, the collection of Laura love-poems, including some poems on other themes, notably the famous patriotic ode All'Italia; and I Trionfi (from ?1352), six allegorical triumphs, in terza rima, glorifying Laura, strongly influenced by the Divina Commedia. His principal Latin works are, in verse: the unfinished epic, Africa (1338 ff.), dealing mainly with the Second Punic War; 12 allegorical eclogues in imitation of Virgil*; and 64 metrical epistles after the manner of Horace*. In prose, of first importance are four collections of letters, imitative of Seneca* and Cicero*, two of which, the Rerum familiarium and the Rerum senilium, Petrarch himself arranged for publication. Other prose works include the important letter to posterity, and historical, polemical and philosophical treatises, including De viris illustribus; Rerum memorandarum; an invective against the Averroists of Padua; essays, on happiness, in praise of monastic life, on solitude; and the Secretum, a dialogue between Petrarch and St Augustine, which, analysing his inner life, reveals the struggle between his medieval asceticism and his pagan desire for glory and delight in earthly things.

Petrarch's humanistic activities—collecting and collating MSS (he discovered at Liège [1333] two speeches of Cicero, at Verona [1345] Cicero's letters to Atticus*); his letters and travels, linking together the learned in Europe; his much-imitated Latin writings—make him the chief figure in a cultural movement which spread throughout the Western world. His influence as lyric poet was also world-wide. The Rime, expressing real emotion—without the courtly conventions of Provençal love-poetry or the moral purpose of Italian stilnovisti—in exquisite language, perfectly balanced in delicacy and intensity, dignified, limpid, terse, epigrammatic, melodious, became the pattern for Italian poetry for 300 years and an example to other European tongues. He perfected traditional lyric forms; the sonnet, becoming popular in Europe, was introduced into England two centuries later by Wyatt* and Surrey*.

F. Petrarcae opera omnia (1554; 1581); Ed. nazionale (1926- ).—ITALIAN VERSE: Rime disperse (attrib. to P.; ed. A. Solerti, 1909); Trionfi (ed. C. Calcaterra, 1923); Le Rime (ed. G. Contini, 1964); Le Rime (Selections) (ed. with Eng. intro., notes and glossary T. G. Griffith and P. R. J. Hainsworth, 1970).—MAIN LATIN WORKS: VERSE: Bucolicum carmen (ed. A. Avena, 1906); Africa (crit. ed. N. Festa, 1926).—PROSE: Variae (ed. G. Fracassetti, 1859); Rerum senilium (ed. idem, 1869-70); Sine nomine (ed. P. Piur, 1925); Posteritati (ed. E. Carrara, 1929); Rerum familiarium (crit. ed.: V. Rossi, I-III, U. Bosco, IV, 1933-42); Secretum (Ital. tr. E. Carrara, 1941); Rerum memorandarum liber (crit. ed. G. Billanovich, 1943); Invectiviarum contra medicum libri IV (ed. P. G. Ricci, 1950); De ocio religioso (ed. G. Rotondi, 1958); De viris illustribus (crit. ed. G. Martellotti, I, 1963).—ANTHOLOGIES: P., Rime, Trionfi e poesie latine (ed. F. Neri et al., 1951); P., Prose (ed. E. Bianchi and G. Martellotti, 1953).

BIBLIOGRAPHIES: M. Fowler, Catalogue of the P. Collection (1916); E. Bonora, Lineamenti di storia della critica petrarchesca (1954).

U. Foscolo, Essays on P. (1823); C. Calcaterra, Nella selva del P. (1942); J. H. Whitfield, P. and the Renaissance (1943); G. Billanovich, P. letterato (1947); F. De Sanctis, Saggio critico sul P. (ed. E. Bonora, 1955); U. Bosco, F. P. (new ed. 1968).—Studi petrarcheschi (1948 ff.); N. Sapegno, Storia letteraria del Trecento (1960); Atti del III Congresso (1959) dell'Associazione per gli studi di letteratura italiana (congress on P.; pub. 1961). K.S.

Petrescu, CAMIL (*Bucharest 1894; †ibid. 1957), Rumanian author. His experiences in the First World War inspired his early poetry and part of the novel Ultima noapte de dragoste, întâia noapte de război (1930). Between the wars he was active as a literary journalist and founded several reviews. He also wrote for the stage and in 1939 became Director of the National Theatre in Bucharest. After the Second World War he wrote a play Bălcescu (1948) and an uncompleted three-part novel Un om între oameni (1953-57), which exemplify the Social-Realist approach to national history. The recurring theme of his work, which shows Proustian influences, is the intellectual idealist at odds with his environment. Some of his 'villains' are memorable characterizations, but his heroes tend to appear neurotic and narcissistic.

Versuri (1923; new ed. 1957); Jocul ieilor (play; 1916; rev. ed. 1945); Act venețian (play; 1929); Danton (play; 1931); Patul lui Procust (novel; 1933); Teze și antiteze (essays; 1936).

B. Elvin, C. P. (1962).

F.J.B.

Petrescu, CEZAR (*Hodora, nr Cotnari 1892; †Bucharest 1961), Rumanian novelist (not related to Camil Petrescu*). One of the founders in 1921 of the review Gîndirea and its editor till the end of 1925, he set out to write a 'chronicle of the 20th century' in seven cycles representing all classes of Rumanian society. The most successful novels are Întunecare (1927; tr. Gathering Clouds, 1957), Calea Victoriei (1929), Oraş patriarhal (1931), Comoara regelui Dromichet (1931) and Ochii strigoiului (1939-43). His principal themes are the inability of different social groups to communicate, the evils of déracinement, and the demoralizing effects of industrialization and urban growth. He is a masterly narrator and the most inventive of the Rumanian novelists, but his style tends to prolixity and his characters lack depth. His novels, nevertheless, present the most complete tableau of Rumanian life in the first half of this century.

Scrisorile unui răzeş (1922); Drumul cu plopi (1924); Omul din vis (1926); Simfonia fantastică (1929); La paradis general (1930); Baletul mecanic (1931); Plecat fără adresă (1932); Fram ursul polar (1932); Aurul negru (1932); Nepoata hatmanului Toma (1933); Floare de agave (1933); Duminica orbului (1934); Apostol (1935); Carlton (1942); Războiul lui Ion Săracu (1945); Oameni de ieri, oameni de azi, oameni de mâine (1955); Însemnări de călător, reflecții de scriitor (1958).

E. Lovinescu, Istoria literaturii române contemporane, 1900-1937 (1937); Peressicius, Mențiuni critice, II-IV (1934-38); Mihai Gafița, C. P. (1963). F.J.B.

Petri, OLAUS (*Örebro 6 I ?1493; ∞ 11 II 1525; †Stockholm 19 IV 1552), Swedish divine. Educated at Leipzig and Wittenberg, he returned to Sweden 1519 as a follower of Luther*. He then taught in the cathedral school at Strängnäs and incurred the enmity of Bishop Brask; he was, however, protected by King Gustavus Vasa, and became secretary to the Stockholm council (1524-31). He exerted great influence on the Reformation in Sweden by his sermons, by helping to translate the Bible (New Testament, 1526) and by writing and translating polemics and pamphlets. In 1531 he became Gustavus Vasa's chancellor, but gave up the post early in 1533, tension having arisen over the extent of the royal power. He was condemned to death for treason in 1540 but let off with a fine. Subsequently he was partly reconciled to Gustavus. Apart from his theological writings he composed (?1535) Een Swensk Crönika (a history of Sweden up to 1520) and possibly Tobie Commedia (1550), the first extant Swedish drama.

Swar uppå Itt ochristelighit sendebreff (1527); Swar påå tolf spårsmål (1527); Een liten undervising om echteskapet (1528); Een liten postilla (1530); Domareregler (judicial work; ?1530); Een predican emot the gruffueliga eedher och gudz försmädelse som nu almenneliga brukas (1539).—Skrifter (ed. B. Hesselman, 4 vols, 1914-17).

Hj. Holmquist, Svenska kyrkans historia (3 vols, 1933); C. Bergendoff, Olavus P. and the Ecclesiastical Transformation in Sweden, 1521-52 (1928); H. Schück, O. P. (4th ed. 1922); J. Palmér, O. Petris språk (4 vols, 1934-42); R. Murray, O. P. (1952). B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K. (I.S.)

Petronius (GAIUS [?TITUS] P. ARBITER), Nero's 'arbiter of elegance', enjoyed high favour at the imperial court until A.D. 66, having been governor of Bithynia and consul. In this year he was denounced by Nero's favourite Tigellinus and committed suicide as he had lived, amid luxury and frivolity. The last act of his life was to write a denunciation of Nero's vices and to send it to him. He is fairly certainly identified with the Petronius who wrote a picaresque novel of Italian low life entitled Satyricon, which exists only in fragments. The work, in a mixture of prose and verse, is characterized by brilliant wit and riotous obscenity and is notable for the immortal portrait of the vulgar nouveau-riche Trimalchio, a dinner at whose house forms the subject of the longest surviving section. Another section contains interesting literary criticism directed at Lucan's* epic poem. J.A.W.

Eds: F. Bücheler and W. Heraeus (6th ed. 1922; repr. 1958); K. Müller (1961); E. T. Sage (with comm.; 1929); Cena Trimalchionis (ed. with tr. and comm. W. D. Lowe, 1905; comm. P. Perrochat, 2nd ed. 1952); Bellum civile (= Satyricon, 119-124; ed. with tr. and comm. F. T. Baldwin, 1911).—Trs: M. Heseltine (1913; rev. E. H. Warmington, 1969); A. Ernout, Le Satyricon (Fr.; 4th ed. 1958); J. P. Sullivan, P.: The Satyricon and the Fragments (1965).

A. Collignon, Étude sur Pétrone (1892); E. Thomas, Pétrone: L'envers de la société romaine (3rd ed. 1912); F. A. Todd, Some Ancient Novels (1940); G. Bagnani, Arbiter of Elegance (1954); J. P. Sullivan, The Satyricon of P.: A Literary Study (1968). J.D.

Petropavlovsky, N. E.: see Karonin.

Petrov, EVGENY PETROVICH: see co-author, II<sup>f</sup>, ILYA ARNOLDOVICH.

Petrov, STEPAN GAVRILOVICH: see Skitalets.

Petrov, VALERI (*Sofia 22 IV 1920), Bulgarian poet. A former war correspondent and attaché in Rome, he has used the introspective power typical of his verse to record memories of past conspiracy and his family life in 'In Mild Autumn' (V mekata essen, 1960), a poem of mellow, nostalgic charm.

Stihotvorenia (1949); Kogato rozite tantsovat (play; 1965); Dushd vaii—sluntse gree (1967).

V.P.

Petrov, VASILY PETROVICH (*1763; †4 XII 1799), Russian poet in the pseudo-classic manner. He admired Pope*, some of whose poems he translated. His own odes were, next to those by Derzhavin*, among the best Russian products of the period. J.L.

Petrović, PETAR NJEGOŠ (*Njeguši 1 II 1813; †Cetinje 19 X 1851), Montenegrin poet, Prince-Bishop of Montenegro. Enlightened, travelled and widely-read, he was torn between idealism and pessimism as ruler of a backward people at the time of the Turkish threat to their independence. In spite of great obstacles he introduced educational, legal and other reforms. As a poet, although he was influenced by his tutor Sima Milutinović*, Milton*, Dante*, Pushkin* and other writers, his work is intensely original. The subject of his long philosophical poem Luča mikrokozma is the legend of the creation of the world and Satan's revolt. His semi-historical drama Lažni Car Ščepan Mali (1851) glorifies the courage of the Montenegrins. Gorski vijenac, Njegoš' masterpiece, describes the Montenegrins' struggle against the Turks and contains striking pictures of their way of life, their beliefs and ideals, and their heroic but intractable national character. In its blending of epic, dramatic, lyrical and philosophical qualities, Gorski vijenac is generally ranked as the finest poem in Yugoslav literature. The local feud between Montenegrin and Turk is vested with universal significance, transformed into an embodiment of the clash of good and evil, and given poetic expression of great force and beauty.

Pustinjak cetinjski (1834); Lijek jarosti turske (1834); Svobodnjada (1834); Ogledalo srpsko (1845); Luča mikrokozma (1845); 'The Ray of the Microcosm', tr. A. Savić-Rebac in Harvard Slavon. Stud., III, 1957); Gorski vijenac (1847; The Mountain Wreath, tr. J. W. Wiles, 1930; Der Bergkranz, tr. with intro. and notes A. Schmaus, 1963).—Izabrana pisma (sel. letters; intro. I. Andrić, 1967).—Cjelokupna djela (complete works; 9 vols, 1951–55).

I. Sekulić, Njegošu, knjiga duboke odanosti (1951); V. Javarek, 'P. P. N. 1813–51' in Slavon. and E. Eur. Rev., XXX (1952); Ž. R. Prvulović, 'Njegoš on the origin of evil', ibid., XXXII (1954); V. Latković, P. P. N. 1813–63 (in Eng.; 1963); M. Djilas, N. Poet, Prince, Bishop (intro. and tr. M. B. Petrović, 1966); Knjiga o Njegošu (ed. V. Djurić, 1968). V.J.

Petrović, VELJKO (*Sombor 5 II 1884), Serbian writer. His prolific works include essays, poems, and graphic and realistic short stories which reflect his patriotism and his faith in the potentialities of the less privileged classes.

POETRY: Rodoljubive pesme (1911); Na pragu (1914).—Pripovetke, I–II (short stories; 1925–34); Izabrane pripovetke (sel. stories; 1948); Stihovi

(1951); Sabrana dela (coll. works; 8 vols, 1954–60); Pesme, eseji (sel. poems and essays; ed. Ž. Milišavac, 1963); Sabrane pripovetke (coll. short stories; 6 vols, 1964). V.J.

Petrus Alfonsi (*c. 1062; ~29 VI 1106), a Spanish rabbi, astronomer and physician to King Alfonso I of Aragon, who was his godfather at his baptism, and to Henry I of England. He wrote a Dialogus against the Jews, in which he answers the questions of his friend Moses, vanquishing him in the end (Migne, Patrologia Latina, CLVII, 1854). His Disciplina clericalis is a collection of folk-tales and fables from Arabic sources, with sayings and verses. It was widely read and used by other compilers of exempla and by preachers.

F.J.E.R. (A.D.D.)

Eds: A. Hilka and W. Söderhjelm (1911); A. González Palencia (1948).—The Scholar's Guide (tr. J. R. Jones and J. E. Keller, Toronto, 1969).

J. M. Millás Vallicrosa, Estudios sobre historia de la ciencia española (1949); H. Schwarzbach, 'International folklore motifs in P. A.'s Disc. cler.' in Sefarad, XXI–XXIII (1961–63); Le Chastolement d'un père à son fils (ed. E. D. Montgomery, Chapel Hill, N.C., 1971). A.D.D.

Petrus Comestor (†1179/89) was Dean of Troyes 1147–64, Chancellor of the school of Notre Dame in 1164 and canon of St Victor about 1179. His chief work, the Historia scolastica, composed about 1170, is a compendium of Biblical history from the terrestrial paradise to the captivity of St Paul in Rome. He also composed sermons and homilies.

Migne, Patrologia Latina, CXCVIII (1855); De sacramentis (ed. R. M. Martin, 1937).

B. Smalley, The Study of the Bible in the Middle Ages (2nd ed. 1952); M. M. Lebreton, 'Recherches sur les manuscrits contenant des sermons de Pierre le Mangeur' in Bull. d'inf. de l'Institut de Recherches et d'Histoire des Textes, II (1953), IV (1955); S. R. Daly, 'Peter C., master of histories' in Speculum, XXXII (1957). R.R.R.

Petrus de Dacia (*?Gotland c. 1235; †Visby 1289), Swedish Dominican writer. In 1266 he was sent to study at Cologne and afterwards at Paris. In Cologne he met a nun, Kristina von Stommeln, with whom he maintained a life-long friendship and correspondence. Returning to Sweden 1270, he taught in Skänninge, Strängnäs and Visby, where he became Prior. He visited Bologna in 1285; is notable for his letters to Kristina and for his account of her, the first personal description of love in Swedish literature, and a very valuable historical document. His other writings are unimportant.

Vita Christinae Stumbelensis (ed. J. Paulson, 1896; Swed. tr. T. Lundén, 1950).

E. Renan, 'Une idylle monacale au XIII<sup>e</sup>

siècle' in Nouvelles études d'histoire religieuse (1884); H. Schück, 'Vår förste författare' in Svenska bilder, I (1939); Y. Brilioth, Svenska kyrkans historia, II (1941); J. Gallén, La province de Dacie de l'ordre des frères prêcheurs, I (1946).
B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Petrus Pictor (fl. c. 1120), French poet and painter, canon of St Omer. His poems, in rhymed hexameters, are satirical, moral, descriptive and personal.

Eds of his works are scattered: see F. J. E. Raby, Secular Latin Poetry, II (2nd ed. 1957).

F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Pett, PHINEAS (*Deptford 1 IX 1570; †1647), English shipbuilder, whose autobiography presents an interesting picture of naval politics and pharisaism in the reigns of James* I and Charles I.

The Autobiography of P. P. (ed. W. G. Perrin, 1918).
G.K.H.

Pettie, GEORGE (*?Oxfordshire c. 1548; †Plymouth VII 1589), English translator and short-novel writer, who entered Christ Church, Oxford, as a scholar and became a friend of Gager*. A soldier in France and the Low Countries, he translated Guazzo from the French. Pettie's 'tragedies' are in lively schematic prose, not too alliterative and often well-balanced.

A Petite Pallace of Pettie his Pleasure (1576; ed. H. Hartman, 1938); The Civile Conversation of M. Steeven Guazzo (1581, 3 bks from Fr.; 1586, incl. Bk IV from Ital. by B. Young; ed. Sir E. Sullivan, 1925).
B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Pétursson, HALLGRÍMUR (*?1614; ∞1637 Guðríður Símonardóttir; †Ferstikla 27 X 1674), Icelandic poet. Born of poor parents, Pétursson received some education at Hólar Latin School. He later went to Denmark and there came under the patronage of his compatriot, Bishop Brynjólfur Sveinsson, who secured his admission to Vor Frue School. On his return to Iceland he had various menial jobs but finally, again thanks to Bishop Brynjólfur, he was ordained as a priest in 1644.

He is regarded as Iceland's most distinguished hymnist. Especially noteworthy is his originality, the richness of his language and his freedom from that lack of taste which so disfigured the work of many of the religious poets of the period. Most famous are his Fimmtu Passíusálmar (1666), which are among the most distinguished of all Lutheran hymns.

Sálmar og Kvæði (ed. G. Thomsen, 2 vols, 1887–90); Passíusálmar (1947).—W. C. Green, Translations From the Icelandic (1908); The Passion Hymns of Iceland (tr. C. Venn Pilcher, 1913); Icelandic Christian Classics (tr. idem, 1950); 'On Death's Uncertain Hour' (tr. G. M. Gathorne-Hardy in Saga-Book, XVI, 1962–65).

A. Møller, H. P.'s Passionssalmer (1922); M. Jónsson, H. P. Æfi hans og starf (2 vols, 1947).
R.G.P. (P.G.F.)

Peyn, BRUNO (*Cuxhaven 8 VI 1887; †Hamburg 31 V 1970), Low German playwright, introduced to the Low German stage new genres such as musical and poetic plays.

De Fischer un sine Fru (1921); Sünste Maria to'm Schare (1922); De Wiber von'n Zippelhus (1922); Gudrun (1925); Asmus op Afweg (1927); Vineta (1935); De Döschmaschin (1937).
G.C.

Peyrot, CLAUDE: see PROVENÇAL LITERATURE, text and biblio.

Peys, ADRIAEN, 17th-century Flemish playwright; citizen of Antwerp. He translated plays from the French (Scapijn, 1680, and Gedwongen Huwelyck, 1680, both after Molière*; De nachtspookende juffer, after Calderón* from a French translation) and wrote the spectacular play De toverijen van Armida (1695, but probably performed much earlier).

H. E. H. van Loon, Nederl. Vertalingen van Molière uit de 17de eeuw (1911); J. A. van Praag, La Comedia espagnole aux Pays-Bas (1911).
A.M.B.W.

Pezoa Véliz, CARLOS (*1879; †1908), Chilean minor poet, modernista in style, but in content more interested in narrative and character-study than was usual in that movement. His short life was a continued struggle against poverty and adversity, and his poetry reflects the ironical bitterness of his experience, offset by a kindly humour.

Alma chilena (1912); Poesías y prosas completas (ed. A. Donoso, 1927).
E.Sa. (J.F.)

Pfleger Moravský, GUSTAV (*Karasejn 27 VII 1833; †Prague 20 IX 1875), Czech author. From his literary beginnings as a lyrical poet showing the marked influence of Byron* and the Slavonic Romantics, Pfleger developed into one of the first Czech social novelists.

Z malého světa (1864); Paní fabrikantová (1873).—Spisy (1871–85).

J. Vlček in Z dějin české literatury (1960).

R.A.

Phaedrus (*Macedonia c. 15 B.C.; †c. 50 A.D.), Latin fabulist. Phaedrus came to Rome as a slave, but was later a freedman in the household of Augustus. His work was published under Tiberius and Caligula. The fables, which have a strong moral flavour, are metrical versions of the traditional beast-tales of Aesop* but include also anecdotal and satirical pieces with contemporary references. Indeed, suspected references caused his prosecution by Sejanus and subsequent punishment.

Avoiding the common tendency of the age to rhetorical excess in literature, his style is clear and neat. Though Phaedrus was himself forgotten in the Middle Ages, his tradition was preserved by his prose-paraphrasts, notably Romulus.

Phaedri fabulae (ed. J. P. Postgate, 1919; ed. with comm. L. Havet, 4th ed. 1923; tr. [with Babrius*] B. E. Perry, 1965).

R. Ellis, The Fables of P. (1894); L. Herrmann, Phèdre et ses fables (1950).—G. Thiele, Der lateinische Äsop des Romulus und die Prosa-Fassungen des Phädrus (1910). A.J.D.

Phaer, or Phayer, THOMAS (*?Norwich ?1510; ∞?Ann; †Kilgerran VIII 1560), English lawyer, physician and translator of Virgil*. Phaer was the first Englishman to attempt a translation of the whole work. His version is competent and often lively, in rhyming ballad metre. B.L.J.

The seven first bookes of The Eneidos of Virgill (1558); The nyne first bookes (1562); The Whole XII Bookes of the Æneidos (1573; with Thomas Twyne).

E. W. J. Brenner, T. P. (Heidelberg, 1913). B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Phalaris of ACRAGAS: see FORGERIES, LITERARY.

Phan-Huy-Ích: see VIETNAMESE LITERATURE, text and biblio.

Pherecrates (fl. c. 430–410 B.C.), poet of Athenian Old Comedy. Eighteen plays are known, five doubtful. Some themes are: escape to the simple life (Agrioi, 420), women's intrigues (Korionno) and music (Chiron). Pherecrates probably followed Crates* in turning from satirical abuse towards social comedy.

T. Kock, Comicorum Atticorum fragmenta, I (1880); J. M. Edmonds, Fragments of Attic Comedy, I (1957; with tr.).—G. Norwood, Greek Comedy (1931); W. Schmid and O. Stählin, Geschichte der griechischen Literatur, I.4.ii (1946). E.W.H.

Philemon (*?Syracuse 365/360; †264/263 B.C.), a naturalized Athenian, poet of New Comedy. He began producing before 328 and at some time worked in Egypt. Some 60 of his 97 plays are recorded, including three (possibly more) adaptations by Plautus*, which suggest that his strength lay in comedy of situation. Euripides* is often recalled and twice mentioned; moralizing is frequent in a style which may become heavy in search of effect. At the dramatic festivals he sometimes defeated Menander*; posterity reversed the verdict.

T. Kock, Comicorum Atticorum fragmenta, II (1884); J. M. Edmonds, Fragments of Attic Comedy, IIIA (1961; with tr.); E. Siegmann, Literarische griechische Texte der Heidelberger Papyrussammlung (no. 184; 1956).

T. B. L. Webster, Studies in Later Greek Comedy (2nd ed. 1970). E.W.H.

Philes: see Manuel Philes.

Philetas (4th/3rd centuries B.C.), Greek scholar-poet from Cos; the earliest and one of the most important figures in the Alexandrian renaissance of poetry and criticism. Tutor of Ptolemy II, he also taught Zenodotus*, the editor of Homer* and first librarian at Alexandria, and the poets Theocritus* and Hermesianax. Only fragments remain of his scholarly work (a dictionary of rare words) and poetry (Demeter in elegiacs, Hermes in hexameters).

Fragments in J. U. Powell, Collectanea Alexandrina (1925); G. Kuchenmüller, Philetæ Col reliquiae (with comm.; 1928).—R. Pfeiffer, History of Classical Scholarship (1968). A.H.G.

Philippe, CHARLES-LOUIS (*Cérilly 4 VIII 1874; †Paris 21 XII 1909), French novelist. The son of a poor shoemaker, Philippe worked for a time as a clerk. His novels, directly inspired by his own experiences, are written in the Naturalist tradition with an undercurrent of poetry. They are stories of humble folk set in the Bourbonnais or in Paris.

La mère et l'enfant (1910–11); Bubu de Montparnasse (1901); Le Père Perdrix (1903); Marie Donadieu (1904; Eng. tr. V. Hudson, 1949); Croquignole (1906); Charles Blanchard (1913).

Special no. (14) of Nouvelle Rev. Fr.; J. Giraudoux, ibid. (1937); E. Guillaumin, C. L. P., mon ami (1943); J. de Fourchambault, C. L. P., le bon sujet (1944). M.G.; J.P.R.

Philippe de Novare (*Novara c. 1195; †Cyprus c. 1270), French writer. The whole of his adult life was passed in Cyprus, where he became a servant and intimate of Jean d'Ibelin of Beirut (†1236) and his son Balian and witnessed the struggle (1218–43) between the Emperor Frederick* II and the Ibelins for the control of the island.

Mémoires (ed. C. Kohler, 1913; The Wars of Frederick II Against the Ibelins, tr. J. L. La Monte and M. J. Hubert, 1936; incorp. in the prose Gestes des Chiprois by Gerard de Montréal, c. 1320, ed. L. de Mas-Latrie and G. Paris, 1906); Livre en forme de plet (treatise on feudal law and practice in the Latin kingdoms; later incorp. into the Assises de Jérusalem, ed. A. Beugnot, 1841–43); Li quatre tens de l'aage de l'ome (c. 1265; ed. M. de Fréville, 1888; moral treatise on the four stages in the life of man). F.W.

Philippe de Remy, LORD OF BEAUMANOIR (*?1248; †?1296), French poet and lawyer. In youth he visited England, writing 11 love poems (?1261–65). His romance La Manekine (?1275), about a persecuted heroine, contains marvellous incidents, while Jehan et Blonde (?1277) is remarkable for its realistic setting and detail. He also composed various short pieces, including the Fatrasies. Entering the royal administration (11 V 1279) he served in Poitou and elsewhere. After becoming Lord of Beaumanoir (1280) he wrote the longest Salut d'Amour in French. His Coutumes de Beauvoisis (1283), in prose, is a celebrated legal work.

'Les Chansons de P. de Beaumanoir' (ed. A. Jeanroy in Romania, XXVI, 1897); Œuvres Poétiques (ed. H. Suchier, 2 vols, 1884–85); Coutumes de Beauvoisis (ed. A. Salmon, 2 vols, 1899–1910).

F. Lyons, Les éléments descriptifs dans le roman d'aventure au XIIIe siècle (1965). M.F.L.

Philippe de Thaan, 12th-century Anglo-Norman poet. His Comput (?1119) expounds the calendar for the clergy. A translation of the Latin Physiologus, his Bestiaire (?1128), dedicated to the Queen of England, Aelis of Louvain, is mystical in tendency (BESTIARY). His Lapidaire, a lost work, has aroused discussion among modern scholars.

Li Compoz (ed. E. Mall, 1873); Le Bestiaire (ed. E. Walberg, 1900).

E. Walberg, Quelques aspects de la littérature anglo-normande (1936). M.F.L.

Philippe Mouskés (*Tournai early 13th century; †after 1260), French chronicler and poet. He produced a Chronique rimée of 32,000 lines, recounting the history of the French Kings from the destruction of Troy to 1242. According to Nothomb, the work cannot have been written before 1260. Based ultimately on the Abbreviatio gestorum Franciae regum from St Denis, but using a great variety of other material, including the Pseudo-Turpin chronicle (CHARLEMAGNE), Mouskés is following a tradition of historical writing which stresses the mission of France to uphold Christendom and which combines a tolerance towards legendary sources with a deep interest in contemporary history, especially in the exploits of Philip Augustus, 'the new Charlemagne'. This explains why he incorporates into his work a large amount of material from the CHANSONS DE GESTE, including material from epics now wholly or in great part lost (e.g. Gormont et Isembart).

Chronique rimée (ed. F. de Reiffenberg, 1836–38).

J. Nothomb, 'La date...' in Rev. belge de philol. et d'hist., IV (1925); R. C. Bates, 'P. M.' in Essays in Honour of A. Feuillerat (1943); R. N. Walpole, P. M. and the Pseudo-Turpin Chronicle (1947). F.W.

Philippide, ALEXANDRU (*Iași 1900), Rumanian poet, author of sombre but melodious verses with affinities with the German Romantics. He has also published literary studies and translations.

Aur sterp (1922); Stinci fulgerate (1930); Visuri în vîietul vremii (1939); Monolog în Babilon (1967). — Studii și portrete literare (1963); Scriitorul și arta lui (1968). F.J.B.

Philippides (late 4th–3rd century B.C.), poet of Athenian New Comedy, a friend of Lysimachus, King of Thrace, and a politician of influence. Of 45 plays 15 titles are known; noteworthy is a bitter attack on Demetrius Poliorcetes.

T. Kock, Comicorum Atticorum fragmenta, III (1888); J. M. Edmonds, Fragments of Attic Comedy, IIIA (1961; with tr.).—T. B. L. Webster, Studies in Later Greek Comedy (2nd ed. 1970). E.W.H.

Phillips, AMBROSE (*Salop c. 1675; †London 18 VI 1749), English poet, writer of pastorals and pleasing short-lined poems; dubbed 'Namby-Pamby' by enemies, he was ridiculed by Pope*.

Epistle to the Earl of Dorset (1709); Pastorals (1709); Distressed Mother (1712; play, from Racine's Andromaque); Collection of Old English Ballads (3 vols, 1723–25); Poems (1748).—Poetical Works (ed. M. G. Segar, 1937).

S. Johnson, Lives of the Poets (ed. G. Birkbeck Hill, 1905). R.M.H.

Phillips, JOHN (*Bampton 30 XII 1676; †Hereford 15 II 1708/09), English poet, educated at Winchester and Christ Church, Oxford, and trained as a doctor. He is best known for his Miltonic blank verse in his mock-heroic Splendid Shilling (1701, 1705) and his major poem Cyder (1708), whose utilitarian mode in imitation of Virgil's* Georgics helped to launch a fashion which contributed to later nature poetry. His Blenheim (1705) is a serious Miltonic poem.

Poems of J. P. (ed. M. G. Lloyd Thomas, 1927).

T. Cibber, Lives of the Poets, III (1735); S. Johnson, Lives of the Poets (1779–81); L. A. Harach, J. P. (1906); H. de Maar, A History of Modern English Romanticism, I (1924).

B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Phillips, KATHERINE, née FOWLER (*London 1 I 1630/31; †1647 James Phillips; †ibid. 22 VI 1664), the first real English poetess. She became the centre of a literary circle, adopting the pseudonym 'the matchless Orinda'. A disciple of William Cartwright*, her verse was well received, and led to her being encouraged by Orrery [Boyle*] and Roscommon* to finish translating Corneille's* Pompey which was performed in Dublin 1662 with success.

B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Poems (1664, pirated; 1667; 1678, etc.; ed. G.

Saintsbury, Minor Poets of the Caroline Period, I, 1905).—Letters from Orinda (1705; 1729).

Sir E. Gosse, 'The Matchless Orinda' in 17th Century Studies (1883); P. W. Souers, The Matchless Orinda (1931). B.L.J.

Philip the Chancellor (*Paris c. 1160/70; †23 XII 1236), French writer, not to be confused with Philip de Grève, became Chancellor of Notre-Dame in 1218 and was involved in conflict with the University, the Mendicant Orders and other bodies. His Summa de bono had a wide influence on contemporary theologians. He wrote verse in French and Latin. His Latin hymns are of great merit. F.J.E.R.

Analecta hymnica medii aevi, XX–XXI (1895), L (1907; list, pp. 529 ff.); Summa quaestionum theologicarum (ed. L. W. Kesler in Opuscula et textus historiam Ecclesiae . . . illustrantia, XX, 1937).

D. A. Callus, 'P. the C. and the De Anima ascribed to Robert Grosseteste' in Medieval and Renaissance Stud., Warburg Inst., I (1941); J. B. Schneyer, Die Sittenkritik in den Predigten P. ps des Kanzlers (1963). F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Philip the Solitary (fl. c. 1081–1118), Byzantine monk and author of a dialogue in verse between soul and body (Dioptra), a work of edification much read in the Middle Ages.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CXXVII (1864; with Lat. tr.).—The Soul and the Body (tr. E. S. Shuckburgh, 1894). J.M.H. (R.B.)

Phillips, EDWARD (*London VIII 1630; †?1696), English author, nephew of Milton*. He was educated by his uncle and at Oxford, worked as a hack-writer, editor and translator in London, and became tutor to John Evelyn's* son. He compiled a dictionary, The New World of English Words (1658), and edited numerous historical and literary works, including Milton's Letters of State (1694).

Theatrum Poetarum; or a complete collection of the poets (1675; ed. S. S. E. Brydges, 1800; 1824; pref. in J. E. Spingarn, Critical Essays of the 17th Century, II, 1908–09); life of Milton in Letters of State (1694; repr. in Early Lives of Milton, ed. H. Darbishire, 1932).

W. Godwin, Lives of E. and John Philips (1815); W. Albrecht, Über das Theatrum Poetarum von Miltons Neffen E. P. 1675 (1928); D. T. Starnes and G. E. Noyes, The English Dictionary From Cawdrey to Johnson 1604–1755 (1946); W. R. Parker, Milton (2 vols, 1968).

J.J.Y.L. (R.M.W.)

Phillips, JOHN (*1631; †London 1706), English miscellaneous writer, nephew of Milton* and brother of Edward. At first assistant to Milton, replying to Rowland's* attack on Milton's reply to Salmasius with a Responsio (1652; ed. R. W. Ayers, Yale ed. of Milton, IV.2, 1966), he later established himself as a well-known facetious satirical hack writer with his poem attacking the Puritans, A Satyr Against Hypocrites (1655; ed. L. Howard, 1953); he edited the licentious Sportive Wit (1656) and when this was burned by Government order, Wit and Drollery (1656). Adept at BURLESQUE, Phillips vindicated Dr Oates's Narrative of the Popish Plot (1680) and attacked the clergy in Speculum Crape-Gownorum (1682). He translated La* Calprenède's Pharamond (1677), Mlle de Scudéry's* Almahide (1677) and Don Quixote (1687). He edited a Modern History in cheap monthly parts (X 1687–IX 1689). An anonymous life of Milton ascribed to him (Early Lives of Milton, ed. H. Darbishire, 1932) has also been ascribed to CYRIL SKINNER (1627–1700).

R.M.W.

Philochorus (fl. first half 3rd century B.C.), Greek historian. An Athenian, put to death by Antigonos Gonatas. Author of many works on Athenian antiquities; the most important was his Atthis, recounting Athenian history from the beginnings to his own time.

F. Jacoby, Die Fragmente der griechischen Historiker, III.B (1950) and Atthis (1949).

R.B.

Philodemus (*c. 110; †c. 40 B.C.), Greek philosopher and poet. He was an Epicurean with influential friends at Rome. He wrote on a variety of subjects, in prose and verse, including a popular study of the Greek philosophers. He also developed the theory that art and literature should be judged on aesthetic, not moral grounds.

P. H. and E. A. De Lacy, P. on Methods of Inference (1941). D.J.F.

Philo Judaeus (fl. Alexandria first half 1st century A.D.), Greek-Jewish author of numerous philosophical, exegetical and apologetic works. By his fusion of Judaism and Hellenistic philosophy, and by his allegorical interpretation of Biblical texts, he prepared the way for Clement* of Alexandria and Origen* and greatly influenced later Christian thought.

L. Cohn and P. Wendland, Philonis Alexandrini opera quae supersunt (ed. maior, 7 vols, 1896–1930; ed. minor, 6 vols, 1896–1915); F. H. Colson and G. H. Whitaker, P. (with tr.; 12 vols, 1929–62).

E. R. Goodenough, By Light, Light: the Mystic Gospel of Hellenistic Judaism (1935), The Politics of P. J. (1938) and Introduction to P. J. (1962); H. A. Wolfson, P.: Foundations of Religious Philosophy in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam (2 vols, 1947); A. Maddelena, Filone Alessandrino (1970). R.B.

Philoponus: see John Philoponus.

Philostorgius (*Cappadocia c. 368; †after 433), Greek ecclesiastical historian, adherent and friend of Eunomius the Arian. His Ecclesiastical History (325–425) survives in excerpts.

Philostorgius Kirchengeschichte (ed. J. Bidez, 1913); tr. E. Walford (1855).—J. Bidez, 'Fragments nouveaux de Philostorge sur la vie de Constantin' in Byzantion, X (1935). R.B.

Philostratus, the name of several Athenian sophists, probably to be distinguished thus: PHILOSTRATUS I (late 2nd century A.D.), son of Verus; PHILOSTRATUS II (†244/249), son of Philostratus I, taught in Athens, came to Rome as a member of the 'salon' of the empress Julia Domna and reached senatorial rank; PHILOSTRATUS III (*c. 191), son of Nervianus, nephew of Philostratus II, lived in Athens and Rome, died in Lemnos; PHILOSTRATUS IV (late 3rd century), grandson of Philostratus II. The works preserved under the name of Philostratus are difficult to attribute. The Life of Apollonius of Tyana, the Lives of the Sophists and the first collection of Imagines (descriptions of pictures) are certainly by Philostratus II. Apollonius of Tyana was later used in anti-Christian polemics and so influenced the form of Christian hagiography.

C. L. Kayser, Flavii Philostrati opera (2 vols, 1870–71); O. Benndorf and K. Schenkl, Philostrati Maioris imagines (1893); K. and H. Schenkl and E. Reisch, Philostrati Minoris imagines et Callistrati descriptiones (1902).

Text and tr.: F. C. Conybeare, P.: The Life of Apollonius of Tyana (2 vols, 1912); W. C. Wright, P. and Eunapius: Lives of the Sophists (1922); A. Fairbanks, P.: Imagines, and Callistratus: Descriptions (1931); A. R. Benner and F. H. Fobes, The Letters of Alciphron, Aelian and P. (1949); J. S. Phillimore, P.'s Life of Apollonius of Tyana (2 vols, 1912).

F. Solmsen, 'Philostratos' in A. Pauly, G. Wissowa et al., Real-Encyclopädie der classischen Altertumswissenschaft, XX.1 (1941; good survey); G. W. Bowersock, Greek Sophists in the Roman Empire (1969). R.B.

Philotheus Coccinus (†1379), Patriarch of Constantinople (1353–64). He was a keen supporter of the Orthodox Gregory* Palamas and wrote an encomium on him as well as a magnum opus against Nicephorus* Gregoras.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CL–CLI (1865; with Lat. tr.).—G. Mercati, Notizie su Procoro e Demetrio Cidone, Manuele Caleca e Teodoro Meliteniota ed altri appunti (1931).

J.M.H. (R.B.)

Philo Xenus (*Cythera 436; †380 B.C.), Greek lyric poet, who lived at the court of Dionysius the Elder of Syracuse: he was imprisoned for court intrigue or criticism of Dionysius' poetry, but escaped. His dithyramb Cyclops in which Polyphemus loves a sea nymph, Galatea, was known in Athens by 388 when Aristophanes* parodied it: its interpretation as satire on Dionysius and his mistress may be due to Athenian comedians. The Feast, also parodied at the same time in Athens, may have been by the same author rather than his little-known namesake of Leucas.

D. L. Page, Poetae melici Graeci (1962); J. M. Edmonds, Lyra Graeca, III (1927; with tr.).—A. W. Pickard-Cambridge, Dithyramb, Tragedy and Comedy (2nd ed. 1962).

T.B.L.W. (E.W.H.)

Philo Xenus of Mabbög: see SYRIAC LITERATURE, text and biblio.

Phocylides, Greek poet from Miletus (6th century B.C.) who composed maxims in elegiacs and hexameters.

J. M. Edmonds, Elegy and Iambus, I (1931; with tr.). J.T.H.

Photius (*c. 820; †c. 893), Patriarch of Constantinople and Byzantine scholar. He was the centre of the ecclesiastical controversies concerning his own appointment to the Patriarchate and involving prolonged negotiations with Rome. Contrary to popular belief, he died in communion with Rome and it was only later that he was regarded as the Orthodox champion par excellence in the disagreements between the Greek and Latin Churches. He took an important part in the intellectual revival of the later 9th century and his Bibliotheca gives notes on a wide range of works (some now lost) known to the literary circles of his time. He also left a lexicon and letters, and certain theological works and canonical collections are attributed to him.

J.M.H.

Migne, Patrologia Graeca, CI–CII (with Lat. tr.; 1860); Epistolae (ed. I. N. Balettas, 1864); Homiliae (ed. B. Laourdas, Salonica, 1959; Eng. tr. C. Mango, 1958); Bibliotheca (ed. R. Henry, in progr., 1959–; The Library of P., tr. J. H. Freese, 1920).

M. Jugie, Le schisme byzantin (1941); E. Amann and A. Dumas, L'église au pouvoir des latques 888–1057 (1943); F. Dvornik, The Photian Schism (2nd ed. 1970).

J.M.H. (R.B.)

Phrantzes: see George Phrantzes.

Phreas, JOHN: see Free, JOHN.

Phrynichus, Athenian tragic poet. First victory 511 B.C.; Capture of Miletus perhaps in 492 when Themistocles was archon, certainly soon after the Persians captured Miletus in 494; Phoenician Women (on the Persian defeat of 480/479) perhaps in 476 when Themistocles produced a play of Phrynichus. Phrynichus is said to have introduced female masks and was famous for his choral songs.

M.L.C.

B. Snell, Fragmenta tragicorum Graecorum, I (1971).—A. W. Pickard-Cambridge, Dithyramb, Tragedy and Comedy (2nd ed. 1962); A. Lesky, History of Greek Literature (Eng. tr.; 1966).
S.A.B.

Physiologus: see BESTIARY.

Pibrac, GUY DU FAUR DE (*Château de Pibrac, nr Toulouse 1529; †Paris V 1584), French poet and orator. He was a distinguished judge and diplomat, chancellor to the Dukes of Anjou and Alençon, among other offices. His chief work, the Quatrains—four-line poems each enshrining some uplifting aphorism, often drawn from the Book of Proverbs—is a prime example of gnomic verse in one of its most popular periods.

Plaisirs de la vie rustique (1574; bucolic poem); Quatrains moraux (1574–76; ed., with his other poems, J. Claretie, 1874).

R. du Faur de Pibrac, Catalogue des ouvrages de G. de P. (1901); A. Cabos, G. du F. de P. (1922).
G.B.

Picard, EDMOND (*Brussels 15 XII 1836; †Davesur-Meuse 19 II 1924), Belgian lawyer, socialist parliamentarian, novelist, critic and poet, founder of L'Art Moderne, rival review to La Jeune Belgique. He shaped the destinies of most poets and artists of the Belgian renaissance, orientating them towards socialism, Symbolism and Impressionism. His influence on others exceeded his own considerable talent.

Scènes de la vie judiciaire (1893); Ainsi naît, vit, meurt l'Amour (1904).

F. Vermeulen, E. P. et le réveil des Lettres belges, 1881–1888 (1935).
B.M.W. (J.C.D.)

Piccolomini, ALESSANDRO (*Siena 13 VI 1508; †ibid. 12 III 1578), Italian philosophical writer and classical translator. He lived variously at Padua, Rome and Siena, becoming Archbishop of Patras in 1574. His most valuable contributions to literature are his dialogue Raffaella, two comedies, Amor costante and Alessandro, and his Cento sonetti on love and politics.

Under pseud. 'Stordito Intronato': La Raffaella. Dialogo de la bella creanza de la donna (1540; ed. D. Valeri, 1942); Amor costante (1549; ed. N. Borsellino in Commedie del Cinquecento, I, 1962).—Under his own name: Alessandro (1545; ed. F. V. Cerreta, 1966); Cento sonetti (1549).

M. Rossi, 'Le opere letterarie di A. P.' in Bullettino senese di storia patria, XVII, XVIII (1910–11); F. V. Cerreta, A. P., letterato e filosofo senese del Cinquecento (1960).
P.McN.

Piccolomini, ENEAS SILVIO (*Corsignano-Pienza 18 X 1405; †Ancona 14 VIII 1464), Italian humanist. Between ÆNEAS SILVIUS, the licentious poet in imperial service, and PIUS II, the crusading Pope of the Bulla Retractationis, lie a change of heart and meteoric preferment; but both layman and cleric wrote voluminously. His Latin verse and De curialium miseriis earned him European renown, and his tale of Euryalus and Lucretia is still popular. Less known is his comedy, Chrysis, modelled on Terence*. The Commentarii, a penetrating history of his times, is the greatest of his maturer historical and geographical works, whilst he left an invaluable legacy in his letters.

Opera (ed. M. Hopper, 1551 and 1571); Commentarii rerum memorabilium, quae temporis suis contigerunt (1584 and 1614); De duobus amantibus historia (ed. J. J. Dévay, 1904; Eng. tr. F. Grierson, 1929); Der Briefwechsel des E. S. P. (ed. R. Wolkan in Fontes rerum Austriacarum, LXI, LXII, LXVII, LXVIII, 1908–18); De curialium miseriis epistola (ed. W. P. Mustard, 1928); De situ... Germaniae descriptio (ed. G. Paparelli, 1949); Memoirs of a Renaissance Pope (abr. tr. F. A. Gragg, ed. L. C. Gabel, 1960); Il primo libro dei 'Commentarii' (ed. F. Gaeta, 1966); De gestis Concilii Basiliensis commentariorum libri II (ed. and tr. D. Hay and W. K. Smith, 1967); Chrysis (ed. E. Cecchini, 1968).

G. Voigt, E. S. de' P. als Papst Pius II und sein Zeitalter (3 vols, 1856–63); W. Boulting, Aeneas Silvius (1908); C. M. Ady, Pius II, the Humanist Pope (1913); G. Paparelli, E. S. P. (1950); R. J. Mitchell, The Laurels and the Tiara (1962); B. Widmer, E. S. P. in der sittlichen und politischen Entscheidung (1963); L. M. Veit, Pensiera e vita religiosa di E. S. P. prima della sua consacrazione episcopale (1964); 'Atti del Convegno Storico Piccolominiano' in Atti e memorie di storia patria per le Marche, 8th ser., IV (1967).
P.McN.

Pichumerio, GIOVANNI: see Aurispa, GIOVANNI.

Pickering, JOHN (fl. 1567), English dramatist, possibly the person who supplicated for B.A. at Oxford in IV 1541. His Horestes is regarded as a sign of the development from the Morality play into popular Elizabethan tragedy.

The Historie of Horestes (1567; ed. D. Seltzer, Malone Soc. 1962).

F. Brie in Eng. Studien, XLVI (1912); W. Farnham, Medieval Heritage of Elizabethan Tragedy (1936); E. B. de Chickera, 'Horestes Revenge—another interpretation' in Notes and Queries, VI (1959).
B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Pico, GIOVANNI, COUNT OF MIRANDOLA AND CONCORDIA (*Mirandola 24 II 1463; †Florence 17 XI 1494), Italian humanist. At Bologna, Padua and Pavia he acquainted himself with the theories of Aristotle* and Averroes* which he eventually endeavoured to harmonize with Platonism as he learnt it at Florence, with the Jewish CABBALAH and with the tenets of the Church. But his efforts (Oratio de hominis dignitate; Conclusiones; both 1486) were frustrated by the Papal condemnation (1487) which caused him to suffer exile to, and imprisonment in, France. He returned to Florence (1488) to seek forgiveness (Apologia; Heptaplus, 1489) which Alexander VI granted only out of political regard for the Medici (1493) when Pico had already reverted to Christianity as preached by Savonarola*. He died a Dominican (probably by poison) and as such was buried in St Mark's, Florence.

Coll. works (1st ed. Gian Francesco Pico della Mirandola, 2 vols, 1495; latest and best ed. E. Garin, 1942); De hominis dignitate (ed. with Ital. tr. B. Cicognani, 1942); extracts from his treatises and letters in E. Garin, Filosofi italiani del Quattrocento (1942) and Prosatori latini del Quattrocento (1952; complete biblio.); E. Cassirer, Individuum und Kosmos in der Philosophie der Renaissance (1927; Eng. tr. 1963). P.T.

Picón y Bouchet, JACINTO OCTAVIO (*Madrid 8 IX 1852; †ibid. 1923), Spanish novelist and art critic; an academician, he studied in France and graduated in law at Madrid. His novels have two main themes: anti-clericalism—Lázaro (1882), El enemigo (1887)—and the defence of natural love even at the expense of marital bonds. His naturalism is tempered, or spoiled, by much Romantic influence. His form and style are excellent.

Apuntes para la historia de la caricatura (1878); La hijastra del amor (1884); La honrada (1890); Dulce y sabrosa (1891); Vida y obras de don Diego Velázquez (1892); Juanita Tenorio (1910); Sacramento (1914).—After the Battle, The Menace, Souls in Contrast (tr. C. B. MacMichael, Kansas, 1926); Moral Divorce, Trarsila's Ideal (tr. anon., ibid., 1927).

H. Peseux-Richard, 'Un romancier espagnol: J. O. P.' in Rev. Hispanique, XXX (1914).

R.M.N.

Pien CHIH-LIN (*Kiangsu province 1910), Chinese poet, enjoyed a great reputation for his Western-influenced metaphysical poems in the 1930s. His student years at Peking University (1929–33) produced his first volume, San-ch'iu yeh (1933). In 1936 he joined with Ho* Ch'i-fang and Li Kuang-t'ien in Han-yüan chi and also published a much-acclaimed volume of translations of 19th- and 20th-century Western poetry, Hsi-ch'uang chi.

Sel. trs in: H. Acton and Ch'en Shih-hsiang, Modern Chinese Poetry (1936); Contemporary Chinese Poetry (ed. R. Payne, 1947; trs by Pien Chih-lin); K.-Y. Hsu, Twentieth Century Chinese Poetry (1963). A.R.D.

Pier della Vigna (*Capua c. 1190; †1249), Italian poet of the SICILIAN SCHOOL. He spent his life in the service of the Emperor Frederick* II, rising to the position of imperial chancellor and intimate adviser. Dante* has a famous account of his fall and suicide (Inf., 13). The official letters Pier composed as chancellor were regarded as models of Latin epistolary style. His verse includes a Latin anti-clerical diatribe and perhaps three canzoni.

Antologia dei primi secoli della letteratura italiana, II (ed. G. Lazzeri, 1942); Crestomazia italiana dei primi secoli (ed. E. Monaci; 2nd ed. rev. F. Arese, 1955); Poeti del Duecento, I (ed. G. Contini, 1961).

A. Huillard-Bréholles, Vie et correspondance de Pierre de la Vigne (1865); V. De Bartholomaeis, I primordi della lirica d'arte in Italia (1943); F. Schneider, 'Kaiser Fr. II und P. von V. im Urteil Dantes' in Deutsches Dante-Jahrbuch, XXVII (1948); E. Paratore in Atti del Convegno Internazionale di Studi Federiciani (Palermo, 1952).

K.F.

Pierre de Bur (*Bruges ?1427; ?1430; †c. 1505), neo-Latin poet, medieval in his choice of themes.

Moralium carminum libri IX (1503).—D. Murarasu, La poésie néolatine (1928). F.W.

Pierre de Saint-Cloud, 12th-century French poet. He composed the earliest branches (II and Va) of the Roman de Renart (?1175). His popular work was the starting-point of a whole narrative cycle. Attributing to animals mock-heroic actions, he freely imitated the Latin Ysengrimus by Nivard* (1152). See REYNARD. M.F.L.

Pierson, ALLARD (*Amsterdam 8 IV 1831; †Velhorst nr Zutphen 27 V 1896), Dutch theologian, historian, writer and poet. Brought up in the circles of the Réveil, Pierson resigned his office as a clergyman because of conscientious scruples, and was Professor at Heidelberg (1865–74) and at Amsterdam (art history and aesthetics) from 1877 onwards. His writings, however, remained imbued with a deeply religious view of life. He was more important as a cosmopolitan cultural historian, orator and writer of essays than as a novelist and poet. J.W.W.

NOVELS: Een pastorie in den Vreemde (1857); Adriaan de Mérial (3 vols, 1866).—Gedichten (verse; 1882).—Bespiegeling, gezag en ervaring (1855); Richting en Leven (1863); Geschiedenis van het Rooms-Katholicisme tot op het Concilie van Trente (4 vols, 1868–72); Een levensbeschouwing (1875); Oudere Tijdgenooten (1882–86); Geestelijke voorouders (2 vols, 1887–93).—Studien over J. Calvijn (3 vols, 1881–91); Verspreide geschriften (8 vols, 1901–08).

A. Verwey, 'Bij den dood van A. P.' in Stille Toernooien (1901); K. H. Boersema, A. P. (1926) and 'A. P.' in Tijdschr. v. Wijsbegeerte, XXXVI (1942); C. G. N. de Vooy, A. P. naast en tegenover Conrad Busken Huet (1941); J. Kamerbeek Jr., A. P. en Wilhelm Dilthey (1957); D. A. de Graaf, Het Leven van A. P. (1962). J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Piers Plowman: see Langland, WILLIAM.

Pietro da Barsegapé (fl. second half of 13th century), north Italian religious poet; his surviving work is a long rhymed 'sermon' of small literary merit, in northern dialect.

Die Reimpredigt des P. da B. (crit. ed. E. Keller, 1935); Early Italian Texts (ed. C. Dionisotti and C. Grayson, 2nd ed. 1965). K.F.

Piferrer y Fàbregas, PABLO (*Barcelona 1818; †ibid. 1848), Spanish poet of humble origin. Professor of rhetoric at Barcelona University, his position in the history of Spanish letters is secured by a score of poems, masterpieces of delicacy, feeling and simplicity. His musicianship is often revealed in his subtle transcription of folk-dance rhythms into words. His legends are in keeping.

Composiciones poéticas de P. P., Juan Francisco Carbó y José Semis y Mensa (1851).—'Canción of Spring' (tr. R. Gill in T. Walsh, Hispanic Anthology, 1930).

E. de Molins, Diccionario biográfico y bibliográfico, II (1889); Azorin, P. y los clásicos (1913); D. Canedo, Conversaciones literarias (1920); R. Carnicer, P., vida y obra (1963).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Pigafetta, ANTONIO (*Vicenza c. 1485; †ibid. c. 1535), Italian explorer who accompanied Magellan round the world. His detailed description of the voyage and its discoveries is of extraordinary interest.

Primo viaggio intorno al globo terraqueo (ed. A. Ginocchetti, 1944; trs: Lord Stanley of Alderley, 1874; J. A. Robertson, 1906). P.McN.

Pignotti, LORENZO (*Figline, Valdarno 9 VIII 1739; †Pisa 5 VIII 1812), Italian poet and prose-writer. Professor of physics at Pisa (1774); Royal Historiographer (1801); an admirer of Shakespeare* and Pope*. His Favole e Novelle (1782), a collection of verse fables, lightly satirizes the hypocrisy and follies of his time. Other works include Shakespeare (1779), L'ombra del Pope (1782) and La treccia donata (1808).

Favole e novelle (1807); Poesie (6 vols, 1812–13); Favole e novelle inedite (ed. F. Ferrari, 1888).—Storia della Toscana (ed. G. Carmignani, 9 vols, 1813–14).—Lirici del Settecento (ed. M. Fubini and B. Maier, 1959).

E. Rodriguez, Vita di L. P. (1896); U. Frittelli, L. P. favolista (1901). M.W.

Pilla(i), T(H)AKAZHI ŚIVAŚANKARA: see INDIAN LITERATURES: Malayalam.

Pillat, ION (*Bucharest 1891; †ibid. 1945), Rumanian poet. After taking a degree in law at Paris in 1914 he returned to Rumania and brought out the review Flacăra. In 1917 he published a volume of poems, Amăgiri, which was melancholic in feeling, but it was his collection Pe Argeş în sus (1923), containing elegies of the Rumanian landscape, that established him as a major poet. The lyrical verse of his later work Scutul Minervei (1933) and Ţărm pierdut (1937) shows him turning a regretful eye to the past, be it to his own childhood or to the classical era of Greece and Rome.

VERSE: Poezii (1968); Versuri (ed. D. Pillat, 1968).—PROSE: Rassengeist und völkische Tradition in der neuen rumänischen Dichtung (Leipzig, 1939); Portrete lirice (ed. V. Nemoianu, 1969).

D.J.D.

Pillecyn, FILIP DE (*Hamme 25 III 1891; †Ghent 7 VIII 1962), Flemish novelist, one of the foremost Flemish stylists; a neo-Romantic, he wrote historical novels, melancholy, dreamy atmospheric stories, biographies and essays.

NOVELS: Blauwbaard (1931; Blaubart in Flandern, tr. E. and F. Augustin, 1933); Hans van Malmedy (1935; Ger. tr. P. Mertens, 1938); De soldaat Johan (1939; Le soldat Johan, tr. P. de Man, 1941); Mensen achter den dijk (1949; Menschen hinter dem Deich, tr. Fr. Fromme, 1958).—SHORT STORIES: Monsieur Hawarden (1935; Fr. tr. A. Durieux, 1967); Schaduwen (1937).—BIOGRAPHIES AND STUDIES: Hugo Verriest (1926); Stijn Streuvels en zijn werk (1932).

B. Ranke, F. de P. (1941); A. van Wilderode, F. de P. (1960). R.F.L.

Pilnyak, BORIS, pseud. of BORIS ANDREYEVICH WOGAU (*Mozhaysk 29 IX 1894; †1937), Soviet writer. After his Civil War adventures all over Russia he published his 'dynamic' novel Goly god (1922; The Naked Year, tr. A. Brown, 1929) which gave a chaotic though powerful picture of the Revolution. Pilnyak welcomed the Revolution as an elemental happening which was bound to renew life, but such narratives of his as Mashiny i volki ('Machines and Wolves') and Mat' syra zemlya ('Mother Damp Earth') show no excessive love for Communist civilization. In 1927 he clashed with the authorities, but tried to make up for it by his excellent Five-Year-Plan novel, Volga vpadayet v Kaspiyskoye more (1930; The Volga Falls to the Caspian Sea, tr. C. Malamuth, 1931). He travelled widely in Japan, China and America, all of which he recorded in some of his further writings. As a typical FELLOW-TRAVELLER he did his best to adapt himself externally to the Soviet régime, yet his sympathies remained with the 'other', i.e. the primitive and elemental Russia.

This duality gradually affected his creative power and caused further misunderstandings with the régime. His last book appeared in 1938. It is unknown how he died.

Sobranie sochineniy (8 vols, 1930); Kamni i korni (1935); O. K. (1935); Sozrevanie plodov (1936).—Tales of Wilderness (tr. F. O'Dempsey, 1924); The Tale of the Unextinguished Moon (tr. B. Scott, New York, 1967).

A. Voronsky, Literaturnye tipy (1927); A. Paley, Literaturnye portrety (1928); G. Struve, Soviet Russian Literature (1950). J.L.

Pilon, JEAN-GUY (*Saint-Polycarpe, Quebec 12 XI 1930), Canadian poet, literary editor of the journal Liberté, editor of the poetry press Éditions de l'Hexagone and cultural-programme supervisor for Radio-Canada. His work is characterized by lucidity, optimism and melodious rhythm.

La fiancée du matin (1953); Les cloîtres de l'été (1954); L'homme et le jour (1957); La mouette et le large (1960); Recours au pays (1961); Pour saluer une ville (1963).—Solange (novel; 1966). R.Su.

Pina, RUI DE (*Guarda c. 1440; †c. 1520), Portuguese historian. Held in esteem by Kings John II and Manuel, he took part in diplomatic missions to Castile and to Rome and was appointed chronicler of the realm in 1497. Of the nine chronicles formerly attributed to him only two, those on John II and Afonso V, are now held to be his. The others, dealing with the early Kings of Portugal, seem to be adaptations of works by Fernão Lopes* and others. Lacking the genius of Lopes, Pina was nevertheless an able and informed historian. His style has simplicity and dignity and his portrayal of Afonso V and the strong-willed John II is not lacking in penetration.

Crónica de D. Afonso V (Bibl. de Cláss. Port.; 3 vols, 1901); Crónica de D. João II (ed. A. Martins de Carvalho, 1950).—Formerly attrib. to R. de P. were the chronicles of Sancho I, Afonso II, Sancho II, Afonso III, Dom Denis*, Afonso IV, and Dom Duarte*.

A. Coelho de Magalhães, 'Estudo crítico' in Crónica d'El-Rei D. Duarte (1914). T.P.W.

Pinar, FLORENCIA (fl. late 15th century), Spanish poet. Her canciones, untypical in their preference for concrete objects, are in the Cancionero general; the most famous, about captive partridges, is less innocent than it seems. Her brother was also a poet.

For biblio. see CANCIONERO.

A.D.D.

Pinciano, EL: see LÓPEZ PINCIANO, ALONSO.

Pindar (*Boeotia c. 520; †c. 438 B.C.; contemporary of Bacchylides*), the greatest of the lyric poets of ancient Greece. Only fragments of his Paeans,

Hymns and Dithyrambs remain. Four books of choral odes survive complete, Olympians, Pythians, Nemeans, Isthmians; these are all epinicia, poems commissioned by wealthy patrons and composed to honour the victor in the Olympic, Pythian, Nemean, and Isthmian Games. The Doric features which Pindar uses side by side with his native Boeotian dialect, and also the three elements present in nearly all the epinicia (praise of the victor, narrative taken from myth, maxims) probably derive from a Spartan tradition (Alcman*). The diction of the myth is gorgeous, with especially telling epithets, and the narrative is developed in a quite different way from the smooth flow of the Homeric epic: there are sudden transitions from one theme to another, and sometimes the story stops abruptly. Maxims form a characteristic part of the Pindaric epinicion. They are sometimes phrased in an enigmatic manner, and should not be used to construct theories about Pindar's 'thought'. However, certain themes are unmistakable: the aristocratic values of breeding and (no less important) of training; the dangers of excess; the high place occupied by poetry and poets; deeply-felt religious convictions.

Eds: B. Snell, I (4th ed. 1964), II (3rd ed. 1964); J. E. Sandys (3rd ed. 1927; with tr.).—Eds with comm.: L. R. Farnell (1930–32); J. B. Bury, Isthmians (1892) and Nemeans (1890); C. A. M. Fennell, Olympians and Pythians (1893); B. L. Gildersleeve, Olympians and Pythians (2nd ed. 1897); E. Thummer, Isthmians (1968–69).

F. Dornseiff, P.s Stil (1921); U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorf, Pindaros (1922); W. Schade-waldt, Der Aufbau des Pindarischen Epinikion (1928); L. Illig, Zur Form der Pindarischen Erzählung (1932); G. Norwood, P. (1945); J. H. Finley, P. and Aeschylus (1955); E. L. Bundy, Studia Pindarica (2 vols, 1962); R. W. B. Burton, P.'s Pythian Odes (1962); C. M. Bowra, P. (1964). J.T.H.

Pindemonte, IPPOLITO (*Verona 13 XI 1753; †ibid. 18 XI 1828), Italian poet and prose-writer. Widely travelled in Europe (1778–96), he lived for a time in London; an admirer of Gray*, Collins* and Edward Young*; a friend of Foscolo*. Of a studious and tranquil disposition, Pindemonte made an elegant translation of the Odyssey (1805–19) and composed (1785) the Poesie campestri (1788), a collection of lyric verse suffused with a tender melancholy (La solitudine, La melanconia). Other works include Abaritite (1790; a novel), the Prose campestri, Arminio (a tragedy), verse Epistole and moralizing Sermoni (1819).

Opere (4 vols, 1832–33).—Prose e poesie campestri (1817); Poesie originali di I. P. (ed. A. Torri, 1858); L'Odissea (ed. M. Valgimigli, 1930).—Lirici del Settecento (ed. M. Fubini and B. Maier, 1959; with sel. poetry and prose and biblio.).

N. F. Cimmino, I. P. e il suo tempo (2 vols, 1968).—O. Bassi, Fra classicismo e romanticismo, I. P. (1934); W. Binni, 'Il "grave stil nuovo" del P.' in Preromanticismo italiano (1948). M.W.

Pinero, SIR ARTHUR WING (*Islington 24 V 1855; ∞1883 Myra Emily Wood Hamilton, née Moore; †London 23 XI 1934), English playwright. He made some reputation by writing farces, but coming under the influence of Ibsen* wrote serious problem plays remarkable for the skill of the construction and the contrivance of tense situations. The Second Mrs Tanqueray (1893) established his fame.

The Profligate (1889); The Notorious Mrs Ebbsmith (1895); Trelawny of the 'Wells' (1897); The Gay Lord Quex (1899); His House in Order (1906); Mid-Channel (1909); The Enchanted Cottage (1922).

C. Hamilton, The Social Plays of Sir A. P. (4 vols, 1917–22); W. D. Dunkel, Sir A. P. (Chicago, 1941). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Pinget, ROBERT: see NOUVEAU ROMAN.

Ping Hsin, pseud. of HSIEH WAN-YING (*Min-hou 5 X 1900), Chinese author, became well known in the early years of the vernacular-literature movement, writing short stories and poems while a student at Yenching University (1919–23). Though she remained the most widely-known woman writer, this was the significant period of her work.

Kuan yü nü-jên (essays; 1943).—Ping-hsin chu-tso chi (coll. works; 3 vols, 1932–33: I, short stories; II, poems; III, prose).—Trs of short stories: Kyn Yn Yu in The Tragedy of Ah Qui (1931); R. L. Jen, 'The First Home Party' in T'ien Hsia Monthly, IV (1937); trs of poems: G. M. Boynton, Spring Water (Peking, 1929); K.-Y. Hsü in 20th Century Chinese Poetry (1963).

M. Boušková, 'The stories of Ping Hsin' in Studien zur modernen chinesischen Literatur (ed. J. Průšek, Berlin, 1964). A.R.D.

Pinkerton, JOHN (*Edinburgh 17 II 1758; †Paris 6 III 1826), Scottish historian. Trained for the law, he settled as an author in London in 1781, and moved to Paris in 1802. An irascible, combative and prejudiced man; but his Scottish History is a laborious foundation-work. He played a part in the antiquarian activity of his time, and in the recovery of the Scottish literary past, with Select Scottish Ballads (2 vols, 1783) and Ancient Scottish Poems . . . from the MS Collection of Sir Richard Maitland (1786). The Dissertation is a curious attempt to demonstrate the inferiority of the Celt.

Essay on Medals (1784); A Dissertation on the Origin . . . of the Scythians or Goths (1787); The History of Scotland from the Accession of the House of Stewart to that of Mary (2 vols, 1797);

Modern Geography (1803); Literary Correspondence (1830). J.K.

Pinski, DAVID (*Mohilev, Ukraine 1872; †Haifa 1959), Yiddish playwright and essayist. He began writing in Warsaw in 1893, and subsequently collaborated with Peretz*, lecturing and writing educational books. He lived for some time in Switzerland and Germany and was closely associated with several Zionist-Socialist publications, later becoming active in the Poale Zion party. Influenced by German drama, but even more by Ibsen's* plays, he wrote his great series of plays, first on social themes and later on Jewish historical subjects, which were successfully performed on the Yiddish stage as well as by the Habimah company (in Hebrew) and several European theatres. In 1899 he emigrated to the U.S.A. and in 1949 finally settled in Israel.

Isaac Sheftel (1899); Di Mooter (1901); Familye Tsvi (1905); Der Oitser (1905); Der eibiker yid (1919); Rabbi Akiba un Bar Kochba. J.S.

Pinter, HAROLD (*London 10 X 1930; ∞1956 Vivien Merchant), English dramatist, whose rather sombre plays explore the repetitive dialogue and inconsequences of everyday conversation in their 'new naturalism'.

The Birthday Party (1959); The Caretaker (1960); The Homecoming (1965); Landscape (1968); Silence (1969).

R. Hayman, H. P. (1968); J. R. Taylor, H. P. (1969). W.R.A.

Pinto, FERNÃO MENDES (*Montemor-o-Velho c. 1510; †Almada 8 VII 1583), Portuguese writer. Practically all that is known of his life is derived from his famous Peregrinação, and subject to caution. Captured by French corsairs off the coast of Portugal while still a youth, in 1537 he embarked for the East and began in earnest his amazing and varied career of travel and adventure in India, Ethiopia, Arabia, Burma, Siam, China and Japan. In 1558 he returned to Portugal and wrote his memoirs, a breathless, fascinating narrative recounting his vicissitudes as soldier, envoy, trader, adventurer, pirate and missionary. Under the influence of Francis Xavier, then preparing his great missionary work in China and Japan, Pinto became a Jesuit, but he later left the Order for reasons still obscure. One of the first Europeans to land in Japan, many times captured and shipwrecked, acquiring and losing with equal facility fabulous fortunes, Pinto describes all the countries of the East that he visited—and possibly some that he did not. Long considered as pure fantasy, much of the Peregrinação is now recognized to be based on fact and personal experience—though with undoubted inventions and lavishly coloured with an artist's imagination. The work enjoyed immense popularity in the 17th century, 19 editions in six languages (three in English) being published between 1614 and 1700. Pinto was the first writer to use the presentation of Oriental civilizations, particularly that of China, as a criticism of the barbarity, rapaciousness and in some respects the cultural inferiority of the European intruders.

Peregrinação de Fernam Mendez Pinto (1614; ed. Brito Rebelo, 4 vols, 1908–10; ed. Jordão de Freitas, 7 vols, 1930–31; ed. A. J. da Costa Pimpão, 7 vols, 1944–45; ed. A. J. Saraiva, 5 vols, 1960); The Voyages and Adventures of Ferdinand Mendez Pinto, a Portugal (tr. H. Cogan, 1663; abr. ed. 1891); Eng. adapt.: M. Collis, The Great Peregrination, Being the Life and Adventures of F. M. P. (1949).

G. Schurhammer, F. M. P. und seine Peregrinação (1926); G. Le Gentil, Les Portugais en Extrême-Orient, F. M. P. (1947); A. J. Saraiva, F. M. P. (1958) and Historia da cultura em Portugal, III (1962). T.P.W.

Pinto, HÉTOR (*Covilhã c. 1528; †Toledo 1584), Portuguese moralist. Entering the Hieronymite Order in 1543, he studied theology at Sigüenza and later became Professor of scripture at Coimbra. Vehemently opposed to the Spanish annexation of Portugal in 1580, he was removed to Spain, where he died.

Apart from exegetical works in Latin, Pinto wrote 11 dialogues 'in the manner of Plato', dealing with topics such as friendship, religion, true philosophy and the solitary life. Widely translated it ran through some 20 editions before the end of the century.

Imagem da vida cristã (pt I, 1563; pt II, 1572; ed. M. Alves Correia, 4 vols, 1940–41).

A. J. Saraiva, 'Assimilação do humanismo à tradição medieval: H. P.' in História da cultura em Portugal, II (1955). T.P.W.

Pinto Delgado, João (*?Tavira, Portugal; †?Amsterdam after 1636), Spanish poet. He was of Jewish descent, lived for some years at Rouen, where his poems were printed, and furtively practised Judaism. He left after a denunciation and finally settled in Amsterdam. His published poems are all Biblical: Esther, Ruth and some beautiful meditations on Lamentations. He deserves a good modern edition.

Poema de la Reyna Ester, etc. (Rouen, 1627; ed. I. S. Révah, Lisbon, 1954).

C. Roth, 'J. P. D.—a literary disentanglement' in Mod. Lang. Rev., XXX (1935); E. M. Wilson, 'The poetry of J. P. D.' in Jour. Jewish Stud., I (1949); A. D. H. Fishlock, 'The rabbinic material in P. D.'s Ester', ibid., II (1950).

E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Piontek, HEINZ (*Kreuzberg 15 XI 1925), German poet, fiction writer and critic. His precision and clarity has wide appeal, and his poems can be found in numerous anthologies.

VERSE: Die Furt (1952); Mit einer Kranichfeder (1962); Klartext (1966).—PROSE: Kastanien aus dem Feuer (1963); Die mittleren Jahre (novel; 1967); Liebeserklärungen (1969).—Buchstab, Zauberstab (criticism; 1959).

H. E. Holthusen, 'H. P.' in Ja und Nein (1954); J. C. Middleton, 'The poetry of H. P.' in Ger. Life and Letters, XIII (1959–60); C. Hohoff, K. Krolow, H. Politzer et al., H. P. Hinweise, Erläuterungen, Proben, Daten (1966). F.M.K.

Piovene, GUIDO (*Vicenza 27 VII 1907), Italian novelist and essayist. Since 1935 he has been correspondent for various newspapers in a number of countries, as a result of which he has written books on the contemporary scene in America, Italy, France and Russia. In 1949 and 1950 he was director of the Department of Arts and Letters of UNESCO. As a novelist he displays a deep interest in human nature and man's capacity for self-deception. His concerns are those of the moralist and philosopher rather than of the critic of society. In Lettere di una novizia (1941; Confession of a Novice, tr. E. Wilkins, 1950), he revives the epistolary form.

NOVELS: La gazzetta nera (1943); Pietà contro pietà (1946); I falsi redentori (1949); Le furie (1963); Le stelle fredde (1970).—ESSAYS: Lo scrittore tra la tirannide e la libertà (1952); La coda di paglia (1962).

G. Catalano, P. (1967).

B.M.

Piozzi, HESTER LYNCH, née SALUSBURY (*Bodvel nr Pwllheli 16 I 1741; ∞1763 Henry Thrale, ∞1784 Gabriel Piozzi; †Bath 2 V 1821), English writer of lively memoirs of Dr Johnson*, whose deep affection for her made him a frequent visitor at her Streatham house during her marriage to Thrale the brewer. Her marriage to Piozzi ended Johnson's friendship.

R.M.H.

Anecdotes of the late Samuel Johnson (1786; ed. with notes by G. Birkbeck Hill in Johnsonian Miscellanies, I, 1897; ed. separately S. C. Roberts, 1925, repr. 1969); Letters (to and from Johnson; 1788; ed. R. W. Chapman in The Letters of Samuel Johnson, 3 vols, 1952); Piozziana (ed. E. Margin, 1833); Autobiography, Letters and Literary Remains (ed. A. Hayward, 2 vols, 1861); Three Dialogues (ed. M. Zamick, 1932); The Queeney Letters (ed. H. Fitzmaurice, 1934); Thraliana (ed. K. Balderston, 2 vols, 1951; notebook); Observations on the Course of a Journey through France, Italy and Germany (ed. H. Barrows, 1967).

J. L. Clifford, H. L. P. (1941).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Pirandello, LUIGI (*Agrigento 28 VI 1867; ∞1894 Maria Antonietta Portulano; †Rome I XII 1936),

Italian poet, short-story writer, novelist and dramatist. His first publications were three volumes of poems, mostly written while still a student at the Universities of Palermo, Rome and Bonn, but he soon turned to prose fiction, writing excellent short stories in the veristic tradition as well as novels. He achieved his first public success with the novel Il fu Mattia Pascal (1904; The Late M. Pascal, tr. A. Livingston, 1923), and only later turned to the theatre, where his greatest triumphs were to occur. In 1934 he was awarded the Nobel prize for literature. From 1926 to 1934 he directed his own theatrical company.

Pirandello's stage characters are often elaborations of earlier ones from his fiction, but only in the plays do they achieve maturity and through them Pirandello explores the concepts of the subjective and therefore relative nature of reality and the relationship of art to life. The essay L'umorismo (1908) is important for an understanding of Pirandello.

NOVELS: I vecchi e i giovani (1913; The Old and the Young, tr. C. K. Scott Moncrieff, 1928); Uno, nessuno e centomila (1926; One, None and a Hundred Thousand, tr. S. Putnam, 1933).—PLAYS: Così è, se vi pare (1918; Right You Are! (If You Think So), tr. F. May, 1962); Sei personaggi in cerca d'autore (1921; Six Characters in Search of an Author, tr. idem, 1954); Enrico IV (1922; tr. idem, 1962); Vestire gli ignudi (1923; Naked, tr. A. Livingston, 1924); Diana e la Tuda (1927; Diana and Tuda, tr. Marta Abba, 1949); Questa sera si recita a soggetto (1930; Tonight We Improvise, tr. S. Putnam, 1932).—Collected ed. of works (6 vols, in ser. Classici contemporanei italiani, frequent repr.).

O. Büdel, P. (1966); W. Starkie, L. P. (1965): best intros in Eng.—A. L. de Castris, Storia di P. (1962); G. Giudice, L. P. (1963); A. Barbina, Bibliografia della critica pirandelliana 1889-1961 (1967).
B.M.

Piraten, FRITIOF NILSSON: see Nilsson Piraten, FRITIOF.

Pirckheimer, WILLIBALD (*Eichstätt 5 XII 1470; †Nürnberg 22 XII 1530), German humanist. The complete Renaissance personality, humanist, scientist, warrior and diplomat, the leader of Nürnberg culture, a close friend of Albrecht Dürer, and supporter of Reuchlin*. He wrote a notable history of the Swiss war (in which he fought), various Latin works, and may be the part-author of the important Reformation satire Eccius dedolatus (1520; ed. A. E. Berger in Dt. Lit. in Entw.-Reihen, II, 1931).

Pirckheimeri opera (ed. M. Goldast, 1610); Schweizerkrieg (with P.'s autobiog.; ed. K. Rück, 1895); Briefwechsel (ed. A. Reimann and E. Reicke, 2 vols, 1940, 1956).

E. Reicke, W. P.'s Leben, Familie und Persönlichkeit (1930).
D.G.D.

Pirmez, OCTAVE (*Châtelet 19 IV 1832; †Acoz 30 IV 1883), Belgian writer. A precursor of the Belgian literary renaissance, this country gentleman, who corresponded with Hugo* and Sainte-Beuve*, wrote in a lyrical, contemplative style which aroused great enthusiasm among the Jeune Belgique group of writers.

Feuillées (1862); Heures de philosophie (1873); Esquisses psychologiques (1875); Rémo (1878); Lettres à José (1884).

M. Wilmotte, Anthologie (1904).

B.M.W. (J.C.D.)

Piron, ALEXIS (*Dijon 29 VII 1689; †Paris 21 I 1773), French poet and dramatist. He wrote epigrams and minor light verse and, among several plays, two on subjects taken from modern history: Gustave Vasa (1733) and Fernand Cortès (1744). His best work was his comedy, La Métromanie (1738). He was a life-long enemy of Voltaire*.

Œuvres (ed. M. Bonhomme, 1859 and 1879).

P. Chaponnière, P. (1910); H. C. Lancaster, French Tragedy in the Time of Louis XV, I (1950).
G.B.

Pisacane, CARLO (*Naples 22 VIII 1818; †Sanza 2 VII 1857), Italian patriot and political writer. His Saggi storici-politici-militari sull'Italia (1858; crit. ed. A. Romanò, 1957), written in exile, show a complete understanding of the part to be played by the army in Italian history; his Guerra combattuta in Italia negli anni '48-'49 (1851) reveals differences of opinion with Garibaldi on the conduct of the first two wars. He embarked on the abortive expedition to Sanza where, being defeated and wounded, sooner than surrender he committed suicide.

Saggio sulla rivoluzione (1894); Testamento politico (1880); Epistolario (1937); Scritti vari, inediti o rari (ed. A. Romanò, 1964).

N. Rosselli, C. P. nel Risorgimento italiano (1932).
N.K.W. (J.G.-R.)

Pisarev, ALEXANDER IVANOVICH (*1803; †1828), Russian playwright. He was partly responsible for the vogue of the vaudevilles which started in the 1820s and became a prominent feature of the Russian theatre of that period.

Lukavin... (1964).

S. Aksakov, Literaturnye u teatral'nye vospomnaniya (1856).
J.L.

Pisarev, DMITRY IVANOVICH (*Orel province 15 XI 1840; †nr Riga 4 VI 1868), Russian polemical writer, critic and a typical 'nihilist'. Together with Chernyshevsky* and Dobrolyubov* he represented the radical thought of his generation. As a thoroughgoing utilitarian he accepted in literature only what was reasonable and useful. He denounced Pushkin* simply because he could not endure Pushkin's aesthetic valuations of art and life. Yet with all his dogmatism Pisarev's attacks were usually lively and often brilliant in their very ruthlessness.

Sochineniya (6 vols, 1894); Literaturnokriticheskie statyi (1940); Izbrannye filosofskie i obshchestvennopoliticheskie statyi (1949); Sochineniya (4 vols, 1955–56).

V. Kirpotin, Radikal'ny raznochinets P. (1929); A. Coquart, D. P. et l'idéologie du nihilisme russe (1946); L. Plotkin, D. I. P. (1962); Y. Silkin, Zhizn' D. Pisareva (1969). J.L.

Pisemsky, ALEXEY FEOFILAKTOVICH (*Kostroma province 10 III 1820; †Moscow 21 I 1881), Russian author of the realist school. A shrewd observer and an embittered sceptic, he directed his criticism mostly against the gentry, speculators and petty officials. He followed up his first novel Tyufyak (1850; The Simpleton, tr. I. Litvinov, 1960) with a number of narratives and novels, culminating with his masterpiece Tsyvacha dush (1858; A Thousand Souls, tr. idem, 1959)—one of the great novels of the period. Here as elsewhere Pisemsky combines his naturalistic manner with a good plot and effective characterization. After his pathetic tragedy from peasant life, Gor'kaya sud'bina (1859; A Bitter Fate, tr. A. Kogan and G. R. Noyes, 1933), his powers began to decline. In the 1860s he moreover became discredited with the liberals on account of his anti-radical novel, Vzblamuchennoe more (1863), and the growing misunderstandings only made him more gloomy and embittered.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (3rd ed., 8 vols, 1910–11); Pis'ma (1936); Sochineniya (1956– ); Pyesy (1958).

S. A. Vengerov, A. F. P. (1884); A. I. Kirpichnikov, Dostoyevsky i P. (1894); I. D. Ivanov, P. (1898). J.L.

Pisides: see George Pisides.

Pitillas, JORGE: see Hervás y Cobo de la Torre, JOSÉ GERARDO DE.

Pitcottie, ROBERT LINDSAY OF (~Pitcottie c. 1500; †c. 1565), Scottish historian in the medieval tradition. His Chronicles of Scotland 1436–1565 (1728; ed. Æ. J. G. Mackay, 3 vols, 1899–1911) is a picturesque, entertaining, sometimes naïve but not unreliable narrative of considerable historical value. Scott* used it, particularly in Marmion. J.K.

Pitter, RUTH (*Ilford, Essex 7 XI 1897), English poet. Belonging to no coterie, little advertised, she is rare among contemporary poets in that, fully alive to the contemporary scene, she has ceaselessly found poetic satisfaction in the permanent forms of beauty—nature, and the simpler objects of passion. She has a fine tact for the just image and the appropriate metre.

First Poems (1920); A Trophy of Arms (1936); The Spirit Watches (1939); The Rude Potato (1941); The Bridge (1945); Urania (1951); Still by Choice (1966).—Poems 1926–66 (1968).

A. Russell, R. P.: Homage to a Poet (1969). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Pitti, BUONACCORSO (*Florence 25 IV 1354; †c. 1431), Italian writer and adventurer. He roamed far and wide over Europe and undertook missions for Florence; his Cronaca illuminated both personal experience and Florentine politics.

Cronaca (ed. A. Bacchi della Lega, 1905); Two Memoirs of Renaissance Florence; The Diaries of B. P. and Gregorio Dati (tr. J. Martines, ed. G. Brucker, 1967).

E. Rodocanachi, 'Un aventurier florentin, B. de P.' in Bullettino ital., II (1902); L. Mirot, B. P. aventurier joueur diplomate et mémorialiste (1932). P.McN.

Pius II, POPE: see Piccolomini, ENEA SILVIO.

Pixérécourt, RENÉ CHARLES GUILBERT DE (*Nancy 22 I 1773; †ibid. 27 VII 1844), French dramatist. Pixérécourt, the author of some 111 plays, is known as 'the father of melodrama'. His workmanlike mingling of adventure, horror and pathos created the most popular form of theatrical entertainment of the 19th century.

Le château des Appennins, ou les mystères d'Udolphe (1797); Victor, ou l'enfant de la forêt (1798); Calina, ou l'enfant du mystère (1801); Les mines de Pologne (1803); Robinson Crusoe (1805); Le chien de Montargis, ou la forêt de Bondy (1816).

P. Ginisty, Le mélodrame (1910); W. G. Hartog, G. de P. (1913); M. W. Disher, Blood and Thunder (1949). T.W.

Pizzicollì, CIRIACO DE': see Ciriaco d'Ancona.

Pla, JOSEP (*Palafrugell 1897), Catalan writer. Described by a critic as a graphomaniac, he is a great essayist in the style of the 19th-century English school. His innumerable works (novels, short stories, biographies, articles, travelogues, diaries, etc.) form a coherent whole, a multiform critical review of more than 50 years of Catalan history. His free and colourful style, the main feature being the richness and precision in the use of adjectives, reaches its finest heights in his descriptions of landscape and in his portraits.

Obres completes (intro. Joan Fuster, in progr.; 14 vols pub. 1966– ). J.L.M.

Plácido, pseud. of GABRIEL DE LA CONCEPCIÓN VALDÉS (*La Habana 18 III 1809; †Matanzas 28

VI 1844), Cuban poet. A foundling and a quadroon, Plácido lived all his life in humble circumstances, and his fame is due not entirely to his literary achievement, but in part to his tragic death; he was shot as a conspirator by the Spanish authorities. Out of a vast mass of pedestrian versification (he earned his living by improvising) a handful of real poems remains: ingenuous, halting but of moving sincerity. E.Sa.

Poesias de P. (1938).—F. S. Stimson, Cuba's Romantic Poet, The Story of P. (N. Carolina, 1964). J.F.

Planché, JAMES ROBINSON (*London 27 II 1796; ∞1821 Elizabeth St George; †ibid. 30 V 1880), English antiquary, student of heraldry and costume, and writer of numerous burlesques and Christmas pieces for the theatre.

Amoroso, King of Little Britain (1818; burlesque); History of British Costumes (1834); Regal Records (1838); Pursuivant of Arms (1852); Recollections and Reflections (2 vols, 1872); Extravagances (5 vols, 1879).

H. Granville Barker, 'Exit P.—enter Gilbert' in London Mercury (1932). R.M.H.

Plantijn, CHRISTOFFEL (or CHRISTOPHE PLANTIN) (*St Avertin 1520; †1589), Dutch printer of French origin. He came to Antwerp in 1549 where he started a printing shop which soon became the most famous of its kind in the Low Countries. His best-known effort is the polyglot Bible. He established also branches at Leiden, Paris and Salamanca and exported to America and North Africa. After his death the business was carried on by his son-in-law and his descendants. Since 1876 the house and equipment has been a museum. For Dutch philology his dictionary (1573) has lasting value. (See also PRINTING AND PUBLISHING.)

M. Rooses, Christophe P. (1882), Rimes de P. (2nd ed. 1922) and Correspondance (8 vols, 1883–1918; adds by M. van Durme, 1955); M. Sabbe, De Plantijnsche werkstede (1935) and L'œuvre de C. P. et de ses successeurs (1938); C. Clair, Christopher P. (1960); J. A. Dorsten, Poets, Patrons and Professors (1962); L. Voet, Het Museum P.-Moretus (1965) and The Golden Compasses (1969). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Planudes: see Maximus Planudes.

Platen-Hallermünde, AUGUST, GRAF VON (*Ansbach 24 X 1796; †Syracuse 5 XII 1835), German poet. Educated in the Munich Kadettenkorps, Platen was ill fitted for army life, but fought in the second campaign against Napoleon, and, while remaining on the army list, after 1818 enjoyed permanent leave of absence. Studying at Erlangen and Würzburg he mastered 12 languages, and ranged voraciously over world literature. After 1826 he lived mainly in Italy. The least provincial of poets of his time, he had little human contact because of his homosexual inclinations and uncompromising fastidiousness. His aim—in which, notably in his Ghaselen (1821) and sonnets, he succeeded—was the conquest of form, at a time when the Romantics had cast form to the winds. His disgust for the weaker aspects of Romanticism found expression in brilliantly waspish literary satires: his comedy, Die verhängnisvolle Gabel (1826), annihilated the Schicksalsdrama. He was rediscovered by Stefan George* and his disciples as the poet defying the theories, militant teachings and doctrines of Naturalism which was ultimately bent upon the negation and destruction of art itself.

Tagebücher (ed. G. von Laubmann and L. von Scheffler, 2 vols, 1896–1900); Gesamtausgabe (ed. M. Koch and E. Petzet, 12 vols, 1910); Briefwechsel (ed. L. von Scheffler and P. Bornstein, 4 vols, 1911–31); Gedichte (ed. C. Fischer, 1958).

M. Koch, P.s Leben und Schaffen (1909); R. Schlosser, A. Graf von P. (2 vols, 1910–13); W. Heuss, P.s dramatisches Werk (1936).—F. Redenbacher, P.-Bibliographie (1936).

H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Plath, SYLVIA (*Boston, Mass. 27 X 1932; ∞1956 Ted Hughes*; †London 11 II 1963), American poet. Her suicide emphasized the continual speculations on death, disintegration and breakdown to be found in her work. The tone of her work is refined and speculative and suggests hysteria only just kept under control. The fear and fascination of schizophrenia is expressed in her novel The Bell Jar (1963) which highlights the main concerns of her poetry.

VERSE: Colossus (1960); Ariel (1965). G.A.K.

Platina, IL, properly BARTOLOMEO SACCHI (*Piacenza 1421; †Rome 1481), Italian humanist. In Rome as secretary to Francesco Gonzaga, he was favoured by Pius* II, imprisoned by Paul II and appointed librarian by Sixtus IV. He is mainly remembered for his Liber de vita Christi ac omnium pontificum, completed in 1474, which is of little historical value until, from Calixtus III, it treats of contemporary Popes, when it acquires the interest and bias of personal reminiscence. Typical Renaissance treatises are his De principe (1657), De optimo cive, and De vera nobilitate.

Platynae historici liber de vita Christi ac omnium pontificum (ed. G. Gaida in Rerum Italicarum scriptores, new ed., III, 1914); De optimo cive (ed. F. Battaglia, 1944).

A. Luzio and R. Renier, 'Il P. e i Gonzaga' in Giornale storico della lett. ital., XIII (1889); G. J. Schorn, 'Die Quellen zu den Vitae Pontificum Romanorum des B. P.' in Römischer Quartalschrift, XXVII (1913); Prosatori latini del Quattrocento (ed. E. Garin, 1952). P.McN.

Plato (fl. c. 428–385 B.C.), Athenian comic poet. Twenty-eight plays, on political, literary, mythological and social themes show an interesting transition in matter and style from Old to Middle Comedy.

T. Kock, Comicorum Atticorum fragmenta, I (1880); J. M. Edmonds, Fragments of Attic Comedy, I (1957; with tr.).—T. B. L. Webster, Studies in Later Greek Comedy (2nd ed. 1970).
E.W.H.

Plato (*Athens 428/427; †ibid. 347 B.C.), Greek philosopher. His father and mother, Ariston and Perictione, were both members of families of great influence in the time of Pericles; two of his relatives were concerned in the short-lived oligarchic government of 404–403. From an early age therefore he must have associated with men who could talk with knowledge of political problems. His inclinations may well have been towards practical politics; but the oligarchic government disgusted him by its violence, and the restored democracy was still worse in his eyes because it was responsible for the execution of his master, Socrates*.

About 388 he went to Sicily and there formed a friendship with Dion, the son-in-law of Dionysius I of Syracuse. Perhaps a year later he returned to Athens and founded a school in the Academy. He visited Sicily again in 367: Dionysius I died and Dion invited Plato to undertake the education of his successor Dionysius II. Plato attempted to put the teachings of the Academy into practice: he started the young ruler on a course of geometry. Unfortunately Dionysius lacked many of the qualities which Plato demanded for his philosophic ruler and was moreover jealous of the power of his brother-in-law Dion. The attempt to educate him failed, and Plato returned to Athens. His final visit to Syracuse in 361 also came to nothing. Eventually Dion seized power in Syracuse by force, but was himself murdered.

Plato's direct intervention in politics was useless; his success was in the Academy. The demand for higher education was shown by the popularity of the travelling sophists, who taught the useful arts for a fee. Isocrates* started a school in Athens, probably before the foundation of the Academy, and offered a preparation for political life. The difference between Isocrates' school and Plato's was that Plato believed in the value of abstract scientific studies: his pupils were to prepare themselves for public life not merely by a course of general knowledge and rhetoric but through the discipline of mathematics and dialectic. This act of faith is the link between the Academy and the modern University.

All of Plato's writings, except the Letters and the Apology, are in dialogue form, usually with Socrates taking the leading part; many of them take their name from Socrates' principal interlocutor. The speakers are often real people: the views Plato puts into their mouths are developments of their own views but go far beyond the position they are known to have held.

The dialogues can be arranged in three groups, according to their date and philosophic content. Those in the earliest group are generally inconclusive: they give a picture of Socrates which may well approach historical truth—a man criticizing current notions of morality and trying to find universal standards.

The second group (Phaedo, Symposium, Republic, Phaedrus) presents positive doctrines of Plato's own, particularly the theory of Forms (or Ideas). Probably they can be dated after Plato's return from Sicily in 388, when he had the opportunity of meeting Pythagoreans. The theory of Forms seems to be a product of Socrates' search for universal moral standards, and the Pythagorean idea that the real and knowable element in the universe is its mathematical structure. The objects of knowledge, according to the theory, cannot be the transient, changing things of the material world, which baffle the scientific observer by their impermanence and complexity, but must be eternal, unchangeable 'forms', the perfect models of the imperfect copies which we see around us.

This theory has implications for other fields of enquiry. In the Phaedo, it is linked to the doctrine of the immortality of the human soul; in the Republic, the whole structure of the ideal state depends on the education of the 'philosopher-kings' and their ability to grasp the 'forms'.

In the last group (e.g. Parmenides, Theaetetus, Sophist, Philebus) the theory is submitted to critical analysis; in the Timaeus it plays its part in Plato's strange, half-scientific, half-mythological cosmology. In his last dialogue, the Laws, it is less evident: Plato seems to abandon some of the lofty idealism of earlier works and concentrates on a more practical examination of political problems.

As a philosopher Plato is unsystematic. His methods vary, his conclusions receive different emphasis in different contexts, and his examination of any particular problem is scattered over many dialogues, each with different purposes and a different point of view. Frequently he resorts to allegory or myth to touch themes too difficult for direct explanation. But perhaps his lack of system makes him all the more suggestive. Here for the first time the fundamental problems of philosophy were stated and elucidated, in brilliantly persuasive language, and all subsequent thinkers had to reckon with his views.

H. F. Cherniss, 'P. 1950–57' in Lustrum, IV–V (1959–60; biblio.).—EDITIONS: Epistulae (F. No-votny, 1930); Euthyphro, Apology and Crito (J. Burnet, 1924); Gorgias (E. R. Dodds, 1959); Hippias Major (D. Tarrant, 1928); Laws (E. B. England, 2 vols, 1921); Meno (E. S. Thompson, 1901); Phaedo (R. D. Archer-Hind, 1894; J. Burnet, 1911); Phaedrus (W. H. Thompson, 1868); Philebus (R. G. Bury, 1897); Republic (J. Adam, 2 vols, 1902-09); Sophist and Politicus (L. Campbell, 1867); Symposium (R. G. Bury, 1932); Theaetetus (L. Campbell, 1883); Timaeus (comm. only; A. E. Taylor, 1928).—Complete text in Oxford Classical Texts.

TRANSLATIONS: Complete text and tr. (various authors) in Loeb Classical Libr.; complete tr. B. Jowett (rev. D. J. Allan and H. E. Dale, 1953); various authors (ed. E. Hamilton, 1961); separate dialogues tr. in Penguin Classics and Bobbs-Merrill, Library of Liberal Arts.

G. C. Field, The Philosophy of P. (1949; best short intro.).—R. L. Nettleship, Lectures on the Republic of P. (1901); E. Barker, Greek Political Theory: P. and His Predecessors (1925); A. Diès, Autour de Platon (1927); A. E. Taylor, P.: The Man and His Work (1929); U. von Wilamowitz-Moellendorf, Platon (3rd ed. 1930); P. Frutiger, Les mythes de Platon (1930); G. C. Field, P. and His Contemporaries (1930); P. Shorey, What P. Said (1933); G. M. A. Grube, P.'s Thought (1935); Sir David Ross, P.'s Theory of Ideas (1951); G. R. Morrow, P.'s Cretan City (1960); K. R. Popper, The Open Society and Its Enemies, I (4th ed. 1962); I. M. Crombie, An Examination of P.'s Doctrines (1963); K. Gaiser, P.'s ungeschriebene Lehre (1963); Studies in P.'s Metaphysics (ed. R. E. Allen, 1965); New Essays on P. and Aristotle (ed. R. Bambrough, 1965); G. Ryle, P.'s Progress (1966); H. J. Krämer, Arete bei P. und Aristoteles (1967); P. (ed. G. Vlastos, 2 vols, 1970). D.J.F.

Platonov, SERGEY FÉDOROVICH (*1860; †1933), Russian historian and author. He knew particularly well the Muscovite Russia of the 16th and 17th centuries.

Lektsii po russkoy istorii (1901); Statyi po russkoy istorii (2nd ed. 1912); Boris Godunov (1921); Ocherki po istorii smuty v Muskovskom gosudarstve XVI i XVII (1901; new ed. 1937).—History of Russia (tr. E. Aronsberg, 1925).

J.L.

Platter, THOMAS (*Grächen, Valais 10 II 1499; †Basle 26 I 1582), Swiss writer. Shepherd, soap-maker, printer at Basle. At the age of 75 he wrote an autobiography which, written in a vivid, homely style, is an interesting and valuable social document of the Swiss Reformation period. It is generally printed together with the diary of his son FELIX PLATTER (1536-1614), another lively and important document.

Selbstbiographie (with Felix P.'s Tagebuch; ed. H. Boos, 2nd ed. 1918; Eng. tr. E. A. MacCaul, 1839; extracts in Dt. Lit. in Entw.-Reihen. Selbstzeugnisse, IV, 1931); Briefe an seinen Sohn Felix (ed. A. A. Burckhardt, 1890).

A. L. Schnidrig, T. P. (1955).

D.G.D.

Platter, THOMAS, DER JÜNGERE (*Basle 24 VII 1574; †ibid. 4 XII 1628), Swiss writer, son of Felix Platter. He wrote an account of his travels through France, Spain, England and Holland, which includes an account of a performance at the Globe Theatre (1599).

Beschreibung der Reisen durch Frankreich, England u.s.w. (ed. R. Keiser, 1968); T. P.'s Travels in England (tr. C. Williams, 1937).—H. Hecht, T. P. des J.n Englandfahrt (1929).

D.G.D.

Plautus, T. MACCIUS (*Sarsina before 251; †184 B.C.), Umbrian actor who translated Attic comedies for performance at the Roman festivals. In antiquity there circulated 130 comic scripts attributed to him, of which 21 came to be commonly thought genuine. The latter 21 have survived except for large parts of the Vidularia and small parts of the Amphitruo, Aulularia, Bacchides and Cistellaria. About 32 of the lost scripts are quoted by grammarians and others. The Bacchides, Cistellaria and Stichus are known to have been based on comedies by Menander*, the Mercator, Mostellaria and Trinummus on comedies by Philemon*, the Casina and the Rudens on comedies by Diphilus*, the Asinaria on a comedy by Demophilus, a poet not otherwise known but almost certainly posterior to the three classic writers of the 'new' comedy. Fairly extensive pieces of the Bacchides original and a few scraps of those of the Cistellaria and Stichus survive. It would be reasonable to say that the 'new' comedy provided all Plautus' originals, although scholars have at times attempted to assign the Amphitruo, Menaechmi and Persa to the so-called 'middle' comedy.

Plautus translated very freely. With an eye to momentary theatrical effect, he seems often to have cut scenes out and added material from other plays. He extended monologues and non-dramatic dialogues to great length, filling them with allusions to contemporary Greek and Roman life and employing an enormous variety of metrical patterns. The Latin versions required a lot more accompanying song and dance than did the originals even although the choral interludes were omitted. They rarely preserved a tightly logical unity of action. Plautus' language has a wide stylistic range; a single play will contain anything from gross vulgarity to paratragic pomp.

Plautus' comedies were extremely popular in the theatre throughout the Republic but there are few signs of their being performed during the Empire. Among readers, antiquarians always admired them; schoolmasters, on the other hand, found their language too remote from the norms of classical Latin while literary men (like Horace*) sought in them, and complained when they could not find, the regular metric and sophisticated wit of Menander. The Middle Ages practically ignored them. Early Renaissance Italy had available only eight until a manuscript with another 12 was brought from Germany in 1429. They were first printed at Venice in 1472. A large number of modern European playwrights have found inspiration in their plots and situations.

Crit. eds: F. Ritschl et al. (1871–94); G. Goetz and F. Schoell (1892–1904); F. Leo (1895–96); W. M. Lindsay (1904–11); Lat. comm. J. L. Ussing (1875–92); important individual comms: A. O. Lorenz, Miles gloriosus (1886), Mostellaria (1883) and Pseudolus (1876); J. Brix and M. Niemeyer, Captivi (7th ed. O. Koehler, 1930), Menaechmi (6th ed. F. Conrad, 1929), Miles gloriosus (4th ed. O. Koehler, 1916) and Trinummus (6th ed. F. Conrad, 1931); W. M. Lindsay, Captivi (1900); F. Marx, Rudens (1928); P. J. Enk, Mercator (1932) and Truculentus (1953); G. Duckworth, Epidicus (1940).—Tr. P. Nixon (1916–38).

F. Leo, Der Monolog im Drama (1908), Plautinische Forschungen (2nd ed. 1912) and essays repr. in Ausgewählte kleine Schriften, I (1960); G. Michaut, Plaute (1920); E. Fraenkel, Plautinisches im P. (1922; Elementi plautini in P., Ital. tr. F. Munari with important addenda, 1960); G. Jachmann, Plautinisches und Attisches (1931); H. Haefter, Untersuchungen zur allateinischen Dichtersprache (1934); C. Questa, Introduzione alla metrica di Plauto (1967); E. W. Handley, Menander and P.: A Study in Comparison (1968). H.D.J.

Plavius, JOHANN (*?; †?), German poet, known principally by one slim volume of Trauer- und Treugedichte (Danzig, 1630) which show him as an important competitor of Opitz* and an early representative of a musical and dynamic baroque trend in style, contrasting with Opitz' more rational and static traits. He is a forerunner of the later Silesians and Saxons, of whom Gryphius*, Hofmann* von Hofmannswaldau and Stieler* came under his personal influence at Danzig. He wrote the first sequence of moral sonnets in German (a genre later taken up by Gryphius) and experimented with classical stanzas and the use of dactyls. His decorative yet sincere poetry reflects the patrician culture of baroque Danzig.

Trauer- und Treugedichte (unique copy in State Libr., Berlin); Praecepta logicalia (1628).—H. Kindermann, Danziger Barockdichtung in Deutsche Lit. in Entw.-Reihen, Barock, Ergänzungsband (with repr. of P.'s poems; 1939).

C. Lemcke, Von Opitz bis Klopstock (1882); V. Manheimer, 'J. P., ein Danziger Sonettist' in Mitteilungen des Westpreussischen Geschichtsvereins, II (1903). L.W.F.

Plávka, ANDRĚJ (*Sielnica 18 XI 1907), Slovak poet. One of the best Slovak poets of his generation, Plávka is also one of the most traditional in language and form. His poems are strongly influenced by the landscape of his native region of Liptov (Tri prúty Liptova, 1942; repr. in Liptovská pišt'ala, 1957). The Slovak rising of 1944, in which he took part, is the theme of a number of his poems, notably in Tri vody (1954). R.A.

DER Pleier (fl. 1250–80), burgher poet, Salzburg area; compiler of some 50,000 lines of Arthurian narrative: Garel vom blühenden Tal (adaptation of der Stricker's* Daniel), Meleranz and Tandareis und Floribel. He combined many borrowed motifs (see Püterich*).

Ed. K. Bartsch (1861); F. Khull (1885); M. Walz (1892); synopsis of stories in J. Kürschner, Dt. Nat.-Lit., IV (1882–89).

J. L. Riordan, 'A vindication of the P.' in Jour. Eng. and Germanic Philol., XLVII (1946).

F.P.P.

Plekhanov, GEORGY VALENTINOVICH (*Tambov 26 XI 1856; †Leningrad 30 V 1918), founder of the Russian Social Democratic party, author, editor and critic. He won international fame as a theoretician and popularizer of Marxist socialism.

Sochineniya (24 vols, 1923–27).—Anarchism and Socialism (tr. E. M. Aveling, 1908); Fundamental Problems of Marxism (tr. E. and C. Paul, 1929); Essays in the History of Materialism (tr. R. Fox, 1934); Art and Society (tr. with intro. G. Hicks, 1937); History of Russian Social Thought (tr. B. M. Bekkar, E. Abramovici and G. Rockwell, 1938); In Defence of Materialism (tr. A. Rothstein, 1947; reissued as The Role of the Individual in History, 1950); Unaddressed Letters—Art and Social Life (tr. A. Fineberg, 1957); Selected Philosophical Works (1961).

Literaturnoye nasledie Plekhanova (6 vols, 1934–38); J. Stalin, Voprosy leninizma (11th ed. 1939).

J.L.

Plemp, CORNELIS GJSBERTSZ (*1574; †1638), Dutch poet, attorney at Amsterdam. An able musician, he wrote poetry in Dutch (Der Herdoo-peren Anslach op Amsterdam) and Latin (De Patria or Amsterdamnum Monogrammon). Although a convinced Roman Catholic he was friendly with Hooft* and Coster*; he was a friend of Vondel* and belonged to the MUIDERKRING. He translated Hooft's Emblemata Amatoria into Latin.

P. Scheltema, 'Over P.' in Aemstel's Oudheid, VI (1872); J. F. M. Sterck, Oorkonden over Vondel en zijn kring (1918). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Pleshcheyev, ALEXEY NIKOLAYEVICH (*1825; †1893), Russian civic poet. As a member of the Petrashevsky revolutionary circle he was in 1849 sentenced to death with Dostoyevsky* and others, but was sent to Siberia instead. His poetry is rather eclectic and his humane feelings are inclined to be at times sentimental. Some of his translations, especially those from Heine*, are good.

Stikhotvoreniya (4th ed. 1905; re-ed. 1937); Polnoye sobranie stikhotvoreniy (1964).

P. A. Zabolotsky, Poet gumannosti (1904).

J.L.

Pletho(n): see George Gemistus Plethon.

Pletněv, PETER ALEXANDROVICH (*1792; †1865), minor Russian poet, critic, and friend of Pushkin* whose quarterly, Sovremennik, he edited after Pushkin's death in 1837 until 1846, when it was taken over by the poet Nekrasov*. He helped Gogol* towards literary fame and printed in Sovremennik the poems with which Ivan Turgenyev* made his literary début.

Sochineniya i perepiska (3 vols, 1885).

I. N. Rozanov, Pushkinskaya pleiada (1923).

J.L.

Plevier, THEODOR (*Berlin 12 II 1892; †Avegno in Ticino 12 III 1955), German novelist. Worker, sailor, miner, vagabond, he began writing after 1918, but became prominent with his novel Stalingrad (1945; The Death of an Army, tr. H. Langmead Robinson, 1948).

Des Kaisers Kulis (1930; The Kaiser's Coolies, tr. W. F. Clarke, 1932); Der Kaiser ging, die Generale blieben (1932; The Kaiser Goes, the Generals Remain, tr. A. W. Wheen, 1933); Moskau (1952; tr. S. Hood, 1953); Berlin (1954; tr. L. H. and V. Milroy, 1957).

H. Wilde, T. P.: Nullpunkt der Freiheit (1965).

R.W.L. (F.M.K.)

Pliny the Elder (GAIUS PLINIUS SECUNDUS) (*A.D. 23 or 24; †79 in the eruption of Vesuvius), Roman encyclopaedist. Pliny served in Germany 47–57, retired into private life under Nero, acquitted himself well in various public offices under Vespasian, and at the time of his death was praefectus classis at Misenum. A man of prodigious industry but of little critical power, Pliny wrote extensively on military, historical and literary subjects, but only the Natural History in 37 books is extant. Beginning with the universe, Pliny deals with geography, physiology, zoology, botany, use of plants and animals in medicine, minerals and their use in the arts. The work is defective in arrangement and accuracy and uneven in style, sometimes heavily declamatory, sometimes as jejune as a student's notebook. Its popularity in the Middle Ages and later is attested by the number of MSS and early editions. J.A.W.

Ed. L. von Jan (rev. C. Mayhoff, 5 vols, 1892–1909; repr. 1967).—Tr. H. Rackham et al. (10 vols, 1938– ); Chapters on the History of Art (ed. with tr. K. Jex-Blake and comm. E. Sellers, 1896; rev., with pref. and sel. biblio. 1896–1966, R. V. Schoder, 1968); Natural History: A Selection From Philemon Holland's Translation (ed. J. Newsome, 1964).

H. N. Wethered, The Mind of the Ancient World: A Consideration of P.'s Natural History (1937).

J.D.

Pliny the Younger (GAIUS PLINIUS CAECILIUS SECUNDUS) (*A.D. 61 or 62; †before 114), nephew and adopted son of the elder Pliny*, Roman orator and letter-writer, studied rhetoric under Quintilian*, became consul in 100 and imperial legate in Bithynia, probably 111–112. Pliny's fame rests chiefly upon his ten books of letters which, although repolished for publication and more artificial than those of Cicero*, give a picture of a just, generous and humane man. Favourable examples of his style are the descriptions of his uncle's studious habits and of the eruption of Vesuvius in 79. Of great historical interest is the exchange of letters with Trajan on the treatment of Christians. Pliny's panegyric on Trajan, much admired in antiquity, is interminably fulsome.

Panegyricus and Epistulae (eds: R. C. Kükula, 2nd ed. 1912, repr. 1929; M. Schuster, 2nd ed. 1952); Epistulae (ed. R. A. B. Mynors, 1963; eds with comm.: Bks 1–2, J. Cowan, 1889; Bk 3, J. E. B. Mayor, 3rd ed., 1889; Bk 6, J. D. Duff, 1906; Bk 10, E. G. Hardy, 1889; sel. letters, E. T. Merrill, 1903, corr. repr. 1919; A. N. Sherwin-White, The Letters of P.: A Historical and Social Commentary, 1966); Panegyricus (ed. with comm. M. Dury, 1938).—Fr. tr. A.-M. Guillemin (3 vols, 1927–28); Eng. tr. B. Radice (2 vols, 1969).

A.-M. Guillemin, Pline et la vie littéraire de son temps (1929).

J.D.

Plisnier, CHARLES (*Ghlin-les-Mons 13 XII 1896; †1921 Alida Depriez; †Ixelles 17 VII 1952), Belgian lawyer, poet and novelist. His early works dealt with his enthusiasm for Communism (he helped to found the Belgian Communist party) and his subsequent disillusionment with that ideology. Later he described with penetrating insight the mainsprings of bourgeois society. He was awarded the French Prix Goncourt (1937) for his Faux passeports.

VERSE: Les voix entendues (1913); Prière aux mains coupées (1931).—NOVELS: Mariages (1936; Nothing to Chance, tr. P. Morris, 1938); Faux passeports (1937; Memoirs of a Secret Revolutionary, tr. G. Dunlop, 1938); Meurtres (1939–41); Mères (1946–49).

B.M.W. (J.C.D.)

Plog, WILHELM (*Güstrow 28 IX 1884; †Bergedorf, nr Hamburg 16 XII 1946), Low German playwright, short-story writer and novelist, was especially successful with two historical novels.

NOVELS: Mars Micheel (1927); Likedeeleer (1931).—PLAYS: Jan Riff (1932); De Lots vun Fallshöft (1934).

P. Behlau, 'W. P.' in Mitteilungen Quickborn, XLII (1951).

G.C.

Plomer, WILLIAM CHARLES FRANKLYN (*Pietersburg, Transvaal 10 XII 1903), South African poet, novelist, short-story writer, biographer and editor. Plomer was educated at Rugby and returned to South Africa where, for a time, he was a farmer and trader. In 1926 he joined Roy Campbell* in editing Voorslag, a satirical magazine. Subsequently he travelled in Japan and Greece. He then returned to England, where he worked as a publisher's reader.

Plomer's work shows considerable versatility and he has achieved distinction in many genres: his verse is often memorable for its striking imagery; his stories reflect his interest in the technique of de Maupassant*; his novels and stories are among the most sensitive writings on South African themes.

VERSE: Selected Poems (1940); Collected Poems (1960); Taste and Remember (1966); Celebrations (1972).—NOVELS: Turbott Wolfe (1925); Sado (1931); The Case is Altered (1932); The Invaders (1934); Museum Pieces (1952).—SHORT STORIES: I Speak of Africa (1927); Paper Houses (1929); The Child of Queen Victoria (1933); Four Countries (1949).—The Diary of the Rev. Francis Kilvert (ed., 1938).—BIOGRAPHY: Cecil Rhodes (1933); Ali the Lion (1936).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Double Lives (1943); At Home, Memoirs (1958).—LIBRETTI: Gloriana (1953); Curlow River (1965); The Burning Fiery Furnace (1966); The Prodigal Son (1968).—VARIOUS: Dorking Thigh and Other Satires (1945); Curious Relations (under pseud. William D'Arfey; 1945).

W. Doyle, Jr, W. P. (1969). E.R.S. (U.La.)

Plotinus (*205; †270), Greek Neo-Platonist philosopher. He was a Greek-speaking Egyptian and after some travels established his school in Rome about 244. His works were edited under the title Enneads by his disciple Porphyry* and all have survived. The Enneads aimed to give a complete account of reality and a guide to the spiritual life: the style is obscure and the presentation unsystematic. Plotinus' philosophy was religious and mystical; it was derived from Platonism, but owed much to other schools, particularly the Peripatetics. Through St Augustine*, who read translations of his works, Plotinus had considerable influence on Christian philosophy.

E. Bréhier, Les Ennéades de Plotin (with Fr. tr.; 6 vols, 1924–36); P. Henry and H.-R. Schwyzer, Plotini opera (1951); S. MacKenna and B. S. Page, The Enneads of P. (Eng. tr.; 5 vols, 1926–30); A. H. Armstrong, P. (with tr.; 1966).

E. Bréhier, La philosophie de Plotin (1928); R. Inge, The Philosophy of P. (3rd ed. 1929); A. H. Armstrong, Architecture of the Intelligible Universe in the Philosophy of P. (1940); P. Henry, Études Plotiniennes (2 vols, n.d.); P. V. Pistorius, P. and Neoplatonism (1952); J. M. Rist, P.: The Road to Reality (1968). D.J.F.

Ploug, CARL PARMO (*Kolding 29 X 1813; ∞1854 Frederikke Elisabeth Michelsen; †Copenhagen 27 X 1894), Danish poet and playwright. At Copenhagen he wrote several student plays, the so-called Atellaner, under the pseudonym POUL RYTTER. He was a journalist most of his life, from 1841 editor of the liberal Fædrelandet, and an active supporter of the idea of a Scandinavian union. Much of his poetry is superficial, most valuable being his love poetry, written to his wife.

VERSE: Viser og Vers (3 vols, 1847–61); Samlede Digte (1862); Nyere Sange og Digte (1869); Nye Digte (1883); Efterladte Digte (1895).—Samlede Digte (2 vols, 1901).—PLAYS: Atellaner (2 vols, 1904; new ed. 1913).

H. Ploug, C. P. (1905).

E.B.

Plunkett, JOSEPH MARY (*Dublin 1887; ∞1916 Grace Gifford; †ibid. 3 V 1916), Irish poet. He was devoted to the study of the great mystics; edited The Irish Review (1913); fought in the 1916 rising and was executed. He wrote lyrics of mystical fervour.

R.McH.

The Circle and the Sword (1911); Poems (1916).—The 1916 Poets (ed. D. Ryan, 1963). E.T.W.

Plutarch (*Chaeronea c. 48; †122), Greek philosopher, biographer and antiquarian. He wrote over 200 short works of which 83 survive. The biographies are arranged in 23 pairs of 'parallel lives' which compare an eminent Greek soldier or statesman with a Roman counterpart (e.g. Alcibiades and Coriolanus); they abound with anecdotes and moral comment but also provide valuable historical evidence. His philosophical writing (Moralia) consists of popular ethical treatises (On Envy and Hatred, On Cheerfulness, etc.), technical attacks on Stoicism and Epicureanism (Plutarch was an adherent of the Academic school), books on oracles and religion, and short treatments of scientific problems (e.g. On the Face of the Moon). Plutarch also wrote on rhetoric, literary criticism and Greek and Roman antiquities. He had a vast circle of acquaintances and his writings provide a fascinating picture of the eclectic cultural tastes of Graeco-Roman society at the end of the 1st century A.D. Plutarch travelled widely, held public and religious offices, and ran a school in Chaeronea which he regarded as continuing the tradition of Plato's* Academy. He was neither a profound nor an original thinker, but few ancient writers have been more influential. Plutarch was endlessly printed and translated from the mid-16th century onwards, and Shakespeare* drew heavily on Sir Thomas North's* translation (1579) for several tragedies. Others greatly influenced by him were Rabelais*, Montaigne*, Rousseau* and Alfieri*.

Lives (eds: C. Lindskog and K. Ziegler, 1914–69; B. Perrin et al., 1914–26, with tr.; R. Flacelière et al., 1957–, with Fr. tr.; tr. Dryden, 1683, rev.

A. H. Clough, 1864); Moralia (eds: G. N. Bernadakis, 1888; C. Hubert et al., 1952-; F. C. Babbitt et al., 1927-, with tr.; tr. Philemon Holland, 1603).

R. H. Barrow, P. and His Times (1967).

A.A.L.

PO CHÜ-I (*Hsin-chêng 28 II 772; †Lo-yang 846), Chinese poet. Po passed the metropolitan examinations of 800, became a scholar of the Han-lin academy (807) and the next year was appointed to the imperial chancellery. After two years of considerable political activity, he spent 811-814 in mourning for his mother at Hsia-kuei. He returned to a very minor office at court but was soon after banished to Chiang-chou (814). Recalled in 820, he enjoyed some position and influence. Between 822 and 826 he was governor of first Hangchow, then Soochow. His last active appointment was as chief magistrate of Honan (831-833) at Lo-yang where he remained for the rest of his life.

While the majority of his poems are occasional (many are addressed to his great friend Yüan* Chên and others), some have a specific purpose. He wrote 50 'new ballads' and ten 'Songs of Ch'in' (808-810) to call attention to political and social evils, stating such criticism to be the aim of poetry. His famous Ch'ang-hên ko ('Song of Everlasting Remorse'; 806) and P'i-p'a hsing ('Lute Song'; 816), both long narrative poems, are also in the ballad form. He also wrote words to folk-tunes and thus stands at the beginning of the development of the tz'ü-poem. The simplicity of his language and expression gained him immense contemporary popularity; his poetry was known, before his death, in Japan, where it has exerted great influence.

Po-shih Ch'ang-ch'ing chi (coll. works); many sel. trs in A. Waley, 170 Chinese Poems (1918), More Translations From the Chinese (1919) and Chinese Poems (1946); Ch'ang-hên ko and P'i-p'a hsing, tr. in W. Bynner and Kiang Kang-hu, The Jade Mountain (1929).

A. Waley, The Life and Times of Po Chü-i (1949); E. Feifel, Po Chü-i as a Censor (The Hague, 1961).

A.R.D.

PO P'U or PO JÊN-FU (□Ao-chou 1226), Chinese dramatist and poet. Po, as a child, went into banishment with his father who had held office under the Chin dynasty (1232). Some years later the family returned to the north and settled at Hu-yang (later moving to Chin-ling). Though several times offered posts by the Yüan government, he declined to accept for many years.

Po was of a melancholic nature, deeply affected by national and private misfortunes, and this strongly coloured his poetry. Only two of his 16 plays have survived in their entirety, but Wu-t'ung yü, which treats the famous romance of the T'ang Emperor Hsüan-tsung and Yang Kuei-fei, is among the most notable of the Yüan plays for its fine poetry.

PLAYS (in Yüan-ch'u hsüan, 1616): Wu-t'ung yü; Ch'iang-t'ou ma-shang.—T'ien-lai chi (coll. tz'ü-poetry; sel. tr. in R. F. S. Yang and C. R. Metzger, Fifty Songs From the Yüan, 1967).

A.R.D.

Podjavorinská-Riznerová, L'UDMILA (*Horné Bzince 24 IV 1872; †Nové Mesto nad Váhom 3 III 1951), Slovak poet and novelist.

VERSE: Z vesny života (1898); Balady (1930).—NOVELS: V otroctve (1905); Blud (1906).

R.A.

Podvurzachov, DIMITUR (pseud. HAMLET PRINCE DATSKI) (*Stara Zagora 6 X 1881; †Sofia 13 XI 1937), Bulgarian poet and fabulist. A brilliant translator and master of ironical humour, he wrote in the tradition of Mihaylovski*. His deep patriotism, Oriental pessimism and polished wit pervade his stories, feuilletons and verse.

Kak dyavolut chete Evangelieto (1933); Basni (1938); Stihove (1939).

V.P.

POE, EDGAR ALLAN (*Boston 19 I 1809; ∞1836 Virginia Clemm; †Baltimore 7 X 1849), American poet, fiction writer and literary critic. One of the most controversial figures in American literature, in his lifetime he achieved slight fame as a poet and short-story writer, and notoriety as a critic, but genuine appreciation of his achievement came only years after his death. After his mother's death in 1811 he was taken into the home of John Allan in Richmond, Va., but after a family quarrel he left his home in 1827 to seek literary fame in the North. His early books of poetry went unrecognized, so he turned to fiction and reviewing. In 1835 he became associated with the Southern Literary Messenger in Richmond and his fiction and reviews brought this journal to national prominence. He later edited and contributed successfully to literary journals in the North, but his dream to own his own magazine was never realised. Poe wrote against a background of personal poverty, insecurity and ill-health, but surprisingly little of his output is hack-work. As a critic he was sometimes harsh, always uncompromising as he sought to establish genuine standards in American letters. His poetry was dedicated to the creation of 'Beauty' and his poetic example has had an important influence both in Europe and America. His best fiction is characterized by an acute psychological realism which provides insight into strange and abnormal modes of being.

Tamerlane and Other Poems (1827); Al Aaraaf, Tamerlane and Minor Poems (1829); Poems (1831); Tales of the Grotesque and Arabesque (1840); The Raven and Other Poems (1845); Tales (1845); Eureka: A Prose Poem (1848).—Complete Works (ed. J. A. Harrison, 17 vols, 1902); Collected Works, I: Poems (ed. T. O. Mabbott, 1970); The Letters of E. A. P. (ed. J. W. Ostrom, 2 vols, 1948).

G. E. Woodberry, The Life of E. A. P.: Personal and Literary, with His Chief Correspondence With Men of Letters (2 vols, 1909); K. Campbell, The Mind of P. and Other Studies (1933); A. H. Quinn, E. A. P.: A Critical Biography (1941); E. H. Davidson, P.: A Critical Study (1957); P. F. Quinn, The French Face of E. P. (1957); S. P. Moss, P.'s Literary Battles (1963); G. Rans, E. A. P. (1965); E. W. Carlson, The Recognition of E. A. P. (1966); M. Allen, P. and the British Magazine Tradition (1968); R. D. Jacobs, P. Journalist and Critic (1969); F. Stovall, E. P. the Poet (1969). I.W.

Poeck, WILHELM (*Moisburg, North Hanover 29 XII 1866; †Blumenau, Brazil 7 VII 1933), German short-story writer, began with good regional Low German stories but later wrote light fiction in High German.

De Herr Innehmer Barkenbusch und andere Geschichten von der Waterkant (1906); In de Ellernbucht (1907).

W. Kropp, 'W. P.' in Niedersachsen, XVI (1911). G.C.

Poerio, ALESSANDRO (*Naples 27 VIII 1802; †Venice 3 XI 1848), Italian patriot and poet. Exiled in 1821 he studied in Germany and became the friend of Goethe*. After stays in Florence, France and a return to Naples he died of wounds fighting at Venice. His Liriche (1843), influenced by Leopardi* and Tommaseo*, are full of noble enthusiasm, though sometimes defective in style; his Epistolario and Pensieri are interesting. N.K.W.

Poesie (ed. N. Coppola, 1970).—B. Croce, Una famiglia di patrioti (1925); G. Secretant, A. P. (1926). N.K.W. (J.G.-R.)

Poggio: see Bracciollini-Poggio, GIAN FRANCESCO.

Pogodin, MIKHAIL PETROVICH (*1800; †1875), Russian historian, journalist and author. He edited Moskovskiy Vestnik (1827–30) and Moskvityanin (1841–56). He sympathized with the official nationalism, but he had much in common with the Slavophiles. As an author of narratives, Pogodin can be regarded as an early, though somewhat clumsy, representative of Russian realism.

V. G. Belinsky, O russkoy povesti i povestnyakh Gogolya (1836); N. Barsukov, Zhizn' i trudy M. P. Pogodina (22 vols, 1888–1906); P. Milyukov, Glavnye techeniya russkoy istoricheskoy mysli (1897); A. A. Potekhin, Vospominaniya o M. P. Pogodine (1901). J.L.

Pogodin, NIKOLAY, pseud. of NIKOLAY FĖDOROVICH STUKALOV (*Don region 1900; †Moscow 1962), Soviet playwright whose documentary Five-Year-Plan plays were a great success, as were his three plays about Lenin*: Chelovek s ruzhyem (1937), Kreml'evskie kuranty (1941; Kremlin Chimes, tr. A. Shoett, 1962) and Tretiya pateticheskaya (1959). He is moreover endowed with humour which enlivens his Aristokraty (1935; Aristocrats, tr. A. Wixley and R. S. Carr, 1937).

Poems o topore (1930); Moy Drug (1932).—Tempo (tr. I. Talmadge, 1935).—Sobranie dramaticheskikh proizvedeniy (5 vols, 1960–61).—F. M. Bykova, Dramaticheskaya trilogiya o Lenine (1960).

N. V. Zaitsev, N. F. P. (1958); V. G. Boborykin, Trilogiya N. Pogodina o Lenine (1962). J.L.

Pogorel'sky, ANTON: see Perovsky, ALEXEY.

Poirters, ADRIAEN (*Oisterwijk 2 XI 1605; †4 VII 1674), Flemish Jesuit poet, was Professor of classical philology at Maastricht and Malines. His main work is the collection of emblems, Het masker van de Wereldt afgetrocken (1644; ed. J. Salsmans and E. Rombauts, 1935), a shorter version of which was published as IJdelheyt des Werelts (1645). Although it advocates forsaking the world it meanwhile describes it fascinatingly and wittily. Poirters is sometimes called the Roomse Cats*.

Geschiedenis der Jezuelen (a history of the Jesuits in Flanders; 1646); Het duycken in de Steenrotse (1657); Het pelgrimken van Kevelaer (1657); Ghebede Boecxken (1666); Het leven van de H. Franciscus de Borgia (1671); Den Spiegel van Philagie (1673; ed. J. Salsmans, 1937).

H. J. Allard, Pater A. P. (1877); Max Rooses, 'A. P.' in Nederl. Museum, I (1874) and Nieuw Schetsenboek (1882); E. Rombauts, 'De wording van P.'s Masker' in Studiën, CXII (1929), 'A. P., een volksschrijver uit de 17e eeuw', ibid., CXIII (1930) and Leven en werken van P. (1930); J. Salsmans, 'A. P. als hekeldichter' in Versl. en Med. Koninkl. Vlaamse Acad. (1931); A. van Duinkerken, Dichters der Contra-Reformatie (1932); P. van Valkenhoff, 'A. P. en zijn Den Spiegel van Philagie' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, XXXII (1938); W. J. C. Buitendijk, Het Calvinisme in de spiegel v. d. Zuidnederl. lit. der Contra-Reformatie (1942); J. A. ten Kate, 'Pater P. herdracht' in Brabant, IV (1955). A.M.B.W. (R.P.M.)

Pol, WINCENTY (*Lublin 20 IV 1807; †Cracow 2 XII 1872), Polish author. Of German stock, he was a Polish patriot for which he was to suffer twice. His Pieśni Janusza (Paris, 1833) thrilled the public after the November revolution as later Pieśń o ziemi naszej (1843) did. Of his versified tales on the past, Mohort (1855) is the best.

VERSE: Pieśń o ziemi naszej (ed. with intro. and comm. R. Zawiliński, 1922; Lied von unserem Lande, tr. L. Kurtzmann, 1896); Mohort (ed. with intro. and comm. A. Łucki, 1925); Pieśń o domu naszym (1866); Pamiętniki (1960).—Dzieła wierszem i prozą (10 vols, 1875–77).

W. Mann, W. P. Studium biograficznokrytyczne

(2 vols, 1904–06); H. Barycz, W. P. jako profesor geografii na Uniwersytecie Jagiellońskim (1949). S.S. (P.H.)

Polák, (MATĚJ) MILOTA ZDIRAD (*Zásmuky 14 II 1788; †Wiener Neustadt 31 III 1856), Czech poet. A professional soldier who died as an Austrian major-general, Polák wrote one of the first notable works of modern Czech poetry, 'The Grandeur of Nature' (Vznešenost přirozenosti, 1813), which in content owes much to James Thomson* and Ewald von Kleist*.

Spisy (ed. J. Bradáč, 1907).—J. Mukařovský, 'Považnost přirody' in Kapitoly z české poetiky, II (1948). R.A.

Polenton, SICO (*Levico in Valsugana c. 1376; †Padua 1447), Italian writer. His Catinia consists of discussions in an inn, while his Scriptores illustres is the earliest literary history of its kind.

La Catinia, le orazioni e le epistole di Sico Polenton (ed. A. Segarizzi, 1899); Scriptorum illustrium latinae linguae libri XVIII (ed. B. L. Ullman, 1928).

A. Segarizzi, Supplemento critico e bibliografico (1901); D. M. Robathan, 'A 15th century history of Latin literature' in Speculum (1932). P.McN.

Polevoy, BORIS NIKOLAYEVICH, pseud. of B. N. KAMPOV, Soviet author who rose to fame after the Second World War.

Povest' o nastoyashchem cheloveke (1947); My sovetskie lyudi (coll. documentary stories; 1948); Po belu svetu (1958); Blizko i daleko (1960); Glubokiy tyl (1962).

B. E. Galanov, B. P. (1957). J.L.

Polevoy, NIKOLAY ALEXEYEVICH (*Irkutsk 22 VI 1796; †22 II 1846), Russian critic, historian and playwright. As editor of Moskovskiy Telegraf from 1825 until 1834, when it was suppressed, he was—in contrast to the critic Nadezhdin*—a champion of Romanticism. His own Romantic plays and novels are negligible. So is his Istoriya naroda russkogo ('History of the Russian People') but as a critic he exercised considerable influence.

I. Z. Krylov, Ocherk zhizni N. A. Polevogo (1849). J.L.

Polezhayev, ALEXANDER IVANOVICH (*Penza province 1805; †Caucasus 1838), Russian poet. For his rather cynical narrative poem Sashka (1826) he was sent as a private to the Caucasus where he succumbed to melancholy and drunkenness. His poetry is uneven, rhetorical at times, yet intense whenever he gives vent to defiance of his own fate.

Sobranie sochineniy (1888); Stikhotvoreniya (1933; re-ed. 1949); Sochineniya (1955).

I. D. Voronin, A. P. (1954). J.L.

Poliziano, ANGELO, originally ANGIOLO AMBROGINI (*Montepulciano 14 VII 1454; †Florence 29 IX 1494), Italian poet and humanist, called POLITIAN from his birthplace, Mons Politianus. After his father's murder, this precocious boy was sent to Florence in 1464, and there studied Latin under Landino*, Greek under Argyropoulos and Callistus, and philosophy under Ficino*. In 1473 the extraordinary promise shown by his Virgil-flavoured version of part of Homer's Iliad earned him entry into the household of Lorenzo il Magnifico (Medici*), who appointed him tutor to his son Piero in 1475. But clashes of temperament with Piero's mother (Clarice Orsini) estranged him from the Medici in 1479, and he went to live with Cardinal Gonzaga at Mantua, where in 1480 he produced Orfeo, a pastoral idyll profaning the SACRA RAPPRESENTAZIONE and heralding the drama—the first play in Italian. Later that year he was reconciled with Lorenzo, and returned to fill the Chair of classical eloquence in the Florentine Studio. Here he lectured on literature and philosophy with such consummate brilliance that his ever-increasing fame attracted scholars from all over Europe.

Poliziano is the prince of humanists, and seems equally at home in Greek, Latin and Italian, philosophy, philology and poetry. His writings include exquisite elegies, odes, Sylvae, epigrams both Greek and Latin, eloquent Praelectiones, and Epistolae in 12 books. Yet the Poliziano who lives is the vernacular poet of pure if fleeting inspiration. His love lyrics are unsurpassed, and nowhere is the Renaissance theme of carpe diem more poignantly expressed. But his masterpiece is the unfinished Stanze per la Giostra, written to celebrate a joust held in 1475 and immortalize the love of its victor, Giuliano de' Medici, for Simonetta Vespucci, whose bewitching beauty held Medicean Florence in thrall. Its composition was punctuated by the untimely deaths of both heroine (1476) and hero (1478, in the Pazzi conspiracy), and the poem remains a fascinating fragment in which the Tuscan arena is sublimated into the Realm of Venus in a Platonic apotheosis which owes much to Ficino. The popular octave is here transfigured by the perfection of each stanza, and although Poliziano lacked the constructive art to unify his creation, he possessed in outstanding measure the gift of combining the majesty of classical literature with the spontaneity of popular Florentine poetry.

Opera omnia (cont. most of the Lat. works; 1553); Prose volgari inedite, poesie edite e inedite (1867) and Le Selve e la Strega: prolusioni nello Studio fiorentino (1925; ed. I. Del Lungo); Le Stanze, l'Orfeo e le Rime (eds: G. Carducci, 1863, 2nd ed. 1912; A. Momigliano, 1921; G. De Robertis, 1932; G. Trombatore, 1933; B. Maier, 1969); Stanze cominciate per la Giostra di Giuliano de' Medici (crit. ed. V. Pernicone, 1954); Rime (incl. Stanze and Orfeo; ed. N. Sapegno, 1949, 2nd ed. 1965); Poesie italiane e latine (ed. A. Polvara, 1948); A. Polizianos Tagebuch (1477-1479) (ed. A. Wesselski, 1929); Epigrammi greci (text and Ital. version; ed. A. Arduzzoni, 1951); Sylva in Scabiam (1954) and Della congiura de' Pazzi (1958; ed. A. Perosa); Alcuni testi del P. (ed. V. Branca, 1964; cont. most of the incomplete Seconda Centuria dei Miscellanea discovered by the editor).

F. O. Mencken, Historia vitae et in literas meritorum A. P. (1736); Il P. e il suo tempo: Atti del IV Convegno internazionale di studi sul rinascimento (1957); G. Ghinassi, Il volgare letterario nel '400 e le 'Stanze' del P. (1957); R. Ramat, La poesia toscana del P. (1962); A. M. Santoro, P. e l'umanesimo (1962); I. Maier, Les manuscrits d'Ange Politien (1965) and Ange Politien: la formation d'un poète humaniste (1469-1480) (full biblio.; 1966); E. Bigi, La cultura del P. e altri studi umanistici (1967). P.McN.

Pollio, GAIUS ASINIUS (*76 B.C.; †A.D. 5), Roman orator, poet, historian and critic, supported Caesar* and Antony in the civil war but later retired from politics to interest himself in literature and the arts. He established the first public library in Rome and was the friend of Virgil* and Horace*. His works included tragedies, a history of the civil war and speeches, the style of which was marked by archaism. A stern literary critic, he made the charge of 'Patavinitas' against Livy*.

J.F.L.

Pollux, JULIUS (fl. c. A.D. 180), Greek grammarian. A native of Naucratis in Egypt, he was appointed professor of rhetoric in Athens in 178. His Onomasticon is a dictionary of Attic words and phrases according to subject-matter. Pollux preserves much valuable information, particularly on the theatre and on the constitution of Athens.

E. Bethe, Pollucis Onomasticon (3 vols, 1900-37).

E. Rohde, De Iulii Pollucis in apparatu scaenico enarrando fontibus (1870); J. Stoewer, In quibus nitantur auctoribus Iulii Pollucis rerum iudicialium enarrationes (1888); W. Gordziejew, De Iulii Pollucis fontibus (1936). R.B.

Polo, GASPARD GIL (*Valencia; †Barcelona 1591), Spanish poet and novelist. He was a civil servant whose diligence earned Philip II's praises. His only work is La Diana enamorada (1564), a sequel to Montemayor's* Diana. His prose is elegant, his intercalated verses very good indeed. He was strongly influenced by Garcilaso*. He introduced new metrical combinations of 11 and five, and 12 and seven syllables.

Los cinco libros de la Diana enamorada (in Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., VII; tr. B. Yong, 1598); Poesías (ed. R. Ferreres, 1942).

H. A. Rennert, The Spanish Pastoral Romances

(1892); J. B. Avelle-Arce, La novela pastoril española (1959). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Polo, MARCO (*c. 1254; †1324/25), Venetian traveller to Central Asia, China and India. Returning to Venice in 1295 after more than 20 years in the Far East, Polo was taken prisoner by the Genoese in 1298. While in prison he dictated an account of his travels to Rusticiano* of Pisa, who wrote them down in French. The book, Les merveilles (or Le divisament) du monde, came to be known as Il Milione after a nickname of Polo's family. It had a Tuscan translation by 1309 and a Latin one by 1320, and was widely read in the 14th and 15th centuries.

Le livre de M. P. (ed. G. Pauthier, 1865); M. P., Il Milione (ed. L. F. Benedetto, 1928).—Sel. and biblios: Le Origini (ed. G. Vidossi, 1957); La prosa del Duecento (ed. C. Segre, 1960).—The Book of Ser M. P. (tr. H. Yule, 1903); The Travels of M. P. (tr. R. E. Latham, 1958).

G. Dainelli, M. P. (1941); L. Olschki, L'Asia di M. P. (1957). K.F.

Polo de Medina, SALVADOR JACINTO (*Murcia 1603; †Alcantarilla 1676), Spanish poet and moralist. He was priest, secretary to the Bishop of Lugo, and later Rector of a seminary. His works include burlesque fables, an imitation of Quevedo's* Sueños, a miscellany called Academias del jardín (1630) and a prose treatise on prudence. His verses are slight but pleasing, his prose mature and terse.

Ocios de la soledad (1633); Gobierno moral a Lelio (1657); Obras en prosa y en verso (1667); Obras escogidas (ed. J. M<sup>a</sup> de Cossio, 1931).

A. J. González, J. P. de M. (1895). E.M.W.

Polonsky, VYACHESLAV PAVLOVICH (*1886; †1932), Soviet critic and editor of the important periodical Pechat' i Revolyutsiya. In 1929 he took part in the controversy about the 'social command' in literature which he handled with intelligent moderation.

Literatura i obshchestvo (1929); Na literaturnye temy (1927); O sovremennoy literature (1928); Soznanie i tvorchestvo (1934). J.L.

Polonsky, YAKOV PETROVICH (*Ryazan' 6 XII 1819; †18 IX 1898), Russian poet. Following Lermontov*, with whom he had certain affinities, he became a prominent lyrical poet of his time. His civic poetry, however, which he wrote to please the progressive intelligentsia, was mediocre.

Polnoye sobranie stikhotvoreniy (5 vols, 1896); Stikhotvoreniya i poemy (1935); Stikhotvoreniya (1957). J.L.

Polotsky, SIMEON, pseud. of SIMEON EMELYANOVICH PETROVSKY-SITNIANOVICH (*1629; †1680),

Russian monk, poet, preacher and dramatist. A student of the theological college at Kiev, he later—from 1664 on—taught at Moscow where he was in close contact with the court of Alexey Mikhaylovich. His medium was the syllabic verse with an equal number of stressed syllables (11 or 13 to the line) with a caesura in the middle and with feminine rhymed couplets. Taken over from the Poles by the Ukrainians and then by the Russians, this verse found in Polotsky its most prolific exponent. He wrote panegyrics, a profusion of didactic virshi ('metres'), and at times even satires—on merchants and priests. He produced a rhymed Psalter (1680), emulating the Polish model by Jan Kochanowski*, and two school dramas on Biblical themes. His poetic work shows more goodwill than real talent.

S. Tatarskiy, S. P. (1886).

J.L.

Polybius (*Megalopolis c. 201; †c. 120 B.C.), Greek historian. Leading statesman of the Achaean League, held as a hostage by the Romans 167–151, he became an enthusiastic admirer of Rome's institutions and a close friend of her leading men. After his release he travelled widely as an official and unofficial Roman agent.

His History in 40 books (of which only five survive entire) recounts the history of the Mediterranean world as a whole from 221 to 144 B.C. Believing that state formations, like animals, have a natural process of growth, maturity and decline, Polybius saw in the growth of Roman power the unifying theme of his book. He is thorough and critical in collecting and evaluating information, and honest in its presentation. A rationalist of aristocratic sympathies, he regards traditional religion as a device for keeping the masses in order: only in a half-personified Chance does he recognize a transcendent power. He is contemptuous of the unscientific sensationalism practised by many historians of his time, and regards his own work as above all of practical value to the statesman. Well-informed, penetrating and sincere, Polybius is a source of first importance. His main weakness is his over-sanguine attitude towards Rome.

Eds: T. Büttner-Wobst (5 vols, 1882–90); F. Hultsch (4 vols, 2nd ed., 1888–92); W. R. Paton (6 vols, 1922–27; with tr.).—F. W. Walbank, A Historical Commentary on P. (2 vols, 1957–67).

J. B. Bury, The Ancient Greek Historians (1909); P. Scheller, De Hellenistica historiae conscribendae arte (1911); R. Laqueur, P. (1913); C. Wunderer, P. (1927); E. G. Sihler, 'P. of Megalopolis' in Amer. Jour. Philol., XLVIII (1927); W. Siegfried, Studien zur geschichtlichen Anschauung des P. (1928); P. Pédech, La méthode historique de Polybe (1964); J. M. Moore, The Manuscript Tradition of P. (1965).

R.B.

Pomerius, HENRICUS, or HENDRIK UTENBOGHAERD (*Louvain c. 1382; †Zevenborren 10 VI 1469),

Dutch writer, became a Canon Regular at Groenendaal in 1412 and Prior at Zevenborren in 1421. He wrote a great number of spiritual tracts (the most important being De spirituale Pomerium) and also a history of the monastery of Groenendaal, De origine Viridis vallis, of importance for the life of Ruusbroec*.

J.J.M.

Biblio. in Van der Hecken's Gazophylacium Sognianum; some tracts ed. in Analecta Bollandiana, IV (1885).

St. Axters, Geschiedenis van de Vroomheid in de Nederlanden, II–III (1953–56).

J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Pomfret, JOHN (*Luton 1667; †ibid. 13 IX 1692 Elizabeth Wingate; †XI 1702), English poet, who was educated at Bedford Grammar School and Queen's College, Cambridge, and became rector of Maulden. In addition to miscellany poems, which he collected in 1699, he wrote The Choice (1700) which achieved a huge popularity, expressing the contemporary wish for a modest country life of comfortable retirement.

T. Cibber, Lives of the Poets, III (1735); S. Johnson, Lives of the Poets (1779–81); E. E. Kellett, Reconsiderations (1928); E. M. W. Tillyard, Some Mythical Elements in English Literature (1961).

R.M.W.

Pompéia, RAUL D'ÁVILA (*Jacuacanga, Rio de Janeiro 12 IV 1863; †Rio de Janeiro 25 XII 1895), Brazilian novelist and poet. A victim of doubt and depression, he committed suicide. His writing was influenced by the Goncourts* and by Nietzsche*. His O Ateneu (1888), on the life of a boy at boarding-school, combines an outstanding mastery of observed detail with a remarkable sensitivity to the inner life of his characters, expressed in a prose which is both precise and evocative. It is one of the greatest achievements of Brazilian fiction.

Uma tragédia no Amazonas (1880); Canções sem metro (1881).

Tristão de Ararape Júnior, 'R. P., O Ateneu e o romance psicológico' in Novidades (1888–89) and 21 arts, repr. in Obra crítica, II (1960); Elói Pontes, A vida inquieta de R. P. (1935); Mário de Andrade, Aspectos da literatura brasileira (1943); Maria Luíza Ramos, Psicologia e estética de R. P. (1958); Lêdo Ivo, O universo poético de R. P. (1963).

J.T.B.

Pomponazzi, PIETRO (*Mantua 16 IX 1462; †Bologna 18 V 1525), Italian philosopher; Professor at Padua, Ferrara and Bologna. His De immortalitate animae (1516) challenged both Thomists and Averroists and initiated a trend of thought culminating in Kant*. His Apologia and Defensorium further defined his 'Alexandrist' position, from which he wrote De causis and De fato.

Opera philosophica (1567); De immortalitate animae (eds: G. Gentile, 1925; G. Morra, 1954; tr. W. H. Hay, 1950); De fato, de libero arbitrio et de praedestinatione (ed. R. Lemay, 1957).

F. Fiorentino, P. P., studi storici sulla scuola bolognese-padovana del secolo XVI (1868); A. H. Douglas, The Philosophy and Psychology of P. P. (1910); B. Nardi, Saggi sull'aristotelismo padovano (1958) and Arte, pensiero e cultura a Mantova (1966); G. Di Napoli, L'immortalità dell'anima nel rinascimento (1963); P. O. Kristeller, Eight Philosophers of the Italian Renaissance (1964); M. Pine, 'P. and the problem of "double truth"' in Jour. Hist. of Ideas, XXIX (1968). P.McN.

Pomponio Leto (POMPONIUS LAETUS): see Leto, POMPONIO.

Pomyalovsky, NIKOLAY GERASIMOVICH (*St Petersburg 1835; †ibid. 5 X 1863), Russian author of plebeian origin. His best book, the documentary Ocherki bursy (1862-63), made a strong impression by the realism with which he described the educational methods in an old-fashioned seminary.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (2 vols, 1868); Sobranie sochineniy (1916); Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (1935); Sochineniya (1951).

B. Val'be, P. (1936).

J.L.

Ponge, FRANCIS JEAN GASTON ALFRED (*Montpellier 27 III 1899), French poet. After the publication of Parti pris des choses (1942), Jean-Paul Sartre* recognized Ponge as the 'poet of existentialism'; in fact his poetry, massive, thickly-textured, rough-hewn, is based on a subtle play of associations and analogies. Apparently concerned only with surface events, his painstaking evocations are in fact profoundly concerned with man himself.

Douze petits écrits (1926); Dix cours sur la méthode (1947); Liasse (1948); Le grand recueil, I Lyres, II Méthodes, III Pièces (1961); Le savon (1967); Eng. tr. L. Dunlop, 1969; Entretiens avec P. Sollers (1970); La fabrique du pré (1971).—Two Prose Poems (tr. P. Hoy, 1969); Rain (tr. idem, 1969).

P. Sollers, F. P. (1963); J. P. Richard, Onze études sur la poésie moderne (1964); J. Thibaut, P. (1967); B. Miller, 'F. P. and the creative method' in Horizon, XVI.92 (1947); P. Schneider, 'Introduction to the works of F. P.' in Transition Fifty, VI (1950). M.G.

Poničan, JÁN: see Rob-Poničan, JÁN.

Ponsard, FRANÇOIS (*Vienne, Isère I VI 1814; †Paris 7 VII 1867), French dramatist, leader of the bon sens school of dramatists. With the production of his tragedy Lucrece (1843) at the Théâtre Français he led the reaction against the Romantic drama after the failure of Hugo's* Les Burgraves.

In 1845 he was awarded a prize for counter-Romantic tragedy by the French Academy, of which he became a member in 1855.

Agnès de Méranie (1846); Charlotte Corday (1850); L'honneur et l'argent (1853); Le lion amoureux (1866).—Œuvres complètes (3 vols, 1865-76).

C. Latreille, La fin du théâtre romantique et F. P. (1899). T.W.

Pons de Capduell (fl. c. 1196-1220), Provençal troubadour, Lord of St Julien Chapeuil (Puy-de-Dôme). He achieved fame both as a knight and as a poet. He left about 20 love songs to Azalais, daughter of Bernart VII of Andouse and wife of Count Ozil de Mercuer; also three Crusader songs. He died on the Third Crusade. His songs are an elegant variation on the conventional theme of courtly veneration; they are not distinguished by great originality, but display considerable artistry in their metrical form and in the occasional richness of the rhymes.

M. von Napolski, Leben und Werke des Troubadours P. de C. (1880); S. Stronski in Annales du Midi, XVIII (1906); C. Fabre, Trois troubadours vellaves (1907). R.R.B. (K.R.)

Ponson du Terrail, PIERRE-ALEXIS (*Montmaur 8 VII 1829; †Bordeaux 20 I 1871), French novelist. A prolific writer of adventure stories, he made his first success with Les coulisses du monde (1853), but his greatest work is Les exploits de Rocambole (1859) and its numerous sequels, Les drames de Paris (1865), La résurrection de Rocambole (1866), Le dernier mot de Rocambole (1866) and La vérité sur Rocambole (1867). 'Rocambolesque' is the word coined to describe the characteristic sensationalism—murder, sudden death, disappearance and even revival—of these novels.

R. Messac, Le 'detective novel' et l'influence de la pensée scientifique (1929). T.W.

Pontano, GIOVANNI (GIOVIANO) (*Cerreto 7 V 1426; †Naples autumn 1503), Italian poet and humanist. Soon after completing his studies at Perugia he entered the service of the Aragonese Kings of Naples (1447), became tutor to the Duke of Calabria, to whom the pre-Machiavellian treatise De Principe is dedicated, and eventually (1486) chancellor of the Kingdom till he negotiated the surrender of the realm to the King of France (1495). He was pardoned by his former sovereign, but not recalled to power, and ended obscurely. The literary tradition he founded in Naples was the most lasting and important of his many achievements. Naples' beauties, inhabitants and surroundings are the main subjects of his poems (love elegies, lullabies, idylls, epitaphs etc., Baiae, Lepidina) and dialogues (Actius, Asinus etc.). He also composed didactic and cosmological poems (Urania), histories (De bello neapolitano), literary treatises and epistles. He was perhaps the only true Latin poet of the Italian humanism and Renaissance.

Carmina (ed. B. Soldati, 2 vols, 1902); Dialogi (ed. C. Previtera, 1943; prose extracts in E. Garin, Prosatori latini del Quattrocento, 1952); V. Rossi, Il Quattrocento (1938). P.T.

Pontoppidan, HENRIK (*Fredericia 24 VII 1857; ∞1881 Mette Marie Hansen, ∞1892 Antoinette Caroline Elise Kofoed; †Ørdrup 21 VIII 1943), Danish novelist and short-story writer. His father was a clergyman, and he spent most of his childhood at Randers. At Copenhagen he studied engineering, but broke off his studies in order to write. His first works were indignant stories in which he revealed the injustices among the peasants in an age which boasted of democracy, humanitarianism and progress. In Skyer (1890) he attacked with searing irony the lack of fighting spirit among the farmers at a time when the highest interests of democracy were at stake. In several of his short novels Pontoppidan discussed the political, moral and religious problems of his day, warning against superficial lyricism and emotional intoxication.

His greatest contribution to Danish literature are his three long novel cycles, Det forjættede Land (3 vols, 1891–95; tr. E. Lucas, Emmanuel, or Children of the Soil, 1892, and The Promised Land, 1896), Lykke-Per (8 vols, 1898–1904) and De Dødes Rige (5 vols, 1912–16). They are a most penetrating and convincing, but unflattering analysis of Danish character in which his pessimism grows from cycle to cycle. His memoirs should also be mentioned as important to the understanding of this sober moralist, whose creed is stated as a belief in 'the clarity of thought and the masculine balance of mind'. He surpasses all other Danish novelists of his age. In 1917 Pontoppidan shared the Nobel prize with Karl Gjellerup*.

NOVELS: Sandinge Menighed (1883); Nattevagt (1894); Den gamle Adam (1894); Højsang (1896); Borgmester Hoeck og hans Hustru (1905); Hans Kvast og Melusine (1907); Den kongelige Gæst (1908); Et Kærlighedseventyr (1918); Mands Himmerig (1927).—SHORT STORIES: Stækkede Vinger (1881); Landsbybilleder (1883); Fra Hytterne (1887); Krøniker (1890); Ørneflugt (1894); Kirkeskuden (1897); Naar Vildgæssene trækker forbi (1897); Ung Elskov (1885); Mimoser (1886); The Apothecary's Daughters, 1890); Isbjørnen (1887); Spøgelser (1888); Natur (1890); Minder (1893); Lille Rødhætte (1900); Det ideale Hjem (1900); Det store Spøgelse (1907).—NOVELS: Noveller og Skitser (3 vols, 1922–30).—PLAYS: De vilde Fugle (1902); Asgaardsrejen (1906).—MEMOIRS: Drengene (1933); Hamskifte (1936); Arv og Gæld (1938); Familjeliv (1940).—Romaner og Fortællinger (6 vols, 1924–26).

V. Andersen, H. P. (1917); P. C. Andersen,

H. P. (1934); C. M. Woel, H. P. (2 vols, 1945); K. Ahnlund, H. P. (1956); K. V. Thomsen, H. P.'s Forfatterskab (1957); E. Bredsdorff, H. P. og Georg Brandes (2 vols, 1964); E. Thomsen, H. P. (1965); A. Jolivet, Les romans de H. P. (1960). E.B.

Ponz, ANTONIO (*Bechí, Valencia 28 VI 1725; †Madrid 4 XII 1792), Spanish art critic and painter. He travelled at length through Greece, Italy and, in order to write a detailed account of Spanish art treasures, Spain. The outcome was his famous Viaje de España (18 vols, 1772–94), the first work of its kind and, though prejudiced against the baroque, fundamental. He also wrote on travels outside Spain.

Viaje fuera de España (2 vols, 1785–91).

R.M.N.

Poot, HUBERT KORNELISZON (*Abtswoude 23 I 1689; ∞1732 Neeltje 't Hart; †Delft 31 XII 1733), Dutch poet, son of peasants and financially always in straitened circumstances, self-taught with an exaggerated respect for the mythological splendour of the poetical style of his time. He wrote numerous sensitive and some imperishable poems, especially nature lyrics.

Mengedichten (3 vols, 1716–33); Gedichten (3 vols, with biog., 1722–35); Minnezangen (intro. C. M. Geerars, 1964).

E. J. Potgieter, 'De Folio-Bijbel' in Proza (1864); P. van Valkenhof, 'H. K. P.' in De Nieuwe Taalgids, XXXII (1938); A. van Duinkerken, 'H. K. P. en de Paus' in De Gemeenschap, XIV (1939); C. M. Geerars, H. K. P. (1954); Maria A. Schenkeveld-van der Dussen, Het dichterschap van H. K. P. (1968). J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Popa, VASKO (*Grebenac, nr Bela Crkva 29 VII 1922), Serbian poet. Perhaps the most significant Yugoslav poet of the post-war period, Popa studied in Vienna and Bucharest before graduating in Yugoslav and French literature in Belgrade in 1949. His poetry is concentrated and precise, trimmed of all externals and concerned with the development of ideas but full of the most striking metaphors and not without a profound visionary quality. Like Pavlović*, he has gone back to the roots of his people's history, attempting to show its lessons for the present and draw conclusions for the future, and in doing so has evolved a particular symbolism of his own. But his verse can also be micro-analytical and almost geometrically precise in its simplicity of form and expression. Like most literary innovators, Popa's poetry has been controversial but he has rightly achieved an international reputation and his poetry has been translated into most European languages, including English.

POETRY: Kora (1953); Nepočin-polje (1956); Pesme (1965); Sporedno nebo (1968).—Selected Poems (tr. A. Pennington, 1969). B.J.

Popdimitrov, EMANUIL (*Gruitsi 4 XI 1887; †Sofia 23 V 1943), Bulgarian poet and University scholar in comparative literature. A prolific and sensitive writer, he turned from Symbolist to social, then national motifs and finally, in 1939, wrote a satirical 'novel in verse', V stranata na rozite.

Sunyat na lyubovta (1912); Pesni za rodinata (1912); Jivot i blyan (1919); Znamena and Idilii (1922); Korabi (1923); Vselena (1924); Zlatni nivi (1929); Pred buryata (novel; 1929).—Coll. works (15 vols, 1931–37). V.P.

Pope, ALEXANDER (*City of London 21 V 1688; †Twickenham 30 V 1744), English poet. While not wealthy, Pope's parents were able to live in the country (Windsor Forest) and so shield Pope from the city rigours which might have killed someone of his crazy constitution—he was a cripple 4 feet 6 inches in height—and give him opportunity for that intense study which aggravated his bodily weakness but which strengthened his poetry. He lisped in numbers—An Essay on Criticism (1711) and The Rape of the Lock (1712) are as brilliant an achievement as that of any young poet, and his first collection of poems, the handsome volume of 1717, shows a further range in 'Eloisa to Abelard' and the 'Elegy on the Death of an Unfortunate Lady'. But already he was engaged on translating the Iliad (finished in 1720), from which he proceeded to the Odyssey (finished in 1726), following that long labour—both loving and professional—with an edition of Shakespeare*. Then, much enriched and able to live more pleasantly at Twickenham, he felt free to return to original poetry, and at steady intervals till within two years of his death, he produced his crowning work, that of satire and moral essay, in which there is as much sensuous richness as pointed thought. Meanwhile, he never neglected to cultivate his garden, with its famous grotto, and to write letters to friends, particularly to Swift*, Arbuthnot*, Gay* and, among women friends, Martha Blount—letters which are masterpieces of elegant expression. He was acknowledged universally as the greatest poet of his time in Europe. When, towards the end of his life, poets sought to write a different kind of poetry, they merely specialized on certain sorts which, somewhere or other in his various and crowded poems, he had himself tackled; even Wordsworth* owes much to him. G.T.

VERSE: The Rape of the Locke (1712; 2nd version, 1714); Windsor Forest (1713); tr. of Homer (11 vols, 1715–26); The Dunciad (3 bks, 1728), The New Dunciad (Book IV, 1742), The Dunciad (4 bks, 1743); Dunciad Variorum (1729); Moral Essays (1733 ff.); Essay on Man (1733–34); Imitations of Horace (1733 ff.).—PROSE: pref. to The Iliad (1715), The Odyssey (1726), Shakespeare (1725).—Letters (1737); Twickenham ed. of the poems (ed. with notes J. Butt et al., 6 vols, 1939– 62); of the Homer tr. (ed. Maynard Mack, 4 vols, 1965); The Correspondence of A. P. (ed. G. Sherburn, 5 vols, 1956).

J. Warton, An Essay on the Genius and Writings of P. (2 vols, 1756, 1782); S. Johnson, Life in Lives of the Poets (1781); The Bowles-Byron Controversy on P. (ed. J. J. Van Rennes, 1927).—J. Conington, The Poetry of P. (1858); G. Lytton Strachey, P. (1925); G. Sherburn, The Best of P. (1929) and The Early Career of A. P. (1934); R. K. Root, The Poetical Career of A. P. (1938); G. Tillotson, On the Poetry of P. (1938) and P. and Human Nature (1958); M. Mack, 'Wit and poetry and P.' in P. and His Contemporaries; Essays Presented to George Sherburn (1949) and The Garden and the City (1969); A. L. Williams, P.'s Dunciad (1955); R. W. Ropers, Major Satires of A. P. (1955); R. A. Brower, The Poetry of Allusion (1959).

G.T. (M.Bu.)

Pope, WALTER (*?1630; †London 25 VI 1714), English miscellaneous writer. Educated at Westminster School, Trinity College, Cambridge and Wadham College, Oxford (Fellow 1651) he became a doctor of medicine in 1661 and from then until 1687 was Professor of astronomy at Gresham College. A Fellow of the Royal Society, he wrote the popular satirical pamphlet Memoires of Du Vall (1670), a poem 'The Wish', Moral and Political Fables (1698), and a Life of Seth [Ward] Lord Bishop of Salisbury (1697; ed. J. B. Bam-borough, 1961). R.M.W.

Popov, ALEXANDER SERAFIMOVICH: see Serafimovich, ALEXANDER.

Popović, JOVAN STERIJA (*Vršac 1 I 1806; †ibid. 26 II 1856), Serbian playwright, of Greek-Serbian parentage. Studied philosophy and law in Temesvár and Pest and became an educational administrator in Belgrade. Attempting, in comedies, to 'cure by ridicule', he exposed and satirized in a witty and lively but farcical fashion the weaknesses and faults which he observed in people around him. A novel Roman bez romana (1838), a parody of the romantic novels of his time, likewise has a reforming purpose, and similar criticism is seriously expressed in a collection of lyric poems, Davorje (1854). He did much to promote theatrical activity and the foundation of cultural institutions in Belgrade.

Laža i paralaža (1830); Tvrđica ili Kir-Janja (1837); Pokondirena tikva (1838); Rodoljupci (1850); Beograd nekad i sad (1853).—Celokupna dela (coll. works; 5 vols, 1928–31); Izbor (sel.; 1962).

M. Tokin, J. S. P. (1956); J. S. P. (essays by various writers; 1965). V.J.

Pordage, SAMUEL (*London XII 1633; †ibid. c. 1660 Dorcas Langhorne; †c. 1691), English poet and dramatist, educated at Merchant Taylors' and a member of Lincoln's Inn. He wrote Azaria and Hushai and The Medal Revers'd in answer to Dryden*. B.L.J.

Poems upon Several Occasions (1660); The Siege of Babylon; a tragi-comedy (1678); Azaria and Hushai in Anti-Achitophel (1682); Three Verse Replies to Absalom and Achitophel (ed. H. W. Jones, 1961). B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Porphyry (*Tyre 233; †c. 305), Greek philosopher, pupil of Plotinus*, whose Enneads he edited with a biography of his master. He wrote much on a wide variety of subjects, being specially interested in religion. While sceptical of traditional pagan cultus, he was a severe opponent of Christianity, perhaps just because his own ideals, as revealed in his letter to his wife Marcella, were so near to those of the Sermon on the Mount. He wrote a work against the Christians, criticizing discrepancies in the Bible and arguing for the non-Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch and the Maccabean date for the Book of Daniel. In the Middle Ages his Introduction to Aristotle's Categories became a standard textbook of logic.

J. Bidez, Vie de P. (1913; with full biblio., authoritative); A. Harnack, P. gegen die Christen (Abhandlungen der Akad., Berlin, 1915); A. B. Hulén, P.'s Work Against the Christians (1933); H. Leitzmann, Geschichte der alten Kirche, III (1938; Eng. tr. From Constantine to Julian, 1950); letter to Marcella tr. A. Zimmern (1912).

P. Hadot, Porphyre et Victorinus (1968).

H.C.

Porson, RICHARD (*East Runton, Norfolk 25 XII 1759; †London 25 IX 1808), English classical scholar whose editions of Euripides* (1797–1802) revolutionized the science of textual criticism.

The Correspondence of R. P. (ed. H. R. Luard, 1867).

M. L. Clarke, R. P. (1937).

R.F.

Porta, CARLO (*Milan 15 VI 1775; †ibid. 5 I 1821), Italian poet, a leader of the progressive literary circle in Milan, much admired by his friends Manzoni* and Grossi*. In racy Milanese dialect he humorously and irreverently exposes religious superstition and the greed and degeneracy of the clergy in colourful verse-narratives like 'Fraa Diodatt' and 'Fraa Zenever', while in works like 'Le disgrazzi di Giovannin Bongee' and 'Ninetta del Verzee' his plebeian victim-heroes innocently express the high comic pathos of their sordid and unlucky lives. Porta's earthy realism shows up the seamy side, the degrading falsity and folly, of a retrograde aristocratic society and culture.

Le Poesie (crit. ed. D. Isella, 1955–56); El lava piatt del Meneghin ch'è mort (1960).

H. Auréas, C. P. (Paris, 1959).

J.G.-R.

Porter, HAL [HAROLD] (*Melbourne 16 II 1911), Australian novelist, poet and playwright. His two autobiographical studies, The Watcher on the Cast Iron Balcony (1963) and The Paper Chase (1966), evoke his upbringing in Melbourne and Bairnsdale, and his experience in varied employments in Australia and Japan. Sensitive and searching self-scrutiny is combined with detailed rendering of Australian urban life during the early 20th century. His novel, The Tilted Cross (1961), is based on accounts of a gross miscarriage of justice in the early days of settlement in Hobart, Tasmania.

SHORT STORIES: A Bachelor's Children (1962); The Cats of Venice (1965).—PLAYS: The Tower (1963); The Professor (1966); Eden House (1969).

A.M.G.

Porter, HENRY (fl. 1596–99), English dramatist whose identity is uncertain. He is probably the person at Christ's College, Cambridge, c. 1584–86. Porter wrote plays for the Admiral's Company, and though only one is extant, he seems to have been valued as a mature and competent artist. He is mentioned by Meres* (1598) and Weever* (1599).

The two angrie women of Abington (1599; ed. W. W. Greg, Malone Soc., 1912).

J. M. Nosworthy, 'H. P.' in English (1946).

B.L.J.

Porter, KATHERINE ANNE (*Indian Creek, Texas 15 V 1894; ∞1933 Eugene Pressly [o/o], ∞1938 Albert Erskine [o/o1942]), American short-story writer and novelist. A Southerner and a Catholic, she echoes the social sense of the one code and the allegorical subtlety of the other in her complex moral fables. With liberal compassion she analyses the confrontation between an old social and moral order and the desire for change, showing the forlorn hopes attendant upon it. She admired Katharine Mansfield's* 'grim, quiet ruthlessness of judgement . . . natural malicious wit and intelligent humour', qualities which characterize her own work.

STORIES: Hacienda (1934); Flowering Judas and Other Stories (1935); Noon Wine (1937); Pale Horse, Pale Rider (1939); The Leaning Tower and Other Stories (1944).—Ship of Fools (novel; 1962).—The Days Before (essays; 1952).

E. Wilson, Classics and Commercials (1951); H. J. Mooney, Jr, The Fiction and Criticism of K. A. P. (1957); R. B. West, Jr, The Short Story in America (1952) and K. A. P. (1963). G.A.K.

Porter, PETER (NEVILLE FREDERICK) (*Brisbane 16 II 1929), Australian poet. His poetry is deeply concerned with contemporary issues. His satirical pastiches ridicule social customs and the values underlying them with pointed irony.

Once Bitten, Twice Bitten (1961); Poems Ancient and Modern (1964); A Porter Folio (1969).

A.M.G.

Porter, THOMAS (*1636; ∞ Anne Blount, ∞ Roberta Colepeper; †1680), English dramatist, fourth son of Endymion Porter. Aged 19, he abducted his first wife and though the marriage was annulled remarried her later. Porter killed two men in affrays.

The Villain (tragedy; 1663); The Witty Combat (tragi-comedy; 1663); The Carnival (comedy; 1664).

A. Harbage, Cavalier Drama (1936).

B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Porter, WILLIAM SYDNEY: see Henry, O.

Porthan, HENRIK GABRIEL (*8 or 9 XI 1739; †16 III 1804), Finnish-Swedish historian, classical scholar, and folk-lorist. In 1772 he became head of Åbo University library, and in 1777 Professor of rhetoric. His great energy and versatility were responsible for the eminence of Åbo University at that time. Through his writings about Finnish runic poetry he stimulated the collection of Finnish folk-songs. He was moreover the first serious scholar to concern himself with medieval Finnish history.

De poesi fennica (1776–78; unfinished); De praecipuis dialectis linguae fennicae (1801; unfinished); M. Pauli Juusten Chronicon episcoporum Finlandensium (1784–1800); Sylloge monumentorum ad illustrandam historiam fennicam pertinentium (1800–04; unfinished).—Opera selecta (ed. S. Elmgren and A. Schauman, 5 vols, 1859–73).

M. G. Schybergson, H. G. P. (2 vols, 1908–11).

B.M.E.M.

Porto-Riche, GEORGES DE (*Bordeaux 20 V 1849; †Paris 5 IX 1930), French poet and dramatist, elected to the French Academy in 1923. Porto-Riche's reputation as a delicate analyst of passion was established by La chance de Françoise (1890). The masterpieces of his 'théâtre d'amour' make it clear that for him love is a purely physical bond and many who now decry his psychology are still prepared to admit the flashes of truth in his subtle, intimate dialogue.

Amoureuse (1891); Le passé (1897); Le vieil homme (1911); Le marchand d'estampes (1917).

H. Charasson, G. de P.-R., ou le Racine juif (1925); W. Muller, G. de P.-R. (1934); H. Brugmans, G. de P.-R. (1934).

T.W.

Poruks, JANIS (*Druviēna canton 13 X 1871; ∞1902 Erna Petersone; †Tartu 25 VI 1911), Latvian poet and short-story writer. While studying music in Dresden he became acquainted with Nietzsche's* philosophy and took to literature. He returned to Riga in 1894 and tried his hand unsuccessfully at various kinds of work. In 1902 he married, and there followed the happiest period of his unhappy life. During this time he wrote some of his masterpieces in prose (e.g. Ērgelnieks, 'The Organist', 1903). The 1905 revolution affected him profoundly, and he began to suffer from a mental ailment; he died an incurable. A complex, introspective personality, he was the founder of the neo-Romantic trend in Latvian literature.

STORIES: Pērju zvejnieks (1895); Sirdsšķistie ļaudis (1896); Kauja pie Knipskas (1897); Romas atjaunotāji (1900); Builders of New Rome, tr. L. A. Marshall, 1924; Čūskas (1905).—Kopotī raksti (coll. works: ed. R. Egle, 20 vols, 1924–30).—Verse tr. in W. K. Matthews, Tricolour Sun (1936).

V. Eglītis, P. (1903); V. Maldonis, Poruka ētikas problēmas (1923); J. Lapinš, J. P. (1935).

W.K.M. (H.Le.)

Porzio, CAMILLO (*Naples 1526; †1580), Italian historian, author of the Congiura de' baroni (1565; his best-known work), the Storia d'Italia, an indifferent continuation of Giovio's* Historiae, and a summary Relazione.

La congiura de' baroni del regno di Napoli (ed. E. Pontieri, 2nd ed. 1964); Storia d'Italia and Relazione del regno di Napoli in Opere di C. P. (ed. C. Monzani, 2nd ed. 1855).

G. B. Beltrani, 'Degli studi su C. P. e sulle sue opere' in Rivista Europea, VII (1878); H. Auréas, C. P. (1959); C. C. Secchi, C. P. and T. Grossi (1966).

P.McN.

Posidippus (*Macedonia, soon after 316 B.C.), poet of Athenian New Comedy, of whom we know 18 titles. His plays were adapted for the Roman stage; a Greek revival production is recorded c. 180 B.C.

T. Kock, Comicorum Atticorum fragmenta, III (1888); J. M. Edmonds, Fragments of Attic Comedy, IIIA (1961; with tr.).—T. B. L. Webster, Studies in Later Greek Comedy (2nd ed. 1970).

E.W.H.

Posidonius OF APAMEA (*c. 136; †c. 50 B.C.), Stoic philosopher, studied at Athens under Panaetius* and set up his own school in Rhodes, where Cicero* was one of his pupils. His writings (in Greek) had a wide circulation and probably great influence in the Roman world, but are now all lost: they had a wide range, covering history, politics, ethics, meteorology, geography, theology, etc. His philosophical system was based on the Stoic idea of a cosmic deity who controlled everything: he introduced some aspects of Platonism and brought the Stoic position closer to the common Weltanschauung of the late Hellenistic world.

F. Jacoby, Die Fragmente der griechischen Historiker, II (1923).—M. Pohlenz, Die Stoa (1947; best brief account); K. Reinhardt, Poseidonius (1921) and Kosmos und Sympathie (1926).

D.J.F.

Post, ELIZABETH MARIA (*Utrecht 22 XI 1755; ∞1794 Justus L. Overdorp; †Epe 3 VII 1812),

Dutch prose writer and poet, whose melodious writings show real feeling in her excellent descriptions of nature.

Het land; in brieven (1787); Voor éenzaamen (1788); Reinhart of natuur en godsdienst (1791).—Gezangen der liefde (verse; 1794).

J. Kloos, 'Noordwijk's dichteres E. M. P.' in Leidsch Jaarboekje, VIII (1912); J. Koopmans, 'E. M. P.' in De Beweging, X (1914); G. Kalff, 'E. M. P.' in Vragen des tijds, XL (1930); J. C. Brandt Corstius, Idylle en realiteit; het werk van E. M. P. in verband met de ontwikkeling van de Europese literatuur in de tweede helft van de achttiende eeuw (1955). J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Posthumus, Rinse (*Ternaard 30 X 1790; †Waaksens 28 IX 1859), Frisian writer. In 1813 he settled as a clergyman in the isolated village of Waaksens. He pointed out the importance of Gysbert Japicx* and translated into Frisian three plays of Shakespeare*, the first Shakespeare-translations in the Netherlands.

E. Howard Harris, The Literature of Friesland (1956); J. Piebenga, Koarte Skiednis fan de Fryske Skriftekennisse (2nd ed. 1957). K.D.

Postma, Obe (*Kornwerd 29 III 1868; †Leeuwarden 26 VI 1963), Frisian writer and scholar; generally regarded as the finest Frisian poet. His retrospective, sometimes visionary poems with cosmic and philosophical elements were collected in two volumes of his Samle Fersen (1949). He translated also poems of R. M. Rilke* and Emily Dickinson* and fragments of the Heliand*.

Anne Wadman, Frieslands Dichters (1949); F. Sierksma, Bern fan 'e ierde (1953); E. Howard Harris, The Literature of Friesland (1956); J. Piebenga, Koarte Skiednis fan de Fryske Skriftekennisse (2nd ed. 1957). K.D.

Potapenko, Ignaty Nikolayevich (*Kherson province 1856; †1915), Russian author of countless unpretentious stories and novels which were great favourites in the early 20th century—partly on account of their humour.

Sochineniya (12 vols, 1905–06); Mërtvoye more (1929).—A Father of Six (1891); The General's Daughter (1892); A Russian Priest (1916; all tr. W. Gaussen). J.L.

Potgieter, Everhardus Johannes (*Zwolle 27 VI 1808; †Amsterdam 3 II 1875), Dutch poet, essayist and critic. He was almost self-educated. In 1827 he worked in Antwerp (friendship with J. F. Willem's*); after a journey to Sweden in 1831–32 (Het Noorden, 2 vols, 1836–40) he settled in Amsterdam as a commercial agent. He collaborated with Drost* and Bakhuizen* van den Brink in De Muzen (1834) and later with Bakhuizen in De Gids (1837) in order to revive national literature by honest and severe criticism and by opposing to Dutch Romanticism the ideals of the 17th century. After Bakhuizen's departure in 1843, Potgieter persevered on this path but with less success. It was later, in his collaboration with the younger Huet*, that the old ideals and the searching criticism regained their vigour, but, together with Huet, Potgieter left the editorial board of De Gids after the conflict of 1865. The creative prose of Potgieter's essays was partly closely wrought and didactical, as in Jan, Jannetje en hun jongste kind (1842; ed. J. Smit, 1969), Het Rijksmuseum te Amsterdam (1844); and partly strictly stylized narrative, as in 't Is maar een Pennelikker (1842), Blaauw bes, blaauw bes (1845). In the latter genre Potgieter attained a greater freedom and depth about 1860, with Een novelle? (1864) and Onderweg in den regen (1864; ed. and intro. J. Smit, 1968). As a poet his genius is seen at its best in Florence (1868) and De nalatenschap van de landjonker (1875). The latter contains his poetic testament: Gedroomd paardrijden.

Proza (2 vols, 1864); Poëzy (2 vols, 1868–75); Verspreide en nagelaten werken (11 vols, 1875–77); De Werken van E. J. P. (18 vols, 1885–86).

C. Busken Huet, E. J. P. (1877); J. H. Groenewegen, Bibliografie der werken van E. J. P. (1890); Brieven aan Cd. Busken Huet (3 vols, 1903); A. Verwey, Het leven van P. (1903), P.'s Testament (1908) and 'P. en Hilda Wijk' in Proza, V (1922); J. A. Russell, 'Dutch poetry and the Romantic revival' in De Nieuwe Gids, V (1937); J. Smit, Bijdrage tot de kennis van P.'s stijl (1937), E. J. P. (biog.; 1951) and E. J. P.'s Florence (1960); F. W. Heerikhuizen, 'E. J. P.' in Groot Nederland (1942); Th. Weevers, Goethe en Holland (1949); P. Brachin, 'P. et la littérature suédoise' in Études germaniques (1955). J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Potocki, Wacław (*Wola Łużańska 1621; †Łużna VII 1696), Polish poet and moralist. A country squire, he suffered painful losses in his family and had to change from Unitarianism to Roman Catholicism to avoid expulsion from Poland. During his lifetime his numerous writings were known from MSS. His allegorical novel in verse Argenida (1697) was modelled on the Latin Argenis of J. Barclay*; Syloret (1764), a tale of adventures, on works of Apuleius* and Heliodorus*, Moralia, on Erasmus* Adagia. Wojna chocimska is the best Polish epic till the appearance of Pan Tadeusz by A. Mickiewicz*. Three books of epigrams and shorter poems were published in 1907 as Ogród frazsek, and his work gives a good impression of everyday life in the 17th century. His language is pure, vivid and rich.

VERSE: Wojna chocimska (1850; ed. with intro. and comm. A. Brückner, 1924); Moralia (3 vols, 1915; crit. ed. T. Grabowski and J. Łoś, 1915–18); Dialog o Zmartwychstaniu pańskim (ed. 1949);

Pisma wybrane (2 vols, 1953); Wiersze wybrane (ed. A. Brückner, 1924).

A. Brückner, Język W-a P-o (1900); E. Rappaport, W. P. jako satyryk (1920); W. Bobek, Argenida W-a P-o w stosunku do swego oryginału (1929); Z. Stieber, Uwagi o języku W-a P-o (1948); L. Kukulski, Prolegomena filologiczne do twórczości W. P. (1962). S.S. (P.H.)

Potrč, IVAN (*Grajena, nr Ptuj 1 I 1913), Slovene novelist and playwright. His power lies in his presentation of the peasant population of former eastern Styria; in vivid dialogue, an accurate description unfolds of a life of intellectual and material poverty. His plays are concerned with the spiritual and social upheavals in the life of these people from the crisis that preceded the Second World War to the collectivization that followed it.

NOVELS: Na kmetih (1954; The Land and the Flesh, tr. H. Leeming, 1969); Zločin (1955); Srečanje (1962).—PLAYS: Kreflova kmetija (1947); Lacko in Krefli (1949); Krefli (1953).

A.S. (tr. H.Le.)

Potter, BEATRIX (*South Kensington 6 VII 1866; †1913 William Heelis; †Sawrey 22 XII 1943), English writer of books for young children. Her miniature books, illustrated with her own water-colours, demonstrate both verbally and visually her keen eye for the detail of the lives of small animals in their natural surroundings. Although she gives them a number of human attributes her characters never cease to be convincing animals.

The Tale of Peter Rabbit (1902); The Tailor of Gloucester (1903); The Tale of Jemima Puddle-Duck (1908); many others.—Journal, 1881–97 (1966).

M. Lane, The Tale of B. P. (1946); L. Linder and W. A. Herring, The Art of B. P. (1955; 4th ed. 1966); M. Crouch, B. P. (1960).—L. Linder, A History of the Writings of B. P. (1971).

W.R.A.

Potter, DIRC (*c. 1370; †Lysbeth van der Does; †1428), Dutch poet and writer; clerk to Duke Albrecht of Bavaria, later bailiff and ambassador (to England among other countries). Earlier, at Rome (1411), he had written his best-known work, Der Minnen Loep, a collection of fascinatingly told stories, presented as examples of the several kinds of love. Later he wrote two more works in prose, Blome der Doecheden, which indirectly derives from Fiore di Virtù, and an adaptation of the well-known allegory of Mellibeus. Potter was knighted in 1415, taking the name of POTTER VAN DER LOO.

Der Minnen Loep (ed. P. Leendertz, 1845–47); Dat boeck der Bloemen (ed. S. Schoutens, 1904); Mellibeus (ed. B. Overmaat, 1950).

B. Overmaat in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Letterk., LXIX (1951) and in Nieuwe Taalgids, LIII (1960). J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Potter (van der Loo), GERYT (*c. 1395), Dutch lawyer, son of Dirc Potter*. He was councillor in the Court of Holland (1438–54); in 1440 also bailiff of 's-Gravenzande. Of his translation of Froissart's* Kroniek van Vlaanderen (c. 1430) only the second part survives.

Ed. (partly) N. de Pauw (2 vols, 1898).

J.J.M.

Poulet, GEORGES (*Chênée 29 XI 1902; †1928 Elsa Grégoire), Belgian scholar and essayist. First a lecturer in French literature (1927–48), then a Reader (1948–52) at the University of Edinburgh, he became a Professor at Johns Hopkins University, U.S.A. (1952–57) and at the University of Zürich in 1958. He discovered the importance of 'time' in literary masterpieces and initiated a new school of thought.

Études sur le temps humain (1949); La distance intérieure (1952); Trois essais de mythologie romantique (1966).

J.C.D.

Pound, EZRA LOOMIS (*Hailey, Idaho 30 X 1885; †Venice 1 XI 1972), American poet and critic. An M.A. of the University of Pennsylvania, he taught at Wabash College, but was soon dismissed for unconventionality. In 1908 he left for Europe and has remained an expatriate. His two volumes of verse, Personae and Exultations, in 1909 attracted attention for their bold metrical innovations, although the diction still tends to the archaic. He became a catalyst of modern writing by founding and contributing to a series of little MAGAZINES, through which the revolutionary groups of IMAGISM and Vorticism were publicized. Other pioneer work included arousing international interest in James Joyce*, editing and financing T. S. Eliot* and, as secretary to W. B. Yeats*, helping to modernize the Irish poet's vocabulary. Pound has been called a 'Ph.D. manqué', his studies ranging through the Provençal lyricists, Elizabethan translators, French Symbolists and given their finest artistic expression in Cathay (1915) from the Chinese, with the help of the notes of Ernest Fenellosa. Pound is an aggressive critic who violently attacks all systems and academic institutions as over-formalized. His touchstone is the famous definition: 'great literature is simply language charged with meaning to the utmost possible degree'. His Hugh Selwyn Mauberley (1920), together with Eliot's The Waste Land, constitutes a formidable attack on the shoddiness of contemporary culture. In the 1920s he began writing the Cantos which comprise the remainder of his poetic output. This agglomeration of historical texts, lyric epiphanies, didactic expositions and obscure mythology, constantly inventive metrically, is only intermittently successful. The finest section, The Pisan Cantos (1948), where Pound was separated from his texts and faced with the personal tragedy of his imprisonment for treason, has a poignantly confessional aspect that has done much to set in perspective the eccentricities responsible for Pound's Fascist inclinations. He takes his place with Eliot as one of the great innovators in 20th-century poetry in English; with Gourmont*, James* and Eliot, as the most vitalizing of critics.

VERSE: A Lume Spento (1908); Provença (1910); Canzoni (1911); Riposte (1912); Lustra (1916); Quia Pauper Amavi (1919); The Cantos of E. P. (1948); Rock-Drill: 85-95 de los cantares (1949); Thrones: 96-109 de los cantares (1959).—PROSE: The Spirit of Romance (1910); Pavannes and Divisions (1918); Instigations (1920); Indiscretions (1923); Antheil and the Treatise on Harmony (1924); Imaginary Letters (1930); How to Read (1931); ABC of Economics (1933); ABC of Reading (1934); Make It New (1934); Jefferson and/or Mussolini (1935); Polite Essays (1937); Culture (1938); The Analects of Confucius (1950); The Unwobbling Pivot (1952); Impact (1960).

H. Kenner, The Poetry of E. P. (1951); C. Emery, Ideas Into Action: A Study of P.'s Cantos (1958); C. Norman, E. P. (1960); M. L. Rosenthal, A Primer of E. P. (1960). D.E.Mo.

POURTALES, GUY DE (*Geneva 4 VIII 1881; †Lausanne 12 VI 1941), Swiss novelist and critic. Of a Neuchâtel family, he took French nationality before the First World War and settled in Paris, but made frequent visits to French-speaking Switzerland. He captured its poetry in his novel, Marins d'eau douce (1919), and described its upper- and middle-class society in La pêche miraculeuse (1937), a splendid portrayal of the years 1900-14. He also wrote essays notable for their stylistic elegance and intellectual depth, and first-rate biographies of the composers Liszt (1925), Chopin (1927), Wagner* (1932) and Berlioz (1939).

ESSAYS: De Hamlet à Swann (1924); Louis II de Bavière (1928); Nietzsche en Italie (1929). G.G.

POUWELSZ, REYNIER, Dutch poet in the REDERIJER tradition. He probably hailed from St Omer and from 1526 was a bookbinder at Utrecht. He wrote Tspel van de christenkercke (c. 1540), a Roman Catholic counterpart of De Boom der Schrifteuren.

Ed. G. A. Brands (1921).

G. A. Evers in Het Boek (1920); G. A. Brands in Tijdschr. v. Nederl. Taal- en Letterk., XLIII (1924); G. A. van Es in Geschiedenis van de Letterkunde der Nederlanden, III (1944).

J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

POWELL, ANTHONY (*London 21 XII 1905; ∞1934 Lady Violet Pakenham), English novelist, who made a brilliant start with his first novel, Afternoon Men (1931). In 1971 he published the tenth novel (Books Do Furnish a Room) in a projected 12-volume sequence with the general title, A Dance to

The Music of Time, which began with A Question of Upbringing (1951). The Music of Time openly honours Proust*, and although the novels are inevitably unequal, at their best they are very good indeed.

The Music of Time, incl.: A Buyer's Market (1952); The Acceptance World (1955); At Lady Molly's (1957); Casanova's Chinese Restaurant (1960); The Kindly Ones (1962); The Valley of Bones (1964); The Soldier's Art (1966); The Military Philosophers (1968).—John Aubrey and His Friends (1948; rev. 1963).

B. Bergonzi, A. P. (1962).

W.R.A.

POWYS, JOHN COWPER (*Shirley, Derbyshire 8 X 1872; ∞9 IV 1898 Margaret Alice Lyon; †Blaenau Ffestiniog 17 VI 1963), English man of letters, with an immensely wide range of interests—literary, historical, ethical, social—professing a philosophy of scepticism, which yet acknowledges spiritual values. In his novels, philosophical writings and essays one is aware of the aesthete and the robust individualist.

NOVELS: Wood and Stone (1915); Wolf Solent (1929); A Glastonbury Romance (1932).—PHILOSOPHY: The Meaning of Culture (1929); In Defence of Sensuality (1930); A Philosophy of Solitude (1933); Autobiography (1934); The Art of Happiness (1935); The Art of Growing Old (1944).—LITERARY: The Pleasures of Literature (1938); Dostoevsky (1947); Rabelais (1948).—Poems (sel. ed. K. Hopkins, 1964).

R. H. Ward, The P. Brothers (1935); G. W. Knight, The Saturnian Quest (1964); H. P. Collins, J. C. P.: Old Earthman (1966); K. Hopkins, The P. Brothers (1967).—Biblio. by D. Langridge (1966).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

POWYS, THEODORE FRANCIS (*Shirley, Derbyshire 1875; ∞1905 Violet Rosalie Dodds; †Mappowder, Dorset 27 XI 1953), English novelist, in many ways the most original of the Powys brothers, remembered particularly for his allegory Mr Weston's Good Wine (1927). He lived most of his life in Dorset.

Mark Only (1924); Mr Tasker's Gods (1925); Unclay (1931).

W. Hunter, The Novels and Stories of T. F. P. (1930); H. Coombes, T. F. P. (1960). W.R.A.

POZNER, VLADIMIR (*1905), Russian poet who once belonged to the Gumilëv* group of Acmeists. After the Revolution he went abroad where he took part in émigré literature and wrote also in French.

Panorama de la littérature russe contemporaine (1929); Le mors aux dents (1937); Deuil en 24 heures (1942).—White Despot (tr. W. B. Wells, 1938); The Edge of the Sword (tr. H. M. Chevalier, 1943); Curtain-Raiser (tr. G. Latta, 1963). J.L.

Prado, PEDRO (*Santiago de Chile 1886; †1952), Chilean poet and prose writer, a follower of MODERNISM, though with a new vocabulary. He has exercised a great influence on the aesthetics of contemporary Chilean literature and art, especially through the short-lived cénacle 'Los Diez' (1915). His prose, of a slightly precious simplicity, is at its best in the fantastic tale. His best-known novel is of a hunchback who grew wings—Alsino (1920; new ed. 1928).

VERSE: Flores de Cardo (1908); La casa abandonada (1912); El llamado del mundo (1913); Los pájaros errantes (1915); Androvar (verse drama; 1925).—NOVELS: La reina de Rapa Nui (1914); Un juez rural (1924).

R. Silva Castro, P. P. (1886–1952) (New York, 1959). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Pradon, JACQUES (~Rouen 21 I 1644; †Paris 14 I 1698), French dramatist. He wrote some ten mediocre tragedies, most of them romanticized versions, with a developed love-interest, of Greek and Roman themes. He is remembered for his Phèdre et Hippolyte (1677), a play supported by the Duchess of Bouillon's cabal in rivalry to Racine's* Phèdre. His La Troade (1679) similarly owes something to Racine's Andromaque.

Pyrame et Thisbé (1674); Tamerlan ou La Mort de Bajazet (1676); Statira (1679); Régulus (1688); Scipion l'Africain (1697).

T. W. Bussom, P. (1922); H. C. Lancaster, History of French Dramatic Literature in the 17th Century, IV (1940). G.B.

Prados, EMILIO (*Málaga 4 III 1899; †Mexico 1962), Spanish poet who places a particular emphasis on formal correctness. Prado lived in exile from 1939 onwards.

Antología (1925–1953) (1954); Río natural (1957); Circuncisión del sueño (1957); Últimos poemas (Málaga, 1968).

C. Blanco Aguinaga, E. P. (New York, 1960). J.E.V.

Praet, JAN, Dutch poet, author of the incompletely preserved Leeringhe der Zalichede (c. 1300; ed. J. Bormans, 1872), an ethico-religious didactic poem of high poetical standard in spite of the allegory and other fashionable forms derived from contemporary French literature. J.J.M.

S. C. Holleman-Stevens in Nieuwe Taalgids, LVII (1964). A.v.E.

Praga, EMILIO (*Gorla, Milan 26 XII 1839; †Milan 26 XII 1875), Italian poet and painter of the SCAPIGLIATURA. His financial and family life ruined, he took to drink and riotousness. Of his poetry, Tavolozza (1862) depicts delicate landscapes, Penombre (1864) somewhat histrionically and morbidly expresses his own and the world's moral disarray, while in Trasparenze (pub. posth.) he finally achieves a more faithful rendering of his inner conflicts.

Poesie (crit. ed. M. Petrucciani, 1969); Memorie del presbiterio (1963).—M. Petrucciani, E. P. (1962); J. Moestrup, La Scapigliatura (Copenhagen, 1966). J.G.-R.

Pramudja Ananta Tur: see INDONESIAN AND MALAYSIAN LITERATURES.

Prati, GIOVANNI (*Campomaggiore, Trentino 27 I 1814; †Rome 9 V 1884), Italian poet and patriot, prolific and versatile, but facile and superficial. Loyal to the house of Savoy throughout the struggles of the Risorgimento, he was rewarded with official appointments. His first work, Edmenegarda (1841), a contemporary moral tale of adultery in blank verse, won him immediate fame, but Carducci* called it meretricious. The same easy and ambiguous emotionalism and sentimentousness inform his lyrical and patriotic verse, also characterized by an all too effortless musicality. The more personal lyrics of Psiche (1876) and the exotic Oriental mysteries of Iside (1878) also lack real depth or originality.

Poesie di G. P. (1931).—V. Cian, Un poeta e un filosofo del Risorgimento: G. P. e V. Gioberti (1917); P. L. Mannucci, P. (1934); G. P. nel cinquantenario della morte (1934); A. Balduino, Letteratura romantica dal P. al Carducci (1967). J.G.-R.

Pratinas (fl. early 5th century B.C.), Greek writer of tragedies, satyr plays, choruses; competed with Aeschylus* in 499/496 B.C. According to the Souda lexicon (Suidas*) he was the first to write satyr plays. The only fragment of any length is from a lively but not dramatic chorus.

B. Snell, Fragmenta tragicorum Graecorum, I (1971); D. L. Page, Poetae melici Graeci (1962).

A. W. Pickard-Cambridge, Dithyramb, Tragedy and Comedy (2nd ed. 1962); A. M. Dale in Collected Papers (1969). M.L.C. (S.A.B.)

Pratolini, VASCO (*Florence 9 X 1913), Italian novelist, one of the leading exponents of neo-realism. He wrote first for the Fascist review Bargello, then for Letteratura, and in 1938 edited, with Gatto, the review Campo di Marte, in which much HERMETIC poetry was published. Pratolini's novels are usually set in his own Florentine working-class background. He has great sympathy for his characters but tends to idealize certain aspects of Italian social history. His best work is usually thought to be Cronache di poveri amanti (1947; tr. A Tale of Poor Lovers, 1949).

Il quartiere (1945; A Tale of Santa Croce, tr. P. and P. Duncan, 1952); Un eroe del nostro tempo

(1949; A Hero of Today, tr. E. Mosbacher, 1951); Le ragazze di San Frediano (1953); Una storia italiana, 3 vols: I, Metello (1955; tr. R. Rosenthal, 1968); II, Lo scialo (1960); III, Allegoria e derisione (1966); La costanza della ragione (1963; Bruno Santini, tr. R. Rosenthal, 1965).

F. Rosengarten, V. P.: the Development of a Social Novelist (1965; best intro. in Eng.).—See also F. Longobardi, V. P. (1964). B.M.

Pratt, EDWIN JOHN (*Western Bay, Newfoundland 4 II 1883; ∞1919 Viola Whitney; †Toronto 26 IV 1964), major Canadian poet; ordained a Methodist minister, he eventually became a Professor of English at the University of Toronto (1919–53). Influenced by early contact with the sea, his work is noted for command of vigorous language and rhythm, effective simplicity, and unusual skill in handling long narrative poems in the epic tradition. The theme of duality in man, the conflict between civilized humanism and primitive brutality, recurs either explicitly or symbolically in his work.

Rachel (1917); Newfoundland Verse (1923); Witches' Brew (1925); The Titanic (1935); Brébeuf and His Brethren (1940); Dunkirk (1941); Collected Poems (1944).

P. West et al., 'Special number on E. J. P.' in Canad. Lit., XIX (1964); M. Wilson, E. J. P. (1969). R.Su.

Praz, MARIO (*Rome 6 IX 1896; ∞1934 Vivyan Eyles [o/o 1947]), Italian scholar, critic and essayist. Senior lecturer in Italian at the University of Liverpool (1924–32), Professor of Italian at Manchester (1932–34), and subsequently Professor of English at Rome from 1934 until 1966, Praz's most celebrated work is probably La carne, la morte e il diavolo nella letteratura romantica (1930; The Romantic Agony, tr. A. Davidson, 1933), which traces the influence of de Sade* on the Romantic movement, but he has written learnedly and elegantly on a wide range of English and Italian topics as well as on the history of art and taste.

V. and M. Gabrieli, Bibliografia degli scritti di M. P. (1967).—Friendship's Garland: Essays Presented to M. P. on His Seventieth Birthday (2 vols, 1966). B.M.

Preda, MARIN (*Siliștea-Gumești 1922), Rumanian novelist and short-story writer. He excels in the study of psychologically complicated and tortuous characters, his master creation being the philosopher-peasant Ilie Moromete, who delights in leading his antagonists on to make fools of themselves. In spite of a tendency to run to anecdotalism, his novels, rich in comedy of situation and successfully evoking a multitude of highly individual characters, are the most interesting produced by the post-war generation of Rumanian writers.

SHORT STORIES: Întîlnirea din pământuri (1948); Desfășurarea (1952); Ferestre întunecate (1955); Îndrăzneala (1959); Friguri (1964); Soldatul cel mititel (1970).—NOVELS: Moromeții (2 vols, 1954, 1967); Risipitorii (1962; 3rd rev. ed. 1969); Întrusul (1968).

I. Vitner, Prozatori contemporani (1961); D. Micu and N. Manolescu, Literatura română de azi (1965). F.J.B.

Pregelj, IVAN (*Sveta Lucija in Soča [Isonzo] 27 X 1883; †Ljubljana 30 I 1960), Slovene novelist, playwright and essayist. His lyrical and epic gifts, erudition, faith, and emotional hypersensitivity enabled him to create, besides his always individual educational writings, works of art in which he discussed with painful candour the problem of celibacy for the Catholic clergy, and the struggle between instinct and the spirit of asceticism in general. On the other hand he wrote much fresh and tender idyllic verse and a number of powerful historical novels and short stories.

Tolminci (1915–16); Štefan Golja in njegovi (1918–19); Plebanus Joannes (1920); Azazel (1921); Bogovec Jernej (1922–23); Simon iz Praš (1924); Otroci sonca (1929–33); Thabita kumi (1933).—Izbrani spisi (sel. writings; 10 vols, 1928–35); Izbrana dela (sel. works; ed. with notes F. Koblar, 7 vols, 1962–70).

T. Debeljak, 'I. P.' in Dom in svet (1933).

A.S. (tr. H.Le.)

Preller, GUSTAV SCHOEMAN (*Pretoria 4 X 1875; ∞Johanna C. Pretorius; †6 X 1943), Afrikaans prose-writer, critic, historian and biographer. He was one of the founders of Afrikaans journalism and the founder of Afrikaans historiography. He is also the author of short stories and sketches on historical themes.

Laat 't ons toch Ernst wezen (1905); Piet Retief (1906); Baanbrekers (1915); Kaptein Hindon (1916); Historiese Opstelle (1925); Sketse en Opstelle (1928); Andries Pretorius (1938).

G.D. (N.D.C.)

Premānanda (*1649; †1714), most prolific Gujarātī author of long poems based on stories from the epics and the purāṇas. Nearly 40 are attributed to him—Nalākhyāna, Okhāharāṇa, and also Kuṇṇavarabānuṃ māmeruṃ, a work built round an episode in the life of Narasimha* Mahetā. I.R.

Premchand (*nr Benares 1880; †1936), the outstanding writer of fiction in modern Hindi literature. His real name was DHANPAT RAI. Although originally an Urdu writer, Premchand found it easier to get his works published in Hindi, and he gradually changed over to writing and publishing in Hindi. He wrote over 300 short stories which offer an incomparable panorama of North Indian life, and Godān (The Gift of a Cow, tr. G. C.

Roadarmel, 1968), his last complete novel, is rightly regarded as the finest novel in the Hindi language.

The World of P. (short stories; tr. David Rubin, 1969). S.C.R.W.

Premierfait, LAURENT DE (fl. 1400), French translator. He translated a number of works into French, including Aristotle's Œconomica (?1414), Cicero's De amicitia (1410) and Boccaccio's Decameron (1414). He also composed Latin verse.

H. Hauvette, De Laurentio de Primofacto (1903). A.H.D.

Preradović, PETAR (*nr Bjelovar 19 III 1818; †Fahrfeld, Austria 18 VIII 1872), Croatian poet. He was educated under German influence, and became a general in the Austrian army, but his poems after 1844 express intense Slav consciousness and pride in the past of his country and in its traditional poetry.

Prvenci (1846); Nove pjesme (1851); Pjesnička djela (1873).—Djela (1954).—P. P. ausgewählte Gedichte (sel. tr. M. Spicer, with biog. intro., 1895).

Lj. Maraković, P. P. (1968).

V.J.

Prešeren, FRANCE (*Vrba nr Bled 3 XII 1800; †Kranj 8 II 1849), Slovene poet. Deriving his artistic inspiration from classical antiquity and standing at the spiritual crossroads between Romance renaissance and German Romanticism, he wrought between 1830 and 1848 the Slovene variant of the most significant forms of universal lyric poetry. His love poetry (e.g. Gazele, 1833; Sonetni venec, 'A Wreath of Sonnets', 1834) is characterized by the quest for new and better models of human fellowship. In spite of unhappiness in love he saw in it a power which could regenerate the life of the individual and of society. In spite of the blows he suffered from Metternich's system, which persecuted him with censorship and other chicanery, he expressed in his reflective verse (Slovo od mladosti, 'Farewell to Youth', 1830; Sonetje nesreče, 'Sonnets of Unhappiness', 1834, etc.), as also in his elegiac, satirical and patriotic poems, his belief in a better future both for his own people and for all mankind. The eloquent clarity and harmony of his poems make him a classic, their intensity of feeling and association of ideas make him a progressive Romantic, while he exhibits the stoical opposition to misfortune and violence of a modern man.

WORKS: Kerst per Savici (1836); Poezije (1847).—Zbrano delo (coll. works; I–II, 1965–66).—TRANSLATIONS: Poems (ed. W. K. Matthews and A. Slodnjak, 1963); Anthologie de la poésie yougoslave (1935); Gedichte (tr. L. Novy, 1936).

A. Žigon, Prešernova čitanka v dveh knjigah (1922); F. Kidrič, P., II: Življenje pesnika in pesmi

1800–1838 (1938); Janko Kos, Prešernov pesniški razvoj: Interpretacija (1966); A. Slodnjak, Prešernovo življenje (3rd ed. 1968).

A.S. (tr. H.Le.)

Presser, JACOB (*Amsterdam 24 II 1899; †ibid. 30 IV 1970), Dutch poet, novelist and historian. Concern for human values is to be found in both his literary works and in his historical writings, as much in his debunking chef d'œuvre, Napoleon (1946), as in his moving report on the extinction of Dutch Jewry, Ondergang (1965).

Orpheus en Ahasverus (verse; 1945).—De nacht der Girondijnen (1957); Breaking Point, tr. H. Barrows Mussey, 1959).—HISTORY: De tachtigjarige oorlog (1941); Amerika (1949).—Uit het werk van Dr J. P. (1969). J.J.O.

Prestes, ANTÓNIO (*Torres Novas), 16th-century Portuguese playwright—one of the few that followed in the wake of Gil Vicente*, founder of the Portuguese theatre. Of his seven plays one is a Morality, the others loosely constructed comedies which, reproducing the defects of Vicente's plays, have little of their brilliance.

Primeira parte dos autos e comedias portuguesas, feitas por Antonio Prestes & por Luis de Camões, etc. (1587; cont. foll. plays of P.: Auto da Ave Maria; Auto da ciosa; Auto do desembargador; Auto do mouro encantado; Auto do procurador; Auto dos cantarinhos; Auto dos dous irmãos); Autos (ed. T. de Noronha, 1871).

T. Braga, Eschola de Gil Vicente (1898); E. Asenio, 'El teatro de A. P.' in Bull. d'Hist. du Théâtre Portugais, V (Lisbon, 1954). T.P.W.

Preston, THOMAS (*Simpson, Bucks 1537; ∞?Alice; †Cambridge 1 VI 1598), English scholar and dramatist, Master of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, who acted with success in Dido before Queen Elizabeth* (1564). His Cambises in rhyming alexandrines and irregular verse has become proverbial for bombastic magniloquence. B.L.J.

A lamentable Tragedie of Cambises, king of Persia (?1570; repr. J. S. Farmer, 1910).

W. A. Armstrong, 'The authorship and political meaning of Cambises' in Eng. Stud., XXXVI (1955); D. M. Bevington, From 'Mankind' to Marlowe (1962). B.L.J. (T.P.M.)

Prévert, JACQUES (*Paris 4 II 1900), French writer. He first became known as a writer of film scenarios, from Drôle de drame to Les enfants du Paradis. The importance of his poems, first published in avant-garde reviews, was not recognized until their publication in book form (Paroles, 1946; sel. tr. L. Ferlinghetti*, 1958). A violently anarchic writer (as in Le dîner de têtes), he also has the simplicity and sentimentality of a people's poet. Strong traces of his earlier surrealist phase still appear in his verse, which is written essentially to be spoken. Kosma's musical settings have increased its popularity.

Histoires (with A. Verdet; 1948); Spectacle (1951); Le grand bal du printemps, La pluie et le bon temps (1955); Histoires (1963); Fatras (1965); Imaginaires (1970).

M. Nadeau, Histoire du surréalisme (1945); J. Queval, J. P. (1955). M.G.; J.P.R.

Prévost, L'ABBÉ ANTOINE FRANÇOIS (*Hesdin, Artois 1 IV 1697; †Chantilly 25 XI 1763), French novelist and man of letters. After a short period first in the Jesuit novitiate, then in the army, Prévost entered the Benedictine Order and was ordained in 1726. He became a fugitive from his Order shortly after the appearance of the first four volumes of Mémoires et aventures in 1728. He was later reconciled with the Church but, though remaining nominally a secular priest, he devoted himself to his career as a writer. His writings are voluminous and in addition to his works of fiction include travel, philosophy and translations of the novels of Samuel Richardson* which he introduced to the French public. Manon Lescaut, which was originally written as part of Mémoires et aventures, is a classic example of the 18th-century novel of feeling. His other novels have suffered from undue neglect and with a single exception none of them has been reprinted in full for over 150 years. Histoire d'une Grecque moderne (1740; 1965) and Mémoires d'un honnête homme (1745) are more mature and in some respects more impressive than Manon.

NOVELS: Mémoires et aventures d'un homme de qualité (1728–31); Manon Lescaut (tr. L. W. Tancock, 1949); Le Philosophe anglais ou Histoire de M. Cleveland (1731–39); Le Doyen de Killerine (1735–40); *Mémoires pour servir à l'histoire de Malte ou Histoire de la jeunesse du Commandeur ****; Campagnes philosophiques ou Mémoires de M. de Montcal (1741).—VARIOUS: Pour et contre (1733–40); Histoire générale des voyages (1746); Le Monde moral (1760–64).—Œuvres choisies (39 vols, 1783–85; 1810–16).

H. Harisse, L'Abbé P., histoire de sa vie et de ses œuvres (1896); V. Schroeder, L'Abbé P., sa vie, ses romans (1898; standard work); A. Le Breton, Le roman au XVIIIe siècle (1898); P. Hazard, Études critiques sur Manon Lescaut (Chicago, 1929); P. Trahard, Les matras de la sensibilité française au XVIIIe siècle (1931); G. Poulet, Études sur le temps humain (Edinburgh, 1949; Paris, 1950); H. Roddier, L'Abbé P. l'homme et l'œuvre (1955); C. E. Engel, Le véritable Abbé P. (1958); M. Turnell, The Art of French Fiction (1959); J. Sgard, P. romancier (best stud. of novelist; 1968); A. Billy, Un singulier bénédictin: l'abbé P. (1969). M.T.

Prévost, JEAN (*Paris 16 VI 1901; †nr Sassenage

1 VII 1944), French writer. Before taking to journalism, Prévost studied at the École Normale, and was a pupil and disciple of Alain*. His production was varied: a working-class novel (Les frères Bouquiquant, 1930), boyhood reminiscences (Dix-huitième année, 1929), essays on sport and politics, literary criticism. All show a quality of intellectual sanity and a lively style. He sacrificed his life in the Resistance movement.

Plaisirs des sports (1925); Rachel (1932); La chasse du matin (1937); Usonie (1939); Apprendre seul (1940); La création chez Stendhal (1942); Caractères (1948); Baudelaire (1953).

L. Parrot, L'intelligence en guerre (1945); A. Maurois, Destins exemplaires (1952).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Prévost, MARCEL (*Paris 1 V 1862; †Vianne, Lot-et-Garonne 1941), French novelist. He was a government engineer before making literature his sole profession. His work is distinguished by the subtlety of the feminine psychology, by a certain sentimental Don-Juanism in male or female characters (Les demi-vierges, 1894) and, particularly after 1900, by moralizing and feminist tendencies.

Le scorpion (1887); Conchette (1888); Mademoiselle Jauffre (1889); Cousine Laura (1890); Lettres de femmes (1892); L'automne d'une femme (1893); Les vierges fortes (1900); Les lettres à Françoise (1902); Lettres à Françoise mariée (1908); L'homme vierge (1930); Mort des ormeaux (1938).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Prežihov, VORANC, pseud. of LOVRO KUHAJ (*Kotlje nr Guštanj in Carinthia 10 VIII 1893; †Maribor 18 II 1950), Slovene novelist. A former workman, soldier, prisoner of war and Communist propagandist, as a writer he depicted with a revolting realism, tending towards naturalism and the grotesque, the experiences of Carinthian peasants and labourers on the Austro-Italian battlefield (Doberdob, 1940), at the downfall of Austria (Požganica, 1939), during the economic crisis which followed the First World War (Samorastniki, 'The Wild Ones', 1940; Jamnica, 1945) and in the fight for national freedom (Naši mejniki, 'Our Boundary Stones', 1946).

Zbrano delo (coll. works; 8 vols, 1962–69; incomplete).—TRANSLATIONS: 'Les sauvagesons' in Conteurs slovènes contemporains (1965); 'L'amour dans les labours' (Ljubezen na odoru) in Nouvelles slovènes (1969).

P. zbornik (1957).

A.S. (tr. H.Le.)

Prezzolini, GIUSEPPE (*Perugia 27 I 1882), Italian critic and journalist. As a young man Prezzolini was associated with Papini*, with whom he founded the reviews Leonardo (1903–07) and La Voce, which he edited from 1908 until 1914. His more recent books are valuable for the light they shed on the literary scene of that time. He has also edited a useful Repertorio bibliografico della storia e della critica della lett. ital. 1902-1942 (4 vols, 1930-48).

Benedetto Croce (1909); Amici (1922); Come gli Americani scoprono l'Italia (1933); L'italiano inutile (1954; best ed. 1964); Il tempo della Voce (1960); G. Papini, G. P. Storia di un'amicizia (2 vols, 1966-68).
B.M.

Price, RICHARD (*Tynton, Glam 23 II 1723; ∞1757 Sarah Blundell; †London 19 IV 1791), Welsh nonconformist minister whose varied writings have left their mark on intuitionist ethics, the theory of life assurance and political philosophy.

Review of Principle Questions and Difficulties in Morals (1757); Observations on Reversionary Payments (1771); Appeal to the Public on the ... National Debt (1772); Introduction ... to Two Tracts on Civil Liberty and the War in America (1778).

W. Morgan, Life of R. P. (1815); Miss Williams, A Welsh Family (1893); R. Thomas, R. P. (1924; with biblio.); C. B. Cone, Torchbearer of Freedom: The Influence of R. P. on 18th Century Thought (1952); L. Agvist, The Moral Philosophy of R. P. (1960); W. D. Hudson, Reason and Right: A Critical Examination of R. P.'s Moral Philosophy (1970); H. Laboucheix, R. P. théoricien de la Révolution américaine (1970). R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Price, SIR UVEDALE (*Foxley, Herefordshire 1747; ∞1774 Lady Caroline Carpenter; †ibid. 14 IX 1829), English writer on the picturesque who laid out the grounds of Foxley in accordance with his theories of 'natural beauty' in landscape gardening.
R.M.H.

An Essay on the Picturesque (2 vols, 1794-98); Dialogue on the Distinct Characters of the Picturesque and the Beautiful (1801); Sir Uvedale Price on the Picturesque ... with sixty illustrations by Montague Stanley, R.S.A. (1842).

H. Repton, Letter to U. P. Esq. (1794).

R.M.H. (M.Bu.)

Prichard, KATHARINE SUSANNAH (*Fiji 1884), Australian novelist. Her mature work is represented at its best by Working Bullocks (1926), a story of the southern timber country, and Coonardoo (1929), set in the arid north-west. Her trilogy of discovery and development of the gold-fields—The Roaring Nineties (1946), Golden Miles (1948), Winged Seeds (1950)—is over-weighted with tendentious political matter.
F.T.M.

N'Goola, and Other Stories (1959); Child of the Hurricane (autobiog.; 1963).

H. Drake-Brockman, K. S. P. (1967).

A.M.G.

Pridvorov, E. A.: see Bedny, DEMYAN.

Priestley, JOHN BOYNTON (*Bradford 13 IX 1894; ∞1921 Pat Tempest, ∞1926 Mary Wyndham Lewis, née Holland [o/o1952], ∞1953 Mrs Jacquetta Hawkes), English novelist, playwright, essayist and broadcaster. No contemporary novelist has more successfully identified himself with the moods and thoughts of the common Englishman, whom he describes bluntly, cheerfully and with gusto. He has mastered the technique of the stage and made it a platform for popular philosophy.

NOVELS: Benighted (1927); The Good Companions (1929); Angel Pavement (1930); Daylight on Saturday (1943); Bright Day (1946); Festival at Farbridge (1951); Lost Empires (1965); It's an Old Country (1967); The Image Men, I: Out of Town, II: London End (1968).—PLAYS: Dangerous Corner (1932); Laburnum Grove (1934); Time and the Conways (1937); I Have Been Here Before (1937); Johnson Over Jordan (1939); An Inspector Calls (1947); The Linden Tree (1948).—PROSE: English Journey (1934); Journey Down a Rainbow (with Jacquetta Hawkes; 1955); Literature and Western Man (1960); The Prince of Pleasure and His Regency (1969); The Edwardians (1970).—ESSAYS: Five Decades (1969).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: Midnight on the Desert (1937); Rain Upon Godshill (1939); Margin Released (1962).

D. Hughes, J. B. P.: An Informal Study (1958); G. L. Evans, J. B. P., the Dramatist (1964); S. Cooper, J. B. P.: Portrait of an Author (1970).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Priestley, JOSEPH (*Fieldhead, Birstall, West Riding 13 III 1733; ∞1762 Mary Wilkinson; †Northumberland, Pa. 6 II 1804), English Presbyterian minister, theologian and educationalist; a scientist of some importance in the fields of electricity and chemistry.

The History and Present State of Electricity (1767); The History and Present State of Discoveries relating to Vision, Light and Colours (1772); Experiments and Observations on Air (3 vols, 1776-86).—An Essay on the First Principles of Government (1768); A Free Address to Protestant Dissenters as such (1769); Miscellaneous observations relating to education and An Essay on a Course of Liberal Education (1778); A Free Discussion on the Doctrines of Different Kinds of Materialism (1778); Memoirs to 1795 (contin. by his son; 1807).—Selections From P.'s Writings (ed. I. V. Brown, 1962); another sel. (ed. J. Passmore, 1965); A Scientific Autobiography of J. P.: Selected Scientific Correspondence (ed. R. E. Schofield, 1967).

J. G. Gilliam, The Crucible: The Story of J. P. (1954); R. E. Schofield, The Lunar Society of Birmingham (1963); F. W. Gibbs, J. P. (1965); R. E. Crook, Bibliography of J. P. (1966).

B.H. (M.Bu.)

Prince, FRANK TEMPLETON (*Kimberley 13 IX 1912), South African poet and critic. He left South Africa in 1946, after war service, and has since taught English at Southampton University. His work, among the most accomplished of recent poetry, frequently has a South African setting.

VERSE: Poems (1938); Soldiers Bathing (1954); The Doors of Stone (1963); Memoirs of Oxford (1970).—The Italian Element in Milton's Verse (crit.; 1954). U.La.

Pringle, THOMAS (*Blaklaw 5 I 1789; ∞1817 Margaret Brown; †London 5 XII 1834), Scottish and South African poet. Pringle, the son of a Roxburghshire farmer, entered the Register Office, Edinburgh, in 1811 as a copyist. He devoted his leisure to writing and won the friendship of Sir Walter Scott*. In 1820 he emigrated to South Africa where his journalistic activities brought him into conflict with the governor of the Cape, Lord Charles Somerset. In 1826 he returned to England and became secretary of the Anti-Slavery Society. Although Pringle had written verse in Scotland, he is remembered as a South African poet. His poems describe the South African scene and the impact of Europeans on the older inhabitants of the country. He was the pioneer in exploiting the local scene and vocabulary for the purpose of poetry.

The Autumnal Excursion (1819); Ephemerides (1828); African Sketches (1834).—The Poetical Works of T. P. (ed. Leith Ritchie, 1837); Afar in the Desert: and other South African poems (ed. J. Noble, 1881).

W. Hay, T. P. (1912).

E.R.S.

Prior, MATTHEW (*Wimborne or Westminster 21 VII 1664; †Wimpole 18 IX 1721), English poet and diplomat who, after an active career, retired in 1717 to Down Hall, the gift of his patron Harley and immortalized in his verse.

The Hind and the Panther Transvers'd (1687); Poems on Several Occasions (1709); A Second Collection of Poems on Several Occasions (1716); Dialogues of the Dead, and other Works in Prose and Verse (ed. A. R. Waller, 1907).—Literary Works (ed. H. B. Wright and M. K. Spears, 2 vols, 1959).

F. Bickley, Life of M. P. (1914) and M. P.: A Study of His Public Career and Correspondence (1921); K. Eves, M. P. Poet and Diplomatist (1939).—The P. Papers (corresp. 1685–1721) in Calendar of the MSS of Marquis of Bath, III (1904); G. A. Aitken, 'Notes on the biblio. of M. P.' in Trans. Biblio. Soc. (1915–17).

R.M.H. (H.N.D.)

Priorat, JEAN (fl. second half 13th century), French poet of Besançon. His Abrejeance de l'ordre de chevalerie (?1290) is an adaptation of Jean* de Meung's prose translation of the De re militari by Vegetius*.

Li Abrejeance de l'Ordre de Chevalerie (ed. U. Robert, 1897). A.H.D.

Priscian (PRISCIANUS CAESARIENSIS) (fl. Constantinople c. 500), Roman grammarian. His comprehensive work on Latin grammar in 18 books, drawing upon a much wider literature than now survives, was a standard textbook in the Middle Ages. Sixteen books are devoted to the parts of speech, and two to syntax. Priscian's shorter works, particularly the Institutio de nomine et pronomine et verbo, were long used as the schoolboy's introduction to Latin grammar.

Ed. H. Keil, Grammatici Latini, II–III (1855–1923).—L. Jeep, Zur Geschichte der Lehre von den Redetheilen (1893). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Priscus (*Panium, Thrace; fl. mid-5th century A.D.), Greek historian. He took part in the East Roman embassy to Attila's court in 449 and later visited Egypt and Rome on official business. Of his lucid and lively history of his own time, the 'Byzantine History' in eight books, only excerpts survive.

C. Müller, Fragmenta historicorum Graecorum (1885); tr. in J. B. Bury, History of the Later Roman Empire, I (2nd ed. 1923).

E. A. Thompson, A History of Attila and the Huns (1948); H. Homeyer, Attila der Hunnenkönig von seinen Zeitgenossen dargestellt (1951).

R.B.

Prishvin, MIKHAIL MIKHAILOVICH (*1873; †1954), Russian author of sketches and narratives dealing with nature and specially with animals, for which he has an amazing understanding. A lyrical philosopher in his narratives, he is a seeker of beauty and social good. Many of his pages have a flavour of Russian folk-lore reminiscent of Remizov*.

Karymushka (1924); Kashcheyeva tsep' (1927); Kladovaya solntsa (1945); Sobranie sochineniy (6 vols, 1927–31); Izbrannoye (1948); Moi tetradki (1948).—Jen Sheng: the Root of Life (tr. G. Walton and T. Gibbons, 1936); The Blue Hare (tr. D. C. Moore, 1945); The Black Arab, and Other Stories (tr. D. Magarshack, 1947).

A. I. Khailov, M. P. (1960); G. A. Ershov, M. P. (1963). J.L.

Pritchett, VICTOR SAWDON (*Ipswich 16 XII 1900; ∞Dorothy Roberts), English novelist and critic. As a novelist he has great power in bringing to life odd and normal lower middle-class characters through description and dialogue which are comic yet not lacking in subtlety or significance. He has written effective and beautifully designed short stories.

NOVELS: Nothing Like Leather (1935); Dead Man Leading (1937); Mr Beluncle (1951).—Collected Stories (1956).—CRITICISM: In My Good Books (1942); The Living Novel (1946); Books in General (1953); The Working Novelist (1965); George Meredith and English Comedy (1970).—AUTOBIOGRAPHY: A Cab at the Door (1968); Midnight Oil (1971).

R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Prličev, GRIGOR: see Purlichev, GRIGOR.

Probus, VALERIUS (fl. c. A.D. 60), Roman grammarian. No genuine works survive, but he is quoted as an authority by Aulus Gellius*, Servius* and others.
J.A.W.

J. Steup, De Probis grammaticis (1871); J. Aistermann, De M. Valerio Probo Berytio (1910); N. Scivoletto, 'La "filologia" di Valerio Probo di Berito' in Giornale ital. di filol., XII (1959).
J.A.W. (J.D.)

Proclus (*Lycia 412; †Athens 485), Greek Neo-Platonist philosopher. After studying rhetoric and philosophy in Alexandria and Byzantium, he moved to Athens, where eventually he succeeded Syrianus as head of the Neo-Platonist school. In his numerous writings he continued the tradition of reinterpretation of Plotinus* and Plato*; he set up an elaborate and rigid metaphysical hierarchy, with the Absolute One at the head, and substituted theurgy for the mysticism of Plotinus. He had considerable influence on the Byzantine world.

Ad Hesiodi Opera et dies (ed. T. Gaisford in Poetae Graeci minores, III, 1814–20); Chrestomathia (ed. T. W. Allen in the Oxford Homer, V, 1911); Commentary on Euclid (ed. M. Steck, 1945); De causis (ed. E. Orth, with Marinus' Life of P., 1938); Elements of Theology (ed. with tr. E. R. Dodds, 1933; 2nd ed. 1963); Hymni (ed. E. Abel in Orphica, 1885); Hypotyposis astronomicarum positionum (ed. C. Manitius, 1909); In Platonis Alcibiadem (ed. F. Creuzer, 1820); In Platonis Cratylum commentarii (ed. G. Pasquali, 1908); In Platonis Parmenidem commentarii (ed. G. Stallbaum, 1840); In Platonis Rempublicam commentarii (ed. W. Kroll, 2 vols, 1899–1901); In Platonis Timaeum commentarii (ed. E. Diehl, 3 vols, 1903–06); Institutio physica (ed. A. Ritzenfeld, 1912).

J. Lindsay, 'Le système de P.' in Rev. métaphys. et morale, XXVIII (1921); T. Whittaker, The Neoplatonists (2nd ed. 1928); E. R. Dodds, 'Theurgy and its relation to Neoplatonism' in Jour. Roman Stud. (1947); L. J. Rosan, The Philosophy of P. (1949).
D.J.F.

Procopé, HJALMAR FREDRIK (*Helsingfors 28 IV 1868; †Borgå 24 IX 1927), Finnish-Swedish author, the first inhabitant of the 'Poet's Home' (Diktarhusmettet) at Borgå (from 1921 till his death). His early poetry reflects the influence of Heine* and Fröding*; after 1908 he becomes more pessimistically resigned in tone in his personal lyrics, but he also wrote patriotic poetry.

VERSE: Dikter (1900); Mot öknens (1905); Röda

skyar (1907); I sanden (1915); Osamse strängar (1920); Diktarhusmettet (1924); Eget och andras (1927; posth.).—Samlade dikter (6 vols, 1920); Dikter i urval (1913); Dikter i nytt urval (1923).—PLAYS: Belsazars gästabud (1905); Fädrens anda (1909); Inspektorn på Siltala (1915); Medaljongen (1922).

W. Söderhjelm, Utklipp om böcker, III (1920); J. Landquist, Modern svensk litteratur i Finland (1929).
B.M.E.M.

Procopius (*Caesarea, Palestine), 6th-century Byzantine historian. He accompanied Belisarius as secretary on his campaigns in Justinian I's reign. Later he lived in Constantinople and may have been Prefect of the city 562–563. He wrote a history of the wars against the Persians, Vandals and Goths and the De aedificiis, an account of Justinian's building activity throughout the empire (fortifications, civic and ecclesiastical buildings including S. Sophia). It is now generally agreed that Procopius also wrote the famous 'Secret History' (Historia arcana) in which Justinian and Theodora are libellously attacked. Procopius' writings are a valuable source for the military, political and social history of the 6th century and also contain much information of a geographical and ethnographical nature.
J.M.H.

Opera omnia (crit. ed. J. Haury, 3 vols, 1906; ed. H. B. Dewing, with tr., 7 vols, 1914–39; tr. A. Cameron, 1967).

E. Stein, Histoire du bas-empire, II (1949); P. N. Ure, Justinian and His Age (1951); B. Rubin, Prokopios von Kaisareia (1954); G. Moravcsik, Byzantinoturcica (2nd ed. 1958); J. A. S. Evans, P. (1972).
J.M.H. (R.B.)

Procter, ADELAIDE ANN (*London 30 X 1825; †ibid. 2 II 1864), English poet, daughter of the following, contributor to Dickens'* periodicals and writer of hymns.

Legends and Lyrics (1858; with memoir C. Dickens, 1866); A Chaplet of Verses (1862); The Lost Chord (1892); The Message (1892).—Complete Works (1905).

F. Janku, A. A. P., ihr Leben und ihre Werke (1912).
R.M.H.

Procter, BRYAN WALLER, used pseud. BARRY CORNWALL (*Leeds 21 XI 1787; ∞1824 Miss Skepper; †London 5 X 1874), English writer, remembered rather for his associations with Lamb*, Hazlitt*, Beddoes* and others than for his facile poems and imitative plays.

The Poetical Works of Barry Cornwall (3 vols, 1822).—The Life of Edmund Kean (2 vols, 1835); Charles Lamb: a Memoir (1866); Bryan Waller Procter. An Autobiographical Fragment (ed. C. Patmore, 1877).

R. W. Armour, Barry Cornwall: a Biography of

B. W. P.; With a Selection of Hitherto Unpublished Letters (1935). B.H. (K.W.)

Prodicus of Ceos (fl. late 5th century B.C.), Greek sophist. Like other sophists, he travelled about Greece and exacted fees for his tuition. His speciality was the study of language.

H. Diels, Die Fragmente der Vorsokratiker, II (6th ed. 1952; frags tr. K. Freeman, Ancilla to the Pre-Socratic Philosophers, 1948).

W. Jaeger, Paideia (1939); K. Freeman, Companion to the Pre-Socratic Philosophers (1946); W. K. C. Guthrie, A History of Greek Philosophy, III (1970). D.J.F.

Prodromus: see Theodore Prodromus.

Prokofyev, ALEXANDER ANDREYEVICH (*nr Leningrad 1900; †Leningrad IX 1971), Soviet poet of peasant origin. His early propaganda poems (influenced by Mayakovsky*) are often crude, but his later verses about country life show genuine talent. His patriotic poem Rossiya (1944) won the Stalin prize.

Prostor (1945); Stikhotvoreniya (1947); Priglasenie k puteshestviyu (1960).

V. Bakhtin, A. P. (1963). J.L.

Prokopovich, FEOFAN, Archbishop of Novgorod (*1681; †1736), one of the most energetic helpers of Peter* the Great and a prolific writer on religious and political themes. Among his strictly literary products is a school-drama, Vladimir (1705).

I. A. Chistovich, F. P. i ego vremya (1868); Y. Hordin'sky, 'Vladimir' T. Prokopovicha (1920).

J.L.

Prokosch, FREDERIC (*Madison, Wisc. 17 V 1908), American poet and novelist. His novels, with the recurring theme of impending disaster and disintegration of society, show the effect of world crisis in the destruction of values.

NOVELS: The Asiatics (1935); The Seven Who Fled (1937); Night of the Poor (1939); The Skies of Europe (1941); The Seven Sisters (1963); The Wreck of the Cassandra (1966); The Missolonghi Manuscripts (1967).—VERSE: The Carnival (1938); Death at Sea (1940). H.L.C. (G.A.K.)

Propertius, SEXTUS (*Assisi c. 54/50; †c. 16 B.C.), Latin poet, little of whose life is known. His father, an eques, died while Propertius was still young, and like Virgil* he suffered in the confiscations of estates in 40. The first of his four books of elegies (the second is divided by some editors into two, making a total of five) was published in 26, and brought fame and admission to the circle of Maecenas, though not on the same terms of intimacy as Horace*, with whom Propertius seems to have shared a mutual dislike, or Virgil, whose Aeneid he praised in advance of its publication.

The subject of two-thirds of his elegies is his liaison with 'Cynthia', traditionally identified as Hostia. The course of his love, which lasted for some five or six years, began smoothly; later, however, came a year's separation, mutual infidelity, quarrels and final renunciation.

Fervent but self-centred, Propertius shows in his love-poems the many moods of his passion, especially the melancholy. His other poems, above all those on the antiquarian and national themes to which he turned more wholeheartedly in his later years (Book 4), show, in form, obscurity and learned mythological allusions, the strong influence of the Alexandrine poets, especially Callimachus*. Nevertheless, of the Augustan elegiac poets, Propertius is unsurpassed in richness of diction and in the power and variety of his versification.

Sexti Properti carmina (eds with comm.: M. Rothstein, 2nd ed. 1920–24, repr. with addenda, 1966; H. E. Butler and E. A. Barber, 1933, repr. 1964; W. A. Camps, Bks 1–4, 1961–67).

W. Y. Sellar, Horace and the Elegiac Poets (1892); F. Plessis, Études critiques sur Properce (1894); D. R. Shackleton-Bailey, Propertiana (1956; repr. 1967); J. P. Boucher, Études sur P. (1965); G. Luck, The Latin Love Elegy (2nd ed. 1969). A.J.D.

Protagoras (*Abdera c. 485; †Ionian Sea [shipwrecked] c. 415 B.C.), Greek philosopher, the greatest of the sophists. He visited Athens and was a friend of Pericles. Like other sophists, he had practical lessons to teach—the sound administration of domestic and political affairs: in 444 he was appointed by the Athenians to draw up a code of laws for the new colony at Thurii. But he also put forward philosophical theories: there were no absolute standards; the views that in practice governed behaviour in a society were the only arbiters of conduct and were to be respected. He was also an agnostic about the gods. Some of his views are examined and developed by Plato* in Protagoras and Theaetetus.

H. Diels, Die Fragmente der Vorsokratiker, II (6th ed. 1952; Ancilla to the Pre-Socratic Philosophers, tr. K. Freeman, 1948).

W. Jaeger, Paideia, I (1934); J. S. Morrison, 'The place of P. in Athenian public life' in Class. Quart., XXXV (1941); D. Loenen, P. and the Greek Community (1946); K. Freeman, Companion to the Pre-Socratic Philosophers (1946); E. Dupréel, Les Sophistes (1948); T. A. Sinclair, History of Greek Political Thought (1952); G. Vlastos, Plato: P. (1956); W. K. C. Guthrie, A History of Greek Philosophy, III (1970). D.J.F.

Proudhon, PIERRE JOSEPH (*Besançon 15 VII 1809; †Paris 26 I 1865), French sociologist. Proudhon was a working printer who became a député in 1848, and founded a number of socialist newspapers, such as Le Peuple. He was opposed both to capitalism and to state control and developed the theory of a society without duties and without sanctions. His ideas played a part in the 'Commune' (1871) and have influenced many political thinkers either directly or by reaction.

Principes d'organisation politique (1843); Système des contradictions économiques (1846); Philosophie du progrès (1835); Théorie de la propriété (1866).—Œuvres complètes (33 vols, 1868–76).—Correspondance (14 vols, 1875).

C. A. Sainte-Beuve, P., sa vie et sa correspondance (1872); C. Bouglé, La sociologie de P. (1911); E. Dolléans, P. (1948); D. Halévy, La vie de P. (1948) and Le mariage de P. (1955).

M.G.; J.P.R.

Proust, MARCEL (*Auteuil 10 VII 1871; †Paris 22 XI 1922), French novelist. During the 1890s Proust gained, through personal charm and ambitious curiosity, a knowledge of Parisian high society from which his middle-class birth, of a distinguished physician and a wealthy Jewess, would otherwise have excluded him. After 1899 his martyrdom to asthma, the deaths of his father (1903) and mother (1905) and his growing disillusion with humanity caused him to lead an increasingly retired life. From 1907 he inhabited a cork-lined bedroom at 102 Boulevard Haussmann, sleeping by day and working at night, and visiting Cabourg, the Balbec of his novel, every summer from 1907 to 1914. Early sketches for his novel include Jean Santeuil, written 1895–99, and Contre Sainte-Beuve, written 1908–09. He wrote the first draft of the final version from 1909 to 1912, revising it and nearly tripling its length up to the time of his death. The first section (1913) attracted little attention, but the second (1919) won the Prix Goncourt and made him world-famous. Three weeks before his death from pneumonia he had delivered La prisonnière to his publishers, while the remaining two sections, although still awaiting final revision, were substantially complete.

Ostensibly Proust's enormous, semi-autobiographical novel describes the progress of its narrator-hero, through childhood, social life and his unhappy loves for Gilberte and Albertine, to a consciousness of his literary vocation, whereupon he sets to work to write the very novel we have read. But the immanent and major theme is a quest and conquest, by 'unconscious memory', of the eternal values hidden in a temporal world, a Dantesque journey from the paradise lost of a childhood through sin to redemption. Proust projected his own homosexuality upon many of his characters, without impairing his insight into the psychology of women and of men in love with women. His prose-style owes something to Saint-Simon*, Balzac*, Ruskin* and contemporary French Symbolists, but remains unique in its complexity, beauty and efficiency. His place among the few supremely great novelists seems secure.

NOVELS: À la recherche du temps perdu, comprising: Du côté de chez Swann (1913), À l'ombre des jeunes filles en fleurs (1919), Le côté de Guermantes, I (1920), Le côté de Guermantes, II, together with Sodome et Gomorrhe, I (1921), Sodome et Gomorrhe, II (1922), La prisonnière (1923), Albertine disparue (1925), Le temps retrouvé (1927); standard text ed. P. Clarac and A. Ferré in Bibliothèque de la Pléiade (3 vols, 1954); tr. C. K. Scott Moncrieff as Remembrance of Things Past (1922–30; completed by Time Regained, tr. S. Hudson, 1931, tr. A. Mayor, 1970); Jean Santeuil (1952; tr. G. Hopkins, 1955).—SHORT STORIES: Les plaisirs et les jours (1896; tr. L. Varèse, 1948).—TRANSLATIONS FROM RUSKIN: La Bible d'Amiens (1904); Sésame et les lys (1906).—MISCELLANEOUS: Pastiches et mélanges (1919); Chroniques (1927); Contre Sainte-Beuve (1954; tr. S. Townsend Warner, 1958); Textes retrouvés (ed. P. Kolb and L. B. Price, 1968); Pastiches (ed. J. Milly, 1970).—M. P. A Selection From His Miscellaneous Writings (tr. G. Hopkins, 1948).—LETTERS: Correspondance (ed. P. Kolb, 1970 ff.); Correspondance générale (6 vols, 1930–36); Lettres retrouvées (ed. P. Kolb, 1966); Letters (tr. M. Curtiss, 1950); chronol. and index of letters in P. Kolb, Correspondance de M. P. (1949).

BIBLIOGRAPHY: in R. de Chantal, M. P. critique littéraire (1967); in Textes retrouvés (see above).—BIOGRAPHY: A. Maurois, À la recherche de M. P. (1949; tr. G. Hopkins, 1950); G. D. Painter, M. P. (2 vols, 1959–65).—CRITICISM: M. Bibesco, Au bal avec M. P. (1928; tr. 1956); G. Bree, M. P. and Deliverance From Time (1956); H. Moss, The Magic Lantern of M. P. (1962); R. Shattuck, P.'s Binoculars (1963).—P. A. Spalding, Reader's Handbook to P. (1952).—Bull. de la Soc. des amis de M. P. (1950 ff.). G.D.P.

Prout, FATHER: see Mahony, FRANCIS SYLVESTER.

Provincial, COPLAS DEL: see Coplas de I Ay Panaderal

Prudentius, AURELIUS CLEMENS (*Hispania Tarraconensis 348; †Rome c. 410), Christian Latin poet. After an eminent official career, Prudentius dedicated his life to the composition of Christian poetry, of which he became the greatest exponent. His works include hymns, allegories, didactic poems and a martyrology. Inspired by the classical poets, Prudentius expresses new thoughts in old forms and, though his poems are at times marred by a lack of simplicity as well as by mysticism and allegory, they are permeated by a new spirit of fervent religious joy, and written in a picturesque style with a technical skill at least equal to that of his pagan contemporaries.

Opera omnia (ed. J. Bergmann, 1926; tr. H. J. Thomson, 2 vols, 1949–53).

T. R. Glover, Life and Letters in the 4th Century (1901; repr. 1968); F. J. E. Raby, Christian Latin

Poetry (1927; corr. ed. 1953); K. Thraede, Studien zur Sprache und Stil des P. (1965); R. Herzog, Die allegorische Dichtkunst des P. (1966). A.J.D.

Prudhomme, RENÉ FRANÇOIS (or SULLY): see Sully Prudhomme.

Prus, BOLESŁAW, pseud. of ALEKSANDER GŁOWACKI (*Hrubieszów 20 VIII 1845 or 1847; Warsaw 19 V 1912), Polish writer. He was wounded and captured in the insurrection of 1863 but escaped prosecution because of his youth. Hence a certain doubt about the accurate date of his birth: the year 1847 may be a falsification made in order to establish him as a minor in 1863. He abandoned his scientific studies in Warsaw and eventually took up journalism. He was engaged in the cultural and literary debate of his day, generally taking the moderate standpoint, and discussed a wide range of topics in his popular weekly essays (kroniki). His literary career began with small humorous sketches which gradually developed into more ambitious short stories, some of the best in Polish. His main literary achievement is his five novels, the most important being Lalka (2 vols, 1887–89; La poupée, Paris, 1962–64), describing Warsaw of the late 1870s, and Faraon (1895–96; The Pharaoh and the Priest, tr. J. Curtin, 1902), a historical novel set in ancient Egypt. In both these works Prus gives a lively panoramic view of society somewhat akin to the English Victorian novel, while avoiding the over-elaborate description of much French naturalistic prose. Like all his novels, both reveal a deeply pessimistic attitude. They have greatly influenced later Polish literature: Lalka the realistic novel, Faraon the development of the political historical novel as opposed to the historical romance.

SHORT STORIES: Przygoda Stasia (1879); Powracająca fala (1880); Kamizelka (1882; 'The Waistcoat', tr. N. B. Jopson in Slavon. and East Eur. Rev., IX, 1930); Omyłka (1884); Pałac i rudera (1874; Palais und Hütte, tr. K. von Różycki, 1914). —NOVELS: Placówka (1885; 'The Outpost', tr. in Polish Tales, sel. S. C. M. Benecke and M. Busch, 1921); Emancypantki (4 vols, 1891–93); Dzieci (1908). —Pisma (ed. I. Chrzanowski and Z. Szweykowski, 26 vols, 1935–36; new ed. Z. Szweykowski, 1948); Wybór pism (10 vols, 1953); Listy (1959); Kroniki (15 vols, 1956–65); Wybór publicystyki (1957).

Z. Szweykowski, Twórczość B-a P-a (2 vols, 1947; the best book on B. P.), 'Lalka' B. P. (1927) and Nie tylko o Prusie (1967); L. Wiodek, B. P. (1918); J. Krzyżanowski, 'B. P.' in Slavon. and East Eur. Rev., IX (1930); J. Putrament, Struktura nowel B. P. (1936); J. Kott, O 'Lalce' B. P. (1948); H. Markiewicz, Realizm krytyczny w twórczości B. P. (1950) and 'Lalka' B. P. (1967); S. Melkowski, B. P. 1847–1912. Poradnik bibliograficzny (1964). P.H.

Pruszyński, KSAWERY (*Kieriekszyzna 4 XII 1907; †Hahn 13 VI 1950), Polish short-story writer and journalist. A fine reporter from various parts of the world, he fought in the Second World War and published works in English concerned with the Polish question. He is still very popular for his semi-fictional stories concerned with Polish soldiers during the war.

SHORT STORIES: Trzyście opowieści (1946); Opowiadania (1948); Opowieści (1950). —Droga wiodła przez Narwik (novel; London, 1941). —REPORTS: Palestyna po raz trzeci (1933); W czerwonej Hiszpanii (1937); Poland Fights Back (tr. P. Jordan, London, 1941); Polish Invasion (tr. idem, ibid., 1941); Russian Year. The Notebook of an Amateur Diplomat (New York, 1944). —Wybór pism publicystycznych (2 vols, 1966). —VARIOUS: Adam Mickiewicz. The Life Story of the Greatest Polish Poet (London, 1950). P.H.

Prynne, WILLIAM (*Swainswick 1600; †24 X 1669), English Puritan pamphleteer and lawyer. Educated at Bath Grammar School and Oriel College, Oxford, he entered Lincoln's Inn in 1621. An indomitable controversialist, he was twice pilloried and imprisoned by Charles I, having his ears clipped, released by the Long Parliament, and imprisoned by Cromwell; he became Keeper of the Records under Charles II. Of the 200 books and pamphlets he published, the most famous is his attack on the theatre, Histrion-Mastix, The Players Scourge, or, Actors Tragaedie (1633).

Sels from his writings in Somers Tracts, IV–VI (ed. W. Scott, 1810–11) and The Puritan Revolution (ed. S. E. Prall, 1968).

S. R. Gardiner, Documents relating to the Proceedings against W. P. in 1634 and 1637 (Camden Soc., 1877); E. N. S. Thompson, The Controversy Between the Puritans and the Stage (1903); E. W. Kirby, W. P.: A Study in Puritanism (1931); J. W. Allen, English Political Thought 1603–1660, I (1938); G. B. Hurst in Lincoln's Inn Essays (1949); J. G. A. Pocock, The Ancient Constitution and the Feudal Law: A Study of English Historical Thought in the 17th Century (1957); W. M. Lamont, Marginal P. 1600–1669 (1963). R.M.W.

Prys, EDMUND (*1544; ∞Elizabeth John, ∞Gwen ferch Morgan; †Maentwrog, Merioneth 1623), Welsh poet and scholar. A Fellow of St John's College, Cambridge, he became vicar of Maentwrog and Ffestiniog and Archdeacon of Merioneth. William Morgan* acknowledges his assistance in the translation of the Bible. Moreover he was an accomplished poet in both bardic and song metres and his scholarly command of the language gives distinction to his verse translation of the Psalms. In a prolonged flying match he champions the New Learning in opposition to the traditional lore of the bards.

Llyfr y Psalman... ar fesyr cerdd (1621); Barddoniaeth E. P. (ed. T. R. Roberts, 1899).

A. O. Evans, 'E. P.' in Trans. Hon. Soc. Cymmrodorion (1922-23); J. Morris-Jones, 'E. P.' in Y Geninen, XLI (1923); T. Gwynn Jones, 'E. P.' in Y Llenor, II, III (1923-24). B.Re.

Przesmycki, ZENON, pseud. MIRIAM (*Radzyń 22 XII 1861; †Warsaw 17 X 1944), Polish author. From 1899-1900 he lived mainly in Vienna and Paris, and was for 20 years Minister of culture and art; in 1933 he became a member of the Polish Academy of Literature. By his introduction to the translation of Maeterlinck's* plays (1891) and articles in his model periodical Chimera (1901-07) he introduced Symbolism into Polish literature, and by his discoveries and editions of C. Norwid's* works established his position in Polish literature.

VERSE: Z czary młodości. Liryczny pamiętnik duszy (1893).—TRANSLATIONS: Wybrane pisma dramatyczne Maeterlincka (1894); U poetów (1921).—VARIOUS: Pro arte (1917; in prose).

M. Kridl, 'Miriam jako wydawca' in Krytyka i krytycy (1923); Z. Dębicki, 'Z. P.' in Portrety, I (1927); M. Szurek-Wiski, Miriam tłumacz (1937). S.S. (P.H.)

Przyboś, JULIAN (*Gwóźdnica 5 III 1901; †Warsaw 6 X 1970), Polish poet and literary critic. A representative of the Cracow avant-garde in the 1920s, his poetry expresses his generation's fascination with machines and city life. His later work proclaims his political socialist convictions although he never abandons his basic experimental and avant-garde attitude to poetry: thus he did not conform to the dogmas of social realism. His precise, economical manner of writing has had a great impact on modern Polish poetry.

POETRY: Śruby (1925); Oburącz (1926); W głąb las (1932); Równanie serca (1938); Narzędzie ze światła (1958); Próba całości (1961); Na znak (1965); Kwiat nieznany (1968).—Liryki 1930-1964 (1966).—Gedichte (tr. K. Dedecius, Munich, 1963).—LITERARY CRITICISM: Czytając Mickiewicza (1950); Linia i gwar (2 vols, 1959); Sens poetycki (1963).

J. Stawiński, Koncepcja języka poetyckiego awangardy krakowskiej (1965). P.H.

Przybyszewski, STANISŁAW (*Łojewo 7 V 1868; †Jaronty 23 XI 1927), Polish writer. As a young man in Berlin, he established himself as a writer in German. In 1898 he appeared in Cracow and became leader of the generation of Polish modernists (early Expressionists). After a few tempestuous years his fame as well as the quality of his prolific literary output faded, and he died a forgotten man. Although he is again arousing some interest, the intrinsic literary quality of his work seems insignificant; but he vociferously expresses the mood of his generation, and profoundly influenced many of his contemporaries, German as well as Polish. His best work was written in his youth in German and translated by himself. His theory of the naked soul—subconscious urges, revealed above all in the sexual instincts—did not lead to any deep revelations of human nature, but seemed rather to offer an excuse for his unmitigated brutal exhibitionism. He wrote novels and plays, but his most lasting work is his prose poem and his memoirs. P.H.

NOVELS: Satanskinder (1897); Homo Sapiens (3 vols, 1898; in Ger.; Eng. tr. Th. Seltzer, 1915); Synowie ziemi (1904; Erdensöhne, 1905); Mocny człowiek (3 vols, 1912-13); Krzyk (1917; Der Schrei, 1918).—PLAYS: Das grosse Glück (1900; For Happiness, 1912); Taniec miłości i śmierci (2 vols, 1901; Totentanz der Liebe, 1902); Śnieg (1903; The Snow, tr. O. F. Theis, 1920); Gelübde (1906); Gody życia (1910).—VARIOUS: Totenmesse (1893); De profundis (1896); In diesem Erdenthal der Tränen (1900); Vigilien (1894); Androgyne (1900; in Ger. 1906); Moi współcześni (2 vols, 1926-30).—CORRESPONDENCE: Listy (ed. with intro. S. Helsztyński, 1937).

A. Möller Bruch, 'S. P.' in Die moderne Literatur (1902); M. Krzymuska, 'S. P., jego poezja i filozofia' in Studia literackie (1903); E. Boyé, 'Estetyka P.' in U kolebki modernizmu (1922); J. Krzyżanowski, 'S. P.' in Slavon. and East Eur. Rev., VI (1927); Z. L. Zaleski, 'S. P.' in Attitudes et destinées (1932); J. Szczygielska, P. jako dramaturg (1936); M. Herman, Un sataniste polonais, S. P. (1939); S. Helsztyński, P. (1958). S.S. (P.H.)

Psalmazar, GEORGE: see FORGERIES, LITERARY.

Psellus: see Michael Psellus.

Pseudo-: see under second half of name.

Psichari, ERNEST (*Paris 27 IX 1883; †Rossignol 22 VIII 1914), French essayist. Son of Jean Psichari [Psycharis*] and grandson of Renan*, he was agnostic until active service as an officer in Africa made him question the meaning of life. In 1913 he became a Roman Catholic. He succeeded in reconciling religious demands with his military obligations and was killed at the beginning of the First World War. Le voyage du centurion (posth., 1916; A Soldier's Pilgrimage, tr. M. Walker and M. H. M. Capes, 1917), still exerts great influence on French young people of Christian and nationalist persuasion.

Terres de soleil et de sommeil (1908); L'appel des armes (1913).

H. Psichari, E. P. mon frère (1933); Wallace Fowle, E. P. (1939); R. Maritain, 'E. P.' in Commonweal, XLII (1945) and Les grandes amitiés (1948); A. M. Gotichon, E. P. d'après des documents inédits (1953). M.G.

Psycharis, YIANNIS, or JEAN PSICHARI (*Odessa 3 V 1854; ∞1882 Naomi Renan, ∞1912 Irène Baume; †Paris 1929), Greek man of letters. Psycharis played an important part in the contest between the linguistic 'purists' and the 'demotists'. A strong supporter of the demotic, he wrote several philological works to prove that it is the legitimate descendant of the ancient tongue. In spite of the fact that his own use of the demotic is pedantic to a degree (he lived almost the whole of his life in Paris), his epoch-making book To taxidi mou (1888) was a landmark in the victory of his cause, and greatly contributed to establishing the demotic as the proper language of the modern Greek novel.

Toneiro tou Gianniri (1897); Yia to Romailko teatro (plays; 1901); Roda kai mela (5 vols, 1902–09); Zoi kai agapi sti monaxia (1904); Ta dio aderfia (1910–11); Ston iskio tou platanou (1911); Agni (1912–13).—Full biblio. of P.'s works: G. M. Valetas in Megali Elliniki Enkyklopaideia, XXIV (1934).

K. Phlores, O P. kai to ergo tou (1916); A. Mirambel, 'La doctrine linguistique de J. P.' in Nouvelle Clio, III (1951). R.J.H.J. (P.O.A.S.)

Ptochoprodromus: see Theodore Prodromus.

Ptolemy (PTOLEMAEUS) OF ALEXANDRIA (fl. 2nd century A.D.), Greek mathematician and astronomer. His Syntaxis (called the Great Collection or the Almagest) summed up Greek astronomy and became a standard textbook; the Ptolemaic system, based chiefly on Hipparchus*, was not overthrown until the time of Copernicus*. Ptolemy made some astronomical contributions of his own, and also wrote an important work on geography.

Syntaxis mathematica, Opera astronomica minora (ed. J. L. Heiberg, 2 vols, 1898–1907); Geographia (ed. P. J. Fischer, 3 vols, 1932); Harmonica (ed. I. Düring, 1930).

Sir T. Heath, A History of Greek Mathematics, II (1921). D.J.F.

P'u SUNG-LING (□Tzū-ch'uan 5 VI 1640; †ibid. 25 II 1715), Chinese short-story writer, spent most of his life in private secretarial posts. He was relatively unknown in his lifetime, although his stories were commended by Wang* Shih-chên. They circulated in manuscript until 1766 when Liao-chai chih-i (containing 431 stories) was printed. It enjoyed great popularity and was very many times reprinted. The stories are generally moral in object and written in a terse, allusive style, much imitated by 19th-century short-story writers. In 1931 Hu* Shih ascribed to P'u the authorship of the pseudonymous vernacular novel, Hsing-shih yin-yüan chuan (earliest known ed. 1870), a story of a shrewish wife. This aroused a new interest in P'u.

SHORT STORIES: Liao-chai chih-i (1766; partial trs: H. A. Giles, Strange Stories From a Chinese Studio, 1880 [most extensive]; E. Schmitt, Seltsame Geschichten aus dem Liao-chai, 1924; R. Quong, Chinese Ghost and Love Stories, 1946); Liao-chai chih-i wei-k'an kao ('MSS Not Printed in the Liao-chai chih-i'); 1936).—Liao-chai ch'üan-chi (coll. essays and verse; 1936).

J. Průšek, 'Liao-chai chih-i by P'u Sung-ling' in Studia Serica Bernhard Karlgren Dedicata (Copenhagen, 1959). A.R.D.

Publilius Syrus (*?Antioch 1st century B.C.), Syrian slave who won fame in Roman theatre both as a mime-actor and as a writer of scripts. A collection of single-verse aphorisms was made from these scripts early in the Empire and survives in a heavily interpolated form. The Middle Ages found his moralizing wit attractive.

O. Ribbeck, Comicorum Romanorum fragmenta (3rd ed. 1898); W. Meyer, Publ. Syri sententiae (1880); O. Friedrich, Publilii Syri mimi sententiae (1880).—Aphorisms tr. J. Wight Duff and A. M. Duff in Minor Latin Poets (1935).

O. Skutsch, 'P. S.' in A. Pauly, G. Wissowa et al., Real-Encyclopädie der classischen Altertumswissenschaft, XXIII.2, 1920 ff. (1959). H.D.J.

Pucci, ANTONIO (*Florence c. 1310; †ibid. 1388), Italian poet. Pucci wrote a brilliantly descriptive poem exalting the beauty of the Mercato Vecchio and a moralistic work, Le Noie. He versified Villani's* Cronica (Centiloquio) and recorded the war with Pisa (1362–64). He is famed for his colourful cantari, popular improvisatory works in ottava rima narrating chivalric tales in a fabulous or Arthurian setting.

Le Noie (ed. K. Mackenzie, 1931; repr. 1965); Delizie degli eruditi toscani, III–VI (ed. I. di San Luigi, 1772–75); Fiore di leggende, cantari antichi, ser. 1 (ed. E. Levi, 1914); Poeti minori del Trecento (ed. N. Sapegno, 1952); Poesia del Duecento e del Trecento (ed. C. Muscetta and P. Rivalta, 1956).

E. C. Gardner, The Arthurian Legend in Italian Literature (1930); N. Sapegno, Il Trecento (1945; with biblio.) and Pagine di storia letteraria (1960). M.W.

Puchmajer, ANTONÍN JAROSLAV (*Týn nad Vltavou 7 I 1769; †Prague 29 IX 1820), Czech poet. A Roman Catholic priest, Puchmajer turned to Czech and Slavonic studies under the influence of Dobrovský*. Following French, German and Polish models, he and his literary associates wrote anacreontic and didactic poetry which appeared in Puchmajer's almanachs (1795–1814). These collections of poems played an important part in the revival of Czech literature.

Sebrané básně (ed. J. Ježek, 1881); Povy Almanachy (ed. J. Vlček, 4 vols, 1917–21).

J. Máchal, J. A. P. (1895). R.A.

Pückler-Muskau, HERMANN LUDWIG HEINRICH, FÜRST VON (*Muskau 30 X 1785; ∞1817 Reichsgräfin Pappenheim [o/o]1826; †Cottbus 4 XI 1871), German writer, landscape-gardener and dandy. The success of his travel books, dilettante offshoots of Young Germany, was largely a tribute to his personality and position. He was satirized by Immermann* in Münchhausen. H.A.P.

Gedichte (1811); Briefe eines Verstorbenen (4 vols, 1830–32; Tour in Germany, Holland and England 1826–28, tr. Mrs Austin, 1832); Andeutungen über Landschaftsgärtnerei (1834); Tutti Frutti (5 vols, 1834; Eng. tr. E. Spencer, 1839); Jugendwanderungen (1835); Semilasso in Africa (5 vols, 1836; Eng. tr. 1837); Aus Mehmed Alis Reich (3 vols, 1844); Briefwechsel und Tagebücher (ed. L. Assing, 9 vols, 1873–76); Frauenbriefe von und an P.-M. (ed. H. Conrad, 1912).

L. Assing, Fürst H. von P.-M. (2 vols, 1873–74); A. Ehrhard, Le prince de P.-M. (1928; Ger. tr. 1935); E. M. Butler, The Tempestuous Prince (1929). H.A.P. (K.W.M.)

Puig i Ferrer, JOAN (*La Selva del Camp 1882; †Paris 1956), Catalan playwright and novelist. He began by writing plays influenced by Ibsen* and Gorky*. After a long period of inactivity, he resumed his literary career as a novelist, following Naturalist techniques. In exile in Paris he wrote finally an ambitious 'roman à clef' in 12 volumes, El pelegrí apassionat (1953–62), a passionate critical vision of his epoch and an attempt at self-justification.

THEATRE: La dama enamorada (1908); El gran Aleix (1912).—NOVELS: El cercle màgic (1929); Vida interior d'un escriptor (1928). J.L.M.

Pujmanová, MARIE, formerly ZATKOVÁ, née HENNEROVÁ (*Prague 8 VI 1893; †ibid. 19 V 1958), Czech author, one of the most successful of the novelists who interpreted the development of Czech society after 1918 from the Marxist point of view.

TRILOGY: Lidé na křižovatce (1937); Hra s ohněm (1948); Život proti smrti (1952).—M. Blahynka, M. P. (1961). R.A.

Pulci, BERNARDO (*Florence 8 X 1438; †ibid. 9 II 1488), Italian poet, and brother of Luigi. Author of religious poems and unpublished lyrics; his most successful work is Barlaam e Josafat, a sacred play.

A. D'Ancona, Sacre rappresentazioni, II (1872). F. Flamini, 'La vita e le liriche di B. P.' in Propugnatore, new ser., I (1888); F. Agno, 'Tre studi quattrecenteschi' in Studi di filol. ital., XX (1962). P.McN.

Pulci, LUCA (*Mugello 3 XII 1431; †Florence 29 IV 1470), Italian poet and banker who died in the bankrupts' prison. His Driadeo d'amore, which some attribute to his brother Luigi, recounts the origin of rivers; his Ciriffo Calvaneo treats of chivalry and war, with the accent on the extraordinary. Both abound in mythological reminiscences.

Ciriffo Calvaneo (ed. S. L. G. E. Audin, 1834); Driadeo d'amore (ed. P. E. Giudici, 1916).—F. Flamini, Spigolature di erudizione e di critica (1895); L. Mattioli, L. P. e il Ciriffo Calvaneo (1900). P.McN.

Pulci, LUIGI (*Florence 15 VIII 1432; ∞1473 Lucrezia degli Albizzi; †Padua XI 1484), Italian poet, brother of Luca and Bernardo. Patronized by Cosimo and Piero de' Medici, he was the intimate friend of Lorenzo il Magnifico [Medici*], who entrusted him with missions to Pisa, Camerino and Naples. He died in the service of Roberto Sanseverino.

In Pulci's masterpiece, the Morgante, written in octaves and racy Florentine, yet reflecting Florence's literary tradition, the materia cavalleresca of the CHARLEMAGNE cycle, long the chief stock-in-trade of Italian cantambanchi, first attains artistic individuality. The manner of the cantastorie is burlesqued in pseudo-invocations and mock citation of sources, and the world of chivalry caricatured (yet without satirical intention) by this master of comical situations, whose grotesque buffoonery invades the saddest occasions. His genius for characterization finds full scope in the good-natured giant Morgante, in the orthodox devil Astarotte, and in his supreme creation Margutte, unforgettable paragon of all vice.

Pulci finished his brother Luca's Ciriffo Calvaneo, parodied La Nencia da Barberino in La Beca da Dicomano, described a tournament won by Lorenzo in La Giostra, and left lively letters and vernacular verse. His Confessione, written to allay suspicions about his orthodoxy, succeeded in casting doubt on his sincerity.

Morgante (composed bet. 1460 and 1470; orig. 23 cantos, pr. bet. 1478 and 1480; oldest extant eds of this 1st redaction those of Venice, 1482, and Florence, n.d., but 1482; episode of Morgante and Margutte pr. 1480 with the title Il Morgante piccolo; whole poem in 28 cantos 1st pub. Florence, 1483 [1482 Florentine style], and known as Il Morgante maggiore; eds: G. B. Weston, 2 vols, 1930; G. Fatini, 2 vols, 1948; F. Agno, 1955; R. Ramat, 1961; D. De Robertis, 1962; canto I tr. Lord Byron, 1823); Beca da Dicomano and Confessione in Sonetti di Matteo Franco e di Luigi Pulci (1759); Lettere a Lorenzo il Magnifico e ad altri (ed. S. Bongi, 2nd ed. 1886); Strambotti (ed. A. Zenatti, 1887–94); Le frottole (ed. G. Volpi, 1912); Il libro dei sonetti (ed. G. Dolci, 1933).

G. Volpi, 'L. P.: studio biografico' in Giornale storico della lett. ital., XXII (1893); A. Momigliano, L'indole e il riso di L. P. (1907) and Studi di

poesia (2nd ed. 1948); R. Truffi, Gloste e cantori di gloste (1911); C. Pellegrini, L. P., l'uomo e l'artista (1912); E. Walser, Lebens- und Glaubensprobleme: die Religion des L. P. (1926); U. Biscottini, L'arte e l'anima del 'Morgante' (1932); C. Curto, L. P. (1932); N. Zingarelli, 'La composizione del Morgante di L. P.' in Rendiconti del Reale Istituto Lombardo, LXXV (1932) and Scritti di varia letteratura (1935); I. Bussani, Il romanzo cavalleresco in L. P. (1933); A. Pellizzari, I tre Morganti (1938); L. Di Pino, Temi di critica letteraria e due prose (1944); F. Agno, 'Le tre redazioni del Morgante' in Studi di filol. ital., IX (1951); 'Rassegna della bibliografia pulciana (1811-1952)', ed. G. Fatini in Atti e memorie della Società Colombiana, XVII (1952); G. Mariani, Il Morgante e i cantari trecenteschi (1953); D. De Robertis, Storia del 'Morgante' (1958); G. Getto, Studi sul Morgante (1967); A. Gianni, P. uno e due (1967).
P.McN.

Pulgar, HERNANDO DEL (*c. 1425; †after 1490), Spanish historian. He was brought up at the Castilian court; was chronicler, and ambassador to Italy and France, of Ferdinand and Isabella. His works include letters to nobles, a commentary on the Coplas de Mingo Revulgo and vivid pen-portraits of past and contemporary notables, less candid and more ironical than those of Pérez* de Guzmán.

Claros varones de Castilla and Letras. Glosas a las coplas de Mingo Revulgo (both ed. J. Domínguez Bordona, Madrid, 1923-29); Crónica de los reyes católicos (ed. J. de Mata Carriazo, 2 vols, 1943); Claros varones (ed. R. B. Tate, Oxford, 1971).
E.M.W. (A.D.D.)

Pulitzer, JOSEPH (*Mako, Hungary 10 IV 1847; †19 VI 1878 Kate Davis; †Charleston Harbour, S.C. 29 X 1911), German-American journalist. He started with German-language papers, later bought the St Louis Dispatch which he combined with the St Louis Post and in 1883 took over the New York World, which he developed into the mouthpiece of high-principled liberalism. Through his will he founded the first American school of journalism and established the Pulitzer prizes (PRIZES).

D. C. Seitz, J. P., His Life and Letters (1924); O. G. Villard in Dictionary of American Biography, XV (1935).
E.R.

Pumpurs, ANDREJS (*Lieljūprava canton 22 IX 1841; †Riga 6 VII 1902), Latvian poet. He was trained as a surveyor but made soldiering his career. His Latvian patriotism, stimulated by Finnish and Estonian example, expressed itself in the creation of a rhyming epic poem. The story of Lāčplēšis ('Bearslayer'; 1888) has some basis in Latvian folk-lore, but owes a great deal more to the poet's own invention and romantic sentiments. Lāčplēšis had considerable influence on the imagination of patriotic Latvians and inspired even Rainis* (cf. his drama 'Fire and Night'). Pumpurs' remaining poetry is less significant.

Kopotī raksti (coll. works; 2 vols, 1925).—R. Kļausiņš, Pūpura dzīve un darbi (1911).
W.K.M. (H.Le.)

Purchas, SAMUEL (*Thaxted, Essex 1575; †1601 Jane Westhal; †London IX or X 1626), English historian. Educated at St John's College, Cambridge, Purchas was for many years rector of St Martin's, Ludgate, London. He is remembered for his continuation of the work of Hakluyt*, to whom he appears to have acted as assistant.

Hakluytus Posthumus, or Purchas his Pilgrimes (1625; Hakluyt Soc., 20 vols, 1905-07). J.B.B.

Purdy, ALFRED WELLINGTON (*Wooler, Ontario 30 XII 1918; †1941 Eurithe Mary Jane Parkhurst), Canadian poet noted for vigour of language and concern with ordinary people and places; the harsh tone of his work is tempered by humour and genuine sympathy.

Enchanted Echo (1944); Pressed on Sand (1955); Poems for All the Annettes (1962); Cariboo Horses (1965); North of Summer (1967); Wild Grape Wine (1968).

P. Stevens, 'In the raw' in Canad. Lit., XXVIII (1966).
R.Su.

Purdy, JAMES (*Ohio 14 VII 1923), American novelist. His fiction shows a subtle blend of violence and homosexuality presented with a delicate wit which belies the grotesqueness of his subject-matter. Malcolm (1959) emphasizes isolation and fragmentation by its mixture of farce, realism and irony, developed to an almost Faulknerian intensity in Eustace Chisholm and the Works (1967).

FICTION: Don't Call Me By My Right Name (1956); 63 Dream Palace (1956); Colour of Darkness (1957); The Nephew (1960); Cabot Wright Begins (1963); An Oyster Is a Wealthy Beast (1967); Jeremy's Vision (1970).—Children Is All (drama; 1962).
G.A.K.

Purlichev, GRIGOR (*Ohrid 18 I 1830; †ibid. 25 I 1893), Bulgaro-Macedonian writer. He studied in Athens, where in 1860 he won for his Greek poem 'Armatoles' the annual literary award and the reputation of 'a second Homer'. He translated Greek classics into Bulgarian and wrote poems and stories on local life and the Slav anti-Greek struggle for religious and cultural self-determination in mid-19th-century Macedonia.

Sel. works (ed. G. Konstantinov, 1939).—Avtobiografiata na G. P. (ed. P. Obreshkov, 1928).
V.P.

Pusey, EDWARD BOUVERIE (*Pusey, Berks 22 VIII 1800; ∞1828 Maria Barker; †Ascot Priory, Berks 16 IX 1882), English divine, Regius Professor of Hebrew at Oxford, who with Keble and Newman* inspired the Oxford Movement, and contributed to Tracts for the Times. With Keble* he sustained the movement during the shock of the secessions to Rome. His writings, free of any literary aim, reveal profound learning and spiritual stability.

Tracts for the Times (1834–37; nos. 18, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 77, 81); Parochial Sermons (1852–73); What is of Faith as to Everlasting Punishment? (1880); Daniel the Prophet (1864); Spiritual Letters (ed. J. O. Johnston and W. C. E. Newbolt, 1898).

Canon Liddon, Life of P. (completed by J. O. Johnston and R. J. Wilson, 1893–97); A. B. Donaldson, Five Great Oxford Leaders (1900); G. Faber, Oxford Apostles (1953).

R.M.H. (M.A.)

Pushkin, ALEXANDER SERGEYEVICH (*Moscow 26 V 1799; ∞II 1831 Natalia Goncharova; †St Petersburg 29 I 1837), the greatest Russian poet. He belonged to the old landed nobility, but one of his maternal ancestors was an Abyssinian—a certain Hannibal, who had been in the service of Peter* the Great. Pushkin's early education was largely French, but his 'nanny', a simple-hearted peasant woman, was his first link with the Russian people. He developed his taste for writing Russian poetry in the exclusive lycée at Tsarskoe Selo (now called Pushkin), on finishing which he settled—nominally as a civil servant—in St Petersburg, dividing his time between dissipations and poetry. Even during that stage his poems were of an unusual high quality and full of ease, lucidity and sparkling wit learned from his favourite French authors, especially from Voltaire* and Parny*. All these features came out in his humorous epic Ruslan and Ludmila (1820), which was at once hailed as an important milestone on the Russian Parnassus. But the poet himself had by then been exiled (on account of some biting epigrams) to the south of Russia, where he was introduced to the works of Byron*. In VI 1824 he was banned to his mother's estate in the Pskov district, but in IX 1826 Nicholas I suddenly 'pardoned' his transgressions and even offered to be the only censor of his subsequent works. This doubtful honour gradually tied Pushkin—against his will—to the Tsar and the court at a time when his own poetic genius was nearing its zenith. Soon after that he fell in love with the beautiful but shallow Natalia Goncharova whom he married. This proved to be his final undoing. For no sooner had the couple settled in St Petersburg than Natalia's head was turned by her worldly successes and the attention paid to her by the Tsar himself. Pushkin's private and domestic life became complicated by the growing intrigues, slander and gossip. When Natalia was courted by the French legitimist in the Russian service, Baron

Heckeren-d'Anthès, Pushkin was obliged to challenge d'Anthès to a duel which ended fatally for the poet.

In spite of all his ordeals, Pushkin had continued his artistic activities. His lyrical poems in particular are matchless in their naturalness, terseness and what he himself called 'naked beauty'. In the course of his poetic growth he underwent several influences, especially those of Byron, Shakespeare* and Sir Walter Scott*. Yet instead of succumbing to them he merely used them as stepping-stones towards his own originality. It was under Byron's stimulus that he wrote, in 1820–21, Kavkazskiy plennik ('The Prisoner of the Caucasus'), thus introducing to Russian literature a kind of naturalized Childe Harold type who afterwards became—as the frustrated 'superfluous man'—one of the staple characters of Russian fiction. In addition to his other three 'southern' narrative poems Pushkin wrote his great Evgeny Onegin (1823–31), under the partial influence of Byron. In his magnificent narrative poems connected with Peter the Great, Poltava (1838) and Medny vsadnik ('The Bronze Horseman'; 1832), he also retained the pattern of a Byronic tale in verse, while yet creating highly original works. In his versified Skazki ('Fairy Tales'; 1831–34) he tried to assimilate the tone and the pattern of the Russian folk-tales.

Shakespeare's influence was responsible above all for Pushkin's historical drama in blank verse, Boris Godunov (1826), on which Mussorgsky's opera is based. Pushkin moreover wrote his sprightly conte in verse, Graf Nulin (1825), partly as an emulation of Byron's Beppo and partly as a parody of Shakespeare's Rape of Lucrece. He also paraphrased Measure for Measure in a narrative poem called Angelo (1833). Pushkin's four 'little tragedies' again had been suggested by Barry Cornwall's [Procter*] Dramatic Scenes; one of them was in fact a modified free translation from John Wilson's [North*] play The City of the Plague (1816). Last but not least, in his prose works, such as his unfinished Arap Petra Velikogo ('The Negro of Peter the Great'; 1828), Dubrovsky (1832–33), or his novel Kapitanskaya dochka ('A Captain's Daughter'; 1836) Pushkin assimilated the influence of Sir Walter Scott, but he did it with his habitual classical terseness and economy. This economy is even more pronounced in his Povesti Belkina ('The Tales of Belkin'; 1830) and Pikovaya dama ('The Queen of Spades'; 1834).

Pushkin mastered all the Western literary forms and genres in a way which integrated them with the spirit of the Russian language and the Russian creative genius. While becoming thoroughly European, he yet remained essentially Russian. It was in fact in this 'Pushkinian' universality that Dostoyevsky*, for example, saw the greatest promise for his nation as a whole. Thus Pushkin became not only the focus of that 'golden age' of Russian poetry which bears his name, but also a great symbol and a pointer in the direction Russia was to take in her subsequent literature and culture.

Sochineniya (10 vols, 1890); Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (9 vols, 1935–38; 10 vols, 1956–58); Sochineniya (1936, 1949).—A P. Verse Reader (ed. I. P. Foote, 1962); P. (ed. and tr. J. Fennell, 1964).—A. P.'s Dichtungen (tr. R. Lippert, 2 vols, 1840); Poesie di P. (tr. L. de Mangini, 1844); Œuvres choisies (tr. H. Dupont, 2 vols, 1847); Poetische Werke (tr. F. Bodenstedt, 3 vols, 1854–55); Poèmes dramatiques (tr. I. Turgenev and L. Viardot, 1862); Russian Romance (tr. J. B. Telfer, 1875); Eugene Onéguine (tr. Lt.-Col. Spalding, 1888); The Prose Tales (tr. T. Keane, 1894); Translations From P. (tr. C. E. Turner, 1899); Poems (tr. M. Baring, 1931); The Captain's Daughter and Other Tales (tr. N. Duddington, 1933); The Works of A. P. (ed. A. Yarmolinsky, 1936); The Russian Wonderland (tr. B. Brazol, 1936); Six Poems by P. (tr. J. Krupp, 1936); Eugene Onegin (tr. D. Prall Radin and G. Patrick, 1937; tr. O. Elton, 2nd ed. 1943; tr. V. Nabokov, 1964); P.'s Poems (tr. W. Morison, 1945); The Fairy Tales (tr. T. Pancheff, 1947); P., Lermontov, Tyutchev. Poems (tr. V. Nabokov, 1947); The Letters of A. P. (tr. T. Shaw, 1963).

English essays and biogs by: D. Mirsky (1926); B. Brazol (1931); C. Ceugh in Prelude to Parnassus (1936); N. L. Brodsky (1937); S. H. Cross (1937); E. Simmons (1937); L. Lambert (1947); J. Lavrin (1947); H. Troyat (tr. from Fr.; 1951); B. V. Tomashevsky (1956); S. L. Frank (1957); P. G. Antokol'sky (1960); L. P. Grossman (1960); M. A. Tsiavlovsky (1962); V. Sechkarëv (1963); L. M. Toibin (1964).—In other langs: J. Tretiak, Mickiewicz i Puszkina (1906); W. Lednicki, A. Puszkina (1926); E. Piccard, A. Pouchkine (1939); E. Lo Gatto, Alessandro Puskin (1937); A. Luther, Solange Dichter Leben (1949); H. Troyat, Pouchkine (1953).

E. Lyatsky, P. i ego pls'ma (1899); V. A. Myakotin, P. i dekabristy (1923); V. M. Zhirmunsky, Byron i P. (1924); A. Luther, A. P. in seinen Briefen (1927); V. Veresayev, V dvukh planakh (1929); V. V. Vinogradov, Yazyk Pushkina (1935); P. B. Struve, Dukh i slovo Pushkina (1937); M. Zagorsky, P. i teatr (1940); I. M. Nusinov, P. i mirovaya literatura (1941); A. I. Dymshits and D. I. Zolotnitsky, P. v vospominaniyakh sovremennikov (1950); Ya. L. Levkovich, P. i literatura o nëm (1955); B. S. Meilakh, P. i ego epokha (1958); D. D. Blagoi, Masterstvo Pushkina (1963); R. V. Pletnev, O lirike Pushkina (1963); A. L. Slonimsky, Masterstvo Pushkina (1964). J.L.

Pushkin, VASILY L'VOVICH (*1767; †1830), uncle of Alexander Pushkin* and himself a poet of the sentimental Karamzin* school. He achieved notoriety however by his crude and not quite printable narrative poem, Opasny sosed. J.L.

Puteanus, ERYCIUS, or HENDRIK VAN DE PUTTE (*Venlo 4 XI 1574; †Louvain 17 IX 1646), Dutch antiquarian and historian. Puteanus was educated by Vossius* at Dordrecht, next at Cologne by the Jesuits and finally at Padua and Milan, where in 1601 he became Professor of rhetoric and historiographer to Philip III; in 1606 he succeeded Lipsius* as Professor of philology at Louvain. Puteanus was a prolific author. His antiquarian studies were published in Gronovius' and Graevius' Thesauri; of his historical works should be mentioned Theatrum hist. imperatorum austriacorum (1642), Historia Insubrica (1630) and De obsidione Lovanii (1636). J.J.M.

Comus (Dutch tr. C. Sobry, 1938); Honderd veertien Nederlandse brieven van E. P. aan . . . Michael Florent van Langren (ed. with intro. J. J. Moreau, 1957).

T. Simar, Étude sur E. P. (1909).

J.J.M. (A.v.E.)

Püterich von Reichertshausen, JAKOB (*1400; †1469), Bavarian noble and connoisseur of 13th-century German literature. He includes Der jüngere Titurel amongst the works of Wolfram* von Eschenbach. On his evidence certain minor writers (Reinbot* von Durne, der Pleier*) were still known.

Ehrenbrief (ed. F. Behrend and A. Wolkan, 1920). F.F.P.

Putinas, pseud. of VINCAS MYKOLAÏTIS (*Pilotišķės nr Prienai 6 I 1893; †Kačerginė nr Kaunas 7 VI 1967), Lithuanian poet and scholar. He first studied theology at Seinai and St Petersburg, then philosophy, literature and the history of art in Switzerland and Germany; in 1923 he became a Professor at Kaunas University and later a member of the Soviet Lithuanian Academy of Sciences. Verse of his appeared in the Lithuanian press in 1912, but his first collection Raudoni žiedai ('Red Flowers') is dated 1916. According to Grinius there are three periods in Putinas' development—an experimental period (1912–19), in which he wrote mainly didactic and abstract verse, the Symbolist period (1919–26), and the period of realism (since 1926). He is rather more versatile than either Maironis* or Krėvė*, having written novels (Altorių šešėly, 'In the Shadow of the Altars', 2 vols, 1933–34) as well as drama (Valdovas, 'The Ruler', 1930) and the lyric poetry in which he is supreme. In Sukilėliai ('The Rebels', 1957–67), a historical novel with the peasants' revolt of 1863 as its theme, Putinas produced the greatest post-war Lithuanian novel. He also translated Mickiewicz*, Pushkin*, Lermontov*, Krylov* and Nekrasov*.

VERSE: Kunigaikštis Žvainys (1916); Tarp dviejų aušrų (1927); Keliai ir kryžkeliai (1936); Sveikinu žemę (1950); Poezija (1956); Būties valanda (1963);

Langas (1966).—PLAYS: Žiedas ir moteris (1926); Nuvainikuota vaidilutė (1927).—Krizė (novel; 1937).—Excerpts from Sukilėliai tr. in Lituanus, IX.4 (1963).

J. Grinius, P. o lyrika (1932); J. Lankutis, V. M.-P. kūryba (1961). W.K.M. (H.Le.)

Puttenham, GEORGE (†1590), English critic. The Arte of English Poesie (1589), occasionally ascribed to RICHARD PUTTENHAM, was probably by his younger brother George. The first detailed survey of English poetry, it specifies metres and poetical figures and argues for the moral influence of poetry.

The Arte of English Poesie (repr. in G. G. Smith, Elizabethan Critical Essays, 1904; ed. G. D. Willcock and A. Walker, 1936).

W. L. Rushton, Shakespeare and 'The Arte of English Poesie' (1909); B. M. Ward, 'The authorship of The Arte of English Poesie' in Rev. Eng. Stud., I (1925); J. W. Atkins, English Literary Criticism: the Renaissance (1947); P. J. Traci, 'The literary qualities of P.'s Arte of English Poesie' in Renaissance Papers (1957); G. Williamson, The Proper Wit of Poetry (1961). W.A.A.

Pynchon, THOMAS (*Glen Cove, N.Y. 8 V 1937), American novelist. The puzzles, pastiches and paradoxes of V (1963) link Pynchon's work with that of Barth* and Southern*. There is a sense of nightmare and confusion within the comic structure of his work, which is viewed with a speculative irony.

The Crying of Lot 49 (1966). G.A.K.

Pyra, IMMANUEL JACOB (*Cottbus 25 VII 1715; †Berlin 14 VII 1744), German poet. Headmaster of the Kölln Gymnasium, Berlin, Pyra, a friend of

S. G. Lange*, wrote unrhymed verse in deliberate opposition to Gottsched*.

VERSE: Der Tempel der wahren Dichtkunst (1737); Thyrsis und Damons freundschaftliche Lieder (with Lange; 1745; ed. A. Sauer, 1885).—Erweis, dass die Gottschedianische Sekte den Geschmack verderbe (criticism; 1743).

G. Waniek, P. und sein Einfluss auf die deutsche Literatur (1882). H.B.G.

Pythagoras OF SAMOS (late 6th century B.C.), Greek philosopher. About 531 he emigrated to Croton (S. Italy) and there founded a religious community, dedicated to the release of the soul from the corruption of the body, by a discipline of study and symbolic abstinence. He believed in transmigration of souls, and made discoveries about the mathematical ratios of musical intervals which led him to seek the underlying reality of all things in number (perhaps he also discovered 'Pythagoras' theorem'). His chief importance for philosophy is his development of the idea of the human soul, and the impetus he gave to mathematical studies.

No originals extant: testimonia in H. Diels, Die Fragmente der Vorsokratiker, I (6th ed. 1951).

F. M. Cornford, 'Mysticism and science in the Pythagorean tradition' in Class. Quart., XVI (1919) and XVII (1920) and Plato and Parmenides (1939); E. L. Minar, Early Pythagorean Politics (1942); J. Burnet, Early Greek Philosophy (4th ed. 1945); W. Jaeger, Theology of the Early Greek Philosophers (1947); J. E. Raven, Pythagoreans and Eleatics (1948); W. K. C. Guthrie, A History of Greek Philosophy, I (1962); W. Burkert, Weisheit und Wissenschaft (1962); J. A. Philip, P. and Early Pythagoreanism (Toronto, 1966). D.J.F.

Q

'Q': see Quiller-Couch, SIR ARTHUR THOMAS.

Qā'āni, ḤABĪBALLĀH (*Shiraz; †Tehran 1854), the most prominent Persian poet of the Qajarid period. His poems, mostly panegyrics, are vigorous, fresh and witty. His style is essentially that of the older classical poets.

Divān (Tehran, 1860); Parishān (ibid., 1884).

A. von Kégl, 'Zur Geschichte der persischen Litteratur des 19. Jh.' in Zeitschrift der deutschen morgenländischen Gesellschaft, XLVII (1893); E. G. Browne, A Year Amongst the Persians (1893). E.Y.

Qā'im Maqām OF FARĀHĀN, ABU'L-QĀSIM (†26 VI 1835), Persian poet, writer and statesman. His elegant style helped to improve contemporary prose writing in Persia.

Divān (1926).—J. Rypka, History of Iranian Literature (1968). E.Y.

Qais: see Majnūn.

Qalīc Beg (*1855; †1929), Sindhi writer who played the leading role in the development of modern Sindhi literature, principally through the medium of his adaptations and translations from Persian and English. His novels and poetry are of uneven quality, but his posthumously published autobiography, Sāopan yā Kāropano, is of considerable interest.

A. Bausani, Storia delle letterature del Pakistan (1958). C.S.

Quarantotti Gambini, PIER ANTONIO (*Pisino d'Istria 23 II 1910; †Venice 1965), Italian novelist. He deals mainly with the psychological changes which occur during adolescence, or with adult memories of that period. His sober style and control of form, usually of the 'racconto lungo', enable him to evoke the past without sentimentality.

FICTION: I nostri simili (1932); La rosa rossa (1937); Le trincee (1942); L'onda dell'incrociatore (1947); Amor militare (1955; rev. as L'amore di Lupo, 1964); Il cavallo Tripoli (1956); La corsa di Falco (1969; posth.).—POETRY: Racconto d'amore (1965).—VARIOUS: Primavera a Trieste. Ricordi del '45 (1951); Il vecchio e il giovane (1965, posth.; corresp. with Saba). B.M.

Quarles, FRANCIS (*Stewards, nr Romford c. V 1592; ∞London 28 V 1618 Ursula Woodgate; †ibid. 8 IX 1644), English writer of verse, prose and emblems (EMBLEM BOOKS), who from Christ's College, Cambridge and Lincoln's Inn, became a friend of Drayton*, Benlowes* and Phineas Fletcher*. Abroad in 1613 with Princess Elizabeth, Quarles lived in London from 1618 and was secretary to Archbishop Ussher in Ireland 1626–29/30. In II 1639/40 Quarles became chronologer to the City of London: he wrote pamphlets defending the King. His Emblems (1635) was the most popular book of verse and his Enchiridion (1640) the most popular book of aphorisms in the 17th century. Argalus and Parthenia (1629) treats a story from Sidney's* Arcadia: it was continued by his son, JOHN (†1665).

Collected Works in Prose and Verse (ed. A. B. Grosart, 1880–81).

A. H. Nethercott, 'The literary legend of F. Q.' in Mod. Philol., XX (1923); R. Freeman, 'G. Herbert and the emblem books' in Rev. Eng. Stud., XVII (1941); J. Horden, F. Q. A Bibliography (1953). B.L.J. (H.N.D.)

Quasimodo, SALVATORE (*Modica 20 VIII 1901; †Amalfi 14 VI 1968), Italian poet. He trained and worked until 1938 as a draftsman. He then took up journalism until in 1941 he was appointed lecturer in Italian literature at the Milan Conservatorio di Musica. His early, 'hermetic' poetry consists mostly of very short lyrics celebrating through symbols highly personal themes of self-consciousness and the loss of innocence. During and after the war years he dealt with more general, and more accessible, themes, and it is for these volumes that he was awarded the Nobel prize for literature in 1959. Quasimodo has also translated from many languages, especially from the Greek Anthology.

VERSE: Acque e terre (1930); Oboe sommerso (1932); Poesie (1938); Ed è subito sera (1942; cont. most of Q.'s early poetry); Giorno dopo giorno (1947); La vita non è sogno (1949); Il falso e vero verde (1954); La terra impareggiabile (1958); Tutte le poesie (1960); Dare e avere (1966).—VARIOUS: Il poeta e il politico (1960); Scritti sul teatro (1961).

P. Mazzamuto, S. Q. (1967); Q. e la critica (ed. G. Finzi, 1969). B.M.

Quatre Fils Aymon: see CHANSONS DE GESTE, text and biblio.

Queirós, FRANCISCO TEIXEIRA DE (*Arcos de Valdevez 1848; †1919), Portuguese novelist and short-story writer. After Eça de Queirós* he is the most prominent of the Portuguese realists. Under the pseudonym of BENTO MORENO he wrote two series of novels and stories, one (Comédia do Campo) dealing with country life, the other with town life (Comédia Burguesa). In the first series he makes able use of the realist technique to portray life in his native province of Minho.

COMÉDIA DO CAMPO: Amor divino (1877); António Fogueira (1882); Novos contos (1887); Amores, amores ... (1897); A nossa gente (1899); A cantadeira (1913); Ao sol e à chuva (1916).—COMÉDIA BURGUESA: Os noivos (1879); Salústio Nogueira (1883); D. Agostinho (1894); Morte de D. Agostinho (1895); O famoso Galvão (1898); A caridade em Lisboa (1901); Cartas de amor (1906); A grande quimera (1919).

J. Serrão, 'Relance sobre a obra de T. de Q.' in Temas oitocentistas, II (1962). T.P.W.

Queirós, JOSÉ MARIA DE EÇA DE (*Póvoa de Varzim 25 XI 1845; ∞1886 Emilia de Castro Pamplona; †Paris 16 VIII 1900), Portuguese novelist. The illegitimate son of a magistrate, his early upbringing was left to grandparents and he was sent to a boarding school at the age of five. This parental neglect seems to have left a mark on his character and may help to explain the uncertainties of direction in his development as a writer, his keen and sometimes merciless satirical edge, and not least the inclusion of sado-masochistic material in the treatment of some of his characters with autobiographical overtones—the Bastardo and Gonçalo in A ilustre casa de Ramires (1900; The Illustrious House of Ramires, tr. A. Stevens, 1968) and the writer Eça in Os Maias (1888; The Maias, tr. P. M. Pinheiro and A. Stevens, 1965). Eça, as he is commonly referred to, studied law at Coimbra where he came into contact with Quental* and the Coimbra generation of writers and intellectuals, of which he later became a distinguished member. After practising journalism, holding an administrative post in the provinces and a trip to Egypt, he entered consular service in 1872 and thereafter resided mainly abroad, from 1874 and 1888 in England, and later in Paris. His Cartas de Inglaterra (1903; Letters From England, tr. A. Stevens, 1970) throw some amusing sidelights on life in Victorian England.

Unquestionably the finest prose stylist in modern Portuguese, Eça, with Flaubert* as his model, raised the language to new levels of expressive potentiality. He began his literary career as a romantic aesthete as may be seen from the pantheistic lyricism of his Prosas bárbaras (1903); and to some extent he always remained a stylist in search of themes. Nevertheless he also became Portugal's first theorist and practitioner of realism. Fired by the socialist idealism of Quental and Oliveira Martins*, he turned to social themes and produced his major novels, which offer a critical portrayal of upper-class Portuguese society. O crime do Padre Amaro (1876; The Sin of Father Amaro, tr. N. Flanagan, 1962) is a study of clerical immorality in the bourgeois setting of a provincial town. O primo Basílio (1878; Cousin Basilio, tr. R. Campbell, 1953) is an original adaptation of the Madame Bovary theme; while in Os Maias, his finest work, Eça's criticism reaches his own circle—the intellectual élite—and exposes its moral bankruptcy. The negative conclusion of this work, that only some major catastrophe could possibly stir Portugal from its stagnation, marks a turning-point in Eça's fiction. A ilustre casa de Ramires already shows a new indulgence towards the old country, while in A cidade e as serras (1901; The City and the Mountains, tr. R. Campbell, 1955)—all reformist zeal now forgotten—he presents Portugal, tongue in cheek, as a rural haven of rest in an over-complicated world. Meantime Eça had turned increasingly after Os Maias to pure fantasy, exotic themes and the sterile cult of style as an end in itself. His early lyricism re-emerges as a fin-de-siècle futility, and the hollowness of his moral outlook becomes apparent, only thinly veiled by the ambivalence and irony which characterize virtually everything he wrote.

Eça's major limitation seems to be a human one. For all his brilliance and wit, he lacks the humour and compassion which enable a Cervantes* or Chekhov*—also writing against the background of society in decline—to produce great art. Too obviously a product of the bourgeois society he set out to satirize, he eventually made his peace with it. While Quental and Martins, on seeing their youthful ideals shattered, ended, the one in suicide and the other in deep pessimism for the fate of Portugal, Eça finished up as a dandified snob and a pillar of society. A hideous public statue was erected to him shortly after his death.

O crime do padre Amaro (1876; crit. ed. H. Cidade Moura, 2 vols, 1964); O Mandarin (1880); A relíquia (1887; The Relic, tr. A. Bell, 1954); A correspondência de Fradique Mendes (1900); Contos (1902; The Mandarin and Other Stories, tr. R. F. Goldman, 1966); Suave milagre (The Sweet Miracle, tr. E. Prestage, 1904); Notas contemporâneas (1909); Últimas páginas (1911); Cartas inéditas de Fradique Mendes e mais páginas esquecidas (1926).—Correspondência (6th ed. 1946); Cartas familiares e bilhetes de Paris, 1893–96 (1945); Obras (15 vols, 1945–52).

A. Cabral, E. de Q., a sua vida e a sua obra (1920); Vianna Moog, E. de Q. e o século XIX (4th ed. 1945); J. Gaspar Simões, E. de Q., o homem e o artista (1945) and E. de Q. (1961); Livro do centenário de E. de Q. (ed. L. Pereira and Câmara Reis, 1945); A. J. Saraiva, As ideias de E. de Q. (1947); E. Guerra da Cal, Lengua y estilo de E. de Q. (1954); Alvaro Lins, História literária de E. de Q. (3rd ed. 1959); M. Sacramento, E. de Q.: uma estética da ironia (1964). T.P.W.

Queiroz, RACHEL DE (*Fortaleza, Ceará 19 XII 1910), Brazilian novelist. Her O Quinze (1930) is second to J. A. de Almeida's* A Bagaceira in the founding of the novel of the North East. The periodic droughts in the region provide the central theme and imagery. Language and structure show the same deliberate and tragic aridity.

João Miguel (1932); Caminho de pedras (1937); As três Marias (1939).

'Tristão de Ataíde' [Alceu Amoroso Lima],

Estudos, 5th ser. (1935); Almir de Andrade, Aspectos da cultura brasileira (1939); F. P. Ellison, Brazil's New Novel: Four Northeastern Masters (1954). J.T.B.

Queneau, RAYMOND (*Le Havre 21 II 1903), French poet and novelist. Queneau has an encyclopaedic and Protean wit: capable of great seriousness, he retains a taste for humour and hoaxes from his Surrealist phase. His linguistic research led him to create an original slang form.

POETRY: Chêne et chien (1937); Les ziaux (1943); Bucoliques (1947); Exercices de style (1947; Eng. tr. B. Wright, 1958); Petite cosmogonie portative (1950); Si tu t'imagines (1952); Cent mille milliards de poèmes (1961); Courir les rues (1967); Battre la campagne (1968).—NOVELS: Un rude hiver (1939; Eng. tr. B. Askwith, 1948); Pierrot mon ami (1942); Loin de Rueil (1945); Saint-Glinglin (1948); Le chiendent (1953); The Bark Tree, tr. B. Wright, 1968); Zazie dans le métro (1959; Eng. tr. idem, 1960); Les fleurs bleues (1965; Between Blue and Blue, tr. idem, 1967).

J. Queval, Essai sur R. Q. (1960); J. Bens, Q. (1962); C. Simmonnet, Q. déchiffré (1962); L'Arc, XXVIII (special no.; 1965); P. Gayot, Q. (1967). M.G.

Quental, ANTERO TARQUÍNIO DE (*Ponta Delgada 18 V 1842; †ibid. 11 IX 1891), Portuguese poet. A native of the Azores, in 1858 he went to study at the University of Coimbra, where he soon became prominent as leader of the young group of progressives, the Coimbra generation, also known later as the generation of 1870, which sought to reintegrate Portugal into the mainstream of European thought. Quental first attained celebrity in a polemic with the literary establishment of the day and thereafter became the acknowledged moral and intellectual leader of his generation. He repudiated Catholicism, became an avid student of German philosophy and a convert to the socialism of Proudhon*. He worked for the establishment of a Portuguese branch of the International and advocated an Iberian federation of Spain and Portugal. The victim of a recurrent nervous disorder, he gradually withdrew from public life after a few years of intense activity and in 1891 returned to the Azores where he committed suicide.

Quental left a number of romantic lyrics, a collection of combative revolutionary poems—verse propaganda for the cause—and a remarkable collection of some 150 sonnets which plot his progress through the spiritual wilderness after his abandonment of Catholicism. The poet's oscillations between rationalism and nihilism, between Buddhism and the return to a sentimental Christianity may strike the modern reader as somewhat naive, but they reflect the crisis of a sensitive mind in a backward country when suddenly exposed to a great variety of conflicting doctrines and modes of thought, from which Portugal had remained insulated for some three centuries. Quental's most mature work is the essay Tendências gerais da filosofia in which, while accepting the validity of modern science, he sought to vindicate human values and moral freedom, which the mechanistic determinism of contemporary orthodoxy seemed to threaten.

Beatrice-Coimbra (1863); Fiat Lux (1863); Sonetos (1881); Os sonetos completos de A. de Q. (ed. with pref. J. P. Oliveira Martins, 1886; ed. A. Sérgio, 1956); Raios de extinta luz. Poesias inéditas (1859–1863; ed. T. Braga, 1892).—TRANSLATIONS: A. de Q.: Sixty-four Sonnets (tr. E. Prestage, 1894); Sonnets and Poems of A. de Q. (tr. S. Griswold Morley, Berkeley, Calif., 1922).—Prosas (3 vols, 1923–31).—Cartas (ed. J. de Carvalho, 1921); Cartas inéditas a Oliveira Martins (ed. F. de A. de Oliveira Martins, 1931).

J. P. de Oliveira Martins, A. de Q. In Memoriam (1896); A. Sérgio, Notas sobre os 'Sonetos' e as 'Tendências gerais da filosofia' de A. de Q. (1909) and in Ensaio, IV–VII (1934–55); J. de Carvalho, A evolução espiritual de A. (1929) and Estudios sobre a cultura portuguesa do séc. XIX: Anteriana (1955); F. Sabóia de Medeiros, A. de Q. (Rio de Janeiro, 1938); J. Bruno Carreiro, A. de Q. (2 vols, 1948). T.P.W.

Querol, VICENTE WENCESLAO (*Valencia 28 IX 1837; †Bétera, Valencia 24 X 1889), Spanish poet. His poems in Castilian and Catalan treat conventional themes such as religion, family, motherland, with considerable feeling. Biblical, classical and contemporary influences are blended with great artistry. He collaborated with Llorente* in translating Byron's* Corsair and Childe Harold.

Rimas (1877, with pref. P. A. de Alarcón); Rimas (1891, with pref. T. Llorente); Poesias (1924); Poesias (ed. L. Guarner, 1964).

F. M. Tabino, Historia del renacimiento literario en Cataluña, Valencia y Baleares (1881); L. Guarner, Poesias desconocidas de V. W. Q. (1967). R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Quesnay, FRANÇOIS (*Mérey 4 VI 1694; †Versailles 16 XII 1774), French economist, who for some time practised medicine. He is chiefly remembered for his economic writings; his Tableau économique (1758) being the clearest statement of the principles of the physiocrats. He also contributed to the Encyclopédie.

Œuvres économiques (ed. W. Oncken, 1888). H. Higgs, The Physiocrats (1897). D.H.

Quevedo y Villegas, FRANCISCO GÓMEZ DE (*Madrid 1580; ∞1634 Esperanza de Aragón; †Villanueva de los Infantes 1645), Spanish novelist, satirist, moralist and poet. His varied life included theological studies at Valladolid and Alcalá, special missions from the Duke of Osuna at Madrid, political activities for Osuna in Naples, banishment to his estates at Osuna's fall (1620). He returned to the court in 1623, became a royal secretary (1632), but fell into disfavour in 1639 and suffered four years' harsh imprisonment. His last years were passed in retirement. His marriage was a fiasco.

Quevedo's talents were extraordinarily diverse, and his genius expressed itself in everything he wrote. His picaresque novel El buscón is the cynical autobiography of an unrepentant scoundrel for whom the author has no pity. His visions (Sueños) are burlesque descriptions of hell, judgement day and the world; fantastic humour and satire are set off by moral indignation at the vices of all classes of society. A series of sketches—La hora de todos—exposes the hideous realities that underlie the mask of appearance; when the hour strikes, things are seen as they are, not as they appear. His two great political works, a commentary on Plutarch's* Brutus and a treatise on Christian rule, are grave and sententious. He corresponded with Lipsius*, and wrote a number of stoical treatises including a verse translation of Epictetus*. He wrote several theological works: a treatise on St Paul, another against unbelievers, a commentary on Job, a version of Lamentations i and a translation of St François* de Sales.

His poetry is often magnificent. His love poems are as polished as Herrera's*, but more intense. He wrote the best verse satire in Spanish. His burlesque verses are often very funny and bear a curiously close relation to his moral works. The sonnets on the vanity of life are unequalled. In prose and verse, serious and burlesque, he used conceptismo with great adroitness. E.M.W.

Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XXIII, XLVIII, LXIX (cont. useful crit. material); Obras completas (ed. A. Fernández-Guerra and M. Menéndez y Pelayo, 3 vols, 1897–1907); Obras (ed. L. Astrana Marín, 2 vols, rev. ed. 1943); Obras completas (ed. J. M. Blecua, I, 1963).—Epístola al Conde-Duque de Olivares (ed. R. Foulché-Delbosc, 1909); Vida del Buscón (ed. A. Castro, rev. ed. 1927); Teatro inédito (ed. M. Artigas, 1927); Los sueños (ed. J. Cejador, 2 vols, 1916–17; 1922); Epistolario completo (ed. L. Astrana Marín, 1946); Lágrimas y Hieremías (ed. E. M. Wilson and J. M. Blecua, 1953); Las zahurdas de Plutón (ed. A. Mas, Poitiers, 1957); Poema heroico de las necedades y locuras de Orlando enamorado (ed. M. E. Malfatti, 1964); La cuna y la sepultura (ed. L. López Grigera, 1969).—Eng. trs: Visions or hel's kingdom strangely displayed (tr. R. Crashaw, 1640); The visions of Q. (tr. Sir R. L'Estrange, 1667); The life and adventures of Buscon (1657; 1660); Visions (tr. Mr Nunez, 1745); The Choice Humorous and Satirical Works (ed. C. Duff, 1926).

E. Mérimée, Essai sur la vie et les œuvres de F.

de Q. (1886); O. Lira, Visión política de Q. (1948); O. H. Green, Courtly Love in Q. (1952); G. Mancini, Gli entremeses nell'arte di Q. (1955); A. Mas, Le caricature de la femme, du mariage et de l'amour dans l'œuvre de Q. (1957); J. O. Crosby, The Sources of the Text of Q.'s 'Política de Dios' (1959) and En torno a la poesía de Q. (1967); A. A. Parker, Literature and the Delinquent (1967); A. Martinengo, Q. e il simbolo alchimistico. Tre studi (1967); L. Nolting-Hauff, Satire und Pointe in Q.'s 'Sueños' (1968). E.M.W. (J.E.V.).

Quiller-Couch, SIR ARTHUR THOMAS (*Bodmin 21 XI 1863; ∞1889 Louisa Amelia Hicks; †Fowey 12 V 1944), English novelist and critic. He made his early reputation with historical romances which were true to place and time, freshly written, and exciting. His wide reading, fine taste, and fastidious writing are evident in his critical work and anthologies. In 1912 he became Professor of English literature at Cambridge.

NOVELS: Dead Man's Rock (1887); The Astonishing History of Troy Town (1888); The Splendid Spur (1889).—CRITICISM: Adventures in Criticism (1896); On the Art of Writing (1916); Studies in Literature (3 ser., 1918, 1922, 1929); On the Art of Reading (1920); Charles Dickens and Other Victorians (1925); The Poet as Citizen (1934).—ANTHOLOGIES: The Oxford Book of English Verse (1900; 1939); The Oxford Book of Ballads (1910); The Oxford Book of English Prose (1925).—Memories and Opinions (unfinished autobiog.; 1944).

F. Brittain, A. Q.-C. (1947); B. Willey, The Q. Tradition (1946). R.A.S.-J. (W.R.A.)

Quinault, PHILIPPE (*Paris 3 VI 1635; †Paris 26 XI 1688), French dramatist and librettist. A disciple of Tristan* L'Hermite, he began by writing comedies and also romanced historical tragedies whose polished sentimentality successfully reflected the taste of the 1660s, though they became a target for Boileau's* satire. After 1671 he turned exclusively to opera and became Lulli's regular librettist. In 1686 he renounced the theatre through religious scruples.

COMEDIES: Les Rivaux (1653); L'Amant indiscret (1654); La Mère coquette (1665).—TRAGEDIES AND TRAGI-COMEDIES: Amalasonte (1657); Stratonice (1660); Agrippa (?1661); Astrate, roi de Tyr (1664); Pausanias (1668); Bellérophon (1671).—OPERAS: Cadmus et Hermione (1673); Alceste (1674); Thésée (1675); Atys (1676); Isis (1677); Proserpine (1680); Persée et Andromède (1682); Phaéton (1683); Amadis (1684); Roland furieux (1685); Armide (1686).—Théâtre (5 vols, 1778); Théâtre choisi (mainly operas; ed. V. Fournel, 1882).

E. Gros, P. Q. (1926); J. B. A. Buijtenorp, P. Q. (Amsterdam, 1928); H. C. Lancaster, A History of French Dramatic Literature in the 17th Century, II (1936). G.B.

Quinet, EDGAR (*Bourg 17 II 1803; †Versailles 27 III 1875), French historian and philosopher. After travelling in Germany, Italy and Greece, Quinet was appointed Professor, first at Lyons (1839), then at the Collège de France (1842). His extreme democratic views led to his suspension, later to his exile under Napoleon III. He returned to France in 1870 and was a member of the National Assembly until his death. Working under the influence of Herder* and Michelet*, he wrote books on modern and ancient history inspired by his democratic faith. His powerful lyrical manner appears equally in his philosophic poems, as Ahasvérus (1833), the saga of the WANDERING JEW.

HISTORICAL: Les révolutions d'Italie (1848–52); La révolution (1865); Histoire de la fondation de la république des Provinces-Unies (1854).—VERSE: Napoléon (1836); Prométhée (1838); Les esclaves (1853); Merlin l'enchanteur (1860).—RELIGIOUS AND POLITICAL: Le génie des religions (1842); Les Jésuites (1843); L'enseignement du peuple (1850); L'esprit nouveau (1874); La république (1881).—VARIOUS: Histoire de mes idées (1858); Lettres d'exil (4 vols, 1884–88).—Œuvres complètes (26 vols, 1857–81).

Mme E. Quinet, Souvenirs (4 vols, 1868–99); R. Heath, Early Life and Writings of E. Q. (1881); P. Gautier, E. Q. (1917); A. Vales, E. Q., sa vie et son œuvre (1935); R. H. Powers, E. Q., A Study in French Patriotism (1957). M.G.; J.P.R.

Quiñones de Benavente, LUIS (*Toledo ?1589; †Madrid 1651), Spanish dramatist; a priest and a friend of Lope de Vega*. He wrote many one-act farces to be performed between the acts of other plays. Over 140 of these pieces have been preserved: they are in verse and are usually satiric.

Entremeses (ed. C. Rosell, 2 vols, 1872–74; Nueva Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XVII, XVIII; ed. J. M. Blecua, 1945).

L. Rouanet, Intermèdes espagnols (entremeses) du XVII<sup>e</sup> siècle (1897); H. E. Bergmann, L. Q. de B. y sus entremeses (1965). E.M.W. (J.E.V.)

Quintana, MANUEL JOSÉ (*Madrid 11 IV 1772; ∞María Antonia Florencia; †ibid. 11 III 1857), Spanish poet, critic, statesman. He studied at Salamanca, where his literary and philosophical outlook was moulded by the well-known 'poetical school' of that city. He published his first volume of verse at 16. The Napoleonic invasion made him, already famous, the poet of the resistance. He participated very actively in the work of the Central Junta but later Ferdinand VII imprisoned him as a liberal (1814–20). Director of public education during the short-lived liberal period (1820–23), he introduced reforms based on Condorcet's* project. He was tutor to Isabel II who, in 1855, crowned him with laurels, but he died a poor man.

Encyclopaedist, liberal and patriot, he embodies the transition from the personal themes of 18th-century neo-classicism to the revolutionary, patriotic neo-classicism of the early 19th century. Romanticism left him untouched. With him the encyclopaedic ideals become mainly national. Patriotism, liberty and progress were his main themes and he presented them in a vigorous, majestic verse which became a model for this type of composition; odes to Trafalgar (1805), to the March revolution (1808), to the popular rising against the French (1808), to the invention of the printing machine (1800) etc.

His prose writings are very fine, particularly his Vidas de españoles célebres (1807–33) and his interesting letters to Lord Holland (1823–24; pub. 1852) on Spanish political life. His literary criticism revealed knowledge and taste. He wrote a political drama—Pelayo (1805)—and a mediocre tragedy, El duque de Viseo (1801), based on Matthew G. Lewis'* The Castle Spectre.

Obras completas (in Biblioteca de Aut. Esp., XIX); Obras inéditas (1872); Poesías (ed. N. Alonso Cortés (1958); Epistolario inédito (ed. E. Díaz-Jiménez Molleda, 1933).—Eng. trs: J. Russell, Memoirs of Gonzalo Hernández de Córdoba (1851); H. W. Longfellow, 'Poems' in Outre-Mer (Boston, 1833); J. Kennedy, 'Ode' in Modern Poets and Poetry of Spain (1852, 1860).

E. Piñeyro, M. J. Q. Ensayo crítico y biográfico (1892); E. Mérimée, 'Les poésies lyriques de Q.' in Bull. Hispanique, IV (1902); M. Menéndez y Pelayo in Estudios de crítica literaria, V (1908); J. Vila Selma, Ideario de M. J. Q. (1961).

R.M.N. (J.E.V.)

Quintero BROTHERS: see Álvarez Quintero, SERAFÍN and JOAQUÍN.

Quintilian (MARCUS FABIVS QUINTILIANUS) (*Calagurris [Calahorra], Spain c. A.D. 35; †c. 100), Roman writer on rhetoric, studied at Rome, returned to Spain early in Nero's reign, but came again to Rome with Galba in 68. He achieved fame and prosperity as a teacher, retired c. 88, was charged with the education of Domitian's great-nephews, and was raised to consular rank. Apart from his law-court speeches he wrote De causis corruptae eloquentiae (no longer extant; apparently an attack on contemporary rhetorical education, in particular the unreal and absurd subjects set for declamations) and Institutio oratoria, the most thorough treatment of an orator's education in classical literature. Quintilian writes a clear and dignified, but compressed Latin and is deeply concerned with the value of his subject. His literary taste, displayed particularly in the tenth book (on the importance of reading suitable literature), is impeccable, and his moral ideals do much to redeem his age from the odium it acquires from Juvenal's* satires. He lost his young wife and his two sons within a few years of each other; the passage (Book 6, proemium) in which he speaks of his bereavement is one of the most affecting passages in Latin literature. The collection of declamations extant under his name is of varying quality and contains nothing that may safely be ascribed to Quintilian.

Eds: L. Radermacher (2 vols, 1907–35; rev. V. Buchheit, 1965); M. Winterbottom (2 vols, 1970); Declamationes (ed. C. Ritter, 1884; repr. 1965); Institutio oratoria (eds with comm.: Bk 1, F. H. Colson, 1924; Bk 3, J. Adamietz, 1966; Bk 10, W. Peterson, 1891, repr. 1967; Bk 12, R. G. Austin, 1948, corr. repr. 1954).—Tr. H. E. Butler (4 vols, 1920–22); Fr. tr. H. Bornecque (4 vols, 1933–34).

A. Gwynn, Roman Education From Cicero to Q. (1926); J. Cousin, Études sur Quintilien (2 vols, 1935–36; repr. 1967); S. F. Bonner, Roman Declamation (1949); M. L. Clarke, Rhetoric at Rome (1953; corr. repr. 1962). J.A.W. (J.D.)

Quintus Smyrnaeus (fl. 3rd–4th century), Greek epic poet. Author of Posthomerica, recounting the Trojan war from the funeral of Hector to the shipwreck of the returning Greeks. In language and metre following closely the model of Homer*, the poem as a whole is ill-constructed, colourless and unimaginative.

Quinti Smyrnaei Posthomericon libri XIV (ed. A. Zimmermann, 1891); F. Vian, Q. de Smyrne: La suite d'Homère (in progr.; 1963–).—Q. S.: The Fall of Troy (tr. A. S. Way, 1913).

G. W. Paschal, A Study of Q. of S. (1904); M. W. Mansur, The Treatment of Homeric Characters by Q. of S. (1940); F. Vian, Recherches sur les Posthomerica de Q. de Smyrne (1959) and Histoire de la tradition manuscrite de Q. de Smyrne (1959); J. Kakridis, Koīntos Smyrnaios: Genikē meletē tōn meth' Homēron kai tou poiētē tous (1962). R.B.

Quirini, GIOVANNI (*Venice), 14th-century Italian poet. Life obscure; a friend(?) and fervent admirer of Dante*. Quirini wrote poems in the style of the Tuscan stil nuovo; he conducted a poetic correspondence with Dante and railed in a number of sonnets against Francesco Stabili*.

Poeti minori del Trecento (ed. N. Sapegno, 1952). S. Morpurgo, 'Dante Alighieri e le nuove rime di G. Q.' in Bullettino della Società Dantesca Ital., I (1894). M.W.

Quiroga, HORACIO (*Salto 1878; †1937), Uruguayan short-story writer. He had an unrivalled knowledge of the Chaco. At first influenced by MODERNISM and Edgar Allan Poe*, his life was transformed by a visit to the Misiones and Chaco regions of North Argentina and many of his stories were set in this area. His best works are tense accounts of man's unequal struggle against nature and the eccentric human types who take refuge in the remote regions away from society. J.F.

El crimen de otro (1904); Historia de un amor turbio (1908; new ed. 1923); Cuentos de amor, de locura y de muerte (1917); Cuentos de la selva para niños (1918); Los perseguidos (1920); Anaconda (1921); El desierto (1924); Los desterrados (1926); Pasado amor (1929). E.Sa. (J.F.)

Quirós (fl. early 16th century), Spanish poet. Possibly of Asturian origin, he wrote poems in Valencia. He may be the most typical writer of canciones in the Cancionero general. His longer poems use ingenious and sometimes ambiguous allegory for the pains of love.

K. Whinnom, 'Hacia una interpretación y apreciación de las canciones del Cancionero general de 1511' in Filología, XIII (1968–69); see also CANCIONERO. A.D.D.

Qushairi, ABU AL-QĀSIM (*Ustuwa, Nishāpūr VII 986; ∞Fatima; †Nishāpūr 31 XII 1074), expounder of Muslim mysticism. At Nishāpūr he studied dogmatic theology under the Ash'arite Ibn Furak and mysticism under al-Daqqāq, marrying the latter's daughter. His fame and scholastic approach led to his persecution and flight to Baghdad (1063), where he was well received by the Abbasid Caliph. He returned home to enjoy peace during the last ten years of his life under the tolerant Seljuk Alp Arslān.

His most famous work al-Risālah is a classical manual of Sufi doctrine. He also left a mystical commentary on the Koran, a highly esoteric manual of the mystic 'paths', and some poetry. Although not the first expounder of orthodox Sufism, he accomplished its final classical formulation and greatly contributed to its later reconciliation with dogmatic theology. W.A.el K.

Al-Risālah al-Qushairiya (1940).—R. Hartmann, Al Kuschairis Darstellung des Sufismus (best work; 1914); A. J. Arberry, Sufism (1950).

W.A.el K. (R.W.J.A.)

R

Raabe, WILHELM (*Eschershausen 8 IX 1831; †Brunswick 15 XI 1910), German novelist. Starting in a bookseller's shop, he decided to write for a living. Raabe is one of the last genuinely epic writers in German literature. His late works, of startling modernity, break new ground in form and meaning. The three periods in his work roughly coincide with three different places of residence: (1) 1851–63 at Wolfenbüttel; most representative work: Die Chronik der Sperlingsgasse (1857). Broad descriptions of German provincial life, influenced by Jean* Paul, Dickens*, Sterne* and others.—(2) 1864–70 at Stuttgart; most representative work: Abu Telfan, oder Die Heimkehr vom Mondgebirge (3 vols, 1868; Eng. tr. S. Delffs, 1881). The early ease and naïveté is gone. The humorous idylls of little towns become increasingly overshadowed by a dark pessimism; man's struggle seems vain, and the general trend is most characteristically expressed at the end of Abu Telfan: 'If you knew what I know, you would weep much and laugh little'.—(3) 1871–1910 at Brunswick; most representative work: Stopfkuchen (1891) which after comparative obscurity is now regarded as containing his most original work. Looking at things in a detached way, with humour and the wisdom of old age, he firmly dismisses esoteric truths and ideologies in favour of ordinary humanity's abiding commonplaces, but the work has a poetic quality and is true to life.

Sämtliche Werke (18 vols, 1913–20); Historisch-kritische Ausgabe (ed. K. Hoppe, 21 vols, 4 supps, 1951 ff.).

W. Fehse, W. R. (1937); H. Pongs, W. R. (1958); B. Fairley, W. R. An Introduction to His Novels (1961; Ger. tr. H. Boeschenstein, 1961); K. Hoppe, W. R. (1967); H. Helmers, W. R. (1968) and ed., R. in neuer Sicht (1968); E. Klopfenstein, Erzähler und Leser bei W. R. (1969).—R. Lexikon (1927); F. Meyen, W. R. Bibliographie (1955).—Jahrb. der R.-Gesellschaft (1960 ff.). R.W.L. (K.W.M.)

Räaf, LEONHARD FREDRIK I SMÅLAND (*Tomestorp 18 IX 1786; †Forsnäs 9 VI 1872), Swedish ethnographer, historian and antiquarian. At Uppsala, Räaf was a member of Vitterhetens Vänner and later of Götiska Förbundet. A member of the Riksdag in the 1840s and 1850s (arch-reactionary), he lived on his landed properties in Östergötland and collected folk-lore.

Anteckningar över beskaftenheten av Sveriges offentliga handlingar under medeltiden (1839); contrib. folk-songs to A. I. Arwidsson, Swenska fornsånger (1834–42).

A. Ahnfelt, L. F. R. av Småland (1879); F. Bök, 'L. F. R.' in Essayer och kritiker (1919); G.

Lindberg, 'R. och hans verksamhet som folkvisesamlare' in Samlaren (1945).

B.M.E.M.; A.H.J.K.

Rabanus (HRABAN) Maurus (*Mainz 784; †856), was brought up in the monastery of Fulda, whence he was sent to Tours, under Alcuin*, who gave him his name of Maurus, after St Benedict's favourite pupil. He became head of the school at Fulda, then Abbot and, lastly, Archbishop of Mainz. He wrote various compendia for scholastic use, a De institutione clericorum and an encyclopaedic De Universo, which owed much to Isidore* of Seville. He wrote poetical exercises and some hymns, but many of the latter, including the Veni Creator Spiritus, have been ascribed to him without any real evidence. He had an unoriginal mind but a powerful personality. F.J.E.R.

Migne, Patrologia Latina, CVII–CXII (1851–52; some of these texts no longer attrib. to R.); Monumenta Germaniae historica, Poeti Latini aevi Carolini, II (1884).

E. Dümmmler, 'Hrabanstudien' in Sitzungsberichte der Königl. Akad. der Wissenschaften zu Berlin (1898); J. B. Hablitzel, 'H. M.' in Biblische Studien, XI (1906); F. Neumann, 'Lateinische Reimverse H.s.' in Mittelaltinisches Jahrbuch, II (1965). F.J.E.R. (Tor.)

Rabéarivelo, JEAN-JOSEPH (*Antananarivo, Madagascar 4 II 1901; †ibid. 22 VI 1937), Francophone Malagasy poet. Rabéarivelo was largely self-educated and earned his living as a proof-reader for the Malagasy printing firm that published some of his early poetry. Profoundly introspective by nature, and desperately unhappy because the colonial situation allowed him little opportunity to assert his ability as a poet outside Madagascar, Rabéarivelo took to drugs, alcohol and gambling, and finally committed suicide in 1937, at the age of 36.

In his early poetry, influenced by Mallarmé* and Baudelaire*, Rabéarivelo laments the decline of Madagascar's traditional culture and, paradoxically, declares his love for French poetry. By the time of his death, his style had acquired a distinctive character of its own, probably under the influence of the highly complex, traditional Malagasy verse form known as hain-teny. These mature poems are written in free verse and, drawing extensively upon the features of the Malagasy countryside and night sky, he creates in them a poetic universe of remarkable imaginative power. His imagery acquires a surrealistic quality rather reminiscent of Jules Supervielle*, and behind it lies an obsessive preoccupation with poetry and the role of the poet.

La coupe de cendres (1924); Sylves (1927); Volumes (1928); Presque-Songes (1934); Traduit de la nuit (1935); Vieilles chansons des pays d'Imerina (1937).—Twenty-Four Poems (ed. U. Beier and G.

Moore, Ibadan, 1962); poems in Modern Poetry From Africa (ed. idem, 1963) and A Book of African Verse (ed. J. Reed and C. Wake, 1964).

R. Boudry, J.-J. R. et la mort (1958). C.W.

Rabelais, FRANÇOIS (*nr Chinon, Touraine c. 1490; †Paris 1553 or 1554), French writer. His father, Antoine, was a prosperous lawyer. Nothing is known of his life until 1520, when he is a Franciscan Friar at Fontenay-le-Comte (Bas Poitou); here he belonged to a provincial circle of humanists, corresponded with the scholar Guillaume Budé*, then joined the more indulgent Benedictines thanks to his first patron, the Bishop of Maillezais. Towards 1527 he ceased to be a monk and, as a secular priest, turned to medicine. He now had two children by an unknown widow. Probably after studying in Paris, he became Bachelor of Medicine at Montpellier (1530) and took his doctorate there in 1537. Meanwhile he was appointed to the town hospital at Lyons (XI 1532), published Pantagruel in the same month and, later, Gargantua (1534). His classical and scientific learning brought him appreciative patrons: Cardinal Jean Du Bellay (uncle of the poet) took him to Rome as his personal physician in 1534 and 1535–36; he accompanied the cardinal's brother, Guillaume, in France and Italy during 1540–43. A final journey to Rome with Jean Du Bellay (1548–49) stands out in an obscure period of his life and may have saved him from grave danger. His Tiers Livre (1546) had been condemned, like Pantagruel and Gargantua, by the Sorbonne, and this time Rabelais had fled to Metz to escape a charge of heresy in a period of heightened persecution. On his return from Italy (IX 1549) the danger was over. He settled for the remainder of his life near Paris, probably at the Abbey of Saint-Maur-les-Fossés, of which he had become a canon in 1536. Two benefices, without residence, were given him by Jean Du Bellay. The inevitable condemnation of his Quart Livre (1552) did not disturb him.

Rabelais was regarded by his contemporaries as a scholar and physician of standing, though his scientific publications have little interest now. He displayed the restlessness and thirst for knowledge of his generation and studied enthusiastically Greek, Latin, law, medicine, botany, archaeology. In religion he combated Roman obscurantism but was equally far from Calvinism and finally took his stand on 'nature'. His humorous grossness, often described as medieval, is as much the result of a temperamental urge to transpose theory into ultra-concrete terms. His magnificently inventive language is a compound of his own. His book, written in five parts during 20 years primarily to entertain his patients, his patrons and himself, shows little unity of plan. It combines the burlesque adventure-novel with satire and fantasy on contemporary events and institutions and with expositions of passionately held theories. It was suggested to Rabelais by the publication at Lyons in 1532 of an anonymous popular book, Les grandes et inestimables chroniques du grand et énorme géant Gargantua, a flatly written adventure-fantasy, comparable in appeal to a modern strip-cartoon. Rabelais ostensibly continued the story in Pantagruel (son of Gargantua), then developed the germ in his own way. The authenticity of the posthumous 'Fifth Book' is debated. It was probably an expansion of Rabelais' rough draft.

Gargantua and Pantagruel, consisting of: Pantagruel (1532, later became Bk II; crit. ed. V. L. Saulnier, 1946); Gargantua (1534; later became Bk I); Le Tiers Livre (1546); Le Quart Livre (chs 1–9, 1548; complete, 1552; crit. ed. R. Marichal, 1947); Le Cinquième Livre (1564; incl., modified, L'Île Sonnante, 1562).—Les Pantagruélines Pronostications (1533, 1535; humorous almanachs).—Eng. trs: Sir T. Urquhart (1653, Bks I–III) and P. Motteux (1694, Bks IV–V; Everyman ed., 2 vols, 1937).—Œuvres complètes (ed. J. Boulenger, 1 vol, 1934; ed. P. Jourda, 2 vols, 1964; ed. A. Lefranc et al., 6 vols, 1912 ff.).

Rev. des études rabelaisiennes (1903–12; contin. as Rev. du 16e siècle, Humanisme et Renaissance).—P. Villey, Marot et R. (1923); S. Putnam, F. R., Man of the Renaissance (1930); H. Brown, R. in English Literature (Cambridge, Mass. 1933); G. Lote, La vie et l'œuvre de R. (1938); J. Plattard, La vie et l'œuvre de R. (1939); J. Charpentier, R. et le génie de la Renaissance (1941); L. Febvre, La Religion de R. (1943); F. C. Powys, R. (1948); A. J. Krailsheimer, R. and the Franciscans (1963); M. Tetel, Étude sur le comique de R. (1964) and R. et l'Italie (1969); M. Beaujour, Le comique de R. (1969). G.B.

Rabener, GOTTLIEB WILHELM (*Wachau nr Leipzig 17 IX 1714; †Dresden 22 III 1771), German poet. A Saxon tax official, Rabener was educated at Leipzig University, where he joined the group opposing Gottsched* ('Bremer Beiträger'). He wrote gentle verse satirizing follies and faults in modes and manners.

Sammlung satyrischer Schriften (4 vols, 1751–55); Sämtliche Schriften (6 vols, 1777; ed. E. Ortlepp, 4 vols, 1839).

P. Richter, R. und Liscow (1884); J. Mühlhaus, G. W. R. (diss. Halle, 1908); K. Kühne, Studien über G. W. R. (diss. Berlin, 1914); H. Wyder, R. (diss. Zürich, 1953); R. Biergann, R.s Satiren (diss. Köln, 1961). H.B.G.

Rabus, PETER (*Rotterdam 12 XII 1660; ∞1684 Elizabeth Ostens; †ibid. 13 I 1702), Dutch poet and editor of the first critical monthly in Dutch, De boekzaal van Europa (1692), later renamed De boekzaal der geleerde wereld (1705). His poem 'Verlost Brittanje' earned him a gold medal from William III. J.W.W. (J.Sm.)

Zegen- en vloekdichten (1693); Gedichten (1741).
Van Leeuwen, 'De boekzaal der geleerde wereld' in Noord en Zuid, XXV (1912). J.W.W.

Racan, HONORAT DE BUEIL, SIRE DE (*Champmarin, Touraine 1589; †Paris 21 I 1670), French poet. A disciple of Malherbe*, Racan wrote odes and a metrical version of the Psalms in his master's style. His Stances are agreeable in their half-artificial rusticity. His dramatic pastoral, Les Bergeries, more cultivated and harmonious in style than Hardy's* pastorals, was influential in the development of the genre. After a period at court and in Parisian society, Racan retired to his château in Touraine, dying during a visit to Paris.

Les Bergeries (c. 1620; ed. L. Arnould, 1937); Les plus beaux vers de R. . . et autres (1626); Psaumes et poésies chrétiennes (1631, 1652, 1660); Mémoires pour la vie de Malherbe (1672).—Œuvres complètes (ed. T. de La Tour, 2 vols, 1857); Poésies (crit. ed. L. Arnould, 1930–37).

L. Arnould, R. (1901).

G.B.

Racin, Kočo, pseud. of KOČO SOLEV (*Veles 22 XII 1908; †Mt Lopušnik 13 VI 1943), Macedonian poet. A member of the Communist Party of Yugoslavia, Racin was more than once imprisoned or interned for illegal activity. He died as a Partisan in Macedonia. In his one volume of poems (Beli Mugri, Zagreb, 1939), national and political sentiments are interwoven with private emotions in language that, while showing the influence of Macedonian popular poetry, is of distinct originality.

Stihovi i proza (2nd ed. 1961).—A. Spasov, 'K. R.' in B. Koneski et al., Makedonska književnost (1961).

R.A.

Racine, JEAN (~La Ferté-Milon 22 XII 1639; ∞1677 Catherine de Romanet; †Paris 21 IV 1699), French dramatist and poet. The son of a provincial tax official, Racine lost his parents early, was brought up by a pious grandmother and educated at Port-Royal, where his Jansenist teachers grounded him in Greek. Intended by his relatives for the Church, he turned instead to poetry and the theatre, won official patronage with his first odes (1660–63) and had his first play, La Thébatde, produced by Molière* in VI 1664. He transferred the second (Alexandre) arbitrarily from Molière to the rival company of the Hôtel de Bourgogne, which henceforth produced his plays. Soon after, he broke with Port-Royal, violently attacking his old teachers in his Lettre à l'auteur des Hérésies imaginaires (1666). From Andromaque (1667) to Phèdre (1677) his dramatic career was one of almost unbroken success, marked by his rise to equal eminence with the older dramatist Corneille*. The success of Phèdre was temporarily jeopardized by the Duchess of Bouillon's cabal, which aimed at imposing a rival play by Pradon*. Soon after,

Racine renounced the theatre, married, took up, jointly with Boileau*, the post of Historiographer Royal (IX 1677) and was reconciled with Port-Royal. Henceforth his time was divided between his official duties, which entailed accompanying Louis XIV on military campaigns, and a tranquil life with his increasing family in Paris. In 1679 he was accused by the poisoner Catherine Monvoisin of having poisoned, 11 years before, the actress Du Parc, who had preceded the Champmeslé as the first of his reputed mistresses; but no official action followed the no doubt irresponsible charge. At 50 Racine broke silence to write two sacred plays for Mme de Maintenon's girls' school at Saint-Cyr: Esther (1689) and Athalie, one of his masterpieces (1691). In 1698 he fell into temporary disfavour at court, for reasons still not wholly clear, but had been forgiven before his death.

Racine's achievement as a playwright was to perfect French classical tragedy as a dramatic form, perfectly governed by the three unities and concentrated upon the psychological crisis. More than any of his contemporaries he utilized Greek sources directly, though his open debt to the Greeks shows only, in varying degrees, in La Thébatde, Andromaque, Iphigénie and Phèdre, and in his one comedy, Les Plaideurs. The predominant influences are Latin in Alexandre, Britannicus, Bérénice and Mithridate, Biblical in Esther and Athalie, Oriental and 'modern' in Bajazet. His kinship with his French predecessors and contemporaries appears particularly in La Thébatde and Alexandre. As a poet, Racine endowed the apparently formal 'classical' alexandrine with a music and a range of emotional expression which no other poet has equalled in the same medium.

PLAYS (dates are of 1st productions): Alexandre (1665); Andromaque (1667); Les Plaideurs (1668); Britannicus (1669); Bérénice (1670); Bajazet (1672); Mithridate (1673); Iphigénie (1674).—VERSE: Promenade de Port-Royal (wr. ?1656; pub. 1808); La Nymphe de la Seine (1660); Ode sur la convalescence du Roi (1663); La Renommée aux Muses (1663); Idylle sur la paix (1684); Hymnes du Bréviaire Romain (pub. 1687); Cantiques spirituels (1694); Ode tirée du Psaume XVII (1808).—PROSE: Abrégé de l'histoire de Port-Royal (1767).—Œuvres complètes (ed. P. Mesnard, 8 vols and 2 albums, 1865–73; ed. R. Picard, 2 vols, 1951–52; ed. P. Clarac, 1962).—Phaëdra and Other Plays (1963); Andromache and Other Plays (1967; both tr. J. Cairncross).

K. Vossler, J. R. (Munich, 1925); F. Mauriac, La vie de R. (1928); Thierry Maulnier, R. (1935); P. Moreau, R. L'homme et l'œuvre (1943); M. Turnell, The Classical Moment (1947); R. C. Knight, R. et la Grèce (1951); E. Vinaver, R. et la poésie tragique (1951); R. Picard, La carrière de J. R. (1956) and Corpus racinianum (documents; 1956, with supps 1961 ff.); L. Goldmann, R. (1956); P. Claudel, Conversation sur J. R. (1956); R.

Jasinski, Vers le vrai R. (2 vols, 1958); P. Butler, Classicisme et le baroque dans l'œuvre de R. (1959). G.B.

Racine, LOUIS (*2 XI 1692; †Paris 29 I 1763), French poet; younger son of Jean Racine*. He wrote an anecdotal and somewhat misleading life of his father (Mémoires) and won distinction as a religious poet. He translated Paradise Lost into French prose (1755).

La Grâce (1720); La Religion (1742); Mémoires (1747; ed. P. Mesnard in Œuvres de Jean Racine, I, 1865).—Œuvres (ed. Lenormant, 6 vols, 1808). G.B.

Radbodus (*c. 850; †Ootmarsum 917), Latin poet and writer, was educated at the cathedral school at Cologne and at the court school of Charles the Bald, and became Bishop of Utrecht in 900. He celebrated a number of Dutch saints (Martinus, Suidbertus, Liafwijn etc.) in song and wrote a delightful poem on the swallow. Less important are his sermons on saints. He also composed an offertory of St Martin and collected in his chartularium a number of documents pertaining to Utrecht.

Poems ed. P. von Winterfeld in Monumenta Germaniae historica, Poetae Latini aevi Carolini, IV.1 (1899); chartularium ed. S. Müller Fzn in Werken v. h. Hist. Genootschap te Utrecht, 3rd ser., III (1892); some works and Vita Radbodi in Migne, Patrologia Latina, CXXXII (1853).

W. Moll in Kerkhist. Archief, III (1862); P. Albers in Archief voor d. Gesch. v. h. Aartsbisdom Utrecht, XXI (1894); J. van Mierlo in Verslag. en Med. Vlaamse Acad. (1927). J.J.M.

Radcliffe, ALEXANDER (*Hampstead c. 1645; †after 1696), English verse-writer who was entered at Gray's Inn (1669) but became a captain in the army (1696). His anti-heroic verse in the vein of Rochester* includes Ovid Travestie (1680 etc.) and The Ramble (1682).

The Works of Captain A. R. (3rd ed. 1696).
Selections in Penguin Book of Restoration Verse (ed. H. Love, 1968). B.L.J. (R.M.W.)

Radcliffe, ANN, née WARD (*London 9 VII 1764; †1787 William Radcliffe; †ibid. 7 II 1823), English novelist and poet. Her dramatic use of scenery, her handling of mystery and suspense and her character creation (Schedoni in The Italian is the first 'Byronic' hero) made Mrs Radcliffe the most original and distinguished writer of the Gothic novel. B.H.

The Sicilian Romance (1790); The Romance of the Forest (3 vols, 1791); The Mysteries of Udolpho (4 vols, 1794; ed. B. Dobrée, with intro., 1966); The Italian (3 vols, 1797; ed. F. Garber, 1968).—The Poems of A. R. (1816; unauthorized coll.).

D. Scarborough, The Supernatural in Modern English Fiction (1917); C. F. MacIntyre, A. R. in Relation to Her Time (1920); E. Birkhead, The Tale of Terror (1921); J. M. S. Tompkins, The Popular Novel 1770–1800 (1932). B.H. (M.Bu.)

Raddall, THOMAS HEAD (*Hythe, Kent 13 XI 1903; †1927 Edith Freeman), Canadian writer mainly of romantic and historical fiction related to Nova Scotia, where he has lived since 1913.

STORIES: Pied Piper of Dipper Creek (1939); Tambour (1945); Wedding Gift (1947); Master of Arms (1954); At the Tide's Turn (1959).—NOVELS: His Majesty's Yankees (1942); Governor's Lady (1960).—NON-FICTION: Halifax: Warden of the North (1948).

A. L. Phelps, 'T. R.' in Canadian Writers (1951). R.Su.

Radevski, HRISTO (*Belish 10 X 1903), Bulgarian poet-satirist and fabulist. A founder of the RLF ('Workers' Literary Front') periodical in 1929, he is one of the Communist 'Old Guard', dedicated, like G. Milev*, 'to the Party'. As general secretary of the Writers' Union (1949–58) and editor of its organ Septemvri, he has been a controlling figure in Bulgarian literary life since the Second World War. His verse is mainly political and satiric.

Kum partiyata (1932); Puls (1936); Vuzduh ne dostigashe (1945); Uvajaemite (1945); Basni (1950); Te oshte jiveyat (1959); 100 basni (1961).—Sel. works (3 vols, 1956–58). V.P.

Radewijns, FLORENS (*Leerdam c. 1350; †Deventer 24 III 1400), Dutch writer. Returning from his studies at Prague, he met Geert Groote*, was ordained priest and left his canonry at Utrecht for a vicariate at Deventer. In 1381 or 1382 he gathered the clerici scriptores (the clerks transcribing books for Geert Groote) into the Brotherhood of the Common Life, a society of devout men, not bound by vows and living communally on the proceeds of their labour—an innovation which was soon copied elsewhere (see DEVOTIO MODERNA). Only a few short works in Latin of an ascetic and devotional character are extant.

Tractatulus devotus (ed. H. Nolte, 1862); Parvum et simplex exercitium (ed. D. J. M. Wüstenhoff in Archief v. Nederl. Kerkgesch., V, 1895); Quaedam notabilia verba (ed. M. J. Pohl in Opera omnia of Thomas a Kempis, 1910–22).

J. H. Gerretsen, F. R. (1891); A. Hyma, The Christian Renaissance (1925) and The Brethren of the Common Life (1950); M. van Woerkom, 'F. R., Leven, geschriften, persoonlijkheid en ideeën' in Ons Geestelijk Erf, XXIV–XXV (1950–51). J.J.M.

Ra'di Azarakhshi, GHULĀM-'ALĪ (*Tabriz 1909), Persian poet, best known for his original ode,

Nigāh (tr. A. J. Arberry in Life and Letters, LXIII, 1949).

R. Yasemi, Adabiyāt-i Mu'āshir (Tehran, 1937).
E.Y.

Radičević, BRANKO (*Slavonski Brod 15 III 1824; †Vienna 18 VI 1853), Serbian poet. He studied law and medicine in Vienna, but devoted most of his short life to literature. In satirical verses he defended the linguistic reforms of Vuk Karadžić*; he then vindicated these reforms by composing poems of great lyrical beauty which were near in spirit to the Serbo-Croatian traditional poetry, and which acquired immediate popularity. His verse, fresh, vivid and original, covering a wide range of ideas and emotions, was of far-reaching influence.

Pesme (3 colls, 1847, 1851, 1862); Pesme (1923–24); Pesme, Izbor (sel. poems; 1968).
V. Milinčević, B. R. (1963). V.J.

Radiguet, RAYMOND (*Saint Maur 18 VI 1903; †Paris 12 XII 1923), French novelist. An extraordinarily gifted young writer, he was first 'discovered' by Cocteau*. He published a volume of verse (Les joues en feu, 1925) and the two novels on which his fame rests: Le diable au corps, which recounts with a lyrical cynicism the emotional initiation of an adolescent in wartime, and Le bal du comte d'Orgel (1924; Eng. tr. V. Schiff, 1952), a modern transposition of the theme of La Princesse de Clèves. They are written with a classical limpidity.

Le diable au corps (1923; The Devil in the Flesh, tr. K. Boyle, intro. A. Huxley, 1949; tr. A. M. Sheridan Smith, 1968; tr. R. Baldick, 1971).

H. Massis, R. R. (1929); C. E. Magny, Histoire du roman français depuis 1918 (1950); L. Reith Goesch, R. (1955). M.G.; J.P.R.

Radishchev, ALEXANDER NIKOLAYEVICH (*Saratov province 20 VIII 1749; †St Petersburg 12 IX 1802), Russian poet and author of the now famous book, Puteshestvie iz Peterburga v Moskvu (1790), which mercilessly attacked serfdom and autocracy. The author was sentenced to death, but the sentence was commuted to exile in Siberia whence he was recalled by the Emperor Paul in 1797. Five years later he committed suicide. His prose is somewhat heavy, but some of his lyrics are genuine poetry. Among his poems, Ode to Liberty was a source of inspiration to subsequent civic poets, especially to K. Ryleyev*, and partly also to Pushkin*.

Polnoye sobranie sochineniy (2 vols, 1907; 1938); Stikhotvoreniya (1953); Puteshestvie iz Peterburga v Moskvu (1950); Reise von Petersburg nach Moskau, tr. A. Luther, 1922; A Journey From St Petersburg to Moscow, tr. Leo Wiener, 1958; Izbrannoe (1959).

V. O. Pokrovsky, A. N. R. (1907); N. Asheshov, R., pervy russkiy respublikanets (1919); V. P.

Semennikov, R. (1923); B. Evgenyev, A. N. R. (1949); M. A. Gorbunov, Filosofskie i obshchestvenno-politicheskie vzglyady Radishcheva (1950); G. P. Makogonenko, R. i ego vremya (1956); L. B. Svetlov, A. N. R. (1958); D. M. Lang, The First Russian Radical, A. R. (1959). J.L.

Radnóti, MIKLÓS (*Budapest 5 V 1909; ∞1935 Fanni Gyarmati; †Abda XI 1944), Hungarian poet. In strict form and classical language, Radnóti, a Jew by birth, proclaimed the grief and horror of life in a Europe increasingly dominated by Fascism. His lyric verse displays immense moral power, humanity and majesty. He continued to write up to his untimely death while on a forced march.

Pogány köszöntő (1930); Újhold (1935); Járkálj csak, haldlárattélt! (1936); Meredek út (1938).—Összes versei és műfordításai (coll. verse; ed. S. Koczás, 1959); Próza (ed. P. Réz, 1971).

S. Koczás, 'R. M.', intro. to R. M. Versek és műfordítások (1954); D. Baróti, R. M. (1959); B. S. Adams, 'The Eclogues of M. R.' in Slavon. Rev. (June 1965) and 'The Lager verse of M. R.', ibid. (Jan. 1967). G.F.C.

Radziwillowa, FRANCISZKA URSZULA, PRINCESS, née PRINCESS WIŚNIEWIECKA (*Czartoryjsk 13 II 1705; †Puczewice 23 V 1753), Polish poet and playwright. Of her 16 plays destined for the private stage in Nieśwież, three are the first adaptations of Molière* into Polish. The fantastic, sentimental and baroque are features of some of them.

PLAYS: Komedie i tragedie . . . (1754).—VERSE: Listy do meża . . . (1728; pub. 1882); Przestrogi córce mojej (1738; pub. 1755).

B. Kielski, 'F. U. R.' in O wpływie Moliera na rozwój komedii polskiej (1905); S. Wasylewski, U Księżnej Pani (1918). S.S. (P.H.)

Raffi, pseud. of YAKOB MELIK-YAKOBIAN (*Phayadjuk 1837; †Tiflis 1888), Armenian novelist. Having spent his youth wandering in Transcaucasia and Turkish Armenia, he finally settled in Tiflis and became a teacher, salesman and trader. Later he devoted himself to writing and soon made his mark. He became the apostle of revolution and his novels were an incitement to the youth of the country to sacrifice themselves for national freedom and to revolt against both the Turks and the Russians.

Phundj (1864); Khent (1880); The Fool, tr. J. Wingate, 1950; Davith-Bek (1881–87); Samuel (1888; serially tr. J. G. Mandalian in Armenian Rev., Boston, 1948–51). A.Sa.

Rahbek, KNUD LYNE (*Copenhagen 18 XII 1760; ∞1798 Karen Margareta [Kamma] Heger; †Frederiksberg 22 IV 1830), Danish poet, critic, playwright and short-story writer. With his wife, he played a great part in the literary circles of Copenhagen; their home, 'Bakkehuset', was the leading literary salon of the day. Rahbek was a prolific writer, but his versatility was greater than his gifts.

Breve fra en gammel Skuespiller (1782); Prosaiske Forsøg (8 vols, 1785–1806); Poetiske Forsøg (2 vols, 1794–1802); Om Skuespillerkunsten (1809); Samlede Skuespil (3 vols, 1809–13); Om Holberg som Lystspilddigter (3 vols, 1815–17); Bidrag til den danske Digtekunsts Historie (with R. Nyerup; 4 vols, 1800–08); Erindringer af mit Liv (5 vols, 1824–29).

H. Kyrre, K. L. R., Kamma R. og Livet paa Bakkehuset (1929); T. Troels-Lund, Bakkehus og Solbjerg (1920); A. E. Jensen, R.'s Pariserbreve (1958) and R. og de danske Digtere (1960).

E.B.

Rahel (BLUWSTEIN) (*Vyatka 9 IX 1890; †Tel Aviv 16 IV 1931), Hebrew poet. She went to Israel in 1909 with the 'second aliyah', settled in Kinneret and worked in the fields and groves of the village. She studied in France and, caught by the First World War, spent the war years in Russia. At the termination of hostilities she returned to Israel, where she died of tuberculosis. Her poems are short, metrically simple, of a miraculous beauty and purity. They have been collected in Safiah (1927), Mineged (1930) and Nevo (1932).

Shirat Rahel (coll. works; Tel Aviv, 1961).

Y.H. (M.Ge.; Y.F.)

Raičković, STEFAN (*Nesresnica 5 VII 1928), Serbian poet. After studying in Belgrade, Raičković worked for radio for a time but is now a literary editor. He is one of the best Serbian representatives of traditional lyrical poetry but he has achieved greater breadth for his writing by the transference of the meditative and reflective qualities of personal emotions and situations towards the universal. He also translates from French and English, notably Shakespeare's* sonnets, and writes books for children.

POETRY: Detinjstva (1950); Pesma tišine (1952); Balada o predvečerju (1955); Kasno leto (1958); Tisa (1961); Pesme (1963); Kamena uspavanka (1963); Stihovi (1964); Prolazi rekom ladja (1967).

B.J.

Raimbaut d'Aurenga, i.e. ORANGE (c. 1150–73), Provençal troubadour. A descendant of the Counts of Montpellier, he had inherited the domain of Orange from Tiburge, his mother. The medieval Provençal biographer tells of his early death, his chivalrous deeds and songs in honour of Marie de Verfeuil and of the Countess of Urgel; to the latter he vowed his love though he had never seen her. Raimbaut writes in a deliberately obscure and wittily allusive style. He is a virtuoso of diction and rhyme. There is but a short step from his serious to his gay mood. See also Beatrice*, Countess of Die.

C. Appel, R. von O. (1928); W. F. Pattison, The Life and Works of the Troubadour R. d'O. (1952).
R.R.B. (K.R.)

Raimbaut de Vaquieras (c. 1155–1207), Provençal troubadour; son of a poor knight from the vicinity of Orange. He achieved fame particularly through his brilliant career at the court of Bonifacio I, Margrave of Montferrat, who is the subject of a eulogistic verse epistle—a portrait of extraordinary vividness. Raimbaut became his intimate friend and companion at arms, accompanied him to Sicily, then to Greece on the Crusade and died there, presumably fighting at his side. His poems (over 40) are amongst the most original of all troubadour lyrics as regards form. Others fall outside the conventional troubadour genres: an allegorical poem in honour of Beatrice of Montferrat, a bilingual poetic dialogue with a woman of Genoa, his Descort written in five languages and the famous Calenda Maya.

G. Cusimano, Poesie di R. di V. (1956); J. Linskill, The Poems of the Troubadour R. de V. (1964).

G. Cerroto, 'Il Bel cavaliere di R. di V.' in Giornale della lett. ital., IV (1884); O. Schultz-Gora, Die Briefe des Trobadors R. de V. an Bonifaz I (1893); V. Crescini, Ancora delle lettere di R. di V. al marchese Bonifacio (1899), 'R. de V. et le marquis Boniface I' in Annales du Midi, XI–XIII (1899–1901), 'R. di V. e Baldovino imperatore' in Atti dell'Istituto Veneto, L (1891) and 'Il Discordo plurilingue di R. di V.' in Nuovi studi medievali, I (1923); N. Zingarelli, 'Engles nelle rime di R. di V.' in Miscellanea . . . V. Crescini (1901) and 'Bel Cavalier e Beatrice di Monferrato' in Studi . . . P. Rajna (1911); J. Anglade, 'Sur le Descort plurilingue de R. de V.' in Annales du Midi, XXXVI (1924); J. Linskill, 'An enigmatic poem of R. de V.' in Mod. Lang. Rev., LIII (1958); V. Bertolucci, 'Posizione e significato del canzoniere di R. de V. nella storia della poesia provenzale' in Studi mediolatini e volgari, XI (1963).

R.R.B. (K.R.)

Raimon de Miraval (fl. c. 1180–1213), Provençal troubadour. A poor knight from the Carcassonne area who achieved great fame as a troubadour and as the close companion of Raimon VI, Count of Toulouse. According to the medieval Provençal biographer the ladies of Languedoc were eager to be the subject of his songs; though they contrived in this way to become famous they denied the poet their love. His constancy and their ingratitude is indeed the recurrent theme in his songs which are works of considerable formal and artistic skill. After the defeat of his patron in the Albigensian wars and the ill-starred battle of Muret (1212)

Raimon retired from active life; he died at a monastery at Lerida.

P. Andraud, La vie et l'œuvre du troubadour R. de M. (1902); L. T. Topsfield, Les poésies du troubadour R. de M. (1971).

C. Brunel, 'La "Loba" célébrée par les troubadours Peire Vidal et R. de M.' in Mélanges Hoepffner (1949); L. T. Topsfield, 'R. de M. and the art of courtly love' in Mod. Lang. Rev., LI (1956), and 'Cortez Ufana chez R. de M.' in Rev. Langue et Litt. d'Oc, XII-XIII (1962-63); M. L. Switten, 'R. de M.'s "Be m'agrada" and the unrhymed refrain in troubadour poetry', in Romance Philol., XXII (1969). R.R.B. (K.R.)

